Several people in town have asked our advice regarding the Christmas cards being sent to them unnumbered by the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's Exchange, Boston, Mass.

These cards were sent out by this same organization last year, and undoubtedly many people in town returned the dollar asked for them. This is only another of the various schemes we have cited for working on the sympathy of the public.

Last year we made investigation of this particular venture and found that the proceeds of the sale of the social end of the organization would benefit the disabled veterans as one would be led to believe from the name of the organization, but simply finances the keeping up of the social end of the organization.

BOUND TO DIE BY ROPE, HOLDS FEET

Hilliardville Man Makes Determined Attempt at Suicide But Fails.

Said to have been dispondent over his financial condition, John G. Anderson, aged 38, made a futile attempt to commit suicide shortly before noon yesterday by hanging himself with a piece of rope in the cellar of his little home on Adams street in Buckland. The attempt was frustrated in the nick of time when he was found hanging from a cellar joist by his wife, who had been visiting her next door neighbor. Anderson was taken to the Memorial hospital, where last night his condition was regarded as very serious. Today however, he showed marked improvement. The most striking feature of the affair was the grim determination of Anderson to take his life in a cellar so shallow that he had to bend his legs under him in Jack-knife fashion to avoid standing on the ground. When he was found, unconscious and almost dead, his hands were locked in a "death grip" about his ankles. He was cut down by neighbors. Two local physicians arrived in a few minutes. Anderson was then removed to the hospital where, upon regaining consciousness, he became very violent. It was necessary to put him in a strait jacket. Last night, it was feared that his chances for recovery were as bright, but during the night effects of strangulation largely disappeared. Anderson had been working as a spinner at the E. E. Hilliard Company plant off and on for about six months. About four or five months ago, however, he was laid off with others. Since that time, he has been unable to find steady employment, but during the last three or four weeks has been working at the Hilliard plant again temporarily. It is understood that this is not the first time Anderson has become despondent and tried to take his life.

Motorman Fowler knew nothing of the presence of the automobile until the front door of the trolley car, broken down by the impact, fell on his head. He was not otherwise injured and nobody in the Ford was hurt. Patrolman Michael Fitzgerald investigated.

They will leave for Maine tomorrow morning to finish the trip originally planned. The witnesses in the case were two of his neighbors. Trymboulak has been before the local court three times, the two previous charges being for assault. His sanity was questioned and he was examined by two local physicians who found him to be all right mentally. He is a farmer and raises tobacco on his farm at Hillstown. Tony Prete of Birch street was given thirty days in jail for intoxication. It was Tony's sixth appearance before the local court in a period of four years. He was fined for a similar offence in August and at that time Judge Johnson warned him that he would deal more severely with him if he continued to come there. Prete gave notice of appeal to the Superior Court and Paul Correnti of 88 Birch street furnished a real estate bond of $200 for his appearance at the December term. Prete is employed by Ahern, the sidewalk contractor. In the case of Boleslaw Pressic of Columbus street, charged with frequenting a gaming house, the evidence was not sufficient to satisfy the judge and he suspended judgment. Stuart Valentine of Hemlock street paid a fine of $2 and costs for driving a car without a muffler. He was arrested by Sergeant John Crockett late last night on Main street. John Sobieski of Middle Turnpike West, who was brought in on a charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell, had his case continued until Saturday because the Hartford attorney engaged to defend him was unable to be present in court this morning. Sobieski's home was raided by Officers McGlinn and Wirtalia yesterday morning. They found a 30-gallon still in operation, also a gallon and a half of liquor and a large quantity of mash. A bond of $200 was furnished for his appearance Saturday.

She is now so much improved as to be able to get around with one crutch. The two young women managed to see enough of the Emerald Isle so that they could give the audience many interesting tales and descriptions. In this way the time was pleasantly passed and a buffet lunch consisting of tasty eatables brought by their friends was enjoyed.

it contemplates will become a reality—though we cannot help wondering what would happen to the tourist on such a route should he happen to get hungry or find himself out of gas.

Any such park-like arrangement as Mr. Butterick and Civic Commission hope for is bound to be a matter of the rather far future; it is already costing Connecticut about all she can stand to build utility roads.

It would appear as if there existed, under the billboard law passed by the last Legislature, plenty of authority for the suppression of one of the most objectionable scenic disfigurements now marring the vicinity of our main roads.

To permit the continuance of these signs is to put a premium on disregard, by motorists, of the whole system of safety signs, so painstakingly created by the Highway Department; because no motorist is going to long continue to heed highway signs when every second, one turns out to be an advertisement for a breakfast food or a dentifrice.

As we understand it the state police have the power to withhold permits for advertising signs as well as power to grant them. And while the law does not specifically prohibit the imitation of official highway signs—which it should—certainly the state police have a right to require from advertisers, before granting permits, that their signs shall not be, in shape or color, anything at all like the highway signs.

That the plan of putting Connecticut druggists, manufacturers, physicians and other legal handlers of alcohol under the control of the Boston dry authorities will operate to the advantage of real law enforcement is not for a moment to be believed.

Not too much of what goes on in the course of the war with liquor smugglers ever comes to the knowledge of the American public. An interesting development reaches the newspapers by way of the Bahama Islands concerning a proceeding which many of us would like to know more about.

The incident in question is the arrest and impending trial for piracy on the high seas of an American named Charles H. Nestle, who is accused of taking part in the seizure by an American Coast Guard vessel of a rum smuggler, the seizure having taken place in British waters. It appears that Nestle is not a member of the Coast Guard, though he was aboard the cutter which made the seizure.

Just who is this person Nestle, by just what authority he was acting as a sort of super-cargo on a Coast Guard ship, and just how he came to have the captured rum are matters which we shall learn a bit later—unless, of course, the prohibition authorities succeed in smothering all publicity in connection with the matter.

Admiral Thomas P. Magruder was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1889 and has been an officer of the United States navy ever since. He has served with great distinction as a sea-going sailor, putting in far less of his time in office details than many of his equals in rank.

Curtis D. Wilbur was graduated from the same Naval Academy one year earlier than Magruder. He resigned from the navy during the year of his graduation, having received his academy education at the expense of the nation. Two years later he was a lawyer and has been a lawyer ever since.

Admiral Magruder, in his sixtieth year and as the date of his retirement for age draws appreciably near, has just written and had published an article severely criticizing the administration of the navy.

Here are those endless rows of shops that deal in gifts for voyagers. Here go most of the stay-at-homes for presents to be shown upon the lucky dogs who can go traveling. I have always felt that this custom should be reversed: the fellow who is going away should generously distribute gifts to those who can't get away.

Here Manhattan luxury finds one of its loudest expressions. For $25 or, perhaps $100 one can purchase a quite acceptable basket of fruit, paying chiefly for the ornamentation of the basket since, in California at least, $100 worth of fruit was just about a car load.

Each outgoing ship carries a fortune in floral and fruit gifts. They arrive at the piers literally by the truck load. Staterooms of popular actresses are so banked with posies that, once the ship is under way, there is the alternative of throwing out the bouquets or sleeping in one of the saloons.

Along the waterfront parade those "last minute" peddlers. They carry a stock of flowers, candies and such for those who didn't have time to stop for purchases. True, their little bouquets look a bit insignificant beside the array of baskets and bundles—but bunch three or four of them and you have a sizeable assortment.

After all, presenting an ocean traveler with food is very much like carrying coals to New Castle. If he is capable of eating, the chances are he will be gorged as never before. There is absolutely nothing to do but eat, sleep and browse about and if the ocean allows, the amount of food that can be stowed away is amazing.

Its first breakfast and then, mid-morning, around comes the clam broth, the noon-time menu looks longer than the lineup for the Fourth of July parade, in mid-afternoon there is tea and then there is nothing to eat until dinner. Just where the traveler stows any food with which he may have been presented remains a mystery.

And, speaking of eating on shipboard, I recall a particularly stormy trip which sent most of the passengers to their staterooms. Some divine providence spared me that once and I went out on deck. Up from the engine room below suddenly thrust a head.

"Looks like everyone was sick," came the voice of the "hairy ape." "Yep," I responded.

"Well, I hopes they stay sick, for when they're sick we get their grub." Whereupon I vowed heretofore always to get sick as a gesture of charity in the direction of the engine room.

Contrary to popular belief, traffic on the Mississippi river has doubled within the past 40 years.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Washington, Sept. 26.—Mr. Simon Michelet, the indefatigable analyst of voting statistics, has found that the primary vote of the 40 states which have primaries is increasing about six times as fast as the general election vote.

From this, Mr. Michelet deduces that the primaries are coming more and more to take the place of the election. In 13 states the primary vote exceeds the general election vote, in 13 others it appears in the election and in six or eight of the other 14 primary states the issue is seldom in doubt after the primaries.

Mr. Michelet shows that the primary vote has increased from 8,456,159 in 1920 to 13,829,215 in 1926, when the general election vote for the 40 states was 17,167,374. This was a gain of 60 per cent. The gain from 1920 to 1924 was 50 per cent, while there were only 10 per cent more votes in the general election in the entire 40 states.

In this study, Mr. Michelet has dealt only with state-wide primaries for nomination of state officials, and U. S. senators and congressmen. Just such primaries, of course, as produced the lamentable Vane and Smith scandals in Pennsylvania and Illinois and led such staunch friends of the people as Secretary Mellon, Senator Dave Reed and Vice President Dawes to suggest that primaries were very bad things for the public's morals.

As soon as the important facts of the Michelet analysis begin to sink in on politicians and others who are interested in such things, argument will begin as to what they mean and the pro-primary folks will use the figures to prove one thing and the anti-primary folks to prove another.

With admirable restraint, Mr. Michelet himself has kept propaganda out of his analysis, but as he is the founder and guiding spirit of the National Get-Out-the-Vote Club it seems likely that he deprecates the thought that many people are voting in the primaries and abstaining from the general election.

The significance of the figures, however, seems to attach to the fact that the primary system has given the voters themselves a chance to pick their candidates and has made it much more difficult for the professional politicians and machine bosses to hand-pick them.

Anyone can run in a primary and give the public a chance to reward him for his services; under the old system a candidate had to bolt the party—as did Roosevelt in 1912—in case he wasn't satisfactory to the big boys. Most of the presidential primary laws in effect today were adopted by various states in order to give Roosevelt a chance at the Republican nomination.

Figures aren't available as to which course is most often chosen, but here seems to lie a logical explanation of Mr. Michelet's figures as any, for one often hears the plaint that election candidates are as alloy as two peas and no choice is allowed the man who wants a different sort of candidate.

Old Master's

The Minstrel-Boy to the war has gone. In the ranks of death you'll find him; His father's sword he has girded on, And his wild harp slung behind him.

"Land of songs!" said the warrior-bard, "Though all the world betrays thee, One sword, at least, thy rights shall guard. One faithful harp shall praise thee!"

The Minstrel fell! But the foe-people's chain brought his proud soul under; The harp he loved ne'er spoke again.

For he tore its chords asunder, And said, "No chains shall sully thee. Thou soul of love and bravery! Thy sorrows were made for the pure and free, Thy shall never sound in slavery!"

—Thomas Moore: The Minstrel-Boy.

BRINGS MESSAGES OF INDIA MISSIONS

Dr. Potter Tells Big Audience Here of Work in Foreign Field.

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter's famous address on India delivered at the Second Congregational church last evening interested hundreds of the townspeople as well as many from nearby places. Rev. Frederick C. Allen, pastor of the church presided and introduced the speaker. Other local ministers on the platform who had a part in the program were Rev. Watson Woodruff of the Center Congregational church and Rev. Marvin S. Stocking, pastor of the North Methodist Episcopal church. The full church choir was assisted by additional singers, under the direction of the organist, Mrs. R. K. Anderson. The anthem rendered was "The Lord is My Light" by Parker, and there was congregational singing of several of the stirring mission hymns. Dr. Potter is better known to people of this section of the state as the pastor of the First Church of Christ, Hartford, where he has held 27 years. He is internationally known from his position at the head of the Congregational National Council and president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and as an author of religious works. His scholarly address was punctuated with sallies of wit and anecdotes of his three months' tour of India during the winter of 1925-1926, the most comfortable time of the year for a native of New England to visit that country, which has been referred to as a land of "majesty, misery and mystery." His population is 300 millions. Dr. Potter said he was glad Uncle Henry with his Ford had reached India long before he arrived for in that way the reputation sent out by the American board was able to see vastly more of the country than would have been possible otherwise. The deputations visited the mission centers of the board which have 125 missionaries and brought back assurance of the loyalty of the workers on the field, both to the board and the great cause for which it stands, and of the gratitude and devotion of the Christianized people of 300 millions. Dr. Potter spoke of the splendid work being accomplished there by the Methodist board and referred to Bishop Fisher of that body, by whom he was entertained in India, "I visit where at the present time more than 5,000 missionaries there, in the different denominations; 4,000 from this country and the other from European countries. The need is great for a larger number of able and devoted leaders, both ministers and laymen, even though the progress of devolution, the transfer of responsibility and authority from the hands of missionaries to the Indian Christian church gains steadily.

The indoor amateur boxing season in Hartford gets under way Thursday night when the Massachusetts club will meet the Hartford Velodrome, where it staged shows all summer to Foot Guard hall where the amateur shows are held each week. He predicts the greatest season the sport ever has had here. The feature bout on the opening card Thursday night will find Kelly of Waterbury, state middleweight champion, pitted against Eddie Provost of Holyoke. FILMO MOTION PICTURE CAMERA NOW SOLD HERE

Kemp's Music House Secures Agency For Bell and Howell Product.

It was learned today that Kemp's Music House, local music merchants, had secured the agency for the world famous Filmo Motion Picture Camera, for taking personal "movies." This particular camera is known the world over and is made by the Bell & Howell Co., who supply 95% of the professional cameras and equipment used in studios the world over. It is therefore of the highest quality, and its increasing popularity is due to the fine quality of work it produces. There are now over 35,000 users of Filmo Motion Picture Cameras throughout this country.

There have been many wonderful developments in the past few years, but nothing that surpasses the pleasure and benefit derived in the producing of personal motion pictures with Filmo. Heretofore, individuals have refrained from taking personal motion pictures for two good reasons. First, because the complicated impractical mechanism and lack of portability of the equipment necessary made the effort too great for the pleasure. Second, because of the expense involved in taking pictures using theater-standard film.

But now that, with Filmo and the newly standardized 16 mm safety film, motion pictures can be produced as easily and as economically as snap shots were formerly taken, this fascinating sport is fast becoming popularized. Personal film libraries are now being accumulated, containing a living, pulsing record of the family in action—of baby learning to crawl, to walk, of mother entertaining, of Daddy in his sports—of sports, trips, travels and many other activities.

No trip is now complete without a Filmo camera to make a permanent film record of the events that happen, and the things that are seen. Real pleasure and genuine benefit is in store for anyone with Filmo, the Automatic Motion Picture Camera to "get what you see." Kemp's Music House are ready to demonstrate this camera and explain in detail the working of same, and the libraries which may be bought or rented, containing educational pictures, comedies, travel, adventure, golf lessons, sports, and many other subjects.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory crepe. The material for the gown was sent from China by her cousin, Robert Smythe, consul at Tientsin. Her veil was of tulle caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of fashion roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Bernice Roberts of Springfield, Mass., who attended her as maid of honor, wore a dress of coral georgette and carried an arm bouquet of pink rosebuds and maiden hair fern. Miss Betty Burnham of Hartford, N. J., niece of the bride, who was flower girl, wore a frock of fresh colored georgette and carried a basket of flowers in pastel shades.

PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES ON THEATER ADMISSION

Two years mean a saving of 50 cents to some Manchester people. The saving was made in one instance last night at the State theater. But disagreements between the husband and wife sometimes spoil everything. A couple entered the theater, their little daughter being with them. The ticket collector asked the husband how old the baby was. He came back cheerfully with the information she was five years old. "Oh, no," the wife interposed hastily, "she is only three." The ticket collector grinned.

COVENTRY

Mrs. S. N. Loomis is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Mossman in Bridgeport for a few days. The Porter Library Association will hold its annual meeting and election of officers tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Haven. Friends will be interested to know that Gilbert H. Storrs returned home today. Mr. Storrs has lost the sight of one eye but was fortunate not to have gotten any infection which would have resulted in months of suffering.

Electric current is to be a sure thing in North Coventry before many months. The contracts have been signed and accepted and it is expected work will commence very soon. Edmund Labats of Maine, who has been at Autumn View farm, has gone home. Austin Blair has left the employ of Frederick Miller and returned to his home in Massachusetts.

Henry Mitchell, who is employed at the Miller Poultry Farm, has returned from his wife's vacation. All the farmers are hustling now to beat Jack Frost and are busy filling their silos. Miss Laura K. Kingsbury spent the week-end at home.

SKETCHES BY HENSHAW SYNOPSIS BY BRACHEN

This machine is called a linotype, the "machine that almost thinks." By pressing down the keys as we do at a typewriter, the man at the machine sets the words in metal lines the width of a newspaper column. This wonderful machine is the invention of Ottmar Mergenthaler, and has been much improved during the last several years. By NEA, through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1922-26.

The linotype's brass letters finally reach a slot in this wheel. Remember that the letters are cut into the brass. This picture shows how the hot lead is pressed against the letters to make a line of raised type.

This printer is shown assembling the lines after they are cast and placed in columns. A make-up man then places the story in a square page, ready for printing. The type always reads backwards, so that when the impression is placed on paper, the order will be reversed.

mur into your innocent ear that there are many other presumable motives for confessing.

"A confession may be the result of fear, or duress, or expediency, or mother-love, or chivalry, or what the psycho-analysts call the inferiority complex, or delusions, or a mistaken sense of duty, or a perverted egotism, or sheer vanity, or any other of a hundred causes. Confessions are the most treacherous and unreliable of all forms of evidence; and even the silly and unscientific law repudiates them in murder cases unless substantiated by other evidence."

"You are eloquent; you write me," said Markham. "But if the law threw out all confessions and looked at all material clues, as you appear to advise, then society might as well close down all its courts and scrap all its jails."

"A typical false conclusion of legal logic," Vance replied.

"But how would you convict the guilty, my dear?"

"There is an infallible method of determining human guilt and responsibility," Vance explained; "but as yet the police are as blissfully unaware of its possibilities as they are ignorant of its operations. The truth can be learned only by an analysis of the psychological factors of the crime, and an application of them to the individual."

"The only real clues are psychological—not material. Your truly profound art expert, for instance, does not judge and authenticate pictures by an inspection of the pigments, but by studying the creative personality revealed in the picture's conception and execution."

"He asks himself: Does this work of art embody the qualities of form and technique and mental attitude that made up the genius—namely, the personality—of Rubens, or Michelangelo, or Veronese, or Titian, or Tintoretto, or whoever may be the artist to whom the work has been tentatively credited."

"My mind is, I fear," Markham confessed, "still sufficiently primitive to be impressed by vulgar facts; and in the present instance—unfortunately for your most original and artistic analogy—I possess quite an array of such facts, all of which indicate that a certain young woman is the—shall we say?—creator of the criminal opus entitled 'The Murder of Alvin Benson.'"

Vance shrugged his shoulders almost imperceptibly.

"Would you mind telling me—in confidence, of course—what these facts are?"

"Certainly not," Markham answered. "First: the lady was in the house at the time the shot was fired."

Vance affected incredulity.

"Eh—my word! She was actually there? Most extraordinary!"

"The evidence of her presence is unassailable," pursued Markham. "As you know, the gloves she wore at dinner, and the hand-bag she carried with her, were both found on the mantel in Benson's living-room."

"Oh!" murmured Vance, with a faintly deprecating smile. "It was not the gloves, but the hand-bag, and bag which were present—a minute and unimportant distinction, no doubt, from the legal point of view. . . . Still," he added, "I deplore the inability of my layman's untutored mind to accept the two conditions as identical. My trousers are at the dry-cleaners; therefore, I am at the dry-cleaners, what?" (To Be Continued)

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Benson has been shot while reading in the room of a woman's clothes and handbag. A policeman reports having seen a big gray automobile outside Benson home at midnight. Markham traces the handbag to Miss St. Clair and tells Vance going to arrest her. Vance protests that she is innocent.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

"IT'S quite simple, y' know," Vance replied, with a quizzical twist of the lips. "You throw your eye on the murderer for the reason that the person who committed this particular crime was sufficiently shrewd and perceptive to see to it that no evidence which would even remotely indicate his guilt."

He had spoken with the easy assurance of one who enunciates an obvious fact—a fact which permits of no argument.

Markham gave a disdainful laugh. "No law-breaker," he asserted, "is shrewd enough to see all contingencies. Even the most trivial event has so many intimately related and serrated points of contact with other events which precede and follow, that it is a however long and carefully he may plan—leaves some loose end in his preparations, which in the end betrays him."

"A known fact?" Vance repeated. "No, my dear fellow—merely a conventional superstition, based on the childish idea of an impalpable, avenging Nemesis. I can see how this esthetic notion of the inevitability of divine punishment would appeal to the popular imagination, like fortune-telling and ouija boards, don't y' know; but—my word!—it desolates me to think that you, old chap, would give credence to such mystical moonshine."

"Don't let it spoil your entire day," said Markham acidly.

"It so happens—and I'm speaking ex cathedra," he proclaimed defiantly, "that I come pretty near having the goods on your 'unfortunate young lady.'"

Vance was unmoved.

"And yet, y' know," he observed drily, "no woman could possibly have done it."

I could see that Markham was furious. When he spoke he almost spluttered.

"A woman couldn't have done it, eh—no matter what the evidence?"

"Quite so," Vance rejoined placidly: "not if she herself swore to it and produced a tome of what you call the law term, rather pompously, incontrovertible evidence."

"Ah!" There was no mistaking the sarcasm of Markham's tone. "I am to understand then that you even regard confessions as valueless?"

"Yes, my dear Justinian," the other responded, with an air of composure. "I would have you understand precisely that. Indeed, they are worse than valueless—they're downright misleading. The fact that occasionally they may prove to be correct—like woman's preposterously overrated intuition—renders them just so much more unreliable."

Markham granted disdainfully.

"Why should any person confess something to his detriment unless he felt that the truth had been found out, or was likely to be found out?"

"For my word, Markham, you astound me! Permit me to mur-

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

GIRLS WHO WORK INDOORS FACE HEALTH PROBLEMS

BY DR. MORIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Of the thousands of girls employed in factories, offices and shops, few of them pay much attention to their health. Fortunately for them, many great business organizations are beginning to introduce inspection service and educational service that will be of great assistance in cutting down the amount of time lost by illness and in making these people happier.

The Industrial Hygiene Bulletin of the New York State Department of Labor has recently published a special bulletin of hints for working girls which emphasizes some of the important points. The rules for diet are simple:

Eat regularly, slowly; and chew your food thoroughly. Eat a varied diet, including plenty of fruit and vegetables, with meat only once a day. Drink two glasses of milk every day and very little tea or coffee. Do not eat many sweets. Avoid fried, greasy and highly spiced foods. If you are more than 10 pounds overweight, eat less of everything, especially fats, sugar and starch.

To Improve Weight

If you are more than 10 pounds underweight, eat more at each meal, get more rest, and learn to relax. If you feel worried or nervous, eat less than usual. Drink six or eight glasses of water a day. Drink a glass on rising in the morning. Drink water with your meals, but do not use it to wash down food insufficiently chewed. Cool water is better than ice water.

The advice relative to clothing seems to be useless, because women are notoriously governed more by the styles than by reasons of health in their choice of clothing. However, the bulletin emphasizes the inadvisability of dressing too warmly indoors, and the advisability of wrapping up when going outdoors.

Among some of the other suggestions are the following:

Keep the windows open in your home all the year around. The room temperature should be 68 F. in the daytime and 60 F. at night. Try to stay outdoors at least an hour and a half every day. Get outdoors at the lunch hour and walk and from work. Spend your day outdoors as often as possible.

Air and Recreation

Vary your recreation with outdoor exercise, such as skating, tennis, hiking, dancing in healthful, if not overdone. Do not go to the

Mrs. Brady Reads a Book

By Olive Roberts Barton

Katherine Brush writes a story called "Night Club," in a September magazine.

Mrs. Brady, the maid in the dressing room of a night club just west of Sixth Avenue, on her way to work at ten o'clock Post Meridian, buys a magazine of thrilling stories to read during the intermission of the evening's entertainment. That is, an intermission for her, when her patrons were occupied with a special act on the dance floor.

Mrs. Brady hid her magazine until that precious time would come.

In the meantime—

A beautiful dark girl in white velvet came in to put on more rouge and lip-stick. She was little. She sang over and over a bit of a poor air, no exercise, late hours. Go to a gymnasium or swimming pool if there is one in your neighborhood.

rouge and lip-stick. She was little. She sang over and over a bit of a poor air, no exercise, late hours. Go to a gymnasium or swimming pool if there is one in your neighborhood.

Just before she passed through the satin hung doorway to the cabaret, she dragged off her wedding ring, wrapped it in a lace handkerchief and tucked it down the bodice of her dress. She then opened the door and joined the man evidently referred to in her song.

Later Mrs. Brady listened to a tearful young matron, telling her bosom friend of her husband's infidelity. She had seen him kissing another girl that very evening. Still a little later when the wife had disappeared in same Number Three herself, only to be told by Number Two to lay off Number One's husband, as he belonged to her!

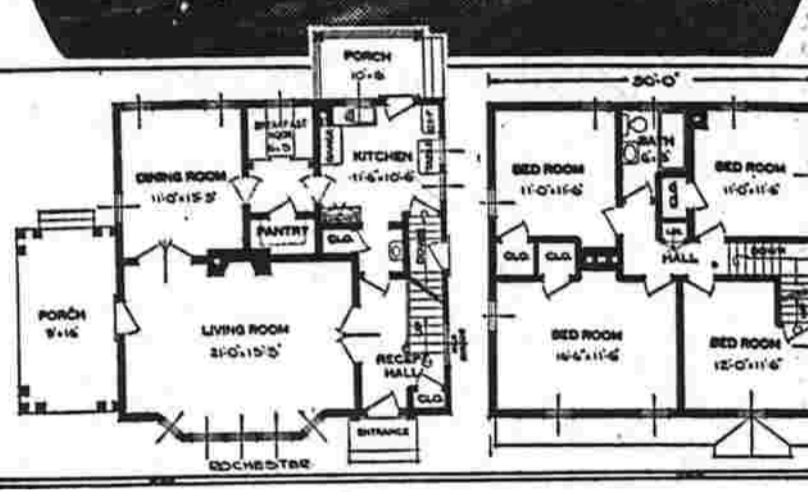

Another girl hurried in, obviously to take a drug. A bevy of girls clustered in to get one ready for an impromptu wedding. She had just met the man and he had asked her to marry him. The evening went on. Tragedy, comedy, crime, melodrama all around her, right under her nose. Yet how gloriously her eyes shined when she could slip out her book and read her thrilling stories! One of the cleverest stories I have ever read is "Night Club."

Are not we all Mrs. Bradys, seeking fiction's thrill for the real?

Every one who has her story. We think people dull and turn to movies and the stage for thrills. We think the world uninteresting and turn to art galleries or something to stir our senses. Every country lane and city street is the real thing of which the counterfeit is painted on canvas.

"The world is so full of a number of things!"—If we only had eyes to see them.

AN IDEAL HOME FOR CHILDREN

Taking its cue from "the city of homes" for which it was named, "The Rochester" is eminently the kind of a house that parents like for rearing their children.

In the first place, there is something inescapably homelike about a white house with green roof and blinds. Witness the president's home, the original "White House." In the second place, there is something friendly about a sunny bay window in the living room and a porch opening off this "room of rooms."

"The Rochester" has all these. In addition, it features a kitchen arrangement designed to keep home-making an interesting and not too tiring a task. There's a cozy breakfast nook looking out into a green back yard, a pantry large enough to roll out cookies and make Thanksgiving pies at the same time, a kitchen cabinet for utensils and supplies and a nice, big back porch for rest when the work's done or the pie is baking.

Pleasant, too, is the central hall between the bedrooms upstairs. And almost best of all is the big, airy, attic that can do triple duty—as store room, children's play room and mother's sewing and general work room. The cost of "The Rochester" runs from $6500 to $7250.

For further information about "The Rochester" write The Standard Homes Company, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT IN HOME FURNISHINGS

BY VALERIE VANCE

Taste in home furnishings consists in infinitesimally little things, so little that unless attention is called to them by a decorator those who have not studied them will miss them altogether.

Take for example, the arrangement of books. Placed in sets, they make too large a color area and are monotonous looking. If not used frequently, sets might better be broken up. It is not disorderly either to let books tilt against each other or today some flat. Thus they have a used look and the understanding indicate the touch of an artist in decoration as well as that of a book lover.

Ready to Light

Logs in place in the fireplace, in like manner give a ready-to-be-lighted, used look. Even in spring or summer they seem appropriate, for a person knows there are many days in these seasons when a hearth fire is welcome. Placing them thus, artistically, takes away that open, gaping look of the blackened fireplace.

The use of the very feminine, frilly French draped dressing table in a wife's bedroom, shared by her husband, is another instance. It is distinctly a piece for the young girl's room, the bachelor maid, or the woman enjoying the freedom of her own room. It is altogether too feminine, makes a man seem shut out and dominated by femininity.

Family Photos

Similarly, photographs of relatives and friends have no place in the living room where the stranger must sometimes enter. They belong in the more intimate bedrooms, or the library where only the family gathers. Relinquishing photographs to these rooms gives a more dignified look to the living room because of their absence, and correspondingly, a more intimate appearance to the rooms where they are kept.

Framing them in standard frames of the swinging type is also in good taste. When photographs are kept in the library there are now hand some large photograph boxes of gilt, decorated with the head of an Italian beauty, that make an interesting ornament on the library table.

Sparing Ornaments

If good taste is displayed, a liking for ornaments will be held in restraint. The room will not be cluttered with them so that a guest will feel uncomfortable for fear a false move will dash something breakable to the floor. A guest will not feel as if eating in a gift shop!

Showing just a few things, in the manner of Japanese good taste, will permit actually seeing the beauty of what is displayed. The Japanese allow not even a guest to spoil the picture of the room. Guests sit on the floor in a designated spot thought out as part of the composition and servants come into the room on their knees!

The WOMAN'S DAY

Just as we have about decided that nothing is new under the sun, the annual booklet is published which lists things for which humanity has a crying need. They include an automatic device to prevent pots and kettles boiling over; a skidless floor polish; a pocket size umbrella; a device which will automatically turn pages—needed by the street car reader, invalid and music student.

To this I would add a really workable can opener, a button thread which makes buttons stay on, non-breakable light bulbs, gum which, when it has been somebody's else's, will evaporate before it meets my shoes. Housekeepers should be the world's best inventors, for they daily see the need of things which the market does not afford.

Not Well-Trained

The mother of a girl in Kentucky shot her 35-year-old lover who persisted in coming to see her girl though warned by her father that he would be killed. The father himself had fired at the suitor before his wife fired the fatal shot. The story is not so strange because of the shooting as because there still live parents who attempt to regulate their daughter's love affairs. Most of us, observing daughters, thought that all of them had their parents better trained than that.

Cubs Threaten Thrice Three times during the game the Manchester team threatened to score but the Meriden outfit rallied and stopped all three gestures.

The Manchester team received the kickoff and the speedy Borowski carried the ball back 17 yards before being dropped.

However, Meriden rallied and forced the visitors to kick and Kerr placed the ball outside on the 11 yard line by a well-placed attempt.

Furious Second Half Both teams opened the third period by starting right off at a furious pace. The play seared up and down the field during the period.

Side Line Glances Frank Barnikow handled the game in excellent style and the Cubs' rosters had little chance to register a kick.

Tuesday evening the team will practice at the Charter Oak street grounds at 7:30 o'clock. At this time new plays for next week's games will be tried out.

It was announced that the Cubs will face the probability of a cut in the number of players this coming week.

THAT 7TH ROUND STARTS ARGUMENT

Rules Different in New York But Dempsey Has Himself To Blame.

By DAVIS J. WALSH INS Sports Editor

New York, Sept. 25.—Regardless of whether Referee Dave Barry counted too much or too little or just enough or not at all, the following fact was a stand out in the Dempsey-Tunney situation today.

Chicago's system merely is different from that of New York, or at least it seems to be. Anyhow, the former appears to give the break to the man on the floor; the latter to the man on his feet.

In other words, only ten seconds can elapse between the actual knockdown and the actual knock-out, with this lone exception; that, in case the man scoring the knock-down leaves the neutral corner before the completion of the count, it is stopped immediately.

Leo P. Flynn says the rules in New York and Chicago on knock-downs are almost identical. If that is true, then Tunney was counted out and Dempsey should be counted in.

But, as Flynn pointed out, the system did not run one hundred percent through the evening. When Tunney scored his knockdown in the eighth, Barry didn't hesitate a second.

In an early paragraph, the writer said that Dempsey "probably" would be champion today if the fight had been fought in New York.

Three Cornered Tie Looms As Possibility In The National League

New York, Sept. 25.—A three-cornered tie at the finish loomed today as a possibility in the hot National League race, as the rush down the stretch began.

The Cardinals and Pirates must tackle the Cubs and Reds. Chicago's system merely is different from that of New York, or at least it seems to be.

The Cardinals drubbed the Braves twice, 4 to 1 and 6 to 5, and advanced to second place. The Braves kayped Reinhart in the eighth, but Pete Alexander stopped them cold.

CELTICS CONQUER CHENEY BROTHERS

Defeat Millmen 3 to 2 In District League Game at Stadium—Robinson Stars.

The Celtics started off the Manchester District soccer league with a victory over Cheney Brothers at the Stadium by the score of 3 to 1.

The Celtics scored first when Hewitt scored a brilliant hitting ball, and when darkness halted the festivities at the end of the seventh only five hits had been made in all.

The British Americans lost 6-2 to the Hartford Swedes in Hartford.

Although defeated in both of its week-end games at New York and Brooklyn, the Hartford soccer club made a most impressive showing.

The game started fast, Brooklyn threatening to score soon after play started when Curtis crossed to Wilson whose attempt to head in the ball was frustrated by Blair.

Adair threw away a chance when he missed a easy goal after taking a pass from Eisenhoffer and beating the bats to the side of the goal mouth where he shot wide, the ball going well over the bar.

Lively Second Half Soon after the second half got away, Martyr booted a 30 yard drive on a by-play which caught Smith caught with upstretched hands jugged a moment, and then got out of danger although ridden hard.

The Hartford players stayed at the Imperial Hotel at Broadway and 32nd street. Some came by boat from Fall River. On the boat with them was the Boston University hand on its way to New York to attend a football game.

Cyrl Southworth, the popular trainer of the Hartford club, plans to remove his family here from New Bedford this week. He has two daughters, Betty and Virginia. Manager Jimmy Dewhurst will also remove his family here from New Bedford. They will live near the McKee street stadium.

The Hartford club's next game comes Sunday when the J. P. Coats of Pawtucket, R. I., appear here.

Said Cloway, "Say, what do you do with all that sewing when you're through? And just what are you making? Do you know this way for fun?" The little Belgian lassie sighed. "Of course, I don't," she then replied. "I make these little handkerchiefs and sell them when they're done." "Well, say, that's fine," we Coppy cried. "That's something we have never tried. This made the other Tynies laugh. Then Scouty broke right in. "Why sewing is for girls, not us. I'll bet we'd make an awful fuss. Why, if I tried to sew I wouldn't know where to begin." And then the little girl stood up and said, "This time for me to up. I'd like to have you join me if you think that you can stay." That's the kind of you," said one. BUICK, GOING UP, HITS DESCENDING FORD'S REAR

An unusual accident occurred at the top of the Bolton Hill this morning. A Buick going up the hill hit in the rear end a Ford that was coming down the hill.

The explanation seems to be that the Ford, in an effort to avoid hitting a bread truck at the top of the hill, skidded when the driver applied his brakes, and turned completely around, its rear end facing down the hill.

Both cars were slightly damaged but the occupants were unhurt.

CHENEY DEFENDS TOWN PLANNING

Challenges Selectmen to State Good Reason For Charter Revision.

Editor, The Herald:
The Board of Selectmen of Manchester, as quoted in The Manchester Herald of September 20, say that they are opposed to Town Planning but do not give reasons which seem sufficient and satisfactory for their opposition.

The Town Plan Commission will not add to the expenses of the town, because, first, it will not be necessary to have duplicate plans. Duplicate plans would be entirely superfluous and unnecessary; second, the chairman of the Board of Selectmen and the Town Engineer must serve ex officio on the Commission; third, the General Statutes provide that the Town Plan Commission shall serve without pay and that only necessary expenses shall be provided.

With these provisions I cannot comprehend how or why there should be any additional expenses to the town involved in a Town Planning Commission. I would also like to point out and remind the Board of Selectmen that in their meeting held on February 23, 1927 they voted "That the Board of Selectmen favors a Town Plan Commission for the town of Manchester, but recommend that a Charter Revision Committee be appointed at a future town meeting to consider the advisability of revising the Charter of the town of Manchester, which committee should at that time take into consideration planning, zoning and any other changes which seem advisable."

After I had been advised by the clerk of the Board of Selectmen of the above vote, they were good enough and courteous enough to grant me a hearing and during the conversation I tried to draw out from them their reasons for recommending a Charter Revision Committee. They were unable to obtain from them any sufficient reason for appointing such a commission. They cited the fact that if a Town Plan Commission should be raised, it should also include the powers of zoning, but the General Assembly has passed a statute providing that any town can raise a zoning commission at any time they desire by vote of a Town meeting, and it will be absolutely unnecessary to introduce a special charter revision in order to obtain zoning.

They also pointed out that our present charters had been revised so often and were on the books in so many different places that it was hard for them to find exactly what the provisions of the present charter were. They also specified that they thought some of our present by-laws should be in the charter.

My answer to this is that it is entirely within the province of the Board of Selectmen, without even the vote of a town meeting, to have the present laws codified and to have information for the Board of Selectmen that this could be done for about $50.00 by a very competent lawyer. I also pointed out to the Board of Selectmen that if the by-laws of the town were sufficient, it gave the town much more flexibility in the handling of its business to have certain provisions in the form of by-laws rather than in the form of a state charter which could not be changed without special act of the Legislature.

I most respectfully challenge any member of the Board of Selectmen to point out to the public in the columns of The Manchester Herald, any just and sufficient reason for altering our charter at this time.
