

EXPRESS TRAIN BREAKS AXLE NEAR BOLTON

Bad Accident Narrowly Averted as Big Driving Wheel Snaps; Traffic De- layed Three Hours.

Railroad traffic was disrupted for three hours and nearly 200 persons were inconvenienced because of a train accident which occurred near Bolton Notch Depot at 7:28 this morning. No one was injured. The accident was of an unusual nature. The Boston express, No. 112, east bound, was speeding along on time when suddenly and without warning the main axle on the left driving wheel snapped causing the wheel and shaft, weighing nearly 4,000 pounds, to drag along the track bed. The engineer brought the train to a sudden stop. Train Stops Short Between fifty and sixty passengers were aboard the train at the time and, although uninjured, they were shaken up considerably and frightened by the sudden halting of the train. The fact that the mishap occurred on the straight stretch of track between Willimantic and Manchester prevented a much more serious accident. The disabled engine looked almost as if it were resting peacefully at the bottom of a rock ledge which rose to a height of nearly 100 feet.

Railroad officials said that had the axle broken at the point known as "Three Rail Curve" east of Steele's Crossing, the engine and train would undoubtedly have tumbled down the steep embankment at that point. The point where the accident did take place is about 300 yards east of the Bolton Club House. New rails were laid there a year ago and the road bed is exceptionally well ballasted.

Transfer Passengers
The engine did not leave the rails as a result of the broken axle. Passengers on the express train were transferred to another train which was sent to the scene from Willimantic and continued to their destinations. The Boston express was due to meet the commuters' train at Steele's Crossing a few minutes later.

The commuters' train was run onto a siding at Bolton Notch and the fifty odd passengers were taken to Hartford in two special buses rushed to the scene by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company. The accident, however, made the passengers, most of

COOLIDGE TAKES TRIP TO SOUTH

Makes Address at Dedic- ation of Bird Sanctuary; To Return Immediately.

Fayetteville, N. C., Aboard the Presidential Special Enroute to Florida, Feb. 1.—President Coolidge was making a flying visit to Florida today. This afternoon, he is scheduled to make the dedicatory address for the bird sanctuary and singing tower, or carillon, which have been set up for the American public at Mountain Lake, Florida, by Edward Bok, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Coolidge was due to arrive at Mountain Lake, located almost squarely in the center of the state, promptly at three o'clock this afternoon. Equally promptly, he will leave there to return to Washington at 9:15 p. m., tonight. All invitations to carry a white at various points in the east coast's winter playground have been ignored. The chief executive will spend six hours in Florida and then start right back for the national capital.

To Return Quickly
The President will spend 48 hours on the train for the purpose of this short visit. It is in keeping, however, with his trips in the past, when he had made long journeys away from Washington only to speak and then immediately retrain.

Oddly enough, Mr. Coolidge was to dedicate a bird sanctuary today in striking contrast to the fact that just two months ago he took up the sport of hunting small game. In the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, over the Thanksgiving holiday, he hunted quail mainly, it might be added. Through the Christmas-New Year period at Sapelo Island, Georgia, he shot wild pheasant, quail and turkey with much more success.

Brief as it was, the President got glimpses of much different weather today as his train moved south. When he left Washington last night it was snowing. Today, the weather steadily got balmer as the special proceeded south.

Five French Women Facing Guillotine

Paris, Feb. 1.—With four women today facing the guillotine, unless President Doumergue intervenes, a fifth, Mme. Paul Godin may take her place with them for shooting her husband because he shaved off his mustache.
Mr. Godin, a notary, arrived home from a three weeks trip just in time for lunch. As he took his place at the table, Mme. Godin demanded: "Why did you shave off your mustache; so some girl would think you were handsomer?"
M. Godin shrugged his shoulders, got up and started to leave the dining room. Mme. Godin snatched a revolver from a buffet drawer and rushed to stop him at the doorway.
"Go ahead and shoot," Godin is said to have remarked smiling, evidently thinking his wife was joking. She fired. The first bullet killed him.
Mme. Godin told the police that Godin was squandering her fortune with other women.
Junka Kures, Blanche Vabre, Mme. Ana David and Mme. Kurey were sentenced to death on charges of killing minors. Their cases are being debated merely on the principle of breaking a precedent of forty year by guillotining a woman.

"SNYDER" CASE OF SOUTH ENDS TODAY ON GALLOWS

Woman Meets Death First; Fifteen Minutes Later Her Companion in Murder, Dr. Dreher Also Meets Death.

Franklin Courthouse, La., Feb. 1. Like grotesque marionettes against the faded gray of the parish prison walls, Mrs. Ada Leboeuf and Dr. T. E. Dreher, her family physician and paramour dangled from the gallows this afternoon until they were dead.

It was a ghastly death for the triangle love plotters equally as horrible as the end they had Jim Beedle, a trapper, now a life-terminer, put to the woman's husband, James J. Leboeuf, whose dissected and weighted body was found in Lake Palaurde, 18 months ago.

Mrs. Leboeuf cringing and moaning went first at 12:10 p. m., and 15 minutes later the trap was sprung on the doctor, who protested his innocence to the end.

She moaned constantly, cringed and writhed. She shuddered and clung against the nearby wall a moment before the noose was tightened around her neck.
"Too Tight!"
"It's too tight," she groaned in agonized fear, her face pale and drawn beneath eyes which were covered with a mask.

Her feet were bound, and then at 12:30 p. m. the trap was sprung as she moaned, over and over, "Oh, God, isn't this a terrible thing—its murder."
"Oh God, have mercy on my soul."

Unlike Dr. Dreher, the woman did not refer to her guilt or innocence during her last few moments on earth. The physician's first words as he walked upon the scaffold were a bitter protestation of his innocence.
"We are not guilty," the physician wailed at the witnesses in the death chamber. They were hidden from his eyes by a white mask around his forehead.

"We are not guilty—we are dying for a crime we did not commit."
The investigation into the murder of William E. Jackson, county detective, in his home on Quarry street Tuesday evening will mark time until after Mr. Jackson is buried tomorrow afternoon. E. J. Hickey, Hartford's county detective, in active charge of the hunt for the person who killed Mr. Jackson today announced that the search would be suspended until after the services.

Funeral Tomorrow
Mr. Jackson will be buried in the new Willimantic cemetery after services at his home and in St. Paul's Episcopal church of which he was a member. Rev. Walker F. Borchert, of Edgewood, R. I., former pastor of the church, is to come here to conduct the services.

The funeral is expected to be the largest Willimantic has known in recent times. Full military honors who was a member of Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish War. The Spanish War veterans will have charge of the burial, while the American Legion Post is to turn out in full strength.

MAIL PILOT KILLED
WHEN PLANE CRASHES
Found Dead in His Machine by Searchers—Was Lost for Hours.

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 1.—Eugene Cecil, of McKeesport, Pa., air mail flier on the Pittsburgh-Cleveland route, was found dead in the cockpit of his plane eight miles south of here early today. His Travelair biplane was wrecked.

The plane was discovered by searchers who put out from here early this morning after an unidentified plane had been reported seen flying low over the surrounding country. Seven sacks of air mail were found intact.
Cecil was first reported seen over Uniontown, Pa., late last night when word was broadcast that an air mail pilot, long overdue at Bettis Field, Pittsburgh airport, was lost. The crash is believed to have occurred when Cecil, realizing he was lost and his fuel was about gone, attempted to land in a field.
Cecil left Cleveland last night for the Pittsburgh airport.

HOOVER HOOKS BIG SAILFISH; HIS FIRST ONE

President-Elect Very Happy Over His Catch—Trying for More Today; His Sec- retary Lands 3 of Them.

Long Key, Fla., Feb. 1.—With the taste of victory to spur him on, President-Elect Hoover today headed into the Gulf Stream hoping for another long tussle with a six foot sailfish.

He bears the marks of the typical deep sea fisherman. His hands are blistered and cut. His face, burned almost scarlet by the tropical sun, is peeling and giving him considerable pain. Nevertheless with the true sportsman's instinct, there was no thought of turning back to the shade and comfort of his Belle Isle retreat.

Gets First Sailfish.
Yesterday he tasted for the first time in a long life of fishing all over the world the thrill and triumph of actually pulling a sailfish into his boat. In these same waters two years ago he had a sailfish on his line but failed to land it. On his trip last week he had two bites by the fighting denizen of the sea. In one instance the fish was able to bite the line in two and in the other line fouled and broke. The one captured yesterday after a 25-minute struggle weighed 45 pounds and measured six feet in length.

Secretary Lucky.
While he was achieving his triumph after so many years fishing in what the guides had insisted was the best spot all along the Florida coast, his secretary, Lawrence Richey, pulled three out of the water, every one of them larger than that of which his chief was so proud, into a small boat within a couple of miles of executive offices at Belle Isle.

Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican national committee, fishing with Richey, captured two, also big ones, and Mark Wood of Nebraska, got one of the six fish which were proudly displayed at the boat house across from the Penney suite just before the wire was sent from Long Key announcing that Mr. Hoover had at last gotten his sailfish.

With his rod beside that of Justice Harlan F. Stone, Mr. Hoover lolls back and rests in a comfortable arm chair while a lookout keeps a keen watch for the purple-black fins of the sailfish. A few yards from the boat a wooden decoy, painted a brilliant red, bobs up and down in the water to lure the hungry "sea tigers."

SEARCH FOR SLAYER OF JACKSON HALTS

Detective Hickey Says He Will Suspend Probe Until After the Funeral.

Willimantic, Conn., Feb. 1.—The investigation into the murder of William E. Monarchists Parade in Germany

Denounced as a living threat against the German Republic, the "Steel Helmets" here are shown on parade at Hagdeburg, where they celebrated the foundation day of their organization. Seldte, leader of the strong monarchist group, is saluting the "Steel Helmet" banners in the upper photo as thousands of his followers passed in review.

FACING DEADLOCK ON BIG DRY FUND

House Sends Amendment Back to Senate by a Vote of 240 to 141.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Faced with the possibility of a deadlock between Senate and House over the $24,000,000 additional prohibition enforcement fund amendment, which might prevent passage of the urgent deficiency bill, administration leaders today launched a movement to bring about an agreement.

The bill was returned to the Senate by the House today with notice that the latter body had rejected the Senate amendments and requested a conference.

Not only were predictions made that the conference committees would find difficulty in reaching an agreement, but there was a possibility that one or both Houses might reject any proposal made.

Senate's Sentiment
The Senate displayed a strong sentiment for the $24,000,000 amendment by voting 50 to 27 to insert it in the deficiency measure, while the House yesterday rejected it by the crushing vote of 240 to 141.

With the short session rapidly nearing its end, a filibustering minority could prevent the passage of the bill, which carries $125,000,000 urgently needed by government departments, $75,000,000 of which is to pay tax refund awards. These awards bear interest.

Sad Memories
Administration leaders had poignant memories of the failure of the second deficiency bill two years ago when a filibuster over the Reed "slush fund" committee prevented its passage in the Senate. Extraordinary financial remedies were called into effect by President Coolidge to keep some government departments in operation.

Thus far there has been little disposition on either side to seek a compromise, and administration members of the House conference were determined to win the Senate conference committee over to a reversal of the Senate's position.

Bund up in the fight on the $24,000,000 fund, which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon declared was "not necessary" is the McKellar amendment which would require the Treasury to hold open hearings and make open decisions on all tax refunds over $10,000.

TO CONVENE COUNCIL
Rome, Feb. 1.—Pope Pius XI has decided to convene the eccumenical council at the end of 1930 in St. Peter's, it was learned at the Vatican today. The last council was interrupted by the war of 1870. The Pontiff's decision indicates progress toward a settlement of the conflict between the church and state.

BILLS CONTINUE TO FLOOD LEGISLATURE AT TODAY'S SESSION

BILLARD ASKS FOR DESTROYERS TO ENFORCE LAW

Head of Coast Guard Re- ports That More Ships and More Men Are Need- ed to Stop Rum Running.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The first step toward reorganization of the government's general war to make prohibition effective was taken today when Admiral F. C. Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard, submitted to Secretary Mellon recommendations for the strengthening that enforcement arm to meet the smuggling situation.

Admiral Billard's report for a five-year program of expansion of commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, and for replacement of obsolete and worn out vessels, will be studied by Under Secretary Ogden L. Mills, treasury budget officer, and then sent to Budget Director H. M. Ladd.

Present Plans
The present plan is to send the proposals to Congress next December. The program could not be put into effect under the proposed $24,000,000 additional dry appropriation, according to Mellon. Billard asked for 200 additional commissioned officers. That probably would permit the increase in rank of many of the old-time Coast Guard officers who have been serving for years in junior grades. It was pointed out at the Treasury that the addition to the commissioned personnel would have a tendency to attract more qualified material to the Coast Guard and report has not been finished, but it is regarded as sufficient to meet present conditions.

Damage Claims
A bill providing stringent regulations about damage claims made against public utilities corporations went in to the House. A person injured must file written notice of intention to claim damages not more than six months after the accident. He must also give a complete description of his accident to the company he is suing.

A bill limiting the enrollment at Storrs College to 500 was sent in to the House. The bill provides that preference shall be given to youths who want to study agricultural things.

Bills dividing Greenwich into taxing districts, making West Haven a separate probate district, and bills changing Waterbury's charter to a considerable extent, were presented also. Appropriations for Manchester's hospital, a State Armory at West Haven, and more room at the Meriden tuberculosis sanatorium also were handed in.

A complete revision of the health care laws of the state is indicated in another bill, and still another prescribes that any person practicing any healing arts shall be known as a physician.

District Bill
The New Haven district bill would put New Haven, Orange, West Haven, Woodbridge, Hamden, North Haven and East Haven all together. The commission on the bill would be made up of the four Senators from the section now in the Legislature, and three electors from each town. The bill provides that if the district commission be successful in abolishing the district, each town therein shall maintain its separate identity and government.

Senator Lawlor of Waterbury presented a bill that created much stir. His bill provides that the Connecticut Light and Power company charter be so amended as to compel a strict record of the votes of directors in each meeting. When directors have voted on the validity of property which is accepted as the basis for sale of stock, the directors shall be liable for the corporation for any amount of money that may be lost by fraud or misrepresentation in the proceeding.

A bill was sent to the Senate appropriating $200,000 to replace the main building of the Connecticut State Hospital in Middletown. A bill provides a fine of $200 for the exposure of poison in any place where animals may get access to the poison and suffer thereby.

THE SENATE
Hartford, Conn., Feb. 1.—Among bills received in the Senate today was one which would create a commission to investigate the advisability of establishing a metropolitan district within the limits of the county of New Haven. Senator George E. Hall, of New Haven, presented the bill.

Another bill fixes the following salaries for messengers of the Supreme and Superior courts: Hartford $1,800; Fairfield and New Haven counties each $1,600; Norwich and Waterbury, each $1,500; Winsted, $400 and Tolland, $300.

For Our Hospital
A bill appropriating $10,000 for the Manchester Memorial hospital also was introduced.

Others were repealing the entire personal tax law, authorizing

GERMANY ALARMED OVER TRADE WAR

American Firms Are Inva- ding That Country With a Variety of Goods.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—An American industrial invasion into Germany is now under way.

Germany is becoming alarmed at the growing number of American concerns entering the German manufacturing field in direct competition with German industry. The invasion is made possible by the extreme shortage of capital in Germany. A large part of Germany's capital reserves was destroyed by the war and inflation, and has not yet been replaced.

This invasion is concerned with the producing end of business and in addition to the growing importation into Germany of goods made in America.

Auto In Front Rank
The American automobile industry is in the front rank of this invasion, but American soap, cosmetic, fountain pen, refrigeration, vacuum cleaner, washing machine, baking powder and sanitary equipment industries are right behind it, even the American soft drink industry is preparing to join the host, though German beer and wine is as good as ever.

The invasion is also of significance to America. The goods produced by American-owned industry in Germany are intended not only for the German market, but also for export, especially to South America. This means that American capital is building up an industry in a foreign country to compete directly with American labor.

Wants Destroyers
Billard recommended that arrangements be made for a transfer of about 25 destroyers from the Navy to the Coast Guard. They would be used chiefly to replace obsolete destroyers now in use. Most of the destroyers patrolling the eastern coast are in bad condition and cost heavily to maintain.

Officials said that the Navy probably would interpose no objection to furnishing destroyers from the large laid-up fleet. They would be available to the Navy in case of war or other emergency.

At the same time Commissioner of Customs E. W. Camp was preparing a report for Secretary Mellon relative to requirements of that service to meet the activities of border smugglers and those operating at large seaports. Camp's report has not been finished, but it was understood would recommend a material increase in the border patrol, particularly that operating along the Canadian border. The force maintained at the principal ports is inadequate to inspect incoming vessels and baggage, according to customs officials.

BRITAIN SUPERIOR IN CAPITAL SHIPS

Senator Reed Startles Sen- ate When He Reveals Ton- nage of Other Nation.

Washington, Feb. 1.—A final assurance that the Senate will enact the administration's new cruiser bill by an overwhelming majority was given today following revelation that Great Britain has enjoyed a twenty per cent superiority over the United States in "first line" capital ships ever since the Harding disarmament conference.

For the last six years, the British Navy has had more capital ships, and a twenty per cent greater tonnage in its total strength of fighting dreadnaughts. Thus, the conference called to place the United States and Great Britain on a parity in "first line" ships actually gave the British a twenty per cent superiority.

Revealed by Reed
These revelations, made by Senator Reed (D) of Missouri, virtually wiped out opposition to the administration bill. The measure, providing for the construction of 18 S. America. The rescue ship sailed for Bremen at noon Wednesday.

MOVE TO WIPE OUT ALL INTOLERANCE

Jews, Catholics and Protestants in Conference to Eliminate Bigotry.

New York, Feb. 1.—A National movement to wipe out religious intolerance and to create better feeling between Jews, Catholics and Protestants is making considerable headway in the United States, the Rev. Everett R. Clinchy of New York City revealed in an exclusive interview today.

"In the south, in New England, the middle west and elsewhere, representative Jews, Protestants and Catholics are getting behind this movement with vigor," said Rev. Clinchy, who is director of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, and also a member of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"It is not a movement to unite Jews, Catholics and Protestants. Please make that clear. It does aim, however, to develop mutual appreciation and respect between the various religious groups."

A religious leader, Rev. Clinchy was a prime mover in a significant religious conference which has just come to a close here and which was attended by 150 prominent educators, ministers, jurists and professional and business men from all parts of the country.

The two-day meeting was held under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians. Touchy questions such as "bigotry," "religious intolerance," and "racial and religious discrimination" were frankly discussed in round-table sessions participated in by Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University was one of the speakers. He declared that a national movement "to regenerate the spirit of religious freedom" is sorely needed in America. He asserted emphatically that in this country there should be no discrimination on religious grounds as a test for political office or industrial and social accomplishments.

DEFECTIVE WIRE STARTS THREATENING BLAZE

Two Family House Saved When Housewife Discovers Fire in the Nick of Time.

A crossed wire on the electric meter in the two family flat located at West Center and Dougherty street, caused a fire at 7 o'clock last night that called out the Center and No. 1 fire companies. The alarm was turned in at Station No. 17.

The alarm was turned in when Mrs. John Andisio, who occupies the top floor and who was alone at the time, noticed the room filling with smoke and going into the basement found the blaze. The cross beam and the studding were then burning as were the floor supports, but only in one small section.

A quick trip was made by the fire department and in a short time the blaze was extinguished, but the wall was warm well up towards the second floor. As the blaze was working its way up towards the middle of the ground floor a hole was cut in the wall close to an enclosed ironing board and chemicals were burned in there. This extinguished the fire, but the firemen remained at the scene for some time longer checking up on the wiring to make sure that there would not be another breakout after they had gone.

The house is owned by John Andisio, who was called from his work in the newly opened Park street store of the J. W. Hale Company, but the trouble was over and the damage will not exceed $50.

FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO COMMIT SUICIDE

Engineer Stops Train in Nick of Time; Man Steps in Front of Approaching Engine.

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 1.—John J. Austen, 43 of New Bedford, went into the railroad yards near the station here today and lay down on the rails before an approaching train as hundreds of commuters waiting for their trains looked on.

Engineer Harry Livingstone slammed on the brakes of his engine, stopping the train within inches of the prostrate man.

When Austen was being taken to the police station he murmured "despondent. No future." Investigation showed he had been discharged yesterday from his job in a local sanitarium and had been drinking.

The train Austen chose was pulling into the yards here after discharging passengers brought from the west and was to have crossed over for the run back to New York.

Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 1.—Four of the five wills which Mrs. Margaret Huntington Smith McCarthy made and then changed her mind were offered in evidence today in the fight to break her fifth and final one.

The wills were made by the Standard Oil heiress on Dec. 11, 1926; Jan. 11, 1927; May 24, 1927 and June 14, 1928, to dispose of her $7,000,000 fortune of which she finally left the bulk to her young husband, Dr. James S. McCarthy.

Dr. McCarthy's attempt to offer the fifth will for probate has drawn so many interested spectators that the hearing was moved today from the Probate Court to the Borough Court, a larger room.

This room, too, was soon crowded by spectators anxious to hear more of the charges that the young physician had pled his much older wife with liquor as she lay on her death bed, where she signed her last will.

NOTED INVENTOR DIES. Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Alexander T. Brown, 74, noted inventor, one of the "fathers of the automobile industry" and for many years president and chairman of the board of the Syracuse Journal Co., is dead at his home here today after a long illness. Dr. "A" was due to bronchial pneumonia.

Brown was the inventor of L. C. Smith shotgun and the Premier typewriter; the founder of the Brown Lipe Chapin Gear Co., now a division of General Motors and the Brown Lipe Gear Co., recently sold to the Spicer Manufacturing Company. He was also one of the founders and for many years president of the Franklin Automobile Co. He was credited with much of the centrifugal gear and later developments in transmissions.

MUSCLE SHOALS BILL. Washington, Feb. 1.—The House military affairs committee, by a vote of 13 to 7, today decided to reconsider the Madden bill which provides for leasing Muscle Shoals to the American Cyanamid Co., primarily for manufacturing fertilizer.

The committee discussed new proposals of the company but reached no conclusion and will consider the measure again tomorrow.

INVENTOR DIES. New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 1.—George A. Ayer, cotton mill official and inventor of cotton mill machinery, died today, aged 73 years.

He was a native of Chocoma, he founded the Cobe yarn mills in Fall River. He had been connected with various mills here and in Easthampton.

H. RUSSELL TRYON TO LEAVE HALE'S

Secretary of Local Firm to Join Putnam & Co., Hartford Brokers.

H. Russell Tryon, secretary of the J. W. Hale company, has resigned his position with that firm, effective February 11, and will be come associated with Putnam and company, of Hartford in the stock and brokerage business.

H. Russell Tryon.

Frank H. Anderson, general manager of the firm, said today that Mr. Tryon's work would be cared for by the James W. Eddie Jr., associates of Boston, which specializes in department store public accounting work and has taken care of auditing for the J. W. Hale company for many years. They are expected to place one of their representatives here shortly.

From a standpoint of length of service, Mr. Tryon ranks second to Mr. Anderson. He has been connected with the firm for over 20 years, starting as a floor-man following completion of a course at Morse Business college. This was at the time L. E. Hale went to Rockville to open a store there.

Mr. Tryon saw the company grow to a point where it is the largest department store in Manchester. In addition to his secretarial duties, Mr. Tryon was actively engaged as controller of accounts. In speaking about Mr. Tryon this morning, Mr. Anderson said: "Mr. Tryon leaves the company with the best of feeling and good wishes for his success in his new venture. He has always been loyally devoted to his work here."

Mr. Tryon is one of the principal preferred stock holders of the J. W. Hale company and said today that he will keep his stock here for the present. Mr. Tryon is a member of the Controllers Congress of the National Retail Drygoods association of New York city.

GOVERNOR REFUSED TO ACT. Gov. Huey P. Long, the only man who could save the doomed pair refused to intervene.

The day of reckoning found the plotters crying feebly against the certainty of their doom. Lyle moans and hysterical mutterings emanated from their cells as a suffusion of sunlight filtered through the windows. The pair slept fitfully during the night, jail attendants said.

No visitors were allowed to see either of the two today, except their actual advisers and officials. Yesterday they had a final farewell to their children and kin, who made arrangements for their bodies to be taken home to Morgan City.

Three of Mrs. Leboeuf's children came to see their mother, shortly before it was learned that her last legal hope had been dashed. They were Herman 14, Ernest 19 and Liberty 10. The woman's aged mother Mrs. Louis Leboeuf, also came.

Then Dr. Dreher's children came. They were Polly and Dorothy, two demure girls still in their teens, and Ted, a sturdy lad approaching manhood.

No outsiders were present at either of these family scenes, and just when inspectors no outsider knew. Jail attendants retired as the two little groups sobbed their farewells.

This morning final minute chores incident to the grim job of hanging went forward. The hangman from New Orleans making his second trip for the same purpose, arrived. The rope had been creosoted, greased and stretched. The death masks have been dug out, and the steel trap has been given a final inspection.

ABOUT TOWN. The business meeting of the Manchester Green Community club will come to order this evening at 7 o'clock in the school hall. The hour is placed this early to allow those who wish to attend social events going on in different parts of the town.

SOUTH'S GRAY-SNYDER CASE ENDS ON GALLOWS

FINAL FAREWELL. Franklin Court House, La., Feb. 1.—Just before their hour of doom today, Mrs. Ada Bonner Leboeuf and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, her physician-paramour, bade each other a final farewell.

The haggard physician pleaded with Sheriff Charles Peot to permit him to see the woman with whom he will die for the murder of her husband, James J. Leboeuf, and just before noon he was taken to her cell.

"They shook hands and sobbed. "Good-bye," faltered the 56-year-old physician to his erstwhile paramour.

"Good-bye, Tom," said the widow, tears falling from her eyes. "Good-bye, I hope we will meet in the other world," Dreher said. He grasped her hand and turned away.

The final preparations were then started for their march to the gallows.

Long Legal Battle. The hangings marked the end of the most bitterly-contested fight for life in the criminal annals of southland. Mrs. Leboeuf was the first white woman to hang in a southern state since Reconstruction Days.

And when the requirements of the law were thus carried out, the state of Louisiana balanced an account opened on the night of July 1, 1927, when at the couple's behest Jim Beedle, a trapper, emptied the contents of his shotgun into the person of James J. Leboeuf, the unsuspecting husband.

Slayer Squealed. Jim Beedle was the trigger-man; he also was the "squealer." For his telling of his act and the crafty planning that brought it about, the woodsman earned the privilege of serving out his sentence in the stone wall of a Louisiana prison, instead of paying the supreme penalty as do his co-conspirators today.

Snatched four times from the very brink of the death drop, the murderers yesterday surrendered themselves to their fate when Federal appellate judges at New Orleans served out the fathers of the "due process of the law" and the sentence of a lower court. This was the last possible legal resort of defense attorneys.

Gov. Huey P. Long, the only man who could save the doomed pair refused to intervene.

The day of reckoning found the plotters crying feebly against the certainty of their doom. Lyle moans and hysterical mutterings emanated from their cells as a suffusion of sunlight filtered through the windows. The pair slept fitfully during the night, jail attendants said.

No visitors were allowed to see either of the two today, except their actual advisers and officials. Yesterday they had a final farewell to their children and kin, who made arrangements for their bodies to be taken home to Morgan City.

Three of Mrs. Leboeuf's children came to see their mother, shortly before it was learned that her last legal hope had been dashed. They were Herman 14, Ernest 19 and Liberty 10. The woman's aged mother Mrs. Louis Leboeuf, also came.

Then Dr. Dreher's children came. They were Polly and Dorothy, two demure girls still in their teens, and Ted, a sturdy lad approaching manhood.

No outsiders were present at either of these family scenes, and just when inspectors no outsider knew. Jail attendants retired as the two little groups sobbed their farewells.

This morning final minute chores incident to the grim job of hanging went forward. The hangman from New Orleans making his second trip for the same purpose, arrived. The rope had been creosoted, greased and stretched. The death masks have been dug out, and the steel trap has been given a final inspection.

PLACE STREET LIGHTS ON ROAD TO RINK

The need of lights on Edgerton street, the approach to the skating pond in the Center Springs park, has been taken care of by the safety committee of the Board of Selectmen and street lights have been placed from the top of the hill down to the pond, which will be appreciated by the skaters.

The pond is not in as good condition for skating as it was previous to Sunday and today the surface is being scraped and will be flooded. There will be no skating tonight, but it is hoped that there will be a sufficient freezeup by tomorrow to have skating either Saturday night or Sunday.

NOTHING TO EAT BUT DRIVES CAR

Arrested for Non-Support But Faces More Serious Charge in Court Today.

Clifford Wilson, who was arrested on the technical charge of non-support, found when he appeared before Judge Raymond A. Johnson this morning there was a more serious charge against him, that of obtaining goods under false pretenses.

Wilson is one of those characters who apparently does not look for hard work and who is rather careless about providing his family with the real necessities of life, such as food and furniture.

Wilson claims he was born in this town and at one time worked for John S. Risley. He has spent most of his life elsewhere, but, like the proverbial cat, he returned to Manchester just before Thanksgiving.

It was learned that he went to a local furniture dealer and presented such a good argument that he was allowed to furnish his house on time.

The last time Wilson was in trouble here in Manchester his tongue was over the good will of one of the policemen who paid his fine and costs which amounted to very nearly $20.

teen new fast cruisers and a monster airplane carrier, probably will pass the Senate with at least seventy votes in its favor and not more than ten against it. A rather aroused Senate indicated it would adopt the time clause, calling for the commencement of work on all the sixteen ships within three years, regardless of presidential opposition.

Senate Startled. Reed startled the Senate by announcing that the capital ship strength of Great Britain stood at 628,823 tons while that of the United States was but 525,880 tons. He further startled it by announcing that the terms of the Washington disarmament conference, the American commissioners agreed to this British superiority, instead of the 5-5-3 ratio published to the world.

A vote probably will be reached Monday when debate is limited under an agreement entered a few days ago. In the meantime, the debate will continue except for periods given over to consideration of the important appropriation bills.

BRITAIN KEEPS BUILDING

London, Feb. 1.—Despite the Kellogg anti-war treaty, disarmament conferences and a demand for economy, there is little likelihood of the British naval estimates for 1929-30 showing any reduction from the total of $286,500,000, voted for the financial year just closing.

In well informed circles it is declared the British Parliament will be asked to authorize the construction of the following new vessels: One 10,000 ton cruiser of the "county" class, Two 8,400 ton cruisers, One flotilla leader, Eight destroyers, and Six submarines.

Aircraft Carrier

A new aircraft carrier and several sloops are also projected, but the introduction of another long-term building program is considered improbable. From 1930 onwards the requirements of the British Navy are expected to be assessed year by year, according to the building activities of the other powers. The fact that the 1931 naval conference at Washington may result in further limitation of cruiser construction is borne in mind.

In naval circles it is stated the government considers it would be foolish further to cut Britain's naval building program. It is pointed out that the five year replacement scheme approved by the British Parliament in 1925 has already undergone drastic pruning; three of the 16 cruisers originally contemplated, having been dropped. More over, even the modified program is behind time since none of the 1928 contracts have yet been awarded.

to South America from 54 to 120 million square yards." Mr. Hines said that as a means of facilitating the development of export markets, the Department of Commerce has undertaken special work during the past two years which should be of increasing value to the industry. In 1927 four special textile representatives were sent abroad by the department, visiting Egypt, East Indies, Strait Settlements and Australia. Frequent inquiries and additional business have been reported from the activities of these representatives.

whom were Hartford Insurance office employees, late for their work. Clear Tracks. The East Hartford train wrecking crew was hurried to the scene of the accident to restore traffic as soon as possible. Train No. 116, east-bound, due in Manchester at nine o'clock, had to be diverted by way of Middletown. The wrecking crew was in charge of Foreman William Nevels. He had a force of about twenty men at work. By means of an acetylene torch, the shaft of the driving wheel was severed from the engine, allowing the wheel and shaft to drop into the tiny brook running along beside the road-bed.

Then the disabled engine was pushed ahead by another engine. The derrick was brought into use in lifting the two-ton wheel and shaft onto a flat car. All this required time, however, and it was three hours, almost to the minute, when the track had been cleared again. In time to allow another train to pass through on schedule. Flaw in Steel. Track Superintendent Edward Conroy of Hartford was a passenger on board the train at the time of the accident. He told a Herald reporter on the scene that all during his 42 years of connections with the railroad company he had never seen an accident of this nature before. Superintendent Conroy said that apparently the breaking of the large axle which is nearly a foot in diameter, was due to a flaw in the steel. This is known as "steel cancer" among railway men.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION

Madrid, Feb. 1.—The police are searching today for a man who fired several shots in the Royal Park with the evident intention of assassinating Monsignor Tadechins, Papal guide to Spain. The Monsignor was walking in the park with a woman companion when the man came up from behind and began shooting with a revolver. The nun's aide, Gallego, pursued the assailant who fired again, wounding the aide. Monsignor Tadechins was not injured. Pickle packers have found a way to beautify the pickle. ON THE HOOF.

London.—Sometime in the distant future women will have hooves instead of feet and legs shaped like those of a horse, according to Dr. C. I. Groff. High-heeled shoes are the cause of it all, according to the doctor. They enlarge the ankle, make it bony, produce a short, stubby foot and develop leg tendons instead of muscles, giving the calf a knotty appearance, he says.

LAND LIGHTHOUSES.

London.—Great Britain is now planning a group of lighthouses on land. These lighthouses will act as signal stations to airplanes. A light will flash instructions to plane pilots, who will carry code books with which to interpret the meaning of the flashes.

Chinese started to cut their queues in 1911.

OLDEST SHIP.

London.—Probably the oldest ship afloat is the "Sucoas," a three-masted vessel built of teak wood in Burma in 1790. It is to be taken to Australia and set up as a floating museum, a reminder of the days she carried emigrants to that country.

Denver is one mile above sea level.

NO SMOKE FOR PARIS.

Paris.—Beautiful Paris will be more beautiful if the plan of the Prefect of Police is carried out. He has issued a decree forbidding industrial, commercial or administrative buildings from polluting the air with smoke, soot or gas.

Germany exports 50,000,000 mouth organs annually. Well, that's something to blow about.

THESE SIMPLE RULES MAKE TEETHING EASY

Be careful of Baby's diet during teething. Do not overfeed him. Watch his stomach and bowels and at the first sign of indigestion, gas or constipation, give him a few drops of harmless, pleasant-tasting Fletcher's Castoria. These simple rules are making teething easy on millions of babies—and mothers, too. For over thirty years Castoria has been the trusted standby of mothers everywhere. It soothes wakeful, cross babies to sleep quickly and easily—and it's purely vegetable so you can give it as often as needed. It does the work of castor oil better and more gently. For your protection, the bottle of genuine Castoria always bears the Fletcher signature.

THE FRONTIER SPIRIT

We like to say that we have left the frontier a long way behind us. Our grandfathers, living in isolated wilderness settlements, used to have to battle mightily every winter with snow, cold and loneliness, but we have a habit of saying that all of that sort of thing is buried in the past. Automobiles, telephones, good roads and a rapidly increasing population—so they tell us—have set us free.

Maybe so. But there are still plenty of places in the United States where a winter blizzard calls for just as much fortitude, endurance and bravery as it did two generations ago. The frontier, at times, is nearer than we think.

A terrific snowstorm struck the northwest recently. In Idaho the drifts were 10 feet deep. Roads were impassable; a high wind and bitter cold added to the difficulties of dwellers in lonely ranches.

At the height of the storm the daughter of a stockman was stricken with acute appendicitis. The nearest surgeon was 30 miles away, at the town of Cottonwood.

The father put his daughter in a covered sleigh and started out. All day they fought the blizzard. By night they had made so little headway that they had to turn back.

Somehow they got word to some neighbors. The next morning a handful of cowboys appeared. Driving their animals ahead of the sleigh, the cowboys plunged to their necks in the drifted snow to break a path for the sleigh. Throughout the day they kept at it. The sleigh moved forward by inches. Men and horses forced themselves to keep at it to the limit of their endurance. Bravely and painfully, they made their way over the long 30-mile stretch of blocked roads to the town of Cottonwood.

Finally, late at night, they reached the last of the drifts and passed the town. The girl was operated on and the surgeon said she would recover.

That sort of thing used to be commonplace in America. In the old days every small town in the northern part of the country took such experiences as part of the regular winter routine.

Naturally, such conditions called for physical endurance and courage. No race of weaklings could survive in such circumstances. It is probably true that a good part of what we like to consider our typically American energy, fortitude and daring are the product of the rigorous training school of the old-fashioned winter.

Such things don't happen as often as they used to. They are the exception now, and not the rule. But it is comforting to see that when they do happen, people are still capable of meeting them. The ability to face cold, darkness and storm is one of our most valuable heritages. So long as we continue to possess it we can retain our old pride in our birthright. The dauntless Idaho cowboys have served us all. They have proved that the strain of the hard frontiersmen is still strong.

ONE KIND OF BLINDNESS

The man who has lost his sight is greatly to be pitied. But the man who has eyes and does not know how to use them is in an even worse plight.

A New York newspaper writer, crossing to Europe for a mid-winter vacation, writes a chatty little article about the trip and remarks that an ocean voyage is a bit of a bore.

"There is only one interesting ocean trip, and that is the first," he says airily. "Take it from one on his 16th crossing. The rest have a rubber-stamp monotony."

A great deal of empty water, covered by an equally large expanse of empty sky, may not be the most exciting of spectacles. Yet, for a man who has eyes in his head and a little imagination and appreciation for beauty back of them, it is far from monotonous.

Every ocean trip, for the landsman, is a venture into the unknown. The ship lies in the center of an empty plain, steaming always toward an unattainable horizon where sky and water meet. The things that can be seen from the deck do not vary much—yet they are never the same. They offer a sure way of escape from the ties that bind one too close to earth. Beyond the horizon there may lie anything—the island of Avalon or the Gulf of Darien or the yellow beach of San Salvador, glowing bright as a beacon for a roving admiral. At dawn, if the traveler gets up to see it, there is an empty hush and a strange light that are not of this world; at sunset there is a gleam in the sky from an untraveled country.

All of this, of course, is for the man who has eyes to see it. Some men do not. For them, no doubt, a sea voyage is a bore—something to be lived through for the sake of what lies beyond.

But such men are to be pitied. They miss so much. The world is full of them; men who move through a pageant of mystery and splendor, surrounded by signs from heaven and echoes from distant trumpets, who see nothing and hear nothing, who look on life as a simple, unexciting business of eating and sleeping and getting and spending. You have met them; everybody has. At sea or ashore, they see only the matter-of-fact and the obvious. Not once do they get a vision of life as it is—a glow of dull-smouldering flames on a curtain of eternal blackness, rising at times to peaks of brilliance that touch all about them with a radiance that dispels the shadows and permits a peep into eternity.

It is easy, in this modern world, to fall into that attitude. There are so many material, three-dimensional bits of furniture in the world that it is not hard to let them hold the attention to the exclusion of everything else. But to live that way is to fall tragically. To go through a lifetime and fall to get an inkling of the beauty, the power and the glory that surround the meaneast mortal—this is the worst kind of blindness.

"There is only one interesting ocean trip and that is the first." To be sure; if you're that kind of a man.

THE WILD HOG PASSETH

The wild razorback hog, for years one of the most striking bits of animal life in the state of Arkansas, is apparently on the verge of extinction.

Students at the University of Arkansas plan to present a razorback to the undergraduate who is held to have done the most for the university during the present school year. When they adopted this plan they figured that getting the porker would be the least of all their troubles. But now they are finding that the razorback is by no means as common as he used to be.

Accordingly, a bulletin from the university's news bureau says that the students are going to make a state-wide search for a razorback. Time was when these wild hogs were so plentiful as to be a veritable nuisance—but that time has passed. Arkansas is no longer a back-woods state.

SONGBIRDS IN HAWAII

The Chamber of Commerce of Hilo, Hawaii, is urging every resident of the island to buy a songbird.

Birds make pleasant pets, to be sure. But the Hilo Chamber is wise enough to realize that a cage is no place for a pet of that kind. It wants Hawaiians to buy birds on the mainland, take them to Hawaii—and then turn them loose.

There is something extremely fetching about that suggestion. The people of Hawaii will be serving themselves well if they follow it. Setting the birds free will re-stock the islands with songbirds and make life more pleasant for everyone.

QUITE IMPOSSIBLE.

The teacher was telling a story to the kindergarten and interest was intense.

"So that night the wicked red fox came and stole a chicken. The next night he came and stole another. And the next night he came and stole another chicken. And a dramatic pause—"what do you suppose happened the next night?"

"Oh, teacher!" panted Peter. "Did he get another chicken?" "Ladies' Home Journal."

GIFT OF MILLION FOR YALE SCHOOL

Rockefeller Foundation Aids Nursing School—Some Features of Plan.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 1.—The Yale School of Nursing has received a gift of $1,000,000 for endowment from the Rockefeller Foundation, according to an announcement made today by President James Rowland Angell, of Yale University.

"Coming as it does at the end of a five-year trial period," President Angell said, in making the announcement, "this gift is of great significance. It means that a novel experiment has proved a success, and an educational program for nurses, comparable to that offered in medicine, law, and engineering, is placed on a stable and permanent basis. It means further that nursing is now recognized to be of sufficient importance to warrant the existence of a school organized from the point of view of educating the nurse rather than preparing her for the purpose of providing a hospital with nursing service."

Among the features of the plan which has thus received the endorsement of the Rockefeller Foundation, an outstanding authority in the field of medicine and education, are the high admission requirements; a curriculum which emphasizes a thorough study of fundamental as well as practical training; payment of a substantial tuition fee by the student; and furnishing of maintenance by the hospital during the period of service in the wards.

When the Yale School of Nursing was organized in 1923, the training schools in this country were graduating some 17,000 students a year and many graduates were finding it difficult to earn a living. The purpose of the Yale School, therefore, was to offer better educational opportunities rather than to increase the number of graduate nurses. Two years of college work were required for admission. A course of study was arranged to cover twenty-eight months. It was stipulated that the student should spend such time in the hospital ward as the mastery of bedside care demanded. This practical experience is gained in the wards of the New Haven hospital under the guidance of graduate nurses. While skill in bedside care is considered highly important, it is looked upon not as an end in itself, but as a means toward the still more important end of handling the patient intelligently in accordance with his physical and mental condition. Students are rotated from one service to another so that each may have experience in all of the departments, including internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, and psychiatry.

Fundamental Subjects
 With this practical duty is coordinated the study of fundamental subjects, including bacteriology, anatomy, physiology, psychology, sociology, and economics. The preventive aspect of disease is always emphasized. It is felt that the nurse has a great opportunity, because of her contact with the patient, to influence him in matters of hygiene and positive health. She must be a medium for bringing knowledge to the patient, an interpreter of science in popular terms to the people. This it is felt requires something more than a liberal education and a high degree of technical skill.

While these plans are in many respects novel, they are in fact merely a necessary and logical development of nursing education in this country. Most schools for nurses are conducted by hospitals which offer the training in return for the practical nursing service rendered by the student. It is felt that, in general, the student is called upon to perform many duties which have little or no bearing upon her future work or to continue the same service too long after she has become proficient. Consequently, in many instances, one or another phase of training may be over-emphasized and even more important studies, which will give the nurse an intelligent understanding of the work she is doing, may be neglected.

Independent School
 The Yale School of Nursing is one of the two in this country organized as independent schools in university and equal in standing with the other professional schools of the institution. A tuition fee is charged just as in the other schools at Yale, and the hospital provides maintenance for the student for the period she is actually at work in the wards. The exploitation of either nurse or hospital is avoided.

In spite of the tuition fee and high admission requirements, the Yale School has been successful in its desire to attract young women of the highest calibre in increasing numbers. There have been at present 116 students enrolled, and more than half of these hold college degrees. Applicants from other schools are admitted to courses not given in their own institution. They are not awarded degrees or diplomas. A six weeks course was also offered this year to 24 graduate nurses from all parts of the country who were selected by the Rockefeller Foundation especially to come to this school to study its progressive educational methods.

A direct outgrowth of the Connecticut Training School for Nurses, the Yale School of Nursing has had every encouragement and assistance from those associated with the former group. It was the consensus of opinion that nursing education had to be developed to meet modern conditions if the nurse was to render the fullest possible service to the community. Miss Annie W. Goodrich, who was selected to organize the new school distinguished herself as dean of the Army School of Nursing during the war. She was president of the American Federation of Nurses, honorary president of the International Conference of Nurses and former president of the American Nurses' Association, as well as former professor of nursing and health at Columbia University and former director of the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service.

NO BATHING BEAUTY
 London.—When the village schoolmaster at Hottbridge made a plea for a bath in his school, one of the school board, evidently opposed to the suggestion, stated that he hadn't bathed in ten years and that a friend of his, who lived to be 90, never had a bath after his mother quit washing him.

SCOUT NEWS
 BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

THE MYSTERY HIKE.
 Last Saturday afternoon fourteen enthusiastic scouts from Troop 6 started out on a hike with their destination unknown except to the leaders. The day being rather cold made the boys step right along and it wasn't very long until the first stop was made to explore the so-called "Bone Yard." The story of what was seen can be told by any one of the boys.

The next place to find was the "Mystery Cave" and this was quite a tiresome task as the trip had to be made through the woods where the snow was rather deep. The group was divided into two teams one acting as the hares making a trail as they went along and the other the hounds, who were to follow the trail. After a merry chase by the hounds the hares were caught hiding in a cluster of bushes.

The "Mystery Cave" was reached about 4 o'clock and everything was prepared for a good supper which everyone was ready for. Four different groups made their fire in amongst the rocks, and as the wood began to smoulder in good shape one group had to move as the smoke from the fire beneath them chased them out. The cats were composed of a little of everything consisting of beans, frankfurts, spaghetti, bacon, hamburger, onions, pancakes, steak, rolls and cookies for dessert.

On the homeward trip several stops had to be made to wait on several of the larger boys who help everyone else eat their supper. The group reached Manchester 7:30 and a good time was voted by all.

Troop 6's Meeting.
 The weekly meeting of Troop 6 was held Tuesday night at the South Methodist church. The opening exercises included the flag ceremony, the repeating of the scout laws and the patrol leaders report. Assistant Scoutmaster Hillman having been absent for the last several months was present and the troop led by Francis Burr gave him a welcome cheer.

The announcement was made that Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Burr would be in charge of the troop for the month of February taking charge of all activities and programs. It has been the policy of the scout leader to develop leadership in the troop and any boy who shows he has the ability to take charge of the troop will have his chance to do so. Each scout endeavors to live up to the scout motto "Be Prepared" and that means to be prepared for any emergency no matter what it may be. One of the scout laws is, "A Scout is obedient" a scout is obedient to his scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, his parents and any other superior officer. This law is of much importance for if the smallest or the youngest scout was out of the troop rank to take charge of any one activity it would be the other scout's duty to obey him.

During the following months others will take charge of a month's program.

On Sunday Feb. 10th our troop will attend the church service at the South Methodist church. This will be Scout Sunday for all scouts in the country.

WOMAN MURDERED
 Portland, Me., Feb. 1.—Police today were searching for the slayer of Mrs. Pauline Zimmerman, whose body with a cord tied tightly around the neck was found in Liverpool Tavern here. The slayer was believed to be a man who had been seen recently in Mrs. Zimmerman's company.

Failure of a parrot to lift its head from beneath its wings resulted in the finding of the body. Patrolman Thomas T. Conley entered the place and when the parrot failed to respond to a "hello" the policeman became suspicious and discovered the body.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
RUTH LESTER, Private secretary, conceals her blond loveliness behind yellow spectacles and ill-fitting clothes and skins back her curls in order to escape the attentions of flirtatious employers. But for this disguise she could not have worked unmolested four months for "HANDSOME HARRY" BORDEN, promoter of dubious stock companies and notorious for his affairs with beautiful women.
Ruth, suspecting him of shady dealings, would resign but for a romance which springs up between her and JACK HAYWARD, young insurance broker, whose office is just across the narrow airshaft from Borden's private office on the seventh floor of the Starbridge Building.
Ruth and Jack became engaged on a Friday night in January and Ruth dares to come to the office next morning with her disguise removed. In her office, Ruth greets BENNY SMITH, office boy, who is astonished at her transformation and who instantly becomes infatuated. He hates Borden and begs Ruth to don her disguise before his return. She is interrupted by a phone call. It is "the woman with the contraite voice" whom Borden has previously refused to talk to.

Ruth has time to put on her spectacles before Borden's arrival. Borden finds an orchid-tinted envelope in the mail and thrusts it in his pocket with an oath. Ruth is sent to the bank with instructions to get $500 in cash and to the station for two round-trip tickets and a drawingroom for Winter Haven on the 2:15 train. As she returns to the office she wonders whom the second ticket is for.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER III
"Hullo, Miss Lester! Is God's gift to women in his office? I phoned and he's expectin' me. Oh pardon me! I thought it was Miss Lester! But I guess Handsome Harry canned her, the poor little scared bunny! Can't say I blame him—why!—what—?"
Ruth turned in the little swivel chair and faced the girl who had announced herself so nonchalantly. So it was Rita Dubois who was going to Winter Haven with Borden. Ruth was hardly surprised, but a little sorry, for she liked the vivacious, dark-eyed, black-haired little singer and dancer from the noisiest, most garish night club in the city.

"I've just turned my hair loose," Ruth smiled, putting on her timed, scared-bunny manner and peering upward at Rita through her enormous horn-rimmed spectacles.
"Attagin'!" Rita applauded, as she touched up her already vividly rouged lips. "So you've fallen for Handsome Harry, too, you poor little simp! Been to the movies and got a few hot tips on how to vamp your boss? . . . Well, Bunny, don't be jealous of little Rita, no matter what you hear! You can have him—next week! But listen, don't you toddle in and tell 'im I said so, after I'm gone, or I'll snatch those golden curls of yours out by the roots. . . . Pretty stuff!" And Rita, finished with her lips, lifted one of Ruth's curls and dangled its yellow silk almost tenderly.
Ruth laughed then glanced apprehensively toward Harry Borden's closed door. "The curls are out in someone else's honor, Miss Dubois. And don't you tell Mr. Borden, but—I'm engaged to be married. It just happened last night. You're the second person I've told—"

"Good child! Wise little baby!" Rita approved, her voice curiously gentle and low. Then she stooped and laid her heavily rouged and scented lips against the rose and ivory of Ruth's cheek. "That's the only way, infant! Lasso 'em with a wedding ring, when you're young and—oh, Lul-lo, Harry! The top of the morning to you, darling!"
Harry Borden held his door wide, and, regardless of Ruth's presence, his arms, too. "Glad to see you, sweetheart! Miss Lester's just bought the tickets, Drawing-room, too, if you're a good girl!"
As Harry Borden, laughing indulgently, war about to close the door, Rita Dubois turned her head and gave Ruth a confidential, mocking grin, along with a slow, significant wink.
Ruth's fingers were flying over the typewriter keys again when Benny Smith's voice, sullen and indignant, interrupted her.
"Huh! Thought it was a secret—you, getting engaged!" he flung at her from his own desk in the corner. "Nen you go and tell everybody!"
"I haven't told anyone but Miss Dubois and you, Benny," Ruth protested.

"Well, if you gotta whisper your little secret, looks like you'd pick out somebody besides one of Handsome Harry's dames," the boy persisted sullenly. "I thought you just told me 'cause you—you sort of liked me—"
Startled, Ruth let her hands lie idle on the keys. So that was it! Benny, too! Well, thank goodness, he was too young to want to gobble her up. She must be very careful not to hurt him, never to let him see her smile with amusement at his adolescent cumbering into love.
"I do like you, Benny—lots," she said gently. "Now be a darling and don't interrupt me any more. I want to be through by one."
"Then I guess you don't want to be told that Handsome Harry's frau is comin' for her alimony this mornin'," the boy retorted, grinning again.
"Oh, I'd forgotten that today's the fifteenth!" Ruth cried. "Does Mr. Borden know she's comin'?"
Benny chuckled. "I didn't tell him. He was talking to this Dubois dame on the other line when his missus called up, and then you came back and I forgot to mention it. I'm going to be forgetting a lot

THIS HAS HAPPENED
ASHTORETH and HOLLIS HART are newlyweds, honeymooning in Paris. Ashtoreth is rarely beautiful, and Hollis is extraordinarily rich. He calls her "ORCHID" because she reminds him of that lovely flower.

But happiness seems, somehow, to have eluded them. Before their marriage Ashtoreth had been a stenographer in Hart's employ. She is years younger than he, and he idolizes her youth and beauty.

In Paris she meets an old sweetheart, MONTY ENGLISH, who has gone to France to sell radios or his firm. Monty is young and handsome. But he is distressingly poor, and Ashtoreth couldn't see him at all.

He treats her rather coldly, but it is apparent that he is still in love with her. Hollis devotes himself to tennis and the collection of antiques. Both pursuits bore Ashtoreth to tears. When he is not at the courts, or browsing about in old shops, he makes tender love to his little bride. And that also bores her. Annoys might be a better word. She has discovered that he has two front teeth that come out on little swivels, and that spell the end of romance.

She invites Monty to have dinner with them and contrives to see him on several occasions, though Monty tries to discourage it.

On their last day in Paris she has luncheon with Monty at JACK'S. He tells her frankly that he doesn't want to see her again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLVI

Hollis must have concluded his packing some time that afternoon, because when Ashtoreth returned at four o'clock from luncheon their suite was deserted.

She looked on her dressing table for the customary note. If Hollis was as much as wadded down to the bed, he was sure to leave a message. Weighed with a crystal bottle, or an onyx jar. Or stuck, maybe, in the corner of her mirror. "Beloved, I adore you. Seeking liquid refreshment. Return in 10 minutes. Will miss you awfully. Your adoring husband." ... Silly little notes, full of crazy protestations. She would find them on her pillow mornings, if he went out before she awoke. "Angel, you look like a madonna with your eyelashes kissing your cheeks. I go to choose flowers for your breakfast tray."

She had given Mogg the afternoon. Probably Hollis had entrusted a message to her, and the stupid creature had forgotten to leave word. She lifted things on her dressing table, poking about. She looked under her pillow, and on Hollis' chiffonier. Maybe he was cross because she lunched with Monty. But he told her to. He had been perfectly pleasant about it. Well, if he was angry, he could stay angry. The idea!

She opened her bag. Pettit point, with an old gold clasp, and set emeralds. It was stuffed with francs.

She would walk along rue Sainte Honore, out to the Faubourg, and look in the windows of all those adorable little shops. They were sure to be full of entrancing things. She'd get a quilled jacket for Maise. And some of that gleaming Russian jewelry for Sadie. Sadie would adore those ankle bangles, and the long, drippy ear rings. If she didn't have enough money, she would have them sent collect to the hotel. Hollis wouldn't mind. But it would serve him right, if he did. Her last afternoon in Paris! And he'd gone off without a word.

When she returned, Mogg was back. And Hollis had telephoned, leaving word that he had been delayed.

It was seven o'clock. "I'll wait half an hour," she decided, "and if he isn't in then, I'll have dinner by myself."

She would go to Maxim's, because she enjoyed watching French girls. They fascinated her. Hollis didn't like to take her there, because he said she stared outrageously.

At half past seven, Ashtoreth put on dark clothes and a small felt hat. She had heard that women were not admitted alone. But that of course was nonsense. American girls go everywhere. With well bred nonchalance, they crash the gilded gates of the best and the worst places in Paris.

"I'll stroll right in," she decided. They won't dare say anything.

So she took a taxi and was deposited at Maxim's, along with a few American tourists, and two dubiously attractive ladies, who arrived simultaneously. She followed on the heels of the tourists, leaving the cocottes (for such they were) standing on the sidewalk, waiting an auspicious moment to ask some man to take them in.

She sat at a small table near the door, where she could best see in action. It wasn't as exciting as she expected. The ladies of the boulevards, sitting in groups, ordered drinks, and chatted together, quite like women anywhere. The American tourists looked at them shyly, and made comments behind their hands.

There was not a woman there who looked "fast," in the American sense. Ashtoreth wondered if any of them were war widows, and if they had children.

She ordered a filet of sole with wine sauce and was waiting for it when she was conscious of someone sitting at her elbow.

"Ashtoreth! What, in the name of all that's holy, are you doing here?"

"Oh, hello, Monty." She was elaborately casual. "Sit down, won't you? I'm all alone."

"So I noticed. What's the big idea?"

"My husband had an engagement," she lied glibly. "And he just parked me here for a while. He's coming back later. We'll have dinner together. Hollis can't be here for an hour."

He drew out a chair, and let her order for him, supplementing her suggestions with a bottle of champagne.

"You shouldn't ever eat alone without champagne. Ash, I'm ashamed of you!"

They toasted each other gaily.

"Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen!"

Here's to the widow of fifty; Here's to the flaunting, extravagant queen, And here's to the housewife that's thrifty!

Let the toast pass; Drink to the lass; "I'll warrant she'll prove an excuse for the glass. . . . You're the flaunting extravagant queen, Ash." "That's all right," she retorted. "I'm married to the king."

Monty grew serious.

"He is a prince, you know, Ash. I don't believe you half appreciate him."

"Oh, yes, I do," she protested. "There's just one little thing, Monty. Two little things, I should say. . . . She leaned toward him, and the sparkling champagne made her eyes dance. She believed that, resistibly. "False teeth!" she giggled. Two of them. On swivels. He takes them out nights."

Monty regarded her severely.

"I wouldn't tell anyone but you," she assured him.

"Well, that's nice of you, I'm sure. Listen to my words of wisdom, young woman. If your husband had a toupee and a wooden leg and a glass eye, he'd still be aces with me. And you'd be a darn lucky girl, at that."

"Well, it's not very romantic," she demurred, thinking of the teeth. She believed that was why Hollis was always up first in the morning. Probably he kept them in a glass in the bathroom.

At 10 o'clock she pretended to look about for Hollis, and watched the door, as though expecting him.

"What are you doing tonight, Monty?"

"Going to bed," he told her. "Went out on a bender last night, and I'm not feeling so hot."

"Then suppose you take me home," she proposed. "We can leave a message here for Holly. I'm tired myself."

She was beginning to be a little nervous. Hollis had surely returned, and was probably frightened to death. Well, it would serve him right. Just the same, she had better be going. He was crazy about her, really. It would not do to frighten him.

But Hollis was not there when she arrived at something.

"Come up," she invited Monty. "I'm perfectly respectable. We have a drawing room."

He declined shortly. "No thanks, I'll be toddling along. See you in Boston some time."

"Oh, please come, Monty. . . . Listen, I'll tell you something. It wasn't true that I was expecting Holly at Maxim's. I don't know where he is. I went there alone, because he didn't come home to dinner. He went out this afternoon, while I was lurching with you. He didn't leave any message or anything. And I haven't seen him since."

Monty whistled. "Was he sore because you met me?"

"Oh, no, no, that wasn't it. We haven't quarreled. In fact, I think he probably left a note for me when he went out, but Mogg was cleanlag, and she's the most thorough thing you ever saw. She sweeps everything up, just like a whirlwind. Holly's poor note must have gone the way of all tissue. I've no doubt he's tried to reach me a dozen times by telephone, but you know yourself how these French people are about getting messages. I assure you, Monty, there's nothing wrong. Only I'm just a little nervous. And I would appreciate it if you'd stay with me."

Monty considered his hat (it was one of those light gray ones—almost white) and fecked an imaginary speck from its spotless rim. He was plainly embarrassed.

"Gosh, Ash! I'd rather not go up to your rooms. Don't you see how it is? Let's sit down here in the lobby."

Ashtoreth's color rose hotly.

"You're the most provincial creature," she told him angrily. "No, I shan't sit in any old lobby. Go ahead, if you want. Go home, and say your prayers, and ask God to keep you a good, circumspect little boy. Go on."

She flooned off. Then turned on her heel with another little admonition.

"Go to the devil!" she commanded tersely.

He stood there until she had stepped into the lift, and was whisked away. The lift, he noticed, was like a golden cage. And the thought flashed through his mind that Ashtoreth was a captive girl in a golden cage. Monty was not imaginative, nor particularly sentimental. He shrugged, and pulling his smart hat over his eyes, stopped a taxi and returned to his pension.

Some time after midnight, he was startled by a patter of small stones on his window. He woke instantly. With a sort of clairvoyant sense, he knew that Ashtoreth was in the garden, throwing pebbles to rouse him. So sure was his conviction that he had by chance to look, but slipped into his dressing gown and hurried down stairs.

As he stepped through the wicket into the garden, she came toward him. She was wearing a long dark wrap, and pumps with rhinestone heels.

She looked frightened and distressed, and came to him with outstretched hands.

"You'll catch cold," he told her coolly, quite as though he were

Hints On How To Keep Well

HEART HAS ENORMOUS POWER TO RECUPERATE.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN,
 Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

When the heart gives out it is impossible to get another one. In a recent consideration of the danger of heart disease, Dr. L. M. Warfield has pointed out that we have two kidneys and two lungs and a great deal more intestines than we need, but we have only one heart, and it is among the most important of the organs of the body.

Fortunately for the life of mankind, the heart has enormous power of recuperation and a great amount of reserve. It is, however,

Q.—Is there any truth in the statement that athletic mothers have a more difficult time at childbirth than the unathletic type?
 A.—There is no evidence to support such a contention. The factors causing difficulty at childbirth are those of bony framework and the musculature of internal organs that are not affected by general exercise.

merely human tissue and will wear out under continuous overstrain and break down under the attack of disease.

Measuring the Load.
 It is for this reason that every man, at least those who have passed middle age, should be able to answer correctly the question, "How is your heart?"

If he wants to live as long as he can, he should have some idea of the functional capacity of this important organ, so that he will not overtax its strength in giving it too great a load to carry and will aid it in its defence against infections coming from various sources in the body.

Almost everyone knows the early signs of heart failure, but similar symptoms to a mild degree may be brought on by other conditions. Swelling of the feet, shortness of breath on exercise, pain and similar symptoms are not always indicative of heart disease.

It is only the competent physician who can tell by listening to the heart's beat, by the use of functional tests, and by other methods involving the use of the X-ray, the size of the heart, its capacity and its need for rest.

First Aid is Best.
 When the heart becomes weakened, it cannot be controlled directly as can other tissue of the body. It is, however, a living tissue and tends to recover with a sufficient amount of rest, and with removal of the source of infection.

Hence it is that the first prescription in heart disease is rest, not rest for an hour or rest for a day, but sufficient rest to permit the worn-out tissues to regain their vitality.

If you have nothing else to be thankful for, anyway you're not the son of the man who wants to name the United States "Unistacia."

used to visits from beautiful girls who came at midnight, and pebbles at his window. "Go upstairs, and I will call Madame."

"It's about Holly!" she cried. "He hasn't come home yet."

Monty took her arm sternly. "Go in the house."

"Don't be cross!" she begged, and caught his wrist with her hand. "I woke up, and when Hollis wasn't there, I was so frightened. I didn't wait to dress. I didn't think, Monty. I only threw on a wrap, and came straight to you."

He led her down the little flagged walk and into the house.

"Wait in my room," he commanded. "I'll be there, as soon as I can rouse Madame."

She stumbled up the dark stairs. There was a feeble moon, shining whitely, and the room was full of shadows. Dark, hateful shadows. And a great ugly wardrobe. She bumped her knee on the thing, and tripped, falling against the bed. It was soft and warm, and smelled faintly of tobacco. She sat on the edge, and waited. Her heart was pounding wildly.

In a moment Monty came carrying a candle, which he shaded with his hand.

How handsome he looks, thought Ashtoreth. But she was trembling too violently to say anything. There were voices on the street, and the sound of a car with engine running madly. Then a horrid clattering shook the little house.

"That's the sort of knocker we have!" whispered Monty. "Maybe it will wake Madame. I couldn't."

It must have been an iron knocker, at the very least. It shook the bricks, and beams of wood. And flakes of mortar came tumbling down from the walls.

"It would rouse the dead," shuddered Ashtoreth.

Then they heard Madame, breathing loudly, in the next room. They heard her plant heavy feet on the floor, and they heard the bed creak. She struck a match and lighted her candle. And, complaining, descended the stairs.

Monty went to the door, and opening it, listened to the conversation in the hall below. After a moment, he turned quietly to Ashtoreth.

"It's your husband," he said. "And Madame is sending him up." (To Be Continued)

What does Hollis say? And Ashtoreth? Tragically seems in store for Hollis' "Orchid."

A House Just For Two

HERE'S GAY ENGLISH HOME FOR NEW FAMILY

By CORA W. WILSON.

This little English house is a gay affair just large enough to hold the brand new family of two, with an extra bed room for an occasional guest.

Picture it in deep cream stucco on frame structure with a green shingled roof, or one of those warm-colored shingled ones, and a multi-blue-green window trim. The shutters are matching blue-green.

Few people realize how very difficult it is to plan a small five-room house that can be built on a small lot. One must not waste an inch of space.

This house contains 25,000 cubic feet and at the rate of from 40 to 45 cents a cubic foot for building, anyone looking for an inexpensive small house could do no better.

Another big advantage is that this house can be built on a moderate sized lot, as it is 34 by 45 feet. A 60 foot lot would be ample.

It is a house that will fit any neighborhood and any climate. Nothing in the way of modern conveniences has been omitted and all the rooms are a good size.

From the front door to the kitchen this house radiates cheer, romance, homeliness. One enters a large living room with hospitable fireplace on the opposite side. This room leads from the right to an open porch and on the left of the fireplace an arched opening lets upon the dining room, with three bay windows looking out upon the garden. Swinging doors lead to the model kitchen, with a 36-inch high sink under a window, and a large pan tray with a nook for the refrigerator which can be freed from the yard.

Two nice sized bedrooms, with cross current ventilation and plenty of closet space, are on this floor, as is a modern bath. The second floor can be finished as an extra bedroom and bath or a play room.

This is house plan No. 87.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
 ©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

In order to develop normally physically, mentally and morally, children must live in a home atmosphere of happiness. Not the happiness of sporadic stimulation that comes from movies, candy, and the excitement of frequent new toys, but the happiness of contentment and peace.

Just as peace is necessary to the well being and good health of grown-ups, so is it doubly essential to the welfare of children.

It is a fallacy to think that because children are children they are aware of disturbances in the home. They may not understand accurately what the trouble is about, but they are quick to sense unhappiness in their parents. Children have almost an uncanny intuition. They sense disturbance as surely as a seismograph spots an earthquake in China.

"What is it, Mother?" "Are you cross, Daddy?" "Oh, run off and play and don't ask so many questions!"

Impression Lingers On
 That dismisses it for the parents but not for the child. Plastic creatures that they are, one more impression of trouble has been made and it will stay.

Children have vivid imaginations; they also have a tendency to exaggerate. What may be only a storm in a teapot to their parents may be a veritable cyclone to them.

And don't think that they will forget about it! A child's memory is tenacious. If there is any forgetting to be done, there are long chances that it will be the parents who do it. Even if details pass out of their consciousness, the uneasy impression of trouble remains to do its damage to nerves and health.

Once may not be serious—or twice or even a dozen occurrences of the kind. But habitual wrangling will eventually tell its story. We have all seen the pale, nervous, listless child who reflects the chaotic atmosphere of his home life. Indeed such children are too common.

Tell-All Children Troubles
 Unfortunately there are even unwisdom mothers who seek relief from their troubles by deliberately unburdening themselves to their children, who discuss miscellaneous worries, their marital unhappiness, or even a father's misconduct with them.

It is a great mistake.

Of course there are times when it is necessary to have the cooperation in children in matters of domestic economy. There are things about almost every home that children must learn to understand, and to help with. That is a different matter.

But even so, unless it is something that is absolutely essential for a child to know, I should keep him away from Old Man Worry as long as possible.

A clue is something a detective boasts about when he can't find the criminal.

SHE WAS IT

The queen was IT when King Ferdinand was alive. But with him gone, the Bratiani brothers, powers of the regency, proceeded to ignore her, and she people were quick to follow suit. Even her son Nicholas who represents her in the regency is unable to gain any recognition.

So Marie, they say, is attempting a coup d'etat—planning to bring Carol back and confound the government.

What the world owes to this Marie for her eternal providing us with a comic opera soldier-of-fortune skit in real life! We need our queens when they live up to the story book traditions. We sneaker but how we do enjoy 'em!

The queen, bigger her, never travels without her crown, either!

"MISTRESS" AND "MAID"

"Mistress" and "maid" are no longer used to express the relationship between employer and domestic employe make much difference to our much-discussed "servant problem"? The industrial department of the National Y. W. C. recently called a conference on that problem and suggested that an elimination of those words might help.

Perhaps it would. The substitution of the word "maid" for "mistress" and "maid" are meant little for the old-fashioned "hired girl" was much more easily procured than a new-fashioned "maid."

HARD ON BABIES

It's a hard age in which to be a baby, according to the California State Department of Health which, after much research, has discovered that radio, jazz, church services, bright lights, dance halls, and all the modern trappings are very bad for babies.

Let's see, our mothers and grandmothers told their kids to church and box socials and granges and quilting bees, because it was the only way to get there themselves, and nothing so terrible seemed to happen to the offspring. To be sure, social diversions weren't as frequent then as now and neither was the loud speaker on in the home all the time. Still, I'll take a chance on today's babies weathering the gale, what with all the counter-o' things if you don't slick back them curls again."

"Benny, remember that I'm an engaged woman!" Ruth laughed. "But what am I going to do if Mrs. Borden comes a little?"

There was a faint rat-tat upon the outer door and Benny sprang to answer, knowing who it was, for no one but Harry Borden's wife bothered to knock when she came to his office.

"Morning, Mrs. Borden," Benny mumbled, as he opened the door wide. "Say, Ruth, I gotta beat it to the postoffice for them stamps. Anything else you need?"

"No thanks, Benny. Fifty crows, a hundred ones, and 10 specials.... Good morning, Mrs. Borden."

Ruth had risen as she spoke, and now faced Mrs. Borden nervously, but smiling the little timid smile which Mrs. Borden would expect of her, for it had greeted her once a month for four months.

A rather faded, tired 35, as against Harry Borden's triumphant 40. Soft, fine skin, going a little lax beneath high, aristocratic cheek bones, and wrinkling faintly around tragic eyes and a patient but bitter mouth. Lead-brown eyes, no longer glowing with the fire of springs.

Of all the varied duties which she was called upon to perform as Harry Borden's confidential secretary, none was so painful to Ruth as this monthly encounter with Mrs. Borden. For Borden forced his wife to come to his office that he might humiliate her. There had been a legal separation, but no divorce, and Borden had arrogantly stipulated that he would pay the court allotment of $500 a month for the support of his wife and two children, a boy of 12 and a girl of seven, only if Elizabeth Borden came to him each month and asked for it. And Ruth knew that if Elizabeth Borden had had only herself to consider, she would have died rather than so humiliate herself before him.

"Benny told me Mr. Borden was in," Mrs. Borden answered Ruth's greeting in a hesitating, gentle voice. Ruth glanced miserably toward the closed door, behind which Harry Borden and Rita Dubois were arranging details of their week-end trip to Winter Haven. "Yes, he's in, Mrs. Borden, but he's in conference."

A burst of high-pitched laughter penetrated that closed door, and Mrs. Borden flinched, her nostrils quivering, her gloved hands clenching upon the handbag she held. Ruth did not consciously notice the discarded wife's reaction then, but later, when every tiny thing was of so much importance, she remembered—and wished she could forget.

"I—then I—" Mrs. Borden stammered. "Shall I come back a little later, Miss Lester? I brought the children downtown with me, and they're waiting in the rest room of a department store. I—you know it is—necessary that I—that I ask—that I see Mr. Borden today."

"Yes," Ruth nodded. Harry Borden's ultimatum was that the monthly $500 would be paid on the fifteenth day of the month and on no other. If his wife did not call for it then, and ask in so many words for what was hers and the children's by right, she would have to wait until the same date the next month. "I suggest, Mrs. Borden, that you come back in about an hour. I am sure he will be out of conference—by then."

Mrs. Borden flushed. "The children have a dentist's appointment at 12, and then I'm to take them to lunch. I wonder if Mr. Borden will be here about half-past one?"

Ruth agreed eagerly. She was glad she would not have to see poor Mrs. Borden again on that, her own happy day. "Yes, he will be here until nearly two. He told me so just a few minutes ago. I'm sure half-past one will be fine."

"Thank you," Mrs. Borden was turning toward the door, when another burst of laughter—treble wedded to bass—shook the ground glass panel in the door between the outer and inner offices.

Ruth saw the slight, trail body sway, sprang to put her arm about the older woman. "Please sit down just a minute, Mrs. Borden. Here in my chair. And lay your head on the desk. It's the heat—they keep these offices stifling. I'll get you a drink of water. There! Feeling better?" she asked, as she helped Harry Borden's wife to the little swivel chair.

Ruth darted to the water cooler in the corner near Benny's desk, then discovered that the paper cup container was empty. But there was a tube of them in the bottom drawer of her desk. She rap, frightened a little for Mrs. Borden looked terribly white and ill. The drawer stuck a bit, and the older woman was leaning downward to help, with trembling hands.

"Don't bother, dear Mrs. Borden," Ruth begged. "There! It often sticks.... The cups are here somewhere.... Oh!" She snatched her hand from the pulled-out drawer as if she had touched a snake. Then she laughed, shakily.

"What a goose I am! Please don't be frightened, Mrs. Borden. I keep

HOW BEST TO USE VICKS VAPORUB IN CASE OF FLU

Begin This Simple External Treatment at First Sign of Any Cough or Cold.

If possible, go home and go to bed. Take a laxative and a hot lemonade. Apply hot wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel.

Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body-warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body throw off the cold more quickly.

Mothers especially appreciate Vicks for the children. As it is applied externally, it can be used freely and often, without upsetting delicate digestions, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

As in 1918, in spite of tripled capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating all night long. The public is demanding over 375,000 jars every 24 hours.

They had a wild old time in the Herald League last night. Both the Bon Ami and the Sons of Italy were knocked for a row of goals—each flattened for the full count. The Green scuttled the Sons four straight while the West Sides flamed a serious insult on the Bon Ami. As a result, a triple tie exists for the league leadership between the Bon Ami, Green and Sons of Italy.

The Sons rolled good scores, but the Green team won the margins of victory were 14-7 and 22 pins. Wilkie, Belletti and Cole rolled the best scores.

In the West Sides-Bon Ami match, neither team had any alarming scores. The soap makers twice hit under 500. The margins were 31-25 and 18. Joe Canade pulled the first game out of fire with a couple of spares in the last.

Schubert also bowled well. Conran was decidedly off form and rolled poorly.

The Charter Oaks, minus Curtis, prevented the Night Hawks from taking advantage of the leader's downfall, by trimming them three downfall, by trimming them three downfall, by trimming them three downfall.

The Construction won three points from the Independents losing the second game by one pin. Frank Anderson won the contractors best scores while Wilkie and Stevenson did best for the losers. The scores:

FIRST REAL TEST FOR SCHMELING

If He Defeats Johnny Risko Tonight He Will Have Gone Far.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Feb. 1.—Going forward to bigger and better punches on the nostril, Max Schmeling, the Dempsey of the Deutschlands, will be dropped in with Johnny Risko in a ten round fight at the Garden tonight and, singularly enough, they are billing the business as Schmeling's "first real test in America." It is conceded that fame is extremely fleeting in affairs of the fist but no one ever thought it would take less than six months for somebody to try to make a trial horse out of Johnny Risko and an authorized headliner out of Schmeling.

A year ago, John had the arguing concession with Heenev as to which was entitled to be lacerated in a genteel way by Mr. Tunney. Heenev was awarded the privilege while John captured the air, therefor causing much indignation among the populace. The latter seem to feel that John had earned the right to be politely cut in public and wanted him to have it. John was at least that close to the heavy weight championship.

Punched by Godfrey
Some months later, John went in there with George Godfrey and, while the latter made a most indifferent fight, he did contrive to bash John very painfully in the main parlor. The incident is presumed to have been the beginning of another Risko. Is this the end? The young man was tougher than a night in jail at the time of the Godfrey fight and since then he has been mulling round with a lot of champions. Only recently, he blew decisions to Jimmy Maloney and Ernie Schaaf. John claims that these were the old essence of petunia and that, in reality, he won both fights, although I don't know that this makes any great difference. The old Risko, I should say, would have let no lingering doubt to whether he had licked a pair like Maloney and Schaaf.

But, then, the old Risko wouldn't have been playing "straight" to a man like Schmeling and I'm not altogether convinced yet that he ought to be doing it. He will have gone back all the way to the interfield fence if he justifies this role in all detail tonight.

For Schmeling still, has to prove that he is everything we think he may be. He has acted the part to date but it must be admitted that he was off to a good break because a lot of people fancied that he looked like Dempsey. Personally, I think he fights like Schmeling.

I might say worse about him, at that. He really seemed to be a good fighter if his few starts here, a two-handed puncher and a shifty boxer. And I don't know why not, either. Men like Joe Monte, Joe Sekyra and Pietro Corri, known as the single because he spreads so readily, are a long way from even a sub-normal Risko.

As a matter of fact, I guess the lads are justified in terming this Schmeling's "first real test." It may be so real before the evening is over that Max won't know the difference. Somehow, I can't see this tyro playing pranks with a man whose experience includes fights with Tunney, Sharkey, Loughran, Heenev and Godfrey.

John, of course, can't punch a lick. Neither can he box. But, when he was good, he could maul all night long, meanwhile blocking everything very deftly with his torso. They couldn't hurt Risko then; it is claimed now that Godfrey's body punches softened him. It may be only a circumstance that Schmeling seems to be pretty much of a head puncher. Offhand, I would say that this is anybody's prize fight.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

TOMMY LOUGHRAN
"I'LL BET IT'D JUST FIT ME!"
"WOULD MAKE US A VERY ACCEPTABLE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION!"
"PROPERLY NAMED SO!"

The prospect of witnessing Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling fight for what the Madison Square Garden Corporation deems the right to succeed to Gene Tunney's vacated title, leave many a sane boxing fan with a very sour taste in the mouth.

Especially so, when on the sidelines sits Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, whom many believe could easily whip the gob and the cautious southern aviator in the same ring.

Just why Tommy was never left completely out of the mix-up to establish a new champion is a mystery, when one considers the ring achievements of the entries.

Should Stribling ever be recognized as the heavyweight champion, it should hand old Paul Berlenbach a good laugh. When Stribling met Berly, a few years ago, the Georgian was nearly paralyzed with fright and it was too bad they didn't have a gate in the ring that night.

Tommy Loughran is one of our few fighting champions. He has risked his title more times since he has been king of the light-heavyweights than any other champion.

forgetting that the gun is in there—"

"Gun?" Mrs. Borden quavered, shrinking away from the drawer, her hand going to her throat.

Ruth laughed nervously. "Yes—an automatic pistol, isn't it ridiculous—my having a pistol? But there were so many holdups in the building last month that a friend of mine—'bought one for me, and for himself, too. He has offices in this building, and he was terribly in earnest about my keeping the thing here in case of another hold-up. As if I'd touch it! I'm more afraid of it than I am of a bandit! Here are the cups. Sorry to be so long."

Five minutes later—just four minutes after Mrs. Borden had left, looking so strange and ill that Ruth was genuinely frightened—the door of Harry Borden's private office opened and he emerged, or rather was pulled along, for Rita Dubois is high good humor, was tugging at his hand.

"Don't worry! I'll be at the station on time," the dancer was reassuring him gaily. "I can do more shopping in a couple of hours than most girls could do in a day. And mind you don't call up the stores and limit these charge accounts, old dear!"

"Mind you don't fail to keep your part of the bargain!" Harry Borden reminded her, as they reached the door. "I'll see mine—all of it! But—no double-crossing, Rita!" Ruth glanced up, her spectacled eyes taking in the laughing but mutually suspicious couple. She saw Harry Borden wave goodbye to Rita, and many hours later she was to try to recall every detail of that picture, though now she only noted, idly, that the man seemed to be waving a torn banknote, and that Rita's finger-tip kiss was for Harry Borden.

PLOTTER POISONED

Valencia, Spain, Feb. 1.—Former Premier Jose Sanchez Guerra, who was arrested in connection with the attempted revolt of artillerymen at Ciudad Real, was removed from his cell today suffering from symptoms of poisoning. Doctors, who treated him, said his condition was not serious.

Guerra had complained of the cold in his prison cell, where he is confined pending trial. A charcoal brazier was placed in the cell. Several hours later the former premier was found to be ill with poison symptoms.

FLOOD OF COLLECTION BUREAUS HIT TOWN

White Ford With "Bad Bill Collector" Sign Attached Among Newcomers Here.

Talk of starting a Manchester collection agency seems to have brought a deluge of collection bureaus to town. The most prominent of these is the Connecticut Credit and Collection Company of Hartford. This company sends letters asking payment of bills in five days. Failure to do this brings a beautifully enameled white Ford coupe with "Bad Bill Collector" painted in glaring black letters on the side, to one's home to assist in the "coughing up" process.

Another firm, Connecticut Business Men's League, with offices where they hang their hats, is also in operation. Another, the American Adjustment Service of Boston is just beginning to work here.

The agency, handled by a Manchester man, will start its work

Monday. It will operate from Room 13 in the State theater building. This local agency intends to compile credit lists and sell them to the local merchants as well as take over the collection of bad debts.

HIGH COUNCIL ADJOURNS.

London, Feb. 1.—The Salvation Army High Council, which met here to review the new situation created by General Bramwell Booth's injunction, adjourned this afternoon without issuing any statement. The next meeting will be held at the army training college in Sunbury-on-Thames. The injunction restrains the High Council from deposing General Booth and electing his successor until he is given an opportunity to refute the allegations of unfitness.

People who get to the bottom of things often come out on top.

DISAPPOINTED IN LIFE ARTIST TRIES SUICIDE

"I Am Tired of Being Useless" Says Farewell Note of Rich Young Man.

New York, Feb. 1.—"Tired of being useless," Clark F. Huhn, 28, scion of a wealthy and socially prominent family, shot himself in the chest early today in an ante-room of a restaurant here. He was taken to a hospital in a dying condition.

In a farewell note the social register, an artist, commented upon the "futility of life" and stated he was "tired of being useless." It is believed he was disappointed because his paintings failed to gain recognition.

MISS SMITH TO TRY ATLANTIC HOP NEXT

New York, Feb. 1.—Eleanor Smith, 17-year-old aviatrix who broke the world's endurance flight record for women by remaining aloft thirteen and a quarter hours, hopes to some time make a trans-Atlantic flight.

"What I'd like to do," she explained, "would be to make the first flight alone using the radio beacon to guide me. I don't want to trust to luck and good winds."

"I want to make a trans-Atlantic flight that will be of importance as a step in air navigation." Miss Smith minimized her achievement in creating the endurance record for women. "As a matter of fact," she remarked, "I didn't go up with the intention of breaking a world record. I only wanted to test the plane I was using, and meant to stay up only ten hours. I didn't know when I started what the world record was. When I had stayed up ten hours I decided I might as well not bother about coming down so soon, so I remained up for thirteen hours."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

It has been decided to present the Sock and Buskin play "Pals first" at Cheney Hall instead of at the assembly hall in the High School as was originally planned.

John Reinartz, whose research work in radio telephony has made him internationally renowned. Mr. Reinartz is always certain to have an interesting story for any group and there is sure to be a record-breaking attendance to hear his speech.

The speaker at the weekly assembly yesterday was Harry E. Dodge of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A. Mr. Dodge spoke on the subject "What Price Success."

training consists of four fundamental principles: To keep mentally alert, to keep physically fit, to keep morally straight, and to give the necessary consideration to religion. "During the first six months of 1928, stated Mr. Dodge, "thirty-five of our industrial leaders failed from the picture because of inability to stand the stiff pace of modern life."

who have the best training are the most likely to succeed. Mr. Dodge was a very convincing speaker, and his wide experience with boys and girls, enabled him to give many examples of actual happenings to illustrate his statements. These illustrations were very interesting and at times humorous, with the result that the talk was much appreciated by the students. A Londoner escaped in an automobile smashup and gave $125,000 to charity. If that would happen every time there was an automobile accident in this country, pretty soon charity would be given well off.

JUBILEE SINGERS HERE ON SUNDAY

The Tuskegee Institute Jubilee Singers from Booker Washington's famous school at Alabama will render a program of negro spirituals Sunday night in the Center Congregational Church at 7 o'clock.

The program will include such numbers as: "Steal Away to Jesus," "Deep River," and Dr. Ak's "Going Home." These Tuskegee singers enjoy a wide reputation for the excellence of their voices and their appearance here should warrant a capacity audience at the church. The members of the quartet are: Leroy Brown, first tenor; Alvin J. Neely, second tenor; Nathaniel McCray, baritone; and William Wiley, bass.

Tuskegee Institute is located at Tuskegee, Alabama, and was founded by the late Booker T. Washington. It has an enrollment of 1300 students and a teaching force of 260 people. Tuskegee seeks to provide an opportunity to young negroes for training as teachers, skilled workers, and practical farmers. In addition, it is promoting a program of good-will between whites and blacks in the south. The Tuskegee program of inter-racial good-will was a considerable factor in reducing lynchings from 30 in 1926 to 16 in 1927 and to only 8 in 1928.

The Tuskegee representatives are now making a tour of the East in the interest of the work of Tuskegee Institute. Robert R. Moton, successor to Booker T. Washington, is successfully carrying on the work of Tuskegee Institute. A free-will offering will be lifted to help promote the work this institute is doing to uplift, train and inspire the ignorant and needy negro masses of the south.

Rev. Watson Woodruff, pastor of the church, will preside and introduce the Tuskegee Male Quartet. The concert will be under the auspices of the Cyp club.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE "The Firefighters" Sketches by Hessey; Synopsis by Braucher

The invention of the steam engine worked a great change in the methods of the fire fighters. With steam-driven machinery big pumps could be used, capable of throwing large streams of water many times as far as the old hand-driven pumps could reach.

Henry street—single of six rooms, closed in porch, hard wood floors, garage space and large lot. Price only $7,500.

Green Hill street, single of 6 rooms, oak floors, fireplace, large rooms and closet space, garage. Owner lives out of town and will sell at reasonable price.

WE'VE GOT TO LOCATE A HIGH-POWERED SALESMAN SOON OR OUR POLISH BUSINESS IS SUNK. SO FAR, I'VE FOUND 'EM AS SCARCE AS HENS' TEETH. THERE MUST BE AT LEAST ONE AROUND LOOSE.

STOP THE CAR, CLUSBY, THERE'S ALEC'S PARTNER! GIVE HIM A LIFT.

THANKS, DRESSER. I DIDN'T SEE YOU I WAS SO BUSY THINKING ABOUT FINDING A SALESMANAGER.

IT'S NONE OF MY AFFAIR, BUT I THINK IF YOU'VE GOT THE KEY THAT WILL UNLOCK THE FLOODGATES OF YOUR FORTUNE.

FROM MY OWN EXPERIENCE, I KNOW IT'S LIKE HUNTING FOR A NEEDLE IN A HAYSTACK. WELL... HERE WE ARE AT YOUR HOUSE, AND I HAVEN'T LET YOU SAY A WORD.

ALL I WANTED TO SAY IS... COME IN AND HAVE DINNER. THE WIFE WOULD LIKE TO MEET YOU, AND I LIKE A LITTLE MORE ADVICE ON THIS MATTER.

The rise of tall buildings furnished a new problem. The engines could not possibly send a stream of water to a height of 20 or 30 stories. So big high-pressure pumps were installed in central plants and connected with the city mains, sending streams of water with force enough to knock down a brick wall. Water towers to lift the hose were also devised.

FAMOUS YALE GRAD
GUEST OF KIWANIS

Perry T. W. Hale, Now Blind, to Speak at Luncheon Here
Monday Noon.

Perry T. W. Hale of Portland this state, famous Yale fullback, will be the speaker at the Kiwanis club's meeting Monday noon at the Hotel Sheridan. He will take as his subject "Education of the Blind." Mr. Hale graduated from Yale college in 1900 and met with a serious accident which destroyed his eye sight. Upon recovering he attended a school for the blind in Baltimore and is now carrying on a very successful insurance business in his home town. Mr. Hale's services are much in demand as a speaker before service clubs, and his talk is sure to be one of unusual appeal to every Kiwanian. The attendance prize at the coming get-together will be provided by George H. Waddell. Frank H. Anderson, the new president of the club has had mailed to each member questionnaires which he desires every member to fill out and return at once. This is in line with the effort of the president and directors to make the Manchester Kiwanis club an organization worthy of its membership.

A daughter was born Monday night at the Manchester Memorial hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Griffin of Knox street.
