

HOOVER MEETS COOLIDGE AT WAR COUNCIL

Nominee Discusses With President Part He Will Play in Coming Campaign; Resigns His Office.

Cedar Island Lodge, Brule River, Wis., July 15.—Herbert Hoover today went into conference with the man he hopes to succeed—President Coolidge—to devise means of winning the 1928 election.

Hoover traveled 1,000 miles out of his way. The last 32 over a dusty rural highway, for the meeting with the president at the Summer White House. He will spend today and tomorrow as the President's guest, talking political campaign policies and possibly doing a little fishing.

Hoover came here especially to learn what parts the President wishes to take in the coming campaign. The nominee also planned to discuss with Mr. Coolidge what issues shall be stressed in his drive for the presidency. The naming of a successor to Hoover as secretary of commerce also will be settled at the conference.

Gets Ovation
The Republican nominee won quite an ovation from Wisconsin's citizenry as he traversed the heart of Republican insurgency. As the Hoover train rolled through the pine-woods country, every cross-road held its little gathering of Wisconsinites, who cheered the candidate. An enthusiastic reception and parade through the streets of Superior came at the end of his railroad trip. Hoover smiled happily through it all.

Hoover was met at Superior by Everett Sanders, secretary to the President and brought to the presidential lodge in a White House Car. Mrs. Hoover accompanied the nominee. A host of newspaper correspondents, photographers and Wisconsin political leaders made the journey to the lodge in Hoover's entourage.

Former Senator Irvine L. Lenroot who arranged the reception in Superior, Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman and Walter J. Kohler, who seeks the governorship, headed the Wisconsin political group that accompanied Hoover. Zimmerman and Kohler, political rivals but both regular Republicans, joined Hoover's train last night. There were no La Follette followers in sight.

Hoover will remain as the President's guest until tomorrow evening, when he motors to Duluth, Minn., to re-board his train. Then, he will resume his westward trip.

SMITH IRRITATED OVER WHITE SPEECH

Says Kansas Editor Got His Material From a New York Clergyman.

Albany, N. Y., July 15.—Still plainly irritated by the recent attack made on him by William Allen White, Kansas editor, in which he was represented as a friend of the saloon, Gov. Al Smith today turned his thoughts to official state business.

The governor clearly indicated he did not intend to engage in any long distance debate as to whether he voted for or against the saloon twenty years ago, and that he was a member of the New York Legislature.

"I have nothing more to say about it," Gov. Smith said when asked if he had read White's denial that the Rev. O. R. Miller, Albany reformer, had furnished him with the legislative data.

The Rev. Miller, Hoover, said he would have something more to say about Gov. Smith and the saloon. "I am waiting for some affidavits and then I expect to have some more truthful statements for the governor to deny," the Rev. Miller said.

In denouncing White, the governor characterized Rev. Miller as "an admitted liar," "a parasite" and an "18 karat fakir."

White Denies It.
The governor took the position that White based a recent speech which he delivered in Kansas, in which he pictured Smith as a friend of the saloon and the liquor traffic, on information furnished by the Rev. Miller. This was denied, however, by White.

The "Farm Bulletin" which is the official organ of the National Prohibition League, the Rev. Miller has taken occasion many times in the past to sharply criticize Gov. Smith. He also had reprinted many times the Governor's legislative record, and he always has condemned the governor for his stand on prohibition.

Shake and Make Up

The seventeen-year-old rupture in diplomatic relations between Chile and Peru has been healed, and here you see Dr. Herman Velarde (right) Peruvian Ambassador to the United States, shaking hands with the smiling Chilean envoy, Carlos Davila. Between them stands the man who effected the reconciliation, Secretary of State Kellogg.

NEW YORK NOW LEADING IN CRIME ABOLISHMENT

It's the Uninteresting Case Prosecuted Daily That Helps Make United States Less Lawless.

Albany, N. Y., July 15.—Uninteresting cases which are being prosecuted daily in the courts, and not the sensational murder cases, are helping to make the United States less lawless, according to a statement issued today by a sub-committee of the Baumes crime commission.

Senator John Knight, Republican leader of the Upper House of the Legislature, and chairman of the sub-committee which is making a thorough investigation of criminal statistics, had this to say about some of the murder cases as well known to the public:

"The great gist of crimes that constitute 99 per cent. of the work of the criminal courts, pass almost without notice. Their solution, trial and punishment are a part of the day's work of law enforcement officers. But the general problem of making the United States less lawless is bound up in what is done rather than in all the Leopold-Loeb, Hall-Mills and Synder-Gray cases in the generation."

New York the Leader.
Because of laws enacted at the suggestion of the Baumes commission, Knight said New York has assumed the leadership among the states in the collection and publication of statistics of crime and the enforcement of criminal law.

"The commission believes that complete and accurate statistics of crimes committed is absolutely necessary to determine the cause of crime and to permit the enactment of the best legislation to prevent and punish the commission crime," said the statement issued by the sub-committee.

Crimes Reduced.
The report declares that data collected by the commission shows that in New York City major crimes have been materially reduced since 1925.

There were 308 cases of murder and manslaughter reported in the

GRAHAM GETS A STAY ON HIS LAST WEEK

Former New York Policeman Was to Be Executed on Thursday.

Albany, N. Y., July 15.—Governor Smith today granted a two-weeks reprieve to Daniel J. Graham, former New York City policeman, sentenced to be electrocuted Thursday night. The governor said he acted at the request of District Attorney Joab H. Banton of New York.

Graham was convicted of murdering a paymaster he was supposed to guard, George Appel, also an inmate of the Sing Sing death house and who is sentenced to die the week of August 6. Graham claims he is guilty of the crime of which Graham was convicted, the governor said.

Counsel for Graham have applied for a new trial because of Appel's confession.

The governor received word today from the special lunacy commission that Ronald Osman, convicted of murder in Kings county, and sentenced to die the week of August 6, is insane. The commission will shortly make another examination of Osman and if he is still insane he will be transferred to the Danmore state hospital, the governor said.

BIG NATIONS OF WORLD TO OUTLAW WAR

France, Italy, Germany and Japan Have Already Accepted Kellogg's Proposal for a Conference.

Washington, July 15.—The great nations of the world are ready today, for the first time in history, to take a concerted step toward the universal banishment of war.

France and Italy, in notes made public by the State Department, accept Secretary Kellogg's modified proposal of June 23 for a general treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

Germany has already accepted. Great Britain's favorable answer is expected this week. Japan has accepted Kellogg's original proposal on April 13.

With all powers in agreement upon the general terms of the projected treaty, attention of statesmen is turned to plans for a gathering of foreign ministers at Paris next October for the actual conclusion and signing of the historic covenant.

To Represent U. S.

Secretary Kellogg will head the American delegation to this gathering if President Coolidge approves. The project is now before the chief executive at his Wisconsin vacation haven. His consent to Kellogg's personal appearance in Paris is expected as soon as formal approval of the gathering is received from the principal European capitals. England, France and Germany have already expressed tentative concurrence in the plan.

In his note of June 23 presenting the modified form of the treaty to 14 nations, Kellogg called upon the powers to accept without qualification or reservations.

His Message

"My government is confident," he said, "that this simple procedure will bring mankind's age-long aspiration for universal peace nearer to practical fulfillment than ever before in the history of the world."

The French reply today, signed by Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, says in part:

"The government of the Republic is happy to be able to declare to the government of the United States that it is now entirely disposed to sign the treaty."

The French reply was delivered to Ambassador Herrick at Paris on Saturday, anniversary of France's historic Bastille Day, the French equivalent of the Fourth-of-July.

Italy's Acceptance

Premier Mussolini's acceptance, couched in the characteristic crisp sentences of Il Duce, says simply that the Italian government has no objection to the signature of the treaty.

The promoter paid forty cents for the stock originally. He opens the market at about $1.50 and runs it up to around $3 by fake buying and selling among his agents. At this point he begins to unload the "suckers" by phoning them and advising them to buy up all the stock they can get as he has "authoritative information" the stock will continue to rise.

This is kept up until the "sucker" is bled dry, with the price advanced higher each time. Finally all the stock held under option by the promoter has been sold, or his option expires. He steps out and the stock falls back to its normal level, say 35 cents. There it remains with no market.

UP TO ANASTASIA TO PROVE IDENTITY

Mystery Woman in New York Claims She Is Czar of Russia's Daughter.

New York, July 15.—Behind the massive gates of Mrs. William B. Leeds' palatial home at Oyster Bay, Long Island, is a mystery woman who soon must prove whether she is the Grand Duchess Anastasia, of Russia, or risk the loss of a fortune.

Closely guarded by her benefactress, who is the former Princess Xenia of Greece, and wife of the heir to millions, the voluntary prisoner claims she is the daughter of the late Czar Nicholas II, and sole survivor of the massacre of the royal family.

If her claims are true, she is entitled to the residue of the Czar's wealth which it is said, reposes in the vaults of a British bank.

Today, the tenth anniversary of the execution of the Czar and his followers, the bank is authorized to hand over that fortune to the nearest heir of the monarch, according to the same report.

Other Relatives
However, there are rumors that other relatives of the Czar are organizing "abroad" to file a joint claim on the property. From all indications, a "showdown" is near at hand.

Despite the allegations of some that she is really a Polish peasant girl named Francisca Schanzowski, there are many who are convinced that Mrs. Leeds' friend, known as Mme. Anastasia Tschakowsky, is in fact the true heiress.

HOW "SUCKERS" LOSE MILLIONS IN FAKE STOCK

Create Fake Valuations by Dealing With Own Agents; Have Already Gathered in Over $150,000,000.

New York, July 15.—Meet the latest "sucker" game—multiplying thousands throughout the country, taking millions of dollars from the pockets of unwary investors—a gigantic ring of New York "tipster sheet" racketeers.

Using principally the telephone and the telegraph these "tipsters" have already collected more than $150,000,000 from their victims, according to the result of investigations conducted by the New York Evening Journal with the co-operation of the Better Business Bureau revealed today.

The scope of the activities of the illiterate "tipster service" is illustrated by the fact that during an eight-day period the telephone bill of one tipster sheet alone was more than $1,000 indicating more than $500,000 spent in a year in telephone charges.

Here's the Game.

Here is how the latest "sucker" game works: First, the racketeers establish offices, preferably in the New York financial district, imitating the so-called market advisory services (which are perfectly legitimate even if of doubtful value to investors) and pretending to furnish reliable information interpreting the trend of the stock market. The operators publish a market letter.

The prospects include small investors in established business concerns, clerks, skilled mechanics, doctors, teachers and ministers, widows, thrifty domestics.

The promoter then purchases outright or obtains a short-term option on a block of stock of the corporation selected, usually without its directors suspecting the purpose to which their shares are being put. His agreement provides that stock not under his control be put in escrow so it will not share in the "ballooned" market he intends to create. Then by buying and selling shares among his associates he establishes fictitious price quotations in the so-called over-the-counter market, or on some obscure stock exchange.

It is significant that nearly every transaction is consummated over the telephone. The promoter can be no witness and no chance of running afoul of the postal laws.

The tipster sends out his fake analytical paper, containing ambiguous comments on General Motors, Bethlehem Steel and such thoroughly reliable stocks. Sandwiched between these "reliable" stocks is the obscure and "ballooned" stock (Bluebeek Mines, for example) in which the promoter is interested. Glowing praise of this stock is coupled with confident predictions that its price will go much higher and higher.

Suppose the promoter paid forty cents for the stock originally. He opens the market at about $1.50 and runs it up to around $3 by fake buying and selling among his agents. At this point he begins to unload the "suckers" by phoning them and advising them to buy up all the stock they can get as he has "authoritative information" the stock will continue to rise.

EIGHTEEN ARE KILLED OVER THE WEEK END

Nine Drowned and Nine Dead In Motor Accident in New England States.

Boston, Mass., July 15.—Nine dead by drowning and nine dead in cluding four hit-and-run victims, in motor accidents—this was the over- Sunday toll in New England as counted up today. Alleged drivers in two of the fatal hit-and-run accidents were arrested.

Miss Helen McNamee, 19, of Providence, R. I., came near being the tenth drowning victim. She was admitted ten hours alone in a small rowboat in Nantucket sound. While out on a pleasure cruise, she was overboard and she was rescued by a fisherman.

Her companion in the skiff as it drifted on the lake, pulled the child from the bottom and carried him ashore. Dr. George A. Lundberg, of South Manchester, was at the lake and used first aid methods successfully. Someone telephoned here for the fire department's ambulance but the instrument was not needed when firemen rushed to the lake.

SWEDEN TO ASK LEAGUE TO PROBE ITALIA CASE

All Europe Swelters Under Terrific Heat

Virtually all Europe is gripped in a terrific heat wave that took at least thirty lives over the week-end. Victims were reported from Berlin, Vienna and Warsaw. All were drowned while combating the heat by swimming. In Austria the temperature reached 122 degrees Fahrenheit while in Germany it was over 100 degrees at some places.

Dusseldorf, Germany, July 15.—There is much suffering here from the heat wave, the thermometer registering 101 degrees Fahrenheit over the week-end. Despite the intense heat an athletic tournament was held on Sunday to select members of the German Olympic team. The games will be officially announced when the games are ended today.

Warsaw, Poland, July 15.—This city sweltered in a terrific heat wave over the week-end. Eight bathers were drowned.

HARD 'SWEET' CIDER MAY CAUSE LAWSUIT

Deyorio, Guilty of Intoxicat- ing Sale, Plans to Sue Wholesaler.

Joseph Deyorio who conducts a small store on Center street near Pine street, was found guilty in the Manchester police court this morning of keeping liquor with intent to sell. Two weeks ago, Patrolman R. H. Wirtala visited the place and found there a quantity of cider. Deyorio admitted he had sold it, supposing that it was benzene as it had been treated with benzene of soda. The patrolman named one man who had bought the cider and who was a hard drinker. He said he had seen other men visit the place who were known to be drinking men. A quantity of the cider was brought to the police court and was sent to the state headquarters for analysis. It proved to be intoxicating according to the report—by weight 4.47 per cent. and volume 5.69 per cent.

Deyorio was not represented by counsel and he made no statement about his purchase of the cider. He said he bought a keg of 18 gallons, the second keg he had bought and sold. He admitted having been in trouble on a similar charge when he lived on Oak street, and that he told the judge then he was through with the business. He said when he bought this present lot of cider he thought it was all right to sell while his story was plausible, there was nothing to be gained by his selling intoxicating cider. It was against the law and he would have to impose a fine of $100 and costs. Deyorio gave notice of an appeal and a bond of $200 was fixed for his appearance at the September term of the Superior court. It is understood he will bring suit against the man who sold him the cider.

John Sheridan, a farm hand, found the body encased in two sacks. One sack had been drawn over the upper part and another over the feet and legs. The body had been smashed in with a blunt instrument. Gilbride left his son's home here early yesterday morning to go fishing, the son said. He took a rod and tackle, but neither was found near the body.

Heard Groans
The farm hand said he had heard groans in the bushes but did not investigate immediately, believing that an intoxicated man was "sleeping it off." Gilbride carried $300 in cash on his person, according to his relatives. No money was found in his pockets, however.

Gilbride's head had been wrapped in an apron of the kind used by bartenders. The apron smelled of fish. A cord, bound around the man's limbs, was tied with sailors' knots. These facts led police to believe that the contractor had been robbed by a fisherman who had been smashed in with a blunt instrument.

In addition to the young woman, several men, against whom no charges were made, were questioned by police. They included John A. Deparis, 38, proprietor of a spaghetti house here.

COVENTRY LAKE HEROINE

Saves Three Year Old Boy; Manchester Doctor at Hand to Use First Aid.

Williammatic, Conn., July 15.—Mary Madden, aged eleven, a Hartford girl, rose to an emergency late evening at Lake Wangungung, in South Coventry, when the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Gaffey, also of Hartford, fell from a rowboat anchored just off the shore and sank in four feet of water. Screams of children playing on the shore attracted the girl who plunged into the lake, pulled the child from the bottom and carried him ashore. Dr. George A. Lundberg, of South Manchester, was at the lake and used first aid methods successfully. Someone telephoned here for the fire department's ambulance but the instrument was not needed when firemen rushed to the lake.

STATE FLYER KILLED IN PLANE PRACTISE

Detroit, Mich., July 6.—Charles E. Bradshaw, 26, a reserve flying officer, sent to Seltridge from Kelly Field, Texas, for advanced training, crashed to his death in Lake St. Clair today.

The plane took a 2,000 foot nose dive with the motor full on. One wing of the plane collapsed, and the craft plunged to the bottom. It was recovered in 20 feet of water. Lieut. Bradshaw went out on a trial flight this morning to practice power dives over the lake. Officers said Bradshaw probably was attempting to see how close he could come to the water, misjudged the distance and crashed.

Bradshaw was a resident of West Haven, Connecticut.

Russian Aviator Chuchnovsky and His Companions, Rescued by Crew of Ice Breaker After Hazardous Adventure — Malmgren May Be Still Alive.

The newspaper Morgenpost, of Berlin, reported today that a movement is under way in Sweden to have the Swedish government investigate the Noble tragedy through the League of Nations.

A Central News dispatch sent out from Rome carried the unconfirmed report that Russian aviator Chuchnovsky and his companions, who were marooned near Cape Platten, North East Land, when forced down their plane, have been rescued by the Russian ice-breaker Krassin.

At last reports the Krassin was slowly groping through the Arctic ice floes searching for the six members of the Alessandri group of the Noble expedition and the six missing members of the Amundsen relief party.

Malmgren Alive (?)
Official advices wirelessly from the Krassin command that Prof. Finn Malmgren was alive when Alfredo Mariano and Filippo Zappi left him on the ice at Brock Island about the middle of June.

The Soviet relief commission at Moscow announced the receipt of a radiogram from the Krassin saying that the seven Noble survivors on board would be landed at a fueling station on the northern coast of Spitzbergen, probably Advent Bay, after the Chuchnovsky party has been taken aboard.

KRASSIN'S PROGRESS.
Moscow, July 15.—The Russian ice breaker Krassin has rescued Russian aviator Chuchnovsky and four companions as well as four members of the Noble relief parties that were stranded in the Arctic. The Soviet relief commission announced this afternoon. In addition to the Chuchnovsky group the Krassin picked up Noyes, a Norwegian, and three Italians from the relief ship Braganza. The Braganza has been in the Arctic since the first of June trying to locate and save members of the Noble expedition.

All members of the Chuchnovsky party were well, none of them having been injured in the forced landing on North East Land. They laughed at their adventure, and said they had been in no danger.

The Italians picked up by the Krassin are believed to have been skiers who set out from the steamer Braganza to assist Chuchnovsky.

The Krassin is taking Chuchnovsky's airplane to Advent Bay, where it will be repaired.

In his report to the Soviet relief committee, Prof. Samoylovich, in command of the Russian relief expedition, said that the Krassin experienced the greatest difficulty in teaching Chuchnovsky because of the moving icebergs, and that the work of taking the men aboard was extremely hazardous.

MALMGREN'S FATE

Moscow, July 15.—Hoped to be rescued and facing certain death, Dr. Finn Malmgren, the Swedish explorer and scientist, implored his two companions, Captains Mariano and Zappi, to dig a grave for him in the ice and continue onward without being hampered by him.

This tale of unrivaled heroism and unselfishness was revealed in interviews given by his two companions, now safe aboard the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin. The interviews were sent by radio to the Tass, the Soviet News Agency, by Prof. Samoylovich, head of the rescue expedition.

"Despite his great heart, his strength had waned and his vitality had been drained by his injuries," said Mariano of Malmgren.

"He implored us to dig a grave for him in the ice and continue onwards. He argued with us as vehemently as his condition would permit. He insisted that we go ahead because we might find safety alone, while if we stayed on with him, we would all perish.

"Finally, we gave in and continued our trek. Malmgren waved to us as long as we were in sight. Five different planes passed in the distance without sighting us.

Heard Siren
"When Chuchnovsky flew right above us without landing, we almost gave up all hope. We little thought a ship could break through that ice. Then, like a voice from heaven, we heard the Krassin's siren.

"I'll never forget that sound. We were mad with joy." Zappi told substantially the same story as Mariano.

The Soviet agency also received by radio an account of the controversy among the members of the Noble party which preceded the trek across the ice by Malmgren and his companions, as revealed by Prof. Behundsen, one of the Viefrier group who was saved by the Krassin.

ROBBY, HE KNOWS

The sum of the wisdom of the Democratic campaign managers is that no attention is to be paid to the urge of Senator Robinson, Vice-Presidential candidate, that Southern campaign headquarters be established in order to make the South, if possible, safe for the Democracy. This decision was arrived at by a conference in which Governor Smith took part.

Now it is probably quite true that Governor Smith is a better politician in New York state than Senator Robinson is in Arkansas, though Robinson undoubtedly knows his Arkansas onions particularly well. However, it remains to be seen whether Smith is a better politician in the South at large than is his running mate in the same region.

We want to see the Democrats beaten in next November's election, but we do not want to see them annihilated. With their Heflins and their Jim Reeds and their Cole Bleses and their Pat Harrisons they make an interesting, not to say entertaining opposition party.

DEVIL'S HOP YARD

The wild beauty of that enchanting spot in the eastern part of the town of East Haddam which for generations has labored under the fantastic appellation of the Devil's Hop Yard is known to relatively very few of the people of Connecticut, though for several years the area has been included among the natural park reservations of the state and for more than a hundred years has been visited by picnickers from all over the surrounding region.

Occupying a sharply defined little valley so rocky and abrupt as to almost deserve the term "gorge," the spine of the picturesque ensemble is a brawling stream of no mean proportions, famous among anglers, descriptively named Eight Mile River. At the upper end of the Hop Yard this stream tumbles over a precipitous and broken ledge some forty feet to a lower level of rock formation, and so on, picturesquely, among ledges thick with hemlock and other old forest growth, out of the Hop Yard and finally, miles away, into Hamburg Cove, inlet of the Connecticut River.

During the ages Eight Mile River, which was tumbling over this same precipice infinitely long before the first stone of the first Egyptian pyramid was laid, picked up here and there a cobblestone, trepped it in an eddy and spun it around and around in one spot. Some hundreds of years of this finally wore a depression in the solid ledge rock. Probably the cobbles were out and other cobbles were picked up and lodged in the depression, spinning round and round eternally, wearing the depression into a deep, round hole.

only inches but feet deep. Some of them would take in a man's fist. Some of them would hide the dressed carcass of a hog. There are very few better examples of pot-hole development in the East. Somebody, a long time ago, suggested that one night His Satanic Majesty, for want of anything better to do by way of exercise, visited these falls and began hopping about from rocky ledge to rocky ledge, to keep his hoots from getting wet. Perhaps he forgot to guard his tail and did get that appendage unpleasantly dampened. Conceivably that might make a devil good and mad. Anyway, he got hot enough, whether with exercise or temper, to burn a hole in the rock wherever he stepped. Hence the Devil's Hop Yard—which, you see, has nothing to do with the raising of the raw material for beer.

A few geological ages later than the period of the devil's hot-hoofing, a fox or a hop-toad or some other creature made its way from the Salem-East Haddam road, a devious and winding way, among the ledges and the hemlocks to the falls. Another hop-toad or fox followed the same way. Some Indian trailed the fox. By and by there was a path. Then grew a road, of sorts. A road beautiful in its windings and its environment, coolly shadowed, filled with the music of purling waters. But a tough road. Farm folks for many miles around drove over that tough road in oxcarts and lumberbox wagons, for years and kicked not a bit. They were tough folks.

That's the road you have to take if you would reach the Devil's Hop Yard. It can be made, all right, by automobile, but it's no speedway.

Having converted the Devil's Hop Yard into a state reservation, which is an achievement that some day will be appreciated, you'd naturally think that the state of Connecticut would make a rather special point of marking the way to it, with road signs. And even that it would spend a few hundred dollars smoothing the road. It would probably cost somewhat less to make the Hop Yard road reasonably safe for the democracy of the flivver than it would to take out just one of these three per cent curves they are eliminating from the already to fast great highways. Probably some day the money will be spent and the Hop Yard will come into its own.

Meantime, it's a lovely spot. And there are several delightful picnicking grounds, with stone fireplaces provided by the state for those who like to cook a meal outdoors.

Yesterday, with tens of thousands of motorists jamming the concrete ways there must have been as many as forty people at the Hop Yard early in the afternoon.

CURSE OF BABEL

Perhaps the curse of the town of Babel is responsible for the distressing flood of false stories that have poured out of this enormously tragic Noble disaster and its correlative episodes.

Here have been several groups of persons, all alike throwing their lives into the work of rescue as if they were negligible things, yet all speaking—and for that matter thinking—in widely differing languages. It is entirely possible that few if any real linguists have been at the center of affairs. And Slav or Norse rescuers, striving to understand the statements of Latin rescued when the latter have been for weeks half mad with physical and mental suffering, may have been able to make little enough out of perhaps garbled statements.

Finnish radio men have tried to talk with Italian operators under the most difficult circumstances. Russian sailors have had to communicate with the world through Norwegian media.

All in all it is perhaps not so astonishing, after all, that the news from the great Arctic adventure has become bewildering in its inaccuracy. It might be as well, in estimating the value of future reports, to take into consideration this peculiar element of confusion. The sailors and fliers who are striving so valiantly in the great cause of humanitarianism up there are not greatly interested in the form in which the news of their doings goes out. They are too busy trying to save lives.

HOW COME?

Ornithologists, students of wild life and a good many others are puzzled to account for the success of a man named Allen Green in attracting, in an Iowa refuge of his own establishment, many thousand wild ducks. Green is a former newspaper man who lives in a shack near the Mississippi in the southern part of the state. There is a marshy lake not far from his home and here, since he has lived there, come the ducks—ten or fifteen thousand of them—to spend the winter. Green refuses to explain his method of attracting them, if any. He says he does not feed them, and that they fly long distances for forage, returning at night. The lake was not a notable duck resort before Green located in its vicinity.

Perhaps all that Green does for the ducks is to love them. Perhaps it will some time come to be recognized that wild birds possess some sense that tells them when they are being protected. It is not so many years since that beautiful little gull, the tern, was to all intents and purposes extinct so far as Connecticut waters were concerned. They had been devastated by plumage hunters and had disappeared. Then a law was passed protecting them under heavy penalties.

It hadn't been in force a year before the terns came back.

Now they are as common, almost, along the Connecticut shore, as the big gulls. And a flying tern is one of the most beautiful things in all creation. The terns are worth a thousand times more as living delights to the eye than they would be, commercially, to the milliners even if modern women would wear their wings, which we doubt.

Explain how the terns knew that they were no longer in peril along our coast, and perhaps you will have explained why Green's ducks abide with him.

Birds know things that human beings cannot fathom. How does the tiny humming bird that nests in your shrubbery find his way to far-off Yucatan to spend the winter and back to your yard next spring?

WASHINGTON LETTER

SMITH IS NOMINEE BECAUSE POLITICIANS THINK HE HAS CHANCE TO WIN

By ROONEY DUTCHER Washington, July 16.—Looking back to the events leading up to the Democratic convention, it seems obvious that the ease with which Al Smith was nominated was due to a belief among Democratic politicians that he had a chance to win and that anyone else they could think of did not.

As soon as this thought began to spread through the party it was useless for anyone else to promote his own candidacy seriously. The Democrats have been out of power eight years now and all but a tiny minority are more anxious than anything else to get back the job.

The four years between conventions saw relentless crumbling of the bulwarks of hate set up against Smith during and after the Madison Square massacre. The New York state election of 1926, when Smith gave the Republicans one more drubbing and again won the governorship, was one of the largest boosts the Smith candidacy received. The rest of it was largely a gradually growing conviction that to turn Smith down meant defeat and that to nominate him might mean something else.

For awhile, of course, predictions were common that the New York fight would take place all over again, perhaps breaking up the party. Either that or one of the candidates, Smith and McAdoo, must weaken. It was McAdoo who withdrew, faded away and finally withdrew. When southern leaders began to endorse Smith privately while opposing him publicly one began to realize that it was about all over.

No one arose to take McAdoo's place. The two-thirds rule looked like a hard hurdle for Smith for a while, but no one appeared who could accumulate enough delegates to use the thing. The only question was whether enough favorite sons could secure up enough votes that could be held long enough to jam the convention into a deadlock. And all the exhortations of the organized dries, the Ku Klux Klan and a few very sore old McAdoo lieutenants couldn't do that.

The opposition couldn't even unite. A few prima donnas sprang up to work for themselves, but none of them had any strength away from home. Most of them finally arrived in Houston with delegations which cherished considerable sentiment for Al.

The two strong men of national repute and substance who contested the nomination with Smith have only given their best friends considerable pain. Senator Jim Walsh of Missouri and Senator Tom Walsh of Montana are two great fighters, admired and respected by the party who have served so well. But both were only made to look a little silly when they mixed it with Smith and both suffered somewhat in prestige.

It was too bad that Walsh allowed someone, perhaps McAdoo, to persuade him that he could stop Smith and perhaps have the nomination himself. He was badly misjudged. The cause of the California primaries, where McAdoo expected to win for Walsh when the wet vote divide between Smith and Red, was sorely mortifying.

So was the fact that Montana Democrats appeared to be more excited over the Smith candidacy than their own. It will be recalled that after Montana voted wet in a state referendum, Senator Walsh made it clear that he was a drier and that the result meant little to him.

When we look back at Red, someone ought to draw a veil. Walsh knew when he was licked and dropped out. Red must have known, too, but he stayed. One saw Jim Reed soft-pedaling and straddling over the prohibition issue. Jim Reed, bit-terest foe of the dries, under some circumstances this might have been forgiven as good politics, but it couldn't possibly get him anywhere. The dries hated him anyway, though willing to use him to block Smith if it were done in

Bedroom Suites of Four Big Pieces Exactly as Shown

THE most outstanding furniture value of the year, in our estimation, is ready for you today. One of the most beautiful suites—one of the biggest values we have ever been able to offer—is represented in the four piece suite we have sketched above.

The figure of the rich walnut used on the fronts and tops of the pieces is unique. Very closely spaced ripple grains, resemble marcel waves that run true and straight, up and down.

Highly figured walnut is used on the ends of pieces where, even on the highest priced furniture, it is customary to place straight grain wood.

The carvings, of real wood, have been carefully planned to give a rich effect rather than one of showiness.

A medium, warm walnut finish does full justice to the beautiful, perfectly matched walnut used, with the mahogany drawers and mahogany overlays finished in light red mahogany. The carvings and beaded mouldings, impossible to clearly show in the pen sketch, are rubbed to a rich, antique finish.

Such refinements as the standing toilet on the chest—a mirror which stands on its own base and can be placed in any position—and a French vanity with unbroken top, and a stationery mirror so much in vogue at present, are features of this outstanding suite.

All in all, it represents one of the biggest values we have ever been able to offer. In quality and quantity, construction, finish and selection of woods used, it equals many suites at double its cost!

Just a certain quantity of suites was sold and then the factory production on them ceased in order that this pattern could enjoy the exclusiveness it rightfully deserves. There are only a limited number of them available, exclusively at Watkins Brothers in New England, and when they are gone worst. (They had some sort of a freak notion of stopping Smith with Reed or anyone else who came to hand and then dragging in Donahay of Ohio.) On the other hand, friendly-ly became sour on him.

The fight Reed made wasn't Reed's kind of fight at all. In fact, it wasn't a fight, but just a hymn. Some of his advisers had urged him to call into Smith instead of shadow-boring with pillowed fists as others wanted him to do. Reed chose the latter course. In either event he was licked before he began. If Smith couldn't have had the nomination he wouldn't have given it to the man who blocked him.

Because this great fighter is retiring from the Senate and probably from public life altogether, it's too bad that the final curtain fell on him in such an uncharacteristic and almost pitiful position.

The party, one hopes, does appreciate the fact that he didn't pour his venom into Smith in a desperate attempt to beat him—the wounds might have been dangerous. Reed's speech immediately after the nomination, calling on all Democrats to support "the great governor of New York," was admirable.

Now, if he takes the stump for the ticket he will be an immense asset. Some of his backers say he won't—that he'll sulk in his tent. If that's so, it rather looks as if the splendid old warrior has already permanently passed from the picture in something a little dimmer than a blaze of glory.

New York, July 16.—Few of the "heart interest" songs that find their way from Tin Pan Alley can duplicate a real life story that now goes the rounds of the piano pounders pathway.

Speaking of Tin Pan Alley, no less an authority than Stella Kern tells me that the song style is swinging back to those dear old mandolin lines about "my dear old pal," and "you can't tear my heart asunder" and "you can't break my heart again."

Followed a quarrel. The girl called for Europe where, I am told, she has remained. And, just the other day, Con Conrad—one of the best known names in the Tin Pan Alley belt—died a painful death in bankruptcy. The sum of the Woolworth Tower goes almost 750 feet. It's the equivalent of several of Manhattan's short blocks—enough to set you back 15 to 20 cents on a taxi meter. GILBERT SWAN

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

Rod asked Tom to do the orderpin. "You know the ropes," he said, excusing himself.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding, to ROD BRYER, feels troubled at receiving a dagger-like paper knife from LILA MARSH, an ex-sweetheart of Rod's. She resolves not to be jealous, but a second blow to her pride comes when she accidentally overhears one of her bridesmaids ask another if she thought the bride liked being second choice. The pain in her heart vanishes when Rod whispers "My wife" with a world of adoration in his eyes. They spend an ideal honeymoon and Bertie Lou forgets about Lila until they return and find her playing dictator in their apartment because she "knows what Rod likes."

They settle down in the little home but too much hospitality upsets their financial budget. This worries Bertie Lou as does the persistent annoyance of Lila. So she is happy when Rod accepts a position in New York which has been offered him by TOM FRASER.
Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. They are amazed at the cost of everything, and Bertie Lou is embarrassed when MOLLY FRASER takes her to an exclusive gown shop and urges her to buy more clothes than she can afford. Rod worries Bertie Lou by playing poker with Tom. One night, after winning the game, Rod foolishly invites the crowd to a night club. Bertie Lou opens a charge account against Rod's wishes in order to get a new evening dress before the party. For Molly has announced that Lila will arrive in time for the affair.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XVI
Molly suggested taking two cabs to the club. "There's no sense getting crushed." She was thinking of her new ermine coat.
"Let's," Lila agreed, and while they waited she found an opportunity for a whispered word to her hostess.
When the first cab drew up to the curb Molly motioned Bertie Lou to get in. "You first," Bertie Lou said, stepping aside. Molly laughed and took her by the arm. "To rent a car would have shown that Bertie Lou knew what Lila was engineering, she preferred to have them think she hadn't caught on."
Molly climbed in after her and while Rod was engaged in signaling a second cab Molly called to Tom to come and join her. Tom delayed until the other cab came to a stop and Lila turned toward it. Then he got in with Molly and Bertie Lou. He was perfectly innocent. It seemed a natural thing to do.
The distance to the club was short, but heavy traffic delayed them. When finally the two cabs arrived before the unpretentious entrance of the Arabeque Lila had enjoyed her "moment" with Rod. At least she gave the impression of having enjoyed it though Rod hadn't thought it anything. Lila was too intelligent to spoil her evening by its inception.
Later, when gaiety and the atmosphere of the club had thawed out Rod's feeling of self-consciousness she hoped to get closer to him. She didn't know from experience what help she could expect from the relaxing influences of a supper club, but she'd heard of people who had completely forgotten themselves there, their inhibitions, and other things. Perhaps Rod would forget that he shouldn't be interested in her any more.
Bertie Lou noted the self-satisfied smile on Lila's lips as she stepped from the taxi. She glanced quickly at Rod. Guileless Rod. She knew at once that he had nothing to conceal. What a suspicious fool Lila must think her!
Rod left Lila to the ushering ability of Tom and devoted himself to seeing Bertie Lou politely into the club. Lila's eyes snapped as he turned away from her. She was further annoyed at the care with which she saw Bertie Lou seated before he took thought of her or Molly.
They had a good table. Tom was known in the place. Rod asked him to do the ordering. "You know the ropes," he said, excusing himself.
Tom was glad to comply. While he gave his cryptic orders to the waiter, Bertie Lou and Lila gave their attention to their surroundings.

The Arabeque was one of the quieter clubs. Evening dress was required. The women's gowns, their glittering diamonds and endless ropes of pearls, and the men's black and white dress were striking contrast to the exotic furnishings all around them. The walls were paneled in dark wood with arabesques in deep red, forest green and antique gold, used as the decorative motif.
Unlike many clubs with dazzling white lights and screeching jazz the Arabeque offered refinement. But it was, after all, a night club, and as such was permeated with an air of gaiety, both forced and natural, that excited the senses and set free a desire to forget care, to live while the living was good and let tomorrow take thought of tomorrow's troubles.
Bertie Lou felt the wine of it in her tapping toes and time-beating fingers. The waiter brought something in glasses. She left it untouched to dance with Rod. "Tom was dancing with Lila. They bumpen in to each other presently. Bertie Lou's eyes were closed dreamily. She did not see the look Lila bent upon her. Neither did Rod.
Tom asked Molly for the next dance. Bertie Lou knew Rod must dance with Lila. She hated to miss a number. Lila looked happier.
They were given time to nibble on the first course of supper. Not much time and not much supper. The musicians began softly tuning up their instruments.
And then Bertie Lou got a lucky break. The hostess came over and spoke to Tom. He called her by her first name and introduced her to his friends. She said they needed an extra man. There was a perfectly good one going to waste at a table all by himself. His party had moved on and the girls couldn't get to first base with him. All right to bring him over? She gave some information about him, vouching for him. Said he used his right name. One of her remarks caught Lila's attention. "Of course he's filthy with money, if that means anything to you!"
Rod danced with Lila and Bertie Lou talked with the new man while Tom galloped around with Molly. But that, Bertie Lou was sure before the music crashed into the third number would be the end of her warfare with Lila for this evening at least. For Lila had begun playing up to the stranger, Mr. Loree. She had her heart and soul in her work.
Mr. Loree was an oldish man, but he carried the stamp of success in his crisp speech and sure, brisk manner. Bertie Lou rather liked him. Tom went good for Lila, but, strangely, he seemed to return her interest.
Neither Tom nor Molly cared particularly for dancing. Mr. Loree did. Lila was now perfectly willing to let Bertie Lou have all the dances with Rod. So it turned out to be a much happier evening for Bertie Lou than she had anticipated. And the show was what Tom called a "wow."
Little girls with wise eyes and pert legs pointed out ahead of a principal and tossed balloons to the patrons. To the ends of the stems toy jazz makers were attached. The singer came on and pleaded with everyone to make music for her. Queer sounds suddenly filled the smoky air as the revellers endeavored to favor her.
Bertie Lou spoke to Tom about the entertainer's voice. "Oh, yes," he said, "she's good. Come to New York to study for grand opera."
Bertie Lou fell silent over the untold story. The song ended and the girl—she was just a girl—made way for the star. Bertie Lou was fascinated with the latter's costume, made of fig leaves and small red apples, but not with her voice, though she had a song that she could make a lot of.
It was about a garden. And there was a call in it somewhere to the rather regions for the last word brought a hissing herd of little red demons about her. Demons in forked tails and nothing much besides. They began tearing at her costume, plucking away the apples and ripping off the leaves. Bertie Lou's eyes widened. Would they completely disrobe her? She glanced apprehensively at Rod. His face reflected her own alarm.
But they were not to be so entertained. As the Garden of Eden disappeared from the girl a low

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUN OVER

Concerning this talking baby of Birmingham, whose name, for some reason, known only to her parents, perhaps only to one of them, is YuVawu, YuVawu, seven-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Scotts, is supposed to have the vocabulary of a child of six. What's more, she uses it. At one week she is supposed to have said "Eat! Eat! Eat!" At two weeks, "Daddy!" etc., until now she can emit such examples of pure diction as "gats is swell."

WHO WANTS HER?
Somehow it all smacks suspiciously to me of a maternal reluctance to bear the pangs of jealousy engendered by the far-fung fame of the three-year-old who smokes black stogies. And supposing the child does say, "eat, eat, eat," what of it? What parent is going to be jealous of that? If there's one thing a parent knows it's that babies, small children, growing boys and girls, and on up to the time papa stops paying the grocery bills, "eat, eat, eat," but who wants a child to rub it in at the age of one week? Seriously speaking, why do parents want prodigies? Abnormal precocity is as frightening a thing as subnormality.

A KINDLY GESTURE
King Alexander of Serbia is about to adopt the two sons of Paul Raditch, Croatia deputy sialn in the Serbian Parliament, current report has it. Which only proves again the kinship twist kings and other human beings. The impulse of sympathy and protection of the weak is as kindly as it is ordinary, and vice versa.

PARIS KNOWS
Even Paris, long regarded, perhaps inaccurately, as one spot on earth where "anything goes," is getting alarmed about "the growing immorality of the French murmur of admiration arose from the audience. The gleaming, slithering skin of a serpent appeared bit by bit as the leaves fell to the floor.

New creepy jungle symphonies came throbbing through the room in a slow crescendo. The girl in the snakeskin swayed almost imperceptibly, a little more, then dizzily, and finally threw herself into a series of amazing contortions that left the onlookers breathless with fear that she might break into pieces.
At last she was down on the floor, wriggling over a trip of green carpet toward the curtain exit. As her boneless body slid from sight a storm of applause burst out, so loud that it drowned even the howling saxophones. But the girl did not respond to an encore. She was stretched out on a table under expert hands, tears of pain in her eyes. "God, that double twist is awful!" she moaned.
"How about some chicken salad and a liquidator?" Mr. Loree suggested, all memory of the club's supper gone from him. Lila said she'd rather have lobster.
"What's the use of ordering food?" Tom grumbled. "You salt it and then get up to dance and that's the last you see of it, unless you order the same thing over again."
Bertie Lou said nothing. She wasn't hungry, but this was Rod's party. She couldn't veto a second supper if the others wanted it. But she was beginning to suspect that this sort of entertainment would cost more than they'd bargained for. After all, however, even if Mr. Loree had added to their expense he had won her undying gratitude for turning Lila's attention from Rod. That was worth something.
When, along toward morning, Rod asked for the check he got the shock of his lifetime. One hundred and sixteen dollars! Whew! And he had about seventy in his pockets.
Mr. Loree was too used to money even to think of offering any hospitality to which the hostess had assured him he was invited. Rod's discomfiture escaped him in Lila's dreamy eyes.
And Tom was nodding in his chair. Only Bertie Lou saw the red color mount in Rod's cheeks as he stared stupidly at the check.

THERE'LL BE NO HOMEY WOMEN IN FIFTY YEARS, SPECIALIST SAYS.
"Fifty years from now there will be no homey women," said Helen Rubinstein, famous beauty specialist.
"Women are now intelligent about beauty, and are bringing up their daughters to observe rules of health and beauty. They understand that the foundation of all beauty is health, and that if they keep their health, they can keep their looks."
"And not only are they interested in their faces, as they used to be, but in their bodies as well. They take time for gymnastics, sport and rest, and they realize they must control their nerves and their emotions if they are to remain beautiful."
The college girl is doing much to bring on the age of beauty, Madame Rubinstein believes.
"Because," she points out, "she does not follow the accepted styles and fads, but has definite ideas of her own. She believes in personality and is anxious to study her own type and make the most of it."
"And the more she uses the inside of her head, the more capable she is of using the outside to advantage."
"She applies all the knowledge she acquires to herself as well as to her career. And she realizes that efficiency begins with her appearance."
"With her the pursuit of beauty is not only a manifestation of vanity, but of her will to succeed. She is setting a new and fascinating pace for women."

DON'T BE AFRAID!

Gradually Accustom Yourself to the Water and You Will Find Swimming Is Easy, Girl Champions Declare.

Phyllis Zittenfeld poses in the "dead man's float."
By THE ZITTENFELD TWINS.
The first step in learning how to swim is to overcome fear of the water.
The best way to do this, of course, is to grow used to the water while still young. Mother used to take us in swimming when we were tiny babies. But we never were afraid of the water. It is a mistake to take any child into the water who is afraid.
Give him a sand pail and shovel and let him dig around on the beach and before he knows it he will be wading. It is only a step more clear into the water.
Our advice is not for babies, however. We want to try to help boys and girls and adults make up their minds to learn swimming.
Don't Use Floats
If starting in a pool, stick to the shallow end until you really can swim under your own power. Never use water wings. Try to duck and play ball or tag in the water until you don't mind going under. Wallow around and learn to like the feel of water.
You never can learn to swim if you don't go under far enough to wet your hair. Don't hold your nose, either. Take a deep breath, hold it, duck to a squatting position, come up, exhale. If you do this easily, slowly, and try to enjoy it, you can easily grow used to water without being afraid. And you should learn to keep your eyes open, too. Many persons fear to open their eyes. In keeping them shut, they thus develop another kind of fear for water.
When you have learned to duck down and up again without being afraid or out of breath, try the "dead man's float."
Stretch out upon the top of the feet, face downwards, hands out in front, face under the water, with breath held. The easiest way to do it is to start from the side of the tank and kick off with your feet.
Stretch out your arms as you take a deep breath and push yourself from the side. If you hold your body out taut, you will find that you float across the water easily. You will have to try it many times before you can push more than halfway across the tank. But this gives you a feeling of buoyancy that is essential to anyone who wants to swim.
Try this "dead man's float" for only a few seconds the first time. Just to get the position. Then repeat, trying to get a deeper breath and stay afloat longer. Never strain yourself trying to stay afloat longer than you can easily. That will come later.
But the minute you accomplish a good "dead man's float" you have learned several valuable things needed in swimming: buoyancy, the feel of water on the face, the ability to hold your breath without getting scared, and a sense of easy motion through the water.

now that I have ceased, temporarily, to be a careerist, and am being just a dangerous female. Fortunately, Alan is taking quite an interest in Alice Carver, and so he doesn't notice that Mr. Shelton is taking quite an interest in me.
You know, I have decided that I love intrigue for its own sake. Mr. Shelton has a tremendous interest in me just now, because, by all the conventions, he shouldn't. I'm perfectly sure that I wouldn't think of him twice. When I see him and Alan together, and these two really like each other—I realize that Alan is much handsomer and younger, and much more my ideal of a man.
But I like the idea of interesting him. For I have a feeling that I do it slightly against his will. I am sure he was violently in love with this girl whom I am supposed to resemble. It would be so easy for me to reduce him to a state of abject slavery—since it is all in the cards—that at times I feel I ought to resist the impulse and fight in my own class where there is some wholesome competition.
But other times, when Alan wants to play bridge, while the moon is out on the water, and I catch a certain far-away look in Brother Shelton's eyes, I feel quite sure that there is no point in not facing the inevitable.
All my love, mom, darling.

PRINTERS FROM OLD TEXTS
Decorators, recognizing beauty in the dainty colored and exquisite drawn-flower prints in old books of botany, have sought eagerly for them in old bookstalls. These colored illustrations, some small and some as much as 1. inches square, have been taken out and glass-covered and passpartouted simply with black, gold or a lovely apple-green. Paired, they hang over a sofa or a desk, where they express the vogue for the quaint.

Dear Mom:
I am no glutton for punishment. Consequently, the little invitation you suggested I extend to my ancient cousins is out. A little of my life might do them good, but a little of their life would finish me.
Here is one point where I disagree with you. I don't believe in inviting people to visit you in a spirit of obligation or of charity. If I ask anyone to visit me it means I really want them, and that I expect them to be good, congenial company. I seem to remember both of these cousins rather painfully from my childhood—women who always sat around and wait for someone else to start something.
Should they ever come to visit me of their own accord—that's a different matter. I'll do right by them. But I'm not a philanthropist, spreading joy and sunshine. I'm a selfish, modern woman, who is going to escape everything unpleasant every time she gets a chance.
Anyhow, life is quite exciting

Community Twilighters To Resume Play Tonight

Manchester Green Seems To Be Target Of League

Leaders of First Round Stated for a Lot of Attention; Aces Enter Circuit.

All games to start at 6:15 sharp. There are but six teams left in the Community Twilight League and they all play this evening as noted above. Each and every one of the outfits vow that they will be on top at the finish of the present round. On paper the Green seems to have the edge over the rest of the pack by virtue of winning the first set without a defeat.

However, the rest of the field announced to the world at large there will be much sterner opposition for the cheery Green aggregation before the final curtain is drawn. It is the old fight and some left over. But according to the supporters of the aforementioned Green team it is deeds, not words, that puts a team in the win column every game.

The dark horse in this round appears to be the Aces. While it is true that their star pitcher, Kearns, is rest at Niantic for the next week, the rest of the team is confident that they can carry on until he gets back. Then, too, Gibson's Garage, broadcasting from the vicinity of Depot Square, announces the same thing. That makes Heights and Highland Park aggregations want to register in the win column just as badly and so it appears there will be action aplenty during the remainder of the season in order to take a fall out of the Green team at the close of this round.

GREEN TEAM WINS UNEVEN CONTEST

Chapman Aces No Match for Sam Prentice's Colts Sunday.

Manchester Green's baseball club booked the Chapman Aces of Willimantic late Saturday afternoon for a game at this town yesterday. Aided and abetted by Hooks Brennan the local aggregation made it a real visit. When the weary score keepers finally added, subtracted and otherwise manipulated the figures on the winner's side of the score sheet it was found that a total of 21 runs had been made and all by Sam Prentice's colts.

Table with columns: MANCHESTER GREEN, CHAPMAN, AB, R, H, PO, A, E. Rows include players like Stevenson, Linnell, etc.

This evening the Hudsons and the Cadillac will play at the West Side playgrounds at 6:30 o'clock. This game is a part of the West Side league and both aggregations are a bit anxious to get into the win column.

FOOTBALL STARS ENTER BIG LEAGUES

Pair of Football Stars Ready For Big Leagues

Cleveland Signs Caldwell; Bettencourt With St. Louis Regulars.

Two strapping young fellows whose football ability earned them All-American honors from a secondary number of scribes last fall are among the collegians who packed their sheepskins after commencement this year and became hirings of major league ball clubs.

Football stars, as a rule, have proved notoriously terrible baseball players and one has only to look through the roster of major league clubs to see how few ex-gridirers are regulars on major league clubs.

It seems he will do. Critics who have watched him in the various cities around the circuit where the Browns have played since he joined them are loud in their praise of his work. His fielding is improving day by day and his batting continues to drive in runs.

Local Sport Chatter

Tomorrow evening the Red Girls will practice baseball at the West Side playgrounds at 6:15 o'clock.

This year, 1928, the Olympic games are slated for Amsterdam and according to the performances of athletes from all over the world it is impossible for anyone, at this time, to keep track of the different records.

Did Manchester Green lose a baseball game last Sunday? Several fans who claimed they attended the contest staged at Woodbridge stadium and witnessed the first downfall of the Greenites this season.

Plans have been completed for the water carnival at Globe Hollow Wednesday evening. A new and novel stunt will be tried out at this time when Director Lloyd will stage a candle race.

Tonight at the Velodrome in East Hartford Bat Bettino will mingle with Battling Scully in the main bout. The Hartford mauler, Battino, has been out of the game for some time due to brittle hands.

Battino is the first Hartford scrapper of any importance since the days of Sammy Waitz. He is reported to have a lot of trouble making the required weight, 126, to meet Scully this evening.

One of the best things about the coming Heeney-Tunney quarrel this month, the 26th to be exact, is the alleged ill feeling between the two men regarding the ticket squabble. There is, it is supposed, a lot of foolish fans who will believe otherwise and think that both Gene and Tom meant every word they are alleged to have bantered back and forth during the past few days.

New York, July 16.—Although he has been handicapped considerably by a sore back, Babe Ruth is getting his homers and now needs only 27 more to set a new record of 61. His 24th yesterday, made against Cleveland, put him 15 games, 13 days and 4 home runs ahead of his last year's record.

Buster Gehrig, the other great slugger of the Yankees, hit his 19th but is far behind his 1927 record.

Loughran, Favorite Against Pete Latzo

Second Meeting of Two Light Heavyweights Tonight; Battle to Be Staged in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

By DAVIS J. WALSH. Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 16.—Tommy Loughran, the strange young man who labors under the mid-Victorian notion that a champion fighter is a lad who goes about fighting with vulgar frequency, will take that light heavyweight title of his off the back shelf again tonight and lay it right out there on the counter for the shoppers of the division. It always has been first come, first accommodated with Thomas and so at the behest of the busy season the next customer will be Pete Latzo, tough as the slag heaps in this region of his birth and breeding.

Usually after a seance like that, champion skips gladly to meet the same man again, aided in a slight measure by a team of runaway work horses. But there is nothing in the book to account for Loughran.

Few champion fights, and certainly none of Loughran's, have had a setting more picturesque than this. With one exception, you will have to go back to the days at Goldfield, Tonopah and Butte to get the rakish atmosphere that a mining town lends a championship prize fight. The exception is the Walker-Latzo welterweight title meeting in this same region several years ago and it may be significant that Latzo, challenger than as now, won from a champion who had been unbeatable.

Sturdy Oaks take two. The Sturdy Oaks from a double header from the Cardinals in the Community Junior Twilight League Sunday at Hickey's Grove. Beebe pitched both games for the Oaks, doubling five hits in the first game and only two in the second game, besides getting six hits out of seven times at bat. His team gave him good support.

Kearns offerings were knocked out all four corners of the lot by the hard hitting Oaks. Spillane pitched a good game but his team mates failed him in their stick work.

London.—A famous oak tree believed to be nearly 1,000 years old in the churchyard of Brushford, near Dulverton, Somerset, is showing signs of decay and the church council are arranging for the limbs to be supported in order to preserve its beauty as long as possible.

The tree, of which mention is made in Queen Elizabeth's time, is 19 feet in circumference at the base. Brushford, at the Domesday survey, was held by Roger de Corcoran, whose services for his Exmoor lands was the hanging on a certain forked oak all the red deer that died of murrain in Exmoor forest, and it is possible that this oak is the tree indicated.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hobby and daughter Eleanor of Henry street and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Johnston of Bigelow street have returned from a tour of the White Mountains, places of interest in the vicinity of Portland, Maine, and Boston.

Ward E. Duffy of West Hartford will address the Manchester League of Women Voters tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 on the subject of "Comparison of the Party Platforms." Mr. Duffy attended both the Republican and Democratic national conventions and is well qualified to handle such a topic. The meeting will be held at the old Cheney homestead, on Hartford road, near Cheney Brothers office.

Miss Bertha Gates and Miss Ruth Boughton of Providence, formerly of this town, have been visiting friends here.

BAD CORNER CAUSE OF ANOTHER CRASH

West Center and Cooper Streets Junction Scene of Auto Smash Saturday.

There was another accident at the corner of West Center and Cooper streets Saturday, similar in many ways to an accident at the corner two weeks ago. The accident Saturday involved a Nash car driven by Gustave Jansen of 113 Cooper street and a Ford touring car driven by Miss Vera H. Stanley of Andover, stenographer to Major Ladd of the Connecticut Air Force, Hartford.

Miss Stanley was driving east on West Center street and approaching the intersection of Cooper and West Center streets, when the car driven by Jansen came from the north down the hill. They met in the center of the road, the force of the contact causing the Nash car to turn over on its top and turning the Ford car around so that it was facing in the opposite direction.

In the Jansen car was Mr. Jansen and his wife. Both were caught under the car as it turned over, but escaped injuries of a serious nature. Mrs. Jansen complaining of a sprained neck, but otherwise appeared to be uninjured. The accident was reported to the police station and Lieutenant Barron investigated, but no arrests were made.

The Nash car was the more badly damaged as in addition to having the top crushed in and the windshield broken there were damages to the body and the frame. The Ford car damage was on the left side of the car consisting of a bent fender, broken headlight, bent wish bone and twisted frame.

DAUGHTERS OF ITALY OFFICERS INSTALLED

President Miss Ada Pagani is Awarded Novel Gift; Lodge Making Fine Progress.

At the last meeting of Eleanor Duse Lodge, Daughters of Italy, these officers were installed: President, Miss Ada Pagani; vice president, Miss Victoria Genovese; recording secretary, Mrs. Maria Correnti; financial secretary, Mrs. Mary Aceto; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Dellafiera; orator, Mrs. Louis Pola; trustees, Josephine Pagani, Mrs. Lucy Pagani, Miss Mary Garibaldi and Mrs. Mary Belletti; guards, Mrs. Agata Garibaldi, Mrs. Evelyn Pagani and Mrs. Angela DiSimone.

After the installation, the president, Miss Ada Pagani was presented with a ring. This ring is a novel one. On one side it has a diamond set in onyx and on the other a cameo with a diamond setting. The ring itself is of white gold. Mrs. Mary Belletti made the presentation speech and President Pagani was so overcome by surprise that she hardly was able to respond.

Following the installation which was conducted by Ernestina Pagani, of Addison, and attended by about a hundred, refreshments were served. There was also music for dancing.

Eleanor Duse Lodge is beginning its fourth year and has already 85 members. A large class was initiated at the last meeting. Delegates were also chosen for the convention in August in New Haven. Miss Victoria Genovese will represent the local lodge at the convention. It was also decided at the meeting to hold a joint outing of the Sons and Daughters of Italy on August 5 at Liedertafel Grove, Rockville.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT" MERCHANTS' DAY. Along with the rest of Manchester stores Pinehurst takes its week-day off, day after tomorrow. We don't know what we are going to do with it, yet, but we're going to have it. And we do know that we're not going to spend it talking politics, and probably not pitching horseshoes. Perhaps we'll all do the same thing and perhaps we'll each do something different by way of holiday-making. But the point is that Wednesday, instead of being a half holiday, this week is to be a whole holiday in the stores. For Pinehurst along with the rest. Now it always gives us a sort of guilty feeling, afterward, to have a customer tell us that he or she "forgot" about the Merchants' day closing, and so had to go without this or that in the way of table supplies. It isn't a justifiable feeling; the storekeepers rather ought to have their own one day a year—don't you think? But just the same we hate to learn of our patrons being inconvenienced. Hence this reminder—that Pinehurst will be closed all day Wednesday, and you really will have to prepare for that no-store day just as if it were a Sunday or the Fourth of July. To make it easier, Pinehurst is going to be open for business till 9 o'clock tomorrow night. N-I-n-e; count 'em; 9 o'clock in the evening, Tuesday night. Deliveries smack up to 6.
