

CONNECTICUT MAN MENTIONED FOR CABINET

Clarence Wooley, Head of American Radiator Co., May Be the Next Secre- tary of Commerce.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The rumor factory set up in the snow-banks outside 2300 S street continued to grind merrily today despite the flat statement that President-elect Hoover is not going to let the public in on the personnel of his Cabinet until March 4.

Out of the mass of reports, hot tips and speculations, however, one new name emerged as a Cabinet possibility which possesses the elements of likelihood. That was Clarence Wooley, of Connecticut, president of the American Radiator Co., to be secretary of commerce.

Having personally built up the Department of Commerce to its present status of efficiency, Mr. Hoover is scrutinizing the list of candidates to fill his shoes with a microscope, so to speak. Proposals of Wooley would fill the bill in every respect.

During the eight years Mr. Hoover served as secretary of commerce, few economic crises developed but what Wooley was called in. He and the President-elect have seen eye-to-eye on matters of program and policy and each has a profound respect for the ability of the other.

His Second Visit

Wooley visited Mr. Hoover about ten days ago at Miami Beach, taking with him the informal report of the committee on recent economic changes, a body appointed a year ago by the President-elect and charged with delving into every conceivable phase of the economic situation. Serving with Wooley on the committee were such men as Owen D. Young, of General Electric; A. W. Shaw, of Chicago; Edward E. Hunt, of the Department of Commerce; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania railroad; Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad; and Henry M. Robinson, the Los Angeles banker.

This report, embodying much of Wooley's personal handiwork, is serving as the informative basis upon which the President-elect is building his inaugural address, dealing as it does with the very vitals of the economic situation and its trends. One lieutenant of the coming chief executive referred to

UNUSUAL COMEBACK OF STOCK PRICES

Exchanges Closed Today Be- cause of Holiday; Resume of Week's Business.

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

New York, Feb. 22.—The period between the two February holidays, Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, was featured by a remarkable comeback in industrial stock prices on the big board, as well as on the important exchanges in the financial centers, which take their cue from Wall street and the New York Stock Exchange.

Although it appears on the surface that economic ills and regulations have been smashed by the swift recovery in stock prices in the face of the partial starvation of the market through the cutting off of money supplies, a glance below the surface shows conclusively that the market has been in every respect true to form, and that the path of uncertainty lies directly ahead instead of having been passed over.

Still Danger

For those with eyes to see them, the Stock Market is still filling a number of danger signals. The strong-arming of the bears out of their position this week has done the market no good, weakening instead of strengthening its technical position. The market does not make major advances on the covering of shorts, but on investment buying based on the genuine improvement in business conditions as a whole.

If, as some of our best economists have repeatedly stated, the Stock Market has been a year or two ahead of business in its hurry to discount future events, reactions such as occurred in early December

Pays Only $110,000 for a Fourth "Right" as Member of the Stock Exchange.

New York, Feb. 22.—Thomas F. Kelly, a page on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange for fourteen years, was today a member of that institution and will shortly become a partner in the firm of Joseph & Company. Kelly has arranged to become a member by acquiring four "rights" under the recently announced plan by which the membership of the exchange is increased from 1,100 to 1,375.

The price paid by Kelly was not revealed, but it is understood he paid not less than $110,000 a "right" or $440,000 for the full seat. Announcement also was made that James Russell Lowell, a great-grandson of the poet, has bought four "rights," entitling him to a seat. He will become a member of the firm of Wren Brothers & Co.

The price paid for each "right" was not disclosed.

TWO DEAD, 50 HURT IN WAKE OF STORM

New England is Busy Today Digging Itself Out of Snow Drifts.

Boston, Feb. 22.—Under a bright sun and in a zipping temperature, New England today began digging out from under what in many sections of the six states was the heaviest snowstorm since 1927.

The storm today had swept out to sea, leaving in its wake at least two dead and fifty persons injured. The storm's dead: Benjamin S. Doane, 50, of Winthrop, and Amen Malool, 68, of West Roxbury, both found dead from exhaustion.

A brief survey of the storm follows: From ten to fourteen inches of snow fell over Maine and points in Vermont and New Hampshire while eight inches fell in Boston. It was Maine's heaviest fall in twenty years.

Eleven passengers on an inbound Boston & Maine railroad train from Haverhill were nearly injured outside North station when the engineer of the locomotive blinded by the snow and atmospheric conditions ran his locomotive into another standing with a string of empty cars.

Handits Busy

With a curtain of snow covering their operations two robbers tossed a brick through the show window of A. Stowell & Co., Inc. a Winter street jewelry store, and escaped in the crowds with $25,000 worth of diamonds.

The snow was so deep in Boston suburbs that fire apparatus that fire apparatus was put on runners. Horse drawn pumps with fire fighting equipment answered alarms. Cape Cod, which has been lashed by a 60-mile-an-hour gale, found many roads impassable at places today. Low temperature prevailed on the cape as well as in some of the northern districts.

Among the injured were Arthur G. Gravelle, of Lowell, struck by a switching locomotive in Newton, and Edward J. Walsh, who fell into Fort Point channel while shoveling snow.

BLAMES 'ECONOMY' FOR 110 DEATHS

Senator Wagner Blames Vestric Tragedy on Ad- ministration's Policy.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Blaming "Coolidge economy" for the tragedy of the liner Vestris which sunk off Cape Henry Nov. 16, with the loss of 110 lives, Senator Wagner (D) of New York, today appealed to the Senate for a searching investigation and tightening up of safety laws at sea.

Wagner declared that if the truth had been known before hand "not a single passenger would have embarked on the Vestris."

Recalling two investigations of the disaster, Wagner pointed to reports that foreign vessels are not subject to the same inspection laws as American ships, and declared there was no warrant in law for this discriminatory legislation.

Too Few Inspectors

"Much is saved in the report of the shortage of inspectors adequate to make certain that ships that leave our ports carrying our citizens were sound and seaworthy," Wagner said.

"What possible circumstances could excuse such misdirected par-

These are moving days for the Coolidges. Nation Pays Tribute To Gen. Washington

Washington, Feb. 22.—The capital that his sacrifices made possible, and to which he gave his name, led the nation today in paying reverent tribute to the memory of George Washington, on the 137th anniversary of his birth.

Here in Washington the machinery of government slowed down and in some instances stopped altogether. All the executive departments and independent bureaus were closed, affording thousands of employes a holiday.

Congress whirled on, but at reduced speed, for in both Senate and House there were long pauses while members made memorial addresses, extolling the virtues and wisdom of the first president.

President Coolidge will cap the day, of remembrance by making the principal address tonight at George Washington University here. The university is conferring upon the retiring President and Mrs. Coolidge the degree of Doctor of Laws. The whole country may listen in on the President's tribute to Washington through a national radio hookup.

Even foreign diplomats joined in the national observance of the day.

Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador and dean of the diplomatic corps, addressed a large gathering in Memorial Continental Hall this morning under the auspices of the D. A. R.

HOLLYWOOD MOVIE STARS ARE TAKING TO THE AIR

Smart Shops Along Boule- vard Are Featuring Flying Costumes—Bebe Daniels Takes First Lesson.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of a series of three stories on aviation in the mo- tion picture colony.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 22.—Stars who twinkle in the film market have begun to shine in the sky.

In the smart apparel shops of the boulevard no stock is complete without a chic flyer's helmet and jacket to round out the sport wardrobe of Milady of the silver-sheet.

Above the clatter of dishes in audio restaurants today was heard the chatter of movie folk, animatedly discussing Hollywood's latest aspirant to the role of airplane pilot, who is none other than the redoubtable Bebe Daniels.

Her First Lesson

For Bebe, be it known, has just taken her first lesson at the "stick" under the tutelage of Captain Roscoe Turner, commercial pilot and formerly one of America's wartime aces. Reports have it that she has proved an apt pupil and may, in time, learn to handle the controls as well, if not better, than her sweetheart, Ben Lyon, the noted actor.

Ultra-modern is the romance between Bebe and Ben. The actor wooed his bride-to-be in the air. And in the air they now plan to make their honeymoon. The poppy little actress, it is said, began to learn the art of flying in anticipation of an aerial wedding trip and because she did not relish the thought of being outdone in anything by a husband.

Aerial Courtship

This aerial courtship began while Bebe and Ben were working together on a picture. Ben used to give Bebe a "lift" in his plane and take her to and from location. To the accompaniment of the engine's roar the romance developed.

Lyon learned to manipulate a plane during the filming of a picture whose locale was in the air. Since that time much of his flying has been done in the company of another actor-pilot, James Hail.

CHICAGO POLICE FIND DEATH CAR

Auto Which Looked Like Po- lice Car is Burned to De- stroy Evidence.

BULLETIN:

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Five men were arrested here today in connection with the finding of the murderers' automobile used by slayers in the north side massacre of seven gangsters.

Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege said he had "twelve witnesses" to be used in the prosecution of the slayers.

Steger said he had "definite information" coupling the murders to former henchmen of "Scarface Al" Capone, now in the "gangster field" independent of their former leader who has retired.

Police seized two men in a cafe today and from names found in the pockets of one, they arrested three more. All are held incommunicado.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Arrest of the actual slayers of the "unlucky seven" members of the "Bugs" Moran gang in the garage massacre a week ago was predicted today by Assistant State's Attorney Barry Ditchburne and Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege as the result of the discovery of charred remnants of the murder car in a private north side garage.

The police have in custody Mike Favis and Sam Laverdo among half a dozen others taken in a series of raids on known resorts of foes of the Moran "Mob."

The automobile parts were dismembered parts of a new Cadillac car exactly like those used by the Chicago detective squads. They were discovered through an apparently incendiary fire lighted, police assert, in an effort to destroy every trace of the death car.

Garage Rented

The garage in which the ruins were found was rented on Feb. 12 last—two days before the massacre by a man giving the name of Frank Rogers. More than a month ago Lieut. Louis Glatz discovered a machine gun nest at "Rogers" address. Leo Joppert, owner of the garage said he had no idea who Rogers was but that the latter had paid him $20 in advance.

The new developments caused the police to revive with intense interest the theory that the massacre of Moran's men was a reprisal for the murder of Lolordo and for the earlier murder—Sept. 7—of Lombardo, Lolordo's predecessor.

It is not, he replied quickly. "Why should I? I am a peaceable citizen. No, I do not carry a gun. If I did I would be breaking the law, and I am not breaking the law."

Capone reiterated that he knows nothing whatever of the massacre of seven men in a mysterious Chicago gangland killing recently. He said his chief interest at present is real estate. He has purchased $5 acres in St. Petersburg, he owns a dog track in Illinois and has other

Centuries Old City Is Found In Nevada

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 22.—Traces of another ancient city, buried for centuries beneath the Moapa valley of Nevada, have been found by Dr. Mark Harrington of the Southwest museum, it was disclosed here today by Dr. James A. How long ago this city teemed with life has not yet been de-

DRIVERLESS AUTO KILLS FATHER, SON

Were Unloading Furniture When Truck Backs Down Hill and Crushes Both to Death.

fontpelier, Vt., Feb. 22.—Two furniture movers, father and son, were almost instantly killed here today when a laundry truck, driverless and out of control backed down Terrace street hill, crushing the victims against the side of the moving van of Frank Gillson.

Will Lapan and his 33-year-old son, Charles, had just passed a table from the home of J. T. Gallacher to a helper on the van when, without warning, the laundry truck tore down upon them from the side of the hill above.

William Shanley, driver of the truck, had parked the vehicle in front of a house while he went inside to collect laundry. He said he applied the emergency brake and an examination of the truck after the fatal accident disclosed that this was true but that a piece of the mechanism, worn down by constant usage, snapped and released the brakes.

Gaining speed as it went the driverless truck, running backwards down the hill, plowed Lapan and his son against the side of the moving van, crushing the head of the father and the chest of the son and killing them instantly.

RICH YOUTH HELD

New Haven, Feb. 22.—Thomas Todd, 2nd, Yale junior and scion of a wealthy Seattle, Wash., family, was sentenced to five days in jail today for an alleged attack on a snowbird.

His companion, Dyer B. Lawrence, of White Plains, N. Y., was fined $10 in city court on a charge of drunkenness. Both appealed.

The students were arrested after it is said they accosted Berney Aubrey and Emily Cowley, appearing in a show here, while walking near the campus.

Miss Aubrey charged in court that Todd, who she said, was intoxicated, jumped at her as she passed and threw her to the ground. Lawrence did not take part in the attack, it was testified.

The youths were arrested by a policeman near the scene.

"NO WAR POSSIBLE BETWEEN BRITAIN AND OUR NATION"

FOUR FILIBUSTERS THREATEN SENATE

Fear They Will Cripple Sev- eral Departments Be- cause of Lack of Funds.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Four baby filibusters were being nursed along in the Senate today to confuse the administration's program and threaten the regular conduct of the closing sessions next week.

The vote-blocking activities which may result in death to all the measures involved, were aimed at the reappropriation bill, the Nicaraguan canal survey, the Dill resolution extending the life of the Federal Radio Commission for another year, and the second deficiency appropriation bill, much needed to pay the government's overdue bills.

The second deficiency bill faced the stiffest opposition, because it failed to include the $24,000,000 dry appropriation previously added by the Senate to the first deficiency bill. The latter measure apparently has been killed in conference because the House conferees refused to allow a direct vote in the House on the dry fund.

Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, announced he would lead a filibuster against the second deficiency bill unless the House first voted on the $24,000,000 dry fund. If this bill should be defeated by a filibuster, it probably would cripple some of the government departments between inauguration and the start of the next fiscal year on July 1.

Another Filibuster

Southern senators, meanwhile, appeared to be organizing a filibuster against the reappropriation bill, which would cut down the membership in some of their states, while increasing it in Michigan, California, Ohio and a few other states. Senator Dill (D) of Washington, was fighting the Edge resolution while Senator Copeland (D) of New York, threatened a one-man filibuster against extend-

AL CAPONE'S ONLY WORRY IS OVER HIS SICK SON

King of the Underworld Re- fuses to Discuss Chicago Massacre But Talks About Other Things.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—Al Capone of Chicago, the man who is never interviewed, was interviewed today in intimate fashion on the veranda of his secluded mansion on Palm Island overlooking beautiful Biscayne bay. And this man, who is one of America's first page personalities about whom there is an impenetrable aura of mystery, revealed that above everything else he would like to drop out of the limelight.

"I am sick and tired of publicity," said Capone. "I want no more of it. It puts me in a bad light. I just want to be forgotten."

Capone had just taken a plunge in his private swimming pool. He was sitting on the porch, attired in a striped bathrobe when the reporter, accompanied by Izzy Kaplan, one of the nearest photographers in the country, entered the Capone estate. Kaplan wanted to take pictures of Capone but he would not allow it although he did permit the cameraman to take outside "shots" of his magnificent $250,000 mansion.

No Guaranty

"It is true," was asked Capone, "that you always carry a body-guard?"

"Why should I? I am a peaceable citizen. No, I do not carry a gun. If I did I would be breaking the law, and I am not breaking the law."

Capone reiterated that he knows nothing whatever of the massacre of seven men in a mysterious Chicago gangland killing recently. He said his chief interest at present is real estate. He has purchased $5 acres in St. Petersburg, he owns a dog track in Illinois and has other

Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador Tells Daugh- ters of American Revolu- tion That Only Honest Dif- ferences of Opinion Sepa- rate Two Nations on Na- val Disarmament.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Only honest differences of opinion separate England and the United States on naval disarmament and, with patience, an agreement will be reached, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador told the daughters of the American Revolution today at a celebration of Washington's birthday here.

The ambassador decried the possibility of war between the two countries and recalled the sorrow that swept England when President Garfield was shot and that which was felt in this country when King George recently lay so desperately ill.

"I cannot but feel," he said, "that when we share each other's sorrows so truly as in these two cases there cannot really be anything wrong with Anglo-American relations."

Trouble Makers

"Yet in spite of this evident good feeling and in spite of the desire of the two peoples to live in friendship with one another, there seem to be some people on either side of the Atlantic, he said, who really enjoy stirring up trouble between us, whose lips distill gall and wormwood or whose pens are dipped in vitriol. Those necessarily make agreements difficult on any subject with regard to which we may be perfectly reasonable and honest differences of opinion."

Sir Esme quoted at length from a speech made by Sir Austen Chamberlain at Birmingham, Eng., on the subject of failure of the Geneva disarmament conference. He pointed out the differences which separate the two countries, and pointed to the speech as representing the friendly feeling felt in England for the United States.

The Difference

"The difference between us even then," he quoted Chamberlain, "was not a difference of principle. We admitted, freely and willingly partly because the United States naval forces and our own. It is an admission which we have never made to any other nation, which we should have made to no other nation."

The differences, Chamberlain asserted, were those arising out of the difficulty of applying the principle to the different circumstances and needs of the two countries.

Mutterings of War.

"Is it not then unfortunate," Sir Esme continued, "that now on this side and now on that side we hear mutterings even of the possibility of war? Of sinister designs and evil ulterior motives, when, judging by the utterances of those in really responsible positions, there is no foundation whatever for such stories?"

"On the whole, therefore, we may as well ignore them and take the brighter view that, as Sir Austen says, it is inconceivable that with patience and at an opportune moment friends should not be able to resolve technical difficulties which have hitherto prevented them from reaching an agreement."

Step Toward Peace

The Kellogg anti-war pact was described by Sir Esme as a step toward a state of universal peace.

"To sneer at such a universal covenant to reject force as a means of settling disputes is surely very cheap," he said. "Are we really to suppose that all the nations which have ratified this treaty have done so without the intention of keeping their pledged truth? Any such supposition seems to me monstrous. This treaty has made an incalculable difference in world affairs, though this is not yet generally realized."

Formerly, he added, going to war was not considered an immoral act. "Now, at any rate," he continued, "whatever other grounds there may be to justify such action a government which goes to war will be branded by world opinion as a breaker of oaths, as false to the promise it has solemnly given."

"Such is the true meaning of the Kellogg Pact," he said, "and if public opinion is of weight, it must weigh heavily in the cause of peace."

Visitors at Hale's Oak Street Self-Serve store need not go home hungry. The demonstration booths at the annual Pure Food Fair and Ninth Birthday of the Self-Serve provide a meal with even a choice line of desserts. There are 11 demonstrations at the Oak street store and one at the Park street store. At the Park street Self-Serve store the children are being presented to visitors. They are lassos and jumping ropes. Last night and today the Oak street store was crowded with visitors. The main celebration of the Hale Self-Serve birthday is being held at the Oak street store. Here there are demonstrations of Sunbeam products, Silver Lane pickles, Hale's Morning Luxury coffee, Kruman's Macaroni and Spaghetti, "Good Luck" pie filling and crust, National Biscuit Company products, Camelfire marshmallows, Royal Gelatines and Battle Creek Health foods. It is not necessary to buy any goods in order to see the demonstrations. The Hale Company desires everyone to feel welcome at the birthday party.

BLAMES 'ECONOMY' FOR 110 DEATHS

simony? Was that another example of the stifling, grudging, unintelligent and unintelligent Coolidge economy? "The American traveling public is led to believe that the government inspects the vessels leaving our ports. It intrusts its safety to the thoroughness of those inspections. Now we are told by none other than the inspector general himself that that trust was misplaced; that he has not enough men to make proper inspections. "That is not the kind of economy that the American people want." Wagner demanded an investigation by the Senate to determine whether other vessels sailing from American ports were disregarding safety rules.

WONDER IT DIDN'T PLAY "GOOD MORNING, MR. ZIP."

It happens at the High School Carnival last night. Moving pictures were being shown of the school activities. The film showed Mr. Verplanck waving to a group of girl students. On the stage a radio orchestra began to play, "Don't Be Like That."

SCHOOLBOY RUN DOWN ON ROAD TO BOLTON

Another Member of Fish Family Injured Going to Green School.

Paul, six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fish of 787 East Middle Turnpike, while on his way to the Manchester Green school yesterday morning was struck by a woman motorist and injured about the shoulder and arm. The accident happened on the Bolton road and the driver after making sure that the boy was not severely injured, took him with two other children to the Green school. She left, however, without reporting the accident to the teacher and the boy remained at school all day. He is a pupil in the kindergarten department. Helen, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fish has just recently returned to school after an injury received on December 4 in the same way. The Fish children and a number of others are obliged to use the highway in going to and from school. The parents are trying to have the bus which conveys other children in the district to the Green school, re-routed so that this menace from speeding drivers may be averted.

OFFICIAL IS HELD FOR GIRL'S DEATH

minutes later a shot was heard. Rushing to the room, guests found Miss Smith writhing in pain on the floor. She immediately accused Branning of the shooting. The girl's father, George Smith of Philadelphia, has announced his intention of aiding in Branning's prosecution and also of bringing a civil action against him. Miss Smith, just before her death, gave out an interview in which she said that she was doing cabaret work because many famous stars had started in cabarets and she hoped to attract the attention of men of influence in the theatrical world by working in the Atlantic City resort.

DO BIG BUSINESS AT H. S. CARNIVAL

Booths and Entertainment Features at Affair—Continues Tonight.

Close to eight hundred persons are estimated to have attended the opening of the annual high school carnival held last evening. The entertainment was highly satisfactory and the various booths did a big business. Another big crowd is expected tonight. While vandville was the main attraction last evening, it will be dancing tonight. The high school basketball game with West Hartford at the Rec will be started at 7 o'clock and dancing will be transferred to the high school assembly hall. No additional charge will be made. The entertainment program opened last evening with several selections by the high school orchestra under the direction of Miss Marion E. Dorward, director, and Edward Dardus. The school band followed with five selections under the leadership of Davis Samuelson and then the Girls' Glee Club rendered several numbers. This was followed by the senior male quartet consisting of John Johnston, Warren Case, Kenneth Graham and William Johnson. Little Miss Dorothy Wirtalla favored with two dance hits both of which went over well. The first was an equestrian dance and the second, "Picnic Cotton" in which she imitated Anne Pennington in George White Scandals. "Wasted Bits", a comedy sketch put on by James Wilson and Wesley Warnock was warmly applauded and drew the most favorable comment of the entire program. Wilson took the part of an Eskimo while Warnock was an inimicable Jewish traveler. Four reels of motion pictures were shown and they will be repeated tonight. The vaudeville will not. The crowd last night witnessed three wrestling matches. Louis Cheney who offered to meet all comers threw Roger Spencer in the prescribed time but was thrown himself when he continued the match. Then Sully Squatrito threw Spencer in eight minutes and was held to a draw by Cheney. The who's who in the mat art will be settled tonight. NO ACTION TAKEN. Washington, Feb. 22.—The House banking and currency committee failed to take action on resolutions demanding explanations of the Federal Reserve Board's warning against speculative loans, in a two-hour session today.

Town Officials Take Day "Off" and Do Odd Jobs

Today being a legal holiday the town officials took a day "off." There is no business being transacted. Town Clerk Samuel Turkington left the iron curtains down in the vault room and then gave up his time to entering of the instruments to be filed in the daily record book, seeing that conditional bills of sales were properly placed and checking up on releases of licenses that have been returned and such other detail work as can be best handled when the office is closed.

In the engineering department work was going on towards the completion of maps, showing grades and fills. In preparation for the coming year's work and also in the checking up and placing on the maps of the location of the new houses that have been erected and seeing to it that proper street numbers are assigned.

The judge of probate's office was also "closed." There was no let up in the installation of the new system that will put the records in a completed condition and in picking out some of the probate records that have not reached full completion. As the office was "closed" it gave an opportunity to carry out the work without being disturbed. The office of the Board of Selectmen was also "closed" but they were rechecking the appropriation and getting other matters straightened out that can best be done when there is no interference by the daily routine. The board of relief held its last hearing Wednesday, so the members took advantage of the holiday to drive around town and check up on the few places where there have been complaints and requests for reductions. That work would not take the whole day, so they are also going around and visiting other streets and places to see if the assessments, as left by the assessors, are in the opinion of the board of relief correct ones. They have the power to increase as well as decrease assessments figures and as the complaints have not been made to any great numbers in asking for a reduction they will have time to look over some of the other conditions and it is likely that some increases will be made rather than deductions by the board. Painters took advantage of the building being "closed" and are salting the doors and the small lobby as the public was entering the building today. But the back door was open just as usual. There seemed to be just as many automobiles in the rear as on week days. George H. Howe, who is getting up his list of personal tax bills, has able to devote his morning to the work and has made out all of the personal tax bills that are to be mailed to the male residents. They are sealed and stamped and are all packed away to be mailed on April 1. He has about 3,900 of these ready and this afternoon started on the women's list.

LONDON'S NIGHT LIFE 'GOING TO THE DOGS'

Arrest and Conviction of "Queen" Scares All the Night Club Proprietors. London, Feb. 22.—London's night life has gone to the dogs. As a result of the strenuous police activity which followed the conviction of Mrs. Kate Meyrick, the so-called "Queen" of London's night life, along with a police sergeant on charges of bribery and corruption, fully half of the city's most popular night clubs and cabarets have been forced to close down by lack of business. Those that are still running are facing with failure. Enforcement of the curfew law demanding that no liquor be sold after 11 o'clock at night is the chief cause of the debacle. In times past the law had been openly flouted, for obviously no one wanted to go to a night club and see the 11 o'clock and no one wanted to go unless drinks were easily procurable. Restaurant keepers and night club proprietors however, have been thrown into panic by the severe sentence of 15 months' hard labor meted out to Mrs. Meyrick, and they are fearful of repeating her offenses. As a consequence, all visitors to night clubs are informed that no intoxicating beverages are available after the curfew hour, and the result is that the customers have walked out en masse.

REPORT SEN. VARE WAS NOT ELECTED

Committee Says He Is Not Entitled to a Seat in U. S. Senate.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The Reed campaign fund committee today filed a final report in the Senate declaring Senator Elect William S. Vare (R) of Pa., "is not entitled to a seat in the United States Senate." The report was unanimous by the committee of three Republicans and two Democrats the committee filed likewise a series of special reports from the investigators, revealing election frauds and irregularities on the part of Vare followers in the Pennsylvania Senatorial election of 1926. The report was filed by Senator James A. Reed (D) of Mo., who served notice he would call it up tomorrow for action by the Senate. "From the foregoing facts and conclusions," the report stated in conclusion, "it was the opinion of the committee that William S. Vare is not entitled to a seat in the U. S. Senate."

The report was signed by Reed and Senators McNary (R) of the Oregon, Goff (R) of West Va., L. Follette (R) of Wis., and King (D) of Utah. Minority Report. King also filed a minority statement, declaring he felt the case should not be closed until Vare had been given an opportunity to appear personally in his own defense.

Charges of gross fraud and election corruption were made against the Vare organization by A. R. Clapp of Philadelphia, the committee's special attorney, in a separate report. Clapp declared Wm. B. Wilson, the defeated Democratic Senatorial nominee, had lost 10,000 votes in Philadelphia and 2,320 in Pittsburgh, through election frauds.

"In only 181 of the 1,500 election districts of Philadelphia was the Senatorial vote correctly counted by the election officers," Clapp reported. "The average change of a Philadelphia voter to have his vote counted correctly was less than one in eight." Clapp reported that the Philadelphia recount resulted in a net loss of 3,202 votes for Vare and a net gain of 5,500 votes for Wilson. Some of the Philadelphia frauds, listed by Clapp, were the voting of unregistered persons, fraudulent entry of names in the registry books, ballot stuffing by various methods and repeating.

ABOUT TOWN

Miss Laura House of East Center street will leave tomorrow for a visit in New York City. Miss Anna Sullivan, teacher in the Buckland school, will spend the next week at her home in Worcester. Miss Beatrice Flagg, whose home is in Maine will be the guest of friends in New Haven during the school vacation. Miss Mary Connor of the Eighth district has left for Canada. FOUR FILIBUSTERS THREATEN SENATE

ing the life of the radio commission. A fifth filibuster, against the naval appropriation bill, apparently ended when the Senate adopted an agreement limiting debate after three o'clock this afternoon. Senator Blaine (R) of Wisconsin, and Senator King (D) of Utah, led opposition to this bill. King warned the Senate that enactment of the naval appropriation bill totaling about $400,000,000 would result in a treasury deficit at the end of the present fiscal year—June 30. Some Rumors. There were rumors current in the Senate that some of the filibustering tactics, apparently aimed at legislation, was in reality directed against the confirmation of Senator Irvine L. Lenroot (R) of Wisconsin, as a member of the U. S. Court of Customs Appeals. The Lenroot nomination has been considered for several days by a judiciary subcommittee and a report probably will be made to the full committee next Monday. That would leave six days in which to secure his confirmation. The principal objection to Lenroot's confirmation, aside from his $20,000 employment by the so-called "power trust," was said to be his connection with former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall in the recent oil scandals. During the oil inquiry it was shown that Lenroot had conferred with Fall, prior to the latter issuing a statement saying he had received $100,000 from Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher. Later it was shown this statement was false and that Fall had received the money from Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, in the notorious "little black satchel" deal. Lenroot apparently will be charged with having helped Fall to mislead the Senate. A revival of the oil scandals debate undoubtedly would block his confirmation.

SUSPECT SHOOTS SELF WHILE SLEUTHS WAIT

New Haven Salesman Was Accused of Stealing Checks from Mail Boxes.

Portland, Me., Feb. 22.—A few minutes after he had been placed under arrest today charged with larceny of checks from apartment house mail boxes, Robert H. Young, alias R. H. Littlefield, 27, who claimed he was an airplane salesman of New Haven, Conn., took his life by firing a pistol shot through his head in his apartment on Oak street. Police Inspector Joseph A. McDonald had served a warrant on Young and was waiting for him to dress. When he did not appear, McDonald discovered the body on the bathroom floor. Police and postal inspectors charged that Young posing as an airplane salesman visited apartment houses, stole checks from the mail boxes and through friendships established with business men here found no trouble in cashing the checks.

The fliers will take off in Washington the night before the inauguration and remain in the air until the ceremonies have been concluded. The men will take pictures of the capital at night, develop them in flight, and drop them by small parachutes to Bolling Field, where they will be rushed to newspapers publishing extras the morning of the event. The pictures are also to be over the country. A new special flash light powder of tremendous brilliancy will be used.

ATTACKED BY WOLF

Whiting, Ind., Feb. 22.—His wrists and face lacerated, Mike Plutke, grocery store proprietor staggered into a police station today with the carcass of a timber wolf which he had clubbed to death after a terrific battle. Plutke said the animal leaped at him in the rear of his store. After choking the beast, Plutke hurled it from him seized a stick lying on the ground nearby, as the wolf leaped for his throat. Plutke clubbed it and after a half hour's battle killed it. Detectives said it was a "real" wolf. No one knows how it came into this vicinity.

SKATING CONDITIONS

Snow has been a big hindrance to keeping the skating on the Center Springs pond open, but the Skating Club has won the favor of the Park board and the latter is assisting in the work. Today the men of the park board were at work and have cleared off a portion which will make possible skating at the pond tonight.

SHOT BY HIS WIFE LEAVES HER BUT $10

Man, Dangerously Wounded, Runs to Lawyer's Office and Makes New Will. Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 22.—After being shot and dangerously wounded in an altercation with his wife today James H. Combs, 37, ran a blood trail from his home to the residence of his attorney, E. J. Fleming, to make a new will disinheriting his wife. Combs refused to be taken to a hospital until the document had been executed, leaving his wife only $10 of an estate she estimates to be worth $50,000. The wounded man sat in the Fleming home, dictating his will to his attorney, naming his mother Mrs. Rene Langley, as sole beneficiary. His condition is critical.

DEFENDS WASHINGTON

Washington, Feb. 22.—Critics of George Washington were assailed by Rep. James M. Beck (R) of Penna., in delivering a Washington's birthday address to the House today. "A few sapient critics, not worthy to unite the latches of his shoes, have belittled Washington's intellectual powers," said Beck. "An American professor, speaking at Oxford some years ago, said that Washington was a man of few natural gifts, self-educated and somewhat slow-witted." "Such was not the judgment of those who worked with him. Jefferson spoke of his intellect as 'great and powerful,' and Patrick Henry said that of all the members of the First Continental Congress, Washington was foremost for 'solid information and sound judgment.' Beck pictured Washington as the first great foe of bureaucracy and a believer in the soundness of the judgment of the people.

GET-TOGETHER MEN FETE THEIR LADIES Dinner, Dancing Entertainment Feature Annual Cheney Party.

Snowstorm or no snowstorm, nothing could keep the "Old Guard" away from the annual Ladies Night of the Get Together Club, last evening.

As the 150 diners gathered about the board bent on securing out justice or injustice to the delectable viands prepared as only Chef Urbano Osano knows how, and served by a corp of handsome men and beautiful girls.

and early February, are absolutely essential to the well-being of the market. What most speculators need is sufficient foresight to enable them to dodge the violent dips which occur from time to time.

The Reserve Board reported a decline of $91,000,000 in the week's total of speculative brokers' loans, as compared with the previous week. Most financial authorities will be inclined to say: "Not enough," since in Wall street the view was entertained that a larger shrinkage was expected and would be demanded by the Reserve Board.

LETO, FLORIDA BOXER, HERE TO VISIT BUSCH

Defeated by Battalino Last Night He Predicts He'll Whip Hartford Boy March 21.

Tony Leto, Florida featherweight boxer, who gave Bat Battalino the best fight of his professional career since the latter turned professional, and Fred P. Havighorst, his New York manager, came to Manchester following the scrap at Foot Guard hall in Hartford last night.

Busch seconded Leto in the fight with Battalino which the latter won on a technical knockout in the seventh round after being floored in the second. It was only after a great deal of difficulty that Havighorst and Leto reached Hartford yesterday due to the severe snow storm.

Interviewed by the Herald sports writer this morning in the Western Union Telegraph office as he was about to leave for New York, both Leto and his manager expressed the opinion that Battalino was in a bad way at the end of the second round and that only for the bell, would have been knocked out.

Leto showed plainly the after-effects of the fight with Battalino. He wore patches over both eyes and the skin was scraped off his nose in a couple of places. He said that he had met two or three men who punch harder than Battalino in his career. He is only 21 years old and has been in New York since May.

Havighorst, whose motto is "you can't fill your club with applesauce," has seen Young Stripling fight several times and he expressed the opinion this morning that the Georgia lad will beat Jack Sharkey when they fight at Miami Beach next Wednesday night. He says Stripling is much smarter than most of the boys who can punch very hard. Any man who can knock out 114 boxers whether they are called "palookas" or not, must be good, he said, adding that these so-called set-ups are the boys who are kicking the "dope bucket" all over the ring every now and then.

OPEN FORUM

FIREMEN'S CONVENTION. Feb. 20, 1929.

Your article on page 12 of yesterday's issue under the heading "Firemen Won't Benefit by Adv. Solicitation" is in error when it states that a professional Advertising Agency has the indorsement of the State Firemen's Association to solicit advertisements for the program of the Firemen's Convention to be held in East Hartford next August.

The fact is and the committee of the East Hartford Firemen and a committee of the East Hartford Chamber of Commerce know that the State Firemen's Association did not and will not indorse programs to be used for its Conventions.

The Agency that was soliciting the program privilege, a committee of the East Hartford Firemen and a committee of the East Hartford Chamber of Commerce met with the writer, who is a member of the Convention committee, about three weeks ago and they were told emphatically that the State Firemen's Association would not indorse any arrangements that were made would have to be made between the East Hartford Firemen and the Agency.

Statements like that in yesterday's Herald put the State Firemen's Association in an embarrassing position and the writer would like to know if any of our local merchants have been told by these solicitors that they have the indorsement of the State Firemen's Association.

Yours truly, W. J. CROCKETT, Vice Pres. State Firemen's Assn.

Editor's Note—The Herald's information was furnished by the Chamber of Commerce. It is probable that the advertising agency is using the State Firemen's Association's name without authority.

It is "the Magna Charta of the Hoover administration."

With these facts as a background, Woolley went into the lead in the pre-inaugural speculation over the commerce portfolio.

Another of the ten posts entering the spotlight today was the secretaryship of labor. Henry M. Robinson, of Los Angeles, banker and close friend of Mr. Hoover's, is in Washington, and yesterday went over the field with the President-elect. About a month ago, Mr. Hoover requested Robinson to canvass the list of candidates for secretary of labor and report back on their respective qualifications.

The name most mentioned as the successor of James J. Davis is William N. Doak, of Virginia, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who headed the labor division of the Hoover campaign organization. Doak, as a native of Roanoke, answers the demand for Cabinet recognition of at least one of the four southern states that went Republican last fall. He is understood to be acceptable to William Green, head of the A. F. of L., and of course, his work in the campaign places Mr. Hoover under certain obligations to him.

property. These matters keep him busy, he asserted. His Son Ill His main worry right now is the illness of his only son, Al Capone, Jr., ten years old, who has undergone four major operations. The boy is at the state here recuperating, with his mother and father giving him every attention. Capone is very affectionate toward his son, kissing and fondling him almost every time they meet.

"I had him in May" brothers hospital at Rochester, Minn., and I saw to it that he received the best medical attention," remarked Capone. "I even had a noted surgeon from France treat him. His case was most unusual, but he is feeling better now and my mind is somewhat relieved."

Capone had a tutor for the boy but has dismissed him as the child needs rest more than anything else. Capone said he would give Al Junior a college education—"the best education that money can buy." Capone said he knows what it is to miss a good education.

"I only went as far as fourth grade in grammar school," he remarked regretfully. All questions dealing with the underworld were parried by Capone. He does not want to discuss his past. He would not talk about his war record either, even though he is said to have made a splendid record during the World War.

SCHREIBERS TO BUILD N. E. SCHOOL ADDITION

Local Firm Bids Far Below Others—Is $27,674 Under the Appropriation.

By bidding far below the limits of the appropriation for the eight room addition to the Hollister street school, Gustave Schreiber & Son, Manchester builders, last night obtained the award of the contract for that edifice. The Schreiber bid was $47,326, or $27,674 less than the sum appropriated by the Eighth district almost a year ago, $7,173 less than the next to the lowest bidder and $19,674 less than the top bid. Operations are to begin at once, and the building must be completed within 120 working days according to the contract.

The award of the contract comes after a long series of delays which, however, have resulted in a large saving to the district. The first set of plans drawn proved to be impossible of construction within the appropriation, as no bid approached the $75,000 limit of the appropriation and some of them ran to almost twice that sum. There was a vexatious delay over getting the architect to submit new plans and finally the district committee changed architects, employing the Boston firm, which made the plans for the Highland Park school.

This firm finished its plans about a month ago and selected the Manchester Construction Company to do the confirmatory figuring showing that the building could be erected within the appropriation. These figures were submitted to the building committee two weeks ago and as required by the district's by-laws competitive bids were asked for. There were four bidders, whose bids were as follows: Manchester Construction Company, $67,000; Suzzo Construction Company, New Britain, $59,758; Bartlett & Brainard, Hartford, $54,498; Gustave Schreiber & Son, $47,426.

The Schreiber concern named as its sub-contractors the following: D. J. Hannafin Co., Hartford, plumbing; Frederick Raff & Co., Hartford, heating; House Electrical Co., Hartford, electrical work; Arvid Seaburg, Manchester, mason work and plastering; Cambridge Cement Co., Cambridge, Mass., cement work; Standard Steel Construction Co., Hartford, steel; G. Bostwick, Hartford, roofing; John Olson, Manchester, painting.

BRAINS COUNT, AFTER ALL

Carmel Myers Makes An Interesting Note On Hollywood

By Dan Thomas.

Hollywood, Calif.—Brains actually have become an important factor in the make-up of a motion picture player, is the word of Carmel Myers, herself an actress.

Titan-haired Carmel actually believes that the day has come when a person must have brains to combat the combined forces of movie camera and microphone.

"Talking pictures have done a lot of things to this industry, one of the most important being the placement of a value on brains," declares Carmel. "Brains never mattered before as far as an actor or actress was concerned. But now we must learn our lines."

Miss Myers has just completed two "squawks" for Fox so she should know something about them and their requirements. And I have been told by Fox executives that she is very good in both. Carmel always has been a good actress. Now her voice has been put on a par with her other qualities—due to some extent, no doubt, to the considerable singing she has done at one time or another.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers, who during the last year has become one of the screen's most popular leading men, is about to break into fame in other fields. Having always been a musician of considerable ability, "Buddy" has now turned to song writing. He has just finished a song which will be introduced to the public in his next picture. He will get a three-cent royalty on each sheet sold.

"Zwie und Fierzigste Strasse." No, that's not a new kind of food. It's merely the title of America's first talking film for foreign release. As might be expected, Warner Brothers are leading in this field as they have in every other talkie development. The film, a one reeler, is their product. The film was made with German, French and English dialogue, each member of its cast being a fluent speaker of all three languages. And still some more news on the talkies. On looking over the cast sheet of "The Leatherneck," a Pathé photophone production, I was struck by the number of old timers playing in it. Practically all of them have been revived by the introduction of dialogue. Mitchell Lewis, Lee Shumway, Lloyd Whitlock, Jack Richardson, Cohn Chase, Richard Neill, Joseph Girard and Philo McCullough are all talking in the film.

damages, so no arrests were made. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hutchins and Francis Hutchins spent the day Sunday in Berlin, where they attended the church Mrs. Hutchins attended before her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stoltenfeld and daughter Barbara of Manchester spent Sunday in Columbia, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Tsham.

Mrs. Ruth Jacobs has been spending several days with friends in Hartford and Vernon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brousseau are the parents of a baby girl born Monday morning. Mrs. Brousseau was Miss Juliette Hennequin before her marriage.

The Ladies Aid society were entertained Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. H. W. Porter and Mrs. Bailey, at the home of Mrs. Porter. Thirty-eight ladies and six children were present, the largest gathering of the kind on record. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent, closing with refreshments served by the hostesses.

The regular meeting of Columbia Grange was held Wednesday evening with 32 members present. The lecturer's hour was on the general subject of "Art." Much pleasure was manifested by the exhibition of drawings by the members present, some of them showing much talent. The music of the evening was in charge of Miss Congetta Sergio, who gave three piano selections. Miss Marie Bergfrede read a paper on "American Art and Artists" and Mrs. Ruth Jacobs one on "Art and Architecture." A guessing contest ended the evening's entertainment. The subject of the next meeting will be "The Weather."

Carleton Hutchins was voted into the Grange and was obligated in the 1st and 2nd degrees.

The Board of Relief met at the Town Hall all day Thursday. This is their third and last meeting.

Those of us who read the weather forecast in Wednesday night's paper "increasing cloudiness and slightly warmer" were surprised and somewhat peeved on arising Thursday morning to find the thermometer at 11 and the worst snow storm of the season in progress. There is an old superstition that when you see a lot of women out it is a sign of storm and some of the men folks were unkind enough to blame the Ladies Aid meeting Wednesday for the weather. As one of them unfeelingly remarked "Just look what the Ladies Aid have stirred up this time." Those who have been perusing the seed catalogues for the past few days, put them away with a sigh and instituted a search for the snow shovel, as being of more importance just now. The storm continued through the day with a slowly rising temperature so the weather prediction was vindicated to that extent.

Tempers must remain even, however annoying the circumstances arising. One of the oldest of Fifth Avenue officers lost his post recently because he lost his temper in an argument with a chauffeur, who turned out to be the driver of the police commissioner's car. The commissioner held that the officer should have kept his head. The chauffeur, of course, was also fired. There are, perhaps, few more trying jobs in all New-York.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 22.—The nerves of a New York traffic officer, stationed at some hectic "key" spot, are good for from five to seven years. Then they begin to give way. Only a few survive. Nervous disorders begin to smite them. Many have to be removed and, in a few cases, nervous breakdowns were reported.

And this is the case, despite all efforts to pick "nervous" men for the posts. To be sure, there might be a few lucky and dumb specimens who could stand the wear and tear of such work, but they would be inefficient. The tests given are both versatile and careful. A certain mechanical stolidity is, of course, demanded, since a monotonous variation in arm swinging is demanded. Yet there must be a good head for the many crises which rise and there must be a pleasant and affable disposition to meet the millions of questions asked; there must be an intelligent capacity for direction and an eagle eye.

Because the various seasons must be weathered, the body must be strong. The man must be able to stand heat and blizzard, while carrying on his trying task. The average physique would snap under the requirements and the hectic strain would tense average nerves to breaking point within a few days.

Confusion plays a large part in the wearing down process of even the strongest. Habit does, to some extent, overcome this, but the eye strains and tires, I am told, from looking ceaselessly upon the seemingly endless stream of machines and humans.

Near the Williamsburg bridge, and caught on the eastern bounds of Fifth street, is a tiny village which, somehow, has lost its identity and its very life.

Rows of vacant buildings are not exactly commonplace in a city as congested as Manhattan, yet here in the old "Drydock Belt," you will come upon boarded windows with broken panes and empty rooms behind them. It is a tiny section of the city which has been lost in the shuffle and forgotten.

Only the old "Drydock House" . . . a colorful sailor's bar in years ago . . . retains a semblance of life.

This is a spot dating back to the Civil War. Tradition and legend flavor its atmosphere, and you'll hear of the time when the Monitor crew stopped for food before taking sail for the celebrated encounter with the Merrimac. Until a few years ago some of the veterans would shuffle in to recall youthful hours spent over the tables. Practically all are dead.

Far away it is from the Manhattan which is today; and close it is to the Manhattan that was. All about, as one approaches, the pace of life seems to slacken and is reflected in the browsing, slow-stepped casualness of those who move along the streets. Ofttimes it seems impossible that this is a part and parcel of the fabulous metropolis. It is even quiet and reflective, almost as peaceful as a simple, sparsely populated village of uncertain geography.

IN GREAT DEMAND

A movie director was discussing with a woman the difficulty of filling a particular part in a forthcoming play.

"I want," he said, "a young man who looks like Lindbergh, is tall, blue-eyed and has sex appeal, a sense of humor and an air of distinction."

"So do I," she sighed.—Tit-Bits.

Boy Needed Goat's Milk As Food; Now Big Goat Man From Nebraska

Fairbury, Neb.—Because his son needed special food as an infant two industries have been added to the community and Fairbury is well known wherever goats are raised.

Twelve years ago, Willard, son of Dr. C. E. Leach, then an infant required a nutritious food and his father bought a small herd of goats. Goat milk proved its value in building Willard into a husky youngster and Dr. Leach and an older son, Carl, now 22, developed an intense interest in the animals.

Today Dr. Leach is regarded as an authority on goats, while Carl is in constant demand at fairs and five stock shows as a judge of the animals. Dr. Leach and his sons also own and operate one of the two existing journals devoted exclusively to the breeding and care of goats, The International Goat Journal.

Small Beginning "Ours was a humble beginning in both lines," Dr. Leach explained. "After Carl's graduation from high school we had an opportunity to purchase the goat journal from a man who published it at Ensign, Kansas, along with his weekly paper. We moved the equipment here in a truck and started publication in the basement of our home. Today our journal is read in every state in the Union and in eighteen foreign countries. We employ three men to assist us in its publication."

The goat industry is growing by leaps and bounds, Dr. Leach declared.

"A few years ago people would come for hundreds of miles to see our flock of goats. Now they can see many of the animals in their own community," he said.

A good indication of the growth of goat breeding can be seen at State and county fairs, Dr. Leach continued. A few years ago not more than one or two animals were exhibited if any at all.

Now, however, the goat department of the international dairy show is fast taking its place alongside the dairy cow exhibition.

Carl Leach with his bride, of a week are just winding up a trip through the old south where he has been engaged in judging and awarding ribbons on milk goats and rams. His last circle included Little Rock, Ark., Memphis, Tenn., and other cities. He has judged animals at Des Moines, the Canadian provincial fair at Westminster, B. C., and Pomona, Cal. Old Mexico is also developing large herds of blooded goats.

Meat is "Chevron" There are several good strains of milk goats, according to Dr. Leach. Saanans are the Holsteins of the goat family, pure white with slender faces and well formed bodies. Nubians are the Jersey and come in almost any color but are easily identified by their long, hound-like ears. Toggenbergs carry bridle marks and white feet contrasted with a brown body and rank next to Saanans in milk production.

Another little known fact is that goat meat makes excellent food, the flesh being sold under the trade label of chevron. It is milder than mutton and resembles pork in texture and flavor.

As in the cattle industry goat breeders are attempting to eliminate horns and Dr. Leach estimates 65 per cent of his herd are "muley" or naturally hornless. Others are dehorned in the same manner as cattle. Another advantage of goat raising is the fact that they multiply faster than cattle. Twins, triplets and even quadruplets are not uncommon.

COLUMBIA

An automobile accident which occurred Sunday afternoon just west of the Green on the Hebron road caused quite a little excitement, for a time. A Ford was proceeding toward Hebron with a Studebaker behind. Just in front of the residence of T. G. Tucker, the driver of the Ford signaled for a left turn, meaning to turn across the road into the Tucker driveway to turn around. The Studebaker was unable to stop, and a car coming in the other direction complicated matters, so that the Studebaker hit the Ford, turning it over on its side in the Tucker driveway. The Ford was quite badly smashed and the occupants, a man, woman and child shaken up and bruised, though fortunately no one was seriously hurt. The driver of the Studebaker took the responsibility for the accident, and offered to pay all trifles and much in demand as a body builder especially in treatment of pulmonary diseases, retailing for from 35 cents to a dollar a quart, depending on the locality.

HE'S THE ONLY ONE.

Portland, Ore.—Tie this one, if you can. A conscience-stricken motorist recently sent the following letter to Traffic Captain Irwin: "I was in Portland recently and, upon starting for home, I went several blocks without putting my lights on. I did not do so intentionally, nor did anyone say anything about it, but I thought I would write and find out if there is any fine for it. If there is, I wish you would let me know."

SOUTH CAROLINA FARMER PROFITS IN SUGAR CANE

St. Matthews, S. C.—Let King Cotton fall from his throne, so far as G. W. Stabler, Calhoun County farmer, is concerned.

Stabler, brother of a South Carolina associate supreme court justice realized $2,500 from five acres of sugar cane.

"That," said the farmer, "is better than raising cotton in boll weevil times."

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Friday, February 22.

A tribute to America's first president by Charles Evans Hughes will be broadcast from coast to coast by the WTIC chain on Washington's birthday at 7:30. Hughes has announced his subject for the radio address as "The Debt the Nation Owes George Washington." Frederick William Wile, political analyst and newspaper correspondent of the Boston Herald, will introduce Mr. Hughes over the air. Belle Baker, famous vaudeville headliner, will be the star of the hour to be broadcast over the Columbia network at 8:30. An hour and a half later the same group of broadcasters will radiate the grand opera, "Il Trovatore," by Verdi. The scene is laid in Sicily and is set in the middle of the 15th century and concerns the rivalry of the Count of Luna and Maurizio, the troubadour, who are both in love with Leonora, a noble lady of the court. A dramatic sketch will be presented for the first time in honor of Washington's Birthday at 10 o'clock through WTIC and associated stations. With an all-star cast picked from the outstanding dramatic features of WTIC and other stations, the play will be a miniature comedy of "Washington's First Defeat." In addition to regular musical features, the story deals with the great American warrior's disappointment in love, when at the age of 16 he was filled by the "Lowland Beauty," Lucy Grymes. A melody of songs on river themes will be featured by an orchestra under the direction of Thill Spitznagel at 10:30 through the WTIC chain. The melody includes "Swanee River," "Deep River" and "Slow River."

ESTHER RALSTON COMING TO CIRCLE

Esther Ralston's latest Paramount starring vehicle, "The Case of Lena Smith," will open at the Circle theater for a special two days engagement commencing on Saturday.

The Case of Lena Smith is something no one will want to miss under any circumstances. It is a story of mother-love in the Josef von Sternberg manner, for it is Sternberg who directed this wonderful screen masterpiece.

The story is laid in Vienna and in the nearby countryside. It covers a period of twenty years from 1894 to 1914 and Miss Ralston plays the dual role of a young girl and a mother of forty. James Hall, the young leading man, has the chief supporting role and the versatile Fred Kohler has an important part.

The color, the life, the people of gay Vienna are faithfully represented and the realistic scenes, evidencing a wealth of research in their reproduction, have an interest all their own. It is surely another of the screen's greatest productions.

The associate film feature at the Circle for Saturday and Sunday brings Tim McCoy, the popular western favorite, in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Stour Blood." Action and thrills are packed into this fast-moving drama of the primitive west.

The current chapter of "Tarzan the Mighty," co-starring Natalie Kingston and Frank Merrill, and a Crazy Kat cartoon will round out the bill.

Yakima, Wash.—Isabel Abella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Abella of Wapato, recently completed seven weeks of this worldly life and celebrated the event by having her hair bobbed. At that age, the child had hair equal to that of the average year-old baby. It was long, silky and black, and Isabel decided on a modish shingle.

WASHINGTON.

This man was poised, reliant on himself, yet not an egotist, he knew the worth of action to control the moment's trend and strove for wisdom to direct his mind. Seeking for knowledge amid clouds of doubt, his fortitude was equal to each need and justice was a part of all he did. There was no littleness in his great soul. He was not moved by clamor or cabal: So he appears on History's lasting page As one to follow, honor and revere.

They should reach the local judges well before this date. Last year an essay written by Clara Porter of the Jagger School district came within one of winning the county prize, which was taken by a Stafford Springs boy.

The Francis Waldo place owned by Mrs. Everett G. Lord, has been sold to T. H. Kellogg of Hartford. The farm is located on Burroughs Hill, and includes considerably more than 100 acres of land, besides dwelling houses of colonial type and farm buildings. There is also a magnificent pine grove in the rear and two brooks meet on the farm with good trout fishing. Mr. Kellogg intends to use the place as a summer residence for himself and family, and for week-end visits.

He is planning to make extensive improvements, and is having the land surveyed.

While Everett G. Lord and Lucius W. Robinson were driving to Hartford on Tuesday with a truck load of produce and provisions, something went wrong with the steering gear of the truck, near the Henry Phelps place in Andover, with the result that the truck was overturned and both men thrown out. To make matters worse it was discovered that the engine had caught fire. Quick work on the part of the occupants of the car, who escaped injury, saved the truck, however. Add a half cup or more of finely minced ripe olives, and form into small balls with butter spatulas; roll in chopped parsley and arrange on a nest of shredded raw spinach or on lettuce leaves, placing two or three whole olives on each plate. As this salad forms the protein part of the meal, one-quarter of a pound of cheese should be allowed for each person.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME

Cambridge, Mass.—Although the movie job is nice and it lures many a youth by its glamour, there's no place now like the old home dining room table to August Guzauski. August, 245 pounds, and only 16, left home to get a job with some outfit. He appeared in four pictures and then got the urge to go home. He wrote his father, and father welcomed him like the prodigal son. Then August was taken to court and a judge witnessed his promise to stay home for a few years.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

Everything has been said about Washington. Everything has been said over and over again. There is nothing left to be newly said. But there is one thing that may be said repetitively, just at this time. Before Herbert Hoover, he was the only President of the United States who possessed the engineering mind.

Not merely that he was a surveyor—that was an accident, more or less. It was probably just chance that Abraham Lincoln, for instance, did not hit on a surveying job; he would have taken it and would have fitted into it, after a fashion. But Washington possessed that same quality of seeing "in large," of grasping problems through visualization of all their angles and dimensions, and of holding vast prospects within the picture, which is the possession alone of the world's titanic builders.

On this particular Washington's birthday it is of passing interest that for the first time since the administration of the Father of His Country, we are on the eve of welcoming to the Presidency another man endowed with this same vision for national opportunity and for the ways and means of grasping it.

May the steadfastness and courage of the latest of Presidents also equal that of the earliest of them all.

TROLLEY CAR MANNERS

For some inscrutable reason, a great many of those persons who embark on the cars of the Connecticut company in Manchester seem to leave their politeness and their normal consideration for others on the sidewalk. Possibly it may be that the facilities offered to its patrons by the company—so meagre, so depressing in their discomfort and crudity—are destructive of all feelings but resentment, suppressed anger and all-around antagonism. At all events, in their treatment of one another Manchester's trolley riders are a fairly hard lot.

To be sure they do not bite, scratch or kick one another. They do not call each other evil names. They seldom even frown at one another. But they conduct themselves with the most complete though seemingly unconscious disregard for each other's rights and comfort.

In the first place it is not the exception but almost an infallible rule for two-thirds of a carload of passengers to distribute themselves with infinite pains so that not another living soul can get a seat. They do this by leaving just about half of a sitting space between each two persons. And only rarely does it occur to any of them to "move up."

Another completely local institution is the practice of many a woman, usually of considerable avoirdupois, to seat herself calmly upon the person of whoever happens to occupy the space nearest to the door, compelling that unfortunate to slide out from under as best he or she may; all because she would rather not walk four steps to a vacant seat. We have seen this a hundred times and have yet to hear an audible protest from the outraged citizen. Perhaps if trolley riders were to resort to placing tacks on their knees, point up, it might work a reform in this connection.

But most serious of all is the very general custom of any number of passengers on entering a car, finding no vacant seat within five feet of the door, though there may be plenty further back, and calmly fastening almost in the doorway. It is an every day experience to see trolley cars in this town with a wad of standees jammed in the front end while there are a dozen or more empty seats in the car.

Through these huddles other passengers, entering or leaving, must fight their way. And in case of an accident a number of persons would be extremely liable to injury, who would be in comparative safety if they were seated where they belong.

There is probably no town anywhere where the people are more well disposed, more orderly and better conducted, all around, than this one. But their street car behavior is a source of wonderment to strangers and a mystery to the psychologist.

We suspect that our solution may be correct—that they figure that no matter how they act it is too good a way for the cars they have to ride in. And on that score we don't know that we can blame them.

APPEAL BAILS

They have not only convicted District Attorney Asa Keyes of Los Angeles of being a bribe taker and sentenced him to San Quentin for at least a year but they have actually put him in jail. This latter is, in the United States, an achievement. For some reason, which in our lay crudity of mind we have never been able to fathom, it is the well-nigh universal custom in the various states to admit to bail a person convicted of a crime, pending action on his appeal.

To release on bail a person charged with a crime, pending trial, is a perfectly comprehensible and logical proceeding, because no defendant is to be assumed to be guilty until he has been proven guilty. The burden of proof of his crime is upon the state, and until proof has been made he is logically entitled to every consideration compatible with assurance that he will appear for trial.

But, having been tried and convicted by a jury of his peers, the positions of state and defendant are reversed. The state's assumption is, properly, that the verdict was a just one. It is up to the defendant, if he appeals, to show that there was error in the trial, a contention which the state does not recognize to be valid. Wherefore it would appear to be mere common sense to put the convicted person to the serving of his term, leaving it to his attorneys to obtain his release through a subsequent trial if error can be proven and another jury induced to give a different verdict.

This is what the California court has evidently done in the case of Keyes. Why it is not the common practice we do not understand. If it were, one thing is certain—there would be far fewer appeals of guilty persons and far fewer crimes committed by crooks out on bail.

POOR GERMANY!

Poor, broken-backed Germany, sweating under the sinful burden of reparations and emitting pitiful squawks at regular intervals like a cuckoo clock, has been carrying a joyous pension list which would have done much good to the heart of a Roman wineseller of old Rome. And hardly anybody knew anything about it, outside of the Vaterland, until the other day when a queer thing happened.

A lot of Germans who had to work for their money had been making a fuss over the huge array of generals, Herr-Professors, admirals, diplomats, chancellors and what-nots who were drawing down fat pots of pin money running up to five or seven thousand real dollars every year, many of them at the same time holding fine paying jobs under the government or in it. So, to placate the common herd, the Socialists and Democrats in the Reichstag, confidently expecting that the Centrists would join the Nationalist and People's parties in opposing the measure, showily voted for a bill reducing all pensions of more than $3,000 a year to that figure. And then, to everybody's amazement, the Centrists voted for the bill too—and passed it.

Oh, the lamentations! The indignation! Some hundreds of millions of dollars a year in pensions pruned and slashed, and hundreds of paunchy pensioners deprived of super-luxuries to which they had become accustomed. And all because somebody in the Reichstag blundered.

Such a terrible time are the Germans having. Poor, starved Germany!

A RARE BIRD

Out of the murk and muck and terror of the Hudson Tube there arises a rare and lovely flower, an example of candor and courage on the part of a transportation chieftain so unusual as to be unique. The general manager of the Hudson and Manhattan Company admits that he and nobody else was responsible for the accident which imperiled more than a thousand lives and caused serious illness or injury to a fortunately and relatively small number of persons.

His name is Klump and among transportation officials he is a rara avis. "This thing is very much the public's business," he says. "We wonder how many men in the business of hauling human freight ever admitted that an accident on the line was any business whatever of the public. At the moment we cannot recall any precedent for Mr. Klump's position. The usual thing is to blame the Almighty, unless there is a handy dead engineer to carry the onus to his grave. From the records and from findings of utilities boards like that of Connecticut, Klump is probably the first railroad official of any kind who was ever to blame for the loss of a life or the splintering of a car or a passenger's trunk.

This makes Mr. Klump, by the record, a particularly bad general manager. Yet somehow or other it is probable that today he enjoys the confidence of New Yorkers more than any other transportation official in the great city. When he says that he is going to do everything humanly possible to prevent any more accidents in the tube, they are going to believe him. And such is human nature that it is highly probable that the average passenger will hereafter enter Mr. Klump's tube with more confidence and less dread than any other underground railroad in the metropolitan network.

You can believe in that sort of a man.

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, Feb. 22.—There were many who asked, after the election, what would happen to the Democratic party, but only a few to keep over the Socialists. Yet the poor Socialists not only polled the lowest presidential vote they had cast for 23 years but also lost their sole representative in Congress.

Victor Berger of Milwaukee, the defeated Socialist congressman who is now about to retire, was asked about the future of his party, if any, and replied equal to the occasion.

In the first place, said Mr. Berger, he can be re-elected to his seat in 1930 if he desires. He was beaten only by about 300 votes after 32,000 voters, mostly Republicans, had split their ballots to mark crosses for Berger—a record for ticket-splitting which Mr. Berger challenges any other congressman to match. If so many persons hadn't voted the straight Republican ticket blindly for fear of the Pope, if so many other hadn't voted straight Democratic on account of the Ku Klux Klan and if so many workers had not voted for Smith in the hope of more and better beer, says Mr. Berger, he would easily have been elected.

Concerning national politics, Mr. Berger says there is only one party except for the Socialists and that the Democratic party has been non-existent for many years. Another party must develop as a strong position group which in time will be elected to run the nation, says he, whether it be the Socialist party or some other progressive movement.

The Socialists, claims Mr. Berger, are possessed of a marvelous resiliency. They bounced up to 5,000,000 votes when they adopted Senator La Follette in 1924 and last November they bounced back to a mere 260,000, despite the excellence of their candidate, Mr. Norman Thomas.

Mr. Berger sees no reason why they shouldn't bounce back to 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 in 1932. In fact, Mr. Berger sees several reasons why they should. And by 1936 there ought to be 10,000,000 Socialist votes. Mr. Berger, now 68 years old, only hopes that he will live to see 50 or 60 Socialist members of Congress.

"There is bound," he says, "to be a very strong progressive or Socialist party. The only other possibilities are a dictatorship of the Mussolini type and anarchy; I want neither of those. Big business will have full sway for the next four and possibly eight years. Don't forget that, after all, Calvin Coolidge had the point of view of the New England manufacturer. Herbert Hoover was part of British big business and for the last few years has been part and parcel of big business here.

"I am convinced, after 50 years of public life, that this big business crowd will create its own opposition party. The Democratic party is absolutely beyond hope. There is no such thing. At best it is the Republican party of the South. Factories in New England and Pennsylvania have gone down to Alabama, North Carolina and Georgia, so now our Democratic friends want tariff protection.

"The tariff used to be the only line of demarcation between parties; now that's gone. If it were not for the negro the south would be more Republican than the north. The Republicans will soon have the whole south because their policies fit southern business.

"The Republican party is frankly the party of Mellon and Vane and our prosperity under it is so great that Secretary of Labor Davis says 85 per cent of us are poor. The 85 per cent will not accept that kind of prosperity forever. Ten per cent of us, or about 12,000,000, earn less than $700 a year, which is certainly on the line of starvation.

"The outcome here will be as in every other country. The same causes will produce the same results that they have in England, Germany and France. Our people are as intelligent as theirs and although our education isn't as good it is getting better. We are also producing to a remarkable degree a white collar proletariat, and our universities are producing more and better rebels as students become enlightened.

"My opinion may seem exaggerated to you, but if there are no signs of a healthier political situation today it is because our workers have about 27 per cent more buying power than before the war and thus can buy radio sets, automobiles and even clothes on the installment plan."

Socialists, of course, thrive on business depressions when they are out of power. Berger expects a minor slump, producing considerable unemployment, next year or possibly this year. But a real major slump, or industrial panic, he believes, will be along about 1935. Such a slump, he holds, can be expected every 14 or 15 years.

"When that comes," he says, "almost anything might happen politically."

SEA AND CAR SICKNESS.

There is no doubt that the mental attitude plays an important part in the production of seasickness. Passengers on a boat will sometimes become seasick even before the boat has sailed, or they may become sick in observing the symptoms in others. After getting seasick or car-sick once, almost anything which will remind one of the circumstances will produce the symptoms again if one is of a sensitive nature. For instance, the smell of grease near a train may produce car sickness, or looking at the swaying motion of a boat. Even motion pictures showing waves and ships have produced seasickness in susceptible people. Usually, however, there is some physical cause in addition to the psychic impulses. Some of the physical factors are: an overloaded stomach, congestion of the liver, tumors, pregnancy, visual defects, or a disturbance of the balancing fluid in the inner ear. Usually, some one or more of these physical factors are present in addition to holding the thought of expecting seasickness.

Most passenger boats have the

to be desired rather than upon the swaying motion.

It is a wise plan to cleanse the system thoroughly before starting on a journey if you are afraid of sea or car sickness. This can be done by eating sparingly for a few days upon a careful diet and also using enemas. Seasickness is always enervating to the system and should be avoided if possible. In some cases severe collapse is not uncommon and systematic acidosis.

While some people suffer from seasickness during an entire voyage, it is probable that death has never resulted from this cause alone even though the symptoms are most distressing and unpleasant.

In seasickness there is usually a general discomfort and perhaps a headache, a large production of saliva, and nausea soon followed by retching and vomiting. Some relief is usually experienced after the stomach has been emptied of its contents and the bowels have moved. This indicates the proper course of treatment.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Spinal Meningitis.

Question: E. W. asks: "All you please give a thorough description, cause, symptoms, etc., of spinal meningitis? What ages are most liable to have it, and is there a cure?"

Answer: I have written several special articles on this subject, and will be glad to send them to you if you will only send your address the next time you write. It is impossible to give a satisfactory answer to your question in this column, as space does not permit.

Eye Bread.

Question: Mrs. M. F. C. writes: "Is eye bread starchy, and would it be harmful for one to eat who is on a diet for inward goitre which causes rapid heart beat and whose blood pressure is at times above normal?"

Answer: It is very difficult to obtain bread made from rye flour, as most of this bread contains only 10 per cent, to 15 per cent, of rye flour mixed with wheat flour. In any case all bread is starchy, and I do not recommend either bread or anything made of cereals during the time one is trying to recover from any kind of thyroid derangement or when one's blood pressure is too high.

Ache in Back of Neck.

Question: Mrs. M. F. C. writes: "For about a year, I have suffered with an ache in the back of my neck. It does not ache constantly, but at different times during the day. Can you tell me what is the cause of it?"

Answer: Such an ache in the back of the neck with a woman always indicates some pelvic derangement, or misplacement of the abdominal organs. The ache in the neck is a definite reflex from these organs which are located at exactly the other end of the spine.

SAD BUT TRUE.

First Wife: How long had you known your husband before you were married?

Second Ditto: I didn't know him at all. I only thought I did.

West Hartford Favored To Win From Manchester

Tony Leto Gives Battalino Best Opposition Of Career

But Florida Boy Loses on Technical Knockout In Seventh After Flooring Bat In Second; First Five Rounds Even.

By TOM STOWE

Tony Leto, game little Italian featherweight boxer from Tampa, Florida, won his way into the hearts of a capacity crowd at Foot Guard hall in Hartford last night when he held Bat Battalino even for five rounds and floored him in the second before losing on a technical knockout in the seventh round. The lad from the sunny south provided the Hartford public sensation with the best opposition he has had since turning professional after winning the national amateur championship in his division.

The bout further served to prove the worth of Battalino. It had been said by some that any man who survived the first three or four rounds with Battalino stood a mighty good chance of winning; that the Hartford boy would grow weaker as the bout lengthened. This proved false for Bat looked almost as fresh at the end as the start and was punching equally hard.

Favor the Underdog

Battalino has a big following but fight fans are queer specimens of humanity. After seeing their idol win a bunch of fights, they have come to a stage where they want to see someone lick him. Last night when Leto caught Battalino flush on the chin and knocked him off his pins, the crowd, almost to the man, stood up and roared its approval. And when Leto made Battalino miss punch after punch in amateur fashion by his crafty all-around ring generalship, they further shouted their delight.

Perhaps this desertion on the part of many of his staunch supporters deeply affected Battalino. At least when he came out of his corner at the opening of the sixth, he proceeded to give Leto a neat pasting. Cuffing him with hard rights and lefts to the head and body, Bat wore his opponent down. A hard left to the pit of the stomach felled Leto and he took a count of nine. This blow was the turning point in the fight. Leto's face showed clearly the effects of the blow and he wasn't the same man the rest of the fight, which, by the way, didn't last long after that.

His Friends Return

When Bat continued his vicious attack in the seventh, the crowd sensed Leto's downfall and did a graceful "about face," starting to pull for Battalino. In a matter of a few minutes, the crowd reached for their overcoats and some were heard to cry out "set-up; another palooka" and so forth. Leto, however, was not badly hurt by the blow. It was very evident from the rags that he could have gotten up at a count of two but he had sense enough to take a count of nine. He came back strong in the second and had Bat making many wild swings.

A few seconds before the round ended, Leto drew the house into an uproar when he caught Bat with a hard right knocking him down for the first time in his professional career. Bat appeared more surprised than hurt and when he started to get up, he lost his balance and slipped back to the floor. The bell rang at the count of two and Battalino got up of his own accord and trotted to his corner little the worse for the sudden turn of affairs.

Crowd Boos Bat

Battalino took the third round by a close margin but Leto came back and captured the fourth during which the crowd booted Bat for his wrestling tactics. We called the fifth round even. Leto got away to a lead which was evened by a determined slugging bee which Bat forced in the closing part of the bout. With the first and third rounds going to Battalino, the second and fourth were anybody's fight as the boys came out for the sixth but from this point on the Capitol City lad proved himself the better man.

Undoubtedly Promoter Ed Hurley will rematch these boys. The bout would be a sell out again, but we think Battalino would again be the victor. Leto is a much cleverer boxer than Battalino but he does not possess any such devastating punch. There are many who believe

Berlenbach Held Stribling To A Draw First Time

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the fifth of a series of articles in which Milton K. Wallace of Macon, Ga., and a lifelong friend of the Striblings, tells the story of Young Stribling's colorful life.

By MILTON K. WALLACE

Possessing the inherent ability of the showman, Pa Stribling has always used this quality in promoting the destinies of his offspring. Young Stribling... Ballyhoo was young to him when he entered the boxer-manager business, his many years in vaudeville having equipped him well in the art of attracting the attention of the public. His devices have always been unique, if sometimes ineffective.

In fact, it is this same showmanship that has several times brought criticism upon the house of Stribling. After the Macon youngster had begun to attract national attention, Pa hit upon the idea of making a grand tour of the country, meeting all corners. For the journey he purchased a huge bus, had it equipped with bunks, bat's a kitchen, and all modern conveniences that could possibly be crowded into such a vehicle.

With a retinue of sparring partners, a cook and mechanic, the Striblings set out to conquer the world. A press agent went ahead to book matches in the hedges and byways, as well as in the larger cities of the country.

The Good Ship Stribling went up the Atlantic seaboard to New York, over into Canada, across to Oregon, back through the southern part of the United States and home. Besides swelling the family coffers, Stribling found upon his return that he held decisions over Jimmy Delano, Billy Frens, George Cook and many other lesser notables.

Pa was never happier than when he was putting on a vaudeville act, and this tour reminded him a lot of the good old days. Whenever an opponent was not available and the town looked good to the advance man, an exhibition was arranged between Stribling and one of his sparring mates. This tour did more to make Young Stribling popular than any of his victories has ever done.

A near tragedy was narrowly averted while on the tour—a trag-

Say Dempsey Thinks Stribling Will Win

Dope Has It Jack Has Advised Strib to Center Attack on Sharkey's Body.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of daily articles from Miami Beach, Fla., in which Henry L. Farrell, N.E.A. Service sports editor, whose articles appear in this county exclusively in The Herald, sizes up the coming Stribling-Sharkey fight of Feb. 27.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—There seems to be only one thing certain in the minds of Pa Stribling, Ma Stribling and their son, Willie, as the date approaches for the boy's fight here with Jack Sharkey. They were going to win the fight, they tell you. And they give the most reasonable arguments in their very nice polished way.

Bill was predestined and preordained to be the heavyweight champion of the world. His career was made out for him by a sort of providence and now all that remains between him and the goal is the Sharkey man and perhaps that Dempsey person who is helping to promote the fight.

"Money isn't the thing with us in this fight," Pa Stribling said and the boy nodded assent. It is hard to get the boy to talk about himself. He operates on the theory that his father is much better qualified to talk. He can use bigger words, the boy says, and his conversational gear runs at many more miles an hour.

"As I was sayin'," Pa went on, "money isn't everything to use in this fight. We are not poor people. Leto would beat Bat if they fought again. They base their opinion chiefly on the fact that Leto traveled all day to get to Hartford. Leaving his training camp well up in New York state by automobile at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, Leto and his party, became snowbound and it was several hours before they could make train connections. They did not arrive in Hartford until 8:30 which gave Leto little time to rest.

edy that would have thrown despair into a home that had never known the sting of unhappiness. While, out motoring in a roadster near Tucson, Arizona, the automobile turned over and Ma Stribling was injured, but not seriously. Only a miracle saved her from being killed, it is said.

Herbert Stribling, Bill's younger brother, who is known as "Baby" Stribling, accompanied his family on the long jaunt over the country. Baby, two years the junior of Bill, has the honor, if such it may be called, of giving his brother the only "cauliflower ear" he possesses. It happened shortly after Bill entered the professional ranks, and was not done with the gloves, but in wrestling.

Baby, too, gained a lot of knowledge about fatigues in general on the journey, and for a while it seemed as if his fame would rival that of his brother's. He is a rival boxer, crafty, fast and courageous, but has not grown beyond the junior welterweight class and he does not seem to possess a love for the game.

"Bill got what we went after—experience," Pa said when he had returned to Macon. "He's now ready to fight anybody and we won't be satisfied until we've won" the light heavyweight championship of the world.

But that was one wish of Pa Stribling's that never came true. In the latter part of 1924, a few months previous to his tour of the country, Stribling had met Paul Berlenbach, holding him to a six-round draw. The Georgian had not yet reached the age of maturity and the New Jersey boxing law would not permit him to fight more than six rounds in that state. Although the official verdict had been a draw, the several eastern sport writers hinted that Stribling had received a bad decision.

Anxious for a return match with the Astoria Assassin, Pa Stribling conferred with a number of match-makers in an effort to get his boy rematched with Berlenbach. This bout, one of the turning points in the career of Young Stribling, will be commented on in one of the articles to follow.

NEXT ARTICLE—Stribling goes after Tunney's light heavyweight title, but the bout at Miami is called off.

ple and we are not great big millionaires, but I think we proved that this wasn't a money fight with us. We wanted more out of it than money.

"We talked with Tex Rickard. He gave us our prices and we agreed and there were no papers signed and, when those things happened as they did, we talked again to Mr. Carey and we said that our understanding with Rickard could be written off and we would do business again with the corporation.

"And we did. We are in there fighting for a percentage of the gate and I don't know what our end will be and I have not been near the box office to see. We are not interested in the money angle. What we want to do is to get in shape and we are doing that.

"The experts who have been peering at Sharkey and Stribling in their workouts think that Stribling is the man. He has been fighting a lot here and there all over the country and the weather has been very hot here. Sharkey claims that the weather advantages should be for Stribling.

"What's he squawking about the weather for," Sharkey asks. "He is a guy from the south, ain't he? He ought to go big on his hot stuff."

The boy and his father, however, do not think they are losing too much weight.

"I know what I ought to weigh," the boy says. "I've always been kind of skinny. They used to call me the stripling a long while ago.

"I don't need a lot of work to get in shape. All I need is the exercise to get my wind in shape, because I think I will need a lot of wind to catch that fellow.

"He runs plenty, they tell me, and I'll have him running. Just about two rounds is all I'll have to go in this fight and I am not excited about that referee business. Anybody can count 10 and that's all I'll need in there—a counter."

Local Sport Clatter

Mac Macdonald won from Francis McCarthy 50 to 37 in a first round match in the Rec's elimination pocket billiards tournament and this leaves only two more matches to be played. Louis Charlot meets Walter Dunn and Earl Rogers is paired with Phil Farr.

Tom Kelley and many other coaches object to the new football rule which makes the fumble dead where it is recovered. Bet Southern California is on the affirmative side. That is, seeing Roy Rigels is going to be captain of the team next season, Jack Dwyer, incidentally, says he thinks Kelley's viewpoint on the matter is okay.

The Trade school has three more basketball games to play, all over town. Next Thursday they meet the American School for the Deaf, March 7, Bridgeport Trade and March 15, Simsbury High school.

Police Commissioner Willard B. Rogers says he was prejudiced against Gus Sonnenberg until he saw him wrestle in Providence the other night. Then he changed his view completely and now praises the former Dartmouth football star. The commissioner says Sonnenberg is very smart and skillful in addition to possessing a world of strength despite his lack of height.

The Rec Five will flirt with defeat when it invades Middletown tomorrow night. The Red Wings sent advance notice to the effect that they are all set for a killing. Twice the Rec has turned them back by close scores, but this time they promise a different story.

The bowling match between Howard Humphrey and Arthur "Kaiser" Berthold, 20 years old Rockville sensation scheduled to start tonight in Rockville has been postponed a week by the local duck-pin champion wh. will roll with the Charter Oaks in a special five-man match with the Morgan Five of Hartford tonight at Joe Farr's alleys.

Bill Brennan beat Lefty St. John 50 to 40 in the Rec pool tournament the other night but it seems the latter was under the impression the match was to be 60 points so they have agreed to play it over again. Looks like a new move on the part of St. John. He'll never come that close again or else we miss our guess. This Brennan is a bad man to swap shots with when he's going right. Saw him get 36 balls the other night before his rival scored one. Never mind who his opponent was. That's too embarrassing.

We've just received a belated Valentine greeting from an anonymous friend which bears the following inscription under an appropriate cartoon: You wear loud clothes and flashy ties. And in athletics pose as "wise." You bet on pool, and are always wrong. You're our idea of a "Tin Horn Sport."

partners, that he was winging punches into them rather close to the belt line. Pa was asked if the boy was training on foul punches and he denied it, of course.

"He is developing a new punch to the body," Pa said. "He uses this new punch with a downward twist of the wrist instead of bringing it up and with those great big pollops on his hands they look like low punches, but they are not. Ask the sparring partners."

And the sparring partners say they are not low.

Since Dempsey dropped Sharkey with the hook to the body every one seems to think that Sharkey is a mark for body punishment.

It is reported around here that Promoter Dempsey thinks that Stribling is to be the winner and that he has even sent some words of advice to the boy. Give it to the guy in the belly, he is reported to have told him, and if he didn't tell him he has been telling every other person.

PAULINO PICKED AS WINNER OVER K. O. CHRISTNER

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, Feb. 22.—Paulino, the glove swallower, and K. O. Christner, the rubber novel, will forget tonight that they are exhibits "A" and "B" in nature's gallery of wonders and, with all the gentility of a couple of well bred stevedores, will proceed to settle professional differences in the immortal manner. They will meet at Madison Square Garden and straight Marquis of Musclederry rules will prevail, meaning that there must be no hitting with cuspidors when a man isn't looking. The pair may be a couple of toughs, but they are not, but their will be no side show act.

It will be one of the big numbers in the heavyweight pageant, with the winner virtually taking equal ranking with the Sharkey-Stribling survivor. In fact, survivor is to Christner's advantage in the round before the semi-finals, if he can stay on the club house lawn. So much for comparative consequence.

Are Not Boxers.
In the matter of competition, it may take the play away from the gripping encounter at Miami Beach, for tonight's pair is absolutely committed to the notion that defense is something for the prisoner at the bar to worry about. Paulino is a free swinger; so free, in fact, that he is willing to give until his hurts, preferably the guy who receives. Christner's defense is a novel, but Hanson was a punch on the nose, a system of self-protection so baffling that the other gentleman was suddenly abated and discontinued. Christner used the same system so effectively against Sharkey that he was slow down to a sustained pause in the fight, in spite of the order to blow the decision. Even so, the witnesses became very distrustful, it being their impression that the young man had come home galloping.

Paulino the Favorite.
Paulino has been rated a 7 to 5 choice, but in the opinion of the fact, that the last time out his unresponsive chin gave some evidence of disintegration. Like Johnny Risko, he is alleged to be one of the victims of Godfrey, the great softener, and when he was tapped on the tweezer by Von Porat in the engagement proceeding this one tonight, his actions somewhat supported the contention in question. However, the law that would require him to be tapped on the tweezer tonight is still in committee or something.

For one thing, Paulino is given to crossing his arms over his jaw and usually doesn't uncross them until he gets in close where his chin is in no immediate danger. For another, he may tap Christner first. The latter has exactly no defense against anything and it is his habit to cast his punches from a dishdash, which stage of the proceedings probably will find Paulino peering at him from under the arm pit.

Christner himself argues that he hit his man early and off the last time he fought here and that Paulino isn't as clever as Sharkey. I might say that neither is Joe Gun, the well known bootblack. Paulino isn't as clever as Sharkey because he isn't clever at all but he has a style of fighting that figures to nonplus a stand-up, head-slipping fighter like Sharkey.

Anyhow, it will all come out in the laundry.

STAMFORD MAN TO BOWL IN CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH

New York, Feb. 22.—Joe Scribner of Detroit and Mort Lindsey of Stamford, Conn., will meet next month in a sixty-game bowling match for the championship of the United States, according to an announcement made public today by Frank A. Dwyer, owner of the Purduway Academy in this city. A purse of $2,000 also will be at stake.

Thirty games will be rolled in Detroit on March 2 and 3, and the other thirty at the Broadway alleys in New York on March 10 and 11. Scribner claims the national championship because of his recent victory over Adolph Carlson, crack Chicago bowler. Previously Carlson had claimed the title.

Lindsey has been prominent as a bowler for fifteen years and has defeated some of the best pinners in the country.

WHAT BRISTOL THINKS

Herald Sports Editor: Friend Tom:—

Just a word about the game on Tuesday between the Bristol Eagles and Manchester Rec.

On the way out of the hall, I overheard more than one Manchester rooter express disappointment with the showing of your very fine local club, which in my opinion shows a lack of good common sense.

Probably they might have done little better, but why should they be expected to compete on even terms with a team of picked stars who are receiving top salaries and competing against big time opposition in most of their games?

Your club has two or three men just out of high school who look very promising, in fact I don't believe there is an all-time team in the state who could defeat them in a series.

In closing, I should like to comment on the splendid enthusiasm of your fans. The critics who claim that basketball is dying would be silenced if they could have been present Tuesday evening.

Yours truly,
JIMMY MALCOLM,
Coach, Bristol Eagles.

WHO'LL GO HIGHER?
Records, it is said, are made to be broken. But one hesitates to think that those two pole vault records of Sabin Carr are to be broken soon. Yet—what about Fred Sturdy's 14-foot leap a few nights ago at New York?

It seemed, for a number of years, that 14 feet was an impossible height for a pole vaulter. The first record ever recorded in this track event was made by Fryor of Columbus, who thrilled spectators with a leap of seven feet four inches. But that was many years ago, and the record height ascended and eventually was made 14 feet by Carr.

Carr holds both indoor and outdoor records. His indoor record is 13 feet 1 inch, and his outdoor record is one inch shy of that. Le Barnes of Southern California is said to have vaulted 14 feet 1-2 inches, but the feat never has been recognized officially.

Sturdy also competes for Yale. He is a senior, and was Carr's teammate last year. He came out with a leap of 13 feet 7 inches early this winter, and, at the time, caused the prediction to be made that he might smear Carr's best marks.

He did 14 feet the other night but failed to clear the bar when it was raised an inch and one-half higher. But the season is young—and those who believe Carr's marks are not to remain as the best always think Sturdy stands an excellent chance of breaking them this season.

The Dough Rolls In
Mr. Gus Sonnenberg, the rassing champion, is cashing in on his title, and, to be frank, at the rate of approximately $30,000 a month. It's a sum not to be sneered at by any group of talented people. In round numbers, it would amount to approximately $375,000 a year for rassing.

To do this, Mr. Sonnenberg has been going about from one town to another taking on fellows who, to judge from the results of the matches, have not been so terribly hard to handle. And each match nets the dough.

Gus earned $30,000 the first month after he had become champion. In that time, he Pullmaned from Boston down to Oklahoma, over to Kansas and St. Louis, back to Philadelphia and New York. And the trip was so profitable financially that he decided to take one to the Pacific coast.

And they say that Gus was selling a brand of low-priced automobiles just a year ago at about 30 berries a sale!

They All Like Him
It is said of Wallace Wade, Alabama football coach, that he is a hard-boiled fellow, one who takes no foolishness from anyone concerned with his football team. He makes strict training rules and he has no bashful manner when he wants to say something to somebody.

"But I tell my boys at the start of the season that they don't have to play football unless they want to," he says. "None of 'em ever quit, so I assume they are all willing to stick to the rules I prescribe."

Rival Schoolboy Outfits To Clash Tonight At Rec

Rec Five and Hartford Dixies to Play Benefit Game for Seniors' Washington Trip Next Tuesday; Two Games Tomorrow.

If for no other reason than its poor record, Manchester High will take the floor the under-favorite in its battle with West Hartford this evening. However, the locals have already won a defeat on West Hartford and another victory will put them out of the running for the C. C. I. L. title. Dick Dillon will referee.

Announcement was made today that the Rec Five and Hartford Dixies will play a game at the Rec next week Tuesday evening, and that the net receipts will be donated by the Rec to help defray the expenses of the Washington senior trip in April. In view of the keen rivalry between these two teams which culminated a few years ago, it is expected that a large crowd will attend.

Tonight's game will be the last home contest this week. Tomorrow night Manchester High will travel to Hartford to meet Hartford Public High in a return game. The first of this season was also won by the red and white prior to their losing streak. Tomorrow night the Rec team will travel to Middletown again for another setto with the Red Wings who they have twice conquered this season, but by very close scores. Middletown is confident of winning tomorrow. The Rec had won 15 out of 19 games to date. Roy Norris will jump center. He had previously planned to go to Springfield but changed his plans.

Norman "Lefty" Curtis set a new town three string record Wednesday night when he rolled scores of 159, 137 and 153 for a total of 451 against Patrolman Joe Prentice at Farr's Charter Oak alley. Jack Saidella's 433 was the previous record.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

The body of "HANDSOME HARRY" BORDEN, promoter of dubious stock companies, is found Monday morning by his secretary, RUTH LESTER, sprawled beneath the airshaft window of his private office. The scene of the investigation is the office of the victim. The first suspect questioned by POLICE DETECTIVE McMANN is MRS. BORDEN, Borden's wife and mother of his two children, who admits calling Saturday afternoon for her monthly alimony check, but denies knowledge of the crime.

The second suspect is Ruth Lester, who confesses Borden's attempted familiarity with her on Saturday morning, but insists she knows nothing of the crime. However, the pistol she kept in her desk is missing.

The next suspect is Ruth's fiance, JACK HAYWARD, whose office is just across the narrow airshaft from Borden's. His pistol, which he purchased at the same time he bought a weapon for Ruth, is also missing!

McMann strengthens the case against Jack by bringing in BILL COWAN, who tells of hearing Jack threaten Borden Saturday morning. Cowan also tells of seeing Jack Saturday afternoon, of being plugged in on a busy line, and of hearing Borden quarrel violently, presumably with Hayward.

The evidence of the elevator boys, MICKY MORAN and OTTO PFLUGER, is damaging both to Ruth and to Jack. PHILIPS, waiter, who served Ruth and Jack their Saturday luncheon, is questioned. McMann sends for MINNIE CASSIDY and LETTIE MILLER, cleaning women for the seventh floor. A plainclothes detective is also dispatched to bring in BENNY SMITH, Borden's office boy, and RITA DUBOIS, night club dancer and friend of Borden's. NELSON, medical examiner, calls McMann to tell the results of his examination.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

"Hello, Dr. Nelson! McMann speaking," the detective sergeant greeted the medical examiner on the other end of the wire. "What's the dope?... Fine! And can you tell me any more definitely when death occurred?... Hm! Close enough. I guess! Let's see—that places the murder between two and four o'clock Saturday, eh?... Thanks, doc!"

McMann hung up the receiver and faced the couple who waited, scarcely breathing. "Well, Hayward, I don't think you'll be surprised to learn that the bullet which killed Harry Borden was the regulation bullet for a Colt's .38 caliber automatic. Anything to say now, my lad?"

"Nothing—except that I did not kill Borden and have no idea who did," Jack Hayward answered steadily.

"Mr. McMann, please don't forget that I run exactly like Mr. Hayward's—a Colt's .38, and that it, too, is missing," Ruth begged earnestly. "Can't you see that if Jack had—had killed Mr. Borden he would not have disposed of my gun as well as his own, because he would know that the absence of my pistol would make suspicion fall on me?"

Again that gleam of admiration in the detective's grim gray eyes. "Covey, this is Colby Lester's daughter," he remarked, with a grin, to his subordinate. "A chip off the old block, eh?... Now, Colby Lester, there's just one more question for the present: did you yourself dispose of your pistol, either before the crime on Saturday, so that it would not be available if Hayward forced his way into these offices and quarrelled with Borden, or this morning after your discovery of the body, to confuse the investigation with two missing pistols? Just a minute, please! I'm asking that question of the daughter of Colby Lester, the finest and most honorable criminal lawyer it has ever been my privilege to know."

Color swept from Ruth's throat to the fringe of curls on her forehead as she drew her small body very erect and faced McMann with wide, unflinching blue eyes. "Mr. McMann, I don't know the name of my dead father, who taught me truth and honor—I did not touch the gun, I did not remove it, for any reason whatsoever, from my desk, and I do not know where it is!"

McMann gazed keenly into her eyes as she swore her solemn oath, then beckoned Covey to his side. The two men conversed in whispers for a minute or two, while Ruth and Jack retreated, hand in hand, toward the front windows.

"Well—12 o'clock! Time for lunch!" McMann surprised them both by booming out cheerfully. "I'd like you to be back by one, if convenient, Miss Lester. I may need you to help me go over Borden's private papers. You may go about your business now—Hayward, but I'll have to ask you to hold yourself available for further questioning."

"Then I am not under arrest?" Jack asked quietly, as Ruth drew a sobbing breath of relief.

"Not yet," McMann answered curtly.

"And—and may we go to lunch together?" Ruth begged tremulously.

"Sure! Why not?" the detective grinned. "But if I were you, Hayward, I wouldn't forget to tip the waiter that time. Now time out, both of you, and don't waste time gossiping with the reporters."

"Thank you, Mr. McMann!" Ruth cried, tears of relief quivering on her thick lashes. "I'll wait in my office for you, Jack, until you get your hat and coat."

As she was powdering her face McMann appeared in the communi-

"We were followed, darling. I had to make you repeat your assurances to me for the benefit of the detective. We mustn't forget that McMann is clever."

"Thank you, darling," she repeated, smiling at him eagerly and not casting a glance toward the man who had followed them along the food counters and taken his seat at the next table.

There was no need to look; she knew that his apparently uninterested gaze was upon her and Jack Hayward, that, although he was not close enough to have heard their low-voiced conversation, he had "listened" nevertheless. For Ruth had recognized in their shadow a man who had testified in one of Colby Lester's cases, for the prosecution—a detective who was a trained lip reader. So that was why McMann had permitted her and Jack to lunch together! He had hoped to get a confession in this way, since all other means had failed.

If Jack had been guilty—Ruth shuddered to think of the desperate chance she had taken when, knowing that the "shadow" was reading every word that fell from their lips, she had dared lead Jack into declaring his guilt or innocence. But it was innocence, thank God! McMann might not be convinced, would not be, of course, but she was... No chance now to explain to Jack, or everything would be spoiled.

"Aren't you going to eat?" Jack asked, a little stiffly.

She smiled at him, brilliantly, through tears. "I'm not very hungry, but I'll eat one bite for every bite you take. And when we've finished, we'll talk about the house we're going to build in Grandbury. No more murder talk now, darling! We're too wrought up. All that matters is that you didn't do it and I didn't, and we love each other. Oh, Jack, I do love you so, even if you are a hot-headed, detective-hating young idiot! Come, now! Bite for bite!"

When they had finished their lunch, Ruth, smiling to herself at the lip-reading shadow's undoubted annoyance, insisted on taking Jack to see a department store's display of modernistic furniture, refusing all the while, with almost hysterical gaiety, to discuss the murder or any scrap of evidence that had developed in the morning's investigation.

As the elevator she had a chance to whisper an explanation to her bewildered fiance, for the lip-reading shadow had not boarded the car with them: "We were followed, darling. I had to make you repeat your assurances to me for the benefit of the detective. We mustn't forget that McMann is clever."

Loving admiration routed the shadow of resentment from Jack's eyes. "You're worth two of him—Colby Lester's daughter!"

They parted at the door of Borden's office, Jack to go to his own suite, where his comings and goings would undoubtedly be under closest supervision.

As Ruth entered her office Birdseye hung up the telephone receiver and announced to McMann, who stood in the communicating door: "Clay's got the Dubois woman. Says he'll have her here in 15 minutes."

SLIM AND SIMPLE

One of the newest ideas of Paris is the cape theme, worn for street or more formal wear, as sketched in Style No. 423 with sleeves omitted with armholes piped in self-fabric, which is perverche blue georgette crepe. The back view displays long sleeves for street wear, and is very smart in either plain or printed silk crepe. The cape falls from back shoulders well below the waistline which gives length to the silhouette, while the pointed yoke of circular flaring skirt, keeps the desired slenderness through the hips. Crepe satin, chiffon, crepe Elizabeth and sheer woolsen also appropriate. It is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

The question of promises has come up. Is it right or wrong to compel a child to make a promise?

Now, I believe that the first reaction of thoughtful people to this question will be that it is wrong. If we are going to live by the new doctrine of allowing a child greater liberty of action and freedom of choice, why make an inconsistent reservation?

It would seem, according to this argument, to strike at the very root of initiative and self-confidence. A promise is a wall, a prison, a ball-and-chain! "To compel a child to make a promise," says some of the new behaviorists, "is like compelling a man to buy an article for which he may not be able to pay."

"If a child makes a promise voluntarily—announces of his own free will that he intends to do something—there is no necessity of a promise," they remind us.

"And furthermore, if we impose our wills on a child's will by the moral burden of a promise, he becomes a double offender if he fails, not only in the act itself, but by breaking faith with his parents. An unfair position!"

Promises Overdone

I agree very heartily with this argument. I think children are "promised" to death. "Promise me, John! Promise me, Mary!" It is a confession of weakness somewhere. It is like building a poor wall and then trying to tie together its weak places. If John and Mary were brought up on right ideas, all other things being equal, their would be little need for promises.

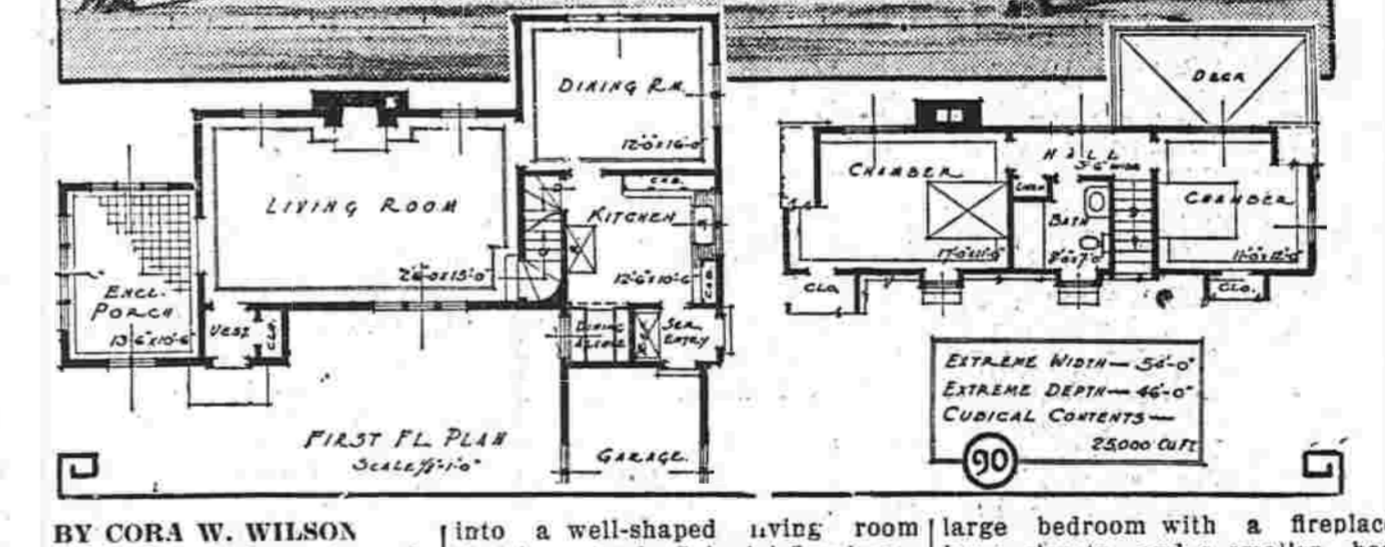

But here, as in other ethical questions, there is no black and white—no "yes" and "no." We cannot draw a decided line. It would be foolish to say flatly, "There should be absolutely no promises where children are concerned." We must remember that children grow up.

If there was no such a thing as a promise, the world couldn't run. Children should know what it means to contract a bargain and keep it. To learn to keep a bargain is the best developer of moral stamina that I know of. "A man who can keep a promise! What finer soldier can one have?"

THE TELL-TALE LAPEL

A COLONIAL HOUSE THAT SHINGLES BUILT

BY CORA W. WILSON

Wood still plays the major role in the construction of American homes. Almost never are the doors and window-frames metal, the floors fireproof, the stairs masonry. This Colonial house is built of shingles on a wood structure. It has five good-sized rooms, a dining alcove and a garage.

The visitor enters a small vestibule with a coat closet and proceeds into a well-shaped living room that has a truly Colonial fireplace. On the left of the living room is an enclosed porch. The dining room is placed at the rear of the house, giving a fine "vista of the surrounding gardens. The kitchen is modern in every way and has a service entry and a dining alcove. One passes through the kitchen or entry to the garage.

The second floor consists of a large bedroom with a fireplace, large closets and a smaller bedroom separated by a small hall. In the hall is located the modern bath.

For additional information and cost estimate, write Cora W. Wilson, 420 Madison Avenue, New York City. Inquiries should be accompanied by the clipping from this newspaper, and please mention plan No. 90.

Do you realize that everyone unconsciously performs the most complicated acts of pantomime every day? Perhaps you see a man cross viewing applicants for a job. Do you judge them by what they say about themselves, or do you not rather size them up by their appearance—slouchy and careless or erect and full of vitality?

An actor makes use of this knowledge and trains his body so that he may express what he wishes. Why should not each one of us learn this part of an actor's profession so that we may at all times present a forceful, gracious appearance?

The height of the withdrawal symptoms of the constant use of narcotic drugs. Their minds are so disturbed that they sometimes resort to almost any measure to obtain the substance to which they are addicted.

The Committee on Drug Addiction established in New York City has been carrying out studies in various institutions with a view to finding ways and means for freeing such people of the demand for the drug.

One of the first studies involved a consideration of the conduct of the addict and this revealed interesting information as to the means that had been used to secure the drug while the patient was under observation in the hospital.

Drugs were found concealed in the soiled dressings covering wounds, in clothing, letters and jewelry, and in all of the orifices of the body. Letters which were received by addicts were found to be written on paper previously saturated with a solution of the drug and then dried and ironed out before being written on. The addict extracted the drug by chewing the paper.

Drugs were found concealed under the stamps on envelopes in the hollowed-out stem of a watch and in similar places of concealment.

The symptoms following withdrawal of a drug from an addict are usually quite severe. They include abdominal pain, twitching, difficulty in breathing and in sleeping, and great mental depression.

Q.—Is swallowing grape pits harmful?

A.—No. People chew up the pits or swallow the entire pulp of grapes when eating them without any apparent harm. The human stomach is able to get rid of a good deal of rather coarse material without serious injury in the majority of cases.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

Since not a few people are interested in the institution called marriage, not a few may also be interested in a fairly sprightly new book called "Marriage in the Modern Manner," by Ira S. Wylie and Mary Day Winslow. The following extracts may interest, entertain or instruct.

The one-man-for-one-woman theory is answered thus: "Nature has endowed practically every man and woman with a certain amount of appeal for the other sex, like the pull between two electrically charged magnets, propinquity does the rest."

"Sometimes sex-appeal works with explosive suddenness, producing 'love at first sight.' This form of love is extremely unstable. If Romeo and Juliet had not died, they would probably have been separated within a year. They were the victims of a love mirage."

THE "WHY" OF MARRIAGE

The summary of why people marry may interest you: "First, of course, is romantic love, next is the desire for companionship, for a sense of belonging to someone, for the expansion of life which comes when one lives through and for another, rather than in a limited world revolving only around one's own needs and desires."

And here's an idea! When Mr. Smith on your street who has been a widower for less than a year suddenly outrages your sense of decency by taking out himself a bride, pray remember this:

"The widower's traditional haste to wed again is one of the highest compliments paid to marriage. It is not a criticism of first wives, but an endorsement. The man who has been happy, contented and emotionally satisfied in his first marriage is much more likely to remarry at an early date than the man who has considered his marriage a failure and who has gradually grown away from his wife and his home."

LONDON SOCIETY FAVORS BRIDGE AS MONEY GAME

London—The effete score-card has supplanted the vulgar chip; poker has been ousted from its pinnacle of money-making popularity, and bridge is the order of the day among the dilettante gamblers of England.

The bridge craze, not as an innocent pastime to while away the passing hours, but as a medium for winning and losing large sums of money by playing at stakes that would seem fantastic even to the hardened "experts" of New York's largest bridge clubs, has swept the country.

Women particularly have been affected; women of all the "upper" classes, from the truly wealthy lady who can well afford to lose four or five hundred dollars or more in a rubber or two, to the middle-class housewife who gambles her household money over the bridge table.

Within the last two years, hundreds of bridge clubs have sprung up like mushrooms all over London. Some of them demand high entrance fees, and the members are admitted only by election. Others are open to almost anyone who wants to play, the house making its profit by a certain percentage on each exchange of money, but the objects of all are exactly the same.

These apparently innocent bridge clubs, where women foregather in preference to washing dishes or minding children, are not so very different from the ordinary gambling house, save that its patrons play against one another instead of assaulting the bank. The stakes are usually in proportion to the financial resources of the clientele and twenty-five to thirty dollars per hundred is the usual rate of play in the higher class clubs.

There is nothing illegal about these institutions, but they have been criticized on many occasions as offering temptations to women who can ill afford to lose sums ranging from fifty to two or three hundred dollars in the course of an afternoon. Too frequent attendance at bridge clubs has been mentioned more than once in divorce and separation actions, husbands charging that their wives persistently gambled away their household money as well as their savings.

Have Waiting Lists
Play in the bridge clubs often goes on from early in the forenoon until late at night. Practically all the "good" clubs have long waiting lists of aspirants, and those women who find themselves unable to gain entrance to the institutions, satisfy themselves with playing for high stakes at home.

Gambling in bridge clubs is not confined to this game alone. In a number of clubs there are rooms set aside for "shilling-in-the-slot" machines, of the type that were banned in New York City several years ago, on which combinations obtained by the pressure of a lever return five or ten times the original investment—occasionally.

The amount of money won and lost in women's bridge clubs is impossible to compute, but it is safe to say that the sum would be a staggering one if the million changing hands every day in all the clubs in London could be lumped into one figure.

No Frigidly Games
Added to this is the fact that "friendly" bridge sessions, such as are indulged in by practically all American families, are practically unknown here, for no matter how limited may be the income of the player, he or she is never content unless there is at least a small amount of money at stake.

Another phase of the card gambling by the middle-class population is reflected in the countless number of "whist drives" which are held all over the country every evening.

These pastimes are not illegal, nor are they looked upon officially as gambling. They reveal, however, the tremendous hold which card games for money stakes have obtained upon the women of England. Their husbands may indulge in an occasional game of poker or pinocle, but it is the women these days who are winning, and losing; the household money at a rate which is causing sociologists serious alarm.

INVOLUNTARY FORGER GIVES HIMSELF UP

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Irwin Ritter, 35, of St. Louis is being held here by police today at his own request on the unique charge of being an "involuntary forger." Ritter walked into the district attorney's office here explaining he was wanted in the Missouri city on forgery charges and that worry over the accusations had caused him to give himself up.

He went into detail to explain that he was an "involuntary forger." He asserted two men black-mailed him after learning of a love affair he had with a St. Louis girl and forced him to sign checks in St. Louis, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh, although he did not have sufficient funds to cover the checks. Finally slinding his captors he landed in this city.

Police are checking up on Ritter's story.

To Combine for Concert

The G. Clef Glee Club, a girls' chorus of 40 voices, combining with the Beethoven Glee Club in a concert at the Swedish Lutheran Church, to be held Tuesday evening, made a fine showing at their first annual concert last November. In the past year the club has appeared in many of the Swedish Lutheran Churches in the state, and also have been heard in local entertainments. Helge Pearson, organist and choir-master, directs the singers.

The Beethoven Glee Club of 40 voices appearing in a combined concert with the G. Clef Glee Club Tuesday evening at the Swedish Lutheran church, has given three annual concerts, the fourth to be given in April. They have been heard in concerts all over the state as well as in Springfield, and Worcester, Mass., Westley, R. I., and East Orange, New Jersey. Helge Pearson, founder of the club, has been its director since that time, three years ago.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

DEATH OF WASHINGTON DESCRIBED BY PAPER

Washington, D. C. Family Has An Original Copy of "Ulster Co. Gazette."

Washington, Feb. 22.—Small country newspaper shop in upper New York state in December, 1929.

A stage coach with a mail pouch swings to the door and leaves upon the editor's desk a long and grave letter from his Georgetown correspondent—or perhaps some worthy acting in that capacity—telling of the death and burial of General George Washington.

This was the scene enacted in the office of the Ulster County Gazette, published in Kingston, N. Y., on a wintry night, and one of the copies of the edition which the Gazette published that day has come to posterity—it is an heirloom in the family of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ringgold, of 1656 Gates street.

The yellowed pages of that edition with a black border and black column lines, show that under a Georgetown date line, a florid but eloquent story of how "all that remains of Washington the Great" had been entombed.

It speaks of the "beautiful and sublime scene at Mt. Vernon" and the grief shown by the friends of "that noble and august inhabitant who was now no more."

The account concludes with the declaration that "the unclouded glory of his name will illumine future ages."

The obituary notice, however, did not carry much detail. It names the pallbearers, but little more than that.

WEALTHY BOOTBLACK

New York, Feb. 22 — Blacking boots proved so unprofitable for Constantino Raimo, proprietor of a stand in the Grand Central terminal, that he left an estate of $50,000.

His sister has applied for letters of administration in Queens county surrogate's court in Jamaica.

Raimo who was 52 and a bachelor, died Feb. 9 from ptomaine poisoning.

SPRINKLER BREAKS

IN STATE THEATER

Does No Damage, However, Since It Was in the Boiler Room; Causes Excitement.

Bursting of what is believed to have been a defective sprinkler nozzle in the boiler room of the State theater last night caused two alarm bells in the lobby which are connected with the sprinkler system to ring. Quite a bit of excitement among the passers-by was raised.

Investigation, by Manager Von Pliski, disclosed nothing unusual until the boiler room was reached. Here the floor was covered with two feet of water and the room completely drenched. Manager Von Pliski immediately turned off the valve stopping the flow of water. No damage was done.

Had there been a fire, the sprinkler system which is installed in all part of the theater would have made the damage practically negligible.

IF YOU CAN'T FIND YOUR LADDER, CALL THIS MAN.

Daniel J. Sullivan, Manchester sign painter, has never owned a ladder in his many years of business. Furthermore, he knows everyone in town that owns a ladder. When he gets a job, he knows, within a block, where he can borrow one. And he does.

Believe it or not, it's the truth. It's an unusual public school pupil that can't spell a word wrong more than one way.

EXPOSE SUCKER LIST

New York, Feb. 22 — The so-called "sucker list" of 50,000 credulous investors who donated more than $8,000,000 of their savings, will figure in the trial of John and Herbert Locke, indicted with six others for using the mails to defraud, when it is resumed in Federal Court on Monday.

Texas Guinan, night club hostess, and a rear admiral in the navy, are among the more prominent alleged to have entrusted the Locke brothers with their dollars. A federal investigation of the Canario Copper Company which they promoted brought about the Locke brothers' arrest after they had showered priceless gifts on Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Mary Eaton, May Day and other famous Broadway beauties.

NOMINATIONS APPROVED

Washington, Feb. 22 — The nominations of Arthur Hatcher of Massachusetts, and Cyril M. Jansky of Minnesota to be federal radio commissioner were approved by the Senate Interstate commerce committee today, on condition that the Senate adopt a House amendment to the pending radio bill providing that the terms of all commissioners expires Feb. 23, 1930.

200 Letters by Lord Nelson and Other Notables in Harvard Library

Cambridge, Mass.—Nearly 200 original letters, many of them unpublished and unknown, written by Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton, Sir William Hamilton and others of Nelson's intimates, have recently been acquired by the Harvard College Library.

Many of the letters forming this collection are virtually unknown, and are important, not only from the point of view of their worth to collectors, but because they contain extremely valuable historical material.

Until historic scholars of the period covered by the letters have time to go over the new acquisitions, many interesting points in the letters can not be brought out. There is sufficient material there for the writing of a book or for a Doctor's Thesis.

The first of these letters, written by Nelson in 1794, shows his right hand which was a marvel of strokes and curves. After the attack of "Theusues" on Santa Cruz in 1797, and the loss of his right arm by amputation, he learned to write with his left hand, although with no proficiency, so that his left-handed script was always unformed and nearly illegible.

Two other letters were written during a half year of Nelson's life which has assumed great importance through the efforts of the biographers.

The first of these was written on November 18, 1800, from London where Nelson was still living with Lady Nelson. It was addressed to the Reverend Dixon Hoste, and is notable chiefly for its signature, "Nelson of the Nile," and shows that three years after the loss of his right arm he still scrawls almost illegibly.

The third letter from the collection is one penned on March 2, 1801 the day Nelson sailed for the Baltic and the battle of Copenhagen. We owe this letter to the fact that Lady Hamilton did not burn her letters as she had threatened to do. Nelson was about to sail for the appointed rendezvous in Yarmouth Roads, at the time of the writing. This was the last letter to Lady Hamilton during this visit to England. The letter is important as it fills a space hitherto vacant in his correspondence.

Another letter, the fourth, is important because it carries the signatures of both Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton on one sheet. It was signed, "Nelson and Bronte" and reminds one of the fact that Nelson had an estate in Italy given him by the King of the Two Sicilies together with the title of Count of Bronte. At the time they wrote this letter together to Captain Foley, congratulating him upon his recent marriage, Nelson was living at Merton. This period marks the estrangement of Sir William and Lady Hamilton.

Fifth in order is of particular interest because it clearly shows an advanced stage of the coolness between the Hamiltons. These notes are more perfect illustrations of their states of mind than any amount of description. The letter carries the very formal hand of Sir William and the illegible strokes of Emma Hamilton. It was written at Merton in 1803.

The sixth letter was a memorandum to Captain Bayntun, one of Nelson's flag captains, in command of the ship Leviathan. It contains merely orders as to the disposition of the various ships. It is dated aboard the flagship Victory, March 11th, 1805, or only a few months before the Battle of Trafalgar. The last of the documents chosen, the seventh, is the will of Lady Hamilton written in October, 1805, about three years after Nelson's death. The will speaks for itself, and needs no introduction. The fact that it is now brought to light seems a find of great importance. It is actually in the writing of Lady Hamilton.

MISSOURI WOMEN DO NOT FAVOR WHIPPING POST

Springfield, Mo.—Regardless of what the Missouri W. C. T. U. might do to stamp out the bootlegger, the organization never would support a bill pending before the Missouri legislature at Jefferson City to provide for public whippings.

That is the expression of Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., here, commenting on Rep. John C. Putnam's bill which has more or less upset the House or Representatives.

NEW YORK-BERLIN HOP BY REFUELING IN AIR

Berlin, Feb. 22.—Tentative plans for a non-stop flight from Berlin to New York by refueling in the air were revealed in an interview here today by Captain Hermann Koehl who will make the flight with the co-operation of Col. James Fitzmaurice.

"Although the non-stop flight project so far has not passed the scheming stage," Captain Koehl said, "we have a definite idea as to how we will carry it out."

"We plan to use a tri-motored Junkers plane equipped with 'pontoons' on the flight. Junkers mono-planes, similar in type to the Bremen in which we crossed the Atlantic last year, will be stationed at Lisbon, Portugal and Horta, Azores. They will meet us above those cities and refuel our plane in the air."

"Our flight will only be the first of many. It will be made mainly for the purpose of studying the problems to be met by a permanent trans-Atlantic air service."

"Refueling in the air means greater progress in aviation. By its use, I can foresee the time when a non-stop flight around the world will be a reality."

YALE ANNOUNCES BUILDING PLANS

New Gym, Dormitories and Other Structures Soon to Be Erected.

New Haven, Feb. 22.—Plans for new construction at Yale far beyond any previously attempted here were announced by President James R. Angell before thousands of returned graduates here today to celebrate Alumni University day.

New projects close at hand, according to President Angell are a new gymnasium to cost at least $2,000,000; dormitories on Elm street between High and York streets, where the gymnasium now stands, for the sum of $2,000,000; dormitories for 600 Sheffield Scientific school students on Grove, Temple and Wall streets; new buildings on another site for Yale Divinity school, and the present site to be occupied by dormitories for college students; reconstruction of Berkeley oval and Lamson Lyceum to furnish quadrangles on High street between Wall and Elm streets, divided by a cross campus from College street to the new library; and a new graduate school building.

The dormitories to replace the gym are to be built by money from the great James R. Sterling estate. For the gymnasium President Angell declared the university felt it could rely on funds amounting to at least as much more from sources to be announced later.

President's Statement. Of these two projects President Angell said: "Recently the university has received the assurance of a substantial sum for the erection of a beautiful new gymnasium, to be erected on the west side of York square, for which plans have been prepared by John Russell Pope; and which can, because of the many facilities it will offer for undergraduate athletic activities and sports of many kinds, be quite as appropriately described as an indoor winter playground. While no definite announcement can be made at this time concerning the financing of this highly desirable development, the university is so confident that it will soon have the resources required for this that it has had James Gamble Rogers, '89, prepare plans for the erection of an undergraduate quadrangle to occupy the entire block front on Elm street already mentioned. I am happy indeed to add that funds for the erection of this dormitory unit have been promised to us by the trustees of the estate of John W. Sterling, '64. Until the new gymnasium is built we shall construct only the two wings of the dormitory group which will extend east and west on Elm street from the old gymnasium to High and York street respectively."

Following the meeting, held in Sprague hall, the alumni attended a luncheon held in the university dining hall. The speakers were Fred A. Simmons, Jr., chairman of the student council in Yale college, and Prof. Stanley T. Williams, Carl A. Lohmann, secretary of the university president. At 3 p. m., many of the alumni attended a special performance of "Spring O' the Year," a play by William H. Robertson, to be given by the students in the department of drama of the school of fine arts in the university theatre.

Plans for developments at the university which affect the Yale School of Medicine were discussed at a meeting to be held in the Sterling hall of medicine at 3 p. m. The speakers were Dr. Wm. H. Herrick, of Columbia university; Isaac M. Ullman, chairman of the executive committee of the New Haven hospital; and Dean Robert M. Hutchins, of the Yale School of Law. Dr. Warren C. McFarland, president of the Association of Yale Alumni in Medicine, presided.

The final event of the day's program is the De Forest prize speaking, which takes place at 5 p. m. in Room 201, William L. Harriman hall.

ly, and thence extending north on those streets until they meet the library. Work on these two wings which should alone house 150 or more students can be begun as soon as the final working drawings of the architect are ready, and will, we hope, be started within the next six months."

Salary Increases. In his address today President Angell told of salary increases Yale has given its faculty members. On October 1, 1927, the salary budgets in four academic divisions of the university totaled $1,106,005, while on July 1, 1929 they will total $1,449,785. More than 3000 faculty members have been raised from $500 to $1,000 each, he said. "As the remaining increments of the endowment fund come in we hope to be able to make still further advances," he said.

WATCH YOUR HAT.

Jacksonville, Fla.—There may have been one of those "Watch Your Hat" signs in the food dispensary, but Jim Massey, Jacksonville reporter, had other things to worry about. He was interviewing Josephus Daniels, ex-navy secretary, and had hung his hat on a convenient hook. Someone evidently took a fancy to the topper, for when Massey returned the hat was gone.

If you are getting fat it may be that you are also getting old.

THIS IS THE LIFE.

Falls City, Neb.—The Leechman "boys," 73 and 72 years old, still have something to look forward to. They have never read a paper, owned a car, or used a phone, electric lights are radio. They haven't been off their farm for 50 years' cause last time they went they didn't get home until nearly sundown and the scare cured travel fever.

A man, like a match, is of little use without a head containing the right ingredients.

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(232) The Judicial Department.

The judicial power of the state is vested in a Supreme Court of Errors, a Superior Court, Courts of Common Pleas, City, Borough, Police and Town Courts, Courts of the Justices of the Peace and Probate Courts.

The judges of the Supreme Court of Errors, Superior Court and Courts of Common Pleas are appointed by the General Assembly, on nomination by the Governor. The Supreme Court and Superior Court judges serve for terms of 2 years while Common Pleas judges are appointed for 4 years. Judges of City, Borough and Town Courts are appointed by the General Assembly for terms of 2 years. Judges of Probate Court and Justices of the Peace are elected biennially. The Supreme Court of Errors is made up of the chief justice and four associate justices. There are 13 judges of the Superior Court. The chief justice receives $12,500 a year and the associate justices and judges of the Superior Court $12,000.

The Superior Court is the most important court of the state, having extensive original and appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases and in civil action brought in most of the inferior courts of the state. The Superior Court judges appoint for each county a clerk, a state's attorney, and a coroner, admit attorneys to practice law, grant divorces, grant permission to individuals to change names and perform many other duties important for the maintenance of civil order. The Superior Court is the final court of appeal upon questions of law upon which the lower courts of the state have rendered judgment. At least three judges must be present to hear an argument and in rendering a decision, the opinion of the majority prevails.

GUS ARNHEIM'S BAND AT THE STATE TODAY

Famous Jazz Orchestra Heads Vitaphone Vaudeville Bill: "Flying Fleet" is Film Feature.

Gus Arnheim and his Cocanut Grove Orchestra, a group of versatile and entertaining jazz artists, will occupy the main spot on the Vitaphone vaudeville bill at the State theater for today and Saturday.

This popular dance aggregation, which hails from the exclusive Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, is recognized as one of the leading jazz orchestras in the country. Through the medium of the phonograph and radio they have endeared themselves to dancers everywhere.

In their Vitaphone act, which has been appropriately titled, "Jazz Cocktail," Arnheim and his band offer an array of snappy dance selections, arranged in symphonic style that are guaranteed to keep you in high spirits.

The second Vitaphone act is a comedy-sketch featuring May McAvoy, who is known to millions of film fans. "Sunny California," is its title and it pertains to humorous situations in real estate promoters.

Miss McAvoy is supported by Richard Carl, Neely Edwards and Art Taylor, all prominent entertainers.

The principal film feature at the State for today and tomorrow presents Ramon Novarro, beloved film favorite, in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Flying Fleet."

Here is a new Novarro—in a new type of story that is presented with a special synchronization of music and sound effects. Although a charming romance, it is set amid such breath-taking thrills that it creates an absolutely different effect on its audiences from anything the screen has ever given.

As one might assume from its title, "The Flying Fleet" is a story of aviation in the U. S. Navy. There have been air pictures before, and great ones, but in "The Flying Fleet" more of the thrills of flying have been caught by the eye of the camera than in any previous vehicle. There are several reasons for this. Perhaps the most outstanding one is that the most daring aviators in the United States Navy Air Service co-operated with Director George Hill during the filming of the production.

Although nearly two-thirds of this thrilling picture was filmed in the air, the story has a rich vein of human interest and a delicate love romance. Anita Page plays opposite Novarro as the beautiful heroine. Others in the selected cast of supporting stars are Ralph Graves, Carroll Nye, Gardner James, Alfred Allen and Eddie

PRODUCTION OF HELIUM BEGUN IN TEXAS PLANT

Amarillo, Texas.—Production of helium has been begun at Soney, near here, at the Bureau of Mines plant. The plant at Fort Worth was closed down Jan. 19 on account of lack of gas supply. The Soney plant is in one of the greatest gas producing areas in the world.

Congressman Fritz Lanham, of the Fort Worth district, has succeeded in obtaining permission of the government to use the plant at Fort Worth as a fish hatchery, it is stated.

HOW SHOCKING!

London.—A man walking in Leicester Square saw what he thought was a human figure, lying nude in a passage. Police were rushed to the scene, but found that the lady was of the wax variety, and used as a clothing model. Madam Wax had been bedecked with furs valued at $1,000, which thieves had stripped from her and fled.

Each of us has $2.69 less than he had last year, we are told by the Treasury Department. One fact that probably will not be ascribed to Republican prosperity.

A THOUGHT

As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.—Isaiah 66:13.

It is a little thing to speak a phrase of common comfort, which by daily use has almost lost its sense; yet on the ear of him who thought to die unarmoured it will fall like choicest music.—Talfourd.

FLYER FINDS RAINBOW IS A COMPLETE CIRCLE

San Francisco.—Call off the hunt, those of you who seek the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow!

In fact, there isn't any end to a rainbow—it's a circle. So affirmed Burr Winslow, mail pilot, flying from Oakland to Reno, Winslow reported witnessing for the first time a circular bow in full color. This particular rainbow had no end, which leads him to believe that all rainbows, if seen from the correct angle, would be round.

LETTER GOLF

WASHINGTON WAS THE colonial ARMY had at its HEAD the man whose birthday we celebrate today. Par is eight and one solution is on another page.

Letter Golf grid with words 'ARMY' and 'HEAD' filled in.

THE RULES 1-The Idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Son of Liberty, he came, To set the FREEDOM-torch a flame, And lead the hosts of free-born men

George Washington, immortal one, Stepped forth to see GOD'S JUSTICE done

From north and south and east they came, Within their hearts a glowing flame.

He led his ragged troops across THE DELAWARE, with little loss, And bled the trail to victory.

It in those days was not served anything like so hot, And perhaps George didn't have IT, anyway.

So, taking him by and large, I'm admiring old man George, And I wish there were more like him in these parts.

MODERN TEMPTATIONS-Another thing-George Washington never played golf.
