SAYS GARDENING IS FINEST OF PROFESSION

H. A. Deal, Who is One Himself, Talks Interestingly to the Garden Club.

Horace A. Deal, gardener for a number of years for William Maxwell of Rockville, was the speaker at the November meeting of the Manchester Garden club Monday evening.

The speaker referred to his profession as the "most beautiful and the most artistic and honorable in existence."

Usually the owner of the garden pays the bills, and his interest stops there, but it is Miss Deal whom the speaker addressed.

Mr. Deal, in explaining why gardening was one of the most ancient of professions, cited the creation of the world.

Mr. Deal gave the members a lot of valuable information in regard to rose culture, which flower he considers the most beautiful of all.

George E. Rix was chosen librarian of the Garden Club, and the library, which is growing rapidly, will be housed for the present in the Chamber of Commerce headquarters.

Mystic Review, Woman's Benefit association at its meeting last evening in Odd Fellows hall elected Mrs. Julia McShean Rawson of 127 Main street, collector of the lodge.

There will be a Children's Clinic at Manchester Memorial hospital annex tomorrow afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock.

London.—British newspapers complain that United States corporations are attempting, with success, to gain financial control of the electrical industry in Great Britain.

In support of their contention they point out that the great firm of the British Thomson-Houston Company, with works at Rugby, Birmingham, Coventry and Willesden, is controlled by American interests.

Some thousands of the issued Preference shares are in American hands, and several American directors sit on the Board of this American-controlled British Company.

It is also declared that the Anglo-American Debenture Corporation hold, as trustees, several million pounds of debentures in the English Electric Company and that a working agreement is believed to exist between the American Westinghouse Electric Company and Metropolitan Vickers, one of the largest British concerns.

MAKE ELABORATE PLANS FOR THE INAUGURATION

Big Parade on March 4 Has Hoover's Consent But No Dance.

Washington, Nov. 7.—An inauguration reminiscent to some extent of the old days will mark the induction of President-Elect Herbert Hoover into office on March 4, under plans materializing rapidly among political and civic leaders here.

On one thing, however, Mr. Hoover was said to be firm. He will not agree to a revival of the inaugural ball—not that he holds any briefs against dancing, but solely because such an affair does not appeal to him personally.

Hoover thanks Smith for his kind message.

Close Election; Rest of Democratic Ticket Expected to Pull Through Also.

New York, Nov. 7.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democrat, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was elected governor over Attorney General Albert Ottinger, Republican, by approximately 50,000 votes, final returns showed today.

United States Senator Royal S. Copeland was re-elected by a plurality of about 200,000. He defeated Alanson B. Houghton, of Corning, former ambassador to Great Britain.

The rest of the Democratic state ticket is expected to pull through by pluralities ranging from 25,000 to 50,000.

Other state candidates who have been carried into office by Roosevelt include: Lieutenant Governor—Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

Attorney General—Albert Conway of Brooklyn.

Comptroller—Morris S. Tremaine of Buffalo (re-elected).

Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals—Leonard C. Crouch of Syracuse.

Close Race Roosevelt goes into the governor's chair in one of the closest gubernatorial elections in the state's history.

There were indications early today that Republican leaders might demand an official recount. Until the final returns were tabulated Ottinger was confident he had been elected.

Two of the chief pledges made by Roosevelt in the campaign were that he would carry out Gov. Smith's policies of state government, and that he would veto any attempt by the Republican Legislature to enact a state prohibition enforcement law.

YOUTH AND ROMANCE IN 'THE FIRST KISS'

Picture Co-Stars Fay Wray and Gary Cooper—Opens at State Tomorrow.

A throbbing love tale, with an undercurrent of fraternal pride is "The First Kiss," co-starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper.

The story is an original one written by Tristram Tupper, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the name of "Four Brothers." In transferring the tale to the screen, Paramount has neither added nor taken away anything from the story.

Fay Wray is beautiful and accomplished actress. Her personality fairly shines from the screen. Gary Cooper, who is lean and tall, has everything to make him the popular actor he is.

The story briefly centers around the love of a young man of poor state for a girl who is rich. His three brothers are inclined to be lazy, but having family pride the brother, who is Gary Cooper, forces them to choose professions and he sends them to school.

In the supporting cast are: Lane Chandler, Leslie Featon, Paul Fix, Malcolm Williams and Monroe Owsley. Roland V. Lee directed.

The companion feature for tomorrow and Friday brings another popular co-starring team to the fore in the personage of Jack Mullan and Dorothy Mackall, who are to be seen in "Waterfront," their latest First National picture.

As an added attraction for tomorrow and Friday, the State is presenting Walter Seifert, guest artist, a program of special musical interpretations.

WALTER SEIFERT AT STATE TOMORROW

Music lovers of Manchester and surrounding towns are due for what is believed to be one of the finest treats of the season, if they should take occasion to visit the State Theater tomorrow or Friday.

The treat comes in the form of a brilliant organ presentation with Walter Seifert, popular radio artist, presiding at the console of the mighty State Theater organ. Mr. Seifert has been engaged by the management as guest-organist for the two days, and in all probability, a record-breaking crowd will be on hand at the theater to welcome him.

BALDWIN'S YOUNGER SON IS WORKING AT IRON WORKS FORGE

London — Windham Baldwin, younger son of Premier Stanley Baldwin works on a forge at the ancestral iron works at Bewdley. British people like him because he supports himself on the few pounds he earns rather than live in idleness on his father's wealth.

And he is a worker who does not stop to take breath. "I'm just one of the staff," he says. "I'm nobody in particular. I work like everybody else. There's nothing astonishing in that."

Windham Baldwin prefers steel to speech. He has never appeared in politics. He is slender and pale with a slightly drooping reddish moustache and bears no resemblance to his father except in general coloring, and the fact that he smokes a cherrywood pipe incessantly. Very short-sighted he always wears large horn-rimmed spectacles which give him the appearance of an English Harold Lloyd.

He is reckoned to be the cleverest member of the family and in his spare time acts as factor for his father's estate at Astley. He does this without payment, out of respect for his father, to whom he is devoted.

The elder son, Oliver, is a Socialist and is likely to win Dudley, his industrial constituency, at the next election, in direct opposition to his father's beliefs.

MASSACHUSETTS GETS DE HAVILAND FACTORY

Boston—Although a site has not yet been definitely chosen, it was believed that Springfield will be the location of a new factory in Massachusetts for the construction of Moth and De Haviland planes, by the Moth Aircraft Corp., licensee in the United States of the De Haviland Aircraft Co., Ltd., of England.

Definite announcement that the factory would be established was made by Minton M. Warren, president of the corporation.

The new firm will manufacture planes of the "D. H. Moth" type and has announced its intention of starting production in the spring. Preliminary plan: call for manufacture of six planes a week, provision to be made for early enlargement if the demand for the planes warrants expansion.

At the start 150 men will be employed and as soon as production has increased, the number will be

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has never changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

PRETZEL WITH A KICK

Columbia, Pa.—The bee sat on the pretzel, held in Miss Marie's hand. She put the pretzel in her mouth and it stung to beat the band. All this came to pass on a sunny day recently when Marie Banner held a bunch of flowers in one hand and a thirst-producer in the other. In between bites a honey-bee quit his perch on a flower and proceeded to sample the pretzel—without Marie's knowledge, of course. Shortly thereafter Miss Marie was having considerable difficulty with a swollen tongue.

1928 By NEA Service Inc. RUTH DEWEY GROVES AUTHOR OF "WHEN A GIRL LOVES" "LOVE FOR TWO"

"I see," Dan said heavily. "You want to marry money . . ." Jerry flushed. "Yes," she said proudly. "I want to marry money."

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

JERRY RAY thinks love is a delusion and decides to marry for money. Her vacation plans are spoiled by the loss of her savings and nothing remains but to go camping with her roommate, MYRTLE. Fate soon introduces her to ALESTER CURSTAIRS when he crashes his airplane into their camp. Her heart responds to DAN HARVEY, his pilot, but Alester is struck by her beauty and showers attentions upon her. A letter from her mother revealing poverty and illness strengthens Jerry's determination to try to marry money.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I've lost my job," Jerry found herself saying. It surprised her. She hadn't meant to say anything like that. It was no answer at all to an important proposal. Yes, it was, too. She meant that she was unstrung, in no frame of mind to settle a matter as momentous as her marriage.

The green light was on. Dan was seeing his answer in her half-averted eyes, hanging on her next words. Her first utterance had filled him with misgivings; it did not seem likely to preface an acceptance. "Wait until we get out of this," he said quickly. "I'm sorry I was so abrupt, but I couldn't help it. I've been holding it back so long. Jerry smiled. It would be three weeks tomorrow night, since they'd first met. The thought gave her courage. Surely they couldn't be so deeply in love with each other in that short space of time as to make it heartbreaking to part.

They drove on in silence until they had reached a place on Riverside Drive where Dan could park the car. A magnificent view of the Hudson river was before them but neither gave a thought to it. Dan insisted that Jerry look at him. Holding her eyes with his own he asked her if she loved anyone else. That question Jerry could answer without hesitating. "Please don't talk to me about love," she evaded. "It's only a pit-fall."

Dan might have laughed at her response if he himself hadn't become such a hopeless victim of the tender passion. As it was he interpreted her answer to mean that she had never experienced love . . . mating love. If that were so, then she could be in love with Alester unless . . . "Why do you say that?" he asked sharply. "Have you ever come to grief through loving someone?" He mentally he swore an oath that he'd choke the life out of Alester Carstairs if he'd made Jerry suffer. "I've never been in love," Jerry said and now she dropped her eyes. Dan reached out and seized her hands. "I want to marry you, Jerry," he said. "I've never before felt like this about a girl. But when I gathered you up out of the debris of that wreck and held you while your breath came back and your eyelids fluttered open after I had begun to believe we had killed you, I got the first hunch that I'd met the only girl I'd ever want to spend the rest of my life with."

"No," Dan said. "But I thought I had a wild idea that you felt as I did." "But you shouldn't," Jerry cried to protest. "I never encouraged you."

"That's right," Dan agreed. "If I hadn't been a fool I wouldn't have imagined that you'd listen to me. But you know, Jerry, for a little while last Sunday, I thought . . . see here, you say you aren't in love. Do you think there's anything better than that?" Jerry remained silent for a moment.

"Yes," she said. "I do, I want a future that's secure. Marrying a poor man is too big a risk. I've seen the romance of a lot of marriages wash away in the dishpan."

Dan, too, sat silent a moment before answering. Finally, "I see," he said heavily. "You want to marry money."

A swift rush of color mounted to Jerry's cheeks as she caught a hint of reproach in his voice. "What right had he to reproach her? Was his mother's soul starved for beauty? Did she carry pails of water to plants that were doomed by family selfishness? Maybe, but if it were true Dan Harvey was both blind and selfish to be forgetting it. Of course there was the prospect that he came from a better home than she. In that case how could he know the bitterness of poverty, the ugly, dwarfing effect it had upon a person?"

"Jerry, Jerry," he pleaded. "You don't know what you are talking about. Why, girl, if you did that you'd miss all that we are born for."

He had a vain hope that she could be interested in love even if she had not experienced it. If he could but find words to save her pride, to prevent her disillusionment, make her give up this crazy idea before she learned that Alester Carstairs was not a marrying man. It was hopeless. The more he discussed it the more he realized that Jerry's disbelief in the lasting qualities of love and her fear of its temptations was genuine. He felt compelled to warn her even at the risk of incurring her anger. For the first time in his life he regretted his inability to exercise tact. He tried to laugh, to start it off carelessly. "Well, I hope when you start your campaign for a rich husband you will look up the records of the eligibles before you take the dive," he said lightly, or as lightly as he could. He was placing himself in an enviable position, knocking the other man. He hated that.

"No, I don't," Dan answered, "unless you insist upon it. A man can't think formally of a girl he loves as I love you, Jerry."

"Then you'd better take me home," she told him quickly; "and . . . and I don't think we should see each other again."

Dan stared hard at the haughty profile she turned to him. How dared she look like that—the cold-blooded little fortune hunter! His own features took on a coldness to equal her own and he faced about to start the motor and move off with the first abandonment of care in driving that Jerry had ever seen him show.

"I know you despise me for knocking," he flared out unexpectedly; "but you're such a blind idiot I've got to do it. Why can't you understand that an idle young whelp like . . . well, like Alester Carstairs, for instance, hasn't as much chance to escape common temptations as a fellow who is too busy to spend his time with pretty girls?"

Jerry smiled, a surface smile. "Well," she said, "I don't know whether you consider me so very pretty but at any rate you appeared to have a lot of time to hang around camp, and you're here. You don't seem to be any busier than Alester."

"That isn't fair," Dan objected. "I'm busy all right, but I'd chuck my job with Carstairs if it weren't for you."

"What have I to do with it?" Jerry snapped. "He was going a little bit too far when he thought he had to order his life to allow him to be her chaperon."

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton ©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Don't be too quick to call your child a bad girl or a bad boy. It may not mean very much to you but it means a whole lot to them. If a child is told over and over that he is a bad boy, slowly but surely he will be set apart as something unfit in his own imagination. Then watch out. Once a child gets the idea that he is that bewilderingly different thing, "bad," he is likely to get a mental kink something like this: "I'm bad. I don't know exactly what that means but I must be different from nice people. As nobody expects me to do good things it doesn't matter much how I act."

POISONING BY CANNED FOOD EASY TO AVOID
By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.
Commercial canning is now so standardized that but little danger is associated with eating commercially canned products. Food poisoning is becoming more infrequent and education of the public as to its dangers is making less likely cases of such poisoning on a large scale.

Destroy Contaminants
Indeed, it is advisable to mix the contents of such jars with lye and then bury the jar and the contents. Otherwise, if the contents are merely placed in the garbage, they may be eaten by chickens or by household pets which will die. If by mice or other predatory animals which will spread the infection. The majority of cases of food poisoning which have occurred in recent years have resulted from employing home canned food. Home canning is highly desirable economically and because it makes

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SCAMNER

So rarely do I find myself agreeing with a mere male on the subject of "women—what ails 'em most?" that the discovery of such agreement must be straightway handed on. I find myself in strange accord with G. D. Eaton, a magazine editor. Discussing "Freedom for Women," such observations as these interest me: "Even fewer women than men are able to see that there is a vast difference between freedom and independence, and I know none of the freedom-shouters who has the least conception of the latter word. Someone is always footing the bill for them and paying it. I grant that a lot of these vehement 'busses' have their freedom, but almost always it is costing some man a pile of jack or, if not a man, then a mother who gave over the idea of freedom not later than the day that her daughter was born."

I was inclined to object at this point until I remembered that the differentiates twist "freedom" and "independence." He's right—the women who are making their own livings in toto, and good ones, too, are not the women who squawk about "freedom" or approach their earning of bread and butter in any spirit of a theory being worked out. They simply buckle down to it as taken-for-granted things, exactly as does a man earning his own living and that of others. Whether it's enjoyable or not is not often thought of; it just has to be done, and that's that.

Tris Speaker On Way To The Minors After 22 Years On Diamond

In 1920 Money Could Not Have Bought Him—Is to Go to Newark of the International.

By DAVIS J. WALSH New York, Nov. 7.—On or about November 15, announcement probably will be made to the effect that one of three great games in all the lore of modern baseball has written itself into the comparative obscurity that goes with a minor league contract.

Reports from scouts on the frontier indicate that there is something of a stampede after the post that Walter Johnson vacated in Newark and that in the rush are such distinguished baseball men as George Slinn, Eddie Collins, Tris Speaker, Kid Gleason and some big minor league fellows.

The sudden interest that the big timers manifested in a minor league spot that had few attractions in the past was aroused when it became known that Johnson was paid $20,000 a year and that there was all kinds of talk in the treasury to be commanded for getting a winning ball club.

Money couldn't have bought this man in 1920 when he managed the world champion Cleveland Indians and played centerfield as no one ever has played it. He had the world by the throat then and practically a permanent job was assured him in Cleveland, even after the inevitable moment when the hands of life's time clock were to overtake him.

Indians And Senators Like Products Of Dixie College

New York, Nov. 7.—The Cleveland Indians, if Manager Peckinpaugh wishes, can start the 1929 pennant campaign with a southern college product at every post in the infield.

Likewise, the Washington Senators could do just about the same thing. During the last days of the 1928 race, an infield used often at Cleveland had Bolton at first, Lind at second, Burnett at shortstop and Joe Sewell at third.

Of this quartet, Bolton is given the last chance to hold down a regular job next fall. If he fails, the Indians could give Eddie Morgan, a Tulane product, a chance at the job again.

Washington has Bobby Reeves of Georgia Tech at shortstop and thinks Jack Hayes, of Alabama, will take care of Harris' old job at second base. Mule Shirley, who attended a North Carolina college, is on hand in case Joe Judge slips at first and Grant Gillis, another Alabama product, will be ready to take care of third if Ossie Bluge doesn't go well.

It looks as if the Indians and the Senators are getting just about all their infield material from southern colleges.

Robert is signed to meet Firpo early next year. The affair will be held in Buenos Aires. Just think of that when you cut into that Thanksgiving turkey.

Besides that, the Chess Masters' tournament was held in Europe this year. Is there no end to the blessings that have fallen on America?

Remember the old days when the teams from the big universities used to be able to win their practice games? The trouble with sports in America, says a British writer, is that sports figures are "idolized, set upon pedestals and the athletes can do no wrong."

Boston, Nov. 7.—With Sunday sports advocates apparently having won the state-wide referendum, the fate of Rogers Hornsby was still in the balance today.
