

RIBBON MILL NOW IS A CRAVAT MILL

Readaption of Room and Equipment to Bigger Business Is Under Way.

The first physical step toward readapting the cravat department of Cheney Brothers to the handling of materials more efficiently is the removal of the cravat stock room from the second floor of the cravat mill down stairs to the rear section of the first floor.

The stock room was located on the second floor front and lay directly off the room where the cravat finishing work is carried on.

The additional space will provide ample room for the installation of the conveyor system which is to be employed in carrying the cravats through the various processes.

The conveyors will carry the fabrics not only through the manufacturing processes but all the way to the shipping department.

At present the machines used in the manufacture of the cravats are run by shaft drive.

RULES FOR AUTOPSIES ON UNCLAIMED BODIES

Judge Raymond A. Johnson, assistant attorney-general of the state of Connecticut, yesterday gave a decision that is likely to attract much attention among the soldier and sailor veterans of this state.

The request for the opinion was made by the secretary of the Veteran's Home Commission which passed on a request from Major Richard J. Hughes, commandant at the home.

Assistant Attorney General Johnson rules that in case a veteran dies at the home and has no relatives, or any responsible person who will care for the body and belongings, the surgeon at the home has a right to perform an autopsy within forty-eight hours after the death.

Twins, a boy and a girl, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodhouse of 17 Benton street yesterday. Mother and babies are doing nicely.

SMITH NAILS AS LIE, TALE TOLD IN W. VA.

celve: West Virginia is a battle ground this year and every vote helps."

Keenan's letter fell into the hands of William H. Kelley, Syracuse banker, who is Democratic leader of the city. He promptly called Governor Smith.

Governor Smith requested Kelley to get the denial statement from some prominent Republican as requested by Keenan and to forward the letter to Albany.

Senator George F. Fearon, Republican chairman of the Senate judiciary committee, promptly furnished the refutation of the charge that Governor Smith was drunk at Syracuse.

"Politically," said Fearon, in a letter to Kelley, "I am opposed to Governor Smith, but I believe in a square deal even for political opponents."

As a member of the advisory board of the state fair, Senator Fearon said he had been designated as Governor Smith's escort during his visit to the fair and was with him from early morning until his departure.

Not Intoxicated "I occupied an adjoining box to the governor while he was viewing the races," said Fearon's letter. "He made no speech from the box. He was not intoxicated. He showed no evidence of even having had a single drink, nor do I believe that he had."

The statement which Mr. Keenan quotes as to the governor's condition, is so manifestly unfair and untrue that would not feel that I was acting the part of a man if I did not write you this letter stating the facts as I know them."

Woman Interviewed Immediately upon receipt of Fearon's letter, Governor Smith asked Kelley to call on Mrs. Sanford, which he did, later reporting to Governor Smith the results of his visit.

"After introducing myself to Mrs. Sanford," Kelley reported, "I informed her I had a letter from Parkersburg, W. Va., she in turn without letting me go farther said, yes, it is from Mrs. Bauer." Kelley said he asked Mrs. Sanford point-blank whether she had made the statement attributed to her.

"Her reply was," said Kelley, "that she had written Mrs. Bauer saying that, of course, she and her family disagreed with the governor's attitude on the Eighteenth Amendment or his ability to change prohibition."

Did Not Write It "I said that is not the question — did you or did you not write the article mentioned in the letter?"

She in turn said, "I did not; I was not at the fair on Thursday; I did not see Governor Smith; neither did I write anything of that sort to Mrs. Bauer." I asked her if she would write a letter to the governor to that effect. She at first said she didn't see why she should, but she would write Mrs. Bauer; I replied that that would not be sufficient.

Finally Kelley said Mrs. Sanford promised she would write the letter to Governor Smith. Although a week has elapsed, Governor Smith said today he had not received it.

Kelley said Mrs. Sanford told him she had had a letter from Mrs. Bauer, "in which she told me a lot of things were being said in Parkersburg, W. Va."

Later Kelley advised Governor Smith again that Mrs. Sanford "positively denied writing any such letter."

Letter Destroyed Then Governor Smith telephoned to Keenan at Parkersburg, asked him to see Mrs. Bauer and if possible obtain the letter in question. Keenan saw Mrs. Bauer, he reported, but he didn't get the letter. He telegraphed the governor on Sunday as follows:

"Impossible to get Sanford letter. Party here says same is lost or destroyed. Believe she must have got instructions from Syracuse to destroy or not disclose. However, she does not deny statement in letter, but has quit talking."

There the matter rested today, save for Gov. Smith's comments. "It will be noted," he said, "that Mrs. Sanford promised Mr. Kelley that she would write to me and make denial of the letter attributed to her by Mrs. Bauer. Up to now she has not done so."

"If Mrs. Bauer made the statements attributed to her by Mr. Keenan and Mrs. Sanford made the statements attributed to her by Mr. Kelley, both cannot be telling the truth. Which of the two women involved is guilty of the slander, I do not know."

Governor Smith said he understood Mrs. Sanford is the wife of a prominent Syracuse coal dealer. Mrs. Bauer was not further identified than as a former Syracusean.

SURPRISE SHOWER FOR MISS JOHNSON

Miss Dagmar K. Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Anna Johnson of Forest street, whose engagement to Linsley R. Baker of Wethersfield, was announced a short time ago, was the honor guest at a surprise miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Otto Johnson of Russell street last evening.

About thirty relatives and friends were in attendance. Mrs. Johnson had tastefully decorated her living and dining rooms with streamers of lavender and yellow crepe paper and used cut flowers in the same colors.

A pleasant social time was enjoyed and the bride-to-be received a choice collection of gifts of linen, china, electrical appliances and aluminum ware.

Gordon Fogg, employed by L. T. Wood as an iceman, is laid up with an infected finger, the result of a small cut.

CONSTABLE TO RESIGN Hartford, Sept. 13.—Clinton's constable who constituted himself a trial judge in motor violation cases and collected fines, is to resign his job, according to information received here today by R. B. Stoeckel, state motor vehicle commissioner.

Mr. Stoeckel passed the information along to Boston Chamber of Commerce officials who had complained to him the constable wasing up and securing $17 from Boston motorists. The matter was referred to the attorney-general who issued a finding that set forth the entire wrongfulness of the constable's proceedings.

Whether criminal action will be taken against the constable is something that will be determined later.

"Not a cough in a Film-ful" says Norma Talmadge after the Blindfold Test

"When you see my new United Artists' picture, 'The Woman Disputed,' you will notice that I smoke cigarettes in several scenes. "Not wanting to show partiality to any one of the four leading brands, I decided to make my choice via the blindfold test, which I had heard of many times. Happily, I picked OLD GOLDS. "I found them smooth, mild and delightfully cool . . . Hereafter, when I am required to smoke I shall naturally insist on OLD GOLDS. There's not a cough in a film-ful!"

THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1923

JUSTIFIABLE

If continuance in office seems to be the principle adhered to by the Republican party of Manchester this fall the reasons for such a policy outweigh, in the present instance, those which fairly enough may be brought against it.

It is true that wherever such a plan does not interfere with the orderly conduct of the community's business, it is politically and socially wise to distribute responsibility for government successively among as large a number of citizens as practicable.

This year, however, special conditions exist. Manchester is on the eye of an undertaking of far reaching and permanent effect. It is about to adopt a new charter, and the adoption of a new charter is equivalent to municipal rebirth.

It is highly important that, at this time, when all-around co-operation is vitally needed, the present governing board of the town should be continued. It was especially urgent that Manchester should be represented in the Legislature, whence the new charter must derive its validity, by legislators experienced and enjoying acquaintance and influence at the capitol.

GOOD NEWS

While Manchester is not a one-industry town, the silk business is so large a factor in its life that activity in the mills waxes or wanes, as in all textile industries it does within certain limits and from time to time, so are the spirits of the community affected.

For some time there was more or less nervousness lest employment at the silk mills might possibly become less steady and less profitable. Evidently any occasion for such apprehension has passed.

AFRICAN DODGERS

Four Springfield, Mass., city officials acted as "African dodgers" at an outing of municipal employees yesterday. It is not related that compulsion was employed to make these dignitaries thrust their heads through holes in a canvas curtain and permit the public to throw soft balls at them, three for a nickel.

is automatic. Suppose that, upon a sufficient referendum vote, communities were empowered to exact just that penalty of its officials when they proved to be either disloyal or bungling in the discharge of their duties—would the effect be to raise or lower the quality of aspirants for public office? Particularly if there were no very particular regulation insuring extreme softness of the balls to be thrown.

Perhaps the possibility of facing a constituency through a hole in a curtain might operate to keep all sensibly organized men and women out of politics—but, come to think of it, most of such people keep out of politics anyhow. Perhaps it would tend to discourage political aspirations on the part of all highly intellectual citizens.

But would it not, at the same time, be an almost certain means of keeping out of politics the consciously crooked and the timid? And neither of these belong in public office.

Anyhow, it would be a wonderful safety valve for those citizens who never attend primaries, never take any part in the choice of public officials save on election day, and even then infrequently, but who always want to leave rocks at their public servants when things municipal go not to their liking.

NEW IDEAS

We could support, without experiencing undue excitement, the new statement that Scarface Al Capone "risked his life"—surrounded by a swarm of his gunmen—to attend the funeral of his friend, Tony Lombardo. But we get quite a thrill out of the related declaration that "no prominent politicians attended."

Consider the change in sentiment in Chicago in a few short weeks. When Diamond Joe Esposito was buried last spring, after a lively career having to do with beer racketeering, alkali cooking, rum running, dope peddling, white slavery and the political fortunes of the fair city of Chicago, the politicians who with solemn faces marched behind his hearse were as the sands of the sea and included a United States senator who made the trip from Washington so that his absence would not hurt his fences.

Is it possible that even in Chicago it is no longer considered perfect form for public officials and controllers of the people's destinies to openly confess fraternity with thugs and killers and boasting criminals? Surely the standards of civilization in the Windy City are looking up. Presently, perhaps, we shall have a politician out there so entirely different that he may suggest the teaching in the Chicago schools of the notion that not all of the greatest heroes of the world are booze kings who maintain private armies and fill the streets of the city with murdered dead.

DOTTED LINE SINS

An apparently perfectly innocent girl stenographer, who "signed on the dotted line" at somebody's orders and who consequently became the technical owner of a distillery which was diverting alcohol in defiance of law, was made a theoretical lawbreaker through the performance.

Which suggests the idea that something will have to be done, one of these early days, for the legal protection of dummies, which are being employed so extensively in these days of interlocking corporations as to have become a recognized institution of business.

Young clerks are commanded by their employers to act as nominal stockholders, directors, even legally responsible heads of concerns which the employees know absolutely nothing about. They have to obey in order to hold their jobs and usually are not conscious of doing anything out of the way. Sometimes, indeed they are not. But sometimes, again, they are liable to get into all sorts of queer complications, possibly into jail.

It would not be far out of the way for the legislature of any state to adopt a statute providing for the punishment of any employer who requires a clerical employee to act as a corporation dummy or to lend his signature to any paper if the consequence of such action turns out to be the placing of the employee in the position of being a law violator.

To be sure there are laws and laws and altogether too many laws, but this is a new problem and, so far as we know, one that scarcely comes within the scope of any present criminal statute.

by his own father, the late Luson B. Morris, who was elected governor of Connecticut in 1892 and served one term—one of the few Democrats to accomplish that feat in Connecticut since the Civil War. Governor Morris was twice defeated for the same office before he succeeded in winning an election to it. The son, despite many amiable qualities and a commendable loyalty to his father's party, seems destined to exceed the number of the paternal defeats by at least one. Then he can try again, and if by any chance he should become governor at last it would be after a still more valiant persistence than that, which in the senator's case, was so surprisingly rewarded.

New York, Sept. 13.—Those spicy portraits of the artist's model, painted on the movies and cheap fiction stories, are rarely to be found in real life.

As a matter of fact, at least 500 of the best known Manhattan models live in well chaperoned girls' clubs, and only a scattered few are to be found in the attics of Greenwich Village. Those who chance to figure in such hectic exploits as are visioned on movie screens rarely last. Furthermore, they can not be classed among the serious members of a profession which goes about its daily tasks in a practical and efficient manner.

They are generally newcomers, fed upon the fictionalized idea of what a model should be and intent upon playing this role. Stripped of the bunk that has long surrounded it, the profession of modeling at this particular moment is well organized and not particularly glamorous. In the ranks of girls who pose for a living, as in all other professions, there are certain star performers who have reached the top of the ladder and who are constantly in demand. Their names are listed with every important artist, with fashion shops and with agencies that supply models.

They are carefully card indexed. Thus, for instance, one girl was listed as a "hand model" and another as a "foot model," still another as a "junior" and a fourth as a "hair," "teeth" or "eyes" model.

Until recently the most photographed model in New York was Dorothy Smart. She was used by a score of the smartest shops and was classed as the highest paid mink in on Fifth Avenue. Any copy of Vanity Fair, Vogue, Harpers—or similar publications—was certain to reveal her wearing the latest modes.

Bille Ford is known as "the head and shoulders girl." Her name tops the list when artists seek a shoulder model. And Gertrude Babo's hands have been used by scores of illustrators and painters. Judith Martin is famous as a figure model. Catherine Dale Owen has long been a favorite as a "portrait" type.

The number of "magazine cover" girls is large. Dorothy Knapp, of stage fame, has been very popular; so has Helen Clive, the former show girl who married a magazine publisher—and there are many others.

Advertising photographers have a varied list. Some model drapers, some model undies, some stockings and some hats. They represent a score of different types. Portia Grafton, a little dancer in the Rasch Ballet, for instance, has been photographed hundreds of times because her particular beauty lends itself to exotic backgrounds.

"In the 'old days,' scores of popular models graduated into the movies. Eleanor Boardman, who married King Vidor, the director, was for years "the kodak girl." Mae Murray and Gloria Swanson modeled; so did Marion Davies, Olive Thomas, Naomi Johnson and a big parade of others.

The average model—that is, those who have not become the star performers—averages 50 cents an hour and are guaranteed a $3 job. In the select shoppers of 57th Street the salaries for manikins average around $50 a week. Art groups and individuals generally pay $1 an hour for "models."

GILBERT SWAN

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Your correspondent was down in the bird department of the National Museum the other day and got to wondering whether it is nicer to be called a Pachycephala or a Thickhead. It all means the same thing. The poor little bird to whom these names are applied, more often the second one, has no choice in the matter. He's dead—just like thousands of other birds embalmed and laid out in a great series of trays enclosed in long lines of what look like electric refrigerators.

There are about 90 kinds of pachycephalids—or thickheads—but the one your correspondent went to see was of a kind which had never visited the museum before. He is called pachycephala nudigula, which means a thickhead with a bare neck. His naked spot is not all new, however; his part throat and part chest which goes featherless and makes him different from all other thickheads.

It is not surprising if you have never seen a thickhead, for they are found only in the Malay archipelago and the one with the funny neck is known to exist only in the Sunda Islands. In appearance it's something like a shrike.

Naturally, it was something of an event when the pachycephala nudigula came to Washington. The museum had heard that some European museum had two of them; it also found that it had duplicates of some rare Chinese bird which the European museum didn't have. So the two museums just swapped.

Charles W. Richmond, the National Museum's associate curator of birds, who knows about more than 20,000 kinds of birds, says that the term "thickhead," as used to describe this particular bird, has not relation to the popular meaning of the term.

That is, the thickhead probably is no dumber and no smarter than the average bird.

"Most all birds," says Mr. Richmond, "operate under an inherited sense which is useful with the same line of action."

"Of course, some birds are smarter than others. Crows and magpies, for instance. The English sparrow, from long association with man, has learned quite a few tricks. He knows when to jump. Sometimes, perhaps, he is supposed to be bright. At any rate, they can talk, which is more than most birds can do."

"Or take the Mino bird out at the zoo. He says 'So's your old man' and 'How about appropriate things.' But he won't say what you want him to when you want him to. If you want him to say 'How about appropriate things?' he is just as likely to say 'So's your old man.' He represents a certain type of bird which is capable of a minimum amount of speech."

"But he picks up things for himself sometimes. Originally there were two of them there. They lost one and then it was explained to visitors who saw the surviving Mino bird that the other one died. Pretty soon that Mino bird was telling everybody: 'The other one died.'"

Every so often, Mr. Richmond says, some entirely new species of bird is discovered. In recent months ornithologists have found a new species in the Usambara mountains of Tanganyika, a new Central American flycatcher in Salvador, a new pheasant in Indo China, a new blue jay in southern Florida, two or three new partridges in Cambodia, a new emerald in central Spain and so on.

"We're getting new birds all the time," says the assistant curator. "Especially from around Cochinchina."

A meeting for women will be held at the town hall, Hebron Center, on Friday, September 14, at 1:30, standard time. All women who are interested are invited to be present and help plan a program of extension work in the community. Mrs. Truman C. Ives will be in charge of the meeting. The project is under the auspices of the cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. Mrs. Sara W. Dimock of Storrs is the home demonstration agent.

A runaway car owned by Walter Jones took fire and burned recently while relatives, who had borrowed it, were driving to East Hampton. The accident occurred in the vicinity of Comstock's bridge. The car was not insured against fire and is a complete loss to the owner. It was a new car.

COLUMBIA

Miss Eliza Hutchins died Wednesday morning after a long illness. Miss Hutchins was the daughter of the late Asa and Eliza Hutchins and would have been 82 had she lived until the 6th of October. Miss Hutchins was always deeply interested in the work of the community and church and her beautiful serene Christian character had much influence on her friends, of whom she had a legion. That she was affectionately called "Aunt Lida" by old and young bears testimony for the esteem and love which all had towards her.

The funeral services will be held at the Columbia church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock Daylight Saving Time.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Aid Society was held at the parsonage Tuesday afternoon, 17 ladies being present. Election of officers resulted in Miss Lillian Lyman, Mrs. Ruth Jacobs and Mrs. Care Hutchins being chosen as directors. Mrs. Mary Hutchins was re-elected secretary and treasurer. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Seeley, Mrs. Badger and Mrs. Jacobs.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall Porter and Mrs. H. W. Porter spent Tuesday in Boston.

Mrs. Mary Ink went to Ohio Wednesday to spend a short time. Mrs. Lillian Clarke is staying for a few days with Mrs. Lucy Clarke, during the absence of Mrs. Edith Little, who is visiting in Willimantic.

Mr. and Mrs. Perley Hyde of New Jersey returned home Wednesday after spending the summer at one of the Hillcrest bungalows.

Miss Phoebe and Miss Georgette

Kemp returned to their home in Brooklyn Thursday after spending the summer at the home of Miss Alice Clarke.

COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS AT STATE

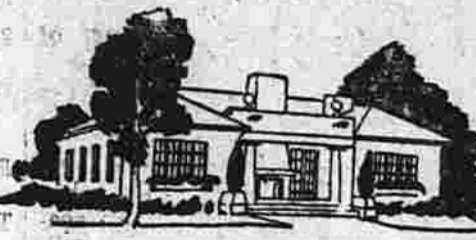

Famous Family of the Films Here Today and Tomorrow.

If life was made for laughter, whoever attends the State theater while "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," is the feature, will live a complete life during the run of the picture.

How many Telephones?

WHETHER your home is large or small, it should have enough telephones. The cost of an extension telephone is very little. The convenience is great. If possible, adequate telephones should be planned in advance, and concealed channels made a part of your building plans.

New homes of the larger type may require two or more main lines; or, in the more pretentious establishment, a carefully planned intercommunicating system.

But an extension telephone is important to the small home also, and can be readily installed after the house is built, if necessary.

WAPPING

Mrs. Truman H. Woodward, Miss Miriam Welles and Miss Clara Chandler attended the meeting of the Hartford County Young Women's Council at the Y. W. C. A. of Hartford, last Monday evening.

Mrs. Charlotte Avery of Henry street, Manchester, is the guest this week of Mrs. J. Edward Collins and Mrs. Eva L. Stoughton.

Wapping Grange held its sixteenth regular meeting last Tuesday evening with thirty-three members present, a number of which were dressed in old fashioned costumes. A fine program was enjoyed by all, which included readings by Robert Newcomb, Mrs. Margaret Purdy, Rev. Truman H. Woodward, Mrs. George West and Eugene Platt.

Mrs. Ralph M. Collins has been ill at her home all this week with tonsillitis. Her mother, Mrs. Albert E. Silles is caring for her.

Harry P. Files went to the Memorial hospital, where he had his tonsils removed, last Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. David Burnham left for the shore on Wednesday, where they will spend a week or ten days vacation. Mr. Burnham is just out of the Hartford Hospital, where he was confined after his accident with which he met while swimming.

The Parent-Teacher Association held their first meeting this fall at the Wapping Center schools on Monday afternoon when, Mr. Barbour spoke very interestingly on Junior achievement work.

ANDOVER

Mr. Case notified his men to report for work Wednesday morning for cleaning up the ruins of the paper mill which burned four weeks ago. It is understood the work of rebuilding will commence immediately.

There will be a Democratic rally in the Town Hall Friday evening at 7 o'clock daylight saving time. The speakers will include Rev. George Gilbert of New Haven, J. C. Blackall of Hartford, Frank Fenton of Willimantic. The Girls' league will serve a supper.

Mrs. Frank Hamilton was a caller in Willimantic Tuesday afternoon.

By the Brook. Boldefre Elsie Palmer, Violinist. Mildred Palmer, Accompanist. 7:15 WTIC Animal Pet League—Ernest A. Legg. 7:30 Coward Comfort Hour from N.B.C. Studios. 8:00 River Chorus. A river trip amid unusual scenes is always regarded as a good way to take a vacation, or to rekindle one's love for nature. Often times such desires must remain forever suppressed. Not so, however, in the program of the River Chorus that WTIC will present this evening at 8 o'clock. The River Chorus in their numbers and special arrangements and accompaniments by trombone, harp and piano, paint for radio listeners word pictures that reflect the atmosphere of trips on some of our known rivers. Victory Hour with Jack Deary and his Victory Buddies. The Fortune Teller. Major and Minor Boys. Halsey-Stuart Hour from N. C. Studios. 10:30 Howard Correct Time. 10:30 Norm Cloutier and his Orchestra direct from The Travelers Recreation Grounds. When coolness comes with the lateness of the hours, it is a good time to dance. Perhaps for the radio listener the matter of time makes little difference. The program of dance numbers which are presented this evening by Norm Cloutier and his orchestra will come direct from the Recreation Grounds of The Travelers on Albany avenue. Here each Thursday evening employees of The Travelers enjoy dancing. 11:00 News and Weather Forecast.

SERVICE for the MOTORIST

By ISRAEL KLEIN

After the automobile has taken us over the highways for our summer tours, it is ready for quite a bit of attention. Most likely it isn't the same car that left the garage before the trip. It's dusty and grimy. The engine knocks a little. The riding is hard. The motor sputters and misses.

This is to be expected after a car has been driven at a fast speed, hour after hour and day after day. On the average, the modern motor car isn't built for such grueling work. Therefore, when it is put under a strain, it requires tuning up in order to maintain its efficiency and lengthen its life.

First comes the engine. If the car has been driven over rough roads and up mountainous heights, in low gear, the engine almost certainly needs readjustment.
The carbon should be cleaned out and perhaps the valves would have to be ground, to be fitted properly into the seats. The spark plugs should be cleaned, anyway, and the breaker points in the distributor scraped to be sure of good contact in the ignition.

The cylinder head should be tightened. The carburetor might need readjustment, especially if it had been thinned down for touring at high altitudes.
In all, the motor requires tuning and freshening up with new oil.
At the same time the cooling system should be replenished, after being flushed out. This, in fact, should be done about every three or four months, in order to avoid clogging of the radiator or other part of the cooling system with rust.

It is a simple matter to drain the water, flush thoroughly, fill with water in which one or two tablespoons of baking soda has been diluted, run for a short while, drain again, and then refill with fresh water. This practice assures efficient cooling.
After the engine and cooling system has been repaired, the brakes should be tried out and adjusted if necessary.
Then the tires should be re-inflated to proper pressures. It would be advisable to let out all the old air in the tires and refill them with fresh air.
The battery most likely needs filling and the terminals cleaned. If the terminals are covered with a greenish paste, scrape it off or wash it off with baking soda solution, then cover the terminals with vaseline or grease to prevent recurrence of corrosion.

After the working parts in front, the body and chassis need care.
Every body, chassis and engine bolt should be tightened to prevent squeaks and rattles and assure long life. The chassis might need a thorough cleaning from the mud and dust it has accumulated. After that, greasing of all joints, especially of the springs, is important.
The last act is to clean the car. Cleaning, however, means more than just washing down. Most likely mud spots have accumulated on the body. These should have been taken off even before they dried, or the mud would have eaten into the finish of the car.
However, the body should first be dusted off, without permitting the cloth to scrape into the finish. Then water should be used, flowing easily over the body and being washed off with a soft sponge.
After that comes drying with a chamois or soft cloth, and the car is almost like new.

ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED

SYBIL THORNE, Boston society girl, concludes a whirlwind romance by marrying on shipboard in Havana harbor—a man whom she has known just five days—RICHARD EUSTIS, dangerous and fascinating.

With MABEL BLAKE, a social worker, Sybil left Boston for a trip to the tropics, to try to reach a decision regarding CRAIG NEWHALL, to whom she has been engaged for some months. Newhall is a young and wealthy bachelor, but Sybil, years ago, fell desperately in love with a soldier, JOHN LAWRENCE.

When Lawrence was reported missing in action Sybil took a solemn vow never to tell another man she loved him. It was to please her father, who was very ill, that she consented to marry Craig Newhall. But when her father died she began to question the wisdom of her promise. Then, after the marriage of her brother TAD to VALERIE WEST, a frivolous and selfish girl, Sybil, utterly miserable, tells Craig she is going to Cuba for a rest and peace of mind.

Richard Eustis is aboard, and Sybil finds neither rest nor peace. Eustis makes wild love to her, but not until the last night of the trip does he ask her to marry him. He tells her that he does not believe in marriage, and that it kills love; but in order to have her, he would do anything on earth. In a mad moment, Sybil consents. On their wedding night, strolling down the Prado, Richard offends his bride.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Sybil turned. "I'll drop in later to see how you are."

CHAPTER XVIII

Sybil drew her breath sharply. "Oh, Rich," she protested, "you don't want to drink any more tonight?"

"Why not, darling?"

"Good-naturedly he coaxed. "We'll just drop round to Sloppy Joe's. You've no idea how interesting it is, dear. Life in the raw—jockeys and gamblers and all their fancy ladies."

Richard Eustis is aboard, and Sybil finds neither rest nor peace. Eustis makes wild love to her, but not until the last night of the trip does he ask her to marry him. He tells her that he does not believe in marriage, and that it kills love; but in order to have her, he would do anything on earth. In a mad moment, Sybil consents. lessly, opened his eyes and groaned. "Oh, my head!"

Sybil, at the desk, turned and contemplated him remotely. "You look," she volunteered. "like the wrath of God," and bent again to the paper on which she wrote.

Once the pen point stuck, and ink splattered on the whiteness of the Sevilla's created stationery. She murmured detachedly, and then he heard her pen go scratching determinedly on. Scratch. Scratch. Like tacks ripping his brain apart.

He raved himself on one elbow and surveyed her uncertainly.

"Please," he asked humbly, "pull that curtain, will you, Sybil? The sun's right in my eyes."

She adjusted it, and with her back to the head told him, "I'm going out for breakfast with Mabel."

"You're not going to leave me like this?"

"I'll ask the clerk to send someone up."

"But I'm a sick man, Sybil."

He moaned with great fervor. "God, I'm sick!"

"I am very sorry, Rich."

He raised himself in bed. Put his head on his knees, and cradled his head with his arms, rocking back and forth.

"I don't believe you know how rotten I feel, dear," he moaned.

"I begged you not to drink last night," she reminded him coolly.

"I know you did, darling."

"But you were horrid to me."

Her voice broke on a sob.

"Was I, Sib? Oh, Lord!"

"What a head! Ring for some seawater, will you? And get me some more of that aspirin."

Dutifully she rang, and dutifully pried the tight little lid from the box of tablets.

"Will two be enough?" she asked dispassionately, and when he had taken them, she turned toward the door.

"If you know how sick I am you wouldn't walk out on me like this," he objected miserably.

"Oh, yes I would. I know just what I'm doing."

"You're not angry, Sib?"

"Angry? Oh, no,—there was a world of scorn in her tone—"I'm awfully happy."

"I'm sorry, dear. Honestly, I am."

He tried to reach her hand.

"It was a wretched thing to do."

She crossed the big room to the long mirror, powdered her nose from the pocket that hung about her neck, and touched her lips with a crimson stick. Poked a bit of hair up under the little pink hat she wore. And turned to look coldly at her husband.

"I'll drop in later, to see how you are."

"Sybil!"

He jumped from the bed and held her by the shoulders.

"I've told you I'm sorry. What else do you expect me to do? Shed a lot of crocodile tears, and grovel at your feet? It isn't my fault that I'm sick, is it?"

She shrugged with dainty disgust.

"See here, Sib—you wouldn't go back on me the very day after we're married? Oh, Lord, darling—I'm crazy about you. You know I am. I can't tell you how sorry I am, sweetheart. I'm too sick to talk."

"Getting sick's nothing," she told him airily. "I'm not angry because you're sick. But getting drunk on your wedding night. . . ."

She pressed her handkerchief to her mouth, and sought the mirror again, to hide her face.

"It was a beastly of me, darling."

"Oh, Rich, you were horrid!"

Suddenly she was in his arms—crying, struggling, caressing.

"Sybil—Sybil darling!"

"Oh, Rich! Let me go."

"Do you still love me, Sib? Say you love me, dear."

"I—I don't know."

"Poor little girl."

He kissed her tears, and rocked her gently. Her hat fell to the floor, and he smoothed her hair tenderly. In an agony of self-reproach he castigated himself.

"I ought to get shot, Sib, don't cry, dear. You break my heart. To think I made you cry! What a thing I turned out to be! Finest little girl in the world. And I'm nothing but a big brute."

Finally she stopped him. Put her fingers over his mouth, and drew his head down.

"All right, Richie boy. Give me a nice kiss, and we'll put you on probation."

In the mirror across the room Sybil glimpsed her red eyes, and shiny little nose. "See me!" she moaned, "all swollen and homely in front of my new husband."

"You're beautiful!" he contradicted and kissed her tears away.

"Oh, darling, I'm not fit to touch you—no! worthy to kiss your little feet."

She laughed at his humility. "When the devil was sick," she reminded him, "the devil a saint would be. When the devil was well, the devil a saint was he!" and, laughing, she sat on his knee, and cradled his head.

"You're not going to have breakfast with Mabel?" he questioned her anxiously, like a child begging forgiveness.

"No, darling. I'm going to have it with my loving husband."

"Sweetheart!"

"And I'm going out now to buy a bouquet from that old flower-woman over on the corner. See Rich— isn't she precious? The one with the big checked apron and the long earrings. I'll get a boutonniere for you and a corsage for me, and some flowers for the table. And you be all bathed and shaved and every thing by the time I get back. Hurry up now, or I might get really busy."

"Mrs. Legree!"

"Do you feel better, dear?"

"Better? I'm on top of the world!" Gaily he hummed a snatch of song—"Sitting on top of the world."

"Goodbye, honey."

"Goodbye, darling. Hurry back."

When she had gone he crossed the room shakily and reached for the telephone.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

INFECTIONS OF THE BODY AFFECT HEART TISSUES

By Dr. MORRIS FISHER, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Any factor that causes unusual wear and tear on the human tissues may have a secondary effect on the tissues of the heart. These tissues are then unable to withstand the strains of ordinary life.

The heart may be incapacitated from birth due to some deficiency in its development before the child is born.

The most common cause of heart disease in children and in young adults is infection, particularly with the germs that attack the tonsils and adenoids. Other secondary results of such infections are rheumatism and St. Vitus' dance.

While such infectious diseases as diphtheria, influenza, scarlet fever and measles may lead to unusual circulation of bacteria or poisons, and possible secondary inflammation of the heart, an attack of acute rheumatism or St. Vitus' dance or chronic attacks of tonsillitis, are far more likely to be followed by or associated with heart disease.

Another common cause of diseases of the heart is syphilis. This is a potent source of disease of the whole system of blood vessels. Its presence has been associated with hardening of the arteries, inflammations of the linings of the blood vessels, the appearance of clots in the blood stream, and particularly the presence of weak spots in the blood-vessel walls.

These weak spots cannot stand the pressure of the blood stream and gradually give way. The resulting dilated spot in the blood vessel wall is called an aneurism.

Effect of Age

Old age is not infrequently associated with weakness and failure of the heart. The human body begins to wear out slowly after passing the middle milestone.

Changes develop in the walls of the arteries and in the pressure of the circulating blood, with resultant inequalities of nutrition and stress. These soon manifest themselves in disordered action of the heart.

SAVE YOUR "GLAD" BULBS FOR SPRING

By ROMAIN B. WARE.

As soon as the frosts have stopped all growth of your gladiolus they should be dug and stored for the winter. It is best to select a time when the soil is dry for this. With the spading work lift them out and you will notice that there are a good many little bulbets clinging to the large bulbs. These are valuable as each one will produce a bulb if you plant them and care for them right next year. Carefully shake the little bulbets in a box of some kind. If yours are named varieties try to keep them separate, marking each box with the name of the variety.

Cut the old top off the bulb close to it and lay them out in rather thin layers in boxes to cure. If the weather is good they are best set out of doors each day for a week or so. Then they may be stored on a cool dry place. During the winter you may clean them up, twisting off the old roots and the old dried up bulb. If you want to do the best job possible you may also clean off all of the thin tissue like substance that is on the bulb. This will help them to start growth promptly in the spring when you plant them.

The small bulbets should be stored in sand so that they will not dry out too much. Of course if you have a great many of them this is not necessary as they may be kept in a box that will not allow too much circulation of air and they will not dry out too much.

The tops cut from your "glads" should be burned, never put them in the compost heap. To do so invites disease. The spores of blight and rot will thrive in the compost heap and be all ready to attack others things next spring. Carefully burning all tops prevents their spread.

The longest tug of war, on record, was that between two companies of the Second Derby Regiment in India, in 1889. It lasted two hours and 41 minutes.

This And That In Feminine Lore

Mrs. Manning's name just naturally comes to the mind of Manhattan when they need autumn red.

The market and roadside stands are attractive these days with their wealth of fruits and vegetables. Fruit is being put up in many kitchens for use next winter and some kind of fruit should be a part of every meal, sliced fresh or stewed for breakfast and as a salad or cocktail for luncheon or dinner.

The successful gown of the coming season will be the one that is distinctive in its rear lines. Less ornamentation will be used. For evening the wide deep square neck the very deep v or the U neck will vie with diagonally or irregularly cut ones.

The best choice for a practical suit this fall is tweed. They are very smart this season and if the woman of good taste but slim pocketbook will get one of the smoky blues or the rust browns, by change of jumper, blouse, hat or shoes, she can ring any number of changes with the one suit. Many of the new blouses take a touch of the suit's material down their fronts or on cuffs.

Peach Salad

Arrange halves of fine large peaches, hollow side up on salad plates on a bed of lettuce. Chop hearts of celery and almonds and moisten with mayonnaise. Fill cavity of peach, or if desired cover with another half peach, cover with mayonnaise and over this a rather soft jelly. Sprinkle with parsley.

The rage for brown this fall extends to sport things, very appropriately for nothing looks prettier among the turning leaves than the right tone of brown with a touch of chestnut when they need autumn red.

The new transparent velvets are lovely, but they are undeniably expensive. Velvet is a splendid substitute and makes a handsome afternoon gown or suit with a handsome blouse.

Peach Cream Pie

Five or six ripe peaches, 3-4 cup sugar, 2 cups milk, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons flour, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 teaspoon pistachio flavoring or lemon extract.

Make a pie shell. Fill with peaches which have been pared and sliced. Beat eggs. Mix and sift sugar, flour and salt and beat into eggs. Slowly add milk, beating constantly, which has been heated to the scalding point. Cook over hot water for fifteen minutes, stirring occasionally. Let cool slightly and add flavoring. Pour over peaches and let stand until cold. Serve with or without whipped cream.

There are three types of hats offered for feminine approval, the inevitable cloche, though of more intricate cut, the cap variety that hugs the head lightly and the wide brimmed hat that droops down on both sides with its back brim larger than the summer variety. Browns are the popular colors, and materials the luxurious hatters' plush, velvet and soiled, a fine, thin fabric that came into popularity last season.

Hosiery remains plain sheer chifon, uncloned and undecorated. Shades that blend with brows are the best at the moment. Shoes if anything are more ornate. Gloves are plain and of fine chamois or other new leathers with only stitching for ornament.

MARY TAYLOR.

The WOMAN'S DAY

The scores of people who congratulated Ruth Elder for "traipsing off" across the Atlantic when she ought to be home mending her husband's socks and washing his dishes, will be awfully tickled, no doubt, at Ruth's husband's suit for divorce against his pretty wife. They will think their point proven—that a man has a right to a stay-at-home wife who takes care of him, and not a gad-about.

On the other hand, who ever heard of Lyle Womack until his wife almost flew across the Atlantic, or who would ever have heard of him?

STEPMOTHER TALE

A stepmother of Canton, Ohio, pushed her little stepdaughter into a ditch. The child was drowned, and the woman is facing a murder trial. Unfortunately, this notorious trial will rekindle the stepmother myth. As a matter of fact, record will probably show that as many real mothers have murdered their children as have stepmothers.

"ALL KNEELING"

The season's best book, so far, in our estimation is "All Kneeling" by the late Mrs. F. H. Fisher. When lovely white-skinned, golden-curlied, Christabel Calne was just a tiny girl she was a mere maid of honor in a juvenile pageant in which she and her parents had expected her to be queen. So when the other little girl was getting all the attention at rehearsal, Christabel proceeded to faint.

The fruits of that faint were the knowledge that it was sweet to record will probably show that as many real mothers have murdered their children as have stepmothers.

"About twenty-five years ago I had a successful operation for piles and have never been troubled since until about a month ago when they came on again. My only thought was an operation, but under the circumstances this was impossible owing to the expense. So I delayed and suffered terribly until about two weeks ago I saw an advertisement for Rabalm. The second application gave me relief, and after the third day I haven't had them at all, and no pain now—can't give them the same of the man who wrote this testimonial. But we will display his name and address on request. His letter was entirely voluntary and was not solicited by us.

If you too suffer from piles (hemorrhoids) you also can find relief without an operation by using Rabalm. Buy some today and start using it tonight. Two sizes, 50-cents and $1.00 containing 3 times as much. RABALM is for sale by all druggists.

"Cap" Bissell Noses Out Paul Jesanis, 6-1, 4-6, 8-6

CHAMPION FORCED TO UTMOST TO WIN WAY INTO THE FINALS; SCORES ONLY 18 MORE POINTS

"Cap" Takes First Set Easily, But Meets Stubborn Opposition Rest of Way; Many Spectacular Returns and Thrilling Deuce Games; Errors Hurt Jesanis; Macdonald Plays Holland Tonight; Finals Saturday.

Table with tennis scores for Bissell and Jesanis in three sets and total statistics.

Paul Jesanis was the "dark horse" of the Herald's 1928 town championship tennis singles elimination tournament all right.

It was positively the best exhibition of tennis seen in the tournament either last year or this and probably will be more spectacular than the finals next Saturday afternoon at the Country Club courts.

About a hundred spectators watched the thrilling Bissell-Jesanis match and repeatedly applauded both for their work.

STILL CHAMPION!

"Cap" Bissell

Both players flashed some sensational returns of drives that seemed to come from the backhand.

Jesanis seemed a bit nervous at the start of the match making numerous errors and three doubles in the first set while Bissell won in five.

Jesanis seemed to regain confidence in himself. Although trying to get Bissell out of position for placements, he was playing more cautiously on the defense in this set.

Jesanis took the next three after each had gone to deuce once to wrest the lead for the first time.

Even then, the crowd did not fully sense the extent of the treat which was in store for them.

"SULPHUR" STOPS FIRE

Cambridge, Mass.—Recent discoveries in the laboratories of Arthur D. Little, inc., indicate that insulated wiring can be fireproofed by the application of a dilute suspension of selenium. Selenium is closely related to sulphur and its self combustible, its effectiveness in flame suppression was a distinct surprise.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

Married men understand women as well as bachelors don't.

LETTER GOLF

A letter golf BANK ROLL is rather small—par is only four—but like most bank rolls it's somewhat hard to get. One solution is on another page:

Bank roll grid with letters B, A, N, K and R, O, L, L.

THE RULES
1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change, COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

Yes, Geraldine, it takes a man-icurist to nail her man!

A joy ride often ends in a grief stop.

Hard of Hearing.

Every time Uncle Jason, the centenarian, calls on his twin brother it means a broken door, because even if he could hear Jason knock, Jason couldn't hear him say, "Come in."

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)
The Tinymites began to dance and shout. The mule held Clowdy's pants and shook him for a moment. 'Twas a funny sight to see. And then he pranced upon the ground and started running 'round and 'round. Poor Clowdy yelled to all the rest, "Hey! Someone rescue me."

SENSE and NONSENSE

The Dusky Pedant.

Rastus (a witness): "Deed she was, as Ah knows expensive garb-ge when I sees it."

The Apostle Renamed.
What is your favorite chapter in the Bible Uncle Ajax?" an old darkey was asked. Uncle Ajax smacked his lips. "Dat one whar tells about de 12 opossums, sah!" he replied.

Rastus—Well, Doctor, so every-thing's O. K.; how's my constitu-tion?
Doctor—It's not so good, but I guess we can fix it up with a few amendments.

A colored laborer, doing a haul-ing job, was informed that he could not get his money until he had sub-mitted an itemized statement. After much meditation, he evolved the following bill:
"3 comes and 3 goes a 4 bits a went—$3."

A Negro was charged with theft and his lawyer decided to put him in "Sam if you tell a lie, you know what will happen, I suppose?" said the judge.

"Yes, suh," replied Sam. "I'll go to Hades and burn a long time."
"Quite so," declared the judge. "And you know what will happen if you tell the truth?"
"Yes, suh," said Sam. "We lose de case!"

A negro was being questioned during an investigation after a tres-passer was killed when he fell from a freight train.
"Was the man on the train?"
"Yeh, suh."

"Where were you?"
"On de back end of de tendah of de engine."
"Where were you?"
"Where were you?"
"Where were you?"

A colored brother asked when the deceased wife of his neighbor was going to be "interred."
"Sh' aint going to be interred," was the answer. "I done decided to have her incriminated."

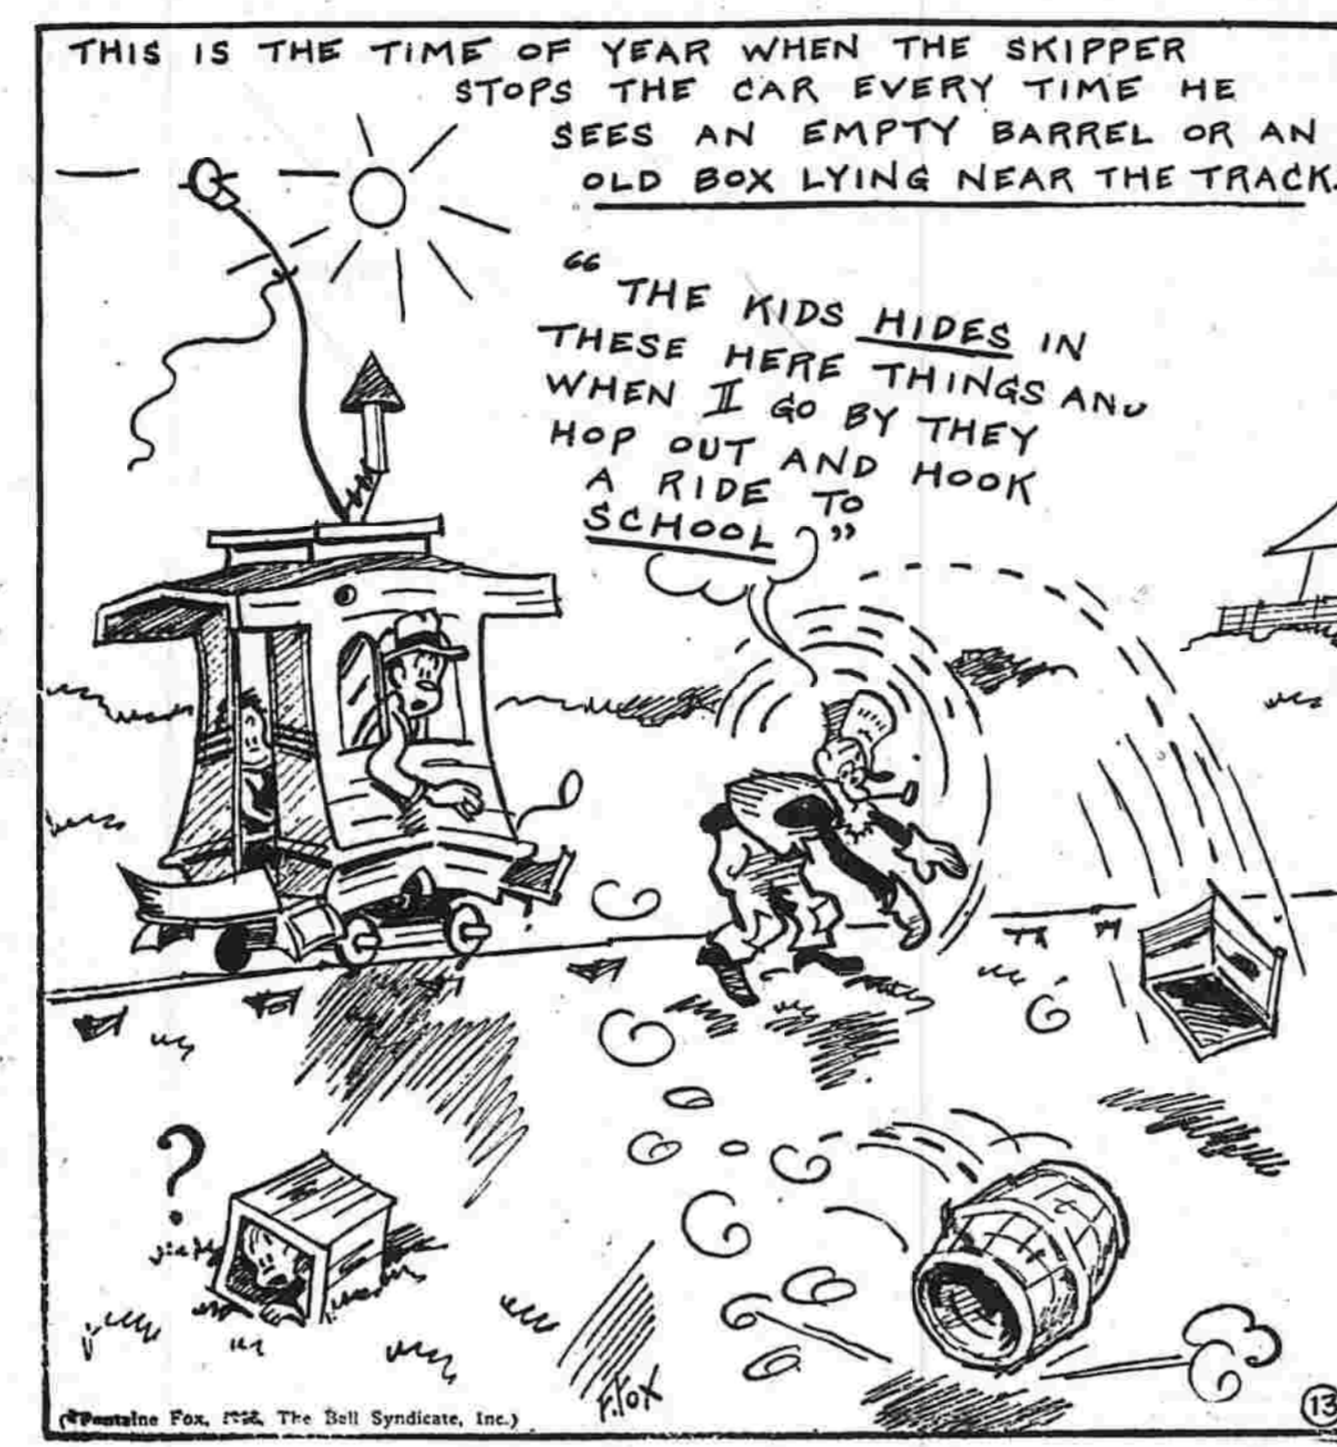

Joe—You know that I told you a day or so ago after I got my new job, that the boss said he'd raise my salary in a month or two.
Bill—Yes, and didn't he?
Joe—No. I misunderstood him. He meant he'd try to raise my first week's wages by that time. I haven't got it yet.

24 HOUR OBSERVANCE OF ROSH HASHONAH

Manchester Hebrews Plan
Services at K. of C. Hall
With Hartford Rabbis.

On Saturday and Sunday the Jewish festival of Rosh Hashonah, or New Years will be observed by Manchester Hebrews with services in Knights of Columbus Hall. The services will start at sundown Saturday evening and close at sundown Sunday evening. The merchants will not be at their places of business during business hours after sundown Saturday and services will be held on Saturday evening,
Sunday morning and afternoon until the close of the holiday period.
Rabbis from Hartford will conduct the services.

An unusual number of New Years greetings have been sent to and by Manchester Hebrews this year and the Western Union Company has also made arrangements for a special greeting service to be delivered Saturday. For local delivery of such greetings the company has also made special arrangements.

There are three other holy days that will be observed by the Hebrews this month. On Monday September 24 the fast of the Day of Atonement will be observed and on September 29 and 30 the Feast of the Tabernacles will be observed.
Roshanah Raba comes on October 5.

FIX SEVERAL DATES FOR HIGH SCHOOL AFFAIR

Dates for the annual class socials were announced today by Principal
C. P. Quimby of the High school.
The affairs will be held in the school assembly hall on evenings as follow: Juniors, October 25, Freshmen, November 2; Sophomores,
November 27; Seniors, December 7.

Eighteen students to compose the Student's Council will be elected shortly by popular vote. To be chosen are four seniors, four juniors, five sophomores and the president.

Nominating committees in each class to prepare the slate of class officers will also be selected today.
A secretary for each home room will also be named.

It was stated that the date for the annual Hare and Hound race has been changed to September 21 instead of September 28 because of the football game between Manchester High and East Hartford
High scheduled to be played here on the latter date. Nearly five hundred girls will participate in this event.

"GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

FINNY AND OTHERWISE

This is the time of the year when the BUTTER-FISH is a native. He isn't, as many seasons—is taken a good long way south of New England waters. But right now he comes to the fishing ports within a very few hours after being caught.
Like the SWORDFISH, the HADDOCK, the COD and the FILED SOLE. And isn't he a sweet and dainty morsel when he's spang fresh? We'll say so. Besides these, Pinehurst is offering this week high grade FRESH SALMON and firm, sweet, offshore HALIBUT—the fish that even folks who "don't like fish" find so palatable.

Pinehurst customers seem to have plenty of faith in the Pinehurst vinegar we're supplying this year —they like the tang and the strength and obvious purity of it. Why not? It's absolutely clear, filtered cider vinegar and insures the success of every relish you use it in. Comfortably, it's low in price. Fifty cents a gallon. We opened the third barrel of it yesterday afternoon—and there's a lot of vinegar in a barrel.

Madame is baking again, prompted by the weather. Which suggests MOLASSES. There's a big spread in wholesale prices of molasses—some as low as 40 cents a gallon, some for which the dealer has to pay about a dollar. Pinehurst disregards anything but the best. PINEHURST
MOLASSES sells at 35 cents a quart, $1.25 a gallon.
