MORE THAN A MILLION DOLLARS SPENT WEEKLY FOR NEW CHURCHES

The International Sunday School Lesson for September 11, 1927, is "Solomon Dedicates the Temple."—I Kings 8.

More than a million dollars a week is being spent in the South alone for the erection of new churches. It is estimated that present year's building programs, in this one section of the United States, will cost more than a hundred million dollars. Not all of these edifices have been built with the care and preparation and reverent sense of beauty that were bestowed upon Solomon's Temple. I have seen some that look like German Christmas cakes which had been sent by mail. All possible, and some impossible, school of architecture were taxed to create these garish structures that are rapidly rising in Southern communities.

Nevertheless, while many costly church buildings make a beholder sigh for the simplicity of Christopher Wren or the dignity of the ancient Gothic, or even the stern plainness of the Quaker meeting house, they do represent the deep desire of the reverent human spirit to do lavish honor to God. They are the outward expression of the inward worship. They are successors of the gorgeous temple that King Solomon reared, at a cost of uncounted treasure, and seven years of careful labor, upon Mount Moriah, overlooking the Valley of the Kedron, and directly north of Mount Zion.

Man's Will To Worship

There used to be a Philadelphia church, out near Girard College, which surmounted its steeple with an upward pointing hand. At least the central idea of a church building was there. It expressed the soul's upward look, also pointed at beholders to concerns higher than earth. The characteristic of Gothic architecture is that its lines ascend like a flame of devotion. The Godward aspect of the human spirit should be embodied in every house of worship.

However afar he may fling his spirit in pursuit of satisfactions; and however low he may sink in the mire of sensuality, man is, and always will be, a creature reaching out toward God. Even the worst of us knows himself possessed of divine possibilities. Hunger for heaven is higher in all hearts. India's thirst for a living God finds expression in all forms of worship. The illiterate Arab piles stones as pillars in blind recognition of supernatural forces which he does not understand. Every race and people has its religion. God is the one great, indispensable existence. Every church that is erected anywhere bears witness to mortal's quest for the infinite.

Some spirits are sagging and slumping today; and this is deemed an era of materialism. The only reality recognized is the material. The world is to be tasted and touched and measured and weighed. All the while the ancient and inextinguishable eagerness for spiritual satisfactions abides. Life wants and needs the realization of ideals of love and beauty and holiness and power which are fulfilled only in God. We crave Someone to adore, and Someone One to Whom to flee for comfort and inspiration. At the core of every human soul is enshrined the idea of a temple of worship.

WORSHIP

By GEORGE HENRY DOLE

International Sunday School Lesson Text, Sept. 11—I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord.—Ps. 122:1.

The text is chosen with reference to the dedication of Solomon's temple at Jerusalem, the center of the Jewish nation. A temple or church is a place for public worship. Churches are needed for spiritual or moral uses just as schools and colleges are essential to education. Suppose there were no schools or colleges, and education was left wholly to the family. Education would decrease to the final destruction of all. It is precisely similar as to the churches. Without them morality would decline until all holiness perished. Even with the mighty urge of the united churches, some think that the evil and the good in the world are close to a balance.

The church is not the only place of worship. Worship in the church directs the mind to God, stimulates love for the spiritual, impresses higher ideals, and, with the holy spirit of devotion, cleanses, nourishes, and cheers. Yet worship in a church is of no avail if the spirit of worship is not carried out into the daily life. The most real worship is in our constant service of the Lord. "Know ye not that ye are a temple of the Lord?" If wor-prayer wherein human hearts seek the forgiveness and fellowship of God.

Yes sir, we're hornin' into politics—leastwise th' boss is. Standin' fer Selec'man in this here election nex' week, er what passes fer election 'round here Tain't on'y a Primary, but I understand things is settled right there—'cept if y' git beat on th' Republican ticket, y' kin turn Democrat er Independent er somethin' an' git beat worse.

Enyhow, th' boss is standin' on th' Republican ticket an' Tuesday night we're gonna have a votin' booth right down here t' th' store. Everybody that comes in t' pay their Dollar is just gonna cast a vote instead.

Don't know what the boss is thinkin' of t' git into th' political business—'cept he's probly tired o' th' furniture business. But seems like a poor trade. Y' do git some returns fer hard work an' square shootin' an' doin' what's right in business—but it takes this town politics, an' y' just do a pile o' work fer a lotta folks which never show no int'rest 'cept when they're crossed er th' bills come due, an' then they blame th' Selec'man fer everythin' in sight.

Fella kin run his own business all right an' please most everybody most of th' time, but takes a good one t' run th' town bizienss so t' please everybody at all.

I ain't advertisin' politics though, an' I don't want t' come in under th' head o' campaignin' expenses. Just at present I'm advertisin' beds, those kind of beds that wiggle. You know how th' story hez gone around. Well, I wanta cash in on th' publicity. We got some beds like those, if y' want 'em—absolutely guaranteed t' shimmy in all directions, without no provocation, an' we'd like t' git rid o' 'em while they're in style. But we got plenty more that don't wiggle—positively guaranteed not t' wiggle—an' between you and me, we're more int'rested in sellin' th' kind.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 10, 1927

MAKE IT SURE

With the Republican primary election coming on Tuesday the voters of that party in Manchester have a very necessary and rather delicate piece of business to attend to. It is one of the worst shortcomings of our patchwork town charter that no provision is made for interlocking tenures of office for the members of the board of selectmen.

Hence, it is urgently desirable that there should be elected, at the forthcoming town meeting, a majority of the present membership of the board. It was, indeed, because the selectmen themselves realized this necessity that they agreed among themselves some time ago upon the four who should stand for re-election this fall.

There are eight nominees for selectmen to be voted on at the Republican primary on Tuesday. Of these eight, seven will become the party candidates at the October election; one must fall by the wayside.

It is a real duty of every Republican elector to see that the aspirant who loses out is not one of the four present selectmen who are up for re-nomination. In order to prevent the possibility of such a thing happening the voter should see to it that he votes for all of those four, no matter which of the other four he omits from his list of favorites.

John H. Hyde, Thomas J. Rogers, Robert J. Smith, Wells A. Strickland.

As between the other four candidates there is this to be said, that there is not one of them who is not qualified, in character, ability and all around fitness, to function as a selectman of the town of Manchester.

Whether or not the services of the last named gentlemen to the Republican party have been such as to place him on an equality with the other three is a matter on which there may be a difference of opinion. The Republican town committee has inferentially expressed the belief that they have not, and has endorsed the candidates of the others, solely on the ground that since there is one candidate too many for the offices to be filled, and since there is no blemish in any of the aspirants, the better servants of the party are entitled to its support.

But whatever be done about these four, all the candidates who are members of the present board should unflinchingly be renominated.

TOWN PLANNING

The proposition for the erection of a town planning commission in the town of Manchester, under the general statute providing for such commissions adopted by the Legislature of 1923, is brought to a head by the petition of Austin Cheney, president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, and twenty-nine others, praying the Board of Selectmen to incorporate the question in the call for the annual town meeting in October. For years the advantage of organizing the future layout of the town—as to its streets, highways, sidewalks, parkways and public buildings, in the hands of a continuing body whose sole public duty shall be concerned with only this one aspect of municipal government, has impressed itself upon a great many of the thinking citizens of this community.

The duties which the law imposes on town planning commissions are at present a part—and a most vexatious part—of the duties of the selectmen. The town planning law puts upon the commission it creates no extraordinary power not already possessed by selectmen—but it does provide, by providing the machinery, for checks upon the haphazard opening of new streets, the unwise relocation of old lines and the injudicious placement of public buildings which frequently result from the fact that no board of selectmen is a permanent body.

The advantage of the town planning commission is that, through a system of interlocking tenures, it must always contain a majority of members who are experienced in its purposes and familiar with the general scheme of town development which it inaugurated at the beginning of its career. And that, in addition, its whole concern is with streets, highways, sidewalks, parkways and public buildings, in their relation to each other, to the convenience of the people, to economy and to the beautification of the town.

The duties of the board of selectmen, on the other hand, are multifarious. It is the town legislature. It is the financial administration. It will continue to be the determining force, even in matters connected with the work of the town planning commission, if such commission is erected, because in the last analysis the planning board will have no executive or administrative functions whatever; it cannot order a sidewalk laid or a street cut or paved—it can only, in an advisory capacity, put its finger on the map and say, "When a street is opened here it must be from such points to such points and it must be of such or such width," etc. It is not a motive agent at all, but the best imaginable sort of a brake. It may suggest, and it should suggest wisely because co-ordination and balances and engineering wisdom must inevitably be its specialty. But it cannot perform in any executive way. If it should by any chance make mistakes the selectmen would have the veto power, because only the selectmen have the power to carry out the suggestions of the planning board. They hold the purse.

It would seem as if the selectmen of Manchester might well welcome the co-operative service of a town planning commission. It would relieve the board—the successive boards, more properly—of the necessity of a great deal of necessarily fragmentary, unsystematic and baffling study of the street needs of the growing town. It would be entirely supplementary to the board of selectmen, though valuable so. It would crystallize the attention of a capable and disinterested organization on the study of a subject upon which boards of selectmen have to waste any amount of time, with indifferent results.

There is one highly important aspect of the town planning board system which ought not to be lost sight of. The members, after the first year, would be elected for three year terms, two of the six retiring each year. They would serve without pay—they must serve without pay, according to law. This puts the town planning commission out of politics. The commission would be as untrammelled by political considerations as it is possible for any public body to be. It would have nothing to concern itself about save the making of the best possible town, with the most conveniently laid out streets, the most equitable building lines, the greatest degree of beauty.

And the selectmen would be relieved of all the pulling and hauling to which they are subjected by disappointed property owners whenever street or building lines come up for action.

It is our hope that the selectmen will see fit to grant the plea of the petitioners—and that the voters, in October, will decide on the creation of the commission.

PLANE AND RAY

Development of a modification of television, which he calls noctovision, has been demonstrated by the Scotch inventor Baird through the unique performance of taking an active photograph of a person 200 miles away and sitting in absolute darkness. It is done by application of the invisible infra-red ray which has the singular power of penetrating darkness or fog with sixteen times the power of the visible light rays.

Perhaps, though aviation is already an older science than television, the former, before it successfully negotiates the oceans, will have to await the practical employment of Baird's discoveries, so that the terrors of fog and darkness on the seas may be overcome.

New York, Sept. 10.—Few people realize how vast is the army that awaits the opportunity of depending amusement to American audiences. "At liberty" notices over periods of time can sense the comedy, tragedy, pathos and irony of the struggle to somehow, somewhere make a living at what Broadway is pleased to call the "show racket."

Strangely enough few of these "at liberty" folk are on Broadway; they are scattered over the nation, since in tiny hamlets of which I have never heard, some in farming communities, some in cities, between the lines one often reads actual desperation.

Out from a notice spring such words as these: "Married. Must have position at once." The word "must" is capitalized. And the notice comes from Carrollton, Ga., wherever that is!

"At liberty" in the show world, is a refined way of saying "out of a job," or expecting to be. Let me give you a few examples of one afternoon's dealings into the appeals that find their way to Broadway.

Here's one from Staten Island, just across the river from Manhattan: "Young man, 26, will consider any offer. Could do female impersonating. Will someone please teach me dancing suitable for female impersonating and let me pay after I get an engagement?"

And here's a fellow in Bloomington, Ill., who is "the highest still walker doing the Black Bottom."

Of course you smile. But think of the hours that probably went into learning this.

Here's another who can "do a strong man act, a barefoot dance on red hot stove, a human encyclopedia (answering all questions correctly) necromancer and polyphonism." If this isn't enough he has a wife who is a wrestler ready to meet all comers.

So versatile, and yet out of a job. All he asks is a chance with a medical show, which isn't asking much.

But the prize, it seems to me, goes to a fellow in Laredo, Tex., who announces that he has for sale: "Baby box constrictors . . . 18 to 20 inches long. You can raise them and have a fine pet."

Yea, ho! How the neighbor's children would love these dainty seven-foot playmates!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Sept. 10.—Massive public buildings, the treasury, the army and navy building, legations and embassies, Red Cross headquarters and stately art galleries almost bury a little house in New York city, which is the Mecca of thousands of brides and grooms on a wedding trip in Washington.

A breath of the arbutus of New England or the moors of Nantucket hovers about the little, green and well-kept house, its paneled and ruffled doorway, and its welcoming knockers.

The little house is the national girl scouts' headquarters. It was donated to the girl scouts by the National Federation of Women's Clubs, who built it for demonstrating week in their famous Better Homes movement.

The little house is modeled after the boyhood home of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home."

President Harding called it "the most livable home in America."

Brides and grooms at the rate of 50 couple a day have made a beaten track up the walk, and gratefully pay their hosts, Mrs. Gertrude L. Bowman, a quarter for the privilege of walking through this dream home of their own.

The quarter goes into the girl scouts' own family ginger jar! The little house should be built for about $7000 in any part of the country, the hostess says.

It has a fully equipped basement, a living room, a dining room, reception hall, breakfast nook and kitchen on the first floor, three bedrooms, a nursery and a bath on the second floor.

Furnishings are entirely in the early American design. Spriggy, chintzy wall paper covers almost every room, and restfulness is the home's keynote.

"The brides," laughs Mrs. Bowman, "rave about the furniture and the wall paper, while the grooms go down cellar to inspect the heater."

The living room is 26 by 15 feet. It, too, uses a figured two-tone gray paper and plain taupe rug. A post-Colonial design sofa in brown mahogany and satin, and the baby grand piano are the only really big pieces in the room. A secretary desk, Windsor chairs, and Colonial style fireplace of red brick flanked by brass andirons and shovel.

"Brides are amazed at a real kitchen," says Mrs. Bowman. "But the ideal home must have one." The kitchen wall is covered with a washable covering, the floor is covered with cork linoleum, there is a double drainboard, gas stove with oven regulator, pressure and fireless cookers, work table on rollers, refrigerator filled from the outside, clock, metal waste basket and linen and paper towel-racks.

"I believe that these newlywed pilgrimages to the little house are making finer homes over the entire nation," says Mrs. Bowman.

JAPANESE TAKE STEPS TO KEEP MANCHURIA HOLD

Premier Tanaka Wastes No Time In Solidifying Hold On Province.

Tokyo—Japan's new government, under Premier Tanaka has wasted no time in solidifying this country's position in Manchuria, and there is every evidence that the Seiyukai party will make Japan's hold on the Three Eastern Provinces of North China practically invulnerable before it leaves office.

Baron Shidehara, former Foreign Minister, played safe in Manchuria, because he feared giving offense to the Chinese. But Premier Tanaka, the Chinese as his own Foreign Minister, has gone fearlessly into the business of making Manchuria an integral part of the Japanese Empire, disregarding the sensitive feelings of Chinese nationalists.

And up to the present time, his policy has been fully justified, because the Chinese have ignored what he is doing.

Railway Prize The South Manchuria railway is the agency used to extend Japan's empire into China. This railway, the prize of the Russo-Japanese war, has been developed gradually into an empire within an empire. Within its sphere of influence, it acts as a government. While this has been nominally true for some time, Premier Tanaka has decided to come out into the open and make the railway company a government on paper as well as in fact.

He has just announced a plan, devised by his legislative experts, whereby the president of the South Manchuria railway will become a consul-general of Japan. His headquarters will be in Mukden, the capital of Chang Tso-lin, and he will represent the Japanese government directly as the power behind China's throne. In this manner, Japan's sphere of influence will be extended beyond the Kwantung leased territory, where treaties give the right of government.

From this time on, a Japanese consul-general, as president of the South Manchuria railway, will be the supreme ruler in all territory controlled by the railway. It must be remembered that the railway is more than a railway, controlling rich mines, prosperous manufacturing cities and millions of acres of fertile farm land. It operates schools, from kindergartens to technical universities, and establishes courts through Japan's special rights guaranteed by treaty.

Colonizing Scheme At the same time, Premier Tanaka's experts are evolving a colonization company with powers equal to the South Manchuria railway, to gain further control of the rich undeveloped lands in Manchuria and Mongolia beyond the railway limits.

The head of this company, too, is to be a consul-general, and will be directed in his policies by the Foreign Office in Tokio. It is planned to carry the fine development work accomplished in South Manchuria into North Manchuria and Mongolia.

Most American and European authorities in the Far East are sympathetic with the Japanese in their new schemes for Manchuria and Mongolia. The Chinese overlords have shown themselves entirely incapable of decent government in these regions.

Snakes have killed more than a million human beings in the last 60 years. An average of 20,000 are killed each year in India alone, and three to five thousand in the American tropics.

From Chili To The Klondyke Wound the Trail Of This Man

From the Bottom of the Map To the Top, Roamed George Prentiss In His Quest of Adventure—and He Found It Plenty; Read the Graphic Story of His Wanderings.

Looking at a map of South America one sees on the extreme western coast a thin, sickly looking country which looks as though it had been added as an afterthought. It has nothing to it except length and at both ends it sharpens off to a point. The children in their geography studies know it and any of them will recognize it as Chile, either from the description or from the map.

George Prentiss started his adventurous career in Chile many years ago. Revolutions had come and gone, and every time a new president was elected—providing he was not killed before the votes were counted—he had to take the capital and the government by force and arms.

If he were exceptionally fortunate or had a lot of money or backing by American capital he might have both the army and navy behind him. If he were not so fortunate he would have only one branch of the service with him. And if he were out of luck both of them would be against him and he would be president for only a short time.

Oscar Prentiss' Son Speaking of George Prentiss and his acquaintances with Chile, it might be just as well to introduce him. Herald readers will remember some weeks ago the story of a lad who enlisted in the United States during the Civil War and was fortunate enough to witness a remarkable battle between the Monitor and the Merrimack, which turned the tide in favor of the Union.

That boy was Oscar W. Prentiss of South Main street and George Prentiss is his son. He arrived here a week or two ago from Sacramento, Cal., and is spending some time visiting the old folks. He is a brother of Mrs. Willis A. Smith of Clinton street, but she had not seen him since she was a girl in her teens.

Mr. Prentiss first struck Chile at Valparaiso, the principal seaport and it was there that his adventures began. He was only a boy but he had been on a merchant vessel which was discharged at that port. Nothing to do but hang around and wait for a sailing. He was something that Mr. Prentiss did not fancy. His companions did not fancy it either so they looked around to see where they could sign on to some ship, going they didn't care where.

They signed on, all right, but it was not the kind of a ship they wanted. They met a recruiting officer who struck them as the proper person to approach for a berth. They signed the papers, which were in Spanish, and which they thought gave them a berth on a sailing ship bound for Hull, England. But they never reached that sailing ship in the morning it was gone.

"We didn't know what had happened but we soon found out. We went to the commandant and asked him to read the paper for us. He did so and what he told us almost gave us heart failure.

Were Shantaged "We had been shantaged into the Chilean navy and had signed for a term of three years. It was an auspicious start. And the tough part of it lay in the fact that the boys could get no leave of absence for 60 days. They made up their minds that their last leave would be the last one on the first opportunity they left the ship, never to return.

Inland Prentiss struck, to get a job in the mines at Bolivia. He didn't stay there long for he was anxious to get to the coast and ship out of the country and get somewhere else away from Chile. He got back to Chile and to the coast when he found the fleet in the harbor of the first seaport he arrived in. "I saw the ship I had been on and I lost no time in getting away from there. I had a horse and I started for the interior. I knew where I was headed, across a part of the country which was all salt desert, with no water nor vegetation. I got into this country and got lost.

Few Provisions "I had very little provisions with me and little water. Soon after my provisions gave out, my water ran low and I was forced to start back. On the outward journey I was almost sure of my direction but coming back my points of the compass became confused and I was forced to trust to luck.

"Three days I wandered through that salt desert, lost. Nothing in sight but desert. Then I ran across the trail of sheep. Where they would end I knew I would find water. I followed them until I had located the herd and after refreshing myself with water I killed one of the sheep, cooked the meat and ate, my first in three days.

"Further on I came to a tribe of Indians, evidently the owners of the sheep herd. They spoke neither English nor Spanish and I knew nothing of their language. The question then concerned a

Snow Over Fifteen Feet Deep A Common Thing in Far North

It was the first time that George Prentiss had been in the North Country and the whole thing was new to him. Most of his experience had been in South America, Chile and Bolivia principally and deep snows such as he had heard about were things yet to be seen.

So when he came into the North Country he observed with interest a part of the section in which the trees were all cut off about 15 feet from the ground. How the men got up there to cut them troubled the young man. Why they should go up that far and not cut them off at the ground was another question. He asked an old sourdough about it.

"Them woodchoppers don't go up 15 feet to cut them trees," the old timer said. "Them trees was cut off when they was level with the snow last winter."

means of communication with these Indians. Sign language failed, but the resourceful traveler at last gave them to understand that he was trying to reach civilization.

"One of the Indians was wearing a strip of calico. By pointing to the cloth they finally understood that he wanted to go where that came from. It took a long while for them to understand but when they did they told me how to get there.

"Another thing I had to do, convince them that I was hungry. Pointing to my mouth and my stomach I tried to tell them that I had had nothing to eat. After a while they got this, too, and they went to prepare a meal for me.

A Queer Meal "It was one of the queerest meals any civilized man has ever eaten. Cheese made from sheep milk with raw flour ground from the wheat right in the Indian shacks.

"I wouldn't eat anything until one of the Indians ate some first, but after I started I didn't mind. The flour was some of the worst tasting stuff I have ever had and I had to drink a mouthful of water with each mouthful of flour before it would go down. The cheese wasn't so good, either, but it was all there was in the place and I was glad to get anything.

"It is surprising what a man will do when he is forced."

He got to the coast and found that a revolution was in progress. The president of the country had refused to vacate his office when his successor was ready to step in. The navy took one side and the army the other. Battles were fought but Mr. Prentiss says that they were more like schoolboy fights than anything else.

Town Bombarded Anyway, after the navy started to bombard the town, Mr. Prentiss got out. He came back, however, and worked on a derrick which was used in unloading ships in the harbor. In conversation with the chief engineer of the boat, who was a Scotchman, as they invariably are, he found that he might get a berth.

The captain asked him a few questions and the traveler found that he was bound for Brooklyn, around the Horn. He signed on and started on that trip, the ship loaded with saltpetre.

"Saltpetre is a tough cargo to carry," Mr. Prentiss says. "It will dissolve in water and if the ship happens to spring a leak the water reduces the whole cargo to an unwieldy, sluggish mass, constantly shifting so that it has to be 'trimmed' continually. By 'trimmed' I mean spread evenly so that no part of the hold is bearing more weight than any other.

Ship Springs Leak "As luck would have it, we sprang a leak and for more than 12 degrees of latitude before we were constantly pumping and trimming. When we were well on our way up the east coast of South America the leak was stopped and the cargo allowed to dry out. It was plain sailing until we sighted the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor."

That experience wasn't enough. He still had the wanderlust and to crave to see strange places and to keep continually on the go.

His wanderings were civilized people but only a few of them can be told here. There isn't enough space.

From the southern tip of South America to the northernmost part of North America where civilized people have penetrated, Mr. Prentiss has gone. From the hottest climates of the continent to the far north where men slept in woolen socks and moccasins with heavy fur caps pulled down over their ears.

Faced Death Often The contrast did not hurt him. He looks today as though he were a prosperous business man, someone who had never gone out of the country. To look at him one would never dream that here is a man who has faced death more than once, in many different guises, but who has always escaped.

Dressed in a dark suit, wearing a sombre-colored necktie, he told of his experiences in a matter of fact way, just as if he were business deals he had been putting over. Adventure has been crammed into his life since he was a young man, but now he has settled down and is enjoying life. He owns a prosperous ranch in Saskatchewan and he prefers the balmy climate of California.

He tells of life in the far north, during the gold rush of 1893 when prospectors pitted their puny strength against the elements for the hill so that when the sled at the bottom was filled, the top sled would be released. He had the top sled hitched by a rope to a stake in the snow and when the signal was given by the men at the bottom he would release the rope and leave the upper sled loose to go.

This time the top sled was loaded with negroes who were glad to ride down to the bottom. But the man at the top got the signals mixed before the man at the bottom had his sled loaded up and he released the rope.

The sled went back lightning from the top of the hill, gathering momentum as it went along, and its cargo of negroes was terrified. The hub came at the end with the sled was checked by the pulleys.

Shoot the Chutes "Those negroes described the most perfect bunch of paraboloids I have ever seen," laughed Mr. Prentiss. "They must have gone about 200 yards through the air, landing in the snow on their heads and in any old position. They weren't hurt but they almost turned white with fright."

"Next trip we invited the same negroes to go down on the sled but they refused. We asked one of them why.

"Boss, I ain't takin' no chances, for Ah's got a big family to support."

Claims were staked out on the beds of the rivers, where water could be used to sluice the dirt out of the "long pans." Mr. Prentiss' partner had a claim 500 yards long from the bed of the river to the second mountain, but after several others came in and wanted claims of the same size the mining commissioner ruled that all claims hereafter could be no more than 100 feet long.

These were called "bench claims" and Mr. Prentiss believes that he was the first man in the country to receive one of these.

In every summer and out every winter. Snow so deep that snowshoes were required and even then it was a day without having the trails broken in front of them.

From sailing vessels to the goldfields. From the goldfields to Canada and from there to the wild and woolly west, in the days when the pioneers were still having their troubles with Indians and big men.

Cowboys carried guns in those days and Zane Grey's characters were drawn from real life in those troublous times. Dance halls and gambling hells flourished and law was only something that could be remembered as having existed in the dim past.

Enormous herds of cattle roamed the plains and rustlers made their living on them. Horse thieves were still being strung up to the nearest tree and murders with prices on their heads mingled with respectable ranchmen in the county seats.

Mr. Prentiss was a cowpuncher, a rancher, and a horse wrangler. He was a cook for one of these horse outfits and while in this "position" gained a lot of knowledge about the wild west. Bad men who were quick on the trigger survived and other no good men who were not so quick were carried out to the street and wheeled to the cemetery in whatever conveyance there was.

The chuck wagon, or traveling kitchen was about as big as half a box car. Its wheels were big enough to hang a beef on without the carcass touching the ground and the hubs were as big around as a washtub. A complete outfit for feeding from 25 to 50 men was carried inside this great vehicle and the cook had his hands full, for he had to drive the thing from place to place and to cook meals at every camp.

"We used to butcher a 3-year-old heifer at our stops, dress it right on the wagon and give the boys roast beef, with biscuits, coffee and sometimes dessert. We carried a lot of canned stuff and preserves, plenty to last us for a week or more."

A three-year-old heifer might provide food in the city for a lot of people but 25 hungry cowboys, tired and sore after a day on the range, would run through it like nothing.

Bad Indians and good Indians were met on the way, but Mr. Prentiss says he always got along with all of them.

"I fed them when they came along and in that way gained their friendship. Only a few of them were bad but I never met any really bad ones. They had come to accept this new civilization as something they could not help and they took it for granted after a while.

"As a matter of fact," he says, "the white men in those places were sometimes a great deal worse than the worst Indians."

"CALLAHANS, ETC." AT STATE SUNDAY

Rolling Irish Comedy to Play Two Days Here—Two Features Today.

Sally O'Neill, Marie Dressler, Polly Moran and Lawrence Gray are only a few of the players who are to be seen in the great Irish-American comedy, "The Callahans and the Murphys," at the State theater tomorrow and Tuesday. Others in the cast are Eddie Gribb, Jackie Coombs and Tom Lewis and the story is by Kathleen Norris, noted author of human interest tales.

The first great feminine comedy team in the history of the films is seen in Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, who play Mrs. Callahan and Mrs. Murphy, respectively. Mr. Callahan but they are in the background comparatively when their wives get going.

Clothesline arguments and arguments over the sons and daughters of the houses who are engaged to be married form the principal parts of interest in the story. Back yards figure prominently at times and front stoops are seen in their place.

Today for the last time the State is showing Tom Mix in "No Man's Gold," a mining story of the west, and "Lonesome Ladies," starring Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson, now one of the best teams in the film.

Mix's story is said to be the best he has been starred in yet and that is saying something.

Four of the big features of the year are coming to the State within the next month. "The Big Parade," that story of war as it really is, and "Camille," starring the tragedienne, Norma Talmadge, are booked for this month, while two more will be shown in October. They are "Ben Hur," the modern picturization of this famous story of Biblical times, and "What Price Glory," which created a sensation at the stage in New York and all over the country.

Manager Sanson is now booking entries for the Grownap Revue.

Salford, an English industrial center, is forcing its unemployed men to go to school two hours a day and to take physical training.

Here Is The Full Text Of President's Speech

At the South Dakota State College, Brookings today, dedicating the Lincoln Memorial Library, President Coolidge spoke as follows to the Countrymen:

We are met here to dedicate another temple to the cause of learning. To reach their full effect the buildings used for educational purposes must assume the character of temples. One of our learned men has told us that "We do but go where admiration leads the way." Unless we approach our places of learning in that spirit we shall never receive their full benefits.

The South Dakota State College gives every appearance of having reached in a full measure this position. We can usually measure both the desire and the appreciation that exists for the advantages of this life by the sacrifices we are willing to make to secure them. It is evident that in South Dakota this is true. The people here have a very strong belief in the value of education. It is not only to be expected, for this is a land of pioneers who have come here in response to a desire to improve their condition, yet the progress they have made is none the less astounding. It is true, however, that although this is a comparatively new community, it has been nurtured under all the advantages of modern science and invention, which did not accrue to the older parts of our country in their early beginnings. Yet when we remember that South Dakota has been admitted to statehood less than 40 years, that anything like a real settlement has been going on for less than 75 years, that during this short period many thriving cities have arisen, that an adequate educational system has been built up, that a body of laws has been developed, a vast agricultural empire has arisen, a method of local and State government has been built up, the administration of justice has been made effective, and, in short, a great American Commonwealth has been established, we can not fail to stand in respectful admiration for a people whose courage and ability have been crowned with such remarkable accomplishments. But this is only typical of the growth and progress of the West, and the West typical of the growth and progress of America.

unity came to him sooner than he may have expected. During the administration of President Buchanan the Congress had passed a bill providing for a grant of land in the several States to establish educational institutions in agriculture and the mechanic arts. This bill had been vetoed. It is said that Jonathan B. Turner was the author of this measure, and that before he was nominated Lincoln had told him that if he were chosen President he would veto the bill. It is a measure which has been passed and signed by President Lincoln on July 2, 1862. Under its provisions 30,000 acres of public land for each of their Senators and Representatives in the Congress for the support of a college of agriculture and mechanic arts. Under the terms of this law the States have established these institutions, which in the past 50 years have played such an important part in the agricultural life of our country.

These grants of land have been greatly supplemented by direct appropriations from the National Treasury, until under laws passed by the annual appropriations made by the Congress for this purpose run into millions of dollars. All of this is the realization of the vision of Abraham Lincoln, who may have come to him as he rode the circuit over the prairies of Illinois, or as he went up and down the State in the conduct of political campaigns. Its material and spiritual effect upon the Nation is beyond estimation. We should all of us remember Lincoln as the great emancipator, the President who guided the Nation through four years of international conflict, who demonstrated the national character of our institutions and the destructibility of our Union, who removed forever from our soil the stain of human slavery, and who possessed a God-given insight into the destinies of the American people. But these elements of his greatness should not be permitted to eclipse the mighty service which he rendered to the cause of vocational education by his advocacy and leadership. What are usually referred to as our State agricultural colleges. It has been under their inspiration that the amount of production for each person employed has been highly increased and the productivity of the soil so greatly stimulated. They created a vast agricultural empire, lying between the Alleghenies and the Rockies, which has supplied an increasing food supply for a population. So many and so varying elements went into the winning of the great World War that much caution should be exercised in assigning to any one of them a decisive influence. But I think it would be eminently fitting to dedicate any library to his memory. But there is a special reason for placing his name on the library of one of the land-grant colleges of our country.

institution is incontrovertible evidence of the devotion of South Dakota to these principles.

What Is a College?

There has been a long-standing controversy over the question of what constitutes an institution of learning, especially a college. Some contend it is the trustees, others the faculty, still others the student body. I suspect that it is the combination of all these, and the better the quality of each the better the institution will be. But there is yet another element which has become almost an important part in modern scholarship. That is the library. While the teacher is the instrumentality and the directing force, to a very large extent, for the training of youth and the diffusion of knowledge, books are, after all, the priced records of the past, but they are to a large extent the hope of the future. By means of them we have revealed to us the inventions and discoveries of science, the beauties of poetry, and the imperishable thoughts of the master minds of all the ages. A liberal education may begin in the classroom, but it will scarcely rise above mediocrity unless it is extended into the library and by that means broadened into the practical experience of life.

We are dedicating this library with its inestimable treasure of learning to the memory of Abraham Lincoln. It is well known that in his early life he had little opportunity to come in contact with books. He had almost nothing that could be dignified as schooling. While it is true that there is a very large field of education that lies entirely outside of books yet books are the foundation of all education. It is said that Lincoln walked miles to borrow a book, and the few which he had he studied until he had mastered them. No one could have become the great master of English which he was, the author of the Gettysburg Address, the Emancipation Proclamation, and the second inaugural address, without a profound acquaintance with many books. His place merely in the history of the world would be a fitting tribute to his memory. But there is a special reason for placing his name on the library of one of the land-grant colleges of our country.

This great President had a profound interest not only in education, but in agricultural education. He delivered an address in 1859 before the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society in which he said: "Free labor insures the best education." In the same address he then set out his belief in what has come to be known as industrial education, saying that "Heads and hands should be united in the cultivation of the soil by the farmer." He also declared his belief in scientific efficiency by adding, "The thought recurs that education-cultivated thought-can be best obtained with agricultural labor, or any labor, on the principle of thorough work."

The Machine Age.

Here was a man who had brought up under surrounding where the tilling of the soil was carried on by methods which had made no advance for 2,000 years. In fact, the husbandman of the days that Lincoln walked miles to borrow a book, and the great change came with the application of machinery. When Lincoln was speaking, this was almost entirely of the horse-drawn variety, but the steam engine was coming into more diversified use and some attempt had been made to use it for plowing. The general application of chemistry to soil production had scarcely been applied to the farm. The fact that under those conditions he was able to vision agriculture as one of the learned professions is another of the many indications of his supreme greatness.

It is not necessary to say that this was no mere figure of rhetoric intended only to serve the purpose of platitudinous oratory, but the expression of a sound mature conviction which he believed to be practical, and should occasion of fer, one which he would attempt to put into operation. The oppor-

to be expected from American education and American institutions. I

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (79) Early Planes

Some of the airplanes of fifteen to twenty years ago seem as crude to us now as the automobiles of 1905 compared with the 1927 and 1928 models. Above is one of the early types of airplanes, the Voisin biplane, fashioned on the lines of a dry-goods box.

With the typical lines of the early planes, yet with the same idea as shown in most of the biplanes of today, was the Farman biplane of about the same period, pictured above. Henry Farman, an Englishman, distinguished himself for many daring flights. The box-like rudder has disappeared from modern planes.

Did LEANDER SWIM the Hellespont?

TRADITION and archaeology indicate that sports were introduced by the old Hellenes.

Early Greek statuary includes discus hurlers and javelin throwers—museum vases are decorated with sprinting matches—there are figures of boxers and wrestlers among the Elgin marbles. And horse racing is prominently featured on the Parthenon friezes.

Myth insists that Milo of Crotona—ancestor of all Corbetts, Dempseys and Tunneys—slew oxen with a single blow of the fist.

And we're equally assured that Leander made a nightly practice of swimming the Hellespont.

However, there is no circumstantial evidence to verify his claim.

"I haven't any money," the prince blurted out. "You never have any money," Vivian reminded him mockingly. "I should dislike to think of you as hungry, since you do so enjoy eating, so if you will be a very discreet little prince I feel sure that you will find a fairly respectable sum of money waiting for you at my attorney's in Paris. Will twenty-five thousand dollars tide you over until you can land another heiress?"

"Ivan, when I divorced you in Paris a few weeks ago, you lost all your rights to hold me accountable for any of my thoughts or actions," Vivian Crandall reminded him serenely. "You also lost all claim upon my fortune. But—I don't believe I shall miss twenty thousand dollars."

There are 15 children in the family. Today only the father and mother and the youngest remain at home. The father, just an ordinary man who managed to make an ordinary salary all his life and support the 15 decently and well with a few frills thrown in, is an invalid. The strain of years and the care of the old man are taking their toll.

Why don't you and Joe move in with Dad and mother? asks Marie of the sister-in-law who especially nominates Marie for the homecoming job. "You and Bill haven't children to make them nervous, and you haven't the work to do that Ruth has with her big family. There's no way it can be fixed up so smoothly."

Philadelphia Harps Here Tomorrow Afternoon Bissell-Macdonald, Giblin-McHale, Reach Finals

EXPECT 2,000 FANS WILL WITNESS AMERICAN SOCCER INAUGURATION

Game Starts at Three Bells; Fast Preliminary; Manager Dewhurst Now Has "League of Nations" to Oppose Irishmen From Quaker City.

FRENCH MAY WIN DAVIS CUP TODAY

Tilden to Play La Coste and Johnston, Cochet in the Finals.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Close to two thousand soccer fans are expected to be seated in the spacious McKee Street Stadium tomorrow afternoon to watch the initial American League game of the season in Connecticut which brings together Manager Jimmy Dewhurst's Hartford Lawmakers and the crack Philadelphia Harps. Mayor Bob Trent will officially represent the town of Manchester in christening the inauguration of the big league soccer here by kicking off at 3 o'clock.

It has been many long years since Manchester has had a sporting event of equal significance. The fact that it will be possible to watch some of the best soccer players in the world in action right here in our own little hamlet, speaks for itself. What's more Manager Dewhurst has informed The Herald that the Hartford Club will not return to the Hartford Velodrome but will complete the season here providing it gets satisfactory support. Manchester is a strong soccer town and should patronize the games heavily. Then it is expected that will also be many here from out of town.

The fact that Hartford lost all of its exhibition games, does not mean the team will not go good in the league. These games were played with makeshift lineups picked together for the purpose of perfecting teamwork and trying out different players. Now that this has been done, Manager Dewhurst looks for a successful season.

The Philadelphia club will arrive in town late today and will stay at a hotel here over night. The eleven from the Quaker City is playing the J. and P. Coats eleven in Providence this afternoon. The first league game of the Philadelphia team will be composed entirely of players of Irish birth. The services of several stars drawn from the finest clubs in Erin have been secured and their work will be eagerly watched.

Charlie Kibbert, the latest addition to the Hartford team is a Portuguese by birth and with him in the lineup, Hartford resembles the League of Nations in session. Hartford's colorful array of talent includes an Englishman, Scotchman, American, Irishman, Welshman, Egyptian, Scandinavian and a Portuguese.

Andy Bain, the Scotch back with Hartford, is a regular fellow and knows how to crack jokes with the best of 'em. On the soccer field, he makes his opponents the butt of his jokes by his clever playing.

Happy Abushah knows but one language and that is Egyptian but many think that he is Italian. Harry Cowan, Hartford's right back, is a dyer by trade but on Saturdays and Sundays, he is very much alive.

Jimmy McGonigle, the fighting soccer player, uses his fists in the squared arena and his feet in soccer.

Cheney Brothers and the Hartford Seaside will play the preliminary game at the stadium tomorrow, starting at 1 o'clock.

There is one big advantage about playing games at the McKee Street Stadium and that is in case of poor weather the fans can get under cover. That is more than one can do at the expensive Velodrome.

It will be the final day of the Davis Cup challenge round and the four best players in the world, even considering the fact that Billy Johnston no longer is the Old Bill, will draw the thing down to its inevitable conclusion. That conclusion will be reached in the first match today, provided Tilden still is Tilden, which he has been for the last two days.

The Tilden who best Cochet on Thursday and almost unaided won the doubles match yesterday, is a fool-proof figure and, if he plays the same kind of tennis today against Rene La Coste, the national singles champion, he just simply can't go wrong.

But tennis is tennis and the best plans of mice and men oft go awry. It is possible that Tilden today will lose to La Coste and that Billy Johnston, the gamester from California who stepped into the breach against his better judgment, will be beaten by Cochet. If both of these things happen, France will win the Davis Cup.

The professional mourners said that we were going to muffle this competition, and time may prove that they were right. But just at this moment, America happens to be the homeland of William T. Tilden, 2nd, and the man who beats him today will be a man who plays better tennis than an American gallery has ever seen.

Tilden is unbeatable to date in these matches. Perhaps this afternoon he will return to character and play the kind of tennis a normal man should play. But anyone knows perfectly well that he has lifted himself for this particular occasion, that he is making his last great gesture of a great career.

A week from today, he may be a push-over for any sap. Today he has a game going that the immortals of lawn tennis would be glad to absorb and take over.

There is one big advantage about playing games at the McKee Street Stadium and that is in case of poor weather the fans can get under cover. That is more than one can do at the expensive Velodrome.

High School Notes

Now that the first short introduction week has ended, the 760 pupils of the High School will be getting themselves prepared for the real school work. The enrollment for the coming term is the largest in the High School's history and has made necessary changes in the seating plan of assembly in order to accommodate all classes. The enrollment is approximately as follows: Freshmen 298, Sophomores 189, Juniors 174, Seniors 129.

There were seven new teachers in the English divisions. They are as follows: Miss Tinker, Miss English; Miss McDonald, Miss English; Miss Franzen, sophomore English; Miss Estes, sophomore English; Miss Walsh, sophomore French; Miss Nazum, typing and stenography.

Thursday Coach Thomas Kelley sent out his first call for football candidates and a squad of about 40 responded, including 12 men from last year's team. This year the squad will be led by George Keeney and prospects look fine for a successful season, which opens at West Hartford in October.

The seventh period from 2:30 to 3:30 will be used in an entirely different manner this year. Instead of going direct to their home rooms as the close of the sixth period pupils will go to the room at which they spent the first period in the morning. This schedule will be in effect the first three days of the week only. The first three days of the schedule will be in effect for the first, second and third periods and on the first three days of the succeeding week for the fourth, fifth and sixth periods.

Troutry for the Glee Clubs will be held the first two days of next week. The troutry for the boys' club will be held Monday at 3:30 and the girls' club Tuesday at 3:30. Both troutry will be under the supervision of Miss Marion Dunder, musical director of the school.

Elections of class officers will be conducted in a slightly different manner this year. Representatives will be elected from each home room and these representatives will go to Springfield where they will give a concert in the Salvation Army hall. They will be accompanied by Major Bates, head of the Southern New England Province of the Salvation Army.

The lifetime of a good watch, experts say, is 50 years. The balance and half-spring vibrate 157,000, 000 times a year, while an equal number of ticks come from the escapement.

WINS INTO WESLEYAN OVER NUMEROUS RIVALS

Samuel Crockett, one of 100 Out of 400 Applicants to be Admitted.

Samuel Crockett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crockett of Birch street, has received notification from President McConaughy of Wesleyan University that he has been named one of 100 candidates out of 400 applicants to be admitted to the freshman class at that institution this fall. Crockett's acceptance was in view of the high credit he has received during the past year at East Greenwich Academy and Columbia University summer school.

Mr. Crockett was graduated from the high school here in 1920 and until his entry into Greenwich academy has had no opportunity to pursue his studies. His standing at the academy was of the highest, however, and he finished up the year by attending Columbia summer school.

There was a waiting list at Wesleyan this year of nearly 400.

S. A. BAND'S BUSY DAY

The Salvation Army band will have a busy afternoon today, playing three engagements in three Massachusetts towns. They will go to Monson early in the afternoon where they will give a concert at the State hospital.

Later in the afternoon they will go to Palmer and in the early evening will hold an open air meeting. There is no Salvation Army corps in Palmer. In the evening they will give a concert in the Salvation Army hall. They will be accompanied by Major Bates, head of the Southern New England Province of the Salvation Army.

PHOTOMATON DRAWS BIG CROWD TO STORE

Wise, Smith & Co. Have First Automatic Camera in Hartford—Rush to Try It.

The first Photomaton, or automatic camera, to be seen in this section was installed this week at the Hartford store of Wise, Smith & Co. The machine has attracted large crowds to the store every day this week.

This new automatic camera is the invention of Antol Joseph a young Russian immigrant, who, incidentally is now a millionaire as the result of his work. Rights to the camera were purchased by a group of influential men, among them Henry Morgenthau, ambassador to Turkey.

The camera automatically photographs eight different poses of the subject, develops prints and delivers them in one strip within eight minutes. The actual time for posing takes but 24 seconds. All this is done by merely dropping a quarter in a slot. An attendant tells the subject when to change his or her pose.

The photos are very clear. In fact they can be enlarged many times without hurting the clean cut effect. Additional machines are being planned to automatically place frames or holders around the photographs.

WON'T LOSE FINGERS

Although Jacob Silverstein's left hand was severely cut by an axe while he was chopping wood, the attending physician at Memorial hospital stated today that it would not be necessary to amputate three fingers as the high school freshman who lives at Bolton at the foot of Nigger Hill, who wanted them to "hurry up and cut 'em off" so he could get back to school.

WEEKLY BIBLE QUIZ
The answers to these questions on the Bible are printed on another page.

1—What action in the Bible does the picture represent?

2—What is the Bible's shortest verse?
3—How did God first reveal Himself to Moses?
4—For how long did it rain to cause the Flood?
5—Where did Joseph and Mary live?
6—What are the first two books of the New Testament?
7—For whom was the rascal calf killed?
8—What was Jacob's famous bargain with Esau?
9—Where did Moses receive the Ten Commandments?
10—What people were required to herald their disease, by shouting "Unclean?"

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

Clarice—Give me a half hour and a negligee and I bet I'll land him.
Gladys—When in a tight place, get into something loose.
The feminine continues fairly eternal, and yesterday we heard a girl call 'em "stepinnies."
The charity that begins at home is usually so short-winded it never gets much further.
"I never saw but one man," said Uncle Bill Bottlestop, "that I thought had a chance foolin' with bootleg liquor. He was a sword-swallower and his wife was a snake charmer."
Men will quit gawking about the same time that women become wholly unconscious of the fact their skirts are too short.
When a girl is in love and in debt, the chances are she is in misery, too.

By the time you kiss and make up, the make-up is all off.

SENSE and NONSENSE

A highbrow magazine is one which contains an article by someone everybody has heard of, about somebody nobody has ever heard of.

"Daddy, mamma loves the men in politics."
"How do you know?"
"Today when she voted she put kisses after their names."
My husband declares he married for beauty and brains.
"Oh, then, you're not his first wife."

VAIN TALK.
My brain is fagged, my nerves are tense,
I'm in a punk condition
From listening to arguments
Concerning prohibition.

Girls of the past generation have cured themselves of some habits their mothers had. One woman confesses: "When I was a school girl I used to wipe my pen on my stockings."

A London man was cremated recently to the tune of "The Merry Widow." That isn't a hymn—it's a "her."

Customer—"Are you quite sure this suit won't shrink if it gets wet on me?"
Ikey—"Min friend, effery fire company in the city has squirted water on dot suit."

Nature sometimes does her work too well, and the woman who wants to get plumb gets fat, and the one who wants to get slender gets skinny.

New fashions would be more comfortable if the weather wasn't so old-fashioned.

First Stage Hand—What was all the trouble out front?
Second Stage Hand—That crazy new actress who is taking the part of the nursemaid got excited and brought the baby on the stage in the first act, when it wasn't due until three years later in the last act.

Friends are not necessary. The English sparrow hasn't a friend in the world and look how he gets along.

Clarice—Give me a half hour and a negligee and I bet I'll land him.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

"Say, lookee here," the Kite Man said. "It's time this bunch was snug in bed. You haven't had a wink of sleep since first I joined your crowd. Where do you sleep, and is it near? You run along, and I'll stay here. You see, I always stay awake. To sleep I'm not allowed."
The Tynmites thought this very queer, but thoughts of sleep brought heaps of cheer. They didn't wish to argue, lest they make the Kite Man rave. So, looking tired, and rather worn, they shouted, "See you in the morn," and of the merry we ones went to find their little cave.
The Kite Man sat up all night long, and saw that not a thing went wrong with all the little sticks of wood they worked away upon the kite. It soon would be a pretty sight. And then he ceased his labors as he didn't want to pound.
"I'll be as quiet as can be, or I will wake them up," said he. Now that was very thoughtful, and a lesson to us all. The night rolled on. The sun rose high. "Well, they'll be back here, bye and bye," said Funny Mister Kite Man. Then he heard wee Copy call.
"Good morning, sir. We're getting dressed. We sure have had a dandy rest." And then the whole bunch joined him, feeling cheerful as could be. "Well, well," the Kite Man said, aloud. "I'm glad to greet this merry crowd. Turn in and help me now, and then a wondrous sight you'll see."
He then put little nails in play, which made the kite in right shape stay. Said he, "It won't be long till you can have a lovely flight. Up in the air you'll sail on high, right in this kite, up to the sky." And then he started wrapping bits of paper round the kite.
(The Tynmites bid the Goofy Goos good-bye in the next story.)
