CHURCH TO ACT ON LAND SWAP WITH THE TOWN

Annual Meeting of Center Ecclesiastical Society to Discuss Proposed Exchange of Properties.

When the Ecclesiastical society, the business organization of the Center Congregational church, convenes tomorrow night for its annual meeting one of the most important steps in the church history will be brought before the members for action. The society will be asked to sanction a proposal that the church and town swap pieces of property that both need and are at present of little value to their owners.

Both Need Par-els

In order that an addition may be constructed to the rear of the Center edifice the church people need more land in the rear. In order that the state highway at the Center may be widened and in order to straighten out the property lines at the Center the town needs parcels of Center church land. The executive committee of the Ecclesiastical society has made proposals to the Selectman on the proposition and the Selectmen have made counter proposals to the church committee.

All angles of the question will be submitted to the church society members tomorrow night and it is expected that a committee will be named to act with the Selectmen on the proposed properties transfer.

Other business

The annual report of the society's committee will be read by Lucius Foster and the year's financial budget will be voted upon. Officers will be elected and future policies discussed.

Mrs. Snyder and Gray Not To Be Given Dope

Doctors and Sing Sing Officials Say Couple Will Walk Bravely to Electric Chair Thursday Night.

Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Henry Judd Gray, who is to die in the electric chair Thursday night, received an unexpected visit from his wife, Mrs. Isabel Gray, in the Death House here today. The meeting was pathetic and the sashweight slayer of Albert Snyder, the art editor, snowed emotion for the first time in weeks.

It was Mrs. Gray's final farewell to her husband. She has visited him only once before since he went behind the grim walls of Sing Sing. She was visited by the tragedy which wrecked her home, robbed her daughter, Jane, of a father and disgraced her name. She has been on the verge of a collapse for weeks at the home of her brother-in-law in Norwalk, Conn., and has refused herself to all callers.

Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray will not be given sedatives—or "dope" of any kind—to quiet their nerves just before they start on their tragic march to the death chair on Thursday night, Dr. C. C. Sweet, Sing Sing physician, said in an interview today.

"We never do it and will not in their cases," Dr. Sweet declared emphatically.

He said there is no truth in reports that the condemned couple are on the verge of collapse. "I have visited both of them," he asserted, "and found them in as good condition as could be expected. Except for nervous upsets, Mrs. Snyder is perfectly normal. She eats well and sleeps soundly, although she is rather fully. She is by far the most agitated of the two."

Gray Resigned
"Gray is strong physically and mentally. He seems resigned to his fate. He shows no indication whatsoever of fear."

Dr. Sweet said it was "hard to say" how Mrs. Snyder would act when she is notified that her time has come to die. Gray, he predicted,

ANOTHER SMALLPOX CASE IS REPORTED

East Hampton Schoolboy Has Dread Disease; Fear No Further Spread.

East Hampton, Conn., Jan. 10.—Another case of small pox was reported here today, the victim being Wilfred Day, a schoolboy whose parents already had the disease. With the new case East Hampton now has a total of eight persons suffering from small pox.

That no great dread of the disease will take place is the opinion of Dr. Frederic T. Fitch, local health officer, who has conducted a clinic that to this morning had vaccinated 1,260 persons. Dr. Fitch and Dr. John Millburn are doing the work with the approval of the State Health Department. It is expected that by tomorrow evening every resident of the town, some twenty or 2,500, will have been vaccinated.

Factories Co-operating

Factory owners here have been co-operating with the health authorities by ordering their employees to be vaccinated. Persons who have not been treated or who refuse treatment are sent home, several being dismissed yesterday.

The situation in Colchester, where the entire Eastern Star Chapter is under quarantine is reported good today. No small pox exists there and Dr. Edward J. Howland, health officer, finds no signs of any quarantined persons being ill.

POPE DEPLORES MIXING RELIGION WITH POLITICS.

Rome, Jan. 10.—The Pope today issued an unexpected encyclical on the question of the union of the churches and recognized the praise-worthiness of the movement but he deplored the mixing of religion with politics.

The encyclical apparently was prompted by the recent discussion in Great Britain over the new Church of England prayer-book, which has revived the movement there for a union of the branches of the Church of England and the Catholic church.

12 O'Clock Girl, Nuisance Declares Priest In London

"It is very unjust, but the world always reacts against the parents for the sins of a prodigal daughter."

"To describe a nice flirtation with strangers as having 'a bit of fun' or 'a good time' is to blind young people to the perils involved."

CRASH OF S-4 CAME WITHIN FIVE SECONDS

Watch on Board Coast Guard Cutter Says His Ship Had No Time to Avoid Accident.

Charlestown Navy Yard, Boston, Jan. 10.—Once again the tragedy of the Submarine S-4 sinking in Provincetown harbor was played today before the Naval Court of Inquiry investigating the disaster.

Charles E. Reed, chief quartermaster aboard the Coast Guard cutter Paulding, which smashed the S-4 with her crew of forty to the sea bottom, testified before the court as to what happened when the collision occurred. He illustrated the crash with miniature models of the S-4 and the Paulding.

Reed was on the bridge and prior to the disaster was looking through binoculars at the light ship to find out why she was out of position.

"I heard an ejaculation from the interior of the bridge," testified Reed. "I looked over the rail and saw the periscopes of a submarine at what seemed to be 100 feet ahead."

"The periscopes were probably three feet out of water," testified Reed. "I reported that a submarine was ahead. I didn't wait to see any more but immediately went to the telegraph station and under the captain's orders gave full astern to the engine room. I pushed the siren and started for the bridge and then the crash occurred."

"Where was the submarine when you sighted her?" the judge asked.

"Momentarily, I thought she was under way and crossing our bow," the witness answered.

Reed estimated that it was from five to seven seconds after he sighted the S-4 that the impact came.

"It was not a soft impact," said Reed. "It felt like sliding up over something. I had the sensation as if I were being lowered in an elevator."

"Could it have been possible for the S-4 to have come up after the impact was hit and come up again only to be struck again?" Judge Advocate Leslie Bratton asked.

"It could not have been because I was doing the delicate job of making bearings and seeing that the bodies were found in the wrecked plane early today."

Search Started
Alarmed when the plane did not reach Buffalo Sunday night, officials of that city wired Albany aviation authorities asking that a search be started at once for the missing aviators.

News of the mysterious disappearance of the plane was broadcast yesterday through station WGY of the General Electric Company in this city. Within an hour after the news had been put on the air, WGY officials received a telephone message from a resident of Glen, Montgomery county, stating that he had heard the drone of an airplane motor late Sunday afternoon, and that a few minutes later he heard what he believed was a crash.

Working with this information, Montgomery county authorities aided by state police and a group of civilians early today started a search in the vicinity of Glen.

Completely wrecked, the plane finally was found in a clump of bushes in a field between Fonda and Glen. All three fliers are believed to have been instantly killed when their plane crashed.

FLY OVER TASMAN SEA

London, Jan. 10.—Using a machine similar to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's famous Spirit of St. Louis, Captain Hood and Lieut. Moncrieff, airmen of New Zealand, have flown over the Tasman Sea for the first time in history, said a Central News dispatch from Wellington, New Zealand, this afternoon.

Captain Hood and Lieut. Moncrieff hopped off at Sydney late yesterday to make a 1,400 mile flight to Wellington. When they became three hours overdue fears were felt for their safety. The flight had been undertaken against the advice of Premier Bruce, who said he believed the machine unsuitable.

Lack of fuel caused their descent, the statement said.

ENGINE CRASH IN FOG KILLS TWO LOCAL MEN

Leo P. Hannon, Henry Horton, Are Victims at Grade Crossing Ford Coupe Struck at Callahan's Crossing Below Buckland at 7:08 Last Night—Hannon Had Driven Horton and Wife Home With Groceries—Blinding Fog Blamed.

Dense fog, which headlights were able to penetrate only partly, is said to have been a principal cause of a grade-crossing accident in Buckland last night in which two Manchester men lost their lives when their automobile was hit by the Willimantic to Hartford express train No. 1161. The dead are Leo P. Hannon, 26, son of Patrick F. Hannon of 137 Main street, and Henry Horton, 55, of 1522 Tolland Turnpike.

Both men were killed instantly. It was said by Dr. LeVerne Holmes, deputy medical examiner, and the bodies were found on the oiling platform of the engine, having been carried about 300 feet. Their automobile was dragged about 90 feet and was found resting against the cow-guard west of the crossing.

The accident occurred at the crossing known as Callahan's, near the former Daniel Callahan place, where Horton lived. A dense fog had enveloped the whole section and it was impossible to see for any distance.

Mr. Hannon, with Mr. and Mrs. Horton, had come from Willimantic to Manchester, near the crossing, where Horton lived. A dense fog had enveloped the whole section and it was impossible to see for any distance.

DR. MORAN DEFENDED

Editor, The Herald: Recently I became acquainted with the fact that Dr. A. B. Moran of South Manchester, Conn., was suspended from the Manchester Memorial Hospital of that place, and in consequence has been denied the privilege of caring for patients in that institution. I have learned that this suspension is the outcome of a disagreement between Dr. Moran and the superintendent of that hospital, concerning a proposed autopsy on the body of my late husband Harold T. Gustafson, who died at the Manchester Memorial Hospital on November 14, 1927, following an automobile accident. A statement from me at this time may tend to clarify the situation as it stands. This statement will at least stand the test of service in the eye of the public in proving the truth of Dr. Moran's denial of the Superintendent's statement, that he influenced the hospital to refuse to permit me to withdraw my given permission for an autopsy on the body of my husband. This statement I feel is no more than an absolute truth, as I assume a neutral position, favoring neither Dr. Moran nor the hospital.

On November 6, 1927, my husband, his mother, my child, and I, were admitted to the Manchester Memorial Hospital for treatment for injuries received in an automobile accident. We were cared for by Dr. Moran, from the time of our admission to a time immediately preceding the day of our discharge from the hospital. My husband died on November 14, 1927, as the result of this accident. I do not recall just how soon the superintendent of the hospital came to me, for my husband's death, but I can assure you that it was within a period of three or four hours. She came to me to obtain my permission to perform an autopsy on the body of my husband, when I learned the purpose of her errand, I, with no hesitation, straightway refused any and all permission to allow this procedure to occur. The superintendent, contrary to her statement, never did, and never could have gained my consent to autopsy the body of my husband.

Her accusation concerning Dr. Moran never did encourage or suggest that I withdraw my given permission; in fact Dr. Moran did not discuss my husband's death with me until the morning of the next day. Dr. Moran is absolutely innocent of this charge, and in no way responsible for the hospital's failure to effect the performance of an autopsy on the body of my husband.

Let me say in closing, that I feel that Dr. Moran did everything possible to relieve my husband's sufferings, and that he did all within human power to prevent the inevitable. As far as my own case is concerned, I know Dr. Moran treated me very kindly and very efficiently. I am sorry Dr. Moran's suspension is the outgrowth of a question concerning my husband and myself; but, I am glad to be able to honestly state that Dr. Moran is absolutely innocent of this charge which has been preferred against him.

Yours very truly, ANNA A. GUSTAFSON.

RELIGIOUS DEBATE

Editor, The Herald:

It has been announced in the Herald that Doctor Carl R. Stolz, dean of the Hartford Seminary in going to conduct a special course on the new Testament and Biblical Language and Literature at the Manchester Institute of Religious Education to be held in the South Methodist Church.

There are over 10,000 people in town who are not members of any church. What a field for missionaries to work in and since the majority of these people refuse to go to church because they do not believe the Bible to be God's word, it seems to me that a man like Doctor Stolz, who was professor of religious education for years and who has written several books, such as "Evolution and Genesis" would gladly grasp an opportunity to prove to these many people here that the Bible is the word of God.

I believe a debate on this subject would draw the largest audience Manchester has ever seen and would give those so-called unbelievers a chance to hear Doctor Stolz, propounding the Bible and proving it to be the word of God. With this in view, I respectfully challenge Doctor Stolz, (or any one else) to meet me in any hall, church or theatre in town, to debate the following resolution: Resolved that the Bible is the word of God. I will take the negative and promise that I will not quote a word written by modern writers but shall use internal evidences only. Yours truly, Mathias Spiess, 28 W. Center Street, South Manchester, Conn., Jan. 10, 1928.

The report reflected the general condition of the real estate business in this town as well as that of the neighboring towns. The following men were elected to serve on the board of directors: P. J. O'Leary, W. S. Hyde, John H. Hyde, Charles E. Jacobson, James Johnston, Samuel G. Gordon, James Mahoney, Christopher Gienney, Alford, F. A. Verplanck and Thomas Ferguson. MRS. SNYDER AND GRAY NOT TO BE GIVEN DOPE

"Probably will go like nearly all condemned persons," bravely. "I have seen 21 other people electrocuted since I have been Sing Sing's physician and I never knew of a single instance when one of them had to be carried to the chair," Dr. Sweet declared. Dr. August Squire, former Sing Sing physician who has witnessed 138 electrocutions here, told International News Service that only one of them had to be carried to the chair. Both physicians said that, in their opinion, electrocution is the most painless form of execution yet devised. "It is almost instantaneous," Dr. Sweet explained. "It requires only one-fifth of a second until consciousness disappears. I don't know what it is but something seems to buoy up condemned persons just before they go to the chair. I suppose, some of them actually go to the chair with an excited feeling, oblivious of their surroundings, as if their thoughts are in another world."

Dr. Sweet said that electrocution has become such a scientific procedure that no longer is the head, body or legs of the victim burned by contact with the electrodes which the current is turned on. He added that pathologists now take part in the autopsy for the purpose of examining the brain cells of the electrocuted criminal to determine whether, as supposed by medical authorities, the brain cells of criminals are smaller than those of normal persons.

Both Are Calm

A desperate serenity has come over both Mrs. Snyder and Gray, according to other attaches of Sing Sing. Mrs. Snyder has almost ceased to have emotional seizures and Gray is deadly calm. Mrs. Snyder talked at length with her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, who is president of the department of the Auxiliary, assisted by Department Historian Mrs. Elmsdell. The department commander, A. T. Dawson of Wm. McKinley Camp of Norwalk, was the installing officer for Milne camp, with the department adjt., Comrade Davis, assisting.

DEEDS ARE PASSED FOR RUBINOW BLOCK

Maurice Diamond Completes Deal For Main-Maple St. Property; Price About $45,000.

The Rubinow Block at Main and Maple streets at the south-end was sold last night to Maurice Diamond of Hartford, proprietor of the Self Service shoe store which is located in the building. Although no statement as to the money involved was made, it is understood to have been around $45,000. The probability of this deal was disclosed some time ago but the deeds were not signed until last night.

In addition to the shoe store, there are two other places of business in the block, an Economy Grocery store and Florence's Delicatessen. The lease of the former expires next August but that of the latter runs to 1930. Mr. Rubinow said he was selling the property because the new addition to his apparel shop at 841 Main street "makes it necessary for me to devote all my time to conducting my fast growing retail business." Mr. Rubinow bought the Main and Maple street property in 1916 from the Eldridge estate. George W. Strant's feed store occupied the property at the time. The present building is so erected that two additional stories may be easily added. It has a Main street frontage of 45 feet and a depth of 85 feet. The building was erected in 1923.

Mr. Diamond is planning some alterations on the building.

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda beverage take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour acid, gassy stomach and relief will come instantly. For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentation in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. GRADE CROSSING

The deadly grade crossing, fatal enough in the old days but a constant menace in these times of motor travel, has emphasized its evil presence in the sacrifice of two Manchester lives—useful, exemplary lives snuffed out during the orderly performance of the day's affairs. This Buckland tragedy was no consequence of hairbrained recklessness, but of the combination of death trap conditions with low visibility and sound deadening produced by heavy fog; anyone might have fallen victim to the situation.

It may be true that grade railroad crossing fatalities constitute only a small proportion of the killings in which automobiles figure in this state, but nevertheless such crossings are in their very nature an ever-present peril of peculiar definiteness. Here at least is one hazard that is susceptible of elimination. We know perfectly well how to put an end to the killing of human beings on railroad crossings, even if we have not found the way to preventing collisions on the highway. The method is, of course, to do away with the crossings at grade. That would be a positive solution.

Presumably there is at the back of the mind of authority some sort of ambition looking to the gradual elimination of all grade crossings, either by bridges, underpasses or the closing of highways not absolutely necessary; and now and then here and there progress is being made toward such a goal. But it is discouragingly slow. There are still scores of perilous grade crossings in Connecticut, waiting for the execution of tragedies like that at Buckland last night.

This state is spending vastly generous sums on its highways. It would be well to the point if the policy of grade crossing elimination were to figure more actively in that expenditure.

SCOTCH STORIES

Clan Gordon, Order of Scottish Clans, speaking for Hartford folk of Caledonian origin, has surprisingly uttered a vigorous protest against the flood of funny stories that for the past two or three years have been girding, with constantly increasing rigor, at the traditional thrift of the Scotch. Surprisingly, too, because it is so extremely rare for a Scot to beg for quarter punishment, he blows the gets those of tongue, fist or sword. And because, far more than any constitutional conservatism in the matter of expenditures, an outstanding characteristic of the Scot is a dry, intellectual and utterly unconquerable sense of humor. Without neither the humor nor the thrift could the Scotch people not only have survived in the lovely but unfertile and misty land of their nativity but have sent out to the four quarters of the globe so many and such stalwart builders of civilization.

To be sure, the "Scotch" story has long since become largely bromidic. And most of the tales are such as already have done yeoman service as character jibes at all kinds of folks from hard-shell Yankees, through the gamut of German, Irish, Jews and even Negroes, and are no more Scotch stories than they are Eskimo stories save for the telling of them in a burry vernacular.

Still, it is rather amazing that Scotsmen anywhere should be found willing either to dignify the ruck of poor jokes as being really founded on characteristics of their race, or to indicate that the storm-beaten hides of their grandfather's grandsons are thin enough to notice the puny darts of the joke-smiths.

And just at this time, so it happens, along comes Sir Harry Lauder, w/ his tongue in his jowl, "Roamin' in the Gloamin'" in a popular magazine, telling as many stories on the caniness and carefulness of his fellow countrymen, himself included, as anybody else—and better ones. Surely, Clan Gordon would not accuse Sir Harry of being a libeler of Scotia. As a matter of fact it is only the empty of head who would think less of the Scots for their hard-headed watchfulness over the hawbees, even if that watchfulness were carried rationally to the extent to which the "Scotch" stories point; which of course is not anywhere near true. Especially in the present temporary state of extravagant living, debt and utter wastefulness in which so many Americans have been living, sensible folks realize that thrift of the Scotch kind, which is neither mean nor avaricious but merely wonderfully sane, is likely to prove the salvation of the country because the seeds of it are in so many of this country's people. Scotch thrift is pretty sure to be recognized as a blessed thing in this country before many years—so why should Scots let silly folk get their goats by merely advertising that rational quality.

DEMOCRATIC ROW

There is likely to be a fine rumpus at, in and around the Jackson day dinner of national Democratic leaders at Washington on Thursday, when William Gibbs McAdoo makes a speech and Governor Al Smith won't be there to answer him; when, also, the dries in the Democratic party—and they represent many electoral votes if not such a tremendous lot of individual votes—make their expected assault on the Smith candidacy.

There is a quality about Al Smith that is sometimes lost sight of. He once showed it when he told William Randolph Hearst that if he couldn't be nominated for governor of New York without that gentleman's aid he preferred not to be nominated at all. It would surprise those Democrats who are so enthusiastic over his Presidential candidacy more than it would observers outside that party, if, in case of too strong a dry showing at Washington this week, Al were to jack up the whole contract and quite casually decline to have anything to do with the Presidential fight—at least in the capacity of a candidate.

There are certain reasons for believing that Smith may be taking his Presidential boom much less seriously than his followers. It is doubtful if he would either court a certain licking or consent to obtain the nomination through a compromise with the violent McAdoo dries. We rather expect that the Democrats, in spite of the apparent strength of the Smith boom, may have to pick another candidate before they get through.

AMANULLAH

Ameer Amanullah, ruler of Afghanistan, has come to Europe with his wife, his crown prince, his daughters, his magnificent uniforms and 180 trunks. Also with oodles of cash with which to purchase more magnificence and presumably a few sporting novelties in the way of machine guns, for he is a mighty soldier and filled with the ardor of the militarist. Ameer Amanullah's domain is that squeezed-in mountain region between Persia, Siberia and India to which Kipling's Young British Soldier refers as the place where "the women come out to cut up the remains." Its folks are a tough lot in a fight.

It is no slouch of a country, as Central Asiatic countries go—about 255,000 square miles, or not much smaller than the state of Texas, and has some five millions of the most turbulent, violent, homicidal ladies and gentlemen on the face of the earth. Ladies and gentlemen is used advisedly, for the Afghans regard themselves as the very salt of the earth and each particular Afghan considers himself the saltiest of the lot. Nowhere is there so much bragging of lineage, not even among Spanish cigarette makers or the Society of Colonial Dames.

Amanullah went first to Italy, where he was effusively greeted by Sig. Mussolini. He is in Europe, he gives out, to absorb European methods of civilization—which is probably all in your eye.

With the Duce already a subject of some nervousness, it is to be expected that his relations with this new guest, who is entirely capable of making an immense amount of trouble for Britain in India, some day, will be as closely observed as possible by Downing street.

RIVER INJUNCTION

The United States Supreme Court regards less facetiously than the Lowell Courier-Citizen the proposal of the State of Massachusetts to cut down the flowage of the Connecticut by diverting waters of the Ware and Swift rivers to the Boston metropolitan water supply. The whole business of this state's protest has struck the Lowell paper as ludicrous and Boston generally as unfriendly—most unfriendly. The United States Supreme Court, however, which even in Massachusetts commands some small measure of respect, has decided that the matter is serious enough to be worthy of the closest examination; so it has granted the state of Connecticut permission to file suit

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(35) Connecticut—A Fighting State.

Within a short time after the first settlements had been made in Connecticut, several settlers had been wantonly killed by Pequot Indians. Prompt and emphatic action which the colonists took to terminate the outrages secured for them exemption from Indian depredations for all time to come.

On May 1, 1637, the General Court ordered an offensive war against the Pequots. Ninety men were levied and placed under the command of Captain Mason. The small band took ship to Narragansett Bay and then marched overland to the Pequot fort near Stonington where a surprise attack resulted in the death of between 500 and 700 Indians. Only five of those in the fort at the time escaped. Seven were taken prisoners. Captain Mason's own loss was two killed and twenty wounded.

From that time to the Revolution, Connecticut bore her share in Indian and colonial wars; her soldiers distinguishing themselves in almost every engagement. The colony kept about one-third of New England forces in the field during King Philip's War (1675-76). During Queen Anne's war (1702-13), the colony kept around 700 men in the field and sent more than 1,000 to fight in King George's War (1744-48.) Connecticut's record during the French and Indian War (1745-63) was not excelled by any other colony. Each new call for troops found her ready with more than her quota.

WASHINGTON LETTER BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Jan. 10.—Some of the folks back home seem to have some queer notions about their representatives in Congress. For instance, out in Multnomah county, Oregon, they call Franklin F. Korell, who is 33 years old and almost a veteran of congressional campaigns, "the baby congressman."

"Why send a schoolboy to Washington instead of a grownup, two-fisted man?" demanded the political opponents of Korell, although he had been a member of the Oregon legislature in 1921 and had run for Congress as far back as 1922.

When Korell got to Washington he became very sure that he was no "baby congressman," for he met Congressman George Hamilton Combs of Kansas City, Mo., who is only 26 and thus by all odds the congressional "baby." He hopes the Portland newspaper will carry numerous stories about Combs.

In 1922, Korell experienced an unusual distinction similar to that of Charles E. Hughes, who went to bed one night in November, 1916, as the next president of the United States, and woke up just Charles E. Hughes. Running in a primary for Congress, Korell went to bed nominated and woke to find that his opponent had unexpectedly nosed ahead with a 400 plurality.

Despite all that experience crammed into 24 hours, the Democrats virtually made their election slogan last October against him: "Never send a boy on a man's errand."

Korell attracted attention early this session by his appointment to the important Foreign Affairs Committee. New congressmen seldom win any honors like that in their early years here.

At the same time, Korell got busy shouting against what he insisted was an inadequate appropriation of $1,500,000 for the new federal building in Portland. Loud cheers from back home.

Now Korell proposes legislation to establish national policies for toll bridges which would forbid congressional franchises affecting state land. Korell claims that the state owns the bed and all the shore land of a river, although Congress has control of navigable streams for purposes of navigation and commerce.

Two congressional hoppers have been loaded with bridge bills, and a more or less similar principle is involved in connection with the Boulder Dam project and the Muscle Shoals development, so Korell's ideas are making some impression.

Especially are they making an impression back in Portland, it appears, for Congress has permitted a private concern to build a bridge from Washington to Oregon, over the Columbia river, below Portland. The Portlanders say this bridge, when built, will prevent growth of navigation for Portland. The Washington congressional delegation favored the bridge and the Korell has responded to the claim that it can't be built because it involves the use of some

HOUDINI'S WIDOW TO TAKE UP WAND LAID DOWN BY MAGICIAN

New York—Following in the footsteps of her politically-minded sisters here and in England who have succeeded to their deceased husbands' places in government position, Mrs. Harry Houdini, widow of the famous magician, plans to take up the magician's wand laid down by her husband's dying hand.

Mme. Houdini announced her intention before an invited audience of newspapermen and others assembled in a vacant store in the upper Fifties streets, when to demonstrate her fitness to carry her husband's mantle, she "froze" an Indian "medicine man" in a cake of ice.

The ice was formed around him by the application of solidified carbon dioxide gas. It was explained that the freezing process had taken twenty-six minutes. The man remained in the ice some fifteen minutes more, and then a hole was chopped in the ice to expose his face. The ice was real.

Mrs. Houdini said she plans to combine the trick with legerdemain from her husband's repertory, including an escape from handcuffs or a straightjacket. When her husband was alive she assisted him in his stage work under an assumed name.

Department of Labor reports show that 107,257 children 14 and 15 years of age received first regular employment certificates in 1926. This is a gain of five per cent over 1925.

NO MORE BOLOGNA IN THIS LOCK-UP

Lockport, N. Y.—Niagara County jail has seen the last of bologna. At least as long as Sheriff James A. Campbell is on the job. The first official act of the new sheriff was to strike bologna off the jail menu.

Sheriff Campbell is also thinking about installing a civilian chef. Unwilling guests of the jail now act in that capacity and it isn't very often that a good culinary artist is "in" long enough to be of any value.

THE STORY THUS FAR

The story is told in the Indian territory and along the Kansas border in the "Boomers" fight for the opening of Oklahoma to settlement. Chief characters are:

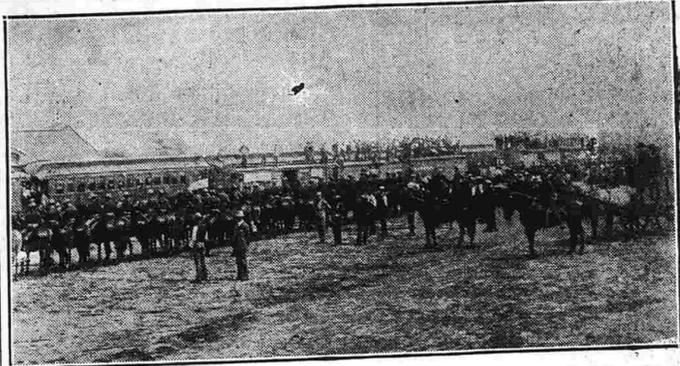

TONY HARRISON, orphaned at 13 when his father was shot in a poker game.

PANWEE BILL, adventurer, teacher, Indian interpreter, showman.

JOE CRAIG, who takes Tony to the bar K brand.

RITA, his daughter, with whom Tony later falls in love.

Moore is one of the chief enemies of the movement to open Oklahoma. DAVID PAYNE, leader of the "Boomers" and a wild west show tour. When he returns he is unable to keep from declaring his love to Rita and when she admits she is engaged to another man, Payne organizes his own show. Tony goes with it. It fails and Payne is persuaded by the city of Wichita to go there and head the "Boomers" in a new show. The show finally is won. On April 22, 1889, the gun is fired that sends 20,000 homeseekers scrambling over the border in a wild rush. Tony stakes a claim for a widow and two children.

CHAPTER XLII

HE waited. Before long the wagons began to come skirting around the hill. He saw spirited races as with the first sight of the little valley men became obsessed with the single purpose of having part of it for themselves.

A family in a light buckboard dashed up to the claim next to his. They unloaded a spade, which the father put in the hands of his young son. Earth was overturned; scrambling over the border in a wild rush. Tony stakes a claim for a widow and two children.

They were crazed, these people—mad! Two men swinging from their saddles and racing to the earth. Words—a blow—and then a killing. With a shudder, he passed on. Men were not normal human beings today; they were beasts. A primitive lust possessed them, and it was as though time had rolled centuries away, stripping them of their vestiges of civilization, revealing them in all the stark savagery of prototypes ages remote. A place to live, to call their own, to wrest a living from their bare hands; but first to possess—deadly to him who would take away.

Riders continued to fall behind him as the powerful Cherokee carried him on at an easy lope. Horses were jaded and lathered with sweat. Here was one that had stumbled and was unable to rise—too spent, there was one that had run his heart out and had died.

Fools, he thought, to demand the impossible of their beasts—to run them frantically until they dropped in exhaustion. No horse could stand it—not even the tough, wiry little cow ponies—not the even Cherokee, which moved beneath him like a piece of tireless machinery.

Ahead of him the ground dipped a little. He passed a man in a bulky, odd looking vehicle in a place like this but no other than hundreds of other queer contrivances he had seen. Anything that man might travel without tiring, the man sprang to the ground and Tony nodded approvingly. Here was choice bottom land and it had been passed by.

So he came to the Cimarron, swollen by rain and running red with crooked soil. Here was more confusion than ever. Men cursed and shouted and tried to urge their mounts into the current. A wagon lodged firmly in the mud and abandoned. A drowned horse. Women and children crying. Someone was saying, despairingly, "Quick—sand!" and shaking his head.

Tony Harrison felt a quickening pity. Here was tragedy, and it was just the beginning. Thousands more were coming to add to the confusion and the despair. There Cimarron river—and these people were desperate with the knowledge that thousands would be there ahead of them and the fear that they would be too late.

The Cimarron—where hope would abandon the weak and the fearful; where hundreds would see their little plans go to smash as wagons would go to pieces in the crossing and horses drown.

Here was where experience and a cool head were needed, but there were many who knew next to nothing about horses, who were excitable and without purpose.

A man and a woman in a wagon were quarrelling. Hub deep in the soil of the river bed, their wagon stuck and the horses refused to pull. The man gave it up as a futile task, and snuffed and shouted at his wife as she fussed about.

"Get out and put your shoulder to the wheel," Tony commanded. "And you," to the woman, "grab the reins and give 'em the whip."

The man, startled into action at the sharp note of authority in Harrison's voice, jumped out in a tight, angry, and ran back and pushed. Tony, urging Cherokee into the river, seized one of the horses by the bridle.

"All right, now—the whip," the woman lashed suddenly reared up ahead of him, a town of tents and the milling men and—bedlam, the land office, and he heard a man say, "They tell me three hundred and twenty acres were set aside by the land office for the town of Guthrie. Three times that many have been staked already, and the same thing's probably happened down in Oklahoma City. And still they're coming."

Still they were coming. A train was pulling in and Tony Harrison saw men scramble from it, too impatient to wait for it to stop, and roll over and over in the dirt beside the tracks.

The failure of the Springer bill would leave 50,000 people without government of any kind, for the appropriation bill amendment provided for nothing but the opening. There would be thievery and murder and all forms of outlawry; the only salvation would be a united citizenry in the cities to provide charters and ordinances and abide by them, even though they would have nothing more behind them than the sanction of the day-to-day acquiescence of the people.

All this Panwee Bill had made clear to him—a tract of land peopled by 50,000 prospective citizens, the majority of them law-abiding, the rest with an eye to mischief. And no one at the head of things.

It would be a test—a test of man's decency and fairness—and whether chaotic beginnings with a fair name or a black one would rest with a few strong men.

The name of Bill Tilghman came to his mind—Tilghman, whose fame as a peace officer spread beyond the borders of several states. Tilghman, he knew, was in the race. If there were more like him in the rush, Oklahoma would not lack for men to put the fear of God in the hearts of the lawless.

"They ought to make Tilghman marshal of Guthrie, Cherokee; and they ought to persuade Panwee Bill to stay."

He rode on, and marveled at the smooth stride of the powerful stallion beneath his feet. He was still passing the riders by the dozen; some of them tense, anxious, staring straight ahead, others halting him with amiable cries.

And Guthrie suddenly reared up ahead of him, a town of tents and the milling men and—bedlam, the land office, and he heard a man say, "They tell me three hundred and twenty acres were set aside by the land office for the town of Guthrie. Three times that many have been staked already, and the same thing's probably happened down in Oklahoma City. And still they're coming."

Still they were coming. A train was pulling in and Tony Harrison saw men scramble from it, too impatient to wait for it to stop, and roll over and over in the dirt beside the tracks.

Car—the city that was made in a day; Tony Harrison, without plan or purpose, suddenly finds himself in business. In the next chapter.

London Lancet, medical officers who have carried out continuous supervision of children from prenatal existence to school age all agree that the incidence of defects in such supervised children is far less than in those who have not had continuous supervision.

Superstition Is Born Of Coincidence

By Olive Roberts Barton

I suppose the superstition about birds in the house started with Poe's raven. A bird in the house is worth two in the bush, but a bird that flies into your house, so goes the old law, is much better out in a tree.

Some time ago I was writing at my desk, when suddenly a large shape fitted silently and darkly over my head, circled twice about the room, and disappeared as silently and as mysteriously as it had come.

It was that time of day "between the dark and the daylight," when things in the semi gloom take on an eerie meaning.

I laid down my pen and not waiting to investigate left the room entirely to its new occupant. Then thinking what a goose I was, I returned and snapped on a light. There on a window-bracket sat an owl!

After a bit of a chase we caught him, and great was the excitement thereof. The calmest person was the owl himself. He kept still and waited. I wanted to keep him, but where should I get the dozen mice a day the book said he must have? So we opened a window and he flew, noiselessly, off into the night.

I suppose I should have prepared to meet my fate. What ill fortune had grinningly sent his messenger to warn me? Why wasn't I properly frightened? Because he was a little late. The bad luck had preceded him by about two weeks, and things looked up quite considerably after his visit.

Incidentally, that tricky old Jack-in-the-box, is behind all superstition. Lindbergh carries no mascot. He prides himself, or his friends do, on the fact that he "leaves nothing to luck."

Spilled salt, a ladder to walk under, the umbrella raised in the house—idiotic! We should have outgrown it long before this, but we haven't.

"Ideal Fashions"

That our social life, and even our business life, revolves very largely about food, none of us can deny. Business lunches are as much evidence as bridge teas. Why not? If warmth and good fellowship are born of eating together, on with the food, say I.

THE PRINCIPLE OF DEODORANTS

After plentiful use of soap and water, we come to the disquieting realization that there still remain unpleasant body odors which cannot thus be removed.

Let us study the matter. We find that in the laboratory of the body many wonderful chemical changes are constantly in progress, that waste matter results and that through the pores. These deposits, containing many chemicals of unpleasant odor, are not always soluble in water, and not removable by soap. So we must find some element in which they are soluble or which neutralizes them.

This is the principle underlying all deodorants today. A few drops of liquid cresols compound in the equivalent of a glass of water, used as a wash, will afford relief. Dilute alcohol or liquor antiseptic compound are also good. Borated talcum is an absorbent and corrective.

Besides these, there are many fine proprietary articles, both in liquid and in powder form, as well as creams.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUMNER

There's nothing like mention of roast turkey and a haggis but torte to stir up commotion. Talk as we will about the "grossness" of food and our interest in "the finer things of life." Dozens of letters have depended upon me following my recent outbreak about meals and eating once upon a time and now. One of the most interesting follows:

"Not long ago I was put upon a plain milk diet with the strictest orders to touch nothing else. Do you know it alarmed me to see how this diet pulled out the props from under my entire life? It appalled me to realize what a major part of my life had been dedicated to the preparation and eating of food.

"My social life was positively wrecked. I had attended at least one bridge luncheon a week; we had dined out one or two nights; I was in the habit of meeting my husband or some member of the family downtown for lunch once or twice a week; often served afternoon tea, and here was I tied to my milk bottle. It meant a cessation of all social life during the time I was on that diet. Lectures, dances, even theater engagements were either dropped or postponed before or after or during.

"Why don't you just take your milk with you and go anyway? My husband would ask. But can you imagine me going to the City Club luncheon in honor of Edna St. Vincent Millay, stopping the waitress from depositing the chicken patty at my plate, asking for a glass, and pouring out my milk while all my near neighbors had to have explanations? I could not. One could hardly expect a private invitation and to see one's hostess leaving her delicious food untouched. I just stayed at home.

"But it was even worse at home. My family like good food, and for years I had given it in an air-tight jar with a large juicy slice of raw potato or apple. These stay moist longer than damp paper.

Before mending a hole in gloves, buttonhole around it carefully with the finest needle you have. Then catch together the buttonhole edge.

"Ideal Fashions"

by Jean Belle Hamilton

That our social life, and even our business life, revolves very largely about food, none of us can deny. Business lunches are as much evidence as bridge teas. Why not? If warmth and good fellowship are born of eating together, on with the food, say I.

THE PRINCIPLE OF DEODORANTS

After plentiful use of soap and water, we come to the disquieting realization that there still remain unpleasant body odors which cannot thus be removed.

Let us study the matter. We find that in the laboratory of the body many wonderful chemical changes are constantly in progress, that waste matter results and that through the pores. These deposits, containing many chemicals of unpleasant odor, are not always soluble in water, and not removable by soap. So we must find some element in which they are soluble or which neutralizes them.

This is the principle underlying all deodorants today. A few drops of liquid cresols compound in the equivalent of a glass of water, used as a wash, will afford relief. Dilute alcohol or liquor antiseptic compound are also good. Borated talcum is an absorbent and corrective.

Besides these, there are many fine proprietary articles, both in liquid and in powder form, as well as creams.

This And That In Feminine Lore

While it is still in your memory, have one or two of those handsome etched Christmas cards framed at The Old Wood Shop, 15 Pitkin street and enjoy them for months to come.

One of the readers of this column has just phoned a successful way of removing ink stains. She made a solution of a half teaspoon hydrochloric acid in a half cup water, dipped in the stained cloth then, rinsed, washed it out and no trace remained of the ink, and the linen was uninjured.

Topeka society reporters sometimes are deeply humiliated by typographical errors. Once upon a time our heart went out to one. She had put a deal of time and pains into an account of a swell reception at the home of a noted Topeka physician who was exquisitely decorated with "syringes." When the paper came out and she doctored the story, her heart froze when she came to that sentence. The printer had set it, "The house," spagetti, which was exquisitely decorated with "syringes!" The terrible thing about some typographical errors is that they seem so fitting.—Charles H. Sessions in Topeka (Kan.) Capital.

Tomato cups as the Italians do them, make a most appetizing hot meal. The tomato cups are filled with cooked spaghetti, which has been put in this mixture, salt, pepper, a pinch of sugar and a bit of butter are placed in the shell. The spaghetti follows and cheese is sprinkled over the top. Grease well a baking dish, cut rounds of bread, removing a small piece from the center, set a tomato on each piece and bake in a hot oven, taking care that the tomatoes do not soften and break.

If you are among those interested in shedding avoirdupois, see that your fruit shelf is well stocked. Fruits are a boon to people trying to reduce. They are sufficiently bulky to give a sense of comfortable fullness. At the beginning of the day especially they furnish sugars to start the work with a vim. A certain amount of sugars and starches is necessary. Lean meats, butter and skimmed milk supply protein and calcium; vegetables supply minerals and vitamins. Crisp buttered toast may always be a part of the morning meal if limited in quantity.

Authorities now tell us that the tomato rejoices in an element, Vitamin C, which prevents scurvy. They claim it is not weakened in power by heating or drying. Belgium serves the tomato or "love apple" with scrambled eggs at breakfast; Italy cooks it with spaghetti, rice or chicken. An English cook book offers it with whipped cream.

Bows play a new part in the late winter fashions which means that they will continue fashionable during the spring months. Tailored costumes have their bows; there are often blouses often tie their collars at the throat and their belt lines with bows. A lovely new evenness of it is deposited on the skin through the pores. These deposits, containing many chemicals of unpleasant odor, are not always soluble in water, and not removable by soap. So we must find some element in which they are soluble or which neutralizes them.

This is the principle underlying all deodorants today. A few drops of liquid cresols compound in the equivalent of a glass of water, used as a wash, will afford relief. Dilute alcohol or liquor antiseptic compound are also good. Borated talcum is an absorbent and corrective.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

CHILD'S BODY DELICATE ENGINE NEEDING ADJUSTMENT OFTEN

By Dr. Morris Fishbein
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

In the annual report of Sir George Newman, chief medical officer of the Board of Education of Great Britain, the statement is made that from one-fourth to one-third of all children entering school need medical attention.

Most frequently this attention is required not for some specific defect, but for a general application to the entire body. In other words, the child's body is like a delicate engine that requires certain necessary adjustments in view of the fact that greater stress is to be put upon it.

Faults

The general terms for describing such a condition are malnourishment, debility, delicate condition, nervousness, and so forth. The figures vary in delicate conditions, depending upon the severity of the examination.

It is possible that much of this condition is dependent on heredity and that even the best of scientific attention may not be able to modify greatly the percentage of physically defective children.

On the other hand, such disturbances as errors of vision, decaying teeth, and difficulties of hearing due to secondary infection may certainly be corrected to the advantage of the child.

Classifying Types

More and more the attention of physicians is being turned to a classification of human beings according to constitutional types. Sir George Newman recognizes two main types, one of which he describes as catarrhal and the other as neuropathic.

A catarrhal child has a tendency toward infection of the tonsils, the adenoids, and of the lymph glands. It also is likely to suffer frequently with colds and to show signs of eczema and similar complaints.

Neuropathic children are usually pale and thin, listless and apathetic in appearance, but excitable and liable to habit spasm, headaches and unexplainable fevers.

Superstition Is Born Of Coincidence

By Olive Roberts Barton

I suppose the superstition about birds in the house started with Poe's raven. A bird in the house is worth two in the bush, but a bird that flies into your house, so goes the old law, is much better out in a tree.

Some time ago I was writing at my desk, when suddenly a large shape fitted silently and darkly over my head, circled twice about the room, and disappeared as silently and as mysteriously as it had come.

It was that time of day "between the dark and the daylight," when things in the semi gloom take on an eerie meaning.

I laid down my pen and not waiting to investigate left the room entirely to its new occupant. Then thinking what a goose I was, I returned and snapped on a light. There on a window-bracket sat an owl!

After a bit of a chase we caught him, and great was the excitement thereof. The calmest person was the owl himself. He kept still and waited. I wanted to keep him, but where should I get the dozen mice a day the book said he must have? So we opened a window and he flew, noiselessly, off into the night.

Loughran Once K. O.'d Heeneey, Report Says

But It Was In Training; However This Gives Dopesters a Line on His Ability to Take It.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

New York, Jan. 10.—As Jack Sharkey was threatening to turn up absent today when summoned to go under the anaesthetic so that the State Athletic Commission could diagnose him right before the out of the portrait for Friday night, up rose a circumstance upon its rear legs to insinuate that a large time might be had by all on the occasion in question.

Tom Heeneey, among other things, has been an irresponsible chin during his brief career in America. He was hit full upon the beard many times and off in the Paulino and Risko fights, so that it was with vast disbelief that I was informed that, strictly with the aid of his frontispiece, he had halted an official but none the less influential punch in practice the first day he boxed in this country and that he was out on his arch supporters.

Hit By Loughran
All of them got that way at the last once, of course, and in the fact that the punching was said to have been done by Tommy Loughran serves to leave one slightly agog. According to some accounts, Loughran couldn't break an egg because he can't afford to take a chance like that with his hands, which would seem to make Heeneey about as tough as a water lily if it wasn't for several considerations. One of them is that Heeneey really has stood up under punishment in the ring; another that Loughran's punches aren't the lower of the two.

Still, the fact that an alleged dot and dash man had hit what was thought to be one of the most durable chins extant and apparently had found it somewhat pliable and open to reason leaves one not so dumb. For, it Heeneey hasn't the chin for it, he hasn't much else.

Harvey Talks
Some color, too, was lent the tale today when Eddie Harvey, associated with the Heeneey management, admitted that all had gone none too well in the Loughran work out.

"Heeneey got hit plenty," was Harvey's comment on the story, which coming from a fight manager, was tantamount to conceding the worst. However, no fight manager has submitted to a four-week interview and Harvey isn't any great hand for innovations.

"But," said he, calling upon the inevitable qualification with rare presence of mind, "you must remember that Heeneey developed in this country. The way of the right is not true, anyhow, and if it is that is Sharkey's business, not mine. I am always in favor of Brannigans, provided my role is strictly that of an innocent bystander. I dearly love to see big, strong men write in agony upon the floor and, if all that strength and concentration with his punches and torso, my chances of being diverted are all the better. It may be recollected that Sharkey himself was tough but not to the point of irritation against Dempsey.

However, in spite of what happened or what didn't in the Loughran workout, Heeneey must remain as one in the ring until he has been knocked out and that his total acquaintance with the floor has been strictly a matter of heel and toe contact, barring a split second in the first Paulino fight, he bowed ed up then through the incident was one in which honor had been sullied, which is one of the things that serves to make honor man's best friend or something.

There is only one thing I like better than to see a fighter knocked down and that is to see him get up again. From my standpoint, it is a fool thing to do, of course, but I must admit to those who do it are hard bimboes to beat. Anyhow, I will have to see more of this man who got up the only time he was knocked down before I will admit that his jaw has a porcelain inlay.

Jerry Fay Shocked at Folwell's Death

Compares His Coach's Loss To Grid World With That Of Walter Camp.

The death of Robert "Bob" C. Folwell, famous college football coach, in Philadelphia night before last is felt as keenly in football circles as that of the late Walter Camp, according to Director Jerry Fay of the Manchester Community Club. Fay played professional football under Folwell the last two years and was much distressed when learned of his death.

Coach Folwell was picked as an All-American half-back while playing at the University of Pennsylvania. Following his graduation, he coached a year at Lafayette College, four at Washington & Jefferson, five at his Alma Mater, the University of Penn., and five years at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Two years ago Folwell coached the Philadelphia Quakers, winners of the American League football championship. Fay played tackle on this team. Last year, Folwell coached the Atlantic City Pros, of which Fay was also a member.

Folwell's death was a complete surprise to the football world. He received an injury to his hip while playing college football. It was this same injury that brought about his death. He underwent an operation on his hip last week Tuesday and was believed to be on the road to recovery. Late Monday, however, he suffered a relapse and sank rapidly. He was 52 years old. He had a pleasing personality that made him liked by all Fay said.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS
At New York—George Courtney, Oklahoma middleweight, kayoed Jess Stringham, Salt Lake City, in second round; Lou Barba, New York heavyweight, stopped Henry Moesta, Baltimore, in first round; Joey Kaufman, New York lightweight, won decision over Louis Vincent of Ohio, six rounds; Rene De Vos of Belgium, so-called European, middleweight champion, kayoed Willie Walker, New York, in sixth round; Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, drew with Tommy Jordan, Brooklyn, six.

At Boston—Ernie Schaf, Elizabeth, N. J., heavyweight, outpointed King Solomon, Panama, 10; Roy Mitchell, Halifax, N. S., scored technical knockout over Gus Berger, New York, in 10th round.

At Philadelphia—Fighting Rosambloom, New York, outpointed Godfrey Johnson, Seattle, Wash., 10.

pened or what didn't in the Loughran workout, Heeneey must remain as one in the ring until he has been knocked out and that his total acquaintance with the floor has been strictly a matter of heel and toe contact, barring a split second in the first Paulino fight, he bowed ed up then through the incident was one in which honor had been sullied, which is one of the things that serves to make honor man's best friend or something.

CASE OF GALLOWAY CITES UNCERTAINTY OF BASEBALL; EVANS

Chance May Come With Detroit to Repeat His Brilliant Season of 1922.

By BILLY EVANS.
The major league sensation of today is very often the minor league performer of tomorrow.

That isn't literally true, but in a sense it best explains the uncertainty a baseball manager and club owner is up against in making his selection of players.

Recently the wires carried the story that Chick Galloway, on whom major league clubs have previously had and who was sent to Milwaukee in a trade, had come back to the majors via the Detroit Tigers.

The case of Chick Galloway, I regard as a concrete example of the great uncertainty that goes with the game of baseball, particularly from a major league standpoint where the highest point of efficiency is demanded.

Just 10 years ago, Chick Galloway made his baseball debut in professional circles as a member of the Atlanta team of the Southern Association. His previous baseball connection had been confined to the collegiate brand as player and coach at Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

Galloway joined Atlanta in the fall of 1912 and played in the field but was weak at the bat, hitting only .183. The following season he started, jumped his batting to .263 a matter of 80 points, and looked so good he was bought by the Philadelphia Athletics.

Reporting to the Athletics in the fall of 1913, Galloway was immediately given a chance to prove his worth with Connie Mack's miffed team. He played in 17 games, but found his league pitching more than tough, as he batted only .143.

Connie Mack realizing that Galloway had come to the majors with only one year's experience in professional circles, hardly expected him to step right into the lineup. The following season he took part in 98 games, showing improvement in all features of play.

However, it was not until 1921 that he was definitely established as the regular shortstop on the Athletics. That season he batted .265, a big increase over the previous year when his mark was but .202.

Without a doubt, the season of 1922 stands out as the big year of Galloway's career. The experts rated him the most improved ball player in the American League for that season. A majority of them selecting their all-star teams from the junior circuit honored Galloway by naming him for the position of shortstop.

Since the figure of .324 at bat in 155 games that year.

Unquestionably 1922 was the high spot in Chick's career. I went out in the limb myself with the prediction that Connie Mack's shortstop troubles were ended. Galloway then Galloway has played brilliantly and erratically, never quite reaching the top.

For five years, Mack jockeyed with Galloway, hoping that he ultimately would make good on such much play, but at the close of the 1927 season on him. Asking and getting waivers from all major league clubs, he was passed on to the minors, only to be re-created by George Moriarty of the Tigers.

By Jack Travener's throwing isn't handicapped by his injured finger, Galloway is almost certain to warm the bench, but if Travener is unable to play Chick will get his second chance to prove his worth with a real good club, after having been passed along to the minors.

Mr. O'Goofy just asked if those 600 millionaires at Tex Rickard's banquet were all former heavy-weight champions.

No, not at all. For the six-day bike racers were there, too, and they're not millionaires, although they can flash a long roll.

Cook, the Jes hockeyist, was there, and he's not so wealthy, either, although he can cut quite a figure.

Speaking of football improving college relations, you'll almost think that the Princeton-Harvard, Navy-Army eleven were filled with relations by marriage.

Maybe it's just as well the Navy and Army did break off. Now we can save the grenades for the next war.

Maybe we should send Lindbergh to Annapolis and West Point.

Middle Distance Runners Sought By U. S. Officials

Americans Will Face Great Runners in Next Olympics; Lloyd Hahn Has Two Capable Mates in Cox and Romig.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
NEA Service Sports Writer
Feeling fairly well set for the sprint races with such stars as Padgett and McAllister, the American Olympic Committee is setting its glasses on the indoor tracks, scouting for good middle-distance talent.

Since time too humiliating to recall, the United States has failed to win a race of more than 200 meters in the Olympic games and in 1924 the sacred ground was trespassed when Harold Abrahams of England won the 100-meter race from a flock of the best sprinters that ever represented America.

For years Lawson Robertson, head coach of the American team, has been praying for youngsters to go in for the quarter-mile, the half and the mile, but only a few have had the tenacity to stick to it and the field from which to pick the 1928 runners necessarily will be smaller.

Of the best of the American flock—Lloyd Hahn, Bill Cox and Romig—are now in training for the indoor season and will continue through for the outdoor trials.

Hahn recently resumed training after a long rest and Romig a few days ago put on his togs and won a cross-country race near Philadelphia. Cox, a student at Penn State College, has been in almost continuous training since the summer.

Hahn, because of the many races he won last year indoors and the records he set, is considered to be the best chance for American points in Amsterdam. His victory over Edvin Wide, the Swedish star, should be discounted, however, because none of the foreign runners know much about the wooden track.

Bill Cox, however, may be the leader of the American squad. He is one of the greatest cross-country athletes developed in years having won the national intercollegiate championship two years in succession and he is now training strictly for the flat races.

Romig, also a Penn State product, was an ace runner and a veteran of the 1924 team and if he goes to Amsterdam it can be taken to mean that he will train in Holland and will be out there trying.

There, of course, will be more runners appointed to the team and one of them may be Johnny Zola, captain of Wisconsin's cross-country team and winner of the last Western Conference race.

Zola at least is serious in his ambition to make the team as he left the class room after the mid-winter examinations and went to work so that he would have enough money to finance himself in the event that he made the squad.

The American middle distance runners will have some of the best in the world to beat at Amsterdam, including Germany's great star, Dr. Otto Peltzer; Paavo Nurmi, Finland's champion and Edvin Wide, the great Swede.

Hahn has beaten Wide, Nurmi has beaten Hahn and Wide and Peltzer have beaten Nurmi and also wiped off the books the great records of Ted Meredith.

But these performances will not

The new senior Life Saving class at the School street Rec starts Wednesday night of next week from 7 until 8. The junior class will be from 10:45 until 11:30 Saturday morning, Jan. 21. The new boys' boxing class starts Monday night of next week from 5 until 6. This is for boys from 8 to 16 years.

The senior class will start the same night. This class has sessions from 7 until 8 on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. The business men's boxing class begins its new term tomorrow night from 5 until 6, it also "convenes" on Fridays at the same hour. This class is proving same popular and is largely attended. Frankie Busch is in charge of all the classes. His work has drawn many favorable comments.

The newly organized Community Club Girls' basketball team will practice at the Harding school gym tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. The boys' team will practice after the girls finish.

A senior boys' basketball league is being organized at the Community Club and Director Jerry Fay hopes to have it started before many more days.

KEEPING DELANEY BUSY.
New York, Jan. 9.—Joe Jacobs, who recently paid $50,000 for Jack Delaney's contract, isn't losing any time in recovering his investment as the regular match for the Bridgeport Conn. heavyweight against Sully Montgomery here a week from to-night and against Cyclone Jack Humbeck, Belgian champion, at Boston on Jan. 20.

Delaney also may be matched to fight Johnny Blisko, of Cleveland, here early in February.

WILL MISS BIG TRAIN
The familiar face of Walter Johnson will be missing in Washington next year for the first time in more than 20 years.

Edna McCourt, Nan Taggart Hit 119 In Girls' League

What is believed to be the highest score made this season in the Girls' Bowling League at Cheney Brothers was hit twice Friday night when Edna McCourt and Nan Taggart both topped 119 timbers into the pit. Edna's other two scores were 93 and 90 and Nan's were 86 and 85. Lillian Merrill's 101 was the only other score above the century mark. The scores follow:

EXPECT FIGHT SOON WITH SANDINO'S MEN
 Managua, Jan. 10.—General Sandino's sharpshooters present a constant menace to marine flyers keeping open communications between Managua and the advance guard of the marine forces drawn up against Sandino's men in the Quilich region. Although a marine plane crashed yesterday in the Quilich region it has not yet been established that it was brought down by snipers' bullets, and the opinion is that it probably failed through engine difficulties.

Sandino's men are gathering strength constantly through new recruits and there is an indication of a movement by the rebels which will soon force the marines into action. The marine forces now are in sufficient numbers and well enough equipped to give battle.

On the west coast reports of Sandino's activities have lent encouragement to the Liberal supporters who have never been reconciled to the marine occupation.

INVAILD BURNED TO DEATH
 Danbury, Conn., Jan. 10.—Frank Coutur, 64 bedridden for more than a month, was burned to death during the night when fire destroyed the home of Peter Kurkul in the Beaver Brook district. Firemen were unable to find the man's body after a search that lasted well into the morning.

The fire apparently started in Coutur's bedroom and authorities believe he may have been smoking a cigarette. The house, a three story structure, was destroyed with a loss of over $10,000.

Kurkul and his wife were not at home.

HINDU NOBLE TO WED AN AMERICAN GIRL
 Bombay, India, Jan. 10.—The former Maharajah of Indore and his American fiancée, Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, Wash., plan to live in California after their marriage, it was learned today. All their plans are being kept secret, it is understood that a California estate already has been purchased.

The ex-Maharajah and Miss Miller are now at Columbia. The date of the marriage probably will be revised owing to the furor caused by the premature publication of their wedding plans.

The sensation in Indore was intensified by the facts that Miss Miller is not a Hindu and that the former Maharajah already has several wives living whom he kept in his harem while he ruled over Indore. His name was given widespread publicity at the time of the attempted abduction of Mumtaz Begum, an Indian dancing girl and the murder of M. Bawla, an Indian mercenary who was said to be in love with her.

The family name of the one time Maharajah is Sir Tokoji Rao Holkar.

IN actual fact as well as name. The Christian Endeavor Society will have small number report a good year's work. Among the most notable of their achievements was a supper given, the proceeds of which was used to help defray the expenses of the pastor and his wife to the C. E. convention in Cleveland. There were four delegates from the local society at its convention, winning an honor pennant for the society. They have $38 in the treasury at the present time. The Sunday school reported a balance of $47 with $50 due to the near future from a trust fund, and $60 owing to the Near East Relief.

The following officers were then elected:
 L. E. Winter, Secretary.
 E. P. Lyman, Treasurer.

H. W. Porter, Member of Standing Committee of three years.
 C. E. Hunt, member of Standing Committee for three years.

The resignation of A. Latham as church clerk was read and accepted with regret. Mr. Latham has served as clerk for the past fourteen years, but owing to increasing deafness and ill health he found it impossible to take the office any longer. Mrs. Florence Badger was elected to become church clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hutchins spent Sunday with relatives in New Britain.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lyman of Plainville spent the week end at the home of James Utley.

John Demesco who teaches at Bloomfield spent the week end at his home on Chestnut Hill.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage. The hostesses are Mrs. William Wolf, Mrs. Raymond Lyman, and Mrs. Phillip Isham.

Monday evening, January 16th, the Piedmont Quartet will give a concert at the church. These four young men from the South are traveling through the North in the interest of Piedmont College, and those who have heard them say they are very fine singers. They come on the invitation of the pastor Rev. Duane Wain.

Rev. Duane Wain preached Sunday morning on "Gain our souls" taking as his text "What shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul." His talk to the children was "The stamp paster."

The annual election of officers of the Sunday School was held Sunday noon with the following result:
 C. E. Hunt, Supt.
 Wm. Wolf, Asst. Supt.
 Margaret Hutchins, Secy. and Treas.
 Howard Squiers, Asst. Secy. and Treas.

Howard Squiers was the leader of the C. E. meeting Sunday evening. His subject was "What prayer can accomplish."

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

A bigamist is a man who believes that divorce is wrong.

SENSE and NONSENSE

A disposition is a good deal like an auto tire. It'll last longer when things are running smooth.

The problem of a lot of young fellows is making the ends of little salary and a big garage bill meet.

Motorist (in service shop)—Are you the young man who is doing that rush job on my car? Youthful repairman—Yes, sir! Motorist—Well, you're still looking well. Did you enjoy your gold-on wedding anniversary?

This week's prize poem: "Shed a tear for Little Nell; she had a car and drove—very fast."

The Passing of the Flivver. Drop a sorrowing tear for the flivver, my dear.

It is losing its gay, gallant battle. At that sound do not jeer when it falls on your ear.

'Tis, also and alack, its death rattle.

Village: A speed trap lined with small buildings.

Earthly blessings are seldom unalloyed. Improved highways mean better drainage and fewer mosquitoes, but more Ford!

An airship maker declares "There will be no flivvers of the air." We are glad that when we remember that "all that goes up must come down."

Text for Motorists. "My record is high."—Job 16:19. "Many shall run to and fro."—Daniel 12:4. "The Lord will take away their round tires."—Isiah 3:16. "The prudent man looketh well to his going."—Proverbs 14:15. "They shall be sorely pained at the report of Tyre."—Isiah 23:4. "And the noise of the rattling of the wheels."—Nahum 3:2. "Finally this from Isiah 30:16:—'We will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue be swift.'"—(Cyclo-cops after speeders.)

Encourage your young daughter to have a beau. She can learn to drive his car before she tackles yours.

A new Henry Ford story is as rare as an old one is common, but here is an anecdote which I will wager my reputation you have not heard before. Small, hot, tired man called upon Mr. Ford, and through his persistence was admitted to the great presence.

"Say, are you Mr. Ford?" asked this visitor. "I am," replied Mr. Ford. "The Mr. Ford, I mean?" the visitor insisted.

"I am the Mr. Ford," Mr. Ford assured him. "The fellow who invented them, you know."

"I invented them." "The chap who's responsible." "I accept full responsibility."

"Then by gosh," exclaimed the visitor, "come out and give it a push!"

"The reason I know this is new is because I am the first person it was told to by the liar who told it."

FIVE STEPS TO ALTAR

The change from LADY to WIFE is easy, maybe because it's Leap Year. Five steps to you have it, according to the par solution on another page.

Letter golf grid with words GIRL and WIFE.

The Rules

1.—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW TO HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW HEN.

2.—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

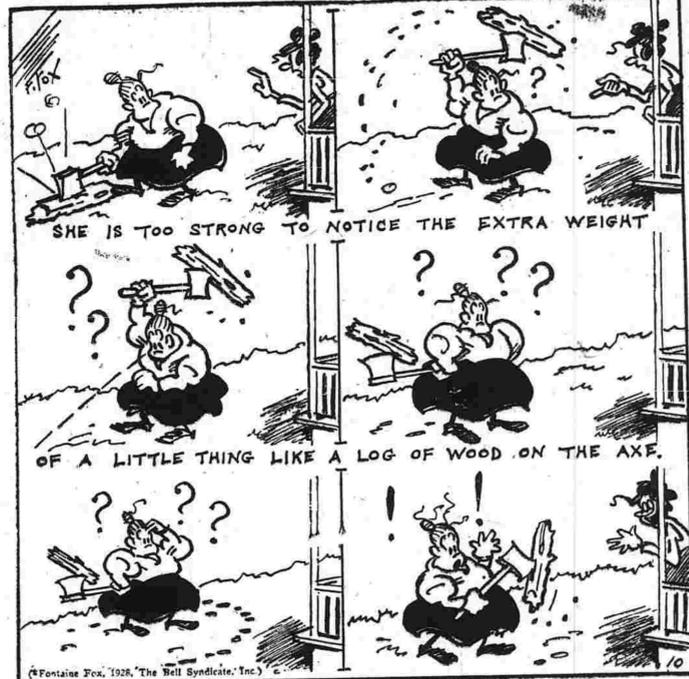

3.—The order of letters cannot be changed.

Every road hog has his way.

Many a motorist has a hard time keeping the collection wolves away from the car door.

Chewtherag: "Look! There goes ANN. What do you suppose she, a Christian woman, is doing out in a car with a man at this hour of the night?"

Knowsme: "Just about the same thing a heathen woman would do, I presume."

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

'Twas pitch dark in the cave right now. The flashlight had gone out somehow, and all the Tynmites snoozed away till they were rested well. About six hours went drifting by. Then Clowny woke up with a cry. "Hey, hey! Where are we, Tynmites?" Oh, how that lad could yell!

"Oh, we are cheerful Tynmites, far underground to see the sights. Jack Frost's the one who sent us here. He is a good old scout. We seek adventure every day. We love to work. We love to play. Down here we're going to have some fun, we haven't any doubt."

POLICE HEAD ADDRESSES M. E. FRIENDSHIP CLUB

Chief Tells of Work of Ancient and Modern Cops; Big Affairs Coming.

A good supper, a fine attendance of the members and an interesting talk featured the opening meeting of the M. E. Friendship Club at the South Methodist church last night, and give promise of a successful year of useful work.

Chief of Police, Samuel G. Gordon.

The supper was in charge of Ross Lewis, George McKinney and Joseph Lytle, and its main feature was oyster stew, so much of a feasting that two and three helpings became the rule.

Following the supper a short business meeting was held, at which an interesting report was made by George E. Keith, on the part of the committee of arrangements for the forthcoming Father and Son banquet, which is to be held on Tuesday, February 14. Already many details to assure an unusual degree of enjoyment and success have been arranged, and a decoration committee and program committee have their work well under way.

Chief of Police Samuel G. Gordon, was the speaker at the public meeting and gave a talk which was brief, pointed and interesting. He sketched the history of police work from earliest times, going as far back as 18 B. C. for data. He mentioned that the old time name of "peeler" arose from the fact that in early Victorian days the then Prime Minister of England who organized the London police force, was the well known Sir Robert Peel.

He traced the history of the local force since its organization down to the present. He gave many interesting facts in relation to official routine in dealing with auto accidents, crime detection and crime prevention. He explained the workings of the new police tick-ets which are issued in the state, and told how by its assistance criminals had much less chance of escape now than formerly.
