DEMOCRATS WORRY OVER PARTY UNITY

Fear That McAdoo and Smith at Same Banquet Would Spell Trouble; Leaders to Meet January.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The Democratic national committee which has been hibernating since the great catastrophe in Madison Square Garden, will meet in Washington on January 12th to select the 1928 convention city.

Coinciding with this gathering a movement is now afoot to revive the ancient custom of holding a Jackson Day dinner. The capital will be full of Democrats, in and out of Congress, and those presidential aspirants not living here could be invited, according to those who are favorable to the project.

The principal question being debated in Democratic circles is: "Is it safe?"

Trouble Maker

Jackson Day dinners in the past have been prolific of trouble. The "Feast of Oratory and Flow of Soul" that traditionally goes with a Jacksonian banquet has usually trod heavily on somebody's toes and defeated the primary purpose of the gathering, which is party harmony.

Woodrow Wilson once gave his friends nervous prostration by the manner in which he dealt with the late William Jennings Bryan at a Jackson banquet speech. The memory of it still lingers. Incidentally, Mr. Bryan returned the compliment a few years later during Mr. Wilson's presidency. The memory of that still lingers in Democratic minds, too.

"Safety First"

Consequently, the party stalwarts in Congress are approaching the subject of a pre-convention Jackson dinner with considerable trepidation. They would like to see the dinner held provided some assurance could be had beforehand that it would not result in more ruffled feelings than already exist in the party.

It has been tentatively proposed that all the Democratic governors of states, some 22, be invited to the dinner, which, of course, would be attended by the national committeemen and the party leaders in Congress. William G. McAdoo, now living in the capital and pursuing a lucrative law practice, naturally would be invited.

The mere presence of Governor Al Smith and Mr. McAdoo at the same banquet table is worrisome to the promoters. It is the question of the speeches. It would hardly be appropriate, it is pointed out, for any Democratic banquet to be held having Governor Smith as a guest without calling upon him to "make a few remarks." The governor is the outstanding candidate for the presidential nomination next year, and probably the most talked of individual Democrat at the present moment in the country.

Face Dilemma

But if Gov. Smith were accorded a place on the program, would not a place also have to be given Mr. McAdoo? He has been a prominent candidate at the last two conventions. The friends of the ex-secretary of the treasury say yes, and if they both spoke, what would happen? That is the dilemma that is now puzzling those who are striving to promote the banquet as a means of restoring the appearance of party solidarity.

One proposal has been put forward that is regarded favorably by the promoters. This would have but

MISS ROGERS SAILS ON 2ND HONEYMOON

With 40 Trunks Mr. and Mrs. Ramos Start For South America Today.

New York, Nov. 10.—With their forty trunks stored in the hold of the steamer Santa Elisa, Arturo Feralto Ramos and his bride, the former Millicent Rogers, helms to $40,000,000, were scheduled to sail at noon today for South America on their honeymoon.

So tiny was their stateroom on the Santa Elisa that only one trunk could be squeezed into the cramped quarters in addition to several pieces of hand luggage. Their "next door neighbor" on the voyage will be Miles Polinder, United States ambassador to Peru, and his wife.

The honeymooners will embark at Chile and go thence, after five days of travel by rail, to the home of Ramos' parents, who will see their wealthy daughter-in-law for the first time.

The couple spent last night at the apartment of the bride's mother at the Savoy-Plaza after motoring from Southampton, where they were married Monday.

Orphaned—And Now Homeless

Seventy-six little orphans lost their home and three of them their lives when fire destroyed the Roman Catholic Villa O'Connor at Peapack-Gladstone, N. J. Five of them are seen viewing the ruins before, above a group of survivors, who were led to safety by the nuns.

Big Shoes On Sailor Hid $100,000 In Gems

New York, Nov. 10.—The old burlesque "crack" about "Canal Barge" feet, today had landed six men in jail, resulted in the seizure of $100,000 in smuggled gems and had paved the way to a federal investigation that may result in a dozen or more arrests of international importance.

When Florent Lamot, undersized electrician on the steamer Lapland slipped his two huge shoes down on the dock here and started up town, customs officials were aroused by the abnormal size of his feet. Investigation disclosed shoes many sizes too big for comfortable wear but ample for storing a large cargo of smuggled diamonds.

Five Others Held

In a general round-up following Lamot's arrest, five others were taken into custody and all held under $25,000 bonds.

JOBLESS IN WALES START FOR LONDON

Little "Coxey's Army" on 141 Mile Tramp to Present Their Petitions.

London, Nov. 10.—In bitter cold weather a little "Coxey's Army" of 260 Welsh coal miners today is trudging over frozen roads on the way to London to present a petition for the government for relief of the destitute families of miners in the Wales coal fields.

The expedition, which was arranged by A. J. ("Emperor") Cook, secretary of the British Federation of Miners, started from Newport, Monmouthshire, yesterday on the 141 mile tramp to London.

Although a spectacular performance, it is generally believed that the "invasion" will bring no relief. It is doubtful whether the metropolitan police will allow the marchers to enter Downing street even if they reach walking to London.

Plan of Marchers.

Cook said that the marchers wanted to bring the attention of the government to the general destitution among the families of Welsh coal miners, which was caused, he said, by the closing of many collieries and resulting unemployment.

"We believe this is the most effective way to call attention to the situation," said Cook. "We will demand adequate poor relief and a pension for miners when they reach the age of sixty."

Trucks laden with food and other supplies are meeting the marchers at certain points.

Hostile critics of the march declare that Cook organized it for his own ends and that it can do no good. The Trades Union Congress officially disowned the project, and the local bodies of the Trade Union Councils along the way will refuse to give any aid.

HUNT IN FORESTS FOR MRS. FORBUSH

Clergyman Firmly Believes His Missing Wife Is Hiding In New Hampshire.

Claremont, N. H., Nov. 10.—Just as deer are stalked in the woods, searching parties today sought a beautiful blonde young woman, bobbed-haired, wife of a clergyman, and mother of four children.

It was the most unusual hunt in the history of New England forests was this hunt for Mrs. Anne Ram Forbush, of Canandaigua, New York, who vanished from a Washington theatre in October.

With the cunning of woodland folk, Mrs. Forbush has outwitted authorities for three weeks in all states between here and Washington.

Today, if she lives, she must be staging a last ditch battle with the elements. Floods have raged in the vicinity where she was seen, snow flurries followed. Today it was biting cold.

Husband Hopeful.

GOOD FUTURE FOR WORKERS IN AMERICA

Wages High, Living Costs Reasonable, Luxuries Common In U. S. Nine Years After World War.

New York, Nov. 10.—Nine years after the end of the World War, the people of the United States are enjoying a higher standard of living than ever before.

Wages are high. Living costs are within reason. The future seems bright.

These are deductions from statements made exclusively to International News Service today by Magnus W. Alexander, president of the National Industrial Conference board when asked to discuss conditions today as compared with Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, and as compared with 1914. This board employs an army of statisticians to check up on the cost of living, the trend of wages and other conditions.

More In Schools

The statement "The standard of living in America today is very high," said Alexander. "Whereas in 1918 some 5,600,000 motor cars were registered, there were nearly 20,000,000 registered passenger cars in 1926, our latest figures."

Luxuries have become common. More costly materials are being used in clothing. Cosmetics, tobacco and the like are being used in ever increasing quantities per capita of population.

Another Significant Evidence of improved standards of living, he said, is the ever greater number of the population from year to year to be found in schools and higher institutions of learning.

Average weekly earnings in the manufacturing industries today are more than double what they were in July 1914, and nearly a fourth higher than on Armistice Day, 1918. Compared with 1914, the average weekly earnings of the factory employee have a third greater purchasing power. That is, the weekly pay envelope today will buy about a third more of the same things than at the outbreak of the war.

BULLETS FROM CHINESE HIT JAPANESE WARSHIP

Japs Threaten to Return Fire; Two Cities Taken by Nanking Troops.

Shanghai, Nov. 10.—Nanking naval, foot and cavalry forces today invaded the Province of Hupeh and after a heavy bombardment and battle, succeeded in taking and occupying the cities of Huangmei and Wuhueh.

During the bombardment the smokesack of the Japanese destroyer Urakaze, stationed in the Yangtze river, was hit. The commander of the destroyer threatened the Nanking squadron with retaliation.

As a result of their advance the Nanking troops were within 130 miles of the cities of Wuchang and Hankow, residents of which were uneasy due to attempts made by the invaders to bribe the subordinates of General Tanshengchi who is preparing a strong resistance, to meet the Nanking forces.

NEW YORK BANDITS
WORK THROUGH STATE

Hold Up Gas Stations in Hamden, Cheshire and Meriden; Chased by Police.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 10.—Four bandits worked through Hamden, Cheshire and Meriden, last night, were pursued three miles by New Britain police, and escaped. The bandits took a tankful of gasoline in Cheshire, and they secured British men on a Meriden highway. A lone bandit tried to hold up a grocery store at 138 Putnam street here, this morning. He was assailed by the storekeeper and fled, losing his revolver and hat, and failing to get any loot. Police expect an attempt, and do not connect the four highwaymen with the lone bandit.

The four bandits worked in a car with New York markers. They have been checked closely and local police expect to capture them, according to a letter expressed today.

Raymond Helms, son of a Cheshire storekeeper, repelled the four bandits with a stilling wrench when they tried to hold him up. They tried to shoot him but their one revolver jammed. The men next held up Joseph Perry and Joseph Markolin, both of New Britain, near Southampton, and took $50. Before these events the same crowd forced a gas station in Hamden and filled their car's tank.

SITUATION IN VERMONT STILL CRITICAL—WEEKS

Reporter Reaches Bolton And Describes The Scenes

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 10.—Men, women and children standing in a long line on streets reading papers days old by the aid of lanterns and flashlights.

Bonfires burning on the snow-covered hillsides and huddled around them refugees, wondering the day of the week and when relief will come.

These were among the pathetic sights observed by an International News Service reporter in a hazardous tour last night of the flood-stricken region of Waterbury and Bolton.

Residents, upon learning that the reporter would try and return here, wrote out telegrams to anxious relatives in other states. These were pencilled on cardboard, voting ballots or any scrap of paper found handy.

Only those having passes were allowed to enter the Waterbury-Bolton area, probably the hardest hit in Vermont. Armed guards were stationed at intervals.

A man at Richmond was one of the luckiest found in the flood district. With a rowboat he was conveying hundreds of persons over the swollen river at fifty cents a fare. He had been on duty nearly 24 hours a day. The boat was not even his. He found it hanging in a tree near his home, cast up by the flood.

Twenty-eight persons were drowned in Bolton. One whole family in a lighted home went to their death, the father shouting "good-bye" to his neighbor as his home drifted by the other in the flood.

ANOTHER SINCLAIR OFFICIAL ACCUSED

Sheldon Clark Included With Oil Magnate and Day In Federal Petition.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Another Sinclair official, Sheldon Clark, was formally charged by the government today with conspiracy to tamper with the jury in the Teapot Dome conspiracy trial.

Harry F. Sinclair, the millionaire oil magnate, who was on trial with ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, and H. Mason Day, vice president in the Sinclair Exploration Co., have already been named in the "tampering" accusation.

Clark's name was included in the petition this afternoon as soon as he emerged from the Federal Grand Jury room, where a federal panel is conducting an investigation into the affair. Clark followed the example set by Day and refused to testify on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

Without more ado Assistant District Attorney Burkinshaw caused his name to be entered into the existing complaint, which charges Sinclair, Day "and others" with seeking to influence the oil trial jury.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY SEEKING DIVORCE

Ex-Sec. of State and Famous Lawyer Makes Application In Paris.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Bainbridge Colby, secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet, has been authorized to demand a divorce by the Tribunal of Versailles it was learned today.

The Tribunal, in a decree dated October 29, admitted Colby's application and overrode the application made by Mrs. Colby before the Seine Tribunal. The decision favoring Colby came after an investigation by the court of Mrs. Colby's attitude towards a reconciliation.

Mrs. Colby filed an application for divorce before the Seine Tribunal in December, 1925. That court set April 22, 1926, as the date for a reconciliation hearing.

Did Not Appear.

Mrs. Colby, however, did not appear at the set hearing.

Colby then filed an application for divorce before the Versailles court stating that the attitude of his wife had not changed since the filing of her application.

Mrs. Colby was formerly Nathalie Sedgwick and married Colby at Stockbridge, Mass., on June 22, 1895.

BOATS RUN AGAIN

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 10.—The Connecticut river became a highway for commerce again this afternoon. The first vessel to appear from the south was the steamer Middletown, bound from New York to Hartford. The Middletown has been tied up at Saybrook since Sunday. Following the steamer came two tugs, the Comet and the E. O. Cham, each with a barge in tow.

Governor of Green Mountain State Says More Help Is Needed—Red Cross Gives $75,000 But That Covers All New England States Hit By Flood—Burden Too Great For Vermont to Bear Alone.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 10.—"Home folks" in flood-devastated Vermont today appealed to President Coolidge and the American Red Cross for every assistance possible.

Governor John E. Weeks of the Green Mountain state was reliably reported to have telegraphed to the White House thanking the president for the work of the Army and Red Cross but adding that the situation is still critical and more help is needed.

The message was sent following a gubernatorial radio plea last night from Station WEAF. New executive said that the "necessity of funds to take care of immediate needs becomes more urgent every day and all contributions I will gratefully and officially accept to be used by authorized agencies in ways that will be most effective for the alleviation of those distressed."

The Red Cross today took over the distribution of relief contributions and began the direction of reconstruction work throughout the state. The National Red Cross headquarters had just made its first appropriation of $75,000 for flood relief but this covered all the New England states. Voluntary gifts for flood relief to the Red Cross today totaled $27,000. J. L. Fleeger, vice chairman of the national organization, left Boston for western Massachusetts and Vermont.

ONE WATCHES OTHER'S BODY TAKEN AWAY AND THEN KILLS HIMSELF.

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 10.—Two men committed suicide today by shooting themselves in the Hillside cemetery here where their wives lay buried, according to police.

The body of Samuel Sabocher, 53, a retired farmer of Plainfield, was found 150 yards from the spot where his wife was buried three years ago.

Albert R. F. Randolph, of Easton, Pa., formerly of Plainfield, who was in the cemetery, looked on when Sabocher's body was carried away.

An hour later he was found dead at the foot of his wife's grave, with a bullet through his heart and a revolver clutched in his hand. His wife died about two years ago.

WORK THROUGH STATE

Andover, Kan.—Mr. and Mrs. William Cook had quite a fight with a large swarm of bumblebees which had taken possession of their chicken house. The bees were getting the better of it until Cook thought of the garden hose, which damped their ardor and cooled them down.

Rev. John A. Anderson.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden in 1875. His father was a school teacher and it was from him he received his early education. After completing his higher studies in Sweden he came to this country in March, 1902. He entered Chicago Theological seminary later and was graduated from that institution in 1909.

His first pastorate was in Beverly, Mass., where he also was ordained. From there he was called to West New York, N. J., where he served for nine years. In the fall of 1919 he received a call from Orange, Mass., and served as pastor there for four years. In 1924 he came to the Swedish Congregational church in this town, succeeding the Rev. A. L. Anderson, now retired and living in Worcester, Mass.

The church here has grown and prospered under Rev. Anderson's administration and his parishioners part with both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and their children with regret. Mrs. Anderson has been equally active with her husband in all affairs of the church. During their short time in Manchester a new parsonage has been built.

MRS. R. K. ANDERSON TO RETIRE AS ORGANIST

Has Served at Second Congregational Church for Thirty Years as Music Director.

Mrs. Robert K. Anderson, organist and music director at the Second Congregational church here, has notified the music committee of the church that she will terminate her work on January 1, 1928. No formal resignation has been sent to the committee, but Mrs. Anderson advised the committee to be on the lookout for a successor.
When Mrs. Anderson completes this year at the church she will have served in the capacity of organist there for 35 years. Mrs. Anderson has also taught the piano and organ and at various times substituted as music director at the South Manchester high school and other schools in Manchester.

In her office as music director at the north end church Mrs. Anderson has been responsible for several brilliant Sunday evening concerts at which many of the leading musicians and singers in this section have appeared. No successor has as yet been obtained, and as the news of Mrs. Anderson's decision to retire has reached members and friends of the church, much regret has been expressed.

LONDON NIGHT CLUBS NEED AMERICAN SNAP, LOSING THEIR THRILL

London.—Although their cocktails their wines and their beautiful girls are plentiful and their prices reasonable, London's night clubs are going to sleep. What apparently is needed is a little American snap and competition, for to quote a great many people's opinion of them, "they seem dead from the door-step up."
Once there was a thrill in the phrase, "Night's of London," but that is gradually dying out. It is difficult to trace the reason in the majority of cases. Old-timers blame it on the largeness of the present clubs and their unfriendly aloof atmosphere.

It was just after the war that the small, inexpensive, night club sprang into fame, the type which has been noted for its cheapness, cozy, decent cooking, moderately good orchestra, and most of all, its unstranded, friendly atmosphere. But, unlike other aftermaths of the war, this seems to be rapidly disappearing.

REAGROUP MUSICIANS AT FRANKLIN SCHOOL

The Franklin school is rapidly becoming the musical center of Manchester—at night. At least, down there they play on musical instruments, whether or not the result is music.
Last night two organizations were using the school for rehearsal in one of the rooms the Girl Scout bugle corps was re-organizing, while in the other Patrick pipe band was holding forth. Across the square in the Barnard school the Moose minstrels were practicing.

VANDERBILT IN RENO WRITINGS IS TOO TAME

Young Millionaire Gets Nine Stories Back From Publishers In East.

Reno, Nev.—What with its three-months divorce law and its reputation of being a "flip burg" Reno is having a difficult time of establishing itself as a town of conservative habits, conservative inhabitants and conservative climate.
Authors attempting to portray Reno as they see it, when they see it as does Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., get nothing but the elevated eyebrow from Eastern publishers, and orders to "make their stuff snappier."

Or so it is claimed.
Anyhow, Vanderbilt is nursing nine of those little blue slips which inspire a sinking feeling in authors whose epidermis has never reached the proper thickness for such a hazardous profession.

Articles Rejected
The nine articles written by Vanderbilt and rejected by publishers were based upon his impressions since he established his residence here nearly three months ago. In them, he says he likes Reno, he likes the people who live there and dwells upon the lovely climate. He also stresses the civic strivings of the town and the well-regulated lives of its residents, not the more spectacular events surrounding divorces and this sensational background.

For instance, who knows of the thriving art colony in Reno? A site has already been chosen for the purpose of building the first group of studios and a central art building. No less than thirty-eight artists are now in Reno, where they point out, subject matter and environment is not lacking.
And then with that charming naivete which is sometimes found in their ranks, they say: "And the colony, for various reasons, will increase as time passes."

But publishers, it is alleged, will have none of this.
Reno, to them, is still the wild frontier town, with its wild activities enhanced by those who wish to kick over the matrimonial traces.

Some of the publishers, it is claimed, even go so far as to question Vanderbilt's motives, advancing the opinion that he is trying to establish himself in the good will of Reno's citizens instead of portraying conditions as they actually exist.
What to do? asks Reno.

In a tug of war between a giant storage battery locomotive and one of the steam variety at Chicago, the former won easily despite the fact that it was 17,000 pounds lighter than the steam engine.

Affianced

Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt (above), "$7,000,000 widow" of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt, has admitted in Paris that she is to marry Prince Friedel Hohenlohe-Langenburg (below) of Wurtemberg, nephew of Queen Marie of Rumania. Their romance had its inception in the queen's visit to America last year. Mrs. Vanderbilt is the twin sister of Mrs. Thomas Morgan Converse.

MASS. WOMEN IN DRIVE TO STOP DEATH PENALTY

Professional and Social Leaders Join In Move For Abolition.

Boston—Massachusetts women are lining up solidly in one of the most determined drives against the death penalty ever staged.
One of the principal characters in the fight is Dr. E. Groesbeck Mitchell, a prominent Back Bay woman physician, who suggests setting apart some Sunday or weekday as "Anti-Death Penalty Day," and the donation of a $20 gold piece by some public-spirited person to the high school boy or girl who writes the best essay on abolition of capital punishment.

"We feel that a prize contest for high school pupils would stimulate more family interest in the abolition of the death penalty than would a contest for college students or more mature persons in that the children would be apt to discuss the subject with parents and elders in the household and seek advice," Dr. Mitchell said. "The interest would radiate."
Filed Petition
"An citizens signed an initiative petition and it was filed at the State House on September 19," she continued. "As we found that time was too limited to secure and check up the 20,000 signatures required to bring the petition before the Legislature, we withdrew our petition. It would have had no difficulty whatever in harvesting the 20,000 signatures. The chief obstacle would have been the checking."
"Therefore, the committee decided on a new course, and the Massachusetts Council for the Abolition of the Death Penalty was born. Our headquarters are at No. 4 Park street. The Council is not affiliated with any group in or out of the state. The plan is to get an expression of sentiment entirely within the Commonwealth, to keep it in state movement."

"The aim is immediate abolition of the death penalty and substitution of life imprisonment. Our first move is to issue petition and secure 100,000 signatures. A bill will be presented to the next session of the General Court, and there is every reason to believe that the desired result can be accomplished."
"We are making a special appeal to the clergy to help personally or to ask parishioners to be responsible for petitions, which must be returned to us by January 1. We need funds to carry on the work. We have started on nothing at all, other than a determination to do everything in our power to stamp out the death penalty."

Cleveland Sportsman Lost In The Maine Woods Since Last Friday.
Smyrna Mills, Me., Nov. 10.—Search in the dense wilderness and swamp north of this place for James Dill, Cleveland hunter and sportsman, who has been missing since last Friday continued today. A searching party formed here has been joined by 75 members of the Presque Isle Battery of the Maine National Guard Artillery.

Dill was a member of a hunting party of ten who came here making headquarters at the Frank McManus camp half way between Smyrna Mills and Marsden and four miles off the main highway. Dill left the camp Friday alone taking nothing but a hatchet and a few matches. His failure to return that evening started the search which has continued since.

Those familiar with the country here entertain the fear that he may have been drowned in Tracy brook or that he may have succumbed to the rigors of exposure in a severe storm which raged here his first night in the woods.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 10.—Funeral services for the two Chinese who paid their lives for the murder of a fellow countryman in Manchester last March, were held here this afternoon. Twelve automobile loads of Chinese connected with the On Leong Tong of which the dead Orientals were members, drove through the streets with small mirrors the size of a quarter of a dollar pinned to their breasts. A parade led by a band also marched to the headquarters of the Tong and from thence to the cemetery.
KING BEN MUST QUIT
Benton Harbor, Mich., Nov. 10.—"King" Benjamin Purnell, who has ruled the House of David with an iron hand for years, must abdicate, Judge Louis H. Feed decided in an opinion filed here today.
Purnell is guilty of betrayal of women and young girls of the colony through "use of the sacred aspirations of religion to gratify his lust," Judge Feed's decision reads.
For such conduct Purnell must relinquish title to the House of David and leave the colony, the judge decreed.

OUR FLOOD SITUATION NOT HELPED BY SKUNK

Adds to Misery by Causing a Cellar to be Flooded in the North End.

Charles B. Loomis of the Manchester Water company received a hurry call yesterday afternoon. A skunk had flooded the cellar of one of the new houses being erected by W. Harry England on Woodbridge street, the informant said.
It was true, he found out when he came to the place, for the cellar was flooded. He turned off the water at the street main and peace and the lingering odor of the animal reigned.

One of the plumbers employed by Jack Flavel had seen the animal in the basement of the house where he was working. Seeking to drive him out, he threw a stone, which missed the skunk and hit the shut-off valve, causing the water to run into the pipe.
There was no way of shutting the water off from the inside of the house and a call was sent in to the office of the company. The water was finally shut off from the street.
The skunk escaped.
"I didn't ask them men any questions," said Mr. Loomis. "They said they had thrown a rock at a skunk in the cellar, and although I didn't see the gentleman, I smelled him. I left there as soon as possible."

BOMB TERRORISTS CONTINUE BLASTING

School, Church and Railroad Station Are Damaged in Pittston, Pa.

Pittston, Penn., Nov. 10.—Bomb terrorists early today added to the series of outrages which have swept this section in recent weeks.
A new model school building and a church were damaged by a bomb, and the holiness of a policeman and the prompt action of a citizen prevented destruction of the station on the Laurel Line railroad here.

A bomb exploded on the steps at the main entrance of the new high school building. The doors were demolished and the interior of the vestibule wrecked.
The Methodist Episcopal church which adjoins the school building, was slightly damaged by the force of the explosion.

FEAR REACTION IN PUBLIC MIND AGAINST WOMEN

Political Leaders Watch Results of Probe Into Mrs. Knapp's Acts.

New York.—Women political leaders, who during the long campaign for equal votes and equal office-holding eligibility for women, fear a serious reaction in the public mind as regards women in politics as a result of the charges of financial irregularities made against Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former Secretary of State for New York, and first woman to be elected to that position. Charges that Mrs. Knapp mismanaged the expenditure of $1,200,000 which the state legislature put at her disposal two years ago for the purpose of conducting a state census taking, so that about $90,000 was squandered or spent irregularly, have been investigated by a special examining commission.
One of the strongest arguments put forward in support of giving the women the vote was that women would "clean up politics."

Public May Talk
Now women political leaders fear the public will take an "I told you so" attitude, because two of the only three women elected to high executive position in American politics have been accused of financial irregularities—and it was "graffiti" among men politicians against which the suffragette leaders cried out so loudly in their campaign for the ballot.
In addition to Mrs. Knapp, the American women elected to high executive office are, Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, more popularly known as "Ma" Ferguson, who was elected Governor of Texas three years ago for a two year term, and Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, elected Governor of Wyoming three years ago to fill the vacancy left by the death of her husband.

No breath of political scandal has ever touched Mrs. Ross, who still wields important influence in her party, but the administration of

LINDBERGH IS ORDERED TO SELFRIDGE FIELD

Washington, Nov. 10.—The War Department today ordered Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Missouri National Guard, on active duty at Selfridge Field, Mt. Clemens, Michigan, effective November ninth.
Col. Lindbergh will undergo a period of "practical training," according to the order.
He will be relieved in time to return to his home at St. Louis, December 31.

"Ma" Ferguson was early assailed with charges of "graffiti" and irregularities.
"Ma" Ferguson asked the voters of Texas to elect her to the Governorship to "vindicate the Ferguson name," after her husband, "Jim" Ferguson had been impeached from the gubernatorial office and forever barred by act of legislature from holding other public office, on charges of irregularities in connection with his office.

Faced Similar Charges
But within a few months after taking office, "Ma" was accused by leaders of her own state party, and by other high officials in the state government of irregularities similar to those for which her husband had been impeached. Subsequently "Ma" was defeated in her campaign for re-election by Dan Moody, Attorney General in her administration, who was foremost among her accusers.

Mrs. Knapp was accused of having "juggled" accounts in the census bureau, "padding" payrolls and otherwise diverting public funds for private uses. In probing these charges Randall J. Le Boeuf, Jr., was appointed Special Commissioner by Governor Alfred E. Smith to conduct a thorough investigation.
Women political leaders, however, fear that whether or not the charges are proven, the "women in politics" movement has received a severe blow as a result of their having been made public.

HURRIED CREMATION LEADS TO AN ARREST

Valet of Rich Man Has Body Cremated on Day Following His Death.
Chicago, Nov. 10.—The hurried cremation of the body of Paul J. Owens, 51, a day after his death on October 13, today led to the arrest of Arnold J. Leslie, 71, valet-companion of Owens.
Leslie was found occupying his dead master's estate.
According to authorities, the Owens body was cremated while not even a brother of Middleport, N. Y., was notified of the death.
Leslie told authorities that Owens had an aversion to family scenes and did not want any relatives to see him dead.
The valet also claims he was named sole heir of Owens' estate.
Authorities are trying to trace Kathleen Owens, a niece of the dead man, had been named beneficiary. She is a student at Syracuse University.

Sport News In Papers Decides People's Views

Cambridge, Eng., Nov. 10.—"Journalism alone will bring English sportsmanship to America."
"The British today play for the fun of playing; the Americans play to win."

Dr. H. R. De Silva, formerly of Harvard and McGill Universities, appointed by the American National Research Council to do psychological research work in England, told me this today.

"The newspaper dissimilarity of the two nations," he said, "is the thing most largely responsible for the different views of sport. The essential natures of the peoples of both countries are the same."

He compared sport at Yale, Harvard and Princeton with sport at Oxford and Cambridge "to illustrate the attitudes of the two nations." He emphasized the following tangible differences:

No paid coaches at Oxford or Cambridge in any sport; highly paid coaches in all Yale, Harvard and Princeton sports.

Substituting players forbidden in English games; substitution general in the American.

Sport for money in England; but few play in America.

Newspaper Accounts.

Then he pointed to newspaper accounts of sporting events and how they illustrated the different attitudes of the countries. The normal headline in England might read: "Rugby: Varsity match at Cambridge." In America it reads: "Tiger Trounces Rival."

Then Dr. De Silva spoke of the role newspapers played in actually bringing about desire to win.

"They do it by their articles preliminary to the game. By talking about who the winner will be and how each team is preparing to 'beat' the other. Arousing premature interest in contests is the big thing which promotes interest in winning."

"We see American journalism acting once a year in England—the time of the Oxford-Cambridge boat race."

"When newspapers don't write up sports events inciting the public, the players, and everybody else; the coaches incite their teams by making them look forward to certain definite contests."

"The most important thing here is that there are no coaches at all. Even in rowing before the big Oxford-Cambridge race there is no crew coach. In each university the president of the boat club confers with members of last year's boat club to pick the men for the varsity crew. Interested alumni instruct the boys on the river. But there is no coaching coach."

At Yale, Harvard and Princeton, I think, $5,000 each of the football coaches gets for his work during the fall season.

Effect of No Coaching.
"No coaching leads logically to no substitution during games. There's no one to say who the substitute will be. But the more important reason for no substitution is the objection here to allowing a fresh player to play against those weary with the game. Even if a man is 'knocked out' in a Rugby game a fresh player cannot fill his place."

"Substituting as our colleges do it professionalizes the game. It is good at one department of play are put in when they're needed and then taken out. It makes the game noticeably a contest between opposing colleges rather than between two groups of players."

"The most relative factor about sport at Oxford and Cambridge is the numbers that participate. The phrase—sport at Oxford—carries to an Englishman thoughts of masses of boys in the boats or on the playing fields during afternoon regularly enjoyed the games. At Cambridge out of 6,000 undergraduates 1,000 or more participate in rowing. At Harvard, which is not much smaller than Cambridge, the number approaches 150."

"The secret of this is that the British universities are made up of a great number of small colleges. A man at a college feels himself an integral part of the college. He feels it his duty to join in its games."

"At Harvard the unit is the university. The average man has no feeling about his duty as a Harvard man requiring him to play football for her. A man awfully good in football might have that feeling."

"At Oxford or Cambridge, though, a man feels that whether he's proficient or not, his little bit on the sport field will add that much to his college. Colleges of two hundred or so have four teams or more competing with other colleges in every sport."

Bruce Caldwell, star Yale half-back, who has been banned from further gridiron glory with the New Haven eleven under a technicality of eligibility rules. Because he played on the freshman eleven at Brown University before entering Yale he has been permanently benched.

YALE MAY ALLOW ITS ACE TO PLAY

Princeton Asks That Caldwell Be Put In Game—To Decide Matter Today.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 10.—Yale, today, is re-considering its hasty and totally unexpected action of Tuesday night in banishing Bruce Caldwell, its star ball toter, from the varsity football team as an ineligible. In the meantime, Caldwell has been ordered by Coach Tad Jones to turn out for practice today.

With Coach Roper of Princeton publicly declaring that Yale will be harder to beat "without Caldwell than with him" and with the Princeton committee voluntarily agreeing to let Caldwell play, this case has "probably" been "settled" in the Yale Athletic Committee was in session on the matter today.

May Rescind Action.
Caldwell was ruled off the team when it was disclosed he had played freshman football at another college before entering Yale, while there was no definition of the committee's action which probably will be decided late today. It was generally believed in student circles that the committee would rescind its action for the Princeton game Saturday.

John M. Gates, director of athletics at Yale, pointed out today that neither Caldwell himself, nor Yale, had knowingly violated the rule which exists between Harvard, Princeton and Yale—Caldwell not knowing of the rule and Yale having no record of his former play.

"It is a case," Director Gates said, "in which the spirit of the rule has not been violated, either by Caldwell or by Yale. Therefore, it is possible that a way may be seen to accede to Princeton's wishes."

Another Meeting Today.
The Yale committee, headed by Chairman Professor George H. Nettleton, went into action today to reconsider the peculiar action after the Princeton committee had decided in special session that "it would be deemed a pleasure at Princeton if Caldwell should be permitted to play."

The Princeton body pointed out that in view of the late date at which the facts became known, it would suggest an exception be made in Caldwell's case.

The absence from the city last night of Chairman Nettleton of the Yale committee prevented action before today on the question, although Caldwell announced last night that Coach Jones had instructed him to report for practice in uniform today.

In addition to the Princeton Athletic Commission's action messages were sent Yale by President John Grier Hibben of Princeton and the Student Council, requesting that Caldwell be allowed to play.

MORE THAN 100 WOMEN IN PHYSICAL TRAINING

Ninety in One Gymnastic Class At School Street Recreation Center.

There are now ninety members of the women's gymnastic class which meets every Monday night at the School Street Recreation Center, under the direction of Associate Director Miss Ruth M.

SAY IT AIN'T TRUE, SAY IT AIN'T TRUE

Mebbe he came from the North End, Mebbe not. Anyway they said he did. Of course, there are a lot of folks from the North End that never were south of Depot Square and subsequently never saw the inside of the School street Recreation Center.

He was wandering around the building yesterday for the first time and got downstairs. One of the janitors had opened the door to a big room and the North Ender gasped as he saw the water.
"Gosh," he said in hushed tones. "The flood hit you people awful hard didn't it? Your whole cellar is flooded."
He was gazing at the swimming pool.

Calhoun. This is believed to be the largest class of its kind ever formed at the Recreation Center. Miss Calhoun says an average of sixty members report each week. The women's gym class has been held from 7 o'clock until 7:45 on Monday nights but on the request of many of the members, Miss Calhoun has changed the class period to fifteen minutes later, or from 7:15 to 8 o'clock.

A new class has been started on Wednesday evenings from 8:15 until 8:45 for women interested in tactics and apparatus work. From 8:45 until 10 o'clock, games will be played. The first part of the season, volleyball will be in order and later basketball. There are forty persons enrolled in the class, which, allowing for whatever number are taking both courses, means that well over a hundred young women are pursuing physical education.

Apparently the Manchester Community Club is the only agency directing recreational work in a large way at the North End. Hence the necessity of North End residents backing it with co-operation and finances.

No better service can be rendered our neighborhood than to promote a live, energetic, progressive Community Club. Hundreds of other New England towns are now doing this very thing.

They are financing their community clubs year after year. They do it because they find that funds spent in the upbuilding of young manhood and womanhood means money well spent.

One day Murdock came out and saw several of the boys. He called one William Symonds and sent him to a shop nearby for a thimble.

All this time Murdock kept working on experiments with gas. The boys of Redruth used to crowd about his cottage, peering in at his workshop.

Murdock ran and found that the cries came from the village clergyman, who had taken the fiery, puffing little engine to be some monster.

Young Murdock proved a good workman for Boulton & Watt. He lived in a cottage at Redruth, in Cornwall, where he made a model steam locomotive.

England's William Amey Is Their "Sergeant York"

I raised my hand on parade and told that German crowd to put their hands up.

BY MILTON BRONNER

London, Nov. 10.—If you were introducing William Amey, former lance corporal in the Warwickshire Infantry, to an American, the best way to do it would be to say: "This man is the Sergeant York of England."

Sergeant York, you will recall, was selected as the greatest individual hero of the A. E. F. Similarly, William Amey could easily be picked for a corresponding rank among England's heroes. And tonight, Armistice Eve, is an excellent time to tell about him.

Hard Prize to Win
Amey, to begin with, holds one of the most highly-prized decorations in the world—the Victoria Cross. The V. C., granted only for deeds of the highest heroism, usually goes to a man after his death, for the simple reason that a deed that merits the honor usually ends fatally for the doer. An officer has recommended the hero for the V. C., the colonel of the regiment, the brigadier general and various lieutenants and major generals have to approve the recommendation, and finally the king himself must pass on it.

But Amey got one—and is alive today to tell about it. Amey joined up in 1916, at the age of 35, from Leamington. His army career was without and unusual incidents until the closing fortnight of the war, when the 13th British army corps was engaged in the last "big push" in the vicinity of the St. Quentin canal, near the spot where Quentin Roosevelt lost his life.

At 5:30 on a chilly, foggy morning Amey's battalion went over the top, with the village of Landreches as its objective. "The whole country was wrapped in a thick blanket of fog," says Amey. "Part of our outfit went forward so fast that it failed to mop up, and our men were falling victims to machine gun nests that had been left undiscovered. It was easy to get lost or separated in that fog. Directly, I found myself accompanied by only one man, stumbling along through a muddy field.

"On one side of the road was a thick, high, tough hedge. Judging by the lights we saw in the fog we concluded that German gun fire was coming from that direction. 'Come on,' I said to my pal. 'We're going to see what's on the other side of that hedge.'"

Seven Machine Guns
"So we busted through, at the cost of some scratches. Criskey! There behind that hedge were seven machine guns sticking their snouts through the hedge while the Germans, safe and sound, were peppering our men. I took my rifle and shot down one crew. The others saw us, but they couldn't pull their machine guns out of the hedge and turn them on us, and they didn't have time to pull their service revolvers. They just ran for it and disappeared in the fog.

"Come on," I said to my pal, "we're going after them." "You know, when your blood is up you don't think about danger or the odds against you or anything of that sort. You just keep going. Well, we went. We saw no trace of the gunners. But directly we saw something big and dark loom up in the fog. I thought it was a little fort, but it was only a French farmhouse.

"There was no sign of life, and I barged in through the open door. The rooms were empty, but there was a stairway that led down to a deep cellar. I shifted my rifle, took a hand grenade and started to tiptoe down that cellar stair.

"For a minute I was dazzled by the light. The Germans might have been short on food but there certainly was no candle shortage. In one corner of the cellar there were 50 Germans, and it seemed like every one of them had lit a candle. Near the stairs huddled the French family—two old men, two old women and some kids.

"I raised my hand grenade and told that German crowd to put their hands up and keep them up. They did.

Captured Whole Crowd
"One of the old women was so glad to see me she kissed me, and one of the old men slipped me a glass of cognac. I told him in my best French—which isn't much—to go upstairs and call my pals.

"Then I told those Germans I was going up and that they were to follow me in single file, every man with his hands up. Every man was to leave arms of every kind down in that cellar. I said that the first man that disobeyed would be shot dead.

"They came up, the whole 50. By that time some of the soldiers of my section had been summoned by the old Frenchman and we bagged the whole lot.

"I suppose I owe my life to a fluke. Those enemy soldiers probably thought that the farmhouse was surrounded by our men and if they tried anything on me they'd be killed like rats in a hole by hand grenades. Lucky they didn't know I only had one man with me."

That's Amey's story. But he didn't tell the whole of it. The colonel in command of his regiment finished the tale in an order of the day, posted up for all the regiment to see:

"Later, single-handed, he attacked a hostile machine gun post situated in another farm house. Exposed to a heavy fire he advanced unhesitatingly, killed two of the garrison and drove the remainder into a cellar until help arrived.

Took Another Chateau
"Again, later and unaided, he attacked a chateau in Faubourg

Soyers, which had been strongly held and was holding up our line of advance. With determination and disregard of personal safety he rushed the chateau, killing two Germans and holding the remainder until reinforced. This gallant action was instrumental in the capturing of a further 20 prisoners, and cleared away the last of the opposition in the sector.

And now? Well, William Amey, today a quiet man of 46, his dark hair just streaking with silver threads, has his pencils sharpened and is back at his old job of turf accountant, just as if there had never been a war.

WORLD WAR VETERANS CARELESS IN STATE

Hundreds Neglected to Provide Funds For Themselves on Adjusted Certificates.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 9.—Several hundred Connecticut veterans of the World War are neglecting to provide reserve funds for themselves in amounts up to $1,500 by failing to apply for adjusted compensation certificates, according to figures on file at the United States Veterans Bureau here. The offer to provide this fund in the form of a "bonus" has been made by the government but it is to be withdrawn on January 1, next. The value of these certificates is illustrated by the fact that during this year some 3,500 Connecticut veterans have borrowed $125,000 on certificates applied for less than three years ago. Of this amount $226,000 has been loaned through the veterans bureau since April 1. The amount loaned throughout the country has been tremendous as more than 2,000,000 adjusted service certificates have been issued. Major Thomas J. Bannigan, regional director of the bureau, has communicated with Red Cross chapters and soldier organizations of the state, asking that they urge all veterans to claim their compensation before the final date of the offer.

ARMISTICE DAY 1927

BY BRUCE CATTON

A bugle rings beyond the stars
And stirs the ghosts the cannon laid;
And phantom ranks from all our wars
Step in time to the plaintive bars—
"Hats off! the dead are on parade!"

Again we hear the rolling beat
Of distant drum taps, far removed,
And tingle to the tramp of feet
That tread again the home-town street—
"The boys we lost, the boys we loved."
A hush descends as they go by,
Silent, with unregarding eyes;
Then, ringing clear to the empty sky,
Sounds the despairing, echoing cry—
"How do you honor our sacrifice?"

How shall we honor them—what can we do for them?
Showing our love for the men that are gone?
Build up a cenotaph, shining and new for them?
Raise up a tablet of finely-carved stone?

Here is the word from the ghostly ranks
Telling us how we may show our thanks:
"We went to our rest while life was young,
And many the joys we missed—
There were songs of youth that we left unsung,
There was honey of life for the tip of the tongue,
There were sweethearts we might have kissed.

"But our part is done; and you that remain
Harken to this, our warning;
See that our sacrifice be not in vain,
See that America, ever again,
Works for the world's new morning.

"We ask for no temple of graven stone,
Pay us this homage, instead;
Keep freedom aloft on her golden throne,
With justice and truth to guard her alone—
Thus honor your soldier dead!"

Then, in the haze of the far stars' light,
The phantom battalions pass from sight,
And the call of the bugles rings out through the night;
Lights out!
Soldier, sleep.

Buyers of Essex cars in the first 9 months of this year would fill and overflow the largest stadium in the world. More than 194,000 Super-Sixes were bought in this period.

Preference for ESSEX almost 2 to 1

In outselling any other "Six" at or near the price, almost two to one, the signal thing is not merely the overwhelming preference for the Essex Super-Six, but the source from which it comes. A great proportion of buyers are owners, former and present, of big and costly cars. They turn to Essex because they find:

- The smoothness and performance of their costlier cars.
- Comfort and riding ease not excelled in any car.
- The roominess and relaxation of their larger cars.

his return because it would appear that he had brought someone home with him, and that this other person had killed him.

MEANS
 She used Benson's own gun. Benson undoubtedly had more than one; for he would have been more likely to keep a gun in his bedroom than in his living-room; and since a Smith and Wesson was found in the living-room, there probably was another in the bedroom.

Being his housekeeper, she knew of the gun upstairs. After he had gone down to the living-room to read, she secured it, and took it with her, concealed under her apron.

She threw the gun away or hid it after the shooting. She had all night in which to dispose of it.

She was frightened when asked what Benson kept about the house, for she was not sure whether or not she knew of the gun in the bedroom.

MOTIVE
 She took the position of housekeeper because she feared Benson's conduct toward her daughter. She always listened when her daughter came to his house at night to work.

Recently she discovered that Benson had dishonorable intentions, and believed her daughter to be in imminent danger.

A mother who would sacrifice herself for her daughter's future, as she has done, would not hesitate at killing to save her.

And there are the jewels. She has them hidden and is keeping them for her daughter. Would Benson have gone out and left them on the table? And if he had put them away, who but she, familiar with the house and having plenty of time, could have found them?

By the way, unless plans miscarry or weather prevents, we are to have a small chrysanthemum show under auspices of the local Garden club next Monday evening, at the Manchester Community club, which will be open to all flower lovers, whether members of the Manchester Garden club or not. Don't fail to keep the date open. You won't have to go to Elizabeth Park to see the chrysanthemum show there which every year draws many visitors. A talk on these fall favorites by an expert gardener will be a feature of the meeting of the club at the White House at 8 o'clock. More details later.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
 Flyte had been in Alvin Benson's power. He had a forged check and had given him Paula Banning's jewels as a note. Leacock confesses to the murder, but Vance exposes the confession as a lie to shield Miss St. Clair. Vance tells Markham to come to his apartment the following day and he will tell him who killed Benson.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER I
 "IT'S SURPRISE," I know, the erroneous ideas people have about melons. There are only two species—the muskmelon and the watermelon. All breakfast melons—like cantaloupes, citrons, nutmegs, Cassabas, and Honeydews—are varieties of the muskmelon. But people have the notion, I see, that cantaloup is a generic term. Philadelphians call all melons cantaloupes; whereas this type of muskmelon was first cultivated in Cantalupo, Italy. . . .

"Very interesting," said Markham, with only partly disguised impatience. "Did you intend by your remark last night . . ."

"And after the melon, Currie has prepared a special dish for you. It's my own gustatory chef d'oeuvre—with Currie's collaboration, of course. I've spent months on its conception—composing and organizing it, so to speak. I haven't named it yet—perhaps you can suggest a fitting appellation. . . ."

Who else could have come so close to him for the purpose of shooting him, without attracting his attention? He would not have cared how he appeared before his housekeeper. He had become accustomed to being seen by her without his teeth and toupee and in negligee condition.

"It sounds appetizing," Markham's tone was devoid of enthusiasm. "But I didn't come here for a cooking lesson."

When he came in alone and changed into his smoking-jacket, she knew he was not expecting any late visitors.

"Y'know, you underestimate the importance of your ventral flanges," pursued Vance. "Eating is the one infallible guide to a people's intellectual advancement, as mentary feeding as the doctor may order. During the second year the teeth are developing beneath the gums and the child must have foods that will provide essential substances for sound teeth. These include particularly foods that supply calcium and phosphorus, as well as the usual food constituents, and also the necessary vitamins.

"Certainly the child should see a dentist after it is two years of age to learn whether or not the teeth are developing properly. Thumb-sucking, mouth-breathing or the use of pacifiers may serve to deform the jaws, and the teeth may be soft and subject to quick decay if the child has not been fed properly."

The dentist also can give instructions as the proper care of the first teeth, including the kind of brush to be employed and the use of the brush itself. Few people seem to realize that a toothbrush improperly cared for may be in itself a source for infection. It is very important to keep the first teeth in place and free from decay since they are associated with the proper coming in and development of the second teeth.

This And That In Feminine Lore

Be sure when you are ordering patterns to place the number of the pattern wanted in the blank space for the purpose. Several have omitted to do this and if they have no telephone it is necessary to write them and this causes a delay in receiving the pattern.

According to Dr. Howe of the New York Botanical garden, this year the public taste is for the small chrysanthemums, the anemone and pompon varieties which just now are at their height of beauty. They have a wonderful collection of named varieties according to the report in a recent New York paper, and some notable "mums" from all parts of the world.

Staff of Life Salad
 The Bible calls bread man's own staff of life—the "man" really means kids, husband and wife. And the simplest salad that one can make to serve with a roast or chop or stock is bread and tomato. You see, yourself, it is easily done and costs little pelf. With cooking oil several rounds of bread. (One may use the top of a glass instead.) Spread bread with butter and cream cheese blended. Slice tomato between. Trouble's almost ended. Top this with mayonnaise lightly flavored. With pimento garnish, and olive stuffed.—Cook Book Carols.

Butterscotch Sauce
 One cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup butter, 1 egg, 1-2 cup sweet milk, 1-3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt.
 Cream butter and beat in sugar. Beat until creamy and beat in 4 tablespoons sifted flour. Add egg beaten until very light. Mix thoroughly and beat in milk. Mix and sift remaining flour with baking powder and salt and beat into first mixture. Add vanilla and beat smooth. Bake in individual cake pans or paper baking cups for 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with the following sauce:

Butterscotch Sauce
 One cup cream, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup medium corn syrup, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.
 Mix cream, sugar and syrup, stirring until perfectly blended. Cook in double boiler over boiling water for one hour. Remove from heat and beat in butter and vanilla. Pour over the cup cakes and garnish each cake with a "dab" of whipped cream if convenient.

Have you ever had the pleasure of picking cranberries from the low-growing bushes in the cranberry bogs? It's great fun for a while but I imagine if one had to do it by the hour or the day as the cranberry pickers in the Cape Cod country, or in the extensive bogs at Chadsworth, N. J., have to do we would find it a back-breaking task. There are spots on many farms that might be made into profitable cranberry crops, but the farmers as a rule have too many other things to bother with.

A different dessert as well as a very attractive one will be served with whipped cream in the following made with bananas and cranberries. Bananas and strawberries proved a delicious combination and this should be equally good:
 Wash one pint of cranberries, pour one cupful of boiling water over, and cook quickly until done, then press through a sieve. Peel six large bananas, cut them in halves lengthwise and squeeze over them the juice from one-half lemon. In the hot cranberry puree solve one cup of one-half cups of sugar, pour it over the bananas and bake in a hot oven until the fruit is tender. Remove carefully to a serving dish and chill well before serving. The berry juice forms a rich jelly about the bananas.

This is national canned goods week and an excellent time to stock up on soups, vegetables, fish and meats. There is very little prejudice existent nowadays toward "tinned" foods. When we consider that the reliable canner uses only correctly ripened, carefully chosen materials, which are immediately sterilized in the canner, there is less danger than when we buy the market's vegetables on the verge of spoiling. As for the valuable vitamins they are not lost in the process of commercial canning. According to "Hygeia" magazine: "Vitamin A is not affected by canning in a pressure cooker or by ordinary commercial canning methods. On the other hand Vitamin B may be somewhat affected. Vitamin C is affected more or less by any form of cooking (herein lies the value of raw salad) with the exception of its content in tomato where the effect of canning on Vitamin C is hardly demonstrable. In the commercial canning of cabbage, peas and spinach there is no loss other than that occasioned by the first heating."

Young housekeepers who are planning to have the entire family for Thanksgiving dinner, perhaps for the first time, will be interested in one or two articles which we will print on the home page soon, as to how to select the best bird, pluck him, draw, truss him, stuff him, roast him and serve him and all the other things that go with "him" for the successful dinner, written by a culinary expert.

Flares Have Their Fling With Skirts
 The influence of the new mode is seen in the subtle flaring of the skirt front and a bit of color that Fashion once more touches frocks with. The design is simplicity itself and easily made, for the bodice front has only a slender vest outlined by loose tabs and is joined to the skirt section beneath the belt. The back is all in one piece and the sleeves plain and tight-fitting. No. 1570 is designed for misses and small women in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, or (34, 36, 38 inches bust). Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3/4 yard, 39-inch material; 1/4 yard contrasting (cut crosswise). Price of pattern 15 cents.

Home Page Editorial COMFORT FOR GOLD STAR MOTHERS

By Olive Roberts Barton
 Gold-star mothers (those who have lost sons in the war), mothers with invalid and crippled sons, read of the futility of peace treaties, and see in the moving-picture theaters still greater evidences of present world armament; it is small wonder that they cry bitterly, "Oh, why do they go on? Is there never to be any lasting peace? Is there to be war forever?"

They are thinking of other mothers with growing sons and of what the future may bring to them. They had hoped that the sacrifice of their own loved ones would free the world from future wars and now it all seems as though that sacrifice had been wasted.

It seems that nations still hate each other with bitterness. Races hate, creeds hate, factions hate. Diplomats do what they can, but diplomats cannot stop war—always.

But something has happened. We have found the answer? Roger Babson, that man of facts and figures and certainties, published recently an interview that he had with Dr. Charles Steinmetz, the world's greatest scientist, the man who dealt in electric miracles, star power, and chemical wizardry.

Mr. Babson asked Doctor Steinmetz a simple question: "What line of research will see the greatest development during the next fifty years?"

And the good doctor after careful thought replied: "Mr. Babson, I think the greatest discovery will be along spiritual lines. Some day people will learn that material things do not bring happiness and are of little use in making men and women creative and powerful. Then the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God. When this day comes the world will see more advancement in one generation than in the past four."

Does it look now as though our ideals for ending war has been lost? I think not. And as for the future—may not mothers with sons take comfort? For Dr. Steinmetz stressed Love of our Fellow-Men. Which is absolutely the only thing that will end war!

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUMNER
 If Prince Carol really stages his coup d'etat to seize the throne of Rumania, the life of his baby son, Mihail, the present king, as well as that of his wife and mother and sisters and brothers will be endangered when the palace is seized. Something funny about the blood royal which would put a throne before own flesh and blood!

THE CHALLAPINS
 Because Soviet divorce laws permit either husband or wife to procure a divorce without the consent of the other; to procure it, in fact, simply by buying it, Madame Chhallapin of Moscow, first wife of the great singer, finds herself divorced. She had no legal right to protest and tell her story of consenting, for the sake of his career, not to divorce Chhallapin when "the other woman" appeared on the scene, of keeping the story from her five children, and signing a paper which would legitimize three children born to Chhallapin and the other woman.

IT'S PERPLEXING.
 Such opinions flung at them constantly must be awfully bewildering to mothers who are trying to do the best they know how. A mother who still dances wears pretty gowns and sports a neatly bobbed head, is a comrade to her son. What boy doesn't want to be proud of his mother? If she dances and drinks and smokes and smokes he will bring the other boys home to show her off."

GREAT INCENTIVE
 JUDGE: Perhaps you were led to do this?
 PRISONER: Yes, by my wife, who said that if I ever went to prison she would leave me.—Megendorfer Blaetter, Munich.

The Cleaners that Clean
Cease Firing
 Armistice Day! Nine years ago—You remember it? Of course—it seems as but yesterday. And yet, how much has happened since! Of some changes we approve—of others we don't. But it's a pretty good old world after all. For one thing, our standard of living is higher. Luxuries of yesterday are considered as necessities today. We live better. . . . we dress better. Dry cleaning, for instance, once considered a luxury, is now taken as a matter of course. As a matter of fact, it's an economy, for clothes regularly dry cleaned not only look better, but last longer.

CHILD SHOULD BE GIVEN CHANCE FOR GOOD TEETH
BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 The meeting of the American Dental Association recently served to emphasize anew the manner in which the teeth are being conserved as parts of the whole human body rather than as a sort of dental furniture cast loose in the mouth.
 Nowadays more and more attention is being paid to the problem of growing strong teeth rather than to the cleaning and repair of teeth exclusively. In order to have strong and healthful teeth the child must eat proper food; indeed, its mother should have eaten proper food for a considerable period before it was born.
 The child must chew food thoroughly to aid good digestion and to maintain the health of the teeth and gums. Proper food for sound teeth means mother's milk up to eight or ten months of age.
Orange or Tomato Juice
 The child should be given, beginning with the first month, orange juice or strained tomato juice in the dosage prescribed by the physician. It should also have cod liver oil to provide adequate amounts of vitamins necessary to bony growth.
 From the age of six months onward its breast feeding is to be supplemented with cereal, cow's milk, soups made of strained vegetables, or such other supple-

"It's surprisin', y' know, the erroneous ideas people have about melons. There are only two species—the muskmelon and the watermelon. "Did you intend by your remark last night..."

Markham listened stolidly to Vance's chatter during breakfast. He was not sure of the subject of the crime, but Vance glibly ignored each essay. It was not until Currie had cleared away the dishes that he referred to the object of Markham's visit. "Did you bring the alibi reports?" was his first question. Markham nodded. "And it took me two hours to find Heath after you'd gone last night."

"Sad," breathed Vance. He went to the desk, and took a closely written double sheet of foolscap from one of the compartments. "I wish you'd glance this over, and give me your learned opinion," he said, handing the paper to Markham. "I prepared it last night after the concert."

I later took possession of the document, and filed it with my other notes and papers pertaining to the Benson case. The following is a verbatim copy: HYPOTHESIS Mrs. Anna Platz shot and killed Alvin Benson on the night of June 13th.

PLACE She lived in the house, and admitted being here at the time the shot was fired.

OPPORTUNITY She was alone in the house with Benson. All the windows were either barred or locked on the inside. The front door was locked. There was no other means of ingress. Her presence in the living-room was natural; she might have entered ostensibly to ask Benson a domestic question.

Who else could have come so close to her for the purpose of shooting him, without attracting his attention? He would not have cared how he appeared before his housekeeper. He had become accustomed to being seen by her without his teeth and toupee and in negligee condition.

Living in the house, she was able to choose a propitious moment for the crime.

TIME She waited up for him. Despite her denial, he might have told her when he would return. When he came in alone and changed into the smoking-jacket, she knew he was not expecting any late visitors. She chose a time shortly after CONDUCT She lied about St. Clair's coming to tea, explaining later that she knew St. Clair could not have had anything to do with the crime. Was this feminine intuition? No. She could know St. Clair was innocent only because she herself was guilty. She was too motherly to want an innocent person suspected.

She was markedly frightened yesterday when her daughter's name was mentioned, because she feared the discovery of the relationship might reveal her motive for shooting Benson.

She admitted hearing the shot, because, if she had denied it, a test might have proved that a shot in the living-room would have sounded loudly in her room; and this would have aroused suspicion against her.

When first interviewed, she showed plainly she disliked Benson. Her apprehension has been pronounced each time she has been questioned.

She is the hard-headed, shrewd, determined type, who could both plan and perform such a crime.

HEIGHT She is about 5 feet, 10 inches tall—the demonstrated height of the murderer. (To Be Continued)

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUMNER

If Prince Carol really stages his coup d'etat to seize the throne of Rumania, the life of his baby son, Mihai, the present king, as well as that of his wife and mother and sisters and brothers will be endangered when the palace is seized.

Somewhat funny about the blood royal which would put a throne before own flesh and blood!

THE CHALLAPINS Because Soviet divorce laws permit either husband or wife to procure a divorce without the consent of the other; to procure it, in fact, simply by buying it, Madame Challapin of Moscow, first wife of the great singer, finds herself divorced. She had no legal right to protest and tell her story of consenting to the sale of his career, nor to divorce Challapin when "the other woman" appeared on the scene, of keeping the story from her five children, and signing a paper which would legitimize three children born to Challapin and the other woman.

There is to be something to be said for the American system which permits a woman at least to air her wrongs in open court.

GANNA AGAIN Now it seems there is a special costume to be worn when meeting Mussolini, Il Duce. We are told that when Ganna Walska, the terrible singer, and wife of Harold McCormick of Chicago, met Mussolini, she wore a "Duce presentation costume" especially created for her by a famous Parisian designer. It must have worked, for Ganna raves on about Mussolini which means that he seemed conscious of her charms.

HUSBANDS TO BLAME A Chicago woman is writing a series of articles on the wild gambling life which thousands of modern wives lead today, spending all their days and nights over piles of chips on green baize tables. Yes, you guessed it, the husbands are to blame. They do not remain lovers after marriage. They do not take their wives out to dance or to a roadhouse, so what can a poor wife do but lose $200 a night, or his month's salary, playing cards? Sometimes one wonders why any men marry any woman at all!

"MAMA, GIMME A LIGHT!" Growing boys need more mother who roll their stockings, smoke gigars, drink cocktails, and dance the whole night through. This is the rather startling theory of Inez Haynes Irwin whose novel "Gideon" was about a boy with this kind of mother. Mrs. Irwin says—

"Who is so apt to understand her restless young son as a mother who is herself young and gay? A mother who still dances, wears pretty gowns and sports a neatly bobbed head, is a comrade to her son. What boy doesn't want to be proud of his mother? If she dances and drinks and bobs and smokes he will bring the other boys home to show her off."

IT'S PERPLEXING. Such opinions flung at them constantly must be awfully bewildering to mothers who are trying to do the best they know how, but who never thought that drinking and smoking and cursing were required of them if they were to be good parents!

One can't deny, though, that there may be at least a grain of truth in Mrs. Irwin's opinion.

The Cleaners that Clean Cease Firing

Armistice Day! Nine years ago—You remember it? Of course—it seems as if yesterday. And yet, how much has happened since! Of some changes we approve—of others we don't. But it's a pretty good old world after all. For one thing, our standard of living is higher. Luxuries of yesterday are considered as necessities today. We live better... we dress better. Dry cleaning, for instance, once considered a luxury, is now taken as a matter of course. As a matter of fact, it's an economy, for clothes regularly dry cleaned not only look better, but last longer.

Cleaning and dyeing promptly and perfectly done. Your clothes are called for and delivered. They are taken care of as your individual clothes. They are huddled together in a suburban bundle.

CHILD SHOULD BE GIVEN CHANCE FOR GOOD TEETH BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN The meeting of the American Dental Association recently served to emphasize anew the manner in which the teeth are being conserved as parts of the whole human body rather than as a sort of dental furniture cast loose in the mouth. Nowadays more and more attention is being paid to the problem of growing strong teeth rather than to the cleaning and repair of teeth exclusively. In order to have strong and healthful teeth the child must eat proper food; indeed, its mother should have eaten proper food for a considerable period before it was born. The child must chew food thoroughly to aid good digestion and to maintain the health of the teeth and gums. Proper food for sound teeth means mother's milk up to eight or ten months of age. Orange or Tomato Juice The child should be given, beginning with the first month, orange juice or strained tomato juice in the dosage prescribed by the physician. It should also have cod liver oil to provide adequate amounts of vitamins necessary to bony growth. From the age of six months onward its breast feeding is to be supplemented with cereal, cow's milk, soups made of strained vegetables, or such other supple-

Visiting the Dentist "Certainly the child should see a dentist after it is two years of age to learn whether or not the teeth are developing properly. Thumb-sucking, mouth-breathing or the use of pacifiers may serve to deform the jaws, and the teeth may be soft and subject to quick decay if the child has not been fed properly. The dentist also can give instructions as the proper care of the first teeth, including the kind of brush to be employed and the care of the brush itself. Few people seem to realize that a toothbrush improperly cared for may be in itself a source for infection. It is very important to keep the first teeth in place and free from decay since they are associated with the proper coming in and development of the second teeth.

WALSH EXPECTING UPSETS SATURDAY Dope a Week Ago This Time Has Been Reversed, He Writes.

By DAVIS J. WALSH I. N. S. Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 10.—Psychology, according to Webster, is the "science of the human mind or soul and its activities and capacities," which, as everybody knows, is a lot of gum Arabic. Psychology is the assistant line and backfield coach under Knute Rockne at Notre Dame and Bill Roper at Princeton and the thing that makes a bum out of a football expert or a football expert out of a bum or both. It figures to have an abiding effect on three of the stand-out games on Saturday's schedule. The games in question are those involving Notre Dame and the Army at the Yankee Stadium, Pittsburgh and Nebraska at Pittsburgh and Yale and Princeton at New Haven. I might even include the Chicago-Illinois game at Urbana, for Stagg dearly loves to swing one from the shoe laces on the Illinois. The funny thing about those first three games is that a week ago psychology would have coppered the bets he is due to lay on Saturday. A week ago, he would have said that Princeton was in the moral position to beat Yale; that the Army was the short-end good thing against Notre Dame and that the undefeated Pittsburgh team was due to pick up, perhaps unexpectedly, a live one in Nebraska. But today, psychology has turned on those favored ones and is riding with the other fellow.

Caldwell's Loss Yale, for example, has apparently lost Caldwell four days before the big game with the Tigers. This means a psychological gain, a physical loss, the latter being a decidedly poor trade by the way. Caldwell not only was the only triple-threat man in the outfit but the best goal kicker in the squad and personally I never heard of a psychology matter being a degree of proficiency.

Yet the thing isn't a dead loss, for Princeton was in the position Roper wants for the good, old under-dog harrangue of the dressing room. He can't very well do it now, which will mean more to this football game than a lot of things the players may do or may not do on the field. So much for that.

Army-Notre Dame Next, we may consider the Army-Notre Dame game. A week ago, Rockne said he feared the cadets more than Minnesota or Southern California and at that time he may have been right. The Army, having taken one on the picnic from Yale, had subsequently scored more than eighty points on two fairly strong opponents and was set for Notre Dame.

But now Notre Dame is set for the Army, which plays the piece on the other side of the record. If the Irish had beaten Minnesota last week-end, it is doubtful whether Rockne would have been able to convince them that afternoon's work left the set with a fallen arch. For Pitt put in the day scoring exactly no points on Washington & Jefferson, while Nebraska was running up 47 on Kansas, leaving Pittsburgh with no alternative but to believe that it is in for a somewhat violent afternoon on Saturday. It is difficult to get a football team in just that frame of mind but when you do it is hard to beat.

If Pitt really sends out a re-awakened team here, it will be one of the great games of the year, with any man's choice as good as mine.

Plainfield Topples New Bedford 58-14

(Special to The Herald.) Plainfield, Conn. Nov. 11.—The Plainfield Community Club basketball team opened its 1927-28 season here last night by turning back the New Bedford, Mass., town team which came here as a last minute substitute for Fall River because of a misunderstanding in dates. The score was 58 to 14. Roy Norris led the scoring with eleven tallies. Every man on the Plainfield team took part in the scoring. Eddie Nichols, ex-Windham High flash, took part in the game.

Table with 3 columns: Player Name, Points, Rebounds. Includes Normandin (58), Schofield (4), Dessinger (1), Norris (1), Stavitsky (1), Madden (1), Bernot (1), Nichols (1), New Bedford (14), McDonnell (1), Black (1), Dupias (1), Smithson (1), Coleman (1), Harrison (1).

GRANGE WILL MAKE $50,000 THIS YEAR

Approximately $50,000 is the sum Red Grange expects to reap from his third season of pro football. The Gallop'n' Ghost of Illinois played before 75,000 fans in his first five games, and had 13 more to go. He expects to play before 400,000 fans this season. Next to Grange, Benny Friedman, former Michigan star, will get the highest sum out of pro football. He is looking for close to $25,000 for his toil as a pro this year.

OUTSTANDING STAR HARD TO REPLACE

Yale Now Realizes That Fact With Princeton Game Two Days Away.

The problem Tad Jones has in replacing Bruce Caldwell at Yale is emphasized in the following story by Billy Evans regarding the loss of an outstanding star. Take one star out of the lineup of a major league club and it makes a tremendous difference. It could enumerate a score of such cases. No second baseman has ever been able to fill the shoes of Eddie Collins when injury or illness has made it impossible for him to play. A lot of outfielders have essayed at various times to take Tris Speaker's place, when for some reason he has been unable to play, but none have delivered in his incomparable style.

When Walter Johnson was in his prime, there never was a pitcher who came even close to taking his turn on the rubber as the ace of the staff, when Walter was ailing. All of which simply proves that one star can either make or break a ball club.

While I have always realized that such a happening holds good in most sports, not until the Michigan-Illinois game did I fully appreciate what an outstanding gridiron performer meant to the success of his team. Louis Gilbert, sensational half-back of Michigan, was unable to play against Illinois. Michigan would have been the same had Gilbert played but certainly it would have not been so easily accomplished by the proteges of Bob Zuppke.

Gilbert was operated on for an infected arm a few hours prior to the game. The Michigan coaches, while realizing what his absence meant, placed his welfare above the desire to win from Illinois. Against Ohio State, with Gilbert starting, Michigan looked like a great team. With Gilbert on the sidelines in the Illinois game, Michigan looked very ordinary.

Michigan's offense in the Illinois game never functioned properly, making it seem that much of it was built up around Gilbert. Explains Michigan's Defeat Michigan missed Gilbert in almost every department of play. Illinois enjoyed a decided edge in punting, which might not have happened with Gilbert in the game. His punting against Ohio State had the Buckeyes constantly on the defensive.

Michigan's passing game carried little or no deception, quite the contrary of the previous games in which Oosterbaan alternated with Gilbert in hurling the passes. In running back punts, Gilbert was also sadly missed. All in all, Michigan was simply lost without him, making it seem that possibly too much dependence has been centered on the elusive Mr. Gilbert. Watching the Wolverines in action, three players, Gilbert and Baer stand out. In the Illinois game, Oosterbaan was not at his best. Baer played himself out and was forced to retire in the final period, while Gilbert could lend but moral support from a seat on the sidelines. The failure of these three stars to function in high, perhaps best explains the upset of Michigan. In conclusion, don't forget that a potentially great Illinois team trimmed 'em.

SPORTSMATTER

FRANK GETTY UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR. FANS SUFFER MOST.

Boxing fans are the chief sufferers from this silly war between boxing bodies. The sport is spoiled for them by the bickerings of the self-indulgent legislators. Each time the National Boxing Association swings a hard left at the New York State Athletic Association, the blow misses and catches the average fight fan right on the button. And when the New York solons strike back, the result is the same. It is the fan who suffers from these needless quarrels over who is champion and who shall fight whom.

Perhaps, one of these days, it will be a fan who will propose a solution. Here is a suggestion from one fight fan, a fairly well-known one, "Sir: William Muldoon, of the New York Boxing Commission, to my way of thinking, is responsible for the healthy condition of the boxing game today, and is without question the outstanding figure of this grand, glorious sport. And if the various state boxing commissions would adopt and carry out the rules and by-laws of the New York Commission and put a man like Muldoon at the head of their state boxing commissions, there would be a lot less squabbling and dissatisfaction and the fight-going public would get a much better run for their money. One only needs to see how clubs in New York City put on their shows to be convinced what a truly great man William Muldoon really is. If the country at large could see just how the sport was governed in New York City, I believe every state in the Union would have legalized boxing. New York's splendid policy has been brought about through the untiring efforts of William Muldoon.

"I feel sure that no one could conscientiously say any bad word against him or against his honesty and sincerity. He has always been a fine example of what clean living will do for men, and even today, at the age of 32, he is a perfect specimen of correct living. He is a two-fisted square shooter from every angle. He likes to see every one connected with the sport be gentlemanly always and clean in their business dealings. True, he is firm when he believes himself to be in the right, but on the other hand, if one shows him where he is wrong, he is the first to admit it, and it takes a big man to do that. But William Muldoon is hardly ever wrong. He is probably the keenest student of boxing and how it should be handled living today. He is absolutely fair in settling any controversies that may come up and he has the respect of every honest fighter, fight manager, or promoter in the game because they all know that he will do the right thing with them. Moreover, he has the respect and holds the confidence of practically every recognized sporting authority, either in or out of New York, and he will continue to do so as long as he lives.

"William Muldoon is that kind of a man. I wish we had more men like him. (Signed) 'JAMES J. JEFFRIES.'"

Jim Jeffries still ranks in most men's minds as the outstanding heavyweight champion of all time, the man who, in his prime and theirs, could have whipped all the title-holders who came before and after him. As to what he has to say about William Muldoon, one can only add, after the manner of our British boy friends: "Hear! Hear!"

WANTS TO GO HUNTING Jud Tamm, Illinois' sensational back, says his greatest ambition is to hunt big game in Idaho. ANOTHER SET OF BROTHERS California's eleven has a brother set in J. Dougray, end, and Ralph Dougray, fullback.

NO-AUTO RULE HURT Illinois lost the services of Art d'Ambrosio, fullback, for two weeks this year because he violated the no-automobile rule of that school.

Game at Stadium; Cloverleaves Have Not Announced Opponent Yet; Title Game Only Week Away.

No announcement has come from the Cloverleaves as to what team will oppose them at Hickey's Grove Sunday, the week before the crucial town title game.

Manager Vendrillo of the Cubs announced last night that he had secured the fast Holy Name club of Hartford to play at the McKee street stadium. Hartford's lineup will include Keaton, Le. Tartur, J. Rush, J. Kelleher, C. Kelley, R. Strong, F. Provincial, G. Devaney, Ith, Sullivan, R. Mazzotti, F. J. Just what lineup Coach Dwyer will put on the field for the Cubs is not known, but his "first-team" will probably play together for one or two periods in order to get in the best possible condition for the title go.

TODAY IN FISTIANA, By DOC REID, Twenty-four years ago today, Joe Walcott, famed as the "Bad Boy of the West," met Sandy Ferguson, an elite Scotch-Canadian, in a 15-round bout at Boston. In this affair the negro star weighed 148 pounds, while Ferguson scaled 200 pounds. The latter stood six feet three inches in height and feet three inches in height and weight. Against the giant Scotchman he looked like a pigmy. Ferguson gained the decision at the finish but the negro fought furiously and made him extend himself to his limit. It was nothing unusual for Walcott to step out of his class and bring down the big fellows, however, as some of the most prominent heavyweights known in the game have fallen victims to his deadly blows, among them being George Gardner, Joe Choyinski, Sam Langford and others of equal fame and ability. SEMI-PUBLIC BOARD TO SETTLE STRIKES, Mount Carmel, Pa., Nov. 10.—The creation of a permanent semi-public governing board to guard the welfare of and promote prosperity for the anthracite industry was the goal of the Anthracite Operators' Association. This proposed board, with the public holding a voice equal to that of miners and operators combined, will wield a tremendous influence over the hard coal industry, if the hopes of its sponsors are fulfilled. The board's three principal purposes would be to insure clean coal for the consumers, to create new sales fields for the operators and to prevent future strikes. It would function over the anthracite industry much as the Anti-Slavery League guards prohibition. Under present plans the proposed board would have twenty-one members, of whom five would represent the miners, five the operators and eleven the general public. It would act as a board of arbitrators to a much larger organization to be created throughout the whole anthracite region. A series of conventions will be called shortly in cities and towns across the anthracite belt. It was estimated that 97 anthracite communities would be asked to enter the larger organization. RUMANIA MAY DISMISS UNITED STATES MINISTER
Berlin, Nov. 10. — Dispatches from Bucharest today described diplomatic incident as a result of which, it was reported, Rumania may request the recall of United States Minister Culbertson. Culbertson, the dispatches stated, left his calling card at the jail for Manolescu, former Rumanian secretary of state, whose trial for high treason against the Bratianu government starts today. Rumanian governmental and diplomatic circles were said to have been highly excited by the American minister's action and asked Washington for an explanation. Manolescu is charged with having aided a movement to overthrow the present Rumanian regime and place former Crown Prince Carol on the throne.

The final meeting of the Moosa banquet committee will be held tomorrow night in the Edgewood House. Tickets for the banquet must be returned by Monday, November 14.
