

COOLIDGE NOT HELD IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Victims, Not Seriously Hurt, Are on Road to Recovery; Policeman Witness Exonerates President's Son.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 28.—No arrests will be made in the case of John Coolidge, son of the president, and William Cunningham, private chauffeur of Gov. John H. Trumbull, whose car yesterday struck a machine driven by Wilfred Veno, well-known hockey player, and severely injured Veno and his mother.

The Coolidge case has been entered in police records as an entirely accidental. The records show that John Coolidge was driving the Trumbull car when the accident occurred. That Motor Patrolman Henry H. Miller saw the affair, sent the victims to the hospital in a police ambulance and took Coolidge and Cunningham to the nearest police station.

Examine Victims

Believing that the Venos had been seriously injured, Deputy Coroner J. J. Corrigan started an investigation into the accident. He questioned John Coolidge in the general office building of the New Haven railroad where Coolidge works. He summoned police officials to his office and he examined the Venos in the hospital. It is a death report the coroner will make no report.

The Venos today are practically recovered from the effects of the accident, according to the authorities. The police report of the accident indicates the couple were but slightly injured in the crash, suffering lacerations only.

Wide Latitude

Under the motor vehicle laws of the state, police have wide latitude in the case. Captain Fred Hunt, in charge of the Cedar Hill police station, booked the case yesterday. Then he heard the story of Policeman Miller who placed a charge of reckless driving against Coolidge. Captain Hunt determined that the youth was the son of President Coolidge and told him to depart. Young Coolidge was informed he would be sent for if the authorities wanted him. Today no charges have been lodged against Coolidge, and it was believed none would be. That too, is within the police powers.

Meanwhile the question may later be discussed from the civil standpoint. According to friends, will bring suit for damages because of the accident. Unofficially it was said that an offer of settlement has already been made to the Venos. It is refused to consider it until they have left the hospital.

WHITE HOUSE DOCTOR

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—By personal direction of President Coolidge, Colonel James F. Coupal, the White House physician, was scheduled to arrive in New Haven, Conn., this morning to add his medical skill to the efforts to save the life of Wilfred Veno, well-known hockey professional who was injured gravely yesterday when the Venos automobile crashed into the Veno automobile.

Col. Coupal left Washington bearing personal messages of sympathy from the President to Mrs. Veno and her son. From the moment of first hearing of the accident, Mr. Coolidge has kept in touch constantly with New Haven, and although somewhat cheered by news that police officials had declared the collision an "unavoidable accident," he nevertheless manifested the gravest concern over the condition of the injured victims. Word last night that young Veno might not live resulted in the prompt dispatch of Coupal to the New Haven hospital.

John is well known to employees of the White House garage as an auto enthusiast. This past summer, in Wisconsin, the President's son took the wheel of the official car whenever the opportunity offered, and according to the chauffeurs, "drove them mighty well." They were unanimous in the consensus he was a careful driver.

YALE STUDENT KILLED BY FALL FROM WINDOW

Authorities Think He Was Sitting on Sill When He Lost His Balance.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 28.—Edward Lee Randolph, 18, of 45 Sunnyside avenue, Pleasantville, N. Y., was fatally hurt today when he fell from a fourth story window of the freshman Houghton hall dormitory. Randolph died on the operating table at New Haven hospital. Randolph has a brother, Robert Randolph, Jr., in Sheffield Scientific School.

Yale authorities investigating the accident were unable to determine what caused the youth to fall. They believe he was sitting on his window sill reading when he lost his balance.

FUEL FROM WATER IS NEW DISCOVERY

Will Make Coal and Gas Unnecessary, American Scientist Claims.

London, Sept. 28.—Dr. Walter Von Hohenau, formerly of Philadelphia, discoverer of a revolutionary method of extracting fuel from water, told International News Service this afternoon that the new fuel he will have perfected and in use before Christmas will reduce fuel costs 50 per cent and make the use of coal and gas unnecessary in the future.

The scientist said he left Philadelphia and went to Berlin because he was trying to seize his discovery. He addressed the fuel conference in London yesterday when he told of his experiments to produce fuel from hydrogen and the success of his undertaking.

Uses Vibration

"The only new scientific principle involved in my discovery is the use of vibrations. Therein I follow the rule of nature which is a vibrating motion. Through the reason of relatively the so-called 'hot' elements are built up. The highest motion-activity is found in the hydrogen atom. The so-called elements are variants of vibrating activity of hydrogen. It is upon this process is based."

"Through high electro-magnetic to the compound desired. With processes I produce vibrations equal water these vibrations release the hydrogen, contained and then extract further hydrogen from the oxygen.

Heat Units

"From one atom of water I obtain 18 atoms of hydrogen. My heat units obtain 4 from hydrogen have run an internal combustion engine fourteen days. Hydrogen useable as fuel can be produced 50 per cent below the present cost of fuel. It can be used for every purpose for which coal and gas are now employed. Also, hydrogen will conserve the coal supply. It may increase the value of coal through liberating it for purposes of chemistry and manufacture.

TO MAKE PUBLIC

U. S. NOTE SATURDAY

Washington, Sept. 28.—Secretary of State Kellogg's reply to the Franco-British accord, which was delivered today in London and Paris and will be made public tomorrow, follows the American position advanced at the Geneva naval arms limitation conference by Minister Hugh Gibson.

It sets forth the need of the United States for cruisers of 10,000 tons capable of carrying eight guns.

Secretary Kellogg traces the history of naval limitation and what the United States has done and is ready to do toward lightening the world's naval armaments burden since the Washington conference. He pointed out, however, in view of the breakdown of the Geneva conference because of the British contention for unlimited construction of cruisers of less than 7,500 tons capable of carrying a maximum battery of 6-inch guns, the futility of another conference at this time unless the British recede for their position.

The Franco-British pact, the note contends, does not alter materially the former British position.

Tunney In Auto Crash, Bawled Out By Frenchie

Juan Les Pins, France, Sept. 28.—Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, who has been making a tour of southern France by foot and motor car, arrived in this town with a bang. Driving a 40-horsepower motor car at sixty miles an hour he whizzed up in front of the Hotel de Provence, crashing into another automobile that was just leaving the hotel courtyard.

Both cars were badly damaged, but neither Tunney nor the driver of the other automobile was injured.

G. O. P. BEGINS DRIVE TO GET WOMEN'S VOTE

State Leaders Named by National Committee; Hoover Still Working on His Tennessee Speech.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The national drive to corral the American feminist vote for Herbert Hoover was in full swing today with the completion of an organization to win the votes of business and professional women.

The efforts of the Republican national committee to win the support of women in this campaign exceed anything ever attempted in any previous presidential race. With the entire women's organization under the direction of Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice chairman of the committee, separate bureaus were created to win different groups of women. The last of these bureaus, for the solicitation of business women's votes, was completed with the naming of state leaders in sixteen states.

State Leaders

These women will carry the Hoover campaign to women lawyers, physicians, teachers, nurses, shop owners and clerical workers. The state leaders just named were Miss Margaret Stewart, of Phoenix, for Arizona; Miss Caroline Guener, of Des Moines, for Iowa; Mrs. Emma Fall Chofield, of Boston, for Massachusetts; Miss Helen Summy, of St. Joseph, for Missouri; Miss Hazel Davis, of Great Falls, for Montana; Dr. James B. Ringer, of Lincoln, for Nebraska; Miss Minnie Flanagan, of Reno, for Nevada; Miss Amanda Strayer, of Steubenville, for Ohio; Mrs. Daisy Rhell, of Oklahoma City, for Oklahoma; Mrs. Helen M. ## TAMMANY BACKED BY CITY TREASURY

That Is Charge Made by New York Republicans In Pamphlet.

New York, Sept. 28.—Laying the scourge to Tammany Hall, the Republican state central committee today appealed to the "conscience of the state and the nation to clean house all along the line."

In the most exhaustive study of Tammany patronage in the municipal affairs of New York City ever published, the Republican pamphlet lists eleven of the thirteen sachems of the Tammany society with their public offices. The salaries of the sachems from the public treasury, as listed, aggregate $113,000 annually.

Eighty-two Tammany district leaders are similarly listed with their jobs. The payroll for this list aggregates approximately $500,000 annually.

"The New Tammany"

"For the first time in its history the Democratic Party has nominated a Tammany man for the presidency," says the G. O. P. broadsheet, ironically titled "The New Tammany."

"This is but a forerunner of what must happen if Tammany once gets its grip on the national treasury." Pointing out that Gov. Smith is one of the sachems, or member of the board of directors of Tammany, the pamphlet quotes what it characterizes as the presidential

FARMER-LABOR PARTY TO AID SMITH'S CAUSE

Democrats Hope Also to Get the La Follette Vote In Minnesota; Republicans Strong There.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 28.—Governor Smith has fed the fires or Republican discord during his 24-hour visit to the politically doubtful state of Minnesota.

The Democratic nominee may or may not carry the state in November, but even the regular Republicans admit he has made infinitely more difficult the task of the G. O. P. in this state this year. And if the election were tomorrow, instead of six weeks from now, the Smith managers believe they have a fifty-fifty chance or better of winning Minnesota's twelve electoral votes.

The Farmer-Labor Party, which elected Magnus Johnson to the United States Senate and then followed it up with the present Senator Hendrick Shipstead, has fused with the Democratic party wholeheartedly. This fact, in itself, may not sound so important, but when coupled with the support of the old La Follette group it assumes importance which is truly national in effect. It is a blow to the normal Democratic vote, the normal Farmer-Labor vote and the old La Follette vote all working for Gov. Smith for the presidency. Against this stands the regular Republican organization working for Hoover.

Powerful Organization

This organization was powerful enough in 1924 to carry the state for Coolidge by 25,000 over the combined Davis-La Follette vote, but much water has run under bridges since that time. Hence, the Democrats are confident, and the Republicans are correspondingly nervous.

Into such a situation, Gov. Smith stepped last night with a speech designed particularly for Minnesota consumption and ten thousand people in St. Paul's Municipal auditorium literally ate it up.

Praises Roosevelt

Within the space of thirty minutes, Gov. Smith lauded the records of the elder Roosevelt, the elder La Follette, of Senator Shipstead, of Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, and of ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, whose candidacies for the nomination at the Kansas City convention the Minnesota delegation backed to the last gasp.

Concerning each of these notable Republican insurgents, Gov. Smith had some complimentary passages in his St. Paul speech.

He quoted Roosevelt against "invisible government"; he recalled that both La Follette and Roosevelt had left the Republican Party to found their own Progressive organizations; he recalled that "Senator Shipstead also had to take a walk"; he quoted Senator Norris in praise of his (Smith's) Omaha speech, and praised Gov. Lowden as one of the cleanest Republican thinkers on the subject of farm relief.

All this was no accident. It was a direct bid for the old Progressive vote of Minnesota, which expressed itself four years ago in the shape of 339,000 votes for the La Follette Third Party ticket. The five Republican

U. S. ARMY IS TESTING POWERFUL EXPLOSIVES

One Bomb Dropped From Airplane Can Destroy a Whole City Block—Bet- ter Than TNT.

Dover, N. J., Sept. 28.—"Radium-Atomite," a powerful new explosive which its inventor, Captain H. K. Zimmer of Los Angeles, claims is capable of four times as much destruction as "T. N. T.", the present standard military high explosive, is undergoing a series of tests at the United States government arsenal here to determine its adaptability for military and naval purposes in the event of another war.

Withold Opinion

Army officers withheld their opinion of the devastating explosive pending further experiments to be held soon in Washington, D. C.

"Radium-Atomite is the most powerful substance conceivable," Captain Zimmer told International News Service, "I created it for commercial purposes, for use in the mines, but I can make it even more powerful for use by the government. Its value would be incalculable in the event of a war."

"A whole city block could be destroyed by a single radium-atomite bomb dropped from a plane. It is now equally as destructive as T. N. T. and can be made four times as destructive. Battleships, for instance, are built to withstand torpedoes carrying 400 pounds of T. N. T. A torpedo containing 400 pounds of radium-atomite could be made four times that destructive, and would sink a battleship."

Captain Zimmer, who is 64 years old, has been experimenting with radium for 29 years. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and has 61 inventions to his credit. He perfected "Z. R. B.", many times more powerful than nitro-glycerin, which was used in depth bombs during the latter part of the World War.

Its Strong Points

The strong points of radium-atomite, he said, are:

1. It is cheaper to manufacture than T. N. T.
2. It is safer to handle and to manufacture. It cannot be exploded by a jar as can nitro-glycerine and is harmless unless ignited.
3. It has tremendous destructive potentialities.

Illustrating its great strength, Captain Zimmer said that an experiment was made in California not long ago with U. S. Army Springfield rifles. The present powder used for rifle bullets by the U. S. Army, he asserted, sent a rifle projectile through forty-seven inch pine boards when fired from several hundred feet.

The government issued an appeal for volunteers to protect the non-

Purchase of Bissell Street Building for Home of Manchester Evening Her- ald Announced Today; Hope to Make Mechanical Changes Over Armistice Holiday; North End Build- ing to Be Offered for Sale.

Thomas Ferguson, treasurer and manager of The Herald Printing Company, Inc., today announced that the firm had purchased the Knights of Columbus Hall on Bissell street, to be used as a new publishing plant for the Manchester Evening Herald. The purchase of the K. of C. building was completed last night when the transaction was approved by a unanimous vote of the board of directors of the Campbell K. of C. Building Association. The Herald will leave its plant at 10 Hilliard street in the north end as soon as the new building can be remodeled to suit the needs of a publishing plant. The present Herald building will be offered for sale.

Nearer Business Center.

The move from the north end of the town where the Herald has always been located during its 47 years of existence to the south and of Manchester has been contemplated by Mr. Ferguson ever since he became manager of the Herald five years ago and more especially since he gained control of the firm early this year. The present owners of The Herald have always felt that it would be far more expedient to have the publishing plant near the center of the great bulk of the newspaper's business, both advertising and circulation. No building suitable for the purpose and of an economic point of view was available, however, until it was learned that the Knights of Columbus Hall was for sale.

Over 90 per cent of The Herald's local advertising is for business houses within a half mile radius of the proposed new location and over a third of the Herald's Manchester circulation is distributed at the south end branch just across the street from the site of the new plant. The maintenance of a branch office, traveling costs in business, the saving of space in the present office of paper delivery, the main economic reasons for the desirability of a plant in the south end. The Herald management feels that it can serve its north end patronage just as well, and perhaps better, when the change is made. Its vigorous fight for an economic point of view was and from the standpoint of news reporting, will be increased.

Move Armistice Day.

Plans for moving the mechanical equipment of The Herald, a huge task, began last night, Friday morning. The management hopes that its machinery can be transferred from the Hilliard street building to the plant on Bissell street between Saturday noon, November 16 and Tuesday morning, November 19. The Herald will be closed on Nov. 12, the day of the big Armistice celebration in Manchester. It is hoped that these two days and a half will be sufficient time in which to do the job.

Some changes will be made in the Knights of Columbus building. The room at the left of the main entrance to the building will be remodeled for office purposes. The space on the right will be transferred for the use of the advertising department. The large room on the second floor will be used for the various news departments and editorial offices. The composing room will be located in the large main hall of the building.

The Herald's big tubular press, which turns out 153 ready-colored newspapers a minute will be located where the K. of C. bowling alleys are now. The stereotyping department will be located in one section of this room and the basement banquet hall will be used for paper storage, a most important factor in a newspaper plant.

Built in 1920.

Campbell Council, No. 572, Knights of Columbus, will seek other quarters in Manchester for lodge and social rooms. It is not their intention to build a new home. The K. of C. hall, built eight years ago. The building corporation felt that there was a need of a centrally located hall in the south end where social and indoor athletic activities could take place. The Knights of Columbus at that time were occupying large quarters and it was believed that the transfer from such a hall would pay off the cost of maintenance.

The demands for the hall by outside organizations did not equal the anticipations of the building association, however. Manchester

BIG LIQUOR CASE IN A NEW TANGLE

Presence of Stenographer In Grand Jury Room Holds Up Decision.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 28.—If the government desires to prosecute the case against Herman I. Goldman and others, for alleged prohibition law violations, a new indictment must be obtained. Such is the definite opinion today after attorneys had spent many hours studying the decision Judge Edwin S. Thomas, of the District Court, handed down on Monday.

Public Indignant When Facts Are Made Known—British Girl Shot.

Lorain, Ohio, Sept. 28.—A wave of popular indignation over the tactics employed by three enforcement officers who on Wednesday night shot and seriously wounded Miss Betty Heywood, 22-year-old British girl, of Elyria, was rising here today as another motorist reported that he, too, was fired on the same night.

Stephen Kelling relates that he drove his car through a shower of bullets near the city limits, shortly after 11 o'clock. At Sheffield Village he reported the incident to Marshal John Elden. The marshal said he investigated but on learning that prohibition officers were stationed at the bridge, took no action.

The three officers declare they had a "tip" that a truckload of liquor was scheduled to arrive, conveyed by a car of that type.

Federal Law.

Judge Thomas finds that the federal statutes covering proceedings of a Grand Jury require "no person other than the witness undergoing examination, and the attorney for the government can be present" before a Grand Jury.

He says too, "common law directs secrecy and forbids the presence of anyone save witnesses and the district attorney who conducts the examination."

As to the papers in the case before him he says, "the government does not justify the presence of a stenographer in the Grand Jury room. Charles E. Roberts, a social

Radville Trial

Joseph Radville, of Hartford, driver of the auto truck which overturned on the Rockville-Talcoctville road near Ogden's Corner, July 26, resulting in the death of three boys, was on trial before Judge Edward Yeomans in the Tolland County Superior Court Thursday morning. The charge was "misconduct of driver, resulting in death."

Through his attorneys, Nathan and Schatz, of Hartford, he pleaded not guilty. There were thirteen counts against him. His attorneys protested saying that some should have been settled in lower court. Only one boy was put on the stand and he told all the incidents leading up to the accident. The court then weighed in the boys who rode on the truck; there were 47 boys, the gross weight being 4,120 pounds. It was testified that one of the boys who was killed weighed 107, one who was injured 108 and another who was killed 85, bringing the total to 4,350 pounds. The truck was registered as a 1 1/2 ton truck. Clayton Thrall, of Meriden, testified that he noticed the truck ahead of him swaying, going at a speed of 30 to 35 miles an hour. Mrs. Thrall followed on the stand at 2:30. George Williams of the Connecticut Humane Society also testified. Court adjourned and will be opened this morning. The cases of the eight tobacco truck drivers charged with carrying passengers without a public service franchise will be held on Wednesday, next.

U. S. WILL NOT ANNUL

FRANCE'S WAR DEBTS

Paris, Sept. 28.—On the eve of leaving for Washington to return to his post as French ambassador to the United States, the Hon. Paul Claudet today revealed that he entertained no hope whatsoever that the United States would annul the inter-allied war debts.

"I am certain that the United States will never annul the inter-allied debts," he asserted in an interview with this correspondent.

"If we were to ask an American whether he thought the inter-allied debts should be annulled the reply probably would be something like this: 'Why annul the debts when I am obliged to pay such heavy taxes. The United States had heavy losses in the war too, and wasn't it we who struck the final decisive blow which ended the war?'"

"And his answer would be justified. France mustn't look forward to the annulment of the debts," Ambassador Claudet admitted that his task in Washington in 1923 would be "particularly difficult" on account of the fact that France's four hundred million dollar debt to the United States for war supplies falls due on August 23 of that year.

"I have held many conversations upon this matter with Premier Poincaré and Foreign Minister Briand and I can assure you that France makes no necessary preparations to meet this obligation," he added.

The French statesman is leaving Sunday aboard the French cruiser Duquesne which is going to the United States by way of Guadalupe. He will arrive in Washington on October 20.

HERALD BUYS K. OF C. HALL FOR NEW PLANT

failed to take advantage of its centrally located assembly place and consequently the big building became a burden rather than an asset to the corporation. The cost of maintenance grew rapidly, and since the hall was constructed when building costs were at their post-war peak the interest carrying charges were large.

History of Sale.

Two years ago leading stockholders in the Campbell K. of C. Building Association expressed a desire to sell the hall. At this same time the owners of The Herald were looking over available sites in the south end for a publishing house. Several advantageous places presented themselves, among them the home of the old South Manchester News which had been suspended. This latter building on Cottage street was located in a desirable spot, and was not considered. A few days ago Managing Editor Ferguson of The Herald made an offer for the K. of C. building and after a canvass of the directors of the building association it was found that the offer was acceptable. Last night's action closed the deal.

A meeting of the stockholders of the building corporation has been called for tomorrow night to hear the report of the directors and to take whatever action the stockholders may deem advisable in the continuation of the association. It is probable that there will be a vote for dissolution.

Herald's Personnel.

The Herald Printing Company, Inc., is owned by Thomas Ferguson, treasurer and general manager, C. Denison Talcott, president, Eustace H. Ferguson, secretary and assistant treasurer, and Leon A. Thorp. Thomas Ferguson acquired the interests of the late E. Hugh Crosby last January, thereby gaining a majority of the stock. Incidentally Mr. Ferguson is the only original incorporator of The Herald Printing Company still with the firm. Elwood S. Ela, the founder of the local paper, died in 1924, and E. Hugh Crosby, formerly secretary, died a few weeks ago.

The Herald was founded, as a weekly on October 1, 1881, just 47 years ago next Monday. It became a semi-weekly in 1903 and a daily in 1914. The first home of The Herald was on Depot Square.

In a frame building which stood where the Manchester post-office is now located. A disastrous fire forced The Herald into quarters in Apel's Opera House. Then the establishment moved to the Rose block on Depot Square where Joel Nichols' news store is now located. Soon the late Maro S. Chapman, father-in-law of the late J. Hillard plant for The Herald and for other industrial enterprises.

The present building was the scene of a bad fire in November 1922 and later the plant was entirely rebuilt. When The Herald goes south next month it will make its fourth move in 47 years, but it will be in the south end of the town for the first time in its history.

Rutgers Economics Professor to Address Local Club on Monday Noon.

Professor Alfred P. Haake, head of the Economics department of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J., will be the speaker at the meeting of the Kiwanis club, Monday, October 1, at the Hotel Sheridan.

Professor Haake was at the head of the economics department at the University of Wisconsin, director of industrial economics for McManis, and an assistant to Simmons of the metal bed fame. It was while he was with the last named concern that Elmore Watkins became acquainted with him and he came here on Mr. Watkins' invitation.

Kiwanians who were absent at the last meeting and failed to secure one of the high-prize medals, auctioned off to help pay off the deficit at the Kiddies camp, are urged to send their contributions just the same.

GERMAN MADE BULLETS IDENTIFIED IN COURT

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 28.—Three German-made bullets steel-jacketed, unexploded, were identified in crowded Norfolk county Superior Criminal Court today by Miss Helen Elaine Bradshaw, 23-year-old Hartford, Conn., divorcee and sweetheart of Stephen J. Hoppe, jail-breaker extraordinary and on trial charged with the slaying of Patrolman Alfred N. Hollis at Quincy early in the morning of October 4, 1927.

Miss Bradshaw said that the bullets found in a black suit case in the apartment she and Hoppe occupied in Hartford were the same as State's Attorney William P. Kelly held in the palm of his hand. It had been brought out that the German made steel-jacketed bullets were found in the body of Patrolman Hollis.

Before the re-appearance on the witness stand of Hoppe's sweetheart Mrs. Elizabeth G. Farrar, who saw a man with a limp running from the scene of the crime, was cross-examined as to the "vision" from her window on that rainy morning.

Dr. James Edward Carroll, of Hartford, identified Hoppe as the man who came to his office on October 7, 1927 for a punctured wound on the base of a ring finger of his left hand, who gave his name as John Wilcox and said he had received the injury while using an electric drill in his garage.

DISAVOW ACTIVITY OF BEGGAR FOR INDIANS

Mohegan Church Holding No "Wigwam," Report Two Commerce Chambers.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce received word this morning from the New London and Norwich Chambers that any solicitation for the benefit of the Mohegan Indian church at Thamesville, or for its wigwam, an annual fair held by the tribe, is without the knowledge or consent of the tribe or the sanction of those Chambers.

The Indians as a matter of fact, do not intend to hold a "wigwam" this year nor is the church conducting any outside drive for funds.

Several reports have reached the Chambers regarding the activities of a woman solicitor at work here who represents that she is collecting money for the Mohegan church and its "wigwam."

attorney, took stenographic notes in the Grand jury room. He was appointed as a special assistant attorney-general by Attorney General John Sargeant.

The government contends the right to do this under the statute. Judge Thomas points out that the statute provides that special assistants may be appointed to "conduct" proceedings and says Mr. Roberts "did not actually" conduct proceedings.

An appeal from this is expected by the government. But the appeal has not yet been filed yet and matters stand the case is out of court.

Mr. Waddell has secured Harold C. Alvord as treasurer of the committee, and George E. Rix as secretary. The other members of the committee are C. R. Burr, Albert E. Downey, Charles W. Holman, P. J. The committee hopes that the entire amount of $7,000 can be secured in this manner without a house-to-house canvass. DIDN'T ELOPE, JUST CHANGED HIS HOME Proceedings of Mrs. Mesilio Nothing to Him, Declares Indignant Margiotta.

Mrs. Tony Mesilio of Homestead street may be missing with her children, but the assertion made by her divorced husband that she went away with a boarder, won't work, as the boarder is right in Manchester. He has only changed his boarding place.

Charles Margiotta, who became a boarder at Mrs. Mesilio house when Tony was ordered to keep away from there and who remained there while Tony was in jail, denied he says on last Sunday that things were not any too pleasant around the place so he got himself another boarding house and is now living at 104 Charter Oak street. Mr. Mesilio has left her home with two children that has nothing to do with him, he says, as he has not been out of town and represents the statement that Tony made to the police about him.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Sept. 28. — The past month has seen an increasing tendency in the campaign to put most of the northwest into the "doubtful" state class along with the border states and the east. Farmer discontent and the uncertain amount of political revolt which it has bred are the backbone of the theory that Smith has a chance to win such states as Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and Nebraska and it has been thought that Wisconsin was more likely to go for Smith than any of the rest. Senators from these states have admitted privately that the result in some of them hung on the farm relief declarations of the candidates. Smith was acquainted with this fact when he devised his Omaha speech. The speech has unquestionably strengthened Smith, but not even the politicians know whether it will switch any state's electoral vote.

The Democrats see hope in the fact that none of these six states—Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana and Nebraska—are noted for their political regularity. In fact, they are more notorious than any other group of states for their lack of it.

The solid south elects Democrats for all offices. The New England states, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan and various other states almost invariably go Republican from the top of the slate down.

But those six doubtful agricultural states are full of accomplished ticket-splitters. They're proud of it, too. Few political observers will be surprised this year if Minnesota, for instance, elects a Farmer-Labor senator and a Republican governor and casts its presidential vote for a Democrat. Wisconsin will elect progressive Bob La Follette as senator, a conservative for governor, probably a Socialist congressman and perhaps on top of that go for Smith—the list virtually represents four parties.

Discretion prevents further suggestions about what such states may do. Smith is the big question mark in all of them. In none yet he is considered certain, although his chances are by no means equally bright in each. They have 47 electoral votes.

Your correspondent hastens on to review the unusually peculiar situation which exists in North Dakota and affords an excellent example of the kind of thing that can happen in states where the ticket-splitting or independents hold a definite balance of power. The facts have not been widely printed.

Governor Walter Maddock, Republican, recently announced his candidacy to succeed himself — on the Democratic ticket! The duly nominated Democrat withdrew to make way for him. The normal Democratic vote in North Dakota is about 20,000, though Davis had only 14,000 of some 200,000 cast in 1924. Thus Maddock, if he is to win, apparently will find his vote 80 per cent composed of ticket-splitters.

One is also surprised to learn that Senators Frazier and Nye, Republicans, will in all probability support Maddock for the governorship against his Republican opponent, George Shafer. At this writing, some well-informed North Dakotans say, Shafer appears to have a slight edge on Maddock. But the Nye-Frazier support is very likely to put him over.

One also hears that Frazier will be at least tacitly supported by Maddock, while F. F. Burchard, the Democratic senatorial nominee, who is accountant of the State Mill and so right under Governor Maddock, will refrain from public protest.

Democratic scouts in North Dakota have predicted that Maddock's jump to the Democratic ticket would carry the state for Smith in November, but that doesn't follow. Maddock is regarded as pro-Smith and is expected to campaign for Smith, but Frazier and Nye prefer Hoover and have said so. Maddock's personal popularity may swing many votes to Smith, but the voters who will decide the destiny of the state's electoral vote are going to vote for president without regard to any other contest. That's the way they do and this year no candidate's fate is bound up with another's.

Maddock is a farmer with a long legislative career, during part of which he was a floor leader. His admiration for Smith and dislike for Hoover would not have persuaded him to bolt had he not been assured of powerful support from the Non-Partisans against Shafer, leader of the Independent Voters Association, the conservative wing of North Dakota politics. Thorstein Thoresen, state tax commissioner, ran against Shafer for the Republican nomination and believes he lost because Maddock didn't support him, but that is expected to be patched up as Thoresen doubtless wants to keep his present job.

Maddock, became governor about a month ago when Governor Sorlie died. Both Non-Partisans and Democrats put pressure on him to run as a Democrat and beat Shafer, the conservative, bitter foe of Nye and Frazier. In a popular vote to elect delegates to the Republican national convention, Maddock had been high man among nine candidates and was chairman of the state delegation. He has been consistently anti-Hoover.

North Dakota voted for Wilson in 1916. From 1907 to 1913 it had a Democratic governor, John Burke. Since the Non-Partisans became a factor Democrats in the league run as Republicans when they feel the urge for office.

LONDON-PARIS PLANES CARRY 2,000 PER WEEK

London. — Nine years of commercial flying between London and Paris, during which the number of passengers carried per week has risen from 20 to 2,000 and the speed flown from 60 to 120 miles an hour, were completed recently. It was in August, 1919, that a small British airplane instituted the world's first daily commercial air service. The machine was a converted wartime plane, and the pilot was "Bill" Lawford, a war "ace." It carried two passengers who sat in cramped seats and who were lifted into the machine through a hole in the top of the fuselage. A 350-horsepower motor of uncertain age supplied the motive power.

Are You Ready When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Today, on their de luxe service between London and Paris, Imperial Airways employ triple-screw machines, developing 1,500 horsepower, and carrying eighteen passengers, in addition to two pilots, engineer and a steward, who serves refreshments from a snug buffet while the 8-ton craft speeds along at 100-120 miles an hour. The liners fly four times daily between London and Paris, Brussels or Cologne, and two thousand passengers are carried in an average week. On a busy day as many as 50 machines—scheduled machines and specials—alight at the Croydon airport, while as many as 50 tons of merchandise are now carried in a week by passenger planes and special freighters. Americans make up the bulk of passengers during the summer months, according to officials at Croydon, while another interesting point is that women outnumber male passengers by nearly 3 to 1.

EDITOR WHITE RETURNS New York, Sept. 28.—William Allen White came back from Europe today prepared to talk of anything except the presidential campaign. He has been in London for 10 days for continuing his attacks on Gov. Smith, he said he wasn't ready to "pop over"—a Kansas expression whose New York equivalent is "take a crack"—until he has read his mail, talked to his friends and caught up with the news. "I'm in a haze about the whole thing," he said, "for I haven't seen an American newspaper for weeks. I'll have to get my mail and talk to some people and then I'll probably pop over."

An English girl, while walking on Lydstep Sands, found entangled in some seaweed a flat round box, of peculiar workmanship, made of oak. Inside the lid was the date July, 1815—and round the extreme edge was the inscription "made from the main beam of the Bellerophon, that brought home Bonaparte."

TWO BIG FEATURES AT STATE TOMORROW

"Midnight Madness" and "Fourflusher" to Be Shown; "Lilac Time" Sunday. To complete a week of splendid screen entertainments, the State Theater is presenting two excellent features for tomorrow's continued show, which operates from 2:15 until 10:30. They are Jacquelin Logan and Clive Brook in "Midnight Madness" and George Lev in "Fourflusher." "Midnight Madness" is a powerful love romance which carries one from an ultra-modern city to the jungles of Africa. Every scene has a thrill of its own and when Miss Logan, rifle in hand, faces a ferocious lion, the audience is hushed and awed. This charming young screen player vests her role of the wife who resents poverty only to discover that love invariably asserts itself in every environment, with genuine artistry. Mr. Brook as the husband who wins the love of his rebellious wife after trying ordeals as, as usual, quite convincing. Others in the cast are Walter McGrath, Louis Natheaux and Virginia Sale. "The Fourflusher," starring George Lewis, is a picture that is sure to win the approval of Manchester comedy lovers. It fairly sparkles with humor and is chock full of thrills and excitement. The plot centers around a young man, who, through a banker's error, is allowed to borrow $10,000 to open a store in competition with his former employer. It is here that the fun begins and to tell you about it would be spoiling an evening's entertainment. Marion Nixon is seen opposite Lewis Phillips and Hayden Stevenson. Wesley Ruggles directed the production for Universal. "Lilac Time," opens at th. State for three days beginning Sunday night.

REMOVAL

In the news columns today The Herald announces its intention to move its publication plant from Hilliard street, north end, to the center of Manchester's business activity, Bissell street, south end. The soundest of economic reasons have prompted this determination, but The Herald has no hesitancy in admitting that there is something of a sentimental wrench about it. For almost half a century the newspaper has been, physically, a north end institution. It has lived its life, so far, within sight and sound of Depot Square. And it has stuck to its environment, not in every way to its advantage, with the tenacity of a family cat. The Herald loves the north end. But for years, none the less, it has realized that after all the north end is Manchester and the south end is Manchester, and the Green and Highland Park and all the rest of the localities of this community are just Manchester, when all is said and done—that the sooner we all forget these ancient locality individualities the better for the town and its folks. We are firmly convinced that Manchester will have a better newspaper and The Herald a better business proposition, that the people of the whole town will be better served, the advertisers' convenience better provided for, quicker delivery of the readers' copies guaranteed, by publication in the new home. The removal of The Herald is a practical application of the theory which this newspaper has so long and persistently advanced, that this town is, ought to be and must be a single unit—a truth that very soon must be recognized in the wiping out of sectional lines by a consolidation of its artificially and unaturally separated interests under a new charter and in a new spirit.

WATER POWER

So far in this campaign Governor Smith has made only one utterance that has been discussed afterward as being a serious political proposition. There is very general acceptance of the fact that his Omaha speech on farm relief was the merest time serving, that as a bulld trust he doesn't understand the subject nearly well enough to make anything he may say on that subject worth a hoot. His Montana speech on the oil scandal was sorry mud-slinging. His Oklahoma speech was a cry-baby plea for sympathy as a poor-abused. So that Denver exposition of his views on water power remains the sole effort deserving serious consideration. This is a subject on which Governor Smith cannot truthfully be said to be without information. It has been his specialty for several years. It is the best of his basket of tricks and Republicans who attempt to dismiss his argument for public ownership of such developments as those of Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals by merely calling it tommy-rot are not the best soldiers of their party. It is perfectly true that there are innumerable perfectly sound arguments against public operation of great economic utilities such as the power development of the Colorado river will be. It is perfectly true that applied public ownership of any major service usually, and almost inevitably, results in inadequacy and high cost. It is perfectly true that if the Boulder Dam project were carried out by the government it would be, almost certainly, of far less ultimate benefit to the South-west and to the nation than if it were carried out by skilled business men. It is unquestionably true that the rigid public ownership theories of Governor Smith, as applied to that project, would be disappointing and disillusioning if they were ever realized—and enormously costly into the bargain.

reds of thousands of American voters who, whatever else they may think of Smith, are more inclined to agree with him than with the out-and-out individualists who sneer at any theory of the development of natural monopolies which does not contemplate their unrestricted possession by corporations. Such voters, probably in the vast majority of cases, do not accept the Smith theory of public ownership, operation or direct control at its face value, by any means. They simply lean a little that way in preference to leaning toward a complete surrender of what they cannot help but regard as a national heritage that must not be alienated. What such people want is not some cut and dried socialistic formula such as Governor Smith offers, but an assurance that neither Boulder Dam, Muscle Shoals, Niagara nor any other potential source of great water power shall ever be turned over to private development and exploitation without some provision for recapture by the people in the event that in the future—the far future perhaps—it should transpire that complete private ownership was working an injury to the national welfare. There is every reason to believe that it is under some such arrangement with every needed safeguard taken to prevent a possible error from being made perpetual—that the great water powers of the country will be developed by private or corporate enterprise. This is extremely likely to be the determination of balanced, comprehensive minds like that of Mr. Hoover, who is no more committed to the irrevocable surrender of Boulder Dam than is Governor Smith himself—and who is, on the other hand, far too experienced to adopt the communistic theory under which the latter is proceeding. It is not at all necessary, in order to keep the water power potentialities from being gobbled up in perpetuity by any group of individuals, to rush blindly into a set of experiments in national ownership against which all the experience of the world shouts warning.

MIX-UP

Maybe it is true that "there is nothing new under the sun," but if ever before a man was arrested for failure to pay alimony, identified by the wife in the case as her husband and likewise by the wife's mother, and then identified continually by several witnesses, one of them his own mother, as not the husband but the husband's brother, then we never heard of that case, for we surely should have remembered it. Mrs. Bella Frank, the sutor in the case, insists that the man arrested in Brooklyn, as the defaulting husband, is Albert Frank. So goes her mother. The other witnesses insist that he is Samuel Frank, younger brother of Albert, whom, they declare, he does not even closely resemble. Nobody, police, lawyers, newspaper men or the judge appears to have any clear idea of what kind of a whirligig of identities they are up against. Possibly the case may have been solved by the time this is printed, but anyhow, it has been good.

THE STUFF!

We like the enterprise and stamina of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston in going into daily papers in Chicago with half page advertisements succinctly and boldly captioned, "There's Money to Be Made in New England." "What New England is doing industrially and what business firms in other sections can profitably do in New England are subjects which we will gladly discuss with you at your convenience," the advertisement says. That's business. There was no business and no making of business in the bellyache campaign carried on a year or two ago by several New England business bodies, beseeching New England industrialists to "stand up and fight" against some bogey of retrogression which never existed save in some bilious imaginations. New England is as much the land of opportunity today as it ever was, as much as any section of this whole broad land. That "there's money to be made in New England" is true. The old Boston bank is hitting on all six and using the right kind of gas. DUCE'S FIGURES Mussolini makes so many statements on which Americans generally cannot check up that when he does make a declaration on which they can get an exact line it is interesting to do so. Suddenly reversing his position of a year or two ago, that Italy must have more room for her increasing population the Duce has just issued a demand that Italian produce more children in order to properly develop the territory they now have. And in amplifying his position he points to the threat of rapidly increasing black and yellow races, the while the birthrate of the white peoples is diminishing. In the course of his argument he points to the American Negro as providing an example in point. "While," he says, "the whites of the United States have a miserable birthrate—which would be even more miserable if it were not for the Irish, Jewish and Italian immigrants—Negroes of the United States are ultra-fecund and amount already to an imposing 14,000,000 or one-sixth of the total population." As a matter of fact there are nowhere near 14,000,000 Negroes in the United States. There are not many over 11,000,000. And instead of constituting one-sixth of the population they constitute considerably less than one-tenth of it. While, so far as the birthrate is concerned, that among the Negro population of the United States is notoriously decreasing faster than that of the whites. Aside from that, Benito is probably all right. However, this little item gives a fair sort of idea how dependable Mussolini statistics are likely to be.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 28.—Seesawing up and down Broadway, I seem to run into Wil Rogers at every turn. . . . Wil's here rehearsing for a reappearance in the musical merry merries. . . . Also he's the sort of visitor who can get away with a soft shirt, a shoestring tie and uncombed hair in a theater box. . . . And on a night when everyone else is dished out in soup and fish. And when you don't see Wil, you see Jack Dempsey and I mean they're included at most of the supper clubs after Jack finishes his nightly job of being a more-or-less actor. . . . Incidentally the Dempsey show brought out the first hundred-per-cent Broadway crowd of the season. . . . Al Johnson brought out the second with his new picture. In the lobby, between acts of the Dempsey opening, I saw Peggy Joyce with the young man scheduled to be her next husband. . . . The one casually picked up in Des Moines. . . . I mean Loretta Northesk. . . . And there was Debe Danuels, who has been hiding out with the Thomas Melghans of Long Island. . . . Ethel Barrymore, who has at last achieved that status where a new theater is being named for her, and amusingly enough, there was Jack Kearns.

The allure of those darkened corners under the approach of Brooklyn bridge never changes. There you will find an eternal clutter of sounds and sights which seem far away from the great city that lies just outside. There is a clatter of horses' hoofs, the crunching of wagon runs against stone, the array of dingy shops and stands, the old-fashioned street car terminal just around the corner, the unreal glow of the half-light and the eternal bustle of assorted peoples—peoples from every land and clime. Nothing precipitates such a state of confusion in Broadway as an autumn storm that breaks while all the fastidiously garbed folk are attending a premiere. . . . Caught and pulled out into the stormy night, they huddle at first in the lobbies, or under the sidewalk canopies if the theater happens to possess such. . . . They push, elbow and elacater like a 6 o'clock subway crowd. . . . Uncertainly overtakes cold, pensive ladies and their nervous escorts. . . . Starters begin their endless chant of "rail car" numbers. . . . Those fortunate enough to have chauffeurs wait impatiently for their numbers to be announced. . . . The others patiently price about what's to be done. . . . It's a situation most of them have faced dozens of times before, yet it inevitably results in a similar scene. . . . Taxis, gathering as to a magnet, become hopelessly entangled in the jam of traffic. . . . Other theaters empty and the crowds merge into a sort of sardine can effect. . . . Police reserves arrive on foot and on horseback, and suddenly a sense of chaotic mob movement overtakes the scene. . . . An undercurrent of struggle and battle can be felt, even when staged with the greatest amount of politeness that underlying rancor allows. Meanwhile the streets flow with streams of water, which twist glittering reflections into a thousand designs. . . . Rain whips past, borne on a stiff wind. . . . Umbrella vendors appear out of nowhere dripping and disheveled. . . . Trading goes on without a word being exchanged. . . . The shrill whistles of traffic police break in upon the babble of voices. . . . Now and then the frantic shouting of a corner traffic cop tells of the taxi struggle going on just out of eyeshot. . . . With a communal feeling of helpless feeling of helplessness, good humor rises or wanes—according to the individual's temperament. . . . "Good sports" decide that this is a great lark. . . . Bad sports grouse, curse under their breath or grow snooty and insulting. . . . After-theater parties begin to brew in the lobby. . . . A few daring individuals break out of the mob and "make a dash for it." . . . White slippers go sloppily-slopping over the flowing gutters. . . . White wraps are swung with the wind. . . . Heads are lowered and hastily covered with old bits of newspaper. . . . Minutes pass. A half hour passes. . . . Slowly the snarl begins to untangle. . . . Taxis move forward, like snails. . . . They zigzag, cross and intercross, like Amazons in the old fashioned barbaless choruses. . . . At the end

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

CATARACTS OF THE EYE

Inside the eyeball and just behind the iris there is a clear transparent lens which is for the purpose of converging the rays of light just as does a lens in a telescope. This crystalline lens is transparent, but may become opaque in old people or as the result of an accident in young people. When this occurs the condition is termed a cataract. Many people have the mistaken belief that a cataract is a growth in or on the eye, but this is not true. Sometimes a growth appears on the outside of the eye, going from the inner corners over the surface of the eye and may even cover the pupil. This growth is not a cataract but is termed a "pterygium" and while not serious, may be removed by a slight operation. The crystalline lens, being transparent, is obviously not nourished by blood which would give it a red color. It is nourished by absorbing the clear transparent lymph from surrounding tissues. When this lymphatic circulation becomes clogged or filled with irritating toxins it is apt to cause an opaqueness of the crystalline lens termed a "cataract". This interference with the circulation of the lymph is caused by deposits and sluggishness or by inflammation of the eye from eye strain in old people, but it may be caused in young folks by cuts or bruises of the eye that interfere with its circulation. Most cases of cataract are seen between the ages of sixty and seventy-five, and in almost every instance there is the history of some other chronic trouble that has been present over the course of twenty or twenty-five years, such as constipation, liver trouble, gleet, diabetes, and pellagra. When these cases are very far advanced they can only be operated on. The operation removes the lens which can be partly compensated for by wearing thick glasses. In many instances, the operation is successful enough to permit the patient to read, but in other cases complete blindness may result. At the first appearance of a cloudiness of the crystalline lens, strict dietetic treatment should begin at once. In addition to this, exercises of the eye should be used at least twice daily to stimulate the circulation. I have prepared a special article on exercises for strengthening the eye, which I will be glad to mail to anyone who will send me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. It is also advisable for one to drink large quantities of distilled water to assist in washing out the impurities that may have accumulated in the circulation. From two to three gallons per day would not be an excessive amount. Most of us who live in cities have a constant strain on the eyes that can only be relieved by wearing corrective glasses. My best advice to those who wish to avoid cataracts is to diet, wear properly fitting glasses, and take the eye exercises.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: S. J. writes: "I have a swollen gland in my neck and am writing to you to ask what is causing it. I had it once and it seemed to come back. It doesn't hurt me. I am a strong healthy girl of sixteen and some people say I will outgrow it but I don't think so." Answer: Your only way to cure the swollen gland is to take a careful diet which will not overload your lymphatic circulation. It is best for a short time, to eliminate all of the heavy foods such as starches, meats, etc. and live on fruits and green vegetables for a month or two and give your glands a chance to empty themselves of any accumulated wastes. Lancing only injures the glands still further and extends the trouble to other glands nearby. Hot applications or electrical treatments are sometimes helpful in emptying out the swollen glands.

Question: H. L. G. asks: "How much water should a person drink during the day?" Answer: The quantity of water used depends upon your bodily necessities and these vary in each individual case. A good rule to use is to take as much water as necessary to keep the urine a light color. If the urine ever becomes dark during the day it is a sign you are not using enough water. The additional water should be taken between meals and not with food.

Question: G. H. J. asks: "Will you kindly explain the best course to follow for a tubercular hip?" Answer: The treatment for a tubercular hip would depend upon the exact condition of the tubercular change which has taken place. A diet treatment is always essential to a cure, though sometimes various physiotherapy treatments will prove effective in bringing about a cure. Complete rest is sometimes necessary, but only in advanced cases.

MAKE your dinner parties a real pleasure by having a dining room that does you credit! Furnish it with one of the lovely period suites to be found in our store, and you will be sure of its smartness forever, for period furniture never goes out of style. If you have a large dining room you could choose Jacobean or other Early English designs. For the pleasant, home atmosphere Early American styles are favorites. Fine mahogany and gumwood have been combined in these pieces, copied from Sheraton designs. All the pieces have tapered legs which are fluted. A buffet, extension table, arm chair and 5 side chairs are included with the 8 piece groups, the chairs having blue haircloth seats. China cabinet $80 extra; round-front console-server with drawer, $44.
- 8 Early English Pieces, $116

A buffet, extension table, arm chair and 5 side chairs are included, with the chairs covered in tapestry. A china cabinet can be had for $24 additional and the cabinet server for $16.
- 8 Early English Pieces, $241
This sturdy suite, fashioned after pieces used in England during the early part of the 17th Century, is made of walnut and gumwood with fancy but walnut fronts and applied carvings. The drawer interiors are of oak, for strength. A buffet, extension table with curved stretchers, arm chair and 5 side chairs are included. Chair seats are covered with moquette velour. ### MURPHY'S RESTAURANT CHANGES HANDS AGAIN

Reuben W. Bronke and John Quagliaroli Buy Business From Maurice Jacobsohn.

"Murphy's Restaurant," so-called because of first ownership, changed hands again today when it was bought by Reuben W. Bronke, former proprietor of The Sunset Dairy, and John Quagliaroli, who formerly worked at the restaurant.

Maurice Jacobsohn, former proprietor of the business, completed the deal yesterday afternoon with Messrs. Bronke and Quagliaroli in the office of Attorney William S. Hyde. Mr. Jacobsohn said he had plans to resume his former work as a candy salesman. He has already returned to his home in Springfield.

NEW PAVING JOBS NOW UP FOR BID

Highway Department Adds Six Miles to Its 1928 Program.

Slightly more than six miles of new paving were advertised for bid by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald today. This paving to be covered by three contracts practically brings to completion the highway department's program of road building for 1928.

The largest contract is for the laying of 20,800 linear feet of macadam on two different roads in the town of Weston. The first stretch to be paved is 1,700 feet in length and is on the Lyons Plain Road. The second piece is on the Newton road and is 9,100 feet long.

Bids for this work will be received from contractors at the Hartford office of the highway department on Wednesday, October 10 at 2 p. m.

MAJESTIC RADIO TO BE GIVEN AWAY AT STATE

Long Awaited Event Takes Place Tonight—Double Features on Screen.

"Tonight's the night!" That seems to be the word among theater goers of Manchester according to advance critics, for it is tonight that the beautiful seven tube Majestic Radio set is to be awarded from the stage of the State Theater to the person holding the lucky number. This newest in electrical receiving apparatus for other fans is being sponsored by the State House and is practically the latest thing of its kind.

Judging from numerous reports a capacity crowd will be on hand at the theater this evening. The presentation of the radio will take place at 9:15 sharp.

Tonight also ushers in the final showings of Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" and William Boyd in "Skyscraper."

In "The Night Watch," Miss Dove appears more charming and beautiful than ever before. As the pretty wife of a naval officer, who sacrifices her honor to save the man she really loves, the vivacious at r rises to new dramatic heights. Donald Reed and Paul Lukas have the principal supporting roles.

"Skyscraper" presents William Boyd as a tough steel riveter, who finds that love is a greater power than the steel derrick he operates. Sue Carol is responsible for his rather sudden change.

"Lilac Time" is here for three days starting Sunday night.

WOODCOCK SEASON NOT OPEN TILL OCTOBER 21

Among the items of the Connecticut state game laws printed in the Herald a few days ago is one which includes woodcock among the birds that can be legally hunted between Oct. 8 and Nov. 23.

The state law with relation to woodcock, however, is subject to federal statutes governing the killing of migratory birds.

The federal statute now fixes October 20 as the date for the ending of the closed season on woodcock. Therefore this variety of game bird cannot be hunted until October 21 without violating the federal law.

SURPRISE BEQUEST TO FAMILY $20,000

Mrs. Robinson Gets $15,000, Sons $2,500 Each by Will of Old Friend.

Under the will of Judson H. Root, a well known Hartford wool merchant, filed in probate court yesterday, Mrs. Jennie Robinson of East Center street and her two sons, Ernest and Raymond, are to receive bequests totaling $20,000.

The announcement that they had been remembered in the will of Mr. Root came as a surprise to the members of the Robinson family as there is no relationship of any kind, the only association being that Mr. Root was for years a close friend of the family of Mrs. Robinson. Mr. Root left $97,500 to institutions in Hartford, Hartford County and in Massachusetts, eighteen in number, and among other bequests are included one of $15,000 to Mrs. Robinson and one of $2,500 to each of her two sons.

Had no intimation. The first intimation the Manchester legatees received of their windfalls was this morning.

Ernest and Raymond Robinson two years ago opened a gasoline and accessories station on Main street, just north of the Center. Mrs. Robinson, who owns one of the family flats on Main street north of the Lincoln School, a few years ago purchased the two family flat on East Center street, just east of Parker street.

In addition to the $20,000 left to the Manchester persons and the $97,000 left to institutions, bequests of $70,000 in trust funds and outright bequests of $60,000 were made under the will.

MAKE CAREFUL PLANS FOR ST. JAMES BAZAAR

The committee working on preparation for the annual bazaar to be held in November by St. James' Church met last night at its members assigned sections in which to work. The parish lines extend on the south to the Glastonbury line, to the north as far as Middle Turnpike, east to the Bolton line lying south of Middle Turnpike and to the East Hartford line on the west, with Middle Turnpike as the north boundary.

The territory has been divided into ten divisions and it is proposed to make a house to house canvass of every member of the parish included in this district. The sections are divided with regard to the number of houses to be visited. The original committee will be increased by each group selecting its own additional workers and it is expected that a working body of at least fifty will be active, with each chairman responsible for the work in his territory.

The next meeting of the committee will be held Tuesday evening of next week, and thereafter it is proposed to meet each Monday night until after the bazaar.

Question: Mrs. G. J. asks: "Will you please give the first aid treatment for acute indigestion?"

Answer: The simplest remedy to employ when suffering from acute indigestion is to drink three or four glasses of water as quickly as can be borne. This will assist in carrying off the offending food material, and in some cases produce vomiting, which brings quick relief. Where vomiting is produced it is well to drink immediately afterwards more hot water to overcome the irritation of gastric juice and bile which is generally thrown out in large quantities during acute indigestion.

Question: Anxious asks: "Will you please tell me what to begin feeding a five months old baby? It is breast fed but seems as though it weighs fifteen pounds, twelve ounces, and is very lively. What would cause a baby's feet to perspire and feel clammy?"

Answer: A five months old baby should be given only orange juice and milk, using about four feedings daily of milk. The quantity of milk used at each feeding should vary between four to six ounces, according to the baby's digestive ability. The baby should be kept warm and the circulation in the legs not interfered with by having the diapers or underclothing too tight.

Question: A Young Lady asks: "Do you think that having such blemishes as moles removed from one's face hinders the way to growth of a more serious nature, such as a cancer, etc.?"

Answer: If moles are removed carefully with an electric needle there is no danger of cancer forming in the same place. I have personally never seen a skin cancer which had formed at the site of a scar caused by removing a mole.

LABOR: Hoover Is The Best Friend Labor Ever Had

Hoover never had a strike. For years he was in charge of vast mining operations involving thousands of men. He never forgot the human element. His first consideration was to provide for the men adequate wages, decent living conditions, sanitary habitations. Before Hoover ever wielded the powers of an executive, he had earned his living as farm boy, as office boy, and as miner. He pounded a drill, shoveled ore, and pushed a hand car for eight hours a day or night. Hoover knows the hardships of labor, and the far greater hardships of unemployment.

It was at Hoover's suggestion that the President in 1921 appointed a conference of labor leaders, economists, and business men to attack the problem of unemployment. When the conference began, there were millions of idle men. In three months industry was picking up and men were finding employment. Hoover understands the laboring man's problems from the inside.

OPEN AIR THEATER NEAR APPROACH TO PERFECT ACCOUSTICS

Chicago. — Open-air theaters most nearly approach perfect acoustic conditions, Floyd Rowe Watson, professor of experimental physics in the University of Illinois, declares in reporting to the American Institute of Architects the results of scientific tests with sound.

Improvement in the transmission of sound—spoken or musical—can be best accomplished by better arrangement of sounding walls behind speaker or orchestra, the experiments, still in progress, disclose.

Every sound we hear in an auditorium is the result of hundreds of repetitions, coming to us from the many surfaces in the building, each, one of which is a "sound image", repeating the sounds exactly as they are initially given, Prof. Watson finds.

For perfect reception, this reflected sound must be not more than fifty-six second-feet behind the direct sound. That is, if the distance from the reflecting "image" to the listener is fifty-six feet more than the distance from the speaker to the listener, his words come clearly and distinctly. More than fifty-six feet and his words are blurred.

Reflected sound, such as abounds in every enclosed auditorium, is the greatest cause of blurring of speaking and music, according to Prof. Watson, whose report continues:

"Omitting the reflected sound would have the advantage of eliminating any possible blurring defects of reflection. But this arrangement surprisingly suggests the open-air theater, such as was used by the Greeks, with no reflecting surfaces, except the wall at the rear of the stage."

By ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

SYBIL THORNE tells her sweet heart, CRAIG NEWHALL, of her secret marriage. She tells him also that she is going to have a child. And she tells him something of RICHARD EUSTIS, who won her in five days. She describes the horror of the two weeks she spent with him. And Craig, very gently, when she is through, kisses her good-by. Sybil's family, almost overwhelmed by her astounding revelation, consider ways and means of silencing the gossip and squelching scandal. MRS. THORNE, fearful of society's scorn, orders wedding announcements and calls on her psychoanalyst for help in dealing with the dreadful problem. Sybil's adored brother, TAD, is very sympathetic and understanding, but his wife, VALERIE, is frankly skeptical.

Mr. Crandon, the analyst, reviews the case.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Mrs. Thorne leaned back in her Boston rocker. Mr. Crandon flowed on. By and by the maid came with tea. Before they knew it the clock on the mantle was chiming four.

"I am sorry," said Mr. Crandon, "I have another appointment now."

And Mrs. Thorne, gathering her moleskin about her, apologized and prepared to depart.

"I feel so much better," she told him. "I simply can't thank you enough for all you do for me. It's as if a load were lifted from my mind."

And that night she told Valerie.

"Mr. Crandon thinks it would be a great mistake to send Sybil away. And he says that the child may be a perfectly marvelous thing for her. He is very anxious to analyze Sybil—for her own good, you know, Valerie. But I suppose she wouldn't hear of such a thing."

"I should say not!" scorned Valerie. "And what's the sense of analyzing Sybil? The girl never had a repression nor an inhibition in her life. It's primitive ego that's Sib's trouble—and there's no sublimating that, Mother Thorne. Besides, she'd just laugh at you."

"I suppose so," agreed Mrs. Thorne sadly. "Well, we won't let her go away anyhow, Valerie. Mr. Crandon advised very definitely against it."

Sybil, however, had ideas of her own, and it was Tad who persuaded her at last to stay at home.

"It seems to me," he said, "that it would be a cowardly thing to hide somewhere. Like a confession of fear—fear of what people are going to say. Hold your head, Sib. There's nothing like facing the music. And tell them all to go to the devil!"

As soon as the announcements were out, the news began to percolate.

"Sybil Thorne's going to have a baby!"

"A baby? My dear, what are you talking about! I just got an announcement of her marriage."

"Well!"

"You don't mean it?"

"I certainly do. Next April I heard."

Women telephoned each other at all hours of the day and night. At bridge parties they forgot to play cards. They met one another for luncheon, and their food grew for them as they talked. The most arrogant of them went to see her. With incredulous exclamations and small gifts they invaded her privacy.

One day she bundled together five little jackets, six pairs of booties, four baby dresses embroidered in Madefra, and a knit bonnet or two. Tying them around with a blue satin carriage ribbon, she laid them on the blazing logs in the library fireplace. And while they burned she held a tiny hand of silk and wool, all shrunken with tears, to her lips, and laughed excitedly.

"Look!" she cried, when Tad came in and found her crouched over the ashes. "I've burned all the tickets of admission my friends bought to come to look at me."

Winter dragged on—such a long, long, winter. Sybil was very beautiful, but there was no one to see her somber loveliness but her mother, and Tad and Valerie. Her eyes seemed to grow larger, and in their tragic depths there was a sort of Madonna beauty.

She moved quietly with a sort of heavy, peasant grace. And she wore a blue smock of soft wool the color of wild flowers in the fall of grace. She seldom went out, being extremely conscious of all that was being said.

Once Craig came to call, but she sent down word that she was out. After that he left flowers with his card occasionally, but never again asked to see her.

Then, at last, it was over. Spring came. And forsythia waving yellow banners, Crocuses, and gay red tulips, and purple primroses, Sybil lay quietly in a small white bed in a big white hospital. The crisp curtains at her window rustled like a small girl's petticoats. Spring, with the breath of lilacs, stole through the open window—and the little bundle at her side waited a mournful wall.

Such a tiny little bundle.

Sybil crept it on her arm, poked timidly at the white cloth that swaddled it. They fell back, revealing a small red face, with a bit of nose in the middle of it. There were tight little wrinkles that would undoubtedly disclose eyes later, and a noisy, busy mouth that seemed large for the rest of the features. The head was covered with soft black hair.

A nurse appeared in the doorway, pleasantly professional.

"It's the most beautiful baby I've ever seen," she said. "And absolutely perfect."

Sybil smiled palely. "He's just too beautiful!" she said, and gazed worshipfully on her son.

"Your brother is here," announced the nurse briskly. "He may come in for just a moment if you'll promise not to talk."

Tad came on tiptoe, after the fashion of men approaching recent mothers. He held a brown felt hat awkwardly, rolling the brim, and seemed quite distracted and embarrassed. His face was flushed, and he applied his handkerchief nervously to his forehead. Sybil laughed weakly as he came to the side of her bed.

"Meet the boss, Taddy!" she cried, and drew the sheet gently away. . . . "See um's uncle, Sweetiekins?"

Tad kissed her white forehead, and took her hand.

"Oh, Tadi!" she whispered. "I'm so happy! Just look at him, Tad!"

Then Tad bent and inspected the little bundle, and poked it, and tried to think of something to say.

"Great little kiddo," he said, and wondered if Sybil expected him to say it was good looking.

"Isn't he beautiful, Tad?"

"Beautiful!" he echoed solemnly. "It's got a nice head."

"And ears?" she cried. "Did you ever see such beautiful ears in all your life?"

"Never," he assured her gravely. "Beautiful ears."

Then the nurse came.

"You've stayed long enough for today, Mr. Thorne," she told him. And Tad took his hat gratefully and departed.

Two weeks after Sybil left the hospital, she wanted a christening party.

"I know they're old-fashioned," she admitted, "but this is something special."

She bought a christening robe two yards long, and borrowed a silver brazier for a font, Craig with Jack Moore. It was an evening when Valerie was playing bridge, and Mrs. Thorne had gone to church.

Sybil wore a brief little dress of woody green, with violets at her waist. And the baby, over his baptismal gown, wore a daisy chain.

Mabel held him, and Sybil dipping her fingers in the font, sprinkled his fuzzy little head.

"I baptize thee," she cried. "Edward Thorne, in commemoration of my father, and in honor of my mother. And I renounce for thee, by father and claim thee for my own alone, Edward Thorne, son of Sybil Thorne. . . ."

The lighted candles that flanked the brazier flickered, and burst into brighter flame, so that they held the baby's big-eyed stare. And he waved his little arms, and smiled his first smile, and cried in triumph. Sybil caught him to her and kissed him wildly.

"God love him," she murmured reverently.

Then they passed him around, and each of them, like fairies at a christening, made a wish for him. Luck, and love and good fortune, Craig handed him back to Sybil, and she cried, like the bad witch in an Irish fairy tale, "Bad cess to your father—and may you never set your beautiful eyes on the face of your!"

Then they were cocktails, and a toast to Edward Thorne, second, who, shortly, like an inebriated host, grew sleepy, and, nodding a bit, dropped his chin to his chest—and slept.

Everyone agreed it was strange Sybil had never heard from Richard.

"It's as if the earth opened and swallowed him," declared Valerie incredulously.

And to Tad she expressed open disbelief. "I don't know what Sib takes us for. A bunch of dumb bells, I guess. And of all the big simperons I ever knew, Craig Newhall is the biggest. Hook, line and sinker, he's swallowed that story of hers."

"Tad had come to treat his wife with scant courtesy."

"Oh, keep still!" he exclaimed now. "Your chatter gives me a pain."

Whereupon Valerie packed her bags, and left for New Haven, leaving the conventional note on her pillow.

"If you're sick of me, there are a lot of people who aren't."

Plenty of fun in New Haven. . . . Never take me anywhere. . . . old stick-in-the-mud. . . . It won't do you any good to come for me. . . . stay as long as I please. . . . (To Be Continued.)

(Craig and Tad talk things over—Sybil's marriage and the chances for a divorce. Craig shows his hand in the next chapter—Valerie stays in New Haven.)

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

There is a big stone lion in Central Park that is usually a man—a man—has to the great number of people who have their pictures snapped while sitting on his head, and to the school children who use him for a sliding board. The climax of the piece he speaks, however, comes when we are told that the park policemen have put a bunch of hay on the ground so the children won't get hurt when they land.

Can we believe it without actually trekking off to New York and seeing for ourselves? There comes to my mind the thousands of signs adorning the parks of my own childhood that snapped, "Keep off the grass." They didn't say "please," either.

Across the street there is a public school. The open space in front of it is like a park. A dozen varieties of big trees grow there, and there are sloping, spacious lawns.

The property is very valuable. It could be sold for a good many thousand dollars, I am sure. That park has brought back some of the faith I had lost in human nature. There seems to be an effort to get rid of it. How about the hundreds of children who trudge up and down its gravel walks? Are they kept in and demerited because they make a misstep and set foot on the precious turf? They are not!

Twenty years ago I think it was a something-or-other offense to do so much as sit on a fire plug. I like the attitude of policemen toward children today. Policemen seem to be made of a lot more human stuff than the ones who kept law and order in the days of cobblestones and the open-trot milk wagon.

Why this civic change in regard to the younger generation? Because cities have discovered, as have many other institutions, that children are the most important people in the world. They are the world.

QUESTIONNAIRE ON MAKING LOVE THRILLS PARIS

Paris—How do the women prefer to be courted and loved today? This is the subject of a questionnaire in the French weekly, "Candida," brought forth by the recent publication of "The Brutal Lover," by Marcelle Prat.

Madame Prat believes that women are divided into two camps. Those who are strong for the old, romantic manner of showing sentiment, and those who prefer their love in the modern, sportive way, even a bit brutal if necessary.

"No woman knows how she wants to be loved until she really is," declares Madame Cattulle Mandes, well-known actress at the Comedie Francaise. "There can be no special classifications such as brutality or tenderness. A real lover must know how to be brutal with tact."

"Neither is there any such thing as love at first sight, because it never strikes an indifferent woman. Love is really the person one loves."

Lucie Delarue-Mardrus, finds no change that it is very uninteresting.

"In olden times," she writes; "one said 'My little angel,' today it is 'my old woman.'"

"Yesterday," answers Princess Murat who is now running a fashionable book-shop in room on the old Ile St. Louis, "men courted women like the hunter his partridge; this manner is more old-fashioned than any old horse and buggy."

The housebreaking Beau Brummel has made his appearance. When police searched the apartment of August Moessner, 29, fashionable and self-confessed burglar, they found his wardrobe to contain no less than 125 suits! Shoes, shirts, neckties and underwear in proportion.

"Did you steal all these clothes," he was asked by a detective.

"No, they are bought and paid for," Moessner replied. "I steal nothing but works of art. Moreover, I only patronize the best people."

Moessner's long record supports his statement. His undoing proved to be an ivory figure, "The Temple of Love," lifted from the home of Aubert, the composer.

"Five years," said the judge. "Too bad," philosophized Moessner. "When I get out, all my clothes will be out of style."

Nine tenants in search of a landlord! The housing crisis has produced no more odd scene than seven children on the Grands Boulevards distributing circulars reading: "Help us find a decent place!"

"We live with our parents; nine people in one room of 50 square feet. We can only pay $2 a week rent!"

The advertiser, a day laborer, says he will keep on broadcasting the circulars by means of his children until he finds a house owner philanthropic enough to answer his call.

The successful political leader is smart enough to know in advance which way the crowd intends to go.

DUTCH PRINCESS

FUTURE WIFE OF PRINCE SIGVARD

Paris—This century may see a political union Sweden-Holland, faint forerunner of a United States of Europe, since well informed diplomatic circles in Paris are talking of a marriage between Prince Sigvard of Sweden and Princess Juliana of Holland.

Such a marriage would in time make Sigvard Prince Regent of the Netherlands, successor to Prince Henry. Events could also make Prince Sigvard heir to the Swedish throne. This muddle, if it occurs, would best be solved by a political union of the two nations, already closely related by race and traditions.

A Love Match

Indications are that the match may eventually take place. Queen Wilhelmina with her daughter have paid annual visits to Sweden during recent years, and Dame Rumor has it that Sigvard and Juliana became interested in each other "at first sight."

A love match of the purest water like the recent one between Prince Leopold of Belgium and Princess Astrid, there are few, if any, difficulties to be overcome. In religion Princess Juliana is a Calvinist, while Prince Sigvard is a Lutheran Protestant.

Prince Sigvard, recently turned twenty-one, is the second son of Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and the late Margaret, Duchess of Connaught.

His older brother, also named Gustavus Adolphus, will in turn succeed his father to the Swedish throne. Should this brother die without issue, Sigvard would automatically fall heir to the Kingdom of Sweden, while at the same time being Prince Regent of Holland.

Princess Juliana, only child of Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, was eighteen years old April 30 this year.

Denver.—Because of mysterious disappearance of confiscated liquor from government vaults causes scandal, John C. Vivian is determined that nothing of the sort will happen during his term of office as local prohibition enforcement officer.

Vivian has put into practice a system of checking up liquor that begins to operate at the time of the raid or confiscation. Every officer is required to fill out blanks telling exactly how much of the alcoholic drink is taken. Most of this liquor is destroyed soon after confiscation, but that which is retained for evidence in court is labeled and sealed with wax. It is kept in a vault, the combination of which is known only to Vivian and his secretaries.

Two persons are allowed to enter the vault. Usually three or four persons enter together.

A complete set of books is kept by the department. Great care is taken to record the identification of witnesses at the time certain quantities of liquor are destroyed. As soon as an accused violator either is convicted or pleads guilty, all "evidence" being kept in connection with the case is destroyed.

Never, in the history of the department, have the books failed to "balance," Vivian claims.

A German broke the official record for piano playing by keeping at it for 82 hours. The unofficial record, of course, is held by the girl next door.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

CHILD, TAKEN AT EARLY AGE, IS EASIER TAUGHT.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBREIN.

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

One of the conspicuous developments in child education in recent years is the attempt to take advantage of the earliest years for the formation of good health habits.

The nursery school takes children from eighteen months or two years upward to kindergarten age. Such schools are equipped with small tables and chairs, especially constructed miniature toilets, washstands and low furniture.

In these schools the child is trained early as to the importance of eating fresh vegetables, so that by the time it develops reasoning power it eats its spinach and its other vegetables as a matter of course.

In the same way the necessity for clean hands, good manners and low voices is emphasized on the group.

The children are taught about the use of fresh air even for naps and work periods. Good habits as to regular activity of the intestines are taught in such schools.

Shyness is overcome through the early social contacts.

More and more the psychologists are becoming convinced that the mental pattern of the child is established early in life.

The relationship, the understandings, the responses to emotions developed during the first three years may mean all of the difference between happiness and unhappiness in the grade school and even in the future business life.

EXPERT VERSUS NOVICE

A thoughtless play with the following holding would result in the loss of a trick for the declarer: Dummy—spades, A 10 5 3. East—? Declarer—K Q 8 7 6. West—?

On the first round of spades the declarer should play small from the dummy and take with the spade King. If the missing spades are all in one hand and either West or East makes this obvious by discarding from another suit, the declarer learns the location of the Jack and plays accordingly for its capture.

If the declarer plays the spade Ace on the first round, the probability of capturing the spade Jack becomes a gamble.

The player must at all times be on the qui vive to employ the twenty-six cards rationally rather than trust to luck. Study the reasoning in the following illustration:

Dummy—diamonds, 4 3 2. East—blank. Declarer—A J 5. West—Leads diamond K.

TOURISTS FLOCK TO LONDON NOW BEFORE FRANCE

London.—London this year has attained the distinction of being the best and brightest holiday city in the world. Paris, the traditional capital for tourists and pleasure seekers, has slipped into the background.

Many interesting factors have brought about this change. First of all is a recognition of the charm of London, largely the fruit of an international "See Britain" campaign and "Come to London First" slogan organized by the great steamship lines, the railway companies, and the chief English hotels.

Then it is gradually being recognized that London has a far greater diversity of amusements than any other capital. It has generally a higher level of hotels of all grades and it possesses a far wider variety of shops.

Luxury Hotels Filled
It is now the peak of the hotel season in London. Everyone of the famous luxury hotels is filled to its last bedroom, and so are most of the other hotels. Bathrooms in many places are being used as bedrooms.

"There is no doubt," said Clifford Whitley, of the Gordon hotel group, "that London this year is doing much better from tourists than Paris. At the moment there is a tendency of many Americans to avoid Paris. Certainly London is reaping the harvest at the expense of Paris."

Both the White Star and Cunard steamship companies are finding, with the majority of their liners, that fewer passengers are ending their journey at Chrbourg and more landing at Southampton than in recent years.

More Americans are in London than ever. Citizens of the United States head by thousands the tourist army in England, and after them, in numerical order, come the following countries: Canada, South America, Germany, Scandinavia, India, Italy, and Spain.

Holiday Funds
Many of the Americans here this summer are termed in the States "dollar a week" tourists. They are from the professional and business holiday funds for a European tour. There are fewer wealthy Americans among the visitors. This is due to the presidential election.

A feature of London is an organization which has proved exceedingly popular with the Americans who travel to this country is the hospitality officers. Hotels like the May Fair, the Savoy, the Cecil and others employ a hospitality officer—usually a gentlemanly officer—who greets all the incoming liners to greet and make welcome the passengers who have booked at his particular hotel.

GATE CRASHERS DISTURB LONDON SOCIAL AFFAIRS

London.—Never before in London's social history has fashionable hostesses been confronted with a more serious problem than that of the gate-crasher, which now is assuming truly serious proportions.

In the past, there have been many occasions when "bright young people" socially eligible, perhaps, but not expressly invited, have invaded the mansions of Mayfair when dances or receptions were in progress.

But now their number is legion, and London's hostesses are up in arms against the evil.

The matter was brought to a sensational climax recently at a ball given by Lady Elmsmere, one of London's most prominent hostesses. She found a number of gate-crashers in the reception room, and in full view of her invited guests, ordered them out of the house.

Are Not Strangers
Had the offenders been strangers or undesirable, the affair would have ended there, but some of the crashers were well-known themselves, and the effect of Lady Elmsmere's action was far-reaching. She made a statement to the press, and named two of the uninvited guests as Miss Nancy Beaton and Miss Betty Lowndes. Miss Beaton is the sister of Cecil Beaton, a familiar figure in London society, who has gained considerable fame by virtue of his "aesthetic camera portraiture," and Miss Lowndes is the daughter of Belloc Lowndes, the well-known novelist.

The families of both young ladies challenged the action of Lady Elmsmere, saying that although the girls had not been personally invited, they attended the ball in the company of a gentleman who had.

A number of similar cases followed, and in some quarters the action of the hostesses has been found justifiable.

In one instance, a fashionable hostess issued a list of invited guests and prepared for that number. In addition to the invited guests, no less than 400 gate-crashers turned up, with the result that the food and champagne ran out long before the evening was over.

Take Drastic Steps
A number of steps have been taken to end the evil. They are as follows:

1. The presentation of visiting cards as well as invitations at the door. (This has been made necessary by the action of the gate-crashers in actually having forged invitations printed.)
2. The careful checking of names at the door.
3. The insistence of an acknowledgment of an invitation, after which a special identification card is issued.

4. The presence of detectives familiar with the notables who have been invited, and also the gate-crashers who attempt to come without the proper invitations.

5. The presence at the door of the hostess herself at the head of a reception committee.

6. The employment of burly "bouncers" to throw fear into the hearts of an uninvited aspirant.

7. The compilation of a "blacklist" of gate-crashers, which will be exchanged among hostesses. The presence of anyone's name on this list will be tantamount to social ostracism.

The militant attitude of the entertainers has resulted in many piquant incidents. At a recent fashionable ball, the austere hostess approached a young girl, demanding that she show her invitation card. The girl replied that she had none, but that she had been invited orally by the son of the house.

The hostess immediately demanded that she leave. The girl, shocked and mortified, ran home to her mother. The next day, the hostess received the following letter, signed with the name of one of England's most important and formidable leaders of society—nothing less than a Duchess.

"Dear Madam," it read, "I am very glad you sent my daughter away from your ball last night. It is a credit to you that you realized that the affair was in no manner fitted for her."

When a man wants to have company for dinner he has to ask his wife, and she has to ask the cook. Who said this is a free country?

Whitty Mullen Returns To Cloverleaves Lineup

Star Guard Back, Also Dilsworth, McCarthy, Benny, Linnell, Pawnees Here Sunday.

Possessed with a grim determination to win back their football title held so firmly for three years, the Cloverleaves will try the lid off their 1928 grid season Sunday afternoon with the New Britain Pawnees at Hickey's Grove.

Although the team will not be definitely selected until tonight's practice session, Manager Eddie Coughlin stated last night that he thought the Cloverleaves were stronger this year than last by quite a bit. The acquisition of Jerry Fay as coach has boosted the Cloverleaves' stock skyward.

The Pawnees gave the Cloverleaves a tough battle last year, neither team being able to score. Manager Coughlin stated that the team had come to terms with Tom Hickey regarding playing the games at Hickey's Grove.

The Cloverleaves are much elated over the decision of Steve "Whitty" Mullen, star guard, to return. Mullen is a truck driver for a company in New ven, but will be in the lineup every Sunday as will Ted McCarthy, star end, who is working for the Edison Electric Company in Brooklyn.

Other additions to the team include Paul Dilsworth, guard on the old Majors, Jim Benny, former Eagle end, Jack Linnell and Harold Ford, the colored sensation whose work will be watched with eager interest by the fans Sunday. Coach Fay has promised to use Ford at halfback and many are anxious to see just how good this University of Atlanta flash really is.

Dr. A. B. Moran has been elected president of the Cloverleaves and he will be present at all games with his medical kit to treat injured players. A tent will be put up for the purpose of the field. Stanley Janzoga, a tackle, candidate, has been named treasurer of the team.

GREEN TEAM PLANS FOR WORLD SERIES

Decides to Go by Auto; List of Eligible Players; Team Invites Herald Sports Editor.

About fifteen persons will make up the Manchester Green baseball party which will go to the World Series in New York next week barring, of course, a big upset whereby neither the Yanks or Giants win a pennant, something which is regarded as highly improbable. At a meeting last night, it was definitely decided to make the trip in automobiles instead of by boat, the latter idea being dropped because of the cold weather. The party will leave Manchester Thursday morning and will return home sometime Sunday night, it is expected.

Players now with the club who have been with the team all season and are therefore eligible to go on the free trip are Captain Herbert Stevenson, Frank Walliet, Eddie Boyce, Joe Prentice, Bobby Boyce, Jack Linnell, Joe Dimlow, Billy Dowd, Fred Burkhar, Frank Brennan, Jerry Sullivan, Joe Picaut, Arthur St. John and Mascot Truman Cowles.

Elmo Mantelli, Von Deck and Ben Cheney were eligible, but will not be here. Dimlow is not going and neither the Boyce brothers may be able to get off work. Manager Sam Prentice has also invited Arthur Woodbridge, owner of the field where the Green played its home games this season, and Thomas W. Stone, Herald sports editor, both of whom, Prentice said, have done a lot toward making the Green's season successful.

Farrell Calls Jimmy Foxx Best Player In American

By HENRY L. FARRELL

Lou Gehrig, the bustling first baseman of the New York Yankees, won the contest in 1927 for the American League's most valuable player prize in a walk. With Babe Ruth ineligible for the prize, the young first baseman was by far the outstanding player of the season and he was almost an unanimous choice of the voting committee of baseball writers.

This year there is no player in the league who stands out as prominently as George Sisler, the Babe, Walter Johnson, Roger Peckinpaugh, George Burns and Gehrig did when they won the prize.

There are, of course, a number of prominent candidates, but they are grouped closely together and the competition will be keener than it ever has been before. And under these conditions there will be plenty of argument over the fitness and merit of the winner.

The outstanding candidates would seem at the present time to be Tony Lazzeri and George Pipgras, of the New York Yankees; Jimmy Foxx, of the Philadelphia Athletics; Ralph Kress and Sam Gray, of the St. Louis Browns; Bob Reeves, of the Washington Senators; Charlie Jamieson and Carl Lind, of the Cleveland Indians; Willie Kamm, of the Chicago White Sox, and Big Ed Morris, of the Boston Red Sox.

Community And Green Ready For Final Contest

Back To One Game Lead With But Three To Play

Cards Still Head Nationals; Yankees Almost Assured of the Pennant in the American League.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Sept. 28.—Just between one blindfold tester and another, it is the writer's disquieting story this morning that five things still can happen to the comical situation in the National League before its conclusion, three games and two days hence. It simply isn't my fault, either that about six or seven of them can happen to John McGraw.

He blocked his own "counter" very deftly with his countenance yesterday when he failed to bring his Giants home to anything better than a cut down the middle with the Cubs while the Cardinals were running all over the Braves up in Boston. As one result, the Cards again were one game in front this morning, this time with only three to play. As another, the Giants now find that they must take the next two from the Cubs in order to be certain of making Sunday's finale with the cards mean the slightest thing at the play off.

The Other Race So much for the National League. The Yankees twice defeated the Tigers yesterday, so little for the American. The circumstance just about placed the Yanks in the position of being dormie two and a half. If I fall to make myself clear, this ordinarily means about six and seven-eighths in American money. However, it will mean about a quarter of a million to the Yankees for it almost assured them of the pennant.

Two and a half games in front, with only three to play, they are in the unnumbered position of needing only one more victory for themselves or one more defeat for the Athletics to make the matter definite and official.

Some Eventualities But the National League stretch drive still goes merrily onward and quite possibly will be at it still by Sunday morning. There are several eventualities that can produce this effect. One of them would make the two contenders win both of their remaining games against outside opposition and then play each other to the death on Sunday. This same thing can happen if each win and lost a game. Enroute; also, if each lose two. In each of these surmises, however, it is noted that the Giants must give the rap to the situation all the way. From now on, they merely are fighting for a tie.

They could get it by Saturday night by breaking even in the next two with the Cubs provided the Cards lost two to the Braves. And they even could go into the lead by winning two while the Cards were blowing two. You don't want to forget, either, that Shinoia might be very good for that schoolgirl complexion. All we know is that stranger things haven't happened and won't until the Cards lose two straight to the Braves.

Being all for plausibility, even when unhampered by facts, the writer would prefer to deal with the possibility that the Cards will win their next two and the Giants break even. When and if that happens—bloody. The race is over.

Sunday Setback However, the chances of a Sunday showdown between the pair still are as good as 3 to 2. The Cards are almost sure of at least one more decision in Boston, with Alexander ready to go, but upon what they may wish to do about Sherdel and Mitchell in the other game rests their opportunity for a clean up. Mitchell hasn't finished either of the last two games he started and isn't anybody's idea of a boon to humanity in the first place. But Sherdel has been over-pitched during the last week and may not be ready by tomorrow. Besides, they might want to hold him out for the possibility of a "do or don't" game on Sunday.

The Giants, however, are in something of a tough spot with their pitching. They beat Root yesterday but wasted Hubbell when Lindstrom fouled out with the tying and winning runs on third and second and the next three balls and no strikes. It isn't likely that the player decided on that one, either. If there is anything that irks John McGraw, it is initiative in a ball player. Given a choice, he probably would rather see a broad knife in a ball player, even one of his own. This strategy undoubtedly was John's own, which automatically made it clever stuff, indeed. That's right, you're wrong, he says. John is that way. Always ready to admit that the other fellow may be wrong.

Anyhow, John has one possible winner today in Larry Benton but tomorrow he must come back with Fitzsimmons who hasn't finished a game in ten days. This doesn't make the situation look too good and it gets rapidly no better when you consider that the Cubs are ready with Bush and Blake, who between them have won four out of five from the Giants this year.

ATHLETICS' CASE SEEMS HOPELESS

If New Yorks Win or They Lose Today the Well Known Jig is Up.

By LES CONKLIN

New York, Sept. 28.—The American League coroner may perform an autopsy upon the Philadelphia Athletics this afternoon. Cause of death, if the patient succumbs, may be a New York victory over Detroit today, a Chicago triumph over the A's, or both.

Which is to say that the Yankees will clinch their third successive pennant if they trim the Tigers again today or if the Mackmen lose to the White Sox. Lefty Grove beat the Sox yesterday, 5 to 3 but the Yanks two-timed Detroit, 4 to 3 and 3 to 5, and increased their lead to 2 1/2 games. Each contender has only three more games to play.

Connie Mack's cause looks hopeless. The Yanks have lost three games in a row before, of course, but are not likely to do so at this stage of the party.

Today's Hurlers Rube Walberg is ready to carry the A's standard into battle today. Earl Whitehill appears to be Detroit's best bet to stop the Yanks; Manager Huggins was undecided whether to pitch Pipgras, Zachary or Johnson.

Annoyed by his ailing knee, Eabe Ruth yesterday decided to overcome this handicap by the simple expedient of knocking the ball out of the lot so that he could trot around to the home plate at his leisure; homers No. 51 and 52 was the result.

While Ruth's emergence from his hitting slump increased New York's chances of victory in the pennant race and in the World Series, the club's hospital list was augmented by an injury to Earl Combs, center fielder. He crashed against a concrete wall and sprained his right wrist.

The Yanks took twelve out of 22 games with the Tigers this year and have captured their season's series with every club in the League. No team in the National League can boast of a similar record.

The Field of the Cloth of Gold was the scene of an interview between Henry VIII of England and Francois I of France.

WHY QUESTION THEM? If the Yankees and the Cardinals will score so flush the surplus could be divided among the younger players who had to do the heavy work through the whole season.

NEED GOING OVER If the Yanks are beaten in the American League pennant race there are certain to be a number of changes made in the club during the winter.

ROOKIES WON'T DO The club will not depend entirely upon the gamble that any one of the fine prospects that have been bought in the minor leagues will fill the vacancy.

VARIETY

There never was a time when so much expert advice on diet was given gratuitously as right now. Almost every newspaper and family magazine has a health department conducted by some really competent medical authority and most of their recommendations are concerned with what folks should eat, and how.

Sum them all up and strike an average, and what you learn is that the most diversified diet is the best. But eat everything—so long as it doesn't disagree with your tummy.

Which is equivalent to saying that the best place to buy your foods is one where not only is the quality of the very highest but the variety the most extensive. Pinehurst carries a great many food products not found in the average food shop. To housewives who are not yet on Pinehurst's list of customers we suggest that if you fail to find the out-of-the-ordinary articles of diet elsewhere, phone an inquiry to this store. The chances are big that we'll have it.

This is FRIDAY NIGHT PHONE SERVICE EVENING. Though the store will be closed, three phones will operate till 9 o'clock. Your week-end order goes out at 8 tomorrow morning if you wish it that early. And absolutely correct.

SMUGGLER CONVICTED
Philadelphia, Sept. 28.—Success today crowned the government's efforts to convict persons behind the attempt to smuggle $1,000,000 worth of liquor into Philadelphia aboard the steamer Bulko.

The fourth Bulko trial ended today when a Federal Jury convicted Jack Murphy, of Boston, executive officer of the ship, of smuggling and acquitted John McCambridge, of New York, one of the alleged owners of the ship, of charges of smuggling and conspiracy.

Two of the four men brought to trial in the case had already been freed when juries in the other three trials disagreed.

KAY JEWELRY CO.'S 14TH ANNIVERSARY

Hartford Store to Conduct Special Sale in Observance.

Just fourteen years ago, in Reading, Pennsylvania, the first Kay store started in business selling quality jewelry on a new and unique credit plan with the slogan, "Your Promise To Pay Is Good With Kay." From this humble beginning, the Kay organization has become the world's largest credit jewelry store, operating thirty-one stores in the principal cities of the United States.

Special patronage accorded them in the past, the Kay stores throughout the country are conducting special sales offering the finest watches, diamonds and jewelry at greatly reduced prices, and on special terms as low as 14c weekly.

The Hartford Kay store at 1047 Main Street, will start their big anniversary event on Saturday, September 29th, and Manager B. Golding has given his assurance that it will be the greatest in the history of the local Kay store. The store has been attractively decorated for this important event, and practically everything in the store except a few restricted articles are featured at exceptional savings.

H. MINTZ TO RE-OPEN STORE ON OAK STREET

H. Mintz will reopen his popular priced store at 35 Oak Street, South Manchester, tomorrow. Mr. Mintz formerly conducted a store at this place but leased it for a short time while he was engaged in opening up his present store at Depot Square at the north end and rebuilding the building it is in and several adjoining properties. Now that this work is completed he feels that he can give time to the operation of both stores. The Oak Street store will carry a complete line for men, women and children, including shoes and domestics. The store has been entirely repainted and is in fine shape. Very special values are being offered for the opening.

A tribe has been discovered in New Guinea that lives within the crater of a volcano. This will be read with appreciation by apartment dwellers who know how mean a janitor can be.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Debating club will hold its first session next Friday afternoon in Room 15. Although the club did not win the Triangular debate last year it spent a very active season planning and presenting several debates at the regular weekly assemblies. This policy was very successful, and it is planned to continue it this year. Seven members of the Triangular team will graduate this year, and it is hoped that these debates will bring to light material for next year's teams.

It has been definitely decided to hold the dancing classes this year, and the first classes will be held October 12 and other classes on succeeding Fridays. The beginners' class will be held from 4 to 5 o'clock, and the advanced classes from 5 to 6. Pupils may register up to the day of the first classes. The price for the twelve sessions will be $2.25 and this price includes admission to the grand final session at the close of the course.

Football and Somanhis Events were the main topics for discussion at yesterday's assembly, and there were several speakers on each topic. After the conclusion of the usual opening exercises, Principal Quimby made several announcements and then introduced Sherwood Trueman, Roy Johnson and William Johnson, presidents of the Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes respectively. The remainder of the assembly was then placed in charge of the Senior class president. The first part of the program was devoted to the Somanhis Events subscription drive. The first speaker was Editor-in-chief Jacob Rubnow, who gave a brief summary of important facts concerning the publication. Business Manager Leslie Buckland then told of the plans in the campaign to bring about a 100 per cent Somanhis year. Faculty Advisor Mr. C. Davis was the final speaker for Somanhis and he announced the continuation of the "Competitive System" whereby students compete for positions on the Somanhis staff. He urged the students to co-operate with the staff by contributing literary material so that there might be no decrease in the high standards attained by the paper in past years. Following this speech a few cheers were given under the direction of Cheer Leader James Wilson and then a new cheer-song was rehearsed under the direction of Miss Dorward.

The next speaker was "Bob" Treat, captain of the football team. In his speech, which kept the assembly in an uproar with several cleverly-told humorous stories, he promised a victory for Manchester High in her game with East Hartford, and asked the girl students to support the team to the best of their ability. Principal Quimby was the next speaker and he, too, predicted an overwhelming victory for the home team and he asked the students to join in the procession behind the band in the march to the field. Superintendent Verplanck followed Principal Quimby and he congratulated the students on having a splendid team, a very efficient coach, and a fine playing field. He recalled several amusing incidents of the times when he played football and urged the players to become instilled with a true "desire to win," such as John L. Sullivan displayed when he was champion. Superintendent Verplanck's talks are always very greatly appreciated by the students and this was especially true of the one which he gave yesterday. The final speaker was U. J. Luplien, one of the most ardent rooters for the High school. He too, told of several incidents of football in the time when he played for Harvard. His speech placed emphasis on the benefits to be derived from participation in sports, and related briefly stories about several great athletes that the town has produced during the past few years. He stated that rooters played a large part in determining the outcome of athletic contests, and he urged every student to be at the field in order to aid the team in rolling up a large score against East Hartford.

AUTO RACES AT DANBURY

Ira Vail Will Conduct Events At Danbury Fair, Oct. 6.

Again the climax of the big Danbury Fair will be the automobile races. The dates of the 1928 Fair are October 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, and the motor events will take place on Saturday, October 6. Everyone is eager to hear the hum and to see the drivers spin round the track; from the time the cars line up before the judges' stand, through elimination contests and on as they tear over the stretches, flash round curves, everyone is on tip toe. Well known drivers with Ira Vail in charge assure an afternoon of real sport this year if the weather man is kind.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (403) Our Presidents

Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher. In the election of 1876 both the Democratic candidate, Samuel J. Tilden of New York, and the Republican, Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio, claimed to have been chosen.

It was hard to know who really had been elected, because in some of the southern states there were two governments, each claiming to be the right one.

A special court was appointed, called an Electoral Commission, and decided in favor of Hayes. But many still believe Tilden was elected.

Hayes called back the soldiers from the southern states, which proved another blow to the alliance between negroes and carpetbaggers.

LETTER GOLF

MIDIRON OR SPADE?

Every golf bug has a lot of HANDY TOOLS for use in difficult places. Letter golf bugs can use their handiest here, for par is eight. Perhaps you can beat the solution on another page.

Handy Tools word search grid with letters H, A, N, D, Y, T, O, O, L, S.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus changes, COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW HEW, HEN. 2-You can change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

Divorce is not always a permanent waive. It's called cold cash because we don't keep it long enough to get it warm.

SENSE and NONSENSE

WILL IT COME TO THIS? If fight fans formed the gallery at a championship golf tournament, we might hear something like this: 'Awright, big boy, do yer stuff—C'mon, y'big stiff—swing on it—Let's go—Wot is this, a livin' statchoo act?—Lookit how he ears flap—Paste it, y'sap, paste it—Hey, y'sap, paste it—Hey, referee, h... about some action?—Here we go now—Woooooo—missed it a mile—Somebody hand him a paddle—Wot is this, a posthole diggin' contest?—If that boy's a golf champion I'm a Lindbergh—At's right, kiddo, try another club—Give 'im a basketball an' see if he can hit it—C'mon, y'big hick—Can't stallin'—Lookit the tee he's buildin'—Wot is that, fella? 'ke's Peak?—Hey, why doncha tak tractor over to th' beach an' dr's back a couple more truckloads' f sand?—He's gonna get it even w' his shoulders an' then swing on it, w' a tennis racket—We're o' again—all hand on deck for the sandstorm—step on it, big boy, step on it—Fore!—Five!—Five!—Five ninety eight—Owooooo! Blaah! Throw hi mo!!'

A BRIGHT IDEA I'm just a poor weak woman! She whimpered with a sniffle. And he with great acumen Replied to her, 'Oh piffle! If you feel that way, why not wed? In union there is strength,' he said.

BOOTS ARE LIKE MEN Boots have soles; so have men. Boots sometimes get tight; so do men. Poor boots are run over; so are men. Boots will shine if polished; so will a man. Some boots are imitation calf; so are men. Boots are tanned; so are men—in their youth. Some boots can't stand much; neither can some men. A boot to be of much account must have a mate; so must a man. A boot when well heeled always feels comfortable; so does a man.

Complaining Wife: 'You said you'd go through fire and water for me.' Harassed Husband: 'Well, haven't I? The two combined make hot water, and goodness knows you've kept me going through that.'

Manchester college graduate's mother: 'Here's a letter from our boy at last.'

His Dad: 'Has he got a job yet?'

'Yes, he's washing dishes in a restaurant.'

'That's good. He told us he w's gonna clean up a million.'

A young woman in this neighborhood has gained a reputation for remarkable poise, not having shot her husband in the abdomen yet, though he has been her bridge partner several times lately. A writer says: 'As long as there are two women and a man on earth there will be war.' Why the m? Love is like an apple pie—a little crust and lots of apple sauce.

The little lamb said, 'Oh, all right! I'll scamper now right out of sight, and go back home to wait for little Mary to return. She goes to school now, every day, which gives her little time to play. But I suppose that that's all right, 'cause little folks must learn.'
