Campaigns Already Under Way to Choose Names to Be Submitted at Hartford Conference.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 29.—Modest campaigns to secure for various local favorites the honor of attending the Republican national convention at Kansas City next June are under way throughout the state today with the announcement that the Republican state central committee will meet here April 17 and 18 to choose delegates to the national convention.

Primaries or caucuses to name delegates to the state convention will be held on March 19 and Senatorial district conventions will be held March 22nd. Each town is to have twice as many delegates in the state convention as it has representatives in the General Assembly, and each Senatorial district will have two delegates.

A definite move is under way to have Connecticut's Congressional delegation named among the national delegates. Friends of Congressman John Q. Tilson, of New Haven, expect he will be among the delegates. Congressman Tilson is considered, in Connecticut, as a possibility for the nomination for vice-president. Congressman Schuyler Merritt, of Stamford, also is said to be the object of a definite Fairfield county campaign, to have him sent to Hartford.

Bingham as Chairman
As a temporary chairman of the state convention, the man who will deliver the keynote address on the evening of April 17, it is said that Senator Hiram Bingham, of New Haven, is the likely choice. J. Henry Horback, chairman of the state central committee, and Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman, are the committee to choose this "keynote." Clarence G. Willard, of New Haven, is to be secretary of the convention, succeeding Alex W. Cresson, of Hartford.

French Surprised That Kellogg Did Not Mention Cuba Resolution on War.

This was only one development in the past 24 hours that brought American affairs into conspicuous notice in Europe. The other was the sensational criticism of the Monroe Doctrine by Senor Cantillo, Argentine delegate to the League of Nations, security commission, at Geneva.

TWO MORE KILLED IN MINERS' FEUD

Wilkes Barre, Pa., Feb. 29.—Charging that "a murder machine, controlled by fascist murderers acting for operators and contractors" is responsible for a series of murders in Pittston climaxed last night by the double slaying of Alex Campbell and Pete Saudargas, the "Save the Union" committee of the United Mine Workers in a statement today called upon the region to avenge the Unionists "by defeating these bloody reactionists."

Imported gunmen were believed to have been the slayers of the two mine union officials last night. A closed car, without license plates, sped up the road in which Campbell and Saudargas were seated after a conference, and pumped a deadly spray of bullets into the men's bodies with pumpguns and revolvers. Twenty bullets were found in the body. The car was later found in Mosaic, near Scranton.

The two men were killed shortly after a conference with members of the district attorney's staff and county detectives. Chief County Detective Richard Fowell rode part of the way home with them, and the men stopped at the detectives home to let him out of the car before they headed for Campbell's home, near which they were overtaken by the gunman's car.

ANOTHER NOTE RECEIVED IN TORCH MURDER

Man Writes That He Knows Miss Brown's Sweetheart and Will Tell If He Is Kept Out of Case.

Somerville, N. J., Feb. 29.—Further scrutiny of the love past of Margaret Brown, Park avenue governess, occupied police today in their efforts to recover the trail of the "torch murderer" who burned his victim's body in gasoline near Bernardsville, N. J.

A new mystery letter from a man prominent in Morristown was received by prosecutor Francis L. Bergen of Somerset county. The writer, for the price of anonymity, promised to disclose what he knows about a bean from whom Miss Brown received consistent profers of marriage not long ago.

"It is a very important matter, indeed," said Prosecutor Bergen. "The letter is from a gentleman highly respected in Morristown, N. J., who has no connection with the crime, was not an eyewitness of it, but does know of Miss Brown's immediate past."

Meanwhile, authorities continued to hunt for a suspicious looking stranger seen skulking in the vicinity of the Richard Lindabury estate about two miles from the scene of the slaying. ## Memorable February 29th Gave This Town a Murder

February 29, the extra day of the Gregorian calendar gives us every four years, gave Manchester one of its few murders. On Saturday morning, February 29, 1896, Miss Louise Trebbe was murdered by Casper Hartline, a farm-hand employed by the Trebbe family. Few famous personages in the town's history were born on a February 29. However, the town's records are not complete and it may be that there are others who boast a birthday every four years and that the fact is not noted in the town clerk's office. Frederick W. Pitkin of the firm of Pitkin & Calhoun was a "Leap Year baby" and the records note that a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Wickham on February 29, 1864. At that time the boy's father was busy in the arsenal of Springfield, Mass., making guns for use in the Civil War.

Dressed as Indians They Swoop Down on Hub Dock and Scare Watchman.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 29.—Tea, King George, and Chicago held the center of interest today at the annual convention of fifteen thousand delegates of the National Education Association.

Long before the break of dawn, a hundred women teachers with the feathers and tomahawks of Indians, swooped down on old T. wharf, nearly frightened the night watchman to death and re-enacted the famous tea party of revolutionary history by throwing little sacks of oolong into the harbor.

The war-hooping "Female Indians" travelled in taxicabs. The leader was Miss Elizabeth Hall, assistant superintendent of schools of Minneapolis, who originated the idea. The "Indians" held a band quest before the raid, with Miss Lillie Ernst, St. Louis school teacher, as toastmaster.

Shouts of "no taxation without representation" floating across the harbor in the cold wind caused sleepy eyed passengers aboard the East Boston ferries to wonder what it was all about. Last year at Dallas, Texas, the women dressed as Mexicans staged an impromptu rodeo.

Col. Lindbergh was brought to the capitol to meet Gov. Smith by F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war, Senator J. Griswold Webb, and assemblyman Herbert B. Shank, the latter two being sponsors of the aviation legislation. Accompanying the Lindbergh party to the capitol was Lieut. Lester J. Maitland, hero of the trans-Pacific flight.

"Well," said Gov. Smith after he greeted the Lone Eagle, "I have a bill here giving cities of New York state the right to construct airports. I thought I would sign it while you were here just to show you what New York state thinks about aviation development."

POSTMASTER BROWN SEES RADIO CLUB AS SOLVER OF AIR TROUBLES

Local Expert Favors United Action in Getting Rid of Interference.

The formation of a Radio Listeners' Association in Manchester to improve reception as explained in The Evening Herald yesterday, was praised today by John F. Barstow, well known local radio dealer. Mr. Barstow believes that if a sufficient number of persons join an organization of this kind, it will be possible to make considerable progress toward the elimination of static on radio sets here. He said that it would be possible for an expert to discover the sources of many of the electrical disturbances and that they might be remedied or at least modified by means of condensers and other means. There would be some expense in this work which means that it would be necessary to have a substantial membership. Mr. Barstow lays much of the blame for poor reception in the center of the town to the trolley cars. He said that if the Green and Cross-town cars were replaced by busses, reception would improve. An effort to form a Radio Listeners' Association in Manchester will be made at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening at the Knights of Columbus hall on Bissell street. The meeting will be open to the public and many radio patrons are expected to be present. Officials

Blodgett that the property of the Manchester Community club was exempt from taxation increased the Board of Relief's deductions from the town grand list to $57,000. RETURNS $52,000 GETS NO REWARD

New York, Feb. 29.—Diogenes, if he returned to earth today, would probably make some sad remarks about filiality. For the agent who spent his life looking for a reward, would find an honest man looking for a reward. Alexander Luborsky is the honest man. He found $52,000 in bills in a Coney Island gutter, and returned the sum into to the bank which had lost it. Luborsky, who is a painter out of a job and the father of two children, said today that it looked as if his honesty would have to be its own reward. No intimation of any other reward had been received, he said.

FIRE IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 29.—Two firemen were injured, and damage estimated at $9,000 was done early today when fire destroyed one storey business block adjacent the plant of the Westinghouse Electric Company. The structure housed three stores and a lunch room. The two firemen, Louis Baudin and Harold Welch were cut about the hands and face, when a hot air explosion blew out a plate glass window in the lunchroom.

VICTIM'S BODY FOUND

San Francisco, Calif., Feb. 29.—Instigated by the discovery of the body of one of the victims, close scrutiny over the waters of San Francisco bay was maintained today by government boats in the hopes that the bodies of some of the remaining four missing persons of the Peralta ferryboat accident of Feb. 17 might come to the surface. The body picked up out of the waters of the bay yesterday was that of John W. Collins of Oakland, one of the five commuters who were swept to their deaths by a wave which flooded the forward bow of the Peralta and threw some 4,000 passengers into a panic. Collins' body was identified by his wife.

SELECTMEN EAGER

TO KEEP TAX DOWN

Will Try Every Way to Prevent Increase to 14 Mill Rate This Year.

Every means possible will be taken by the Board of Selectmen and Tax Collector George H. Howe to collect outstanding back taxes due the Town of Manchester, it was decided at a conference held last night in the Municipal building.

Determined to keep the tax rate down to 13 1/2 mills, if arithmetically possible, and finding the only source of revenue open the collection of back taxes, the Selectmen are studying the tax lien records of the town in the hopes that sufficient can be secured to cover the half-cent increase in the tax rate that otherwise seems inevitable.

The Manchester Trust Company, The Home Bank and Trust Company, the Manchester Realty Company and the Building and Loan Association will be asked to check their mortgage holdings with the town tax records and insist that taxes be paid on all mortgaged property.

The report of the Board of Relief to the Selectmen makes it even more difficult to find a means of cutting the tax rate. A total of $57,080 has been deducted from the town grand list so that the corrected grand list now stands $52,675,121.

The defendant's counsel, DeLancey S. Pelgriff, said that DeCarli fell within the exception in that he was one "whose employment is of a casual nature and who is employed otherwise than for the purpose of the employer's trade or business."

CENTER SPRINGS SKATING NOW BEST OF SEASON

Pond's Surface Scraped Today In Preparation For Use Tonight.

Skating at the Center Springs pond this week is better than it has been all this season, according to Bill McKee, member of the skating carnival committee.

The pond was scraped again this afternoon in preparation for the large number of skaters expected. The pond is scraped off regularly when the surface becomes cut up by skate blades and it is necessary to remove the chipped ice to the banks.

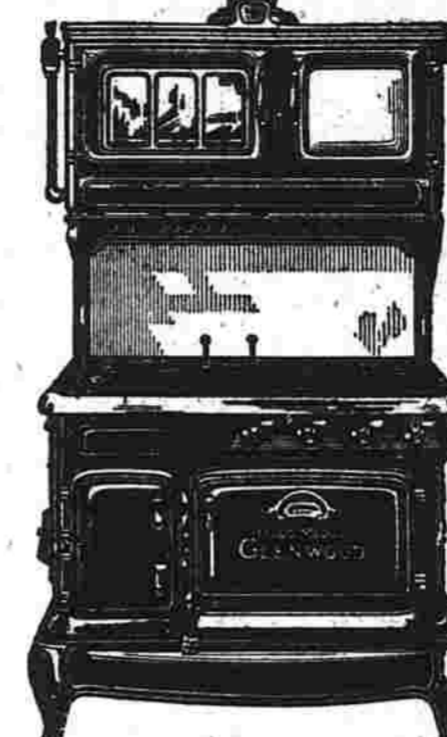

A complaint has been made, however, that boys and girls who eat bar-candy have been throwing the paper wrappers on the ice. This practice should be discouraged according to the complainants, as should the perilous stunt known as "snapping the whip," in which several persons have been slightly injured this winter.

THE MALIGNED COPS

We feel impelled to say a word for the cops—all cops, in all towns and all cities and all states of this Union—who have been mercilessly attacked by a sub-committee of the National Crime Commission which has just made public the result of a "survey" covering a number of years. Poor character of minor judiciary, lax bail methods, loose work of prosecuting officers, uncontrolled court systems, needless use of juries and inadequate crime statistics are blamed secondarily by the committee for the prevalence of crime, but primarily the police get the worst of the trouncing.

"The most startling thing," says the report, "is the small number of criminals caught by the police." And then it goes on to show how, in various parts of the country, only a few robberies, for instance, are ever followed by the apprehension of suspects.

The report declares that only a third of the police officers of the country possess average intelligence, while many belong to "the worst of the moron class."

We shall take the liberty of expressing the belief that the members of this Crime Commission sub-committee are themselves quite incapable of passing judgment in this ruthless manner on the policemen of the country. They are, to be sure, persons of intellect and education; but neither native intellect nor formal education necessarily endows its possessor with capacity for judging the fitness of a cop for his work. One needs to have considerable contact with police business in order to be able to justly weigh and adjudge the qualities essential to that calling; and "objectively" one must not be blinded by a bias in favor of "general intelligence" tests which are themselves often very silly.

A policeman might be a very good policeman indeed, without having the remotest idea whether America was discovered by Christopher Columbus or Eric the Red or by the cop's own grandfather; without knowing that the American revolution began in 1776 or—as Henry Ford thought—in 1812; without being sure whether Armenia is in Europe or Asia or in what state President Pierce was born. He might, in spite of such paucity of learning, quite possibly be a better cop than some member of the committee which roasts him, who has a college degree, a vivid imagination, the ability to speak grammatically in three languages and a rational fear of a thug's gun.

We have known more than one cop whose formal education terminated at about the sixth grammar grade or earlier, yet who possessed keen insight into character, a perfectly logical mind with decided powers of deduction, a first-class memory for faces, names and personal histories, plus substantially unlimited courage combined with physical fitness and the ability to take or give hard knocks. And we must confess that we would feel safer under the protection of policemen of their stamp than under that of an equal number of college professors, taking the mill run of them.

Stupid cops there are, of course; but we'll hazard the guess that the really stupid cop doesn't last very long on any force save in very rare instances. We have known a great many policemen, one time and another, and most of them have been pretty keen—in police work—and entirely honest and anxious to do their duty. If the cops had anything like an even break, it is our faith that they would catch a great deal larger percentage of the criminals than they do. They get nothing like an even break.

Take this charge of the Crime Commission committee: That while in England the police made arrests in 82 per cent of a certain class of crimes in St. Louis the arrests were only 16 per cent; that while in New York the arrests were only 20 per cent, in another group of crimes, in

THINK WHAT YOU WISH BY BRUCE CATTON

SCIENTISTS at the University of Chicago are about to begin a series of experiments designed to prove "that thinking is a chemical process."

These men recently concluded a long study of nerve reactions, and agreed, as one of them says, that "thought processes are no more mysterious than the contraction of a muscle." So now they are going to make the human brain give up its last secrets.

The human race has progressed quite a distance since the time when it was believed that the soul left the body each night, so that if a man were awakened suddenly his soul could not get back to him but would be a lost wanderer forever. We have learned a few things about our brains and our bodies; no longer do we believe that emotions are generated in the heart, or that impulses of anger proceed from the spleen.

So, having emerged from blind ignorance, our scientists see no reason why they cannot solve the ultimate mysteries. If man is a machine, why not take him apart and see what makes him tick?

Easy, perhaps. It may be that the thoughts that led to the writing of "Adonais," for instance, were no more mysterious than the chemical reaction that makes saltpetre powder fizz when you pour water on the bomb. But suppose that these scientists do lay bare the machinery of our brains; what then? Will they be able to prove that we are mere mechanistic accidents in a heedless universe, ticking our lives away in blind obedience to powers that we cannot control?

Make your own answer. Your reply is as good as another man's. We are entitled to believe what we wish. Those who think that life is a mere chemical formula may think so; and those who believe that it is a strange incomprehensible mystery, founded in the great deeps and striving painfully upward in obedience to some inner spark that defies all analysis—they, too, may think as they wish.

A few years ago an Irish patriot was condemned to death by the British. Seated in his cell awaiting execution, he penned these lines: "I would boldly teach the antique faith the fighting is the only noble thing, and that he alone is at peace with God who is at war with the powers of evil."

It will be no easy task to reduce that man to a mathematical equation. A cry like that, hurled in defiance from the shadow of death, bespeaks something more than a mere plus b equals c. In that man's equation there is an x—an unknown quantity; puzzle over it as you will, there is a residue there that will escape your test tube.

The wise men of science have their theories; we can have ours. And in ours we can leave room for wonder and hope.

Canada they were 70 per cent and in England 74 per cent.

If the operation of the Canadian and English courts were such that an immune class of criminals was created—if the most expert thieves and most dangerous gunmen, upon being arrested, were promptly admitted to bail after being laboriously traced and arrested, and so were enabled to repeat these expert crimes over and over again; and if the laws, against receiving stolen goods were as lax as they are in this country and fences permitted to keep permanently retained lawyers at the beck and call of crooks; and if it were impossible to inform a jury that the prisoner at the bar had a record as long as your arm and that his alibi witnesses were fellow convicts with him—would you seriously whether Canadian or English police would have so much better records for arrests.

Scholarship is not by any means an essential of a good police officer. But coolness of head rather than imaginative sprightliness and excitability is an essential. A certain amount of stolidity is an essential. So is the power of concentration on police business—and literally thousands of cops of very ordinary mentality have that. So is bulldog perseverance—and plenty of them have that. So is the capacity for knowing a crook at sight—and the ordinary citizen would be surprised to know how many of them have that. So is the capacity of putting two and two together and making a very definite four.

All in all, the American policeman, despite the ripping of the Crimes Commission sleuths, is probably as good as the average policeman anywhere else. Even in England they are not quite all Oxford graduates. But so long as the courts mess up criminal cases and turn loose the most dangerous crooks almost as fast as the cops catch them, there will continue to be this ghastly record of "undetected" crimes—in three quarters of which the police could put their finger on the criminal if they dared—and would, if they had an even break higher up.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, Feb. 29.—One of the most absorbing performances of which political parties are about to offer a mildly interested nation in the quadrennial competition for the spoils of office and such perquisites as those may entail is that in which the Democratic party will appear as a Magpie and the Republican party will take the role of a Clam.

That is to say, one party is going to talk and act like a magpie very angry about something and the other will talk and act like a clam. This strange stunt may be enacted several times, but it is sure to be observed as Democratic orators disembogue at their best and loudest against the oil scandals of the Harding administration. It will be recalled that when this issue arose in 1924 the Democratic party followed the best traditions of magnificence and the Republican party took its cue from clandom.

BIRCH STREET MONDAY

The citizen who feels that the exercise of thrift is fully as essential for a community as for an individual, and who objects to turning over to the town in the form of taxes money which ought to go into his own savings account unless it is to be employed in profitable ways in community betterment, lies under the duty of attending the special town meeting next Monday evening and voting against the proposed widening of Birch street, unless all the costs of that undertaking are levied against the property owners on the street.

We can see this proposal in no other light than as a sheer waste of the town's money, insofar as the town may be expected to share in it. Whether the sum be large or small does not affect the principle in the matter at all. It is inevitable that the one-way-street system will be adopted for the cross streets system of which Birch street is a part, whether the street be widened or left as it is. In that event the present width of the street will, in every probability, prove to be better and safer than a greater width. One-way streets just wide enough to permit of parking on one side and a single traffic lane are better adapted to city traffic than streets just wide enough to tempt motorists to attempt passing of cars going in the same direction, with an inadequate margin of room for safety.

Why the town should spend a single dollar in widening a street when the only objective to be attained is increased danger and confusion we are utterly unable to see.

THE INJUNCTION

Again the injunction enters into a labor conflict and again, as always, it reacts against the interest that employs it. The state of Indiana presumably is equipped with every necessary statute law to protect the interests of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation in its war with its striking employees. The issuance of an injunction restraining the strikers, among other things, from singing hymns on the grounds of a church near one of the company's mines because there is no statute law against such practice, can have only one consequence in the public mind—the conclusion that the law is being utterly distorted in the interest of the coal company. That is one of the most dangerous conclusions that can be permitted to get into the minds of the people of this country. That way lies the breeding of anarchy. Tell a group of people that "if there is no law with which to beat we will have a judge make such a law"—and you have set that group of people against all law. Those patriotic organizations which are devoting themselves so earnestly to the extirpation of redism could do worse than set their faces against the employment of the injunction in labor troubles as being the most prolific of all sources of revolutionary sentiment.

Not once has the administration expressed itself upon the subject, not even to pat on the back the two able lawyers who have recovered the navy's reserves and kept the blood hound close at the coattails of Fall, Sinclair and Doherty. It has been as if no highly placed official or member of the Congress, except he be a Democrat or a Republican of independent stripe, was at all interested. Of course, the light of recent charges that corrupt oil money helped party campaign debts, it was only human for the gents in power not to be especially enthusiastic over further prosecution and investigation.

Being always subject to the attacks of the minority party, the G. O. P. will also receive plenty of abuse in connection with the Vore and Smith scandals. Here, too, it will maintain dignified silence, for a party is only as strong as its political bosses and any attempt to weed out the corrupt ones might be disastrous.

Signs are that the Democrats will also paint as a scandal the current unemployment. Secretary of Labor Davis says the estimates of the unemployed army are exaggerated, and the voter who frequently knows what's going on about him even if not what happens higher up, can see up that situation for himself.

But again, as concerns unemployment, the Democrats will be by far the most valuable. President Coolidge, who learned long ago that silence was an excellent defense, has furnished the party's keynote.

New York, Feb. 29.—Just across the street from where I write, an army of workers struggle with the stubborn rocks of Manhattan's undercrust. Day by day a jagged hole has been taking shape. Bricks have been tumbling from what was once a trim red building, and the cold Greek lines of a corner bank have been turned into the jagged shapelessness of a decayed tooth.

Not that this is an unusual scene in New York. It just happens that not so many months hence a 39-story hotel, the largest in the world, will be shutting the light from any window. Men and women will literally be dwelling in the clouds.

The corner statistician tells me that there will be 2500 rooms; that once the hotel is filled and all the attendants are present, a city of 10,000 people will stare into my humble window. Employed in looking after it will be as many tollers as are required to maintain and police a city of that size. It is when such imagination-tickers as this move in upon you, that one begins to grow fearful and a bit awed by the giant whose growing power you like to forget.

Believe it or not, there's an old fellow in Union Square who spends his declining years making voices for dolls. As every good little girl knows, dolls can now say mama and papa and, hence, there must be inventive folk in the world who manufacture the voices. But this old fellow has dedicated his life to increasing their vocabulary. Just now he's hard at work on a very tough doll which will not be welcomed in the best families. For this doll is going to say: "Go to h—."

And, once more, believe it or not, there's a hat check girl at the Breton-Hall Hotel who's been on the job for 25 years. She is said to know at least 100 hats by sight. She seldom actually gives checks since her years of service has made her acquainted with the hats of the hotel's patrons. And she has never made a mistake nor given the wrong man the wrong hat. Furthermore she's learned the style of prominent New Yorkers and can tell you the brands and models that best become them. Many come to her for advice regarding their hats.

The "beauty business" having reached the status of the sixth or seventh industry—or something like that—those palaces dedicated to miltady's vanity are constantly introducing fads to lure the ladies within their gates.

The latest is a "beauty bar." It is outfitted like the old-fashioned German bars where lunches were served, but nothing stronger than lipstick can be obtained. There is of course, plenty of mirrors into which the customers can cast admiring glances as they tinkle at various varieties of rouge.

Beauty comes high these days. The most elaborate of the New York beauty specialist shops carry on a business that runs into the millions, with buyers in every tiny hamlet over the land. If you care to run across your "lady friends" from "home" in New York, there are worse ideas than haunting the beauty specialists. A big percentage of the daily turn-over comes from out-of-town visitors who carry home with them a year's supply of "beauty."

BRITAIN HOPES TO FIND PALACE OF CONQUEROR

Winchester, Eng.—An archeological problem which has remained a mystery for nearly a thousand years, its secret buried in the heart of this city of British antiquity, is on the brink of solution.

It is the problem of finding where stood the great residential palace from which William the Conqueror and his court ruled the country in the latter years of his reign. All that Winchester has hitherto been able to point out as a relic of the palace is the famous plaster which stands beneath the City Cross Archway familiar to all tourists.

Beyond this, there has been only a passing reference in works of history to suggest that the plaster once stood somewhere to the west of the cathedral.

It was in the vaults beneath this palace that the Treasury of England was stored, seized in later years by Henry I and King Stephen to secure their position in the kingdom. It is now believed on good authority that traces of the original castle have now been identified and that their finding will soon yield a precise knowledge of the site of the palace.

This discovery has been brought about by curious and seemingly irrelevant chance—the renovation of the Bishop's Palace built by Christopher Wren in the reign of Charles II, at the east end of the site. It has been made by S. Ward Evans, an archeologist who has during the last two years devoted much study to unraveling the mystery of the site.

Evans believes that the Conqueror's Palace was destroyed by fire, and its ruins used by Henry de Blois to construct Wolvesey Castle, Wolvesey Castle stood until 1645, when Cromwell's troops sacked the city.

Two centuries later, Sir Christopher Wren built the existing bishop's palace beside the ruin, using, it is believed, large quantities of the stonework of the ruined castle. After the passing of two centuries, reconstruction and partial reconstruction of the Bishop's Palace, was begun six months ago, revealing that the stone of which the palace is built is almost entirely Norman decorative work, with its outer face turned inward to present a trim surface to the wall.

Further investigation has led Evans to believe that the remains of the Conqueror's Palace have been built into the comparatively modern ecclesiastical residence, and if his beliefs are borne out, a centuries-old mystery will have been solved.

VAUDEVILLE ACTS AT CIRCLE ON THURSDAY

Three Acts and Double Bill on Program—Two Features Tonight.

Tomorrow night brings the usual three acts of semi-professional vaudeville and two feature pictures to the Circle theater on Oak street. The features are "Rich Men's Sons," with Shirley Mason starring, and "Bulldog Pluck," with a picked cast.

In "Rich Men's Sons," Ralph Graves earns for himself commendation—on his maiden effort as a director, as well as on his pleasing characterization of the masculine lead. He competently proves his versatility behind as well as before the camera.

The entertaining story moves along quickly and logically, and the many humorous situations and highly dramatic moments show a deftness of handling that can be well for Graves' directorial career.

"Rich Men's Sons" concerns itself with a railroad magnate's disinherited young son, who meets romance in a steel mill, wins his way as office boy to the girl's heart, and proves his manhood. A thrilling race between the boy in a racer and the father in an express train makes a forceful high point in the action.

Shirley Mason gives a charming interpretation of the girl, while George Fawcett is once more thorough at home as the railroad president father. Robert Cain, Frances Raymond, Scott Seaton, Walter James and Johnny Fox complete the well-chosen cast.

The features at the Circle today are "Judgment of the Hills," starring Frankie Darro, filmdom's newest and greatest boy star, and "Burning Up Broadway," starring Helene Costello. Both are pictures of exceptional merit, although their themes are widely different.

BRITISH PEER SAYS WESTERN WORLD IS READY TO TURN MOHAMMEDAN

Bombay.—The people of the Western World are tired of the religion current in them. They would jump to Islam, if that faith were preached to them in its "pure form" and its tenets and doctrines explained to them in reasonable ways.

This assertion was made here by the Rt. Hon. Lord Headley, the British peer, during the course of the presidential address to the All India Tabligh Conference, an organization dedicated to the propagation of the Mohammedan faith.

Lord Headley, known among his Oriental friends as El-Farooq, is a true Moslem, insofar as his religious beliefs and teachings are concerned.

"I come from the West; I know my people," he declared. "They are mostly tired of the religion current in them. They want a religion of the type of Islam."

Athens, Greece, is known as the "city of the Violet Crown," in reference to the beautiful effects of sunset light on the Acropolis.

LEADERS OF BANDITS ARE UNDER INDICTMENT

Chicago, Feb. 29.—Three alleged rival leaders in the $133,000 Grand Trunk mail robbery here last Saturday morning were under federal indictment today.

The true bills were voted last night by a Federal Grand Jury, which held its first session here in ten years. They are to be returned today in the court of Judge Evan A. Evans.

Habeas Corpus proceedings for the release of the accused men are now pending before Judge Evans. Those named in the indictments are Charles "Limby" Cleaver, in whose home $17,600 of the loot was recovered; William Donovan, who is said to have been the "brains" of the hold-up plot, and Frank Meccia, an expert on explosives who is said to have engineered the dynamiting of the "bandit proof" mail car door.

CAST ALONE FEATURE OF "THE RED ROBE"

Walter Woolf and Evelyn Herbert Stars in New Schubert Show at Parsons.

If for no other reason than the cast alone "The Red Robe" should be an overspreading box office success at Parsons' theater the week beginning Monday, March 5. A new operetta produced by the Schuberts on an immense scale, the piece takes its title from Stanley Weyman's famous novel of a generation ago, "Under the Red Robe", which later served the Charles Frohman players as a long-run drama. Now elevated to the plane of operetta, "The Red Robe" draws upon the combined productive genius of Jean Gilbert as to music and Harry B. Smith for the book and lyrics, J. C. Huffman for the staging and Jack Mason as the dance man. All-star certainly attaches to such names in the cast as Walter Woolf, Evelyn Herbert, Harry K. Morton, William Danforth, Gloria Foy, Arnold Korff, Bartlett Simons, Zella Russell and Joe Wagstaff. Other names that have first call with the Broadway casting directors are Manila Powers, Ivan Acubuckie, Lee Beggs, John Golden, Peggy Dolan, Betty Dair, Ivan Servais, Paul McNully, William Orchard, Dorothy Kane, William Romaine and Elin Vitis. With its immense personnel, "The Red Robe" brings to the stage a great wealth of settings and costumes, enhanced by unique and variegated lighting effects that have ever marked the Schubert operettas. In addition to its own orchestra, led by Oscar Radin, the production embraces the Chester Hale Ballet, as well as half-a-hundred in the chorus.

At the time of 1850, the first scene opens in Zatin's in Paris, where Gil de Beraud, played by Walter Woolf, is accused of cheating at cards and so places himself under the law of Cardinal Richelieu for duelling. Then and there, Gil de Beraud accepts a stout mission, the successful fulfillment of which is to save his neck. Amid many exciting adventures Gil, as the action proceeds, is exposed as a spy by the conspirators who would destroy the Cardinal with whom Gil is aligned. Success finally comes however to the heroic swordsman, in spite of the King's soldiers and intrigue upon intrigue. A woman's love showed Gil the way, making for one of the most dashing romances on the operetta stage. Evelyn Herbert late star of "My Maryland" in New York, plays Renee de Cocheffort, opposite Walter Woolf.

TO SHOW PUBLIC FUEL-LESS MOTOR

Within 30 Days Hendershot's Invention Will Be Used on Plane.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 29.—The public and doubting scientists will be given an opportunity, probably in the next thirty days of seeing the new "fuelless" motor that has created a sensation in motordom and among physicists, actually in operation in an airplane.

A second motor, similar to the first one designed by Lester J. Hendershot, youthful West Elizabeth, Pa., inventor, is being constructed and will be installed in an airplane and demonstrated to the public and doubting Thomases, International News service learned from a close associate of Hendershot today.

The original Hendershot motor demonstrated in Detroit last week has been dismantled, and for that reason cannot be demonstrated to those who doubt it now. The present whereabouts of the motor is being kept a strict secret by those connected with it.

"It is against all laws of physics. We admit that. The time will soon come when there will have to be a show down. We know it, and are not afraid of it."

Public Demonstration.

"Would you be willing to say when the public will be given an opportunity to inspect the new motor?"

"I should say it would take about thirty days to complete the work," was the reply.

The associate laughingly dismissed the charge of fraud.

"Can the motor be proved mathematically?"

"Yes, although Hendershot did not figure it out mathematically, I should say it can be proved that way. Hendershot merely struck the right note that showed him something the world has never seen."

The associate likened the discovery of Hendershot to that of Benjamin Franklin with electricity.

It wasn't exactly what you would call an accident," he said. "Hendershot was experimenting, and he just happened to strike the right thing."

The associate, interested in aviation much in the same manner that Hendershot is, said the inventor first brought the motor to him, when he discovered what he had involved. Becoming convinced that the machine was a radical departure from the present systems of generating power, he interested self in the enterprise.

"I wouldn't be spending a great deal of my time and money in the thing if I didn't believe in it," he concluded.

Smoke is unconsumed particles of carbon.

CROOKS TAKE TO WATER

Gibraltar.—Spanish crooks are quitting operations on land and turning to piracy on the high seas, according to a tale told by the captain of the Spanish trawler San Antonio, substantiated by officers of the trawler Maria which met a similar fate. Fifty small boats, containing 300 armed Spaniards, surrounded the vessels, so the story goes, and after ransacking them destroyed their nets and other fishing gear.

A Doctor Talks About Cascara

It is unfortunate that many people judge the thoroughness of a laxative by its violence. The salts that rush through the system may not even penetrate the film of poisonous matter that has coated the colon. A long list of drugs will "loosen the bowels" but what is the best way to CLEANSE them?

The world's best laxative is one that Mother Nature makes in her own laboratory. It is the bark of a tree, called CASCARA. The Indians used to chew this bark—and reach old age without a sick day. It is the best thing there is today, for any system; best for the blood. The most beneficial in its action on the bowels, of anything yet disclosed. For many reasons:

CASCARETS
They Work While You Sleep!

First of all, there is a HABIT formed from cascara. The bowels are not weakened, but strengthened by its occasional use. The occasions when one needs this aid grow less and less. Its influence is long-felt. You don't find yourself worst bound-up the day following. You do find the bowels more inclined to move of their own volition. The candy cascaret that every drug store always has in stock is the ideal form of cascara.—Adv.

—From the "Songs of the Dogs of War."

Miami Beach, Fla.—It can be said of Corporal Jiggs II that he can be found at the very seat of any situation which the Marines may have in hand.

And if this seems to call for an explanation, know that the Corporal Jiggs II is the pedigreed English bulldog that mascot the Marines—the same Jiggs that First Lieutenant James Joseph Tunney, better known as "Gene," gave to the Corps.

What brings Jiggs into the limelight at this moment is the fact that Marine Headquarters at Washington has delivered into the hands of the world camp, at his training quarters here, the official record book of his protegee. Wharain are two items responsible for the discipline to which this important dog-dogdom personality is now being subjected.

He Bit the Ice Man

The first of these entries reads: "Sept. 1, 1927, Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.—Biting the ice man. Five days solitary confinement."

"Umm," mused Tunney. "Not entirely inexcusable. He might have mistaken the ice man for Red Grange and wished to start him on a sixty-yard run."

It was the second entry that took the champ's wind as that Dempsey blow ever took it. This one reads: "Headquarters U. S. Marine Corps, Washington, D. C.—For chasing a stenographer down the hall, transferred to Tunney training camp for proper training."

Not so good, mused Tunney. Yet, taken by and large, Jiggs II, who followed the celebrated Sergeant Major Jiggs I, is not doing so bad for a dog that hasn't had much experience in Washington. More than one dignitary has been known to chase a stenographer down the hall.

To get a bit better acquainted with Jiggs' past— He's a regular enlisted Marine. He has worn the scarlet and gold of the corps nearly a year now. He gets paid and draws ration allowance as an enlisted man. He has won his promotion to the grade of corporal.

Too Much Name His pedigreed title, for he comes from a long line of blooded English bulldogs, was "Silent White Richards," but that was promptly replaced by "Jiggs II" when he joined out as a Marine.

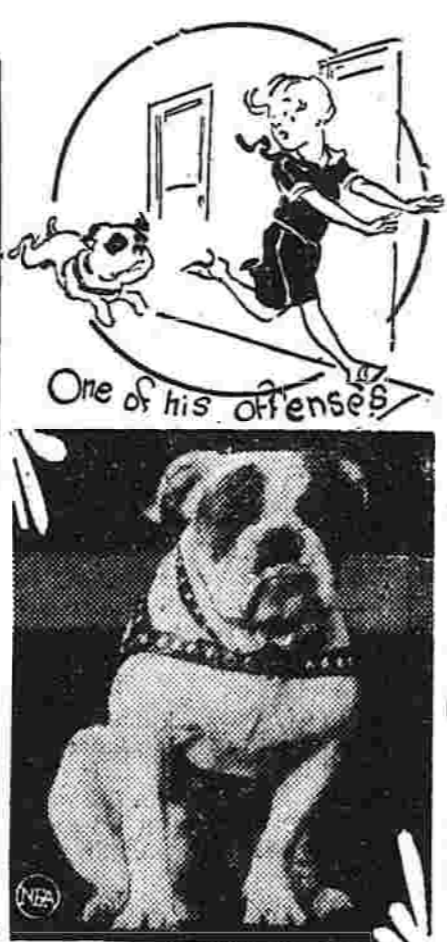

His service record book describes him as follows: Examined: March 22, 1927. Hair: White, with brindle markings. Complexion: Good. Height: 1 foot, 3 inches. Weight: 45 pounds.

On the conclusion of his service at the training camp, Tunney recommended Jiggs for promotion and the service record book contains a copy of Jiggs' warrant as a regular corporal of the Marine corps.

He has served at the recruiting station, New York, at headquarters in Washington, at Quantico, Division Headquarters, Marine Barracks, Chicago, and at present is stationed at Farris Is-

HOME PROGRESS EXHIBIT TO BE HELD IN CITY

Hartford State Armory to House One of Most Unique Shows Ever Opened in New England.

The Home Progress Exposition which opens in the State Armory in Hartford, Saturday, March 24, will be one of the most unique shows ever held in New England. The exposition will present a cross-section of modern industrial life and will include a number of distinct exhibitions assembled on the spacious armory floor.

Progress will indeed be the keynote and the aviation, radio and transportation exhibits will depict the very latest developments of twentieth century science. Up-to-the-minute household appliances and other beautiful appointments of the home will appeal to the feminine eye.

That the aviation show should be a distinct feature seems only natural in view of the fact that Governor John H. Trumbull is honorary chairman of the exposition's advisory committee. The L. & H. Aircraft Corporation will display the new Fairchild cabin monoplane with its folding wings, a special, colorful Swallow plane, a Challenger plane, and a cut-away Gambee motor which is the present sensation in aviation circles.

Radio will be represented not only by a number of exhibits of the newest commercial models of receivers and accessories but by the extensive educational exhibit of the Radio Corporation of America, costing thousands of dollars, and the work of the last five or six years in getting it together.

The sending and receiving of pictures by radio, known as Photo-Radio, will be demonstrated daily for show visitors will see the famous Hewlett-Packard, the largest in the world, with a hearing radius of three miles. Marconi's first crude receiver will be on display along with an extensive historical exhibit of the evolution of radio. This includes an especially interesting demonstration of vacuum tubes.

A remarkable, active demonstration that should be of particular interest in Hartford county is that of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. This extensive exhibit is electrically operated and shows the working of the Hamp switching system, located just outside Hartford. This model system somewhat resembles a gigantic toy and was a center of attraction at the New Haven Progress Exposition where it was first shown last year.

Boats of various descriptions, motors, outboard motors and marine accessories will comprise another show on the floor of the Armory. The exposition is being held under the auspices of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G. and is sponsored by the Hartford Chamber of Commerce. Colonel D. Gordon Hunter, commanding officer of the regiment, is chairman of the show committee. On the executive committee are Col. Harry B. Blaisell, and Wilbur B. Rogers of this town.

ACCIDENTS ON DECREASE GERMAN FIGURES SHOW

Berlin—Berlin is one city in the world in which accidents are decreasing instead of increasing, despite growing automobile traffic. The number of accidents during December was 1309, compared with 1906 during November and 2313 during October.

Twelve men and two women were killed, 433 men and 180 women injured. The greatest number of accidents happen Saturdays between 5 and 6 p. m.

CATTLE FRAUD PAPERS STRANGELY RESTORED

Boston, Mass., Feb. 29.—Reappearance in the attorney general's office of the "lost" papers in the so-called "cattle fraud" case, divided interest today with the pending legislative probe into the affairs of Attorney General Arthur K. Reading and his acceptance of a retainer for legal services from Deemo Club, Inc.

The sudden reappearance of the papers on the desk of one of Mr. Reading's assistants was a mystery. Mr. Reading stated emphatically that he knew nothing concerning them and that he was sure no one in his office was responsible for their loss.

Meanwhile Speaker John C. Hull continued the makeup of the special legislative committee to investigate the conduct of Mr. Reading. At the same time it was learned that Hugo B. Monjar, former president of the Deemo Club, would present in New York today new charges against the attorney general. It was Mr. Monjar who charged that Mr. Reading was paid the fee of $25,000 Deemo Club.

The so-called "cattle fraud" papers had been lost since January 27, when Joseph W. Ellsworth, of Barre, who had been indicted, could not be prosecuted because important papers in his case, involving the sale of tubercular cattle, had been lost. Assistant Attorney General Vincent J. Leo, who had previously made a diligent search for the missing papers, admitted to Gov. A. T. Fuller that they were found last Friday on the desk of an assistant who had nothing to do with the "cattle fraud" case.

ARRANGEMENTS WILL SOON BE COMPLETED FOR AIR SERVICE TO EAST INDIES

London—Arrangements are now being completed for the establishment of the first air service to the East Indies.

The route, over which mails and passengers will be carried, lies between Batavia and Sourabaya at the opposite extremities of the island of Java. The distance is five hundred miles, and while the existing railroad takes two days to make the journey, the flight, with one stop, will occupy but six hours. Java is the largest Dutch possession with a population two-thirds that of Great Britain. The air-line will be operated by the Royal Dutch Air Lines. Forty-five volcanoes, many of which are active, lie in the path mapped out for the flight.

GAME IS PLENTY IN WYOMING FOR COMING SEASON

Cheyenne, Wyoming.—Wyoming will abound in big game during the next hunting season, according to Bruce Nowlin, State Game Commissioner. Nowlin has just returned from a trip to the famed Teton Mountain region and Jackson hole country.

"Game is in the best condition we have had in years," said Nowlin. "The snow in the Jackson hole country is unusually light, and we are not feeding nearly as many elk as in some years past. There are approximately 5,000 head on the feed ground at the government ranch near the town of Jackson, and about 600 more on the Charlie Wilson place below Jackson. Last year we had more than 19,000 head on these feed grounds.

Elks Numerous. "This does not mean that there are fewer elk in the region. There are numerous large bands which are still back up in the hills where the snow is so light that they are able to secure natural feed. Another indication that the elk are in unusually good shape is found in the fact that the number of complaints from stockmen that their haystacks are being raided is far below normal.

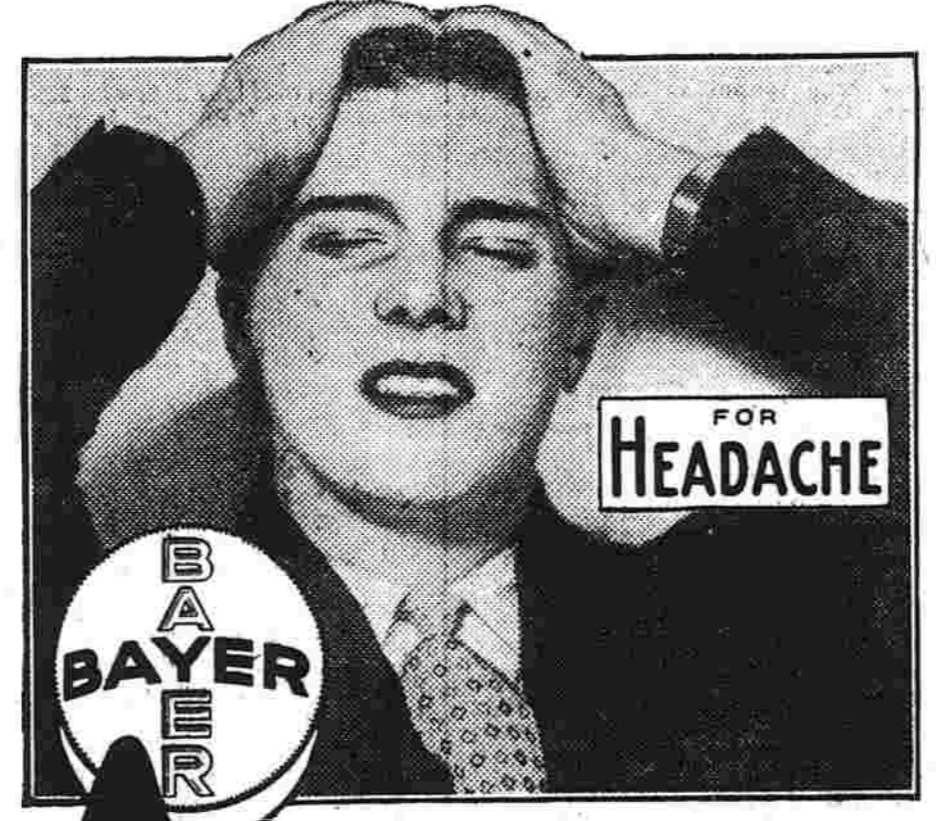

"Moose are increasing in numbers in the state, also," said Nowlin. "The herds are about double in number to what they were ten years ago. The state issues special permits to kill moose at the present time, and we may soon be able to have an open season on moose the same as on elk and deer."

Deer and Elks Starve

Nowlin headed the first official photographic expedition of the state of Wyoming has ever sent to Jackson hole country to get reliable information on reports that large numbers of elk and deer were being allowed to starve and "winter kill" in the higher mountains. The reports were proven to be greatly exaggerated. It is as much against the laws of Wyoming to "shoot" big game with a camera and without a license, as it is to shoot them with a gun out of season and without a license.

THE CANARY MURDER CASE

BY S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR OF THE BENSON MURDER CASE

CHARACTERS

PHILO VANCE, JOHN P. MARKHAM, District Attorney of New York County
MARGARET ODELL, (THE CANARY)
CHARLES CLEAVER, a manufacturer
KENNETH SPOTSWOOD, a manufacturer
LOUIS MANNIX, an importer
DR. AMBROSE LINDQUIST, a fashionable neurologist
TONY SKEEL, a professional burglar
WILLIAM ELMER JESSUP, telephone operator
HARRY SPIVELY, telephone operator
ERNEST HEATH, sergeant of the Homicide Bureau

THE STORY THUS FAR

Skeel's finger prints were found in the apartment of the murdered Margaret Odell, but Vance does not believe him guilty. It is proved later that Mannix, Cleaver and Dr. Lindquist all had been lying about their whereabouts the night of the murder. A letter comes out that Mannix had been calling on a young lady in an apartment adjoining the "Canary" that Cleaver had been in the building around midnight and that Dr. Lindquist was calling on Margaret Odell, had planned in a jealous rage to kill her. But the plan was frustrated when Spotswood jumped into a cab. Later a street cleaner finds Margaret Odell's jewels wrapped in a newspaper. The paper has punctures in it, suggesting that it came off a club reading rack.

CHAPTER XXXIX

WHEN SKEEL appeared, he was asked that the club's steward had got immediately on the telephone. After a short delay, the connection was made. At the end of five minutes' conversation Markham hung up the receiver and gave Heath a baffled look. "The club takes two Heralds. Both of yesterday's copies are there on the rack."

"Didn't Cleaver once tell us he read nothing but The Herald—that and some racing-sheet at night?" "I believe he did," Markham considered the suggestion. "Still, both the club Heralds are accounted for." He turned to Heath. "When you were checking up on Mannix, did you find out what clubs he belonged to?"

"Sure." He's a member of the Furrriers and the Cosmopolis."

Markham pushed the telephone toward him.

"See what you can find out." Heath was fifteen minutes at the task.

"A blank," he announced finally. "The Furrriers don't use holders, and the Cosmopolis don't keep any back numbers."

"What about Mr. Skeel's clubs, Sergeant?" asked Vance, smiling.

"Oh, I know the finding of that jewelry gives me plenty about Skeel," said Heath, with a sly grin. "But what's the good of rubbing it in? Still, if you think I'm going to give the bird a clean bill of health just because the Odell swag was found in a trash-can, you're mighty mistaken. Don't you're pretty close. He may have got leery, and tipped off some pal he'd cached the jewels with."

"I rather fancy the experienced Skeel would have turned his booty over to a professional receiver. But even had he passed it on to a friend, would this friend have been likely to throw it away because Skeel was worried?"

"Maybe not. But there's some explanation for those jewels being found, and when we get hold of it, it won't eliminate Skeel."

"No," the explanation won't eliminate Skeel," said Vance; "but—my word!—how it'll change his standing."

Heath contemplated him with shrewdly appraising eyes. Something in Vance's tone had apparently piqued his curiosity and set him to wondering.

But before he could answer, Swacker stepped alertly into the room, his eyes animated.

"Tony Skeel's on the wire, Chief, and wants to speak to you."

Markham, despite his habitual reserve, gave a start.

"Here, Sergeant," he said quickly. "Take that extension phone on the table and listen in."

He nodded curtly to Swacker, who disappeared to make the connection. Then he took up the receiver of his own telephone and spoke to Skeel.

For a minute or so he listened. Then, after a brief argument, he concurred with some suggestion that had evidently been made; and the conversation ended.

"Yes," he said Vance.

"Yes. He's coming here tomorrow at ten."

"And he hinted that he knew who slew the Canary—ah, what?" "That's just what he did say. He promised to tell me the whole story."

"He's the lad in a position to do it," murmured Vance.

"But, Mr. Markham," said Heath, "I don't see why you don't have him brought here today."

"As you heard, Sergeant, Skeel insisted on tomorrow, and threatened to say nothing if I forced the issue. It's just as well not to antagonize him. We might spoil a good chance of getting some light on this case if I ordered him brought here and used pressure. And tomorrow suits me. He'll be quiet around here then. Moreover, your man's watching Skeel, and he won't get away."

"I guess you're right, sir. The Dude's touchy, and he can give a swell imitation of an oyster when he feels like it." The sergeant spoke with feeling.

"I'll have Swacker here tomorrow to take down his statement," Markham went on; "and you'd better put one of your men on the elevator,—the regular operator is off Sundays. Also, please have a man sit outside, and put another one in Swacker's office."

Vance stretched himself luxuriously and rose.

"Most considerate of the gentleman to call up at this time, don't you know?"

(Sunday, September 16; 10 a. m.)

A fine drizzle was falling the next morning when we rose; and a chill—the first forerunner of winter—was in the air. We had breakfast in the library at half past eight, and at nine o'clock Vance's car—which had been ordered the night before—called for us.

We rode down Fifth Avenue, now almost deserted in its thick blanket of yellow fog, and called for Markham at his apartment in West 12th Street. He was waiting for us in front of the house, and stepped quickly into the car with scarcely a word of greeting. From his anxious, preoccupied look I knew that he was depending a good deal on what Skeel had to tell him.

We had turned into West Broadway beneath the Elevated tracks before any of us spoke. Then Markham voiced a doubt which was plainly an articulation of his troubled ruminations.

"I'm wondering if, after all, this fellow Skeel can have any important information to give us. His phone call was very strange. Yet he spoke confidently enough regarding his knowledge. No dramatics, no request for immunity—just a plain, assured statement that he knew who murdered the Odell girl, and had decided to come clean."

"It's certain he himself didn't strangle the lady," pronounced Vance. "My theory, as you know, is that he was hiding in the clothespress when the shady business was being enacted; and all along I've clung loyally to the idea that he was our secret to the entire proceedings."

"The keyhole of that closet door is on a direct line with the end of the davenport where the lady was strangled; and if a rival was operating at the time of his conceal-

Home Page Editorial Supporting Married Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Most people will remember "The Revolt of a Modern Father" written a year ago by a gentleman of letters, who protested that middle-aged parents were having too hard a time of it.

He asserted, and truly, that fathers and mothers who had three or four children to educate according to modern ideas of education, college, and all the rest of it, were compelled to use the savings they had accumulated for old age.

Have any of the advocates of companionate marriage thought, that if it became popular, it would add another two or four or ten years on to the dependence age of children? That parents would be working on into old age itself to buy their offspring more indulgences?

Now here's a new one. A woman whose daughter contemplated marriage with a poor young man, a woman who had expressed herself most vehemently against companionate marriage, said one day to some friends:

"I just told Harry (her husband) that when Lucile got married, it wouldn't hurt him to keep up her allowance just as he did at college. Dick is only earning a hundred and fifty dollars a month at the office and they can't live on that. Lucile has to have a maid—she's so helpless—and rents are abominable."

"So I just told Harry what to expect. He doesn't like the idea, but I'm going to see that he does something for those children anyway." Financially not so different from companionate marriage, is it?

It is not my idea either for Harry, or Lucile, or Dick. It is my idea that when Lucile got married, it wouldn't hurt him to keep up her allowance just as he did at college. ### MARYE and MOM Their Letters

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Marye, dearest:

Well, of course you know what I think about a woman smoking, but maybe it's just that I can't get used to it. I don't know, but it always gives me an uneasy feeling to see any woman with a cigaret in her mouth. I can't help suspecting that she's a little fast. I think that's how men who don't like it feel too. And you can't blame a man for objecting to seeing nice girls do something he associates with the other kind. I suppose there are men who object to it because they say it's a man's privilege.

Now that would have annoyed a young woman even in my day, Marye dear, because women never did like men to assume exclusive privileges. Only they didn't come out in the open and fight about it as you girls do today. But be sure you know why men don't like it before you pump on them. And remember, too, if you strike at a man's belief that he is lord of all creation you are trying to take away a prop he has leaned on for ages.

For my part I think it would be a pitiful sight to see a man pulled down like that. It seems to me that women want to climb right up over men, climb a pedestal and do the crowing for a while. That may be fair but you're in such a hurry about it you won't give the poor things a chance to get out of the way. So when you get to the top you will have to look down at

by ALLENE SUMNER

Martyrized Edith Cavell faced her firing squad without flinching. That's what the British have always said and that's what the British stick to in their movie called "Dawn" which deals with the life of Edith Cavell. But the German ambassador to the Court of St. James protests. This heroic picture of Edith Cavell's meeting with death is "not accurate," he says. He produces records showing that the nurse actually fainted and had to be shot by an officer kneeling by her side. This criticism has made the British furious.

HOPE SHE DID!

Personally, I rather prefer the picture of the terror-stricken, fainting woman to the heroic one of tradition which always smacked too much of the theatrical to be convincing. Can't we be merciful enough to grant a woman bravery and courage and yet let her faint at her actual shooting? It makes her more warmly akin to the rest of us to grant her a little human weakness.

SHE KNOWS BETTER.

It's something terrible the way American women won't let a "head sculptor" from Paris who knows his curls, do her hair. This from M. Antoine, lately returned home to Paris after doing a very lucrative business in the states for some months.

"The American woman will not trust her hair dresser," means the monsieur. "She pays for a specialist and she will not let him work. She insists on a curl here and a swirl there, and the effect is all wrong."

THEY ALL LEARN.

The monsieur isn't the first gentleman from abroad to come up against the American woman's insistence that she knows what she wants and gets it. "Us girls" are not the docile, easily persuaded submissive creatures that the mensurers may be used to dealing with.

And the more ones of what a Parisian barber does to one when let alone, the more one applauds our common sense. I could tell you a tale of something I looked like when I emerged from a beauty shop in Paris one day. There was no mirror before me and I let "the specialist" alone. Ye Gods!

"SHE LOVES ME!"

Be careful of your letters, girls! Not only because they might make nice courtroom exhibits A and B, but because learning to read handwriting is so much the vogue these days that HE may read yours, and because handwriting experts now say it's perfectly simple to tell from writing just what one's emotions are towards the receiver of the letter.

MORAL: Use a typewriter! Through modern science can probably tell even that what your emotions are—all depends on how hard or soft you hit certain letters, I suppose.

CHARMING EFFECTS OF FINGER WAVES

Have you ever noticed what wonderful effects in hair dressing can be obtained by means of the deservedly popular finger wave? The finger wave is made by the hand of the operator, and furnishes endless opportunity to bring out individuality and emphasize personality. There may be many waves for the rather cuts the too straight hair line of the athletic girl. Sometimes the merest suggestion of curve at the temples is all that is needed.

If the operator is lacking in a sense of artistic line, study the matter yourself with the aid of your comb and mirror, and upon the occasion of your next visit to your favorite beauty shop, give the operator a practical demonstration of the lines you want followed.

The secret of lasting waves lies in the application of the fixing or curling fluid used after the hair has been thoroughly shampooed, and dried and remoistened in preparation for adjusting the hair in finger wave. At this point the hair should be abundantly wet with a mullagenous preparation made from flaxseed, quince seed, gum tragacanth, or gum acacia.

After the mucagenous preparation has been well worked into the hair, the wave is placed by means of comb and the operator's finger, pinned in place by hair pins, fastened securely under a strong net, and allowed to dry slowly. The last step is to gently comb or brush out the fixing medium.

Mothers:

Next to the natural laxative from a mother's breast, a plain, old-fashioned preparation is always best for keeping baby's little digestive tract clean and sweet. When your little one doesn't eat, or can't sleep, give him a few drops of plain Castoria.

It is purely vegetable, you know. Any doctor will tell you that it is utterly harmless to the youngest infant. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. Yet its gentle influence is soon felt all through the tiny system. Not even castor oil can compete with Castoria and how much better it is to use this milder means of regulating a baby! Never give baby paregoric or similar opiates, because, a few drops of Castoria are just as soothing, and no harm. That's the beauty of using pure Castoria; you can give it just as often as you discover any sign of colic, constipation, or diarrhea—or those times when you don't know just what it is that has caused an upset. Only get the genuine Castoria—bearing Fletcher's signature. It isn't expensive, and with every bottle comes the book, "Care and Feeding of Babies"—worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

LEAD POISONING BRINGS CHANGES IN THE BLOOD

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

An investigation made by the United States Public Health Service revealed the fact that lead dust is to be found regularly in the air of many industrial establishments.

In cracker factories, underwear factories, machine shops, grocers, cigar factories, tailoring and pressing shops, and even in an ice cream plant some lead was found in the dust in the air. Lead pipe is still in use in most of the larger cities, particularly for connections.

Blood Changes

When lead is absorbed into the human body changes take place in the tissues of the nervous system and also in the blood. Investigations were made to find out to what extent the human body when it is exposed to amounts hardly sufficient to produce poisoning, but still sufficient to produce changes in the blood.

Small degrees of lead absorption are not important, but when the blood cells are affected in considerable numbers, some means must be taken to prevent further absorption of this poison.

Drs. W. S. Leathers and H. J. Morgan investigated the amount of lead poisoning in an enameling plant in Nashville, Tennessee. Thirty-nine cases were found among the men, with a high degree of lead poisoning in 15 cases.

Only 13 of the 39 men examined failed to show evidence of lead absorption. One of the men was a painter, four were enamel painters and five were sprayers, one was an inspector, one a furnace man, one a foreman, one was a grainer and one was a mixer. Thus the lead apparently affected the men in all parts of the work without reference to the amount of contact with lead, but apparently with relationship to the attention that they paid to their personal hygiene.

Twenty-six of the men said that they smoked while at work. Most of them were careless about washing their hands before eating. Indeed, many of them ate in the room where they had been working, thus exposing their food to lead dust.

The washroom itself was dark and poorly ventilated, and there were no shower baths so that the

Corrective Measures

When proper sanitary arrangements were made and the men were cautioned about chewing tobacco at work, when a suitable exhaust system was supplied for carrying off the dust, and when a system of supervision was installed so that men affected by the poison might be properly advised, the conditions were overcome.

Out of the 39 men in the plant concerned, not one could be given an absolutely clean bill of health. Many of them suffered with physical defects in addition to the disturbances brought about by the lead poisoning. Sanitary control of industries is one of the most important steps in the modern extension of preventive medicine.

TEST ANSWERS Here is one solution to the LET-TER GOLF puzzle on the comic page: LOVE LIVE LIFE WIFE

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (224) The Killer Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

Only A Few Days Then Spring. Think now then of a home of your own, a garden of favorite flowers, or a few good laying hens.

THE CROWN JEWELS. On Shackleton's voyage, the strength of these great Orcas was realized for the first time when the mighty beasts, swimming under water, were seen to smash ice three feet thick above them.

GAS BUGGIES—The Consolation-Prize

NO JEWELS AND I EVEN SOLD OUR GOOD CAR TO BUY THIS BUNCH OF JUNK. I SUSPOSE SOME PEOPLE WOULD SAY I WAS SOFT, JUST BECAUSE I WAS TOO BIG A MAN TO SUSPECT THE DIVER OF SLIPPING OVER A FAST ONE.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

You may love the sinner while hating sin, but it's hard to love your neighbor while hating his radio. ANSWERS TO ANXIOUS If a radio fan's wife is getting plump, what can he do about it? Answer: Condenser. If she is a brunette and he prefers a blonde? Ans.: Transformer. If she is inclined to be wild? Ans.: Rectifier. If she elopes with the repair man? Ans.: Arrestor. If she gets grouchy? Ans.: Tickler. If she wants to meet him for lunch? Ans.: Meter. If she wants a fur coat? Ans.: Resistor. If she insists? Ans.: Eliminator.

Sometimes it's lucky that grown-ups are heard and not seen.

LETTER GOLF

It's easy to LOVE your WIFE by following letter golf rules. Today's puzzle proves it. Par is three and you will find one solution printed on another page:

Letter golf puzzle grid with the words 'LOVE' and 'WIFE' starting in the first row.

THE RULES 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You can change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

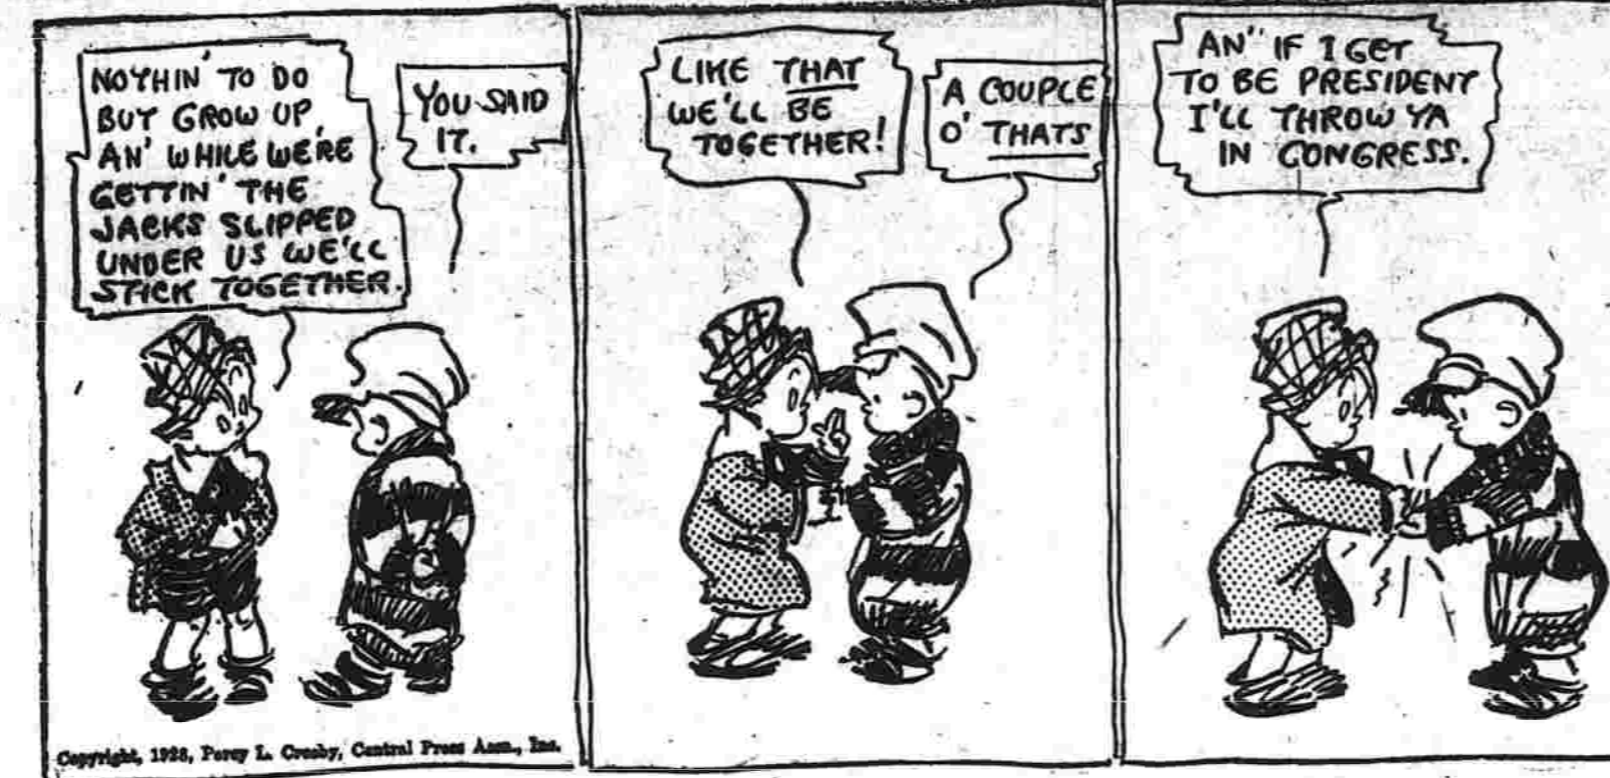

Necessity is also the mother of lying. Some must work and some will shirk—thus runs the world away. A Hartford man lost a leg in a railway accident, and when they picked him up the first words he said were: "Thank the Lord, it was the leg with the rheumatism in it." The hangman was adjusting the noose about the condemned man's neck. "Will some one kindly sing 'Blest be the tie that binds,'" the victim requested.

THE TINYMITES

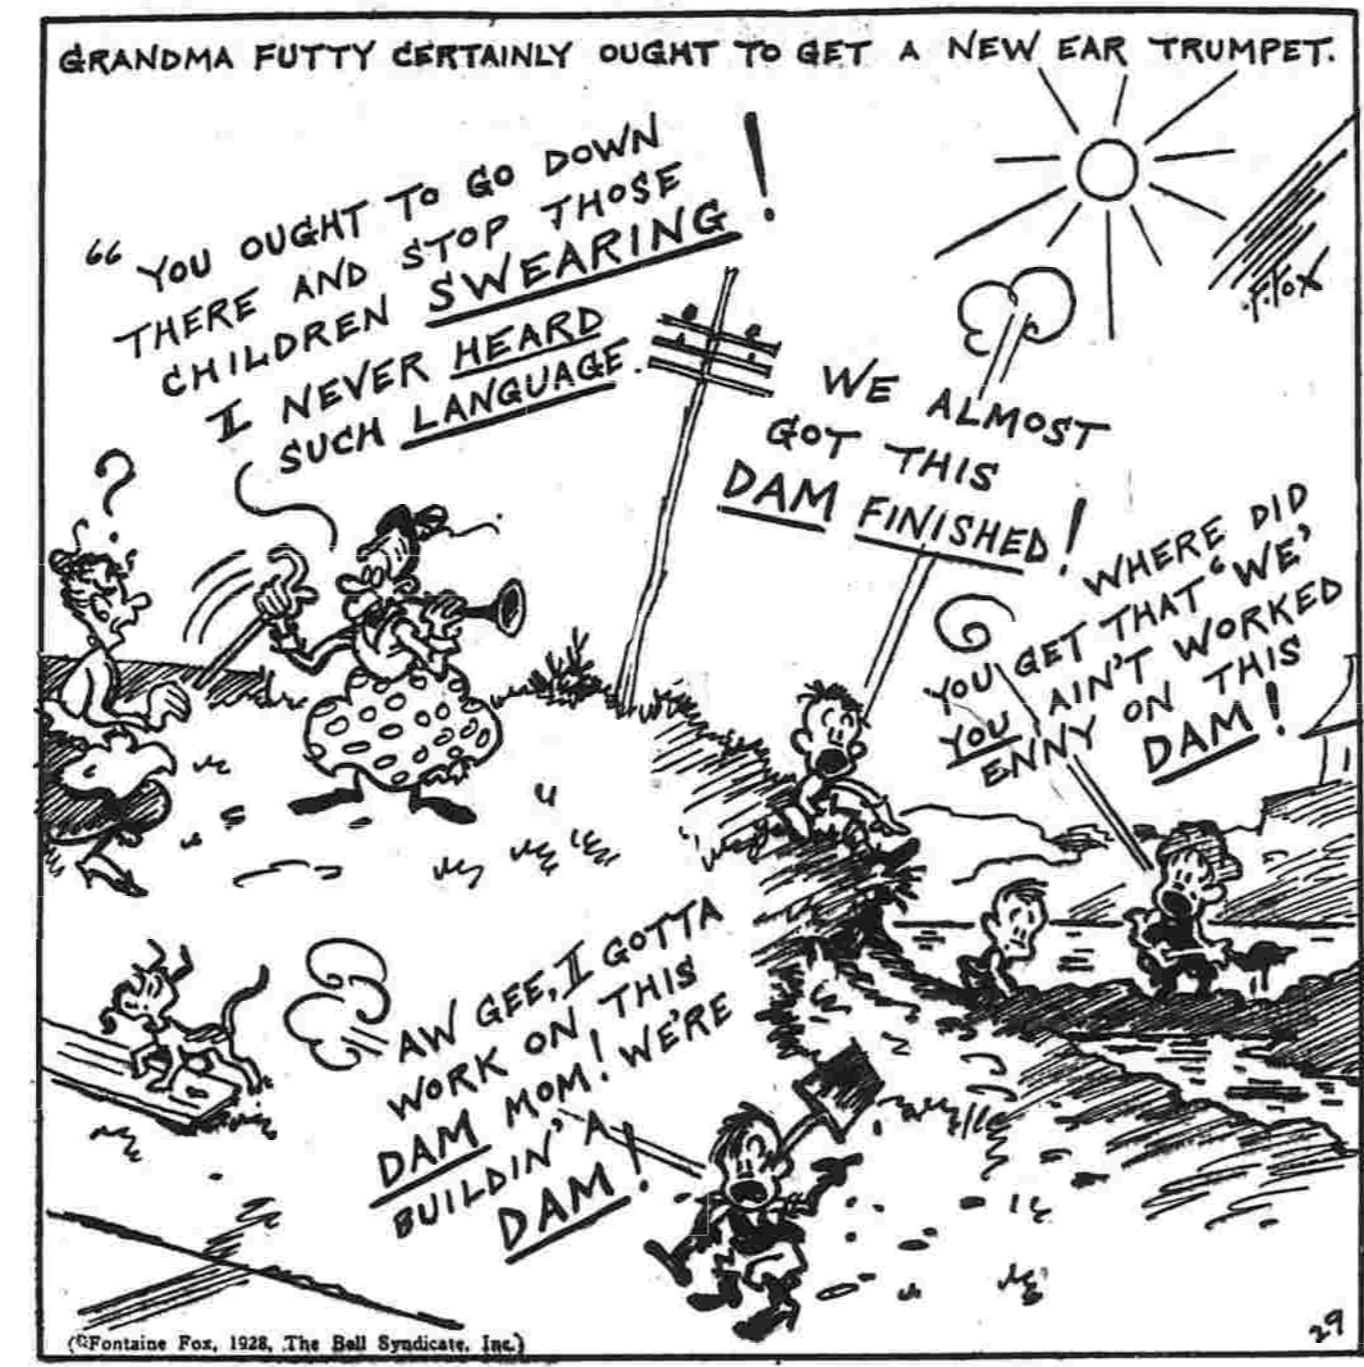

Down in the boot wee Clowny stayed, and quite a bit of fuss this made, for all the other Tinies searched until they were tired out. Then Coppy said, "Well, goodness me, I'd like to know where he can be. Perhaps he'll answer if we call." Then he began to shout. "Hey, Clowny, tell us where you are. Are you real close, or are you far? Just yell hello. We'll trace you as your voice comes through the air. Perhaps you've run right out of sight, or maybe you are not all right. To hide like this from all of us just doesn't seem real fair." And then the Tinies listened. They expected Clowny soon would say some little word of greeting, but he didn't make a sound. In fact his face broke in a smile. Thought he, "I'll let them look a while, for surely they will find me if they keep on searching 'round." 'Twas getting late, and Scouty cried, "Well, we have tried and tried and tried to find poor Clowny, but we can't. Perhaps he's come to harm. Let's try and find the old balloon man. I'm sure he'll do what'er he can. With Clowny missing this long time it fills me with alarm." Then Carpy cried, "Say, just look here. This boot is acting very queer." And he was pointing at the boot in which wee Clowny hid. The Tinies yelled it for a spell, and then the bunch began to yell, for they were really frightened over what the queer boot did. It stretched up and jumped around, and then went hopping 'cross the ground. Of course this startled Clowny, and his head came popping out. "Hey, catch me, Tinymites," he cried. "Yes, I've been hiding down inside." The Tinymites then chased the boot amid a merry shout. (The Tinymites see the rubber boots on parade in the next story.)
