"HARMONY" IS NEW SLOGAN IN CAMP OF DEMS

"Can't Stop Smith, Then Why Hamstring Him?" Leaders Ask—Anti-Smith Forces Are Unorganized.

Houston, Texas, June 23.—A quiet but, nevertheless, extremely energetic campaign was under way here today to stifle the sounds of conflict already beginning to rise in connection with the Democratic national convention which opens on Tuesday. It is predicated on this line:

"Smith is going to be nominated. You can't stop him. Why hamstring him, then, by repeating Madison Square Garden?"

In this campaign are, first of all, of course, the active supporters of the New York governor. But of more importance is the fact there are a number of southerners who would rather see someone else nominated but who are convinced one day will be, and being so convinced, want to make the best of the situation.

The early efforts to form a bitter-end, anti-Smith coalition have failed utterly. Perhaps one may be whipped into shape later, but thus far efforts along this line haven't made much headway. There are half a dozen rival candidates, each with his small following and each determined to "stop Smith," but there is totally lacking the coordination of effort necessary to success.

Anti-Smith Senator

One southern leader, a Senator, who views with no particular enthusiasm the nomination of Gov. Smith, was approached with the suggestion that he join a last ditch anti-Smith coalition.

"All right," he agreed, "but who've you got to stop him?"

Several names were suggested—Rood of Missouri, Hall of Tennessee, Donahay of Ohio—anybody but Smith.

"Nothing doing," said the Senator. "In a life time of politics, I have learned that you can't stop anybody with nobody. It is a truism in politics. You show me somebody capable of stopping him and I'm your man. But unless and until you do, I am too good a Democrat, and, I hope, too sane a politician to join any such undertaking."

This same dialogue, varying in degree, according to the principals and the place, has taken place half a dozen times in Houston during the past 24 hours. The coalition seekers have been busy, but without any appreciable success, and, on the contrary, their efforts seem to have resulted in the determination on the part of the long-headed leaders of the party not to let the anti-Smith hotheads promote another such spectacle of Democratic disharmony as was presented four years ago.

Harmony has become the watchword of the majority, and a short, snappy convention their goal.

For the first time since 1912, a memorable year to Democrats, they point out, a Republican convention has just concluded its work by doing a lot of work in public. The agricultural discontent in the normally Republican middle west, coupled with the slashing attack that is planned on the Republican scandals, oil and otherwise, has convinced a lot of Democrats that they have a real chance to win in November.

Therefore, they want, if possible, to present here in Houston a reasonable harmonious convention and get away as soon as possible.

This task of the harmonizers is to put a soft pedal on the prohibition fight. That is at once their first and their most difficult task.

Radical Drys.
The Radical drys are militant and determined to hammer into the platform at any cost a plank that will commit the party irrevocably to the "moral righteousness" of prohibition. The Smith people are equally determined that there will be no such plank, and, being in the majority, are fairly confident of their ability to defeat it. They are not so much afraid of the plank itself as they are fearful that the fight over it may engender so much bitter feeling that there will be a reperussion in November. Hence, the vegem missionary work among the arriving delegates to secure in advance if possible, of Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, to be chairman of the platform committee, Senator Pittman is rated a dry, as most western Democrats are, but he does not belong to the radical fringe of the party on this question.

Every incoming delegation is being quietly urged to select as its member of the resolutions committee a "reasonable" member who will be willing to go along with the majority rather than upset the appearance with a minority report.

The next few days will show whether or not their confidence is justified.

ANTI-SMITH LEADERS

Here are some of the outstanding leaders in the fight against Gov. Al Smith. At the top, right, is the best known and most bitter of the anti-Smithers, Senator Thomas J. Heflin of Alabama. Beside him is Dr. Ernest Cherrington, executive secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism; below Dr. Cherrington is Gov. Dan Moody of Texas, and below him is Senator Furnifold Simmons of North Carolina. At the right, below, is F. Scott McBride, head of the Anti-Saloon League. The shadowy picture between McBride and Heflin is William G. McAduff, who fought Smith for 103 ballots at Madison Square Garden in 1924, and is lending his support to the Anti-Smith forces this year.

If Miracles Happen Smith May Be Stopped

Houston, June 23.—If Governor Al Smith is denied the Democratic nomination he will be the victim of one of the greatest surprises in political history.

There will be a few who can correctly say they told us so, but most of them will really be quite as astonished as the vast majority of politicians and political writers, who now believe there is no stopping him.

Yet there is strong opposition facing Smith, and more bitter than strong. In these last few weeks it has stiffened desperately and it hopes to break Tammany's heart with the two-thirds rule, without which, of course, it wouldn't have a chance in the world.

Formidable Opposition.

When one considers the character and customary power of the principal elements in the opposition group, the fact that Smith's victory is so widely conceded seems all the more remarkable.

For the die-hard enemies of the New York governor include:

1. The Anti-Saloon League and all the organized drys.
2. The Ku Klux Klan and all the anti-Catholics.
3. The radical purists of the

WET PLANK DEBATE STILL UNDECIDED

New York Delegates Say Governor Smith Himself Will Decide Matter.

Houston, Tex., June 23.—Gov. Al Smith has no intention of demanding a wet plank in the Democratic platform and some of his close friends are quietly laughing up their sleeves at all the "fuss" being made by the drys, according to the reports in circulation at the Smith headquarters today.

Although Gov. Smith personally believes the Volstead law should be modified, it was pointed out by members of his board of strategy that he has repeatedly declared for a rigid enforcement of all laws, but making no specific mention of either the Eighteenth amendment or the Volstead law.

There has been a persistent report at the Smith headquarters for the last 24 hours that the governor will approve the writing into the platform of a plank declaring for a rigid enforcement of all laws, but making no specific mention of either the Eighteenth amendment or the Volstead law.

Public Statements.

Because of repeated public declarations made by Smith in the last two years in which he asserted that all laws should be strictly enforced, his managers are said to feel that it will not embarrass him as a president candidate to run upon a platform which declared for rigid law enforcement.

Judge George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany hall and a half dozen other leaders in that famous Democratic organization are here to do all they can in a quiet way to help nominate Governor Smith, but they are making it a point not to discuss prohibition.

Both Judge Olvany and George

FIVE NATIONS JOIN IN HUNT FOR AMUNDSEN

Nobile's Camp Again Reached by Plane—Ships to Assist Aviators in Search for Missing Explorer.

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, June 23.—Five nations were joined today in the search for Captain Roald Amundsen, famous Arctic explorer, who left Tromsø, Norway, almost five days ago accompanied by Major Rene Gullbrand and three others in a French plane and has not been heard from since.

Majors Maddalena and Penzo, the Italians who flew over Nobile's encampment yesterday and dropped additional supplies and radio equipment by parachute, intend to scour the northern wastes for Amundsen today. They announced they will make a systematic search of the southern coast of Northeast Land, Spitzbergen.

The Norwegian aviators, Captain Riser-Larsen and Lieut. Luetzow Holm, will make similar flights over the west coast of Spitzbergen. Three Swedish planes, including the giant hydroplane Upland, also will scour the northlands. These planes passed over Nobile's encampment yesterday but were unable to land.

The Russian ice breaker originally sent out to search for Nobile by the Soviet government, has altered its course and is now proceeding towards Northeast Land to search for Amundsen at the request of the Norwegian government.

Two French navy ships are now enroute to this place to aid in the search. An additional Italian plane left Pisa yesterday to join the other Italian relief planes.

All fliers searching for Amundsen will also keep a sharp lookout for the ten other members of Nobile's party three of whom set out across the ice to search for him. The other seven were separated from their commander when the Italia crashed on the morning of May 25.

Major Maddalena has now reached Nobile twice. On yesterday's flight he brought back pictures of the marooned explorers. He said he saw an animal gambling about the encampment which he believed was Nobile's terrier dog mascot.

DROP SUPPLIES

Rome, June 22.—A powerful Swedish tri-motored Junker seaplane has located the stranded Nobile party on the ice off the coast of Northeast Land dropping weapons, storage batteries and rubber. The occupants of the plane spotted the Nobile encampment upon the ice at 8:30 last night and dropped the supplies attached to parachutes.

Commander Torberg, pilot of the plane, plans to equip it with runners for a landing on the ice. Then, he hopes, he can pick up the six members of the Nobile group and carry them to King's Bay.

Weather conditions have improved off the northern coast of Spitzbergen, said a radiogram from King's Bay.

The commander of the Nobile supply ship Citta di Milano sent a wireless request that search be made for the seven members of the Nobile expedition who were carried away with the envelope of the dirigible Italia when it was wrecked on May 25 in a storm. In addition to these seven men three others are missing. They are Dr. Finn Malmgren, Captain Alberto Mariani and Captain Filippo Zappi, who set out to aid the explorers.

Major Penzo, Italian aviator, sent word he would hop off to locate the Amundsen party.

So far no word has been received of the fate of Captain Roald Amundsen, Lieut. Dietrichsen and Rene Gullbrand, who have been missing since Monday, when they set out from Tromsø, Norway, to try to aid the explorers.

Major Penzo, Italian aviator, sent word he would hop off to locate the Amundsen party.

An all wise provision, slightly assisted by the U. S. G. A., committee reduced the field to 65 starters for today's two final rounds of 18 holes each. This was a swell idea but it didn't go far enough. If they wanted to be really clever about it, they would have ruled out all who did not finish the first two rounds within six strokes of Jones' 144, as far as title chances were concerned, the rest of them merely were out for the walk today. There may be a man who can take Bobby in 36 holes but that crack doesn't go unless we are talking about foot races.

As it was only Bill Leach, Philadelphia, and George Von Elm, Los Angeles, tied at 146, and Walter Hagen, Henry Cluel, the young Stratford, Conn., pro, and Willie MacFarlane, grouped at 147, had better than an outside chance at the title.

The greatest medal play golfer of all the ages racing down to the line with the present British open champion.

2,250 TROLLEYMEN IN WALKOUT MONDAY; MANCHESTER IS HIT

LONE BANDIT GETS $50,000 IN ONE HAUL

Boards Train, Holds Up Messenger, Binds Him, Throws Out His Body and Then Coolly Escapes.

Blissfield, Mich., June 22.—A lone bandit who held up a New York Central passenger train here shortly before midnight, escaping with $50,000 in cash, was being sought by authorities of Blissfield and nearby towns today.

The train was enroute from Chicago to Buffalo, having left Chicago at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The bandit is believed to have boarded the train at Adrian, Mich. He entered the express car and leveled a revolver at the messenger in charge. The latter was bound and gagged and hurled from the train when it slowed down for the Blissfield station.

The bandit, after seizing a pouch containing $50,000 in currency, leaped from the train on the other side of the station and escaped in the darkness. It is believed the bandit fled to an automobile parked near the station and headed toward Detroit.

The train pulled into the station on time at 11:15 p. m. The first indication of a daring robbery came when several persons on the platform were horrified at the sight of a man's body hurled from the express car into their midst.

The messenger appeared to be unharmed and was quickly revived. But in the meantime the bandit had made good his escape from the other side of the train.

Adrian, where, according to the messenger, the bandit boarded the train, is 15 miles northwest of here. The messenger said the man "got the drop" on him as soon as he entered the express car. He described the bandit as "little more than a boy, well dressed in a blue suit, an shoes and a light felt hat."

Detroit, and all nearby towns were immediately advised to be on the lookout for the robber. He was about 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighed about 150 pounds, the messenger said.

LINDY IS FORCED DOWN ON TRIP TO NEW YORK

Returns After Second Attempt, to Wilkes-Barre, Pa.: To Wait 'Till Fog Lifts.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 23.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who took off from Cooten near here at 5:45 a. m., today for New York, returned to that town at 8:15 this morning after having been in the air almost 2 1/2 hours.

It was believed that the fog which forced him to descend last night while enroute from Detroit to New York was still too dense over the mountains in this region for safe flying.

Lindbergh came down at Cooten when he ran into heavy fog of a few miles from here. He was immediately recognized by the crowd that gathered and explained that he had left Detroit for New York yesterday afternoon and decided to land because it was getting late with the added danger of fog.

While he was here, Lindbergh was the guest of Lehigh Valley Railroad officials, inspecting the yards at Cooten. He retired last night at 2 a. m., and was up again at 4 o'clock inspecting his plane.

MISS EARHART, GUEST OF MRS. A. B. HOUGHTON

Woman Who Expelled Blacklist Talk is Expelled by President General.

Washington, June 23.—A bitter fight on the floor of the next national convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution was assured today by the action of the national board of management of the organization in expelling Mrs. Helen Tutts Bailee, of Cambridge, Mass., from the membership.

Mrs. Bailee was charged with giving out statements injurious to the name of the national society. Another allegation, pertained to disturbing the harmony of the society.

"We regret very much being compelled to inflict such drastic action upon a member," said Mrs. Alfred J. Brousean, president general. "But the good name of the organization is above any personal feelings."

Mrs. Bailee has the right to carry her case to the floor of the National D. A. R. convention.

Cancel Church Service For Ex-Communicated

Providence, R. I., June 23.—The diocese of Bishop William A. Hickey against whom some parishioners unsuccessfully carried their case to the highest courts of the state and church.

It was the intention of Rev. Joseph Binette, the priest at South Bellingham to hold the service out-doors and to have in attendance Elphage Daignault and many of his followers. Daignault headed the faction that sought to break the centralized control of the Catholic diocese of Providence in the courts and at the Vatican. They were ex-communicated several weeks ago.

Sympathizers with Daignault and his cause will hold a St. John's banquet in Woonsocket tomorrow evening.

STULTZ HONORS PIONEER FLYERS

Crew of Friendship Place Wreaths on Alcock's Grave in Manchester.

London, June 23.—Pilot Wilmer Stultz and Mechanician Louis Gordon, of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship, today paid homage to the memory of Sir John Alcock, who, with Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, made the first flight over the Atlantic from America to Europe in 1919.

Stultz and Gordon flew to Manchester in an Imperial Airways plane and placed a wreath upon Sir John's grave on the outskirts of that city. They were guests of a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor and the U. S. Consul in Manchester.

Miss Amelia Earhart, third member of the crew of the Friendship, remained behind in London, where she was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, wife of the American ambassador.

The trans-ocean flyers were given a tumultuous demonstration last night when they attended the Tivoli theater and occupied the royal box as guests of the Royal Aero Club. The cheering was so intense that Stultz was finally prevailed upon to make a speech. In doing so he bettered the record of Henry Ford, whose speech at a formal banquet in this city recently consisted of 31 words. Pilot Stultz only 17 words to declare the thanks of himself and his companions for the cordial reception they have received in England.

Miss Earhart, who is interested in social welfare work, is visiting in the city. She expressed high praise over the excellent work being done by the British to alleviate the distress of the unfortunates.

MRS. BAILEE DROPPED FROM D. A. R. ROLL

Woman Who Expelled Blacklist Talk is Expelled by President General.

Washington, June 23.—A bitter fight on the floor of the next national convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution was assured today by the action of the national board of management of the organization in expelling Mrs. Helen Tutts Bailee, of Cambridge, Mass., from the membership.

Mrs. Bailee was charged with giving out statements injurious to the name of the national society. Another allegation, pertained to disturbing the harmony of the society.

ASLEEP AT AUTO WHEEL

Fitchburg, Mass., June 23.—Falling asleep at the wheel of his automobile, Dr. C. E. Mason, of Shelburne Falls awoke when he recorded consciousness in Burbank hospital here early today. He thought he was having a nightmare.

The auto, with the overworked and exhausted physician asleep at the wheel, ran off the Ashburnham road, crashed through a stone wall and dropped twenty feet down an embankment. Dr. Mason was tossed out and rendered unconscious. It was found by a passing motorist.

Connecticut Co. Views Situation With Alarm—Say Future of Electric Transportation in State is at Stake—"Service Must go On" is Company's Slogan.

New Haven, Conn., June 23.—The fate of the trolley men's union in Connecticut is the issue in the strike that the union has called on all lines of the Connecticut Company, effective next Monday night, according to trolley men here, while to the company itself the entire future of electric transportation in the state is at stake. The strike call issued last night by John T. Rfordan, of Worcester, Mass., affects 2,250 individuals with 425 in New Haven and 500 in Hartford.

"Service must go on," is the company's slogan.

"Peace and victory," the leaders of the men are urging.

Meanwhile the leaders of business in all cities affected by the strike order were today studying how to avert what they believe will be a calamity. Levi T. Snow, president of the New Haven Chamber of Commerce, and his aides in that organization and discussed plans for a peaceful settlement.

Employees' meet.

Trolley men themselves will meet in their headquarters towns Monday evening to receive definite instructions about the conduct of the strike.

Here is the deciding list of ten words:

GET HALF MILLION IN MAIL ROBBERY

When Steamer's Mail Bags Are Opened in England, Theft is Discovered.

London, June 23.—A bold registered mail robbery upon the United States liner Leviathan, in which the loot is conservatively estimated at $50,000, was discovered today when the registered mail bags reached here from Southampton.

Scotland Yard detectives believe that the crime was committed before the mail sacks were placed aboard the liner in New York. The American postal authorities were immediately notified.

The Leviathan reached Southampton last night and the bags were immediately dispatched to London, reaching the provincial sorting offices shortly after one o'clock. As the seals were apparently intact the detectives declared that the crime could not have been committed while the mail was enroute from Southampton to this city as the time was too short.

In view of the fact that the mail was under lock and key and guarded on the liner, the detectives dismissed the theory that the robbery may have taken place on shipboard. They then assumed that the bags were opened before leaving New York.

TRY NON-STOP FLIGHT TO CAPITAL OF MEXICO

Two Start From Ontario Today— Have Gas Enough for 30 Hour Trip.

Walkerville, Ontario, June 23.—Joaquin Pacheco, Mexican businessman and Fritz Vieler, former German war ace and now proprietor of a flying school in Mexico City, hopped off today at 7:34 on a non-stop flight to Mexico City.

The flyers are driving a Stinson-Douglas plane. The plane carried 410 gallons of gas, enough for the 30 to 35 hours of sustained flying to the Mexican capital.

Vieler was a German aviator in the World War and then went to Mexico City where he is a leader in aviation circles.

The object of the flight is to stimulate interest in commercial aviation in Mexico.

The flyers headed for Dayton, Ohio. Plans to fly by way of Washington were abandoned when the weather bureau reported storms over Pennsylvania.

WHATERS STOPS FLIGHT

Lakehurst, N. J., June 23.—Unfavorable flying weather over the U. S. Naval Air Station here early today made it appear that the Navy dirigible Los Angeles probably would be unable to leave during the day on a scheduled flight to Lowell.

KLAN DRAGON SEEKS PRIVACY IN PRISON

Stephenson, in Suit, Says He Is Prevented From Talking to Lawyer.

Laporte, Ind., June 23.—A suit for a writ of mandamus in behalf of David C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, seeking to compel the warden of the State Prison to permit him to talk privately with his attorney was filed in Circuit Court Stephenson's attorney presented the writ to Judge John C. Richter.

Stephenson, serving a life term, alleges a conspiracy between the warden, Walter H. Daly; the trustee, Michael Foley, Jess Andrews, John L. Moorman and Arthur Denton, and Gov. E. Jackson to prevent him from holding private conversations with Moore.

POWER FOR LIVING IS PROBLEM OF PRESENT-DAY PATRIOTISM

The International Sunday School Lesson for June 24 is, a Semi-Annual Review, "Jesus, The Saviour."—Mark 12:28-34.

Men who gather statistics say that in the United States there are 285,000 young men of college age in prison, who is thirty per cent more than the number in college.

That startling fact brings the thoughtful person up with a round turn. It starts sober musings concerning the state of society. That more than a quarter of a million blighted young men should thus be not only personal failures, but also a burden and a menace to their fellows in ominous; but worse yet is the revelation that something is fundamentally wrong with the common life of our time that it should produce such a tragic harvest.

This disturbing condition may be approached from many angles. It is an indictment of homes, of schools, of politics and of churches. And when we contemplate the "big" criminals, the rich and powerful, who are often the trouble makers in our minds become clouded with gloom.

We may add further the grim fact that the so-called "leaders" of public life are apparently not concerning themselves with these fundamental moral issues, but are "playing politics" for place and privilege and power. Crime concerns them chiefly because of its predatory effects upon property and life; and not as a sign of a state of mind among a multitude of men and women, mostly young, for whom society is responsible.

Is not the conclusion clear that the issue above all other issues in our time is how to help people to live good lives, instead of bad? Should not the public concern be first of all, how to purify and enlarge and sweeten the springs of general conduct? No economic or political question even approaches in importance this one of the preservation and development of the law-abiding, right-regarding, self-respecting type of character. Our day's much-discussed "moral slump" outranks as a public issue even world peace.

This Age of Mastery

It is more important that mankind be good than that it be smart or rich. Ours is the most learned era in the long history of the human race—though it may not cure the ill is the wisest. We have acquired more new facts in the past fifty years than mankind ever learned before in a thousand years. Civilization's mastery of nature is marvelous. The secrets of the earth, of the sea and of the air are spread in the daily newspaper. Man may talk and see across continents and oceans. He may ride above the clouds or beneath the waves. He has devised machines passing the dreams of the ancients. Yet he is not wise enough to be good. He may scarcely be trusted with the use of his own creations.

Recently I have been attending the sessions of an educational conference that brought delegates from far-scattered regions of the United States and Canada. The speakers set forth the varied riches of the opportunities for formal education. Avenues are open for everybody to become "educated." But the talk was all in terms of organizations and institutions and courses of study. Nothing was said about the supreme forces making for human culture, which are personal and spiritual.

A great purpose, a great passion, a great love, a great loyalty, a great responsibility, a great experience do more to develop mind and character than a lifetime of books. Most of the men who have led the larger human movements have been devoid of what is technically called "education." Two of the wisest statesmen have ever interviewed—Stambolsky, of Bulgaria, and Ibn Saud, of Arabia—had no special school advantages.

A Man as a University

To plunge into the midst of the application of all of the foregoing, Jesus has been a greater educational force in the world than any university. Associated with Him made leaders and builders, as well as saints, out of His commonplace "rusties." Himself without the privileges of a higher education, Jesus was the world's wisest teacher. And His life was greater than His learning. What He was and did surpassed all that He said. To keep company with Christ was, and is the highest education.

As we review six months of lessons in the life of the Lord, this truth stands out like a lone mountain peak: Jesus made men wise with a wisdom that was expressed in life. Good conduct and great characters were the output of His school. It is no mere fancy to say that Jesus was a people-maker, and in all comers learned the advanced lessons of life. The wisdom that He imparted expressed itself in service and fellowship. His graduates constituted a "good society" that purified and beautified all of the life it touched. Many secular historians have pointed out that only Christianity preserved the decadent Roman empire from complete moral collapse.

Apparently, we have missed the message of the past in our pursuit of education. Mere book-learning never made a people better, and is not so useful and happy. As it was in the Graeco-Roman era, when the most highly educated classes were the most rotten morally, so it is today. In certain groups and aspects of our civilization. The moral decadence which marks our literature has come down from the top and not up from the bottom. The filthiest forms of "humor" are to be found in the undergraduate publications of our higher institutions of learning. The conspicuous public corruptionists have been mostly men with college degrees.

Wisdom Plus Power

This big truth, that cleverness cannot save society, turns our faces toward a still greater truth, which is that Jesus taught and practiced wisdom plus power. For six months the Sunday schools have been learning that the ways of Jesus were helpful, heartening, healing ways. While He set men to thinking new thoughts concerning the profoundest themes, He also set them to living new lives. His wisdom worked out into life and fellowship and service. In quiet ways, amidst the lowly villages, life on Galilee, and the sophisticated city centers of Judea and Perea, Jesus set into operation vast new forces of world awakening and world betterment—the greatest educational experience of humanity. And along with the new

CHOOSING RIGHTLY

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE
International Sunday School Lesson Text, June 24.
Choose you this day whom ye will serve.—Josh. 24:15.

Daily we choose whom we will serve, and there is no getting away from it. In going to work reluctantly, thoughtlessly, not illumined and warmed with the joy of loving service, one chooses monotonous bondage rather than the freedom of happiness. To work, thinking that material success brings the desired satisfactions, is choosing error and worldliness rather than the Lord. In believing that one can in his own powers triumph in life's supreme quest, he chooses self and failure rather than the Lord and victory.

Aristotle appears as a cultured, good, and lovable man, but he erred in making happiness the end of the State and the individuals. His ethics finally terminated in mere pleasure-seeking. Zeno, the Stoic, also fell short in teaching that one should be free from passion, and unmoved by joy or grief. This notion culminated in cold fatalism. Happiness is an effect, and not an end. It is never found by seeking it as an end, for it comes unbidden and unsought through the forgetfulness of self and the pure love of performing uses. The unselfish love of usefulness admits of unlimited expansion. It is the very essence of God's love. He who makes the end in God's love inflows, gives peace, and produces happiness as an effect. True happiness cannot come in any other way.

Choose you this day to make unselfish service the supreme end of life. Let the mind grasp the true purpose of our creation. Exalt self-sacrifice and loving service. Guard against the direful treason of the senses, lest they work a ruinous betrayal of life's eternal purpose. Then happiness will come unthought, a free gift of God's love.

TROLLEY ROW

In the threatened approach of a strike of the trolley men employed by the Connecticut Company in the four districts of the state where the company operates it is unlikely that the railway company will receive much sympathy from the patrons of its lines or from the public at large. And this is apt to be the case even in the face of the most profound ignorance of the public concerning the merits of the dispute between employing concern and employed workers.

Practically ever since the organization of the Connecticut Company and the merger of the various independent properties which previously occupied its territory there has been a noticeable absence of any concern on the part of the corporation as to the opinion of the people of the state or its own patrons concerning the policies and methods of the company. There has also been a marked indifference on the part of the management, toward the comfort and inconvenience of its cash customers, which any peanut stand proprietor could have told it was bad business.

The attitude of the Connecticut Company has been dogmatic, dictatorial, uncompromising toward its patrons, actual and potential. It has been an excessively hard boiled concern—and, judging by its failure to hold and increase its business relatively with other trolley companies in other parts of the country, rather ignorantly so. It has esteemed the management of a transportation organization depending somewhat upon public favor to be a matter of arithmetic and monopoly, instead of, as it actually is, very considerably a matter of psychology and good will. It has proceeded on the apparent supposition that its public consisted solely of so many coin purses, potentially productive of so many fares in such a length of time and obligated by circumstances controlled by the company to deposit those fares in the company's cash boxes without regard to the equivalent received.

In addition to being hard boiled the Connecticut Company has been ill-mannered to its public—at least to the neglect of the slightest leaven of suavity. When it has curtailed service it has done so without adequate explanation or apology. When the public has protested against poor service or against dirty and out-of-date cars, its protests have been ignored or sneered at. The Connecticut Company has never been able to see its patrons as people; only as nickels or tokens.

In the face of the rising competition of the automobile it failed utterly to meet the situation by providing better service, with improved and more comfortable cars. On the contrary, it permitted its equipment to run down and curtailed its service, playing into the hands of the automobile manufacturers and driving to the purchase of cars thousands of its customers who would have preferred to continue using electric transportation if the latter had been kept abreast of the times. And when patronage had been driven away from feeder lines it sulked and took revenge on the public by scrapping them.

Here in Manchester we have a shining example of Connecticut Company policy in the condition of the Depot-Square-Center stretch of trackage, a constant menace to life and limb, for the correction of which the company makes no effort, depending on the most flimsy of gestures to smother active protest and risking, every day, the causation of a ghastly tragedy. Yet ask the company what its intentions are with relation to that peril—and find out if you can.

Perhaps the Connecticut Company may be altogether right in its controversy with its employees. Lacking any authoritative array of facts by which to judge, there is extremely little justification for the forming of fixed opinion on this question. But a concern which has so persistently and arrogantly flouted the public need not be in the least surprised—and it will have no just cause to feel aggrieved—if the public jump at the assumption that the company is treating its employees as cavalierly as it has always treated its customers.

M. H. S. ETHICS

Manchester people with any sense of fairness and any proper pride cannot well fail to be gratified over the course of the High School authorities here involuntarily and of their own initiative forfeiting the baseball games won by the High School team with the assistance of ineligible players.

The action would be creditable if the discovery of the players' illegal status had been brought out by some competing school. It is doubly so in view of the apparent fact that there was no suspicion on the outside that Manchester players had violated the ethics of the Inter-scholastic League. There is reason to believe that such a course as that of the High School authorities and Student Council has not always been followed by American schools or even colleges when disclosures of ineligibility of athletes have been made within a school.

But two wrongs, or two hundred wrongs of this sort, do not make a right. The Manchester High School, without whisper of accusation from any competitor, has accused, tried and convicted its baseball team, has sacrificed the championship and taken a low mark in 1928 baseball, solely as an act of decency and honor. It is something to be much prouder of than the winning of a dozen championships.

PALLID ISSUES

Deferring that fatal question of prohibition for settlement on the field of battle during convention week, Democratic platform builders at Houston are said to have determined to make their major issues "Republican corruption" and the "power trust," hoping to put over the idea that Mr. Hoover is the foster-daddy of water power monopoly.

"Republican corruption" six years ago, for which the Republican party as a party was about as much responsible as Lloyd George or the Ameer of Belochistan, and charges that Herbert Hoover is a proponent of monopoly, may provide edifying material for stump speeches by Democrats to Democrats, but among Republicans they will raise hearty laughs. And the Democrats in the forthcoming campaign face the job of winning a number of millions of Republican votes.

If the Republicans were to adopt corresponding measures they would fight out the election on the charge that the Democratic party was the party of treason in 1860 and took up arms in rebellion, and that the private life of Grover Cleveland was open to criticism.

That stuff about Hoover's being the servant of the "power trust" is fairly good, in view of the fact that the bitterest opponents of the secretary of commerce, in the Kansas City convention, were water power men who believe that Hoover is altogether too much of a liberal for their special purposes.

COOLIDGE AND FLIES

Now we know that President Coolidge, as lately as last summer when he was fishing for trout in the Black Hills, did have some lingering idea that he might be a candidate for President again this year. How we know it is this way: Last summer he used worms as bait for the trout. There is traditional antipathy between the bait fisherman and the fly fisherman. The fly fisherman high-hat the wormers and the wormers are constitutionally as mad as the fly casters as any other kind of folks always are at people who high-hat them.

The point is that there are just one hundred and thirty-nine worm fishermen in the country for every fly fisherman. Which means that there are one hundred and thirty-nine times as many bait votes as fly votes. This year Mr. Coolidge is fishing with flies. Last year they couldn't get him to fish with flies. This year he doesn't have to give a hoot for votes. Last year—well, he used worms. You can't tell us!

BAY STATE INCUBUS

Tearfully the Springfield Union appeals to the Republican party of Massachusetts to get rid of Alonzo B. Cook. It has a plan for doing this impossible thing. For years practically every Republican newspaper and every Republican politician of any worth and substance in the state of Massachusetts has been trying to get rid of Alonzo B. Cook. And every year they fail. Alonzo B. Cook bobs up in the direct primaries as a candidate for state auditor every year, and every year he wins the nomination. Hardly anybody knows him, but everybody knows that as a state auditor he is terrible. The way he wins is to write a lot of letters to all sorts of organizations in the rural districts telling them that all the crooked city politicians and crooked city newspapers are trying to throw out of office the only honest man in Massachusetts, and rallying them to his support. On primary election day these people, who don't know Alonzo B. Cook from five cents worth of cat meat, all go to the polls and vote for him. And every year the city vote is split up by several Boston candidates trying for the job. So Alonzo stays in.

One year a whole lot of Republicans told the Democrats that if they would only nominate somebody who wasn't a murderer or a pirate or a South Boston gambler they, the Republicans, would vote for him. We've forgotten whether the Democrats picked out an ex-convict or a person in an insane asylum or Frog Pond bum, or what, but anyhow they failed to provide any possible refuge for the disgraced Republican votes. So Alonzo went in as usual.

This year the Union begs and beseeches the candidates in and around Boston to withdraw and let a Springfield woman run against Alonzo. They won't do it, of course. And even if they do Alonzo will win in the primaries anyhow. The only person who can beat Alonzo B. Cook out of the Massachusetts auditorship is the Angel of Death.

BLACK BEARS

Naturalists are making some ado about a group of glacier bears, smallest of all American Bruins, which has just been mounted in the Field Museum at Chicago. The glacier bear, although it is about the same color as the beautiful silver fox, isn't a separate species, it appears now, but only a color phase of the black bear, as is the cinnamon bear. This makes grey black bears and reddish black bears. Now what we would like to see, and have been looking for in every menagerie and zoo we ever visited, without success, is a black bear. Every black bear we have ever seen—and they have been not a few—was something besides black.

FIND HUMAN SKELETONS 4,000 YEARS OLD IN A HIDDEN GRAVE IN ENGLAND

Pembroke, Wales.—Human skeletons nearly 4,000 years old have been discovered in a hidden grave at Ludchurch, near here, by A. G. O. Mathus and J. D. Beddoe, two local antiquarians. With the skeletons is buried a dog. Sir Arthur Keith, famous anthropologist, has identified the bones as being those of a woman—evidently an adult, a man, a child—of the fragments of the backbone of a newly-born baby. All the bodies were placed together in what was evidently a family tomb. Alongside the skeleton of the dog was a beaker or drinking vessel made of clay. It was from this that the date of burial is fixed. Dr. Cyril Fox, director of the Welsh National Museum at Cardiff, says the beaker belongs to the beginning of the Bronze Age—about 1,700 B. C.

A THOUGHT

It is more blessed to give than to receive.—Acts 20:35. He gives twice who gives quickly.—Syrus.

New York, June 23.—The year-round New Yorker must search for his novelty.

Turn a stranger loose on Broadway and he will be kept sleepless trying to keep up with the season's theater successes. Or he will hop a bus to Coney Island, Chinatown or the new tunnel; he can wear out as many shoes as a bullion racer absorbing the contents of shop windows and can gasp at the boldness of the speakeasy; he can make the rounds of the skyscrapers or the super clubs; fandango on the roof of a hotel and take a bus ride to Riverside Drive.

But such things are not for the year-round New Yorker, whether or not he has ever done them before. Just now the novelty of "the big street" is the midnight audition, try-out, or whatever you care to call it. In years ago this highly interesting sight on the bustling streets of Broadway was reserved exclusively for vaudeville agents, booking concerns, producers and such. They were held in the quiet darkness of a vaudeville theater at late morning or early afternoons. Acts, teams, song birds, hoofers and imitators of the Four Original Hawaiians all got their chance to be heard. A large percentage of the odds and ends booking of the theater grew from these hearings. Oftimes a real discovery would be made.

But now, at the midnight hour, all New York—with the price of admission—can sit in on these auditions. The struggling performers of the "main stem" can hear the pleasant ripple of applause, and the jaded round-theater is finding it quite the thing to do, just now. Whether at 42nd and Broadway, the foot of the Bowery or the intersection of Second avenue and Houston Street you'll hear New Yorkers boasting the virtues of their radio.

"Yes, sir, we got Kansas City just as clear as though it was across the street," heard all the speeches and the shouting. "Houston's just as easy—"

I am told that New York is rivaled only by the far away rural places when it comes to 100 per cent radio fans. Tens of thousands of dwellers in Manhattan are quite as aloof from life as the loneliest hill-billy living in from his Kentucky hill top. For the thousands of lonely lives the radio has been a tremendous boon. They can sit in their tiny back rooms and tinker by the hour. Whole sections of the city are devoted to the sale of radios and radio accessories. Even the East Side pushcarts carry loud speakers, dials and odd lots. The principal work of the lower Cortland street is a veritable bedlam of radio noises. Street hawkers offer bargains and sneak thieves promise you, in whispered tones, an expensive set for a few dollars. Suspicious-looking figures slide up, reach in a hand satchel and bring out a few parts that can be bought for a song.

They are telling a story of two Manhattan brothers. One became enormously rich; the other struggled along. The rich brother at once became ritzy and would have nothing to do with his poor relatives. One day the poor brother found it essential to get in touch with the other. He telephoned the brother's office and, after a long verbal battle with the secretary, finally arranged to be heard. "Hello," he began, "is this Joe?" "Yes." "Well, this is Ed. . . . Don't you remember me? We met at our father's house." GILBERT SWAN.

OUR KIDNEYS

There are many poisonous substances in the body that would cause death if they were allowed to accumulate. Some of these are poisons that have gained entry from the outside, but many are actually created by the normal body processes. Without organs for the purpose of eliminating these poisons or toxins, our lives would be snuffed out within a very short time. We have several of these protective organs which some serious ailments—the kidneys and know something of their function, but I thought you would like an article explaining in simple language more about them.

The kidneys are two bean-shaped organs fastened to the back wall of the abdominal cavity, on either side of the spinal column, just in front of the lowest ribs. They are imbedded in fatty tissue, and held in place by ligaments. Their function is to filter out waste and surplus material from the blood and yet retain the good food substances. The most common excretion is composed principally by urea, uric acid, oxalic acid, indican and water. They may sometime excrete sugar and albumen which, if persistent, is an indication of some serious disease. These organs are composed chiefly of an enormous number of finely winding tubules which originate in little sacs through which flows a small convoluted blood capillary. The waste from the blood flowing through this little capillary escapes through its walls into the space between the inner walls of the sac, into the tubule and then all of these join together into a ureter which goes to the bladder. Drop by drop this waste is being continually separated from the blood by these millions of tubules.

When the kidneys are being continuously overworked, they may become weakened, and susceptible to disease. The kidneys should excrete about a little over three pints daily for an adult, but this range varies greatly with the amount of liquid consumed. The principal work of the kidneys is to eliminate protein waste products. There are a number of diseases of the kidneys, but the three you hear of most frequently are: inflammation of the kidneys, when they discharge their waste in the urine; also called nephritis and Bright's Disease; stones in the kidney, when some of the products which are excreted become hardened; floating kidney, when it becomes loosened from its moorings and saunters around through abdominal regions.

where it has no business. I have prepared articles on all of these diseases, and I will be very glad to mail them to any of my readers who will send me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. The kidneys are often injured during acute illnesses or in the course of chronic diseases. Once they are badly damaged, the condition is serious and the patient should do everything in his power to avoid doing more injury to them. Alcohol is very hard on the kidneys, as is turpentine, mercury, and carbolic acid. Almost any condition where there is an extensive destruction of the skin, such as burns, skin diseases, and accidents, is apt to bring on an acute kidney disorder. This shows how the health of one important eliminating organ may affect the health of another.

Question: B. V. G. asks: "What causes so much acid in my mouth as to cause my teeth to be sore under the edge of the gums. Am very constipated, but can I do to remedy these conditions?" Answer: Improper diet is the cause of pyorrhea, trench mouth, or any other similar disorder which would make your teeth sore under the gums. Go to a good dentist and have your teeth treated and scaled. At the same time, change your diet and overcome constipation by taking plenty of exercise, using more greens, and following the menus I give ever week in this column.

Question: Mother-of-five writes: "I wish you would please make some suggestions for a lunch to be carried to work by a young girl?" Answer: A pint of milk with any one acid fruit makes a good lunch; or, if you will provide her with a thermos bottle, she can carry with her any of the cooked non-starchy vegetables which were prepared the evening before and re-heated the next morning. With these warm vegetables include one or more of the raw salad ones, such as celery, lettuce, etc., wrapped in a damp cloth.

Question: R. J. asks: "Will you please state the method of diet treatment for overcoming the liquor habit?" Answer: A short fruit fast for a few days will positively eliminate any abnormal craving for liquor. If one wishes to stop drinking alcoholic intoxicants he will find it very easy to control himself after the cleansing effect of a fruit fast. Question: John asks: "When going in swimming how long should one stay in the water?" Answer: About twenty to thirty-five minutes.

It is estimated that 160,000,000 people speak English.

He Must Just Adore Wars; Fought Under Three Flags

William Drysdale Tells of His 15 Years of Soldiering But Stipulates it Cannot Be Told Until He is on the Ocean—The Story of a Real Soldier of Fortune.

ONE often wonders in reading one of Richard Harding Davis' books if there really are such persons as his soldiers of fortune. He tells of men, mostly Irishmen, who enroll and fight under the sun that promises fighting. These fighting Irishmen are found in little South and Central American republics leading barefooted soldiers to battle. They are found in the Balkans fighting with the States in far away China the traveler is surprised to see coolies being instructed by Irish drillmasters, preparing for war. It seems wherever war is, one will find an Irishman.

Stanley's Experience
Stanley, the explorer, who found Livingstone in darkest Africa, tells about finding an old Irishman in the jungles. The district was fever infested. Wild beasts and snakes abounded. Fierce natives roamed about perpetually at warfare. Stanley asked the Irishman why, with the whole world to choose from, he should pick out this dangerous and God forsaken spot.

"Tell me," answered the Irishman, "where on this earth a man does not die and I will go there in my days."

In the history of our own country one finds many instances of the soldier of fortune, men who no sooner setting foot on this soil during war time, would hasten to enlist. They came from Europe in droves during the Revolutionary and Civil wars.

Yet these soldiers of fortune are a modest and silent type of men. They say little. They would rather go off by themselves and think of the sights they'd seen than speak about them. As a result it is difficult to corner them to get a detailed account of their experiences.

Enter, William Drysdale
William Drysdale, of 11 Cottage street is true to type. Many a reporter has sought him out and asked him to tell his story. He refused always. The reason these few extracts from his life are being published is because by the time you read them, William Drysdale will be out on the Atlantic ocean on his way to Ireland. Under those conditions he granted the interview at his home this week. He wanted to be certain that he wouldn't be here. Why, nobody but himself knows. He gave no explanation.

The ordinary man is satisfied with one flag. Mr. Drysdale was not. He served in three armies under three flags. He got into one by saying he was older than he really was and he got into the World War by saying he was considerably younger than he really was. It seems you can't keep this type of man out of a war.

READY TO MOVE TO THE OTHER SIDE

MR. Drysdale is a small man with gray hair and a small gray mustache. He wore a blue suit, a white shirt and a blue tie at the time of the interview and the scene of the interview was a strange one. The local man was packing up to leave the country and he sat on one heavily opened trunk while the reporter was perched on another. All of the rest of the furniture was on its way to New York to be placed aboard the steamer. The truckmen were ever then waiting for the trucks so the interview, of necessity, had to be as brief as possible.

Often when leading up to a climax in his tale, Mr. Drysdale would stop suddenly and say as he brushed the hair back from his forehead:

"No, no. We'll have to forget that. Let's not say any more about it."

It seemed as if the pictures brought up by the recital unnerved him. He would pause for several minutes during these times, before he was able to continue.

Born in Ireland
Born in Gifford, County Down, Ireland, the local man spent the early part of his life, as he expressed it, "the same as any of the other Irish lads thereabouts." He was born in 1868 which makes him now 60 years old.

When he attained his 16th year, William decided that he would like to go into the army. He had been dreaming of the life for several years before but he knew that he never could fool the army officers when he was 14 or 15 so he waited a while.

But when he was 16 he decided that he looked old enough so off he went and told the recruiting sergeant that he was 18. They believed him and he became a member of the Royal Irish Fusiliers. He was attached to the Intelligence Department and became a signal man. For his work he was often cited. It was very interesting, he Soldiers Had to Lasso Dead So That They Could Bury Them.

William J. Drysdale, late of 11 Cottage street, but now of 169 John street, Lurgan, County Armagh, Ireland, (when he gets there), wished the most depressing of his experiences omitted from the story which he tells on this page today. But there was one that he allowed if the reporter would promise to soften it down.

The American company to which Mr. Drysdale was attached was fighting in the Philippines. The men were protected by shallow trenches. It was terribly hot. The natives would rush up to the trenches, seemingly eager for death and they were mowed down in dozens. Their bodies were near the trenches but not one of them reached the American line proper.

As the day progressed the Americans had to devise means to get rid of the bodies. They dared not show themselves. So the men made improvised lassos and lassoed the bodies. They would then drag them into their own trenches where graves were dug and they were buried.

Soldier of Fortune

William Drysdale

When he received his honorable discharge, young Drysdale decided to come to the United States. He located in Clinton, Mass. While there, President McKinley called for volunteers to fight in the Philippines as Aquinaldo had started an insurrection in the islands. One of the first to volunteer was the local man. Because of his experience in soldiering he was accepted immediately. His outfit at this time was the 43rd Regiment of U. S. Volunteers. It did not take long for the soldiers to be on their way, for the need was great and the Philippine islands far away.

Accordingly the men entrained for Brooklyn where they boarded a transport. They went across the Atlantic and through the Suez canal while other soldiers were being rushed across the continent to embark on Pacific transports. It was a long trip. As Mr. Drysdale remembers, it took them 53 days to make the trip.

SOUTHERNERS THOUGHT PIER WAS OCEAN STEAMER

THERE was a great difference in transports then and during the World War, the veterans remarked. The name of the boat was the Meade and the men were packed in like sardines. There were 1,300 of them and they were all from the inland southern states. Few were from New England. The men had never seen a boat, not alone an ocean going vessel, and many of them mistook the long pier in Brooklyn for the boat itself. When about half way across a storm arose and the southerners were seasick, to describe it mildly. Tables and chairs and dishes, went scurrying about the mess rooms and it seemed to all that the boat was about to sink, as it was calm heavy. But the storm came to an end and the recruits became calm again.

Arrive At Philippines
In time the soldiers arrived at the Philippines and right in the midst of the fighting. For nearly two years it was war at its worst. The enemy was composed of half wild and all wild savages. They would not fight in the open. The days were bad enough, watching for snipers, but the nights were nightmares. Sentinels would be found killed and horribly mutilated and the sentinel a few feet away would hear nothing. It got on ones nerves, this silent death. When it was a matter of open fighting there was but one thing to do. The natives dead would be piled up like cordwood after several volleys had been fired by the Americans. Disease was rampant and took as many victims as the bullets of the enemy. It was two years of Hades, said the old soldier.

In one of the battles which lasted about twenty minutes, Mr. Drysdale counted 161 natives dead along a short stretch of road. In this fight the local man was next to Jimmy McGovern, brother of Terry, the famous pugilist. This was at Alang Alang.

During this portion of his narrative, the veteran would shudder as he started a tale. He would be in the midst of it when he would say:

"Now don't say anything about that. It was too horrible and will be better if those things are not printed."

Incidents Omitted
He said that a dozen times so those parts were omitted. Hastily sketching his return to this country he said that the next year was peaceful until the World War came along. Then his desire to get the better of him and he decided to enlist. He was then 49 years of age and knew he could not enlist at that age but he was willing to try so he traveled to Montreal. Approaching a recruiting officer he asked if he could enlist in "The Black Watch."

"There is no more Black Watch," answered the officer. "Every officer and every man in that famous regiment has been killed."

One officer after another he visited but they would not take him until he began to cut down on his age. Finally he told an officer that he was 44 years old and was accepted. He was then shipped to Halifax. Then began his life under the third flag, the Canadian.

ALL MEN TO WAR. WOMEN COAL SHIPS

A T Halifax during those days, Mr. Drysdale saw something he never expected to see. All of the men had gone to war and the women were coaling ships in the harbor. They were carrying the

Washington Letter

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington, June 23.—The Society for Credit Where Credit is Due should be careful not to overlook the Hon. Clement Lawrence Shaver of Fairmont, W. Va.

If the Democrats do any real business next November, considerable thanks will be owed the Hon. Clem, the big peace and harmony man.

It was he who showed them, in the face of utter doubt that they could get together without clawing each other and wrecking the furniture. It was he, working quietly and persistently behind the scenes, who both put the party on its feet financially and led it away from the belief that the Houston convention would be just another repetition of Madison Square Garden.

The Hon. Clem's performance is unequalled. Nobody ever did it before. Chairmen of the party national committees, such as the Hon. Clem, are divided into two classes; those who win campaigns and those who don't. The former are made post-officers and general or given other juicy federal jobs where they can fulfill a few of their campaign promises and see that the most faithful supporters of the ticket are not neglected.

The unsuccessful national chairman of one becomes an object of pity and contempt. Crushed under a heavy campaign deficit he merely floats along until the next convention, when he is tossed out into oblivion and never heard of more.

And that, had he been someone else, might have been the story of the Hon. Clem. Gosh, what a licking his candidate took! And what a dismal outlook the party had under his guardianship!

But instead of devoting the next four years to stalling off the creditors, he actually tried to pay them—and did. He interested Jesse Jones, the angel from Houston. And today, for the first time within the memory of man, the Democratic party enters its convention unburdened with debt and expects to come out with $150,000 above expenses. Always before it has been necessary to sell the convention to pay the debts of the previous campaign.

By the real high spot of the Hon. Clem's career was the Jackson Day dinner.

The opposition to having any Jackson Day dinner at all was tremendous. Up to that time no one every mentioned the Democratic party without pointing out that it appeared headed for the Madison Square row all over again. Everyone feared the dinner would become a frightful public spectacle of gore and carnage from which the party might never recover. Democrats in Congress were almost unanimous against the idea. Even after the Hon. Clem had gone ahead and announced it, they wanted to call it off, with a few compromises demanding that only John W. Davis be permitted to speak. But the Hon. Clem told them:

"If we can't sit-around in a little preliminary affair and show some degree of tolerance toward each other, the sooner we know it the better."

And he went right ahead, inviting as speakers the leaders of the party's divergent factions—McAdoo, Smith, Ritchie, Reed and others. But he was careful to program Davis and Claude G. Bowers strategically to pound the keynote of harmony. The heaviest of the oratory was to come from the moderate middle group standing between the extremists.

He let everyone know that this was a pep meeting, but no dog fight. He even went so far as to go over their speeches in advance to see that everyone kept on the reservation. The only one who departed from his prepared speech and wandered into forbidden fields was Governor Ritchie of Maryland, whose speech was wet enough to be a little off key and who did not profit by the venture. Newspapers and lots of the Democrats had come expecting to see a knock-down-dragout fight—and sat through till early morning to hear Senator Jim Reed finish his plea that the party unite on what it could agree upon.

That was the turning point. The downcast Democrats perked up. In the period immediately following total contributions of $125,000 were poured in on the party. Men who had been ignoring and dodging requests for aid, believing the party's cause hopeless through dissen-sion, began to kick in. Nearly everyone had come to agree with the Hon. Clem that it wasn't smart or necessary to cut and slash each other while the country looked on and snickered.

It was the Hon. Clem who brought Bowers, the brilliant student of Democratic history and biographer of Jefferson and Jackson, into the picture. When Bowers mad good with the best of the Jackson Day speeches, Shaver quietly began to promote him for temporary chairman and keynoter at the convention. More harmony stuff, for Bowers is primarily a Democrat. Not a single protest came against this move for Bowers. Subsequently Shaver similarly began working for Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas as permanent chairman. It was another master stroke, for Robinson was acceptable to the south leaders after his rebuke to Tom Heflin in the Senate.

At this writing the Hon. Clem is still working with the wets and drys to prevent a bad row on the convention floor over the prohibition plank that must go into the party platform.

Here's another boost for our little "Baby" Clara Bow. About five years ago she was playing the role of Baby Peggy's mother in "Helen's Babies"—at a very small salary. One day she was broke and borrowed two dollars from a neighbor at the studio. AND SHE PAID IT BACK.

It won't be long now before the boys and girls in Des Moines, Omaha and way-points will be seeing all of Broadway's big stage hits. With the increased popularity of talking movies, stage hits will become screen subjects. Warner Brothers will start the rolling in pictures, with its phone feature out of "The Desert Song."

A few days ago Charlie Murray received the following letter:

"I am very much interested in the making of motion pictures, yet it is most difficult to obtain admission to the studios. However, if you will stop at my desk I shall be glad to furnish you with tickets from the studio to the showing of a picture in the making, and many other features of the industry."

The letter was signed by an official in a big Los Angeles hotel. That's just a little worse than asking a postman to take a hike for his vacation. They weren't even going to show Charlie the real thing—just a picture of it.

Hollywood, Calif.—It begins to look as if the world may soon acknowledge a Fifth Estate.

Some centuries ago when Europe was ruled by feudal lords, three estates were established. The first estate was composed of clergymen, the Second Estate included nobles and the Third Estate was made up of the common people. These estates were considered vital factors to the civic and social existence of medievalism.

As the world progressed, feudalism vanished. A Fourth Estate was recognized—the press. And now motion pictures have advanced to a position sufficiently important to society to be acknowledged as the Fifth Estate.

Here's another boost for our little "Baby" Clara Bow. About five years ago she was playing the role of Baby Peggy's mother in "Helen's Babies"—at a very small salary. One day she was broke and borrowed two dollars from a neighbor at the studio. AND SHE PAID IT BACK.

Little Sue Carol, the Chicago heiress, certainly has made a rapid ascent in pictures. Her first two films, "Slaves of Beauty" and "Soft Cushions" found her in a basement during most of the action. WILLIAM HAINES AT STATE SUNDAY, MONDAY

Starred in "Telling the World," a Comedy de Luxe; Two Features Today.

William Haines has grown up. The gay, careless but capable actor of "West Point" and "The Smart Set" has become the finished player whose ability rises to genius in his new production, "Telling the World," which comes to the State theater for Sunday and Monday.

In this picture, Haines shows himself for the first time as a comedy actor who can raise his whimsical soul to the very heights of dramatic acting as well. "Telling the World," starts out in the lightest of light comedy, has its moments of intense emotional pathos and ends up with a surge of swift melodrama that pulls the audience right out of their seats.

Haines has the role of an ambitious young newspaper reporter who follows a pretty chorus girl to the Orient and becomes involved in a revolution. There follows a series of half-raising thrills that prove as humorous as they are dramatic. Anita Page plays opposite the star.

For today's continuous show, which operates from 2:15 until 10:30, the State is presenting a choice program which consists of two splendid film features and a pleasing array of shorter subjects. The first feature is "Diamond Handcuffs," a thrilling drama of mystery and romance featuring Eleanor Boardman and Courted Nagel.

The companion feature is Tim McCoy in his latest western thrill-o-drama "Wyoming," a story that is repeated with action and thrills. McCoy is cast in the role of a soldier who is ordered to Wyoming to prevent the white renegades from robbing the Indians of their lands.

The coming of the hot weather has always been more or less unpleasant to most of us. Typhoon fans at the State keep the theater cool and agreeable at all times.

FOLLOW THE MODEL HOME AND

Every Facility Found At Elizabeth Park

Robert J. Smith's new development, Elizabeth Park when the Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home will be built is as well located as any development in town. In choosing one's home site here, the builder is not moving out into the country and away from facilities, for it borders onto a well established residential section and electric lights, gas, water and sewers will be carried through the entire tract at once. The entire property is on high ground, has a fine natural drainage, providing dry lots throughout it. There are several beautiful shade trees on the property and the easterly section is covered by an extensive orchard. These trees are in very good shape and will provide some dandy fruit trees for many a home owner's back yard.

If you have never visited Elizabeth Park you have a treat in store for you and a surprise. It is very accessible to all parts of the town and Henry street, one of the leading streets in Manchester, leads directly to the entrance and will be extended through Elizabeth Park. The easterly end of the tract is all on plain ground and from the second story window of houses constructed there, one should be able to obtain a fine view of the Connecticut valley above Hartford. Practically all the streets have been cut through and graded at this time and sidewalks will follow in a very short time.

INSULATION HELPS TO CUT FUEL COST

Felted Mineral Wool Fiber Serves as Overcoating for Heating Plants.

Felted mineral wool fiber serves admirably as an overcoating for heating plants, especially those which burn oil as a fuel. Many home-owners report a very noticeable factory savings in fuel costs after applying it over their furnaces. Manchester contractors use such a substance regularly.

One form of felted block is made from a mineral which is melted under a very intense heat and then chilled, at which time it forms into a thin fiber resembling sheep wool. This is processed by machine and blown into light, resilient blocks which contain over 90 per cent. minute dead air spaces. When this block is applied to the furnace casing, it forms together in one complete piece and resembles an overcoat, thereby enclosing the entire furnace casing and preventing any infiltration or heat leaks. Due to its softness and the large quantity of dead air spaces it contains, it further acts as a very good sound insulator. Being made from a mineral, it is long-lived and will withstand high heats. Its construction, being a resilient nature, allows the casing to expand and contract without interfering with the insulation, as the blocks contract and expand at the same time, following the casing action.

There are various types of hot water and steam boilers, such as round boilers, sectional boilers, fire tube boilers and water tube boilers. These are made of cast iron or steel generally and the shells expand and contract, but not as readily as with the warm air furnace, therefore, the solid materials are not required to withstand such heavy duty. Very often these boilers are covered with asbestos cement without much thought given to the eventual losses. However, the value of such types of insulation must be considered and the heat losses figured in terms of dollars to ascertain the proper materials to be used. The amount of heat to be subjected should also be considered, and life considered under such continuous action. There are many cases where the first cost is too often taken into consideration and the final results are not considered. This method will prove very costly in the end, and in place of saving fuel and adding comfort to the home, the owner generally spends more and gets less. However, through ignorance he is not aware of the loss, which goes on from year to year through the same leaks.

G. E. REFRIGERATOR IS 'WORRY-PROOF' MACHINE

In these busy days, when the housewife has numerous interests outside the home, it is necessary for the manufacturer of home appliances to make his product as free from mechanical worry as possible, without interfering with its efficiency.

The busy housewife cannot be expected to remember to oil the mechanism, yet in most machines it is necessary that this attention be given at regular intervals to prevent serious damage and expense. Then, too, there is the inconvenience suffered by being temporarily deprived of some much needed household aid.

The General Electric Refrigerator is one that can be plugged in the nearest convenience outlet and actually forgotten, in so far as the mechanics of the machine are concerned," states M. H. Strickland. "However, the very beauty of the machine and the perfect service it renders keeps it from becoming forgotten once it is installed in the kitchen," he continued. "We have had a number of inquiries from women who have seen General Electric Refrigerators in the homes of their friends. Its extremely simplicity invariably makes a lasting impression on them and has been the cause of quite a number of the machines being installed in homes throughout the city."

According to Mr. Strickland, General Electric Refrigerators are made in a variety of sizes and are finished in porcelain and white lacquer.

BEAUTIFUL MANTEL IN THE MODEL HOME

Fireplaces Popular Today and Every New Home, Big and Small, Has One.

In the Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home, now under construction at Elizabeth Park there will be a fireplace of course. Like the mantels of old, this one will be beautiful as well as useful. The first requisite of the successful fireplace is that it be practical. If it is not, it loses much of its value as well as its appeal. Then it should be built to burn fuel, as it is to be used for this purpose. Again, it demands early consideration in the matter of location, so that it may be placed with proper convenience. It is the heart of the room in which it is installed, and the furnishings radiate from it. Therefore it should be prominently placed.

It is important that the fireplace and the room be in harmony; it is of much less importance how that harmony is achieved. Although the modern tendency is to rely on the decorator's sense of design and color, however, where the rule has been broken prove that there may be equal honor in the breach. Also, rooms not so successful show that neither system is fool proof.

It is not likely that anything will ever replace the fireplace as the center of the home life. Fireside happiness is the quest of all mankind and nothing reflects domestic peace and happy family life like the blazing fire in the hearth. Visitors to the beautiful model will be delighted with the fine fireplace and mantel.

HEATING IS IMPORTANT TO PROSPECTIVE OWNER

Automatic Regulation Proves Best—Saves Fuel and Keeps Temperature Right.

Almost anyone who lives in a building owned by others hopes some day to have a home of his own. In it he looks forward to a great many comforts and conveniences which have been lacking elsewhere—those many improvements, big and little, which add to the enjoyment of home life and make home ownership worth while. But when the time comes to carry out this dream of years, the prospective home-owner is confronted with a bewildering variety of household equipment and building materials. All of these modern developments seem to have a place in maintaining present-day standards of beauty and comfortable living, yet it is obviously impossible to include them all and still create a home that is within reach of average means.

It is evident, then, that somewhere a line must be drawn, so that in the home as actually planned, certain essential features are provided for. Only in this way can the home-owner insure pleasant surroundings he is seeking at reasonable cost.

The more experienced home-owner would suggest thinking first of heating—whether you buy or build. Heating is tied up more closely with family life than almost any other household functions, and one of the first requirements of a "dream house" is a modern type of heating plant, equipped with automatic regulation.

Today automatic heat regulation is a luxury demanded by every family which is acquainted with it. But unlike most luxuries, it pays its way, saving one-fifth to one-third on each season's fuel bill.

When a house is underheated or overheated, as inevitably is the case with hand regulation of the heating plant, somebody must be opening windows one minute and running downstairs to check the fire—closing them the next minute, advancing the fire again, then advancing until the house gets back to the proper temperature.

With automatic heat regulation, great variations in temperature are impossible. The room thermostat which is installed on the wall of the living room responds to slight temperature changes. Whenever the temperature goes above or below the predetermined level, usually 70 degrees, an electric contact is made, operating controls in the basement, automatically advancing or checking the fire. Uniform temperatures are maintained through the whole heating season, without the bother of regulating the fire by hand.

Uniform temperature means greater comfort and better health, with real fuel economy. But automatic heat regulation has made a still greater contribution to the living room of home. Through the alarm clock principle the most advanced type of automatic heat regulator checks the fire automatically at a certain hour each night, maintaining a lower temperature uniformly until morning, then automatically brings the temperature back to the daytime level before anyone is out of bed.

LIME PLASTER GOOD DECORATING MEDIUM

Lime plaster, as probably the most versatile home decorating medium, has the recommendation of centuries of use. In some form or another it has been used during practically every civilized and semi-civilized period for the beautification of public buildings and homes.

While the most common finish in use here is the smooth trowel finish, lime plaster may be worked and treated in a variety of ways to give practically limitless combinations of color and texture. Treated with a wood float for a smooth sand finish, with a cork float for a rough sand finish, and with a carpet covered float for still rougher textures, the walls may be

Here Is Well Planned Basement For Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home

The drafting department of the State Trade school has completed the basement plan for The Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home as shown above. It is certainly an attractive layout presenting several features of note that will interest the home builder.

First of all one will see that the garage is included in the basement. This is a very popular idea that is gaining great favor with home builders everywhere. It is cut off from the remainder of the home by fire resisting walls but is easily heated from the house heating plant. One can readily picture the advantages of this type of garage, accessible from the home without going out-door—easily heated and representing a saving over the cost of the construction of a separate garage and heating plant for same.

The laundry is also located in the basement in a corner by itself with a partition cutting it off from the remainder of the cellar. It will be well lighted with two large basement windows.

In another separate corner of the cellar is the cold storage cellar, also cut off from the rest of the basement. Everyone knows the advantages of a cold cellar to keep vegetables and fruits during the winter.

made to accord with any decorative scheme, old or modern.

Color effects of any shade, hue or combination are possible on the walls of lime plaster, because good lime is pure white and contains no ingredient that may stain or cause discoloration. In this light it is well to remind the builder that tinting or coloring should be done after the surface is dry and hard. Difficulty of distributing color compounds uniformly throughout the mass of wet plaster has shown that mixing color with the plaster is only in rare cases a satisfactory method.

For its proper use lime plaster should be given the protection against cracks afforded by modern metal lath.

BRICK DESIGNING PREVENTS FIRE

Also Adds Greatly to Beauty of Home—Many Effects Possible.

Fire-safety is one of the most important considerations to the prospective home builder. No other menace to the average family is quite so great or so persistent. It is always present. And if the records of the nation's fire losses in recent years are any criterion this danger is on the increase rather than on the decline. Not once in the last decade has there been a decrease in the annual fire losses.

The efficiency of brick construction as a fire preventive is generally conceded. In several recent fires it has been strikingly demonstrated. In the case of Fall River, Mass., last February, two common brick fire walls were chiefly responsible for the stopping of the progress of the flames after they had swept several blocks and inflicted a property damage of something near $6,000,000.

A few weeks earlier at Bay St. Louis, Louisiana, a similar fire, but not of such magnitude, was stopped effectively just as it was entering the business section of the city, by the common brick fire wall of a moving picture theater building which fortunately reared several stories above its neighbor buildings. Here too the fire had swept across an entire block fanned by a strong gulf breeze.

Records Show Value

The records of a National Board of Fire Underwriters covering a period of five years show that in that period the average loss in brick dwellings, including apartments and tenements where no part of the buildings were used for commercial purposes, were just about one-tenth as great as that in frame dwellings. Including in this classification all homes veneered with material other than wood.

With common brick construction so nearly on a par with wood construction, in the matter of cost, there is of late a decidedly noticeable tendency on the part of home builders to give greater consideration in fire safety. More and more brick homes are being built.

Architects are finding in the infinite variety of colors of the common brick a compelling incentive for its greater use in ornamental home construction. No other exterior material is so rich in its offerings. With almost all the best artificial means must be resorted to in breaking the monotony. Only the common brick presents an irregularly variegated face. Other exterior brick strive for uniformity.

With common brick there can be produced a mass textural effect unsurpassed in its beauty which changes, chameleon-like, under the play of the sunshine. And this appeal is only heightened by a combination of climbing vines and the banking of evergreens against the walls. Sunshine and shadow when coupled with color variety inevitably produce a facade effect of delightful charm.

In addition to an unusual beauty in the wall you may also have with common brick the highest degree of fire resistance, permanence beyond that of any other exterior material, economy first of construction and second of upkeep, and always a worthwhile concession in insurance rates and a saving in house heating expense. Always its value decreases slowest under the indulgent hand of time.

Every architectural demand may readily be met with common brick. It harmonizes with all materials while conceding advantage to none. Its versatility and adaptability are from the viewpoint of the designer and builder. It never disappoints in performance, and ages gracefully with only a mellowing of its color tones to mark the passage of the years.

LET IT HELP YOU TO PLAN YOURS

Dirt Is Flying Fast At The Model Home

The beginning of the second week of work on the Herald Elizabeth Park Model Home finds the excavating work in full swing with a crew of men and a pair of horses and a scraper working on the cellar and a steam shovel owned by Wilson Richardson, working on the general grading of the surrounding property.

If you do not believe they are making the dirt fly, we advise you to take a half hour off and visit the site. You will find 'em at it from early morning till late afternoon. The stage is all set to make a record in the construction of this Model Home.

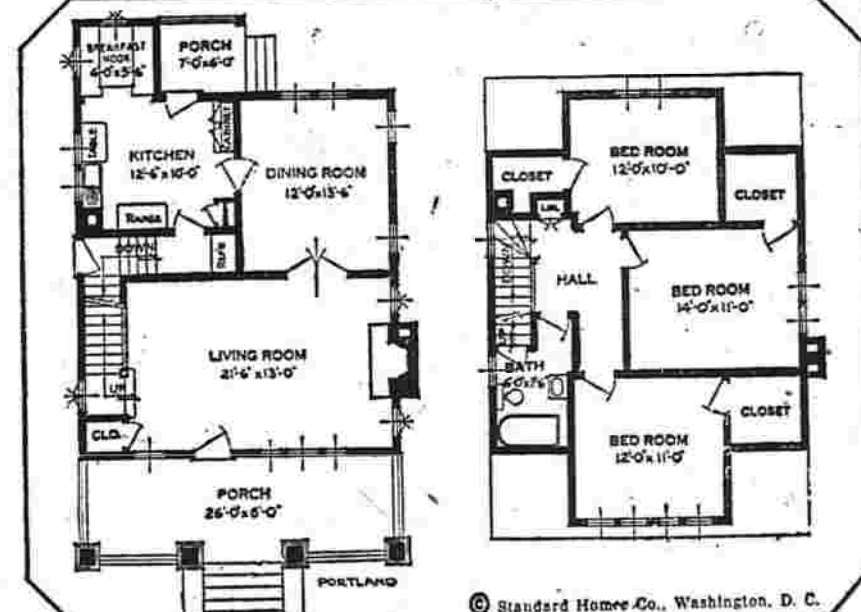

Contracts for various phases of the work have already been let, including excavations and grading to L. T. Wood, the general contract to George Forbes, the foundation work to Paul Brandt, the plastering and mason work to John Maloney, the painting to John Clough, the plumbing and heating to Carl Anderson, the floor surfacing to H. W. Allen and the shrubbery and nurse-stock to C. E. Wilson, Co. Material is being furnished by the Manchester Lumber Co.

It is expected that the cellar will be excavated and that the forms for the basement walls will be started in a few days. As soon as this work is started, people will begin to get an idea of what is going on. It is pretty hard to visualize construction where there is only dirt being excavated. Already there is considerable interest in the project and it is expected that as soon as it takes definite form in the way of foundation it will be followed with interest by people who are planning to build homes of their own.

The Herald Elizabeth Park Model Home was designed after visiting numerous other new homes in and around Manchester and surrounding towns and looking over plans of other local homes. In it has been combined the better ideas of all of them and in it it is hoped to present to the people a Model Home that really is a model.

House Plans That May Interest You NO. 2—"THE PORTLAND"

Half shingles, half wide boards, the Portland has a friendly, homey air augmented by the cheery row of upper windows.

This home was built with an eye to practical housekeeping. For a modest size, it allows tremendous space for keeping things put away. There's a closet downstairs off the living room for wraps and upstairs all three bedrooms have large closets. There is an extra one for linens and even the brooms have their own special place for stowing away.

Large windows on each side of the fireplace keep the living room light. The stairs, rising out of one end of this room, are the kind that can be made unusually attractive by hanging an old shawl or some decorative rug or tapestry from the railing.

The dining room has windows on two sides and gets light directly from the other two directions through the kitchen and the living room. In fact it has so much light that one could try out unusual interior decorating schemes there—something in blue, maybe.

The breakfast nook is in a corner of the house so it looks out on both the back and the side yard. And off the kitchen is a honest-to-goodness back porch, large enough for a swing, or some easy chairs and a table.

The price of the Portland is from $5500 to $6500.

Committee D2 of the American Society for Testing Materials was also asked to make a tentative specification form. Specifications of nearly 100 oils were examined and tabulated including almost every type of oil on the market and representing almost every locality. Tentative results were submitted to the oil burner and fuel manufacturers and to the Underwriters Laboratories, and the criticisms received proved useful in determining the final specifications.

The specifications apply to six types of oil, including light, medium and heavy grades of furnace oil used in domestic heating and light, medium and heavy grades of furnace fuel oil for industrial use. The requirements cover flash point, amount of water and sediment distillation range, and viscosity.

Uniform specifications for the guidance of oil and burner manufacturers and dealers have just been announced by the American Oil Burner Association. These specifications are the result of research, tests, correspondence and conferences, carried on over two years. The American Petroleum Institute and the American Society for Testing Materials cooperated in the work, and the specifications adopted have received practically unanimous approval by the members of the American Oil Burner Association.

In announcing these specifications, Harry F. Tapp, technologist of the American Oil Burner Association, points out that one of the greatest variables in installations has been non-uniformity of oil. This probably has been more responsible for lack of satisfactory operation than any other one cause. Burner manufacturers found it difficult to explain just what oil they wanted, and oil refiners were in doubt as to the needs of the manufacturer of burners. The oil used has been generally satisfactory and trouble has been due, in the main, to occasional variations.

The first step in solving this problem was the appointment by the American Oil Burner Association of a committee which made a survey with the cooperation of the American Petroleum Institute.

SAFETY SACRIFICED OFTEN IN BUILDING

Carelessness, to which a large part of the half billion fire loss is attributed, is not the besetting sin of the American people, according to W. V. Ellis of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, who addressed the National Fire Waste Council meeting under the auspices of the Insurance Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

"We have blamed the overheated flat iron, neglected rubbish, ashes in wooden boxes and a legion of other similar causes for our fire losses," he said. "We have grouped them all under the word preventable and blamed the situation upon carelessness. So greatly has the word carelessness been overworked I am afraid it has become ineffective."

"When we talk carelessness we are not pointing at the center of the target but are shouting wide of the mark. It is one cause, it is true, of our large national fire waste, but not the principal reason for large losses or the bulk of the waste in human lives and money."

"When a man is building a home, the first thing to be eliminated from the plans is the factor of safety. A cedar-lined closet, to him and his wife, is of far more importance than an unenclosed stairway or fire stops within the walls of a chimney flue which is not absolutely

SCREENING OF BRONZE LASTING, SATISFACTORY

Screens of bronze wire cloth forever eliminate the nuisance of yearly repainting and periodical replacement, which screens of corroding metal entail. By equipping the house once with well made screens of bronze wire this expense is eliminated for all time.

It is well known to the average householder that mosquitoes and annoying flying insects seem to have a peculiar talent for finding even the smallest holes in screen

LASTING VALUE OF OAK FLOORS BIG ADVANTAGE

The thing to insist on, in materials that go into a home, is lasting value. This is particularly true of floor coverings, where the first cost of temporary coverings is often the least part of the expense. Alterations and refittings, due to wear, and at last complete replacement, double the initial outlay.

The superiority of oak as the modern and always satisfying floor is due to the fact that first cost need not exceed perishable floor coverings, and at the same time it is a permanent floor, outlasting the house itself. Oak floors never need replacement, and add real value to the house for rental or resale. They save housework and are sanitary. They are nature's beautiful product, improving in mellowness with age.

Lay oak floors over worn floors in your present home at little expense, with the same advantages as if oak had been laid originally.

ROOF OF ASBESTOS SAVES ON REPAIRS

Building authorities agree that the roofing material that gives permanent satisfaction in service year after year without costing one cent for maintenance is a cheaper roof, when figured on a cost-per-year basis, than one whose initial cost is considerably lower but which requires periodical painting or replacement. For a roof that demands attention and costly repairs quickly runs up maintenance bills that more than overshadow the cost of a first-cost-last-cost roof.

Rigid asbestos shingles are a combination of asbestos rock fiber and Portland cement formed under great hydraulic pressure. They can be easily applied by any carpenter or builder. The holes are already punched in each shingle.

There is nothing in these shingles to rot, burn or rust; nor will they warp, split or crack under summer sun or winter snow, their rock-like base and tough resilient dense structure leaving them unaffected by time, fire or the elements.

UNIFORM SPECIFICATIONS FOR OIL BURNERS OUT

Uniform specifications for the guidance of oil and burner manufacturers and dealers have just been announced by the American Oil Burner Association. These specifications are the result of research, tests, correspondence and conferences, carried on over two years. The American Petroleum Institute and the American Society for Testing Materials cooperated in the work, and the specifications adopted have received practically unanimous approval by the members of the American Oil Burner Association.

WELDED GARAGE FRAME FROM SALVAGED STEEL

Texas Company Compares Cost With Riveted Structure; Proves Satisfactory Job.

Utilizing structural steel that would otherwise have been scrapped, the Dallas Power & Light Co. has erected, at Dallas, Texas, a 40-car welded garage for the protection of employes' cars, at a total cost of but 25 per cent of the lowest contract price for an equivalent riveted structure. A single portable welding equipment was all that was necessary to do the work, and this was done by the mechanical and labor force of the public service company itself.

The garage is made of steel angle-iron framework, covered with corrugated galvanized iron. There are two units, each 16x140 ft. divided into 10 spans each 14 ft. wide, and each unit being capable of covering 20 cars. The units face each other with a 22-ft. driveway between. This gives ample space for the easy and efficient handling of cars, even in the rush of getting away at the close of the day.

The steel used in the framework of the garage was salvaged from the frame of an outdoor switching structure which became obsolete with the addition of generating equipment to the power plant. The varying length of the steel members, together with the numerous holes already punched (which would have interfered with the punching of new holes to fit the garage structure) would have made it necessary to splice or junk the greater part of the steel if a type of construction other than welding had been used. As the company possessed a General Electric portable arc welder, it was decided to fabricate the structure by welding, since other work along this line had proven satisfactory.

The roof trusses are of the simplex Fluk type. The upper and lower chords are made of two 2x2-in. angles welded together back to back. The other members of the trusses are tied together with 3/8-in. plates and the trusses are tied

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Ideas about man and about God, went power for making them effective.

In other and more old fashioned words, Jesus set about saving the world. He struck at the root of life's evils, which is sin; which, in turn, is lack of obedience to and harmony with the will of God. More than it needs education this bewildered and blundering world of ours needs salvation. It can only get right with itself by getting right with God. All the diversified curricula of all the schools can do less for an individual, and for society as a whole, than the new awareness of God which Jesus taught. He planted in human hearts the vast dynamic of love and of aspiration after holiness. He who quests for God will not miss real wisdom as a by-product.

There is not a single problem of modern life that may not be solved by injecting Jesus into it. The industrial problem, the social problem, the crime problem, the race problem, the educational problem, the peace problem, the international problem—every one of these will find a solution when it finds the Saviour. For He came to bring power for life and power for love and power for a peace that is both inner, spiritual peace in the single heart, and peace in all the relationships of man with man. The Saviourhood of Christ is more comprehensive than even His friends have realized.

TWIN IGNITION IS NEW NASH FEATURE

Double Spark Plug System Develops High Compression and Added Power.

Twin-ignition, high compression engines, and custom finished, Salon type bodies led an imposing list of advancements new to the American automobile industry when The Nash Motors Company formally introduced its exclusive "400" series of cars to the motoring public. Models are on display now at Madden Brothers.

This impressive presentation of sixteen entirely new models, engineered to a degree of operating efficiency and riding comfort never before attained in the same price class, is the answer of C. W. Nash to a universal demand for luxury at a moderate cost. It is also a fulfillment of personal engineering ambitions that have extended over thirty-six years of sound, successful manufacturing in the automobile field.

Three complete groups of cars, equipped with the new motors of revolutionary but proved principles, enclosed bodies that set new high standards in coach building, and fully co-ordinated advancements in design and equipment, are included in this Nash offering to a nation of experienced and appreciative automobile users.

All models are equipped with full hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear—Houdaille on the Advanced Six and Lovejoy on the Special and Standard Six. Bijur centralized lubricating system, on the Advanced Six models, sends automatic metered oil changes to 21 chassis points at the depression of a convenient foot pedal.

All of the new models embody engineering accomplishments of unusual interest to both the industry and the public. The most striking performance feature, however, lies in the twin-ignition, high compression motor, finally developed by Nash engineers after months of intensive experimenting and exhaustive tests. This motor unites for the first time in the history of automotive engineering multiple ignition, high compression, the valve-in-head engine principle, the seven-bearing crankshaft improved with hollow crank pins, and aluminum alloy pistons which employ embedded Invar-struts to guarantee the closest possible fit.

Briefly, these engineering accomplishments and their relationship to one another, may be explained as follows: Twin-ignition is perfected at last by the use of two independent "air-craft" metric type spark plugs instead of the customary six, one throwing its measured flashes of white heat into each cylinder head and one flashing into the cylinder proper. Their combined operations give each of six cylinders 360 flashes per second at top speed with a resulting thoroughness in combustion, smoothness in motor operation and maximum economy in the valve-in-head engine principle. The high compression are brought about by the new symmetrically shaped combustion chambers which have been reduced in size to give each charge of gas its greatest possible explosive power. The perfected, valve-in-head construction, of vital importance in fine motor car design, permits complete machining of the combustion chamber so that there is an absolute uniformity of explosion in all six cylinders. The seven-bearing crankshaft, which has been improved with the introduction of hollow crank pins, operates under a greatly reduced centrifugal load and at increased speed, while the new Bohnalite aluminum pistons also lighten the load, reduce operating temperatures and permit increased speed and power. All of these advancements in the Advanced and Special Six groups combine in the new Nash "400" motor design to bring about unequalled engine performance.

WAPPING.

Stanley Billings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Billings, is spending a few days with relatives in Rockville.

Francis McGrath of North Carolina is at his home at East Windsor Hill for a few weeks.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor will hold their service at the Federated church on Sunday evening at 6:30 and the subject will be "Missionary Possibilities in Recreation at Home and Abroad." The reference is found in Cor. 9:23 and 27 and the leader is Albert Peterson.

The Federated Workers went on their annual picnic on Wednesday of this week. There were not as many who went on account of the threatening weather, but those who did go report a fine time. Their destination was Lake Congamond, Southwick, Mass.

Richard Hull, foreman of the road construction work and Truman Hills motored to the home of Mr. Hull, at Wrentham, Mass., and spent the week-end.

Miss Alice Shattuck, teacher of the first and second grades in the Wapping Center school, will be bridesmaid at the marriage of her sister, Miss Corinne Shattuck of Granby to Mr. Melvin Farmer of Hartford at their home in Granby on Saturday June 30. Mr. and Mrs. Farmer will make their home at Hartford, upon their return from a wedding trip.

There were several pupils and former pupils of this town who graduated from the South Manchester High school on last Thursday evening. They are as follows: Ellen Josephine Foster, Margaret Cecilia Welles, Margaret Hope Boddy, Gertrude Lohs Howe, Emily Welles Smith, Francis Morgan Foster and Albert Jude Tuttle.

During the past year the East Hartford school committee gave notice to the school committee of South Windsor that, owing to the crowded condition in the East Hartford high school they would be unable to accommodate their freshmen and sophomore pupils for the coming year. However, inasmuch as the Junior and Seniors constitute a small group who have been identified with the local high school for two years or more, it was decided to allow them to continue until graduation. This regulation eliminated from the high school enrollment between fifty and sixty pupils, leaving only about twenty to continue in the upper classes.

The South Windsor committee finding extreme difficulty in making arrangement for the freshmen and the sophomore classes in nearby towns, petitioned the East Hartford committee to continue ten additional pupils from the sophomore class for whom they have been unable to make arrangement elsewhere. This permission was granted by the East Hartford committee at its meeting Monday night.

The last Christian Endeavor meeting of the season will be held on Sunday evening. The topic will be, "Missionary Possibilities in Recreation, at Home and Abroad." The senior leader is James McNally and the leader for the juniors, Miss Arlene R. Monaghan.

Miss Ruth Custer of this village and the Messrs. Joyner and Turkington of Manchester will render special piano, violin and cello selections. A general invitation is extended to all to attend the meeting and enjoy the privilege of hearing these talented musicians.

Miss Faith H. Talcott entertained the members of the faculty of Weaver High school of Hartford at her home on Tuesday evening. A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Smith of this village at the Manchester Memorial hospital.

Sipples Allows 3 Hits Community Winning 12-2

St. John, Pelton, Sipples and McLaughlin Hit Hard as Team Wins Easily; Play in Torrington Tomorrow.

The Community Club baseball team had no trouble in trouncing the Kensington team 12 to 2 in a state league twilight game played at the West Side Oval last night before a fairly large crowd.

The feature of the game was the hard hitting of the Community which disposed of a Kensington left-handed moundman as it slammed its way to victory. Tommy Sipples, Charlie Pelton, Lefty St. John and Jim McLaughlin led the slaughter.

St. John made three singles and a double; Pelton two triples; Sipples a single, double and triple and McLaughlin two singles. Kelly and Linnel got the other long bingles.

Kensington took the lead scoring a run in the first inning but the Community went on a three inning batting rally starting in the last of the third and Kensington was left far in the rear.

Tommy Sipples in his local 1928 debut on the mound allowed only three hits and retired four on strikes. Not a single Community batter was the victim on strikes.

Tomorrow the Community will journey to Torrington for a state league encounter. Lefty Beegan of Hartford, who has seen service in the Boston Twilight League will be on the mound for Manchester.

TENNIS TALKS

Overhead Smash Very Essential

By George M. Lott, Jr.

Without the overhead smash, your attack in tennis is of no avail. Consider a tennis ball as a projectile and the overhead smash is the only requirement in the making of the smash.

Suppose that after making a very forcing shot, behind which you go into the net and are all set to end the point, your opponent puts up a lob. He has suddenly crossed you and without a good smash you are unable to meet his change of tactics. Then he knows all he has to do is to put a fairly deep lob to drive you away from the net. However, if you are able to handle these lobs your net attack becomes all the more effective.

The smash is really a variation of the service. The only difference is that in the smash you are allowed to move both feet off the ground. In making the smash the ball should be hit at the highest point in the air possible so as to give the shot the greatest angle possible. In other words, reach for the ball.

The main thing to remember while making the shot is not to soften the shot. Do not lose your nerve. It is better to hit the ball out than to hit it back easily to your opponent. Try to place the smash in one corner or the other with enough speed on it to make it a forcing shot.

As in all other shots the feet should be at right angles to the net, and forming a line in the direction the ball is to go.

Without a good reliable smash, the rest of your game will not be effective. It is very discouraging to an opponent to know that it is useless to lob and that in order to win the point when you are at the net he has to pass you cleanly with a perfect shot and that he cannot count on your errors.

By selecting Ernie Dowd as their baseball leader for the 1929 season, Manchester High school would make a wise decision. It would be difficult to find a more competent and suitable player for the job. Ernie is not only a baseball player of considerable note, but also a star in football and basketball. He is a young man who never conceals his feat until it actually arrives. He keeps fighting every minute. Dowd was easily one of the best all-around players in the league and would prove a most valuable pilot. There is one thing about this chap that impresses us above all and that is, no matter how much praise we have seen fit to give him for his efforts during the past season, not once has he appeared to need a bigger sized cap. We hope he will continue along this same path during his final two years at High School and wish him success.

High School where he will be a senior student.

Young Warnock is exceptionally well known among the younger element in Manchester, especially those who have any interest in swimming. He has won many honors in swimming and diving events, both with the high school team and Globe Hollow races.

Pepsin is a secretion in the stomach of the higher animals. The pepsin used medicinally is usually obtained from pigs, sheep or calves.

WE LAFF MIT YOU.

All the quaint suggestions being made to Col. Jake Ruppert by the other American League owners that he should break up his ball club to help them puts the proprietor of the champion Yankees in a good spot for a wise comeback.

"What did all you big hearts do for me when I had a bunch of bums?" der colonel can ask.

It will be recalled that when Ban Johnson and his board persuaded Ruppert and Col. T.H. Huston to sink a lot of dough in the New York Highlanders the assets of the club were some second-hand uniforms and some third-class players.

Ruppert and Huston were innocent lambs who knew nothing about the business end of a strange enterprise and they were told that every magnate in the league would help them out with some good players.

But when the deal had been made and the new owners called for the delivery of the promised players they got the horse laugh. Ruppert and Huston had to stagger along with their own meager warren, even double-crossed when they took their dough into the open market.

Now the Yanks are sitting pretty.

Nobody in the American League ever gave the Yankees a single player," Ed Barrow says. "We had to buy our men and we didn't haggle over prices or try to trick the sellers. The Yankees are going to win the pennant as often as possible. New York demands championship ball and we are going to provide it. The Yankees aren't lucky. Let the others get out and do what we have done and when they have to do it like we were forced to do maybe they will get some ball players. We haven't time to listen to them. We're too busy looking around for good players for the future."

Head Don't Grow Hair Only. Wrong tactics instead of physical exhaustion caused Bill Tilden to be defeated last year by Rene Lacoste, sending the Davis Cup to France. Master Richards quotes Tilden as telling him.

Tilden says that in the challenge round for the cup this year (if the Americans get into it) he is going to play Lacoste at his own game. Instead of trying for difficult gets he is going to rally him from the baseline.

This indicates that Mr. Tilden is capable of some heavy thinking as well as weighty conversation. He has learned that the typical Tilden game can't knock the Frenchman off his feet and it is reasonable to assume that if Lacoste can do so much with his careful conservative game he might be effective against him when handled by a master.

Gosh, What a Thrill! The English have quaint and interesting ways of expressing themselves. And so they also have a way of showing the most fiery enthusiasm when they have done a big job well.

Harry Wragge, a little jockey, won the "Darby" on Felstead, the longest shot in thirty years, and hiding the Darby winner even if a walkover is one of the Kingdome's greatest honors. Wragge admitted as much in an interview after the race and here is what he said:

"I had a most comfortable ride."

What We Think In Sports

By THOMAS W. STOWA

SCHOOLBOY PILOT

By selecting Ernie Dowd as their baseball leader for the 1929 season, Manchester High school would make a wise decision. It would be difficult to find a more competent and suitable player for the job. Ernie is not only a baseball player of considerable note, but also a star in football and basketball. He is a young man who never conceals his feat until it actually arrives. He keeps fighting every minute. Dowd was easily one of the best all-around players in the league and would prove a most valuable pilot. There is one thing about this chap that impresses us above all and that is, no matter how much praise we have seen fit to give him for his efforts during the past season, not once has he appeared to need a bigger sized cap. We hope he will continue along this same path during his final two years at High School and wish him success.

Motor Faced Races

There's one thing about these motor-paced bicycle racing cards which Frank Caldwell is staging weekly over in the Hartford Velodrome which is particularly pleasing to those who are not content with the usual "What's more, the program starts right on time. If local sport events would copy after that idea, fans would be grateful. At the Velodrome, one race starts almost immediately after another finished. That's what the fans like, action! Incidentally, quite a number of Manchester "bike" fans attend the weekly races at the big saucer.

Inside Season

When a high school or college athletic team displays a constant streak or chalks up some unexpected and sensational conquest, the coach of Green on the trophy, he is just the opposite. He is many times considered incapable and often there is a demand for his discharge. This is true despite the fact that in a great many instances the coach is not to blame, the truth being that the talent eligible for the team is of such an interior caliber no coach could develop it into a winner. In order to build a bonfire, one must first have kindling wood.

ACES PRACTICE

The Aces have no game arranged for Sunday as yet but hope to secure one Manager Louis Neron said last night. There will be a practice session at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the West Side field.

PUZZLING PLAYS OF Baseball

By BILLY EVANS

CAN CHANGE BATTERS.

If the team at bat discovers the man at the plate is the improper batsman before he is retired or reaches first base, has it the right to substitute the proper batsman?

In such a situation the team at bat has a perfect right to substitute the proper batsman and thereby escape the penalty that would be inflicted if he continued his continued hit at bat and the mistake was properly discovered by the team in the field.

When a batsman reaches first base, the man up is the improper batter, it should immediately substitute the proper batsman.

The proper batsman shall assume the count that was on the improper batsman when the mistake was discovered. If the count is two balls and two strikes the proper batsman must accept that handicap when he is substituted.

In some quarters there prevails the impression that once a ball is pitched to an improper batsman he lays himself open to penalty, which is the calling out of the proper batsman.

This is erroneous. Not until the improper batsman reaches first base safely or is retired is it possible for the team in the field to get action on the slip in the batting order.

It is obvious that the team at bat should not be made to suffer if it corrects a mistake before the improper batsman has done anything that affected the play. The penalty of making him take the count on the improper batsman is severe enough.

ALMOST A BLOWOUT.

New York.—It's doubtful just how much the Governors Island would have been left if a gasoline boat, loaded with five tons of dynamite, had been left to drift when its power plant went dead in a tide rip. As the boat slowly approached the island and danger was imminent, a Coast Guard cutter, Haritan, sighted it and went to the rescue. He threw a line to men on the craft and slowly maneuvered it into deep water. Two minutes later, according to Coast Guard reports, help would have been impossible.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (322) Bird-Houses Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

There are many kinds of bird-houses, varying with the species of birds for which they are built. In making your measurements be sure to choose lumber that is thick so it will not warp. Allow spaces for cleaning through the side, top or bottom. Sit down and make a working sketch of the house before building. One model is shown above.

This house with its tiny entrance would be excellent for a house wren. Be sure your bird house will keep out the rain.

Small holes must be made near the roof for ventilation. If you are making the house for several families of birds, divide it into floors.

The entrances should vary in size according to the birds that frequent your yard, as follows: blue birds, tree-swallows and woodpeckers, 2 inches; chickadees and Carolina wrens, 1 1/8 inches; house wrens, 7-8 inch; house finches and crested fly-catchers, 2 inches. For robins and barn swallows, one or more sides should be open. (Next: Sailor's Knots)

THE TINYMITES

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

To Scouty, one maid said, "Oh, gee, you're just as brave as you can be. That big cat didn't scare you, and you know just how to find the way to make him be real good. I guess you did just as you should. By giving him some milk, you proved to him that you were kind." "You're right," said Scouty Tinymites. "There really was no cause for fright. Whenever you treat people nice, they're always nice to you. That thought flashed to me, in a wink, and then I merely stopped to think that likely it would work out with that monstrous black cat, too." Then Clowny said, "Well, that is o'er. Why talk about it any more? The cat has finished all the milk, and drifted on its way. It seems to me, before it came, that we were talking about a game. Let's think of one that's lots of fun, and then we all can play." Just then the friendly dairyman came up and said, "You Tinymites can do all the playing that you like. The maids must come with me. Far o'er the hill there's work to do, so we must now be leaving you. Why don't you sail your boat again and seek new things to see?" The bunch thought this a dandy plan. They yelled "Good-bye," and off they ran. They found their boat still anchored safe and sound beside the shore. "And now we're on another lark," yelled Coppy. "Look! I see a shark. It's right up near our houseboat. Now, I wonder what that's for." Soon Scouty said, "He wants to play. I'll toss our anchor rope his way. He may grab hold and pull us. If he does, don't start to scream. And, sure enough, the shark grabbed hold. The Tinymites watch him, brave and bold. The shark pulled hard until the boat began to move down stream. (The Tinymites arrive in monkey land in the next story).

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

ABOUT PRICES.
 "Is this Pinehurst a cheap store?" a customer tells us a friend, newly come to town, asked him.
 "What do you mean, cheap?" "If you mean does it offer foods on the basis of price alone, nothing doing. If you mean do you get first class foods there without being soaked, than I'll say you do. Emphatically."
 That's just the point. There are stores that quote prices on foods which Pinehurst wouldn't think of attempting to meet. There are eleven dollar suits of clothes and there are forty dollar suits of clothes but nobody ever charges forty dollars for an eleven dollar suit and nobody ever sells a forty dollar suit for eleven.
 Foods are the same. Absolutely first of all, at Pinehurst, comes quality. You know we advertise "good things to eat" and we'd be liars if we made that claim and then laid in stocks of stuff to sell at very low prices. And we are not liars.
 Pinehurst's overhead is kept down to a minimum compatible with perfect hygiene and a service valuable to the customer. Pinehurst profits are honest and reasonable. Pinehurst prices for things good to eat are a little more than prices in some other stores for things not so good to eat.
 But for the same quality of food we'll bear comparison, anywhere, at any time.
