STRUGGLE ENDS TO RUN BIGGEST MANNING COMPANY

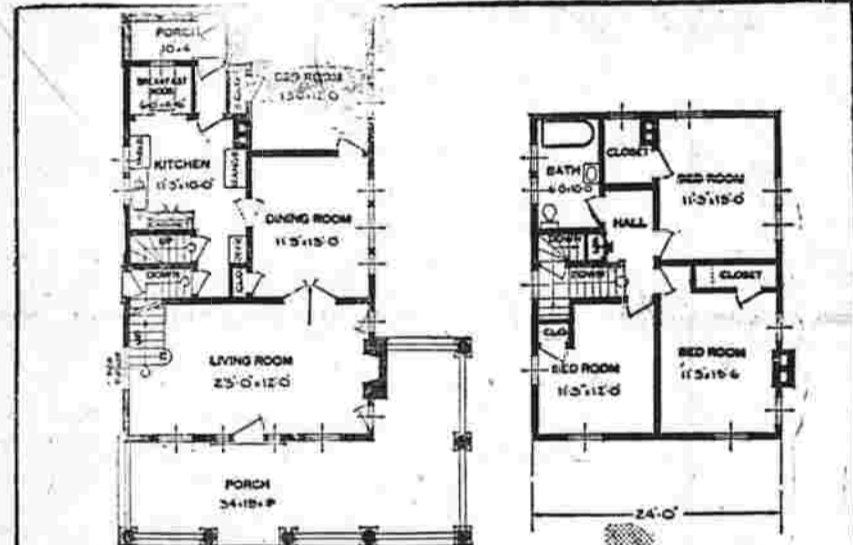

Fight to Gain Control of Pittsburgh Coal Co., Is Lost By Taplin.

Pittsburgh. — A bitter struggle for the control of the largest bituminous mining company in the world, the Pittsburgh Coal company, which the public knew was being waged under cover but which both sides denied at the time, has come to a high tide...

Lewis' expose of alleged transactions by Taplin have since been denied in an affidavit filed by the Cleveland lawyer in answer to the union chief but Lewis insists that Philip Murray, vice-president of the miners union and P. T. Fagan, district union president, were present when Taplin is alleged to have proposed that the union aid him in acquiring control of the company's stock.

Taplin is supposed to control the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal corporation, and in filing the union's answer to the injunction proceedings he alleged that the union was to benefit by being granted a new contract for the operations of the mines which it lost in 1925.

GIVE THE CHILDREN A CHANCE TO GROW

Quiet, strong characters are encouraged, and often developed, by solitude. That is why it is so important to have enough room while the children are growing up so they may have a chance to be themselves when they want to.

A roomy, big home is all-essential, if you consider your children. Such a home is "The Melbourne," with its wide porch extending half way round the house, its 23-foot living room with fireplace built in for cheerfulness and three big rooms upstairs for the children with a bedroom set apart downstairs for the grown-ups. In addition there is a spacious basement for rainy-day playroom and storing such necessary things as bicycles.

BRITISH LABOR GROPE IN DARK FOR NEW POLICY

Trades Unions Reaching Turning Point With a Plan To Split.

London.—Beset with doubts and perplexities which cloud the future, the British labor movement is groping dejectedly for a new policy.

The Trade Unions have reached a turning-point, with the movement split into at least three factions, and it is not yet clear even to the recognized leaders in which direction the turning is to be. That is, whether they are to seek a haven of safety by turning the unions into non-political organizations to make their fight for improved conditions strictly along industrial lines; to get behind the "constitutionalists" who believe that trade unionism should be political as well as industrial and that through Parliament lies the path to power; or to go the way of the "left wing," shouting for Communism and revolution.

These three possibilities have led to acute divisions of opinion, with the new anti-strike law as the bone of contention around which the controversy will come to a head shortly in the annual meeting of the Trade Union Congress at Edinburgh.

Leaders Opposed
Conservative labor leaders like J. H. Thomas and J. R. Clynes, both members of the House of Commons, are determined that the new Trade Disputes Act, despite its admitted hardships, should be studiously observed; while a "constitutional" political campaign is organized against it. Opposed to this view are the "left wing" like A. J. Cook of the miners, who insist that the unions should ignore the act and should insist on the right of mass, sympathetic and political strikes, which the law now forbids.

The "constitutionalists" have pledged themselves to repeal the act as soon as they are able, in the meantime bringing the rules of the Trade Union movement into line with the provisions of the law. The ballot box, they hold, is the only way to achieve practical results, at the same time not abandoning the principle of combination and the application of the strike when and where it is regarded as necessary.

On the theory that the lion and the lamb can get along peacefully together, George A. Spencer, a Laborite member of Parliament, wants to turn the unions into non-political organizations which would endeavor to make truces with employers by agreeing to abandon the strike weapon. Although this plan is said to have received the approval of a number of local unions, it is strenuously opposed by other labor leaders who declare that Trade Unionism would thus surrender the independence which it has developed during the past twenty years and would be at the mercy of the employers.

Bureaucracy Charged
The answer of the "left wing" to both the "constitutionalist" and the Spencerites is that the "Trade Union Bureaucracy is attempting to use the Act as an excuse for avoiding struggles likely to bring the unions into conflict with the government." For its part, the "left wing," with more or less Communist influence, is anxious to be in "conflict with the government," and would like to force the issue as quickly as possible by organizing a "general strike." To this the "constitutionalists" will never agree, and is not expected in any responsible quarter that the "left wing" will get very far with the proposals now being urged and which will be placed before the Edinburgh Congress.

Whatever policy emerges from the forthcoming meeting of the Trade Union Congress, it will be one of conservatism, and possibly very much like that of the American Federation of Labor, within the restrictions of the British law.

OSAGE INDIANS GO TO LEGION MEETING IN FULL WAR PAINT

New York.—War paint and wampum, tomahawks and feathers will be revived when full blooded Osage Indians attend the American Legion convention in Paris this month.

Fourteen full blooded Osage "braves," who fought in the United States expeditionary forces in France are on their way to Paris to attend the legion convention.

The Indians, who are members of Rollie McCartney Post, No. 97, of Pawhuska, Oklahoma, will parade in Paris wearing the full Indian regalia of long ago.

One of the members of the Osage party is Joseph Mills, of the "Saucy Chief" band of the Osages, who was wounded in the Meuse-Argonne campaign. He is a member of the Osage County Vulture No. 489 La Societe 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux. He is a national officer in this organization with the title of Sous Garde de la Porte Nationale.

NEW CHARITY ADDED TO STRAUSS GIFT LIST

Jerusalem.—Nathan Straus, the New York philanthropist, has added another charity to his long list of benevolences for the benefit of the Holy Land inhabitants.

His latest gift is $75,000 for a "Children's Home" to be erected in Tel Aviv, the all-Jewish township towards which the first $25,000 have been received.

The construction and administration of the new Home will be in charge of a local committee nominated by Mr. Straus. N. H. Blauk, the Hebrew Post Laureate, was nominated by Mr. Straus as a member of this committee and it was through the poet the gift was announced.

With the soup kitchen in existence in Jerusalem, a $250,000 Health Center in the process of construction in the Holy City, and the new Children's Home in Tel Aviv, Mr. Straus evidently has not reached the end of his Palestine benefactions. His was the first unsolicited contribution for earthquake relief in Palestine and the size of it, $25,000 has not been matched by any other person or organization contributing for this purpose.

Symbolizing the Legion

Official poster of the American Legion Paris convention is this symbolic figure. It was designed by J. M. Mitchell, of New York, and won the $1,000 prize the Legionnaires offered for the best design.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (84) Modern Feats

Two great events attracted the world's attention to aviation in 1924. The first was the daylight flight of Lieut. Russell L. Maughan from New York to San Francisco. Starting from New York just before dawn, June 23, he reached San Francisco at 9:47 the same evening, 21 hours and 48 minutes after he started on the 2,700-mile jaunt.

Equally thrilling was the circumnavigation of the world by United States flyers. Four planes began the journey from Los Angeles, March 17.

One plane was wrecked in the mountains of Alaska but the others carried on, crossing the Pacific from the Attu Islands to Japan.

The flyers touched twenty-one lands in their course. On September 28, they completed their girde around the earth upon reaching Seattle. The actual time spent in flying was 15 days, 6 hours, although the trip lasted 5 months and 22 days. Besides circling the world, the flyers were the first to cross the Pacific and the China Sea.

Our Constitution—No. 4

BY HARRY ATWOOD
President Constitution Anniversary Association.

Constitution Welds Into Clear Plan Man's Age-Old Claims and Protests.

Prior to the writing of our Constitution, it had been the custom of mankind throughout the ages to approach the problems of government in terms of protest against conditions and to indulge in superlative declarations as to rights and privileges without working out a definite plan for meeting the situation.

Most of the contents of such documents as Magna Charter, Bill of Rights, Declaration of Independence, etc., could be classified under the two headings—Protest and Assertion, but all lacked a definite plan.

Diagnosing the World's Ills
Fully aware of the great opportunity which confronted them and conscious of their mighty responsibility, the men who wrote the Constitution undertook the difficult task of working out a plan of government in the same calm, deliberative and analytical manner in making a diagnosis, the engineer in making a design of the scientist unfolding a law of nature and they worked with consummate skill and crowning achievement.

One of the chief essentials to an understanding of the Constitution is to have in mind a clear definition of what it really is. To say that the Constitution is an "organic law," which is a common definition, simply suggests the question: What is an organic law? To say that it is the "fundamental law," which is another common definition simply suggests the question: Are all other laws unfundamental?

To regard the Constitution as merely a statement of principles and an enumeration of rights and guarantees simply results in confusion and a false concept.

The Constitution of the United States is a statement of purpose, followed by a plan for setting up and maintaining a mechanism to administer a federal representative government in harmony with the purpose set forth in the preamble.

The supreme test of the Constitution, then, is: Are the purposes to which it is dedicated beneficial, comprehensive, correct, and practical? Is the plan for setting up and maintaining a mechanism to administer a federal representative government in harmony with the purposes set forth in the preamble well conceived and clearly stated? The test of the advisability of placing an amendment in the Constitution should be: Is it necessary in order to improve the statement of purposes or improve the plan?

Pitt's Commendation
To realize something of the attitude of mind that characterized the authors of the alphabet as a basis for solving the problems of language; the scale of music as a basis for solving musical problems; the ten digits as a basis for solving mathematical problems will aid one in acquiring an adequate conception of the attitude of mind which the delegates in their successful efforts toward working out a basis for the solution of the problems of government.

Shortly after the Constitution was written a copy of it was placed in the hands of the world famous William Pitt. He was prime minister at twenty-four years of age and is still regarded by many as the greatest prime minister England ever produced.

It is said that he read the most difficult works, of science and philosophy with a high degree of intelligence when he was nine years of age. He held England steady during the French Revolution.

After Pitt had read our Constitution, he exclaimed: "It will be the wonder and admiration of all future generations and the model of all future constitutions."

lands that give the book an extraordinary quality.

A sea tale that is narrative rather than romantic bears the intriguing title, "After You, Madge!" (Century), by James F. Leys. The author and his friend James Marshall Plumer, who took their degrees from Harvard in 1921, enlist as deck boys on a freighter and ship to the Orient.

It is a gay, jaunty tale, told with the irrepressible spirits of two boys out for a lark. It's an adventure for the reader as well as the author.

A romanticist, a sentimentalist, and an independent young flapper all tackle marriage in "Three Wives" (Knopf) and learn that as an institution marriage certainly has its faults, that as a sturdy oak upon which to twine one's self, man sags dismally. Beatrice Kean Seymour is the author.

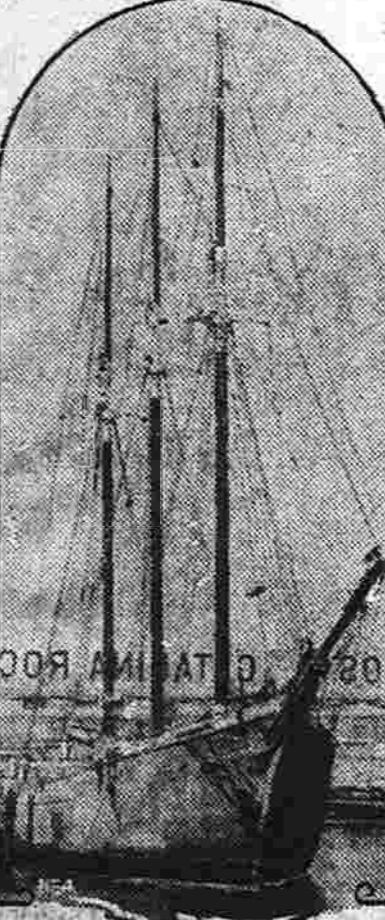

Of the three women portrayed, Tony, the flapper, is most colorful. At the end of the book she has discarded her heavy, stodgy husband and tells the world she has found the man of her dreams. If she hasn't, you don't worry particularly.

With this as with so many novels about modern life, the women characters seem so sure of themselves that no instinctive sympathy is aroused, and you have no desire to follow them to the last chapter and see everyone well settled at last.

This particular book contributes nothing to the woman problem that is particularly new. It is not nearly so interesting a novel as her "The Hopeful Journey."

The bungalow got its name in India. Early British residents built one-room, partitioned dwellings, calling them "bungalows" from the Hindu word "banga," meaning thatched hut.

Who Owns Her?

This three-masted schooner was picked up at sea off the Mexican coast by a passing ship. Aboard were two men who professed to know nothing about the ship or how they got there. The boat was towed to Long Beach (Calif.) harbor and the men disappeared. No one has claimed the strange ship and she is to be sold to satisfy bills for wharfage charges.

Prizefight Film Starring Woman New Movie Idea

BY DAN THOMAS.

Hollywood, Calif.—Director William K. Howard's next production will be "The Knockout." On the face of things it is just an ordinary prizefight film, but it will star Vera Reynolds, being the first time a girl has ever been starred in a fight picture and many new and unusual camera stunts will be introduced.

This film is being made under Howard's megaphone wielding because this young director had the nerve to say "No!" on two other productions which had been slated for him by his superiors. Howard has been a director for exactly four years—and for two years of that time his favorite word has been "no." Just before he made "White Gold," Howard was slated to direct "The Country Doctor," one of the big productions on the De Mille program for this year. After reading the script, Howard went to his supervisor and said, "It should be a good picture, but we will have to do a lot of overtime work on the story."

"There isn't any more work to be done on the story—it's finished," replied the supervisor.

"Do you mean the story must be shot the way it is here?" asked Howard.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Then someone else will have to make the picture—I can't do it," the director declared.

"The Country Doctor" was given to another director. But first, Howard's suggested changes were made in the story.

Hollywood gossip now gives Howard credit for being the industry's greatest "No"—man.

Beatrice Kean Seymour, whose new novel "Three Wives" is a study of three modern marriages.

When a man writes a good sea story, he may just as well resign himself to being called a disciple of Conrad, even though he has nothing in common with that writer except his subject.

H. M. Tomlinson, comparatively unknown English author of "Galions Reach" (Harpers) probably is prepared for this. The story is a splendid one.

An ex-journalist who spent many years covering police court for the London Daily News, and was sent to the front as war correspondent, he has the direct approach to his story that a reporter is trained to cultivate. But he has much more. His characters actually live and grow. When his storms strike a ship, and the ship loses its rudder, and the water closes over, the catastrophe actually occurs.

Another new sea novel is "The Sentimentalists" (Little, Brown and Company) by Dale Collins, who set such a good precedent for himself to follow in "Ordeal."

It gets away to a good start on the deck of a brig lying at anchor in the Panjerassa River in the Dutch East Indies. A canoe with a white baby in it bumps against the ship and the Captain adopts it. Naturally he can't be expected to take care of the infant himself, so he finds a nursemaid—a rather charming young woman who accepts the job as an escape from the rather questionable life into which she has drifted. She becomes the heroine of the tale. The unraveling of complexity concerning the nurse and the discovery of the identity of the babe form the plot. There is a dramatic intensity and a feeling for the beauty of tropical nights in strange, far away

DOUBLE FILM BILL AT STATE THEATER

Menjou and Marion Nixon Divide Honors in Features; "Service for Ladies" Is Principal.

"Service for Ladies" is the keynote of Adolphe Menjou's performance in his picture of that name which is at the State theater today and tomorrow. On the same program will be seen the racing picture, "Down the Stretch," the most recent portrayal of the sport of kings.

Menjou is still the polished gentleman, this time a headwaiter who caters especially to the women. Those women who are misunderstood by their husbands are his friends and they get plenty of understanding from him.

Aside from the plot of the story, which follows the usual channels, Menjou does a lot of good acting and makes the film something worth seeing. He is in a dress suit most of the time, as usual, and he looks like a million dollars as he bends solicitously over the tables of his "misunderstood" friends.

It is a whimsical comedy, said to be Menjou's funniest so far. As the saying goes, Menjou serves the ladies, and serves them right. "Down the Stretch" is the latest racing picture to be sent out of Hollywood. It is termed the greatest picture of the tracks so far and Marion Nixon, the star of the piece, is prettier than ever.

She is supported by a wonderful cast of humans and horses and "Down the Stretch" is worthy of notice.

U. S. EXPORTS FALL AS GRAIN DEMANDS ARE LESS ABROAD

Washington.—Curtailed demand abroad for American grain and the reduced price of American cotton this year as compared with 1926 is cutting materially into the money value of American export trade.

At the same time lower prices for coffee, tea, raw silk and crude rubber are cutting down the valuation of imports to America from abroad.

The export loss, however, is greater than the import reduction, the next result being a tightening up of the trade balance as between exports and imports.

These conditions are disclosed in a compilation just completed by the Department of Commerce of export and import statistics for the month of July.

Exports for July 1927 were $22,000,000 under July 1926. Imports for the same month this year were $19,000,000 under the same month last year. Exports this year exceeded imports by $23,000,000. Thus the trade balance was narrowed by $4,000,000 as compared with July last year.

AN OLD-FASHIONED KITCHEN—IN SIZE.

Some of the pleasantest memories of childhood are Mother bustling about the kitchen. Many homes today save space on the kitchen, thus denying the grownups of tomorrow such happy memories.

One of the advantages of "The Raeford" is that there's plenty of room in the kitchen for the children to watch Mother and a play porch just outside the kitchen door where they can be out of her way and still conscious of her intriguing operations within.

Other attractive features of this brick house with its snug, homelike appearance, are its reception hall; its living room with the fireplace that always entices as frost nips the air; and upstairs, the three roomy bedrooms with such closet space that there can never be a question about where to put this or that.

The cost would seem in inverse proportion to the attractiveness and comfort of "The Raeford," because it is from $5500 to $6500.

NEW ENGLAND TO STUDY AVIATION AT CONFERENCE

Manufacturing End of Industry and Building of Airports Discussed.

Boston, Mass.—New England is to learn of the opportunities of the air at an aviation conference to be held at the Hotel Statler on September 30 under the auspices of the Committee on Public Relations and Community Organization of the New England Council.

The purposes of the conference will be to discuss the most effective methods of promoting the following:

1. Building of airports in New England communities.

2. Manufacturing for the aviation industry by New England industries.

3. Use of aviation by New England industry and business, as well as by individuals.

4. Uses of flying.

The conference is being called at the request of organizations interested in various phases of aviation development. Community and industrial organizations throughout New England will be invited to send representatives to the conference, at which specialists will present various phases of aviation in relation to New England's development.

Committees of men already actively engaged in aviation development are preparing the details of the program. Under the subject of manufacturing, it is planned to have brought out at the conference the things the aviation industry now uses and what it will require in the future, what New England manufactures are now furnishing to the industry, and what they can do with present facilities, furnish in addition.

Under airport development will come discussions as to the status of airports, whether they should be municipal or commercial, their physical requirements, such as accessibility, character of land, and environment, their financing and their earnings, the need for legislation in New England states to facilitate the establishment of airports and the commercial development of adjacent land.

The conference will also develop the ways in which New England business can effectively use the air mail, air express and air passenger transport service, both on scheduled routes and as a taxi service. The possibility of forming aero clubs for recreational flying also will be discussed.

The manufacturing section of the program is being arranged by John D. Haughey, President of the Air Service of New England, Inc., and P. W. McLanathan, Lawrence manufacturer.

Leader in Charge.

Those arranging for the program on airport development are Carl W. Robinson, of Concord, N. H., president of Kenilston, Inc., a company building airports; Raymond Baldwin, Boston, Counsel for the Boston Airport Corporation; W. D. Thompson, Jr., president of the Concord N. H. Airport Corporation; Phillips Payson, Portland, Me., Airport Corporation; and W. H. Beardsley, Springfield, Vt., Chamber of Commerce.

Those who will arrange that part of the program dealing with uses for aviation are Sumner Sewall, Traffic Manager, Colonial Air Transport Company, Boston; W. J. Backes, Chief Engineer, Boston and Maine Railroad; Bernard Wiseman, Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Mason Sears, Treasurer, Boston Airport Corporation.

The date for the aviation conference coincides with the dates for an aviation show to be held in Boston during the week of September 26 to October 1.

The establishment of airports is now a definite project in many communities and construction work on some of them is nearing completion.

President Hannauer of the Boston and Maine Railroad has named a committee of the road's officers to study the possibility of coordinating the road's service with aviation service.

Prospects Of Successor For Helen Wills Are Slim

BY HENRY L. FARRELL (United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Sept. 16.—(United Press)—Women's tennis declined into what the boys around the ring would call "no racket" during the eight years or more in which the bronzed arm of Molla Mallory knocked everything off the court in front of her.

Officials of American tennis who have as much money as love of the game invested in the sport are now fearful and concerned that the tennis tickets will go back to the cut-rate agencies now that Helen Wills has returned to the position of the invincible one.

They would, like to console themselves, or their pocketbooks at least, with the hope that some other player is coming along who will be sufficiently equipped with strokes and heart to at least give Helen a fight. She is too nice and too attractive to be wished into more than a stiff match.

In sweeping through Wimbledon and Forest Hills, meeting at one time or another the best players in the world who entered the British and American national championships, Miss Wills proved that she dominates the woman's tennis field so completely that only age may overtake her. And she is just a youngster.

Helen Jacobs, of California, is the only youngster among the Americans who has advanced far enough to be considered even a far future prospect and we'll bet a 1917 Wills for a national championship. If she should succeed in doing that it will occur at a date so far in the future that either the bet will be forgotten or some society for the prevention of something-or-other will not allow us to wear straw hats.

The foreign field includes among the young possibilities—Betty Nuthall, Joan Fry, Gwendolyn Sterry, Kea Bouman and Senorita de Alvarrez and of these Miss Nuthall is by far the best prospect. But neither Miss Nuthall nor the others are as far advanced in championship tournaments as Miss Jacobs, quote the records as you wish.

Kathlene McKane Godfree, former British champion, was a great player and she is still a good one but she is now in a class with Molla Mallory, Eleanor Goss and other American veterans.

Charlotte Hosmer Chapin distinguished herself in the national championship and while she is still a young woman her game has been developed to the point where it hasn't the material for any great improvement.

Miss Wills has everything, tournament temperament, strokes, power, courage, physical stamina and, which is perhaps the most important of all—a love of the game. It was such a strong liking for tennis that helped Mrs. Mallory to resign as long as she did and that has been the inspiration of all other successful players.

Without a born interest in the game or an interest cultivated at a very tender age in a tennis atmosphere a player cannot go through the seige of practice and tennis necessary to reach the top and remain there without getting Golf is a part of the life of Bob Jones and tennis is a large part of the life of Helen Wills and this statement is made in no way to reflect upon a doubtful motive they might have in retaining interest in their games.

Miss Wills has become a dominant and commanding figure in international tennis before she has finished school and she has set out for a career that will not be an impediment to her game.

She has not ambition to become a portrait painter and a writer and as she seems to have talent for both she ought to be successful. In this work she naturally will have more leisure than one who had the burden of domestic or professional care more exacting and more time-consuming than that of an artist.

"What if she should marry?" you might ask.

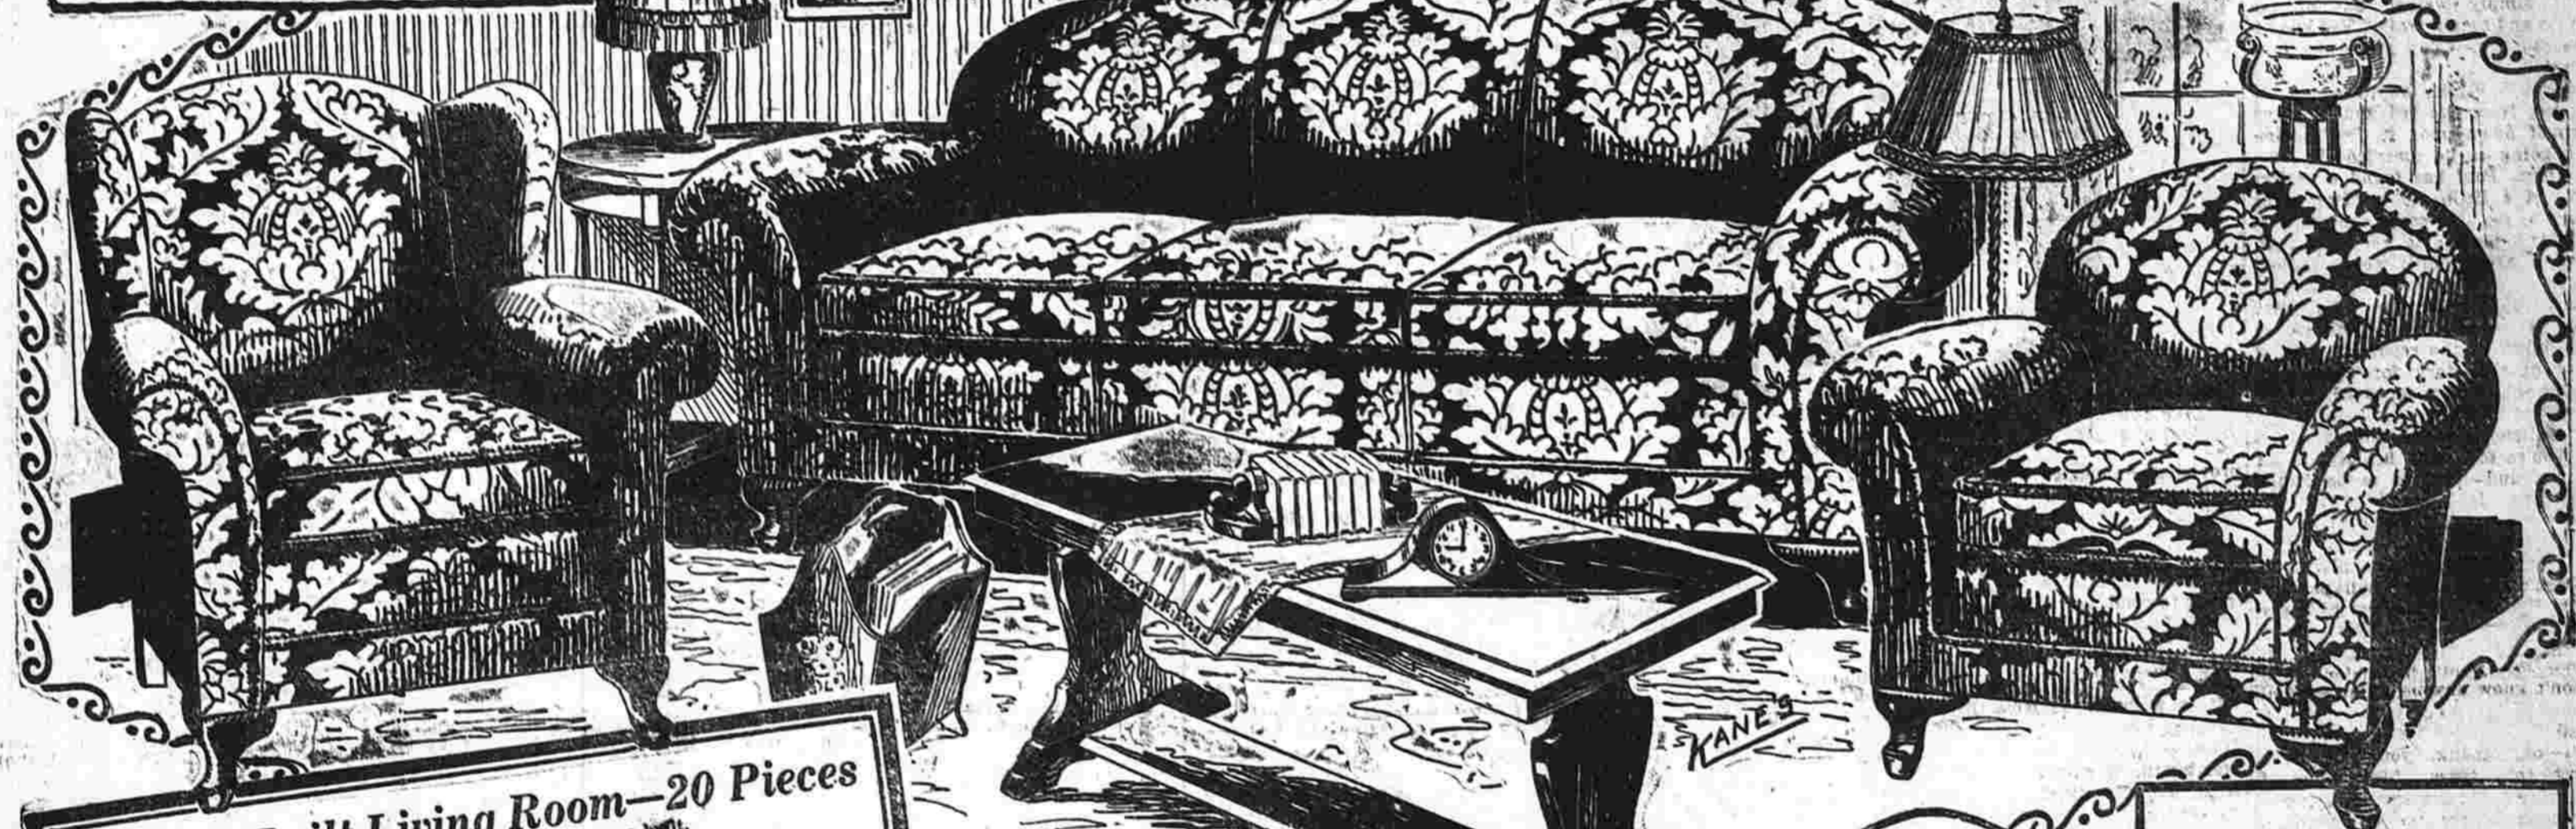

Well, if she should accept any one of a flock of known suitors, it would not mean that she would have to give up her tennis or that she would have to discard the tennis racket for a kitchen tub.

ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST CHAINS OF FURNITURE STORES

COVENTRY

Coventry Grange No. 75, P. of H., gave a reception Thursday evening for the school board and school teachers in town. The following teachers were present: Miss Margaret Jacobson, Buck school; Miss Kathryn Adams, Pond Hill; Miss Gertrude Stoke, Silver street; Mrs. Charles Christensen, North school; Mr. Garrison, supervisor; Miss Le Roux, primary supervisor; Mrs. Thomas Well, musical director. A few remarks. Refreshments were served followed by dancing.

The Ladies' Fragment society will hold its annual corn supper Tuesday evening, Sept. 20 at the chapel. The supper will be served from 6 to 8 p. m. (S. T.) followed by W. I. Woods giving a talk on "Bible." During the evening fancy work will be on sale also a beautiful quilted colonial quilt will be auctioned off.

The Ready Helpers have earned $87 already toward wiring the parsonage. This money has been earned by presenting the play "A White Shawl." It is hoped the budget will be greatly increased after the presentation of the play tonight at Manchester Green school. This will make the fifth time the play has been repeated. Be sure and attend. It must be good to attend repeating. The young people will present it again Saturday evening at Vernon.

Miss Laura K. Kingsbury has resumed her studies at Connecticut Agricultural College.

FLYNN EMPHATICALLY DENIES BREACH BETWEEN HE AND JACK

Former Manchester Man Says Report Is Silliest and Most Uncalled For Bunk He Ever Heard; Flynn's Own Story.

Leo Peter Flynn, manager of William Harrison Dempsey, and the man who many have credited for Dempsey's victory over Jack Sharkey, comes forth with a statement emphatically declaring that there isn't a thread of truth to the report that he and Dempsey will sever terms after the Tunney fight in Chicago next Thursday night. The fact that Flynn is well known in Manchester, having conducted a stable of boxers here at one time, makes his story all the more interesting to local fans. It follows:

By LEO P. FLYNN

Probably the most vicious angle in the coming fight between Dempsey and Tunney is the propaganda being sent around that Jack and I are about to sever relations as fighter and manager.

That is the silliest, most uncalled for thing I ever heard. The fact is that we are the closest of friends and I have Jack's confidence and he has mine.

I know who is starting this talk. In the first place, there was no discussion as to the Sharkey fight and who deserved credit for getting Dempsey in shape to score that great victory.

Right after the bout Dempsey was shown some newspaper clippings, in which various persons were given praise for Dempsey's triumph. Jack was a bit annoyed and told the newspaper men that he gave me the credit and no one else.

I told Jack not to mind, that it didn't hurt me a bit and surely didn't hurt him, and that some of the boys wanted a bit of publicity.

"Never mind that," Jack answered. "You got me in shape and you coached me and trained me and you alone deserve the credit and shall have it."

Right away, word went around that there was dissension among Dempsey's assistants, all based on this very simple situation about the Sharkey fight. Now, I never had any run in with Gus Wilson, Dempsey's friend and one of his advisors. Dempsey made it plain that I was to run his camp, draw on any money that I saw fit and was to be accountable to no one.

Now, as to the Martin Burke matter, Burke had worked with Jack in several fights. He was and is a splendid fellow and a great sparring partner. No one advises Burke any more than I do. But he is a close friend of one of Tunney's confidential advisors.

With such an important battle in the offing, and with so many ill-advised suspicions directed toward a big bout, wouldn't he be rather silly to run any possible risks of friends confiding in each other? I think so.

I would give anything to have Burke's services and so would Dempsey. But although we know Burke is honorable and loyal, it is best not to let ourselves open to idle talk by others. So I thought it best to let Burke go and Dempsey is not made over with at all. Dempsey is one of the most sensible men I ever met.

As to the money Dempsey is supposed to be paying me, there has been no squabble. Neither have Rickard and I had any dispute whatsoever as to money or anything else.

I was represented in the press as having been given $50,000 for this fight and $10,000 for the Sharkey fight. Well, the boys are about $100,000 off in the estimate. If I thought for a minute that I was hand-capping Dempsey or that I was not wanted in his camp, I should step aside immediately.

TODAY IN FISTIANA By DOC REID

RANDALL vs. MARTIN

One hundred and six years ago today marked the successful comeback effort of Jack Randall, middleweight champion of England, who after an absence from the ring of nearly three years, returned to defend his laurels against Jack Martin, claimant of the title, whom he knocked out after one eight minute round of furious fighting at Grinstead, near Manchester, England, in the presence of 30,000 spectators. Close to a million dollars was wagered on the result of the contest.

It happened that Martin was his last opponent upon the occasion of his retirement from the ring three years previous when he defeated the challenger in one hour of a hard fought battle before about 20,000 persons. Martin showed such improvement in all of his bouts after the retirement of Randall however, that the latter was induced to re-enter the ring in defense of the title. After the second affair with Martin, he slid back into retirement and seven years later died from dissipation.

The Tigers broke their losing streak by outslugging Washington 6 to 5, a home run by Harry Rice staked the Browns to a 2 to 1 victory over the Red Sox.

GERMANY KNOWS WHO WON THE WAR!
WHEREIN IS SPELLED LIKEWISE THE MORAL OF A PACKAGE OF CIGARETS PRICED AT $1.65.

By MILTON BRONNER

Berlin. There are still foolish people who regret that the great war did not last longer, so that victorious allied troops might have marched into Germany and even paraded in triumph down Unter den Linden in Berlin. They still say the war did not come home to Germans. All of which is just sheer rot. The Germans know they had a war all right. They are ever and eternally conscious of it. They know it by their small army. They know it by the reparations they have to pay. They know it by the tax burden. They know it by the ories of bitter near-starvation. They know it by business depression and unemployment figures. And they don't say things that

FISH HOOKS CURE FOR PICKPOCKETS

St. Joseph, Mo.—Tony Augustine, of St. Joseph, is a boiler-maker. He is prosperous enough to travel abroad, but not so affluent but that he is careful of his money. Tony had his pockets picked while he was in Warsaw, Poland, recently, and was greatly irked. So he went to a tailor and had him sew 60 fish hooks in are pleasing to the ears of boastful English general like Haig, who not long ago said England would have won the war all by itself, even if America had not come in. The German view. Wherever you travel in Germany, people quite frankly and simply say: "We would have won the war if America had not come in. Your millions of strong, fresh, brave young men settled it." And American travelers in Germany know we won the war all right, know it when they come to buy cigars, for instance. The German tax on imported tobacco is huge.

The result is that many well known firms have established factories in Germany. They are there by enabled to sell their well known brands at prices somewhat like those obtained in England and America. But the cigars don't taste the same. The tobacco seems to be different. The paper seems to be different. The cigars taste as if they had quinine in them. Here's a Shock Many an American traveler, having gone up against these made-in-

Germany fags, spies a well-known and popular American cigar in a shop window. It is the original package, made in America. At home it costs 15 cents. He rushes in and exclaims to the dealer: "I'll have those! How much are they?" "Certainly," says the dealer with polite suavity. "Six marks and sixty pennings the package. How many will you take?" Pay $1.65 for a 15-cent package of American cigars? The American backs out of the shop dazed. He knows now that the German had a war. He knows now that the Germans know they had a war. And the German dealer, once more disappointed in a prospective customer, sadly puts the package back on the shelf where it lies to become dusty and fly-specked.

DEMOCRATS IN PLAN TO ATTACK GOVT. POLICIES

Administration Men in Congress Will Have to Defend Tariff.

Washington. Administration supporters in Congress will be given plenty of opportunity at the next session to defend the tariff, the Tariff Commission and the Coolidge-Kellogg Mexican and Central American policies.

This was the promise made here early in August by Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, leader of the Democratic opposition of the upper chamber, just before he left to attend a meeting of the Interparliamentary Conference in Rio de Janeiro. He said he intended to bring back with him sufficient ammunition to rid the programs of tariff and Latin-American programs.

After the Rio de Janeiro meeting, which he was to attend in company with Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, Republican, Rhode Island, Robinson planned to go to Buenos Aires for the purpose of gathering data and information on the operations of the Tariff Commission in South America.

Robinson's Position The Arkansas Senator has already taken the position, because of other information he has received, that the commission's practice of investigating cost production in foreign countries is meeting with wide disfavor abroad, particularly in the Argentine. Nevertheless, he is desirous of backing up this attitude with facts obtained at first hand.

and harassed with a view to an increase in the American tariff on these commodities. Thus the Senator would have an immediate opportunity to observe the Tariff Commission at work. Before his departure, Robinson suggested that he would devote some time to increasing his background of information regarding the United States policies in Central and South America. He has been among the most outspoken critics of the Coolidge-Kellogg policies and at the last session introduced a resolution calling upon the President to end the Mexican controversy by submitting the question to arbitration. Chocolate or coffee malted milk with egg makes a meal, it is really very fine and has a great deal of nourishment in it. Quinn's.—adv.

two men who had been inspecting the grille of the front windows. "How about that ironwork, Sittin?" "No chance, Sergeant," was the answer. "Strong as a jail—both of 'em. Nobody never got in through those windows." "Very good," Heath told him. "Now you two fellows chase along with Burke." When they had gone the dapper man in the blue serge suit and derby, whose sphere of activity had seemed to be the fireplace, laid two cigaret butts on the table. "I found these under the gas-lights, Sergeant," he explained unenthusiastically. "Not much; but there's nothing else laying around." "All right, Emery," Heath gave the butts a disgruntled look. "You needn't wait, either. I'll see you at the office later." Hagedorn came ponderously forward. "I guess I'll be getting along, too," he rumbled. "But I'm going to keep this bullet a while. It's got some peculiar rifling marks on it. You don't want it specially, do you, Sergeant?" Heath smiled tolerantly. "What'll I do with it, Captain? You keep it. But don't you dare lose it." "I won't lose it," Hagedorn assured him, with stolid seriousness, "without so much as a glance at either the district attorney or the chief inspector, he waddled from the room with a slightly rolling movement which suggested that of some huge amphibious mammal.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
When Alvin Benson is murdered, Markham, remembering that his friend Vance is keenly interested in criminology, drops in on the latter on his way to Benson's house. Together they go to the scene of the crime. Benson has been shot while reading in a chair.
NOW BEGIN THE STORY
CHAPTER III
(Friday, June 2, 9:30 a. m.)
THE district attorney and Heath walked up to the body, and stood regarding it. "You see," Heath explained; "he was shot directly from the front. A pretty powerful shot, too; for the bullet passed through the head and struck the woodwork over there by the window." He pointed to a place on the wainscot a short distance from the floor near the drapery of the window nearest the hallway. "We found the expelled shell, and Captain Hagedorn's got the bullet." He turned to the fire-arms expert. "How about it, Captain? Anything special?" Hagedorn raised his head slowly, and gave Heath a myopic frown. Then after a few awkward movements he answered with unburied precision: "A 45 army bullet—Cott automatic." "Any idea how close to Benson the gun was held?" asked Markham. "Yes, sir, I have," Hagedorn replied, in his ponderous monotone. "Between five and six feet—probably." Heath snorted. "Probably," he repeated to Markham with good-natured contempt. "You can bank on it if the captain says so. . . . You see, sir, nothing smaller than a 44 or 45 will stop a man, and these steel-capped army bullets go through a human skull like it was cheese. But in order to carry straight to the woodwork the gun had to be held pretty close; and as there aren't any powder marks on the face, it's a safe bet to take the captain's figures as to distance." At this point we heard the front door open and close, and Dr. Doremus, the chief medical examiner, accompanied by his assistant, bustled in. He shook hands with Markham and Inspector O'Brien, and gave Heath a friendly salutation. "Sorry I couldn't get here sooner," he apologized. He was a nervous man with a heavily seamed face and the manner of a real-estate salesman. "What have we got here?" he asked, in the same breath, making a wry face at the body in the chair. "You tell us, Doc," retorted Heath. Dr. Doremus approached the murdered man with a callous indifference indicative of a long process of hardening. He first inspected the face closely—he was, I imagine, looking for powder marks. Then he glanced at the bullet hole in the forehead and at the ragged wound in the back of the head. Next he moved the dead man's arm, bent the fingers, and pushed the head a little to the side. Having satisfied himself as to the state of rigor mortis, he turned to Heath. "Can we get him on the settee there?" "Heath looked at Markham inquiringly. "All through, sir?" Markham nodded, and Heath beckoned to the two men at the front windows and ordered the body placed on the davenport. It retained its sitting posture, due to the hardening of the muscles after death, until the doctor and his assistant straightened out the limbs. The body was then undressed, and Dr. Doremus examined it carefully for their wounds. He paid particular attention to the arms, and he opened both hands wide and scrutinized the palms. At length he straightened up, and wiped his hands on a large colored silk handkerchief. "Shot through the left frontal," he announced. "Direct angle of fire. Bullet passed completely through the skull. Exit wound in the left occipital region—base of skull—you found the bullet, didn't you? He was awake when shot, and death was immediate—probably never knew what hit him. . . . He's been dead about—well, I should judge, eight hours; maybe longer." "How about twelve-thirty for the exact time?" asked Heath. The doctor looked at his watch. "Fits O. K. . . . Anything else?" No one answered, and after a slight pause the chief inspector spoke. "We'd like a post-mortem report today, doctor." "That'll be all right," Dr. Doremus answered, snapping shut his medical case and handing it to his assistant. "But get the body to the mortuary as soon as you can." After a brief hand-shaking ceremony, he went out hurriedly. Heath turned to the detective who had been standing by the table when we entered. "Burke, you 'phone headquarters to call for the body—and tell 'em to get a move on. Then go back to the office and wait for me." Burke saluted and disappeared. Heath then addressed one of the

As Vance was thanking Hagedorn for his information Inspector O'Brien entered the room. "Learning fast," he asked, smiling patronizingly at Vance. Then, without waiting for a reply: "Come along, Captain; I'll drive you down town." Markham heard him. "Have you got room for Dinwiddie, too, Inspector?" "Plenty, Mr. Markham." The three of them went out. Vance and I were now left alone in the room with Heath and the district attorney, and as it by common impulse, we all settled our selves in chairs. Vance taking one near the dining-room door directly facing the chair in which Benson had been murdered. I had been keenly interested in Vance's manner and actions from the moment of his arrival at the scene. When he had first entered the room he had adjusted his monocle carefully—an act which, despite his air of passivity, I recognized as an indication of interest. When his mind was alert and he wished to take an external impression quickly, he invariably brought out his monocle. He could see adequately enough without it, and his use of it, I had observed, was largely the result of an intellectual dictate. The added clarity of vision it gave him seemed subtly to affect his clarity of mind. Vance's eyes were slightly bifocal. His right eye was 1.2 astigmatic, whereas his left eye was practically normal. FIGHTERS AT LAST SHOW THEIR WARES premises and Dempsey watched him do it with a degree of academic interest. Williams and Krueger caught a great game, and Allen went down to posterity before the camera men. Allen was on the floor from a left hook and one-two punch, with the cameras grinding, and he still was there when Allen's opponent on the floor and the other on his feet by the grace of a divine tolerance or something.

His Legs Better
However, the workout showed one thing. It showed or perhaps it only seemed to do so, that Dempsey's legs are better, that he is a faster man than he was at Saratoga before the Sharkey fight. He was slower than a deferred payment then but Sharkey steadfastly refused to prove it.

I would say, off hand, that some of the snap has gone out of Dempsey's left hand and nearly all of it out of his right. But that was the case at Saratoga and he looked the part of a better fighter last night. So much for Dempsey.

As To Tunney
Tunney stepped six rounds at Saratoga on the shores of Lake Villa and he looked like a real champion most of the way. His average was about 80 per cent. Against Billy Vidabeck, who fought somewhat after the Dempsey manner, Tunney broke ground on occasions under the other's body attack. But, then, Tunney always was something of a ground-breaker, anyhow. They went two fast rounds with Tunney ahead.

Jackie Williams, another lightweight, tried to take the play away from the champs and had the merry villagers mouthing "oh" and "ah," and an occasional uncouth snicker as he scored with both hands to the head. Gene finally became somewhat displeased and crossed a right to the young man's chin whizzer and the young man began an involuntary Black Bottom. Another right had him absolutely punch bloated before Tunney forebore. Chuck Higgins also did the rounds of something or other and they called it a day or a tea hour or whatever it was.

BEAUTIFUL MUSIC
"BONITA" FEATURE
Cast Includes Beautiful Women—Premier In Hartford Monday.

"Bonita" has been selected by the Messrs. Schubert, in association with L. Lawrence Weber, for presentation at Parsons's Theater, Hartford for three days beginning next Monday, September 19, with a popular-price matinee Wednesday.

"Bonita" is a musical play of Goldoni West. Sigmund Romberg, composer of the score for "My Maryland," has again proved that he ranks first among musical play composers with the score for "Bonita." The book has been adapted by Edw. Locke and the lyrics are by Harry B. Smith. It could be more conducive to colorful romance than western prairies, cavalrymen and cowboys? And with a cast of the few things that must not be missed by Theatergoers. The cast includes Alice Fiskler, Berna Deane, Lora Sanderson, William Thorne, Charles Lawrence, John Barker, John Rutherford, Edward Douglas, Joseph Macaulay, Wilfred Lucas, Estelle Hunt, Jane Egbert, Stanley Jessup, Sam Summers, Carlos Mejia, Harold Kravitt and a male chorus of 60 voices.

ANOTHER HEARING ON TOBACCO FIGHT

Dissatisfied Members to Go On With Case Against Officers.

The 400 dissatisfied members of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco association who asked recently for a receivership for the organization, were given their choice yesterday in Superior Court by Judge Newell Jennings of having their petition dismissed or having the hearing continued. They chose the latter and will be heard further through their counsel next Wednesday.

To offset the charges made by the counsel of the dissatisfied members the association put forth in its defense a statement showing how it had functioned and the results it had obtained. Some of these items follow:

That the association has disposed of more than four million dollars worth of tobacco since its liquidation was asked for seven months ago.

That operating expenses have been reduced by one-third.

That the largest creditor, a Springfield bank, is against liquidation by a court receiver.

That the association expects to close a deal within a few days for the disposal of 670,000 pounds of broadleaf tobacco of the 1923 crop at 16 cents a pound.

That the poor quality of the 1924 crop of tobacco, rather than any mismanagement, is responsible for the difficulties of the association, because that crop cannot be moved rapidly.

The dissatisfied members were represented, as formerly by John J. Burke and Arthur L. Shipman. The defense was represented by Luchas Robinson and Francis W. Coie.

First started in the judge's chambers, the hearing was transferred to the court rooms. More than 150 members of the association, as well as most of the officers, were present at court.

Joseph W. Alson, president of the association, testified that the failure to liquidate the affairs of the body more quickly could be blamed on the 1924 crop, which he says was not as good as it might have been. Furthermore, the cigar manufacturers had enough tobacco after 1923 to last them two years and that with the bad 1924 crop, the tobacco moved out of the association's warehouses very slowly.

He said that manufacturers have done what they do in some cases, shipped the 1924 crop, having enough supplies on hand.

Mr. Shipman scored the officers of the association and said that he would not consent to having the hearing summarily disposed of. When given the choice by Judge Jennings, counsel said that they wanted another hearing, so next Wednesday was set for it.

Critics Don't Bother Her

Vera Reynolds

By DAN THOMAS
Hollywood. Critics don't bother Vera Reynolds. The tiny star eats little, acts a lot and sticks right there at the top.

All this despite numerous adverse criticisms, which goes to prove that critics don't always express public opinion.

Vera's last few pictures have been comedy dramas. But now she has undertaken the serious task of starring in a fight picture although she doesn't do any fighting in the picture. In fact, Vera might well be compared to Lya de Putti—both are like a couple of kids when you catch them around their homes.

It's not at all unusual to find diminutive Miss Reynolds hanging clothes on the wash line, cleaning house and washing dishes.

Miss Reynolds would be a good person on which to hang the old gag, "gate man fails to recognize star," because when she dashes into the studio in her gingham rompers she really does look like a little girl who has strayed too far from home.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL MARRIED IN MAINE

Details reached The Herald today of the recent wedding of Miss Maude Evelyn Berry, formerly of Manchester, and Vernon Harris Pierce of Fairhaven, Mass.

The ceremony was performed at Ellsworth, Maine, birthplace of the bride, the bridal party and guests assembling near the shores of Branch pond, where the family summer home is located. The officiating clergyman was Rev. H. V. Conley a long-time friend of the family, and the double ring service was used. Miss Hazel Berry, sister of the bride was maid of honor, Miss Helen Robbins of Brockton, Mass., was bridesmaid and Miss Zirka Harjeanne of New York was ring-bearer. Asahel Drake of Stoughton, Mass., a close friend of the bridegroom was best man.

The bride who was given in marriage by her uncle, William Wentworth, was gowned in white crepe de chine. She wore a veil which fell from a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

The reception which followed the ceremony was attended by more than fifty guests. The caterer was from Bangor, Maine. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce are now beginning a tour of the British Isles, France and Switzerland. After November 1 they will be at home to their friends at 197 Park avenue, Bridgewater, Mass.

The bride was graduated from the local high school and from Bridgewater Normal training school. She has been a teacher in the Brockton high school.

The bridegroom is connected with the Carter Rice company of Boston, large dealers in paper.

MAY HOP FROM HAWAII

Tokio, Sept. 16.—Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock, who yesterday announced the abandonment of their contemplated flight across the Pacific in their monoplane Pride of Detroit, are considering the possibility of a flight from Honolulu to San Francisco, but have not fully decided to make the attempt.

Permission was granted the airmen today to fly from Kasumigaura to Tsurumi, where they will prepare their airship for loading on the steamer Korea Maru, which is scheduled to sail from Yokohama tomorrow for San Francisco.

SLAYER EXECUTED

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 16.—Raymond C. Davis, of Eddyville, Ky., formerly of Toledo, Ohio, went to his death in the electric chair at the Eddyville state prison here early today, paying the penalty for the slaying of William N. Dant, during a poker game holdup in Lexington, on Christmas Eve, 1925.

Appeals for clemency to Governor W. J. Fields were fruitless, and Davis, still contending that was a "victim of circumstances," went calmly to the chair at 12:28 o'clock. He was pronounced dead two minutes later.

LETTER GOLF

1-The idea of a letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW TO HEW, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2-You can change only one letter at a time.
3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4-The order of letters cannot be changed.
The solution is printed on another page.

THE TINYMITE

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The melon shortly filled them up, and then somebody made a cup out of the queer shaped little shell. "Twas cute as could be. 'Come on,' said Scouty, 'we can drink. This shell will hold a lot, I think.' And then the band all took their turns and drank out of the sea. While they were sitting on the beach they heard a loud and den-scrach. 'My, what was that?' wee Clowny snapped. 'It sounded close to here. I wish that we were on our kite, and sailing high and out of sight. Why did we take that meion? We are in for it, I fear.' But, just then, Clowny changed his mind, for what should all the Tinies find but just a funny little bird a-pecking through the trees. It screeched again and flapped a wing. Said Copsy, 'It's a pretty thing. And look how high its body is—'bout two feet from its knees.' The bird then hopped and flew from sight, and Copsy said, 'Let's get our kite and see if we can sail again. We've seen all there's to see.' The kite was found. They hopped on board and in the air they shortly soared. Their hunger now was satisfied and they were full of glee. Said Clowny, 'Gee, it's getting warm. I'll bet we're going to have a storm. The wind is blowing rather stiff. We should have stayed on shore.' 'Oh, don't be frightened. We're all right,' said happy Scouty Tinymite. 'We're safe and sound up in the air as long's it doesn't pour.' 'Twas lucky that no rain came down. The wind kept blowing all around, and soon the kite was speeding in an almost blinding pace. At first it scared the Tinymites, but they had had a lot of frights and soon they felt 'twould end all right so smiles spread on each face. (The Tinymites land on top of a famous tower in the next story).

"ORGAN-TONED" CHOIR
FINEST IN THE WORLD

Welsh Ladies Group to Sing Here Next Month For Kiwanis Club.

The Royal Welsh Ladies' choir, which comes to Manchester under the auspices of the Kiwanis club on October 19, is considered the finest choral organization in England and has won numerous prizes in competitions carried on through many years.

A local man who has heard the choir in England and Ireland, says that this organization is undoubtedly without a peer in the world. Every member is a soloist and none but the best voices of Wales are allowed membership. Incidentally, membership in the Royal choir is considered the highest honor which a Welsh female singer may attain.

They have been called the "organ-toned" choir because of the harmony and smoothness they produce in their singing. The choir was a favorite of the late Queen Alexandra and of the late Queen Victoria and it is because of appearances before these monarchs that they are allowed to use the title of "Royal."

The Welsh are noted through the ages for their musical ability and their love of choral singing. Children are brought up to be singers and in later life choral rehearsals are held even in the mines far under the surface of Wales.

This choir is being brought here by the Kiwanis club as a part of its campaign to raise money for the kiddies' camp at Hebron.

MEN'S CHORAL CLUB MAY WIDEN SCOPE

Consider Outside Engagements At First Meeting of the Year.

Officers and executive members of the Men's Choral club met last night to consider and outline plans for the coming season. The first rehearsal of the club has been set for Friday September 23 and numbers which have been selected will be begun at that time. The matter of taking part in outside engagements was discussed and plans to enlarge the scope of the club were taken under consideration. A wider field, it was pointed out at the meeting, would benefit the choral club and the public in general.

It's a safe bet that one box of Foss chocolates will win you by their quality and fine flavor. Try a box. Quinn's—adv.
