

RECORD CROWD ATTENDS SPRING OPENING HERE

Ideal Weather and Extensive Advertising Bring Out Over 5,000 People; Stores Beautiful.

If the success of the local merchants annual Spring Opening is to be determined by the crowds that visit the stores in the main business section, last night's affair must be designated as the most successful event of the kind ever held in Manchester. The mild weather that prevailed during the day and the extensive advertising combined to bring out the huge crowd. The Manchester Electric Company was the only business place that attempted an accurate count of its visitors. Their indicator showed that very close to 5,000 persons had visited the store between seven in the evening and about 9.15.

Over 5,000 guests
At Hale's where it appeared the greatest crowd was gathered during the two hour opening program it is estimated that over 5,000 were guests at various times during the evening. The crowds were good natured and well disposed to visiting all the stores on the street, big and little. The curiosity bump, of course, influenced the larger numbers to visit those stores featuring fashion shows and entertainment, and it was also noticed that those stores giving souvenirs were well patronized.

Every store in the south end district had something of interest for everyone. The whole evening resembled a great big neighborhood party. Everybody seemed to be in the spirit of the affair and the value of the sociability such a Spring Opening affords is impossible of estimation.

Beautifully Dressed
The stores all along Main street, inside and out presented a beautiful appearance. Handsome window decorations were one of the outstanding features of the Spring Opening. Of these no doubt Watkins Brothers brought forth the most favorable comment. Their two main street windows were dining rooms in the old American version and in the old English version. The furnishings were carried out to the minutest detail to truthfully depict these versions. In distinct contrast were the furnishings of the famous Watkins Brothers "Cottage" which was completely furnished in the new modernistic furniture.

Other windows which attracted more than ordinary praise were those of the J. W. Hale Company, the background of which were done in the futuristic patterns in a beautiful silver gray tone, strips of zinc being used most artistically; the Alfred Grezel bathroom in green showing all the latest in plumbing fixtures; the C. E. House and Son windows displaying the latest in men's furnishings with a beautiful background of spring flowers; Keith's new Spring furniture, and

FASCISM PRAISED FOR SETTLEMENT

Mussolini Introduces Bill Making Treaty With the Papal State Effective.

Rome, March 14.—Fascism was praised for the part it played in reconciling the dispute between the Vatican and the Italian State when Premier Mussolini today introduced in the Chamber of Deputies a bill making effective the clauses of the treaty of conciliation and the concordat.

"The fact that Fascism settled this old standing quarrel is proof of the ability and solidarity of the Fascist regime," said the premier.

The official text of the treaty and concordat settling the 59 year old conflict between the Church and State fills 15 newspaper columns.

Terms of Agreement
Under the terms of the agreement the salaries of vatican employes shall be free from taxation. Priests' earnings may not be seized. Churches may not be demolished without the consent of the Vatican. Italy officially recognizes the degrees of Doctor conferred by the Vatican University.

The Vatican admits that separations between married couples shall be regulated by the state.

There are four articles in the bill, which was approved by a council of ministers yesterday.

Mellon Tells Public To Purchase Bonds

Washington, March 14.—Andrew W. Mellon gave the American investing public some advice today. "Because of the comparatively low price of bonds, due to interest rates remaining relatively high, now is the time for prudent investors to buy bonds," said the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Some stocks are good investments, but the quotations on others are too high. These good stocks are all right. But bonds are better at the present time for the average investor."

The Mellon pronouncement occasioned considerable surprise here, for very rarely does a secretary of the treasury volunteer such advice to the investing public in such an off-hand way, particularly during market hours. The Secretary's remarks were made to newspaper correspondents during a regular press interview.

They were interpreted as a part of the general effort of the Federal Reserve Board to decrease the enormous amount of public money now flowing into Stock Market speculation. The first step in this general campaign was taken a few weeks ago when the Reserve Board issued a general warning to its member banks against throwing so much money into Wall street.

TREASURY TAX REFUNDS ARE TO BE MADE PUBLIC

President Hoover in Executive Order Follows Suggestion Made by Sec. Mellon—Long in Dispute.

Washington, March 14.—President Hoover today ordered that all future tax refunds from the Treasury in excess of $20,000 be thrown open to public inspection.

Thus, by a stroke of his pen, Mr. Hoover accomplished that which a coalition of Democrats and insurgent Republicans in Congress have unsuccessfully fought for in recent sessions of Congress.

The announcement from the White House stated that the President's action was taken at the suggestion of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who has heretofore been accounted an opponent of publicity for these refunds, and who, because of that attitude, has been an incessant target for Congressional sharp shooting in recent sessions.

An Executive Order
The reform was accomplished by means of an executive order, which specifically directed that the public be permitted to know the reasons for "any refund, credit, or abatement of income, or profits, excess profits, estate, or gift taxes in excess of the arbitrary figure of $20,000."

In proposing the reform, secretary Mellon wrote the President: "The Congress adopted as an amendment to the first deficiency appropriation act a provision which as a matter of legal interpretation would require no material change in the procedure or practices of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. However, on the assumption that this provision reflects an unnecessary Congressional policy, and in order that the public generally may know that there is nothing which the treasury desires to hide . . . I am recommending your approval of the proposal submitted."

While today's reform does not go so far as Mellon's critics in Congress would like, it nevertheless does meet a great many of the objections they have raised in the Treasury's policy of secrecy for these tax refunds.

The fight for publicity and open hearings on these refunds was led in the Senate in the closing days of the last Congress by Senators McCellar (D) of Tenn., Couzens (R) of Mich., supported by Norris (R) of Neb., and other of the so-called Progressive Bloc on both sides of the Chamber.

LINDY ENDS VISIT; STARTS FOR TEXAS

Hops Off from Mexico City Early Today—Wedding Date Uncertain.

Mexico City, March 14.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh brought an end to his visit with his fiancée, Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, at 8:30 o'clock today when he hopped off from Valbuena Flying Field for the United States.

His route and destination were not divulged. It was believed at the field, however, that he may fly by way of Brownsville, Texas, possibly making a stop there.

With his departure this morning Col. Lindbergh brought to a close a prolonged visit to Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and his family which has been eventful, even for Lindbergh.

BIBLE'S DEATH HITS RACING A HARD BLOW

Both White and Segrave to Give Up Speed Cars; Double Tragedy Shocks Sport- ing World.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 14.—The tragic climax of the international speed tests, which resulted in death of Lee Bible, racing driver, and Charles Traub, a cameraman, today plunged officials of Daytona Beach into deepest gloom and brought this year's death-defying races to an abrupt close.

Bible, mechanic in Daytona Beach garage, was killed yesterday afternoon, while thundering down the nine-mile ocean speedway in "the Triplex," the 7-ton American car he was driving in an attempt to shatter the world's automobile speed record set Monday at 231.36 miles an hour by Major H. O. D. Segrave of England. Bible's powerful machine skidded on a wet spot on the beach course, swerved violently, leaped into the air, struck a sand dune and rolled back onto the beach. He was traveling at a speed of 202 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Cut In Two
Traub, standing at the edge of the course taking a picture, was struck before he could leave his tracks. His body was cut in two. Practically every bone in Bible's body was broken. Both were instantly killed. The ponderous 38-cylinder "Triplex" struck the cameraman spurted fully 500 feet into the air.

When the big car toppled back onto the beach with Bible's body beneath, pandemonium broke loose among the spectators, who rushed upon the beach. In the excitement several women fainted, and had to be carried away.

White Quits Game
"I am through with the racing game forever," said J. M. White, wealthy Philadelphia sportsman and owner of the Triplex, this morning. "I would not have had this accident happen for all the records in the world."

White broke down and cried at the undertaking parlors. He announced that he had given "the Triplex" to Murray Cribb, Macon, Ga., racer who is here, with the understanding that he sell it and give the proceeds to the widow, Mrs. Bible, and her daughter, Grace, sixteen. Traub, the other victim, was also married. His wife and 7-year-old daughter, who are in Miami, were notified of his death.

Major Segrave, who was on the beach at the time of the accident, while beside his record-breaking car, "the Golden Arrow," told in-

WETS IN CAPITOL ARE WORRIED NOW

Fear That Dry Leaders Will Be on New Fact Finding Board.

Washington, March 14.—All is not well among the Capitol Wets. Slowly, but steadily, the feeling is growing among them they have been "sold out" on the score of President Hoover's law enforcement fact-finding commission.

What originally was to have been a commission charged with ferreting out the fundamental reasons back of the breakdown of the prohibition law and the general public disregard for its observance, they fear, about to materialize in a body of active Dry leaders whose sole aim will be to put more teeth into a statute the Wets already have branded objectionable and unenforceable.

Will Not Be Quoted
None of the Congressional anti-prohibitionists wanted to be quoted on their views at present, pointing out that little could be said with propriety until after Mr. Hoover actually has named his commission and the biographical records of its personnel are available for study. But rumblings of discontent were quite audible today, however, and privately majority of the Wets painted a gloomy picture of the prospects.

When Senator Wesley L. Jones, (R) of Washington, Senatorial Dry leader, and Senator Walter E. Edge, (R) of New Jersey, the Wet champion of the Upper House, first introduced separate bills at the last session of Congress for an investigation of the prohibition situation, they were counseled to get together on some common ground. This, they did, and agreed to present a measure calling for a sweeping inquiry by commission of nine, to be

NOT AN ENEMY IN WORLD HAS JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

Once Wealthiest Man in the World Says He Is Happy, Is Healthy and Enjoys Life Thoroughly.

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 14.—John D. Rockefeller, once the wealthiest man in the world, said today in an exclusive interview that he feels as young as he did ten years ago and that, at the age of eighty-nine, he is getting as much happiness out of life as he ever did.

"My health is good," said Mr. Rockefeller. "My heart is all right; it gives me no trouble. I live moderately and I chew my food thoroughly."

"I have many friends. I have learned how to enjoy life, and I am happy. I thank God for the blessings he has bestowed upon me. Sometimes I think we are ashamed to openly acknowledge His goodness."

"I am getting a great deal out of life. I love everybody, and I haven't an enemy in the world I know of. I have all the blessings any person could ask."

Says He's Happy
Mr. Rockefeller was reminded that Thomas A. Edison, on the occasion of his birthday last month, told the press that there was no such thing as a happy person.

"Why, I'm happy," exclaimed Mr. Rockefeller in all sincerity. "It was the International News Service correspondent's rare privilege to accompany the 'oil king' around eight holes of golf at Ormond Beach Golf Club this morning and to receive, incidentally, two brand-new dimes as mementoes of the occasion."

"How many children have you," he inquired. Upon being told, two daughters, he dug into the pocket of his long trousers, and pulling out a handful of dimes doled out two shiny coins.

"With my blessings," he said as he gave them.

He showed his keen sense of humor as he surveyed his fistful of

REBELS MOBILIZING TROOPS FOR BATTLE

PREDICTS A VICTORY FOR FEDERAL FORCES

Mexico City, March 14.—"After the defeat of the rebels on the Torreon front it will merely be a matter of chase," declared President Emilio Portes Gil today. The president expects within 24 hours that the battle has begun, Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former president, but now war minister, sent word to President Portes Gil that he would personally direct the Federal assault upon the rebel works in the area on the Coahuila-Durango frontier.

FORMER PRESIDENT FACES EXECUTION

Eulalio Gutierrez, of Mexico Joined Fortunes With the Rebel Forces.

Mexico City, March 14.—Eulalio Gutierrez, who rose from a carpenter's bench to the presidency of the Mexican Republic, is expected to face a firing squad at sunset because of his connection with the present revolution. He was captured "in rebellion" at Coahuila, Del Oro, Coahuila, by the forces of Gen. Ignacio Otero, one of his old companions in arms in the revolutionary days of 1912-14.

Gutierrez was fleeing with the rebels that evacuated Saltillo, capital of Coahuila, on Tuesday night, said advices received here this morning.

By an act of the convention of Aguascalientes in 1914 Gutierrez became provisional president of the republic. He served from Nov. 9, 1914, until the following February when Villa evacuated Mexico City.

While the Carranzista counter-revolutionary forces held the capital, Gutierrez established his office in Chihuahua City.

Again Occupies Chair
In March, 1915, he returned to Mexico City and again occupied the executive offices in the national palace.

Gutierrez was said to have attained fame through his skill in dynamiting trains.

When he took office in the National Palace and sat down in the executive chair he looked at that piece of furniture with a professional eye and gravely observed: "This is a well made chair."

Once a Carpenter
Gutierrez began life as a carpenter, but was too ambitious and active to stick to the work bench in the swabbing days of 1912-14 when fighting was the chief profession for able bodied men throughout the republic.

ATTACK CALLAHAN AS STATE WITNESS

Evidence Procurer in Local Liquor Cases Has Bad Record, It Is Said.

The character and credibility of the testimony of Robert J. Callahan, alleged professional "stool pigeon" in the employ of the state, was severely attacked today in Hartford superior court during the trial of Frank De Cianis of Manchester on a liquor violation charge.

Auray John Burke of East Hartford, counsel for the defense, introduced Gerald Risley, of Manchester, a former county detective, as the star witness for the defense.

Mr. Risley testified that he had been making an investigation into the history of Callahan in his former home in Springfield.

Risley was shown a picture purported to be that of Callahan which he identified. However, both the picture and identification data on the back were ruled out by the court. While nothing official was stated, it is understood that the picture of Callahan is one, which if identified would prove a serious defamation against his character.

For the past few weeks Callahan, who previously lived on High street in Hartford, has been detained in police quarters.

De Cianis runs a small store at the north end and the state introduced the testimony of Chief of Police S. G. Gordon to the effect that on three occasions he accompanied Callahan to the store. Patrolman David Galligan who visited the combined store and home on the night of the series of liquor raids made by the Manchester police department, said he found a half-pint bottle of liquor in the foot of a flight of stairs. Captain Herman Schendel added that he found a Heavy Movements of Soldiers Toward Northeastern Sonora Starts Today; Plan Two-Sided Attack on Federals at Del Rio.

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 14.—The vanguard of General Plutarco Elias Calles' Federal army is now only 10 miles south of the rebel headquarters admitted at rebel headquarters today.

A message from Gen. Escobar military chief of the revolution, contended that rebels had been victorious in initial skirmishes. The message contained confirmation of the reported killing of the Federal General Francisco C. Torres in a clash yesterday between rebels and Federals.

BULLETIN:

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 14.—Heavy troop movements began from here early today toward northeastern Sonora, with additional rebel reinforcements being rushed to the rebel concentration point at Del Rio, 20 miles south of Naco, where General Augustus Olachea, with approximately 800 Federals awaits a possible insurgent siege.

The advance column of the rebel regiment under Col. Benito Bernal started over the Southern Pacific of Mexico line early today bound for Del Rio, where it will reinforce 500 insurgents under the command of General Francisco Manzo, second in command of the revolutionary army.

Four hundred Yaqui Indians, loyal to the revolution, under General Yocupicio, are reported to be awaiting orders to advance.

Bernal's regiment arrived in Nogales last night from Ortiz, Sonora.

Rebels Plan
Troop movements during the last 24 hours indicate the rebel leaders plan to overpower Gen. Olachea by sheer force of numbers, holding up operations in the Naco sector until a large force has been concentrated at Del Rio.

The rebel strategy appears to be the bottling up of Olachea with two columns of rebels advancing on Naco simultaneously from the south and east, while Olachea is prevented from maneuvering westward by lack of roads and transportation facilities.

Extreme tension prevails on both sides of the international border at Naco with the Olachea force entrenched behind barbed wire and ready for battle.

Three hundred United States troopers are also ready for action to safeguard American lives and property.

Machine gun positions have been taken up by U. S. Infantrymen along the Arizona-Sonora border, while detachments are on constant patrol. There are virtually no women, children, aged or feeble in Naco, Sonora, today following the exodus across the border to escape from the danger zone.

Gen. Fausto Topets was delayed in his trip from southern Sonora and was expected to arrive in Nogales today to hold a council of war with Rebel Generals Francisco Borquez, Francisco Manzo and other insurgent leaders.

ARMIES APPROACHING

Mexico City, March 14.—It was reported here this afternoon that the vanguard of General Juan Andres Almazan's federal army is approaching the rebel outposts on the Torreon front.

Gen. Almazan's forces, which occupied Saltillo yesterday, reported to be moving upon the Torreon sector over the northern route from Monterrey.

Gen. Almazan is believed to have between 2,000 and 6,000 troops—both infantry and cavalry.

Lieut. Col. Pablo Sidar, the most daring aviator in the Mexican army, made a scouting flight over the whole Torreon district during the morning. He reported to Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, the federal commander, that the rebels in that zone apparently totaled about 9,000 men. He said they had constructed an elaborate system of entrenchments and barricades and evidently intended to defend their positions to the last.

Gen. Manuel Medina Veytia, commanding the vanguard of Gen. Calles' army of the center, reported that his chief planned to attack and capture Durango, capital of the State of Durango, during the day.

Until Durango is in federal hands Gen. Calles' advance towards Gen. Escobar's chief rebel positions will be held up.

Gen. Lazardo Cardenas, commanding the right wing of Gen. Calles' army, arrived at Jalisco, Coahuila, with 5,000 men. Jalisco is about 30 miles from the Torreon zone.

Gen. Cardenas said he expected to effect a junction with the federalists under Gen. Saturnino Cedillo and Gen. Almazan.

WORLD COURT FOES READY FOR BATTLE

Senate Irreconcilables Will Fight Modification of United States Terms to the World Court.

Washington, March 14.—The old Senate Irreconcilable groups, minus the inspired leadership of James A. Reed, of Missouri, will fight any modification of the American terms of adherence to the World Court.

The Irreconcilables today served notice of war against the terms proposed by Eilhu Root, at the Geneva conference. Root, however, stole a march on the irreconcilables, it was learned, by submitting his plan to the World Court leaders before going to Europe. It met with their approval. Then he reached here, and Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee but Borah will not say what occurred at the conference.

"It looks like another war," said Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, one of the younger Irreconcilables. "I feel sure the Senate will not agree to any modification of its terms."

CRASH IN WILLIMANTIC KILLS HARTFORD COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Bingham Are Crushed Beneath Big Touring Car.

Willimantic, March 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Mrs. Bingham was dead when aid reached her. Mr. Bingham lived about twenty minutes. Both had fractured skulls and crushed bodies.

The only eye-witness was John McCarthy, a Providence truck driver, who was approaching the machine when the accident happened. He told authorities he saw the machine moving toward him at what seemed excessive speed for the conditions.

Bingham's car left the pavement and plowed through the dirt sidewalk for about one hundred feet. Then it rolled over several times, finally landing with wheels in the air and the two passengers beneath it.

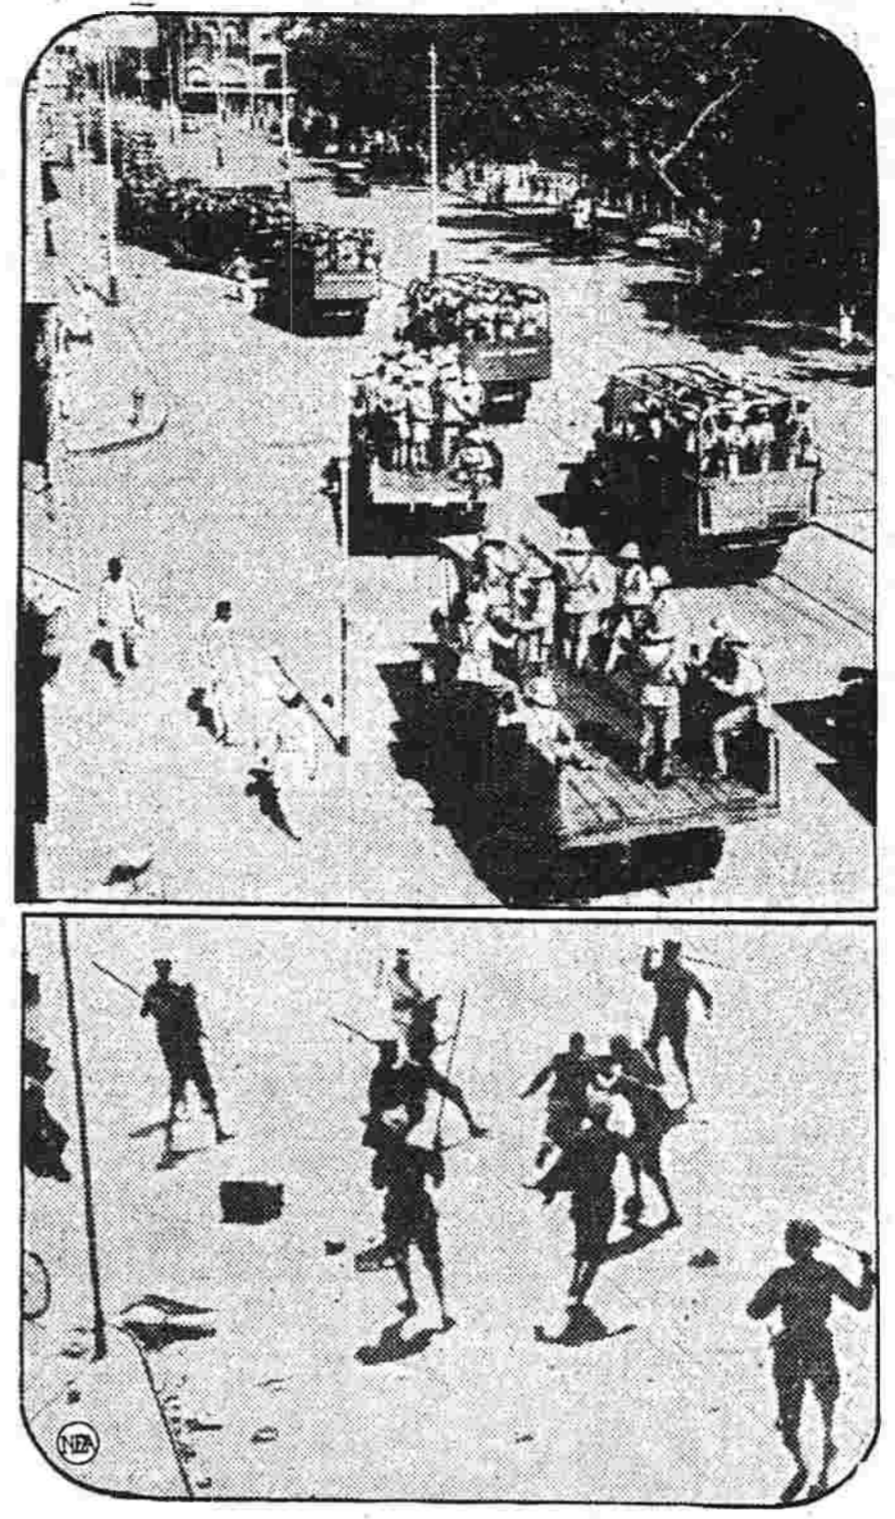

Bingham, according to his driver's license, was 66 years old.

Below police are seen clubbing rioters on Kaldave Road, where much of the fighting took place.

NOT AN ENEMY IN WORLD HAS JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

Once Wealthiest Man in the World Says He Is Happy, Is Healthy and Enjoys Life Thoroughly.

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 14.—John D. Rockefeller, once the wealthiest man in the world, said today in an exclusive interview that he feels as young as he did ten years ago and that, at the age of eighty-nine, he is getting as much happiness out of life as he ever did.

"My health is good," said Mr. Rockefeller. "My heart is all right. It gives me no trouble. I live moderately and I chew my food thoroughly."

"I have many friends. I have learned how to enjoy life, and I am happy. I thank God for the blessings He has bestowed upon me. Sometimes I think we are ashamed to openly acknowledge His goodness."

"I am getting a great deal out of life. I love everybody, and I haven't an enemy in the world. I know of I have all the blessings any person could ask."

Says He's Happy
Mr. Rockefeller was reminded that Thomas A. Edison, on the occasion of his birthday last month, told the press that there was no such thing as a happy person.

"Why, I'm happy," exclaimed Mr. Rockefeller in all sincerity.

It was the International News Service correspondent's rare privilege to accompany the "oil king" around eight holes of golf at Ormond Beach Golf Club this morning and to receive, incidentally, two brand-new dimes as mementoes of the occasion.

"How many children have you," he inquired. Upon being told, two daughters, he dug into the pocket of his long trousers, and pulling out a handful of dimes doled out two shiny coins.

"With my blessings," he said as he gave them.

He showed his keen sense of humor as he surveyed his fistful of

REBELS MOBILIZING TROOPS FOR BATTLE

PREDICTS A VICTORY FOR FEDERAL FORCES

Mexico City, March 14.—"After the defeat of the rebels on the Torreon front it will merely be a matter of chase," declared President Emilio Portes Gil today. The president expects word within 24 hours that the battle has begun. Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former president, but now war minister, sent word to President Portes Gil that he would personally direct the Federal assault upon the rebel works in the hills on the Coahuila-Durango frontier.

FORMER PRESIDENT FACES EXECUTION

Eulalio Gutierrez, of Mexico Joined Fortunes With the Rebel Forces.

Mexico City, March 14.—Eulalio Gutierrez, who rose from a carpenter's bench to the presidency of the Mexican Republic, is expected to face a firing squad at sunset because of his connection with the present revolution. He was captured "in rebellion" at Concepcion Del Oro, Coahuila, by the forces of Gen. Ignacio Otero, one of his old companions in arms in the revolutionary days of 1912-14.

Gutierrez was fleeing with the rebels that evacuated Saltillo, capital of Coahuila, on Tuesday night, said advices received here this morning.

By an act of the convention of Aguascalientes in 1914 Gutierrez became provisional president of the republic. He served from Nov. 9, 1914, until the following February when he evacuated Mexico City.

While the Carranzista counter-revolutionary forces held the capital, Gutierrez established his office in Chihuahua City.

Again Occupies Chair.
In March, 1915, he returned to Mexico City and again occupied the executive offices in the national palace.

Gutierrez was said to have attained fame through his skill in dynamiting trains.

When he took office in the National Palace and sat down in the executive chair he looked at that piece of furniture with a professional eye and gravely observed: "This is a well made chair."

Once a Carpenter.
Gutierrez began life as a carpenter, but was too ambitious and active to stick to the work bench in the swashbuckling days of 1912-14 when fighting was the chief profession for able-bodied men throughout the republic.

Rebels Plan
Troop movements during the last 24 hours indicate the rebel leaders plan to overpower Gen. Olachea by sheer force of numbers, holding operations in the Naco sector until a large force has been concentrated at Del Rio.

The rebel strategy appears to be the bottling up of Olachea with two columns of rebels advancing on Naco simultaneously from the south and east, while Olachea is prevented from maneuvering westward by lack of roads and transportation facilities.

Extreme tension prevails on both sides of the international border at Naco with the Olachea force entrenched behind barbed wire and ready for battle.

Three hundred United States troopers are also ready for action to safeguard American lives and property.

Machine gun positions have been taken up by U. S. infantrymen along the Arizona-Sonora border, while detachments are on constant patrol. There are rumors of a woman, children, aged or feeble in Naco, Sonora, today following the exodus across the border to escape from the danger zone.

Gen. Fausto Topete was delayed in his trip from southern Sonora and was expected to arrive in Nogales today to hold a council of war with Rebel Generals Francisco Borquez, Francisco Manzo and other insurgent leaders.

ATTACK CALLAHAN AS STATE WITNESS

Evidence Procurer in Local Liquor Cases Has Bad Record, It Is Said.

The character and credibility of the testimony of Robert J. Callahan, alleged professional "stool pigeon" in the employ of the state, was attacked today at Hartford superior court during the trial of Frank De Clantiss of Manchester on a liquor violation charge.

Attorney John Burke of East Hartford, counsel for the defense, introduced Gerald Risley, of Manchester, a former county detective, as the star witness for the defense. Mr. Risley testified that he had been making an investigation into the history of Callahan in his former home in Springfield.

Risley was shown a picture purported to be that of Callahan which he identified. However, both the picture and identification data on the back were ruled out by the court. While nothing official was stated, it is understood that the picture of Callahan is one, which if identified, would prove a serious defamation against his character.

For the past few weeks Callahan, who previously lived on High street in Hartford, has been detained in police quarters.

De Clantiss runs a small store at the north end and the state introduced the testimony of Chief of Police S. G. Gordon to the effect that on three occasions he accompanied Callahan to the store. Patrolman David Galligan who visited the combined store and home on the night of the series of liquor raids made by the Manchester police department, said he found a half-pint bottle of liquor in the store at a flight of stairs. Captain Herman Schendel added that he found a Heavy Movements of Soldiers Toward Northeastern Sonora Starts Today; Plan Two-Sided Attack on Federals at Del Rio.

BULLETIN:
Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 14.—The vanguard of General Plutarco Elias Calles' Federal army is now only 16 miles south of Torreon, it was admitted at rebel headquarters today.

A message from Gen. Escobar military chief of revolution, contended that rebels had been victorious in initial skirmishes. The message contained confirmation of the reported killing of the Federal General Francisco C. Torres in a clash yesterday between rebels and Federals.

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 14.—Heavy troop movements began from here early today toward northeastern Sonora, with additional rebel reinforcements being rushed to the rebel concentration point at Del Rio, 20 miles south of Naco, where General Augustin Olachea with approximately 600 Federals awaits a possible insurgent siege.

The advance column of the rebel regiment under Col. Benito Bernal started over the Southern Pacific of Mexico line early today bound for Del Rio, where it will reinforce 500 insurgents under the command of General Francisco Manzo, second in command of the revolutionary armies.

Four hundred Yaqui Indians, loyal to the revolution, under General Yocupicio, are stationed at Agua Prieta, 25 miles east of Naco, awaiting orders to advance.

Bernal's regiment arrived in Nogales last night from Ortiz, Sonora.

ARMIES APPROACHING

Mexico City, March 14.—It was reported here this morning that the vanguard of General Juan Andre Almazan's federal army is approaching the rebel outposts on the Torreon front.

Gen. Almazan's forces, which occupied Saltillo yesterday, reported to be moving up the Torreon sector over the northern route from Monterrey.

Gen. Almazan is believed to have between 3,000 and 6,000 troops—both infantry and cavalry.

Lieut. Col. Pablo Sidor, the most daring aviator in the Mexican army, made a scouting flight over the whole Torreon district during the morning. He reported to Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, the federal commander, that the rebels in that zone apparently totaled about 9,000 men. He said they had constructed an elaborate system of entrenchments and barricades and evidently intended to defend their positions to the last.

Gen. Manuel Medina Veytia, commanding the vanguard of Gen. Calles' army of the center, reported that his chief planned to attack and capture Durango, capital of the State of Durango, during the day.

Gen. Calles' advance towards Gen. Escobar's chief rebel positions will be held up.

Gen. Laszard Cardenas, commanding the right wing of Gen. Calles' army, arrived at Jalisco, Coahuila, with 5,000 men. Jalisco is about 30 miles from the Torreon zone.

Gen. Cardenas said he expected to effect a junction with the federals under Gen. Saturnino Cedillo and Gen. Almazan.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION PLANS ITS PROGRAMS

Center Church Women's Federation which is giving a social at the church this evening for all women of the congregation, will follow with another entertainment to which everybody will be welcome, on Friday evening, March 22. At that time a novel program will be presented under the title of "The Woman's Home Review," a magazine with all the departments that an up-to-date magazine embodies today, including the woman's page with its beauty hints, fashions, instructions in bridge and how to be popular, short stories and what not. Other salient features will be a prize play and an interview with a local male celebrity.

A large committee is busy with preparations for the coming edition of the "Woman's Home Review." Meantime the other women of the federation can hardly control their curiosity over the matter.

An old Irreconcilable, who voted for the World Court with reservations, said: "I do not believe the Senate will agree to any modification of its reservations."

The other side, however, was optimistic. Senators Swanson (D) of Virginia, and Walsh (D) of Montana, who led the League of Nations fight and supported the Coolidge administration in the World Court fight, predicted the Senate would approve the new Root terms.

The Root proposal, as Walsh explained it, would merely reach the goal of Article Five, of the American reservations, by a different route. As written into the American ratification, Article Five provided that the World Court could render no opinion on any subject in which the United States had an interest or claimed an interest, without the consent of the United States. According to Root, the European members of the Court looked upon this article as an "offensive intrusion" on the part of the United States.

DONALD COVIL, FORMER LOCAL BOY, IS KILLED

Grandson of William Foulds, Sr., Dies in New Jersey, Says Brief Message.

Donald Covil, grandson of William Foulds, Sr., was killed in an automobile accident today in New Jersey, according to a brief telegraphic message received this afternoon at the office of the Lydall and Fouds company here. The young man was about 25 years old and the eldest son of Clarence and the late Mrs. Fannie Foulds Covil. Both Donald, who was a chemist, and his younger brother William during the school vacation have worked at their grandfather's paper mills here.

The children were born and received their early education in Manchester. After the death of Mrs. Covil the family moved to Hartford and are now living in Pennsylvania. There are also two daughters, Eleanor who is with her father, and Edith who is with her aunt, Mrs. Edith Foulds Weldner in Florida. Both of the Foulds families are in Florida.

DOUBLE SHOWER

A double miscellaneous shower was given last evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Matchett of Center street. The young women thus honored were Mrs. Alice Perrett Mack, a recent bride, and Miss Ruth Sauter, who is to become the bride of John Matchett early in April. Both have been operators at the local telephone exchange and the guests for the most part were associates at the central office here, with a few out of town relatives.

The party came as a pleasant surprise to Mrs. Mack and Miss Sauter, who were invited for the evening by Miss Myrtle Matchett. When they arrived they found the home prettily decorated with green shamrocks and other evidences of the approach of St. Patrick's day.

A wedding bell was suspended over the doorway between the living and dining rooms. Large baskets containing gifts in linen, silver, glassware and numerous other choice articles were presented to each of the young women. Unwrapping and admiring the contents of the packages, and staging a mock wedding, and a dainty lunch occupied the time remaining.

Miss Lorraine Cowles was the bride, Mrs. Gleason the bridegroom, Miss Helen McCann the bridesmaid, Miss Betty Moriarty was the best man, Miss Alecia McDonald the flower girl, Miss Myrtle Matchett the minister. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played on the victrola as the bridal party in all their finery descended the stairs. A flashlight picture was taken of the group.

bottle containing a dark mixture and another of alcohol.

Testifying in his own behalf, DeClantis admitted Callahan came to the store more than once and each time purchased only a pack of cigarettes or a box of matches. He said he was working for the telephone company in connection with the dial system. DeClantis vigorously denied that he had sold Callahan any liquor and his wife substantiated the statements.

It was Callahan's testimony that was mainly responsible for the conviction of several Manchester persons recently in Manchester police court on a charge of violating the liquor laws. At that time, all defense attorneys but one, attacked Callahan's character and one went so far as to infer that he believed the liquor was "planted" on his client. The outcome of the situation is anxiously awaited in Manchester.

The jury went out on the DeClantis case at 2:50 this afternoon. When court had resumed at two o'clock both sides decided to rest their cases. The assistant states attorney explained to the court that the state was not relying upon Callahan's evidence citing the testimony of Chief Samuel Gordon, Lieutenant William Barron and Patrolman David Galligan. Attorney Burke said there was no indication of actual sale and reminded the jury that a man was innocent until proved guilty.

At a meeting of the Home Club last night it was voted to ask all members of Manchester, Lodge No. 1477, Loyal Order of Moose, to be guests of the Home Club at the supper Saturday night at Brantford Place. A social time will follow.

Matters of great importance to the corps will be brought forward, and the entire membership is urged to be present. The service will follow a street meeting at 7:30.

Manchester Grange held its regular meeting in Odd Fellows hall last evening. District Deputy Harold Hanson of Mansfield Center was a visitor. A program was put on by the officers in the shape of a radio broadcast from Station "WPOH." It consisted of a reading "General Merchandise" by Mrs. Laura Loomis; a harmonica solo by Herbert Mitchell, a recitation by Miss Ellen Rieg and a news feature, giving local hits about the members; a farce "The Third Degree in the Grange" and a roll-call of the officers, each one of whom responded with a joke or story.

appointed by the President. Both were satisfied—Jones, that the survey would show prohibition to be here to stay, and Edge, that it would develop the dry law so universally unpopular, and unenforceable it would have to be changed.

Mr. Hoover, then President-elect, called the two leaders in, however, and asked them to refrain from introducing any legislation. He told them he intended to appoint such a commission and did not need or want Congressional sanction. The proposed bill was withheld.

In the light of this history, the Wets today were studying the President's pronouncement with respect to the scope of the impending commission's activities, and they were getting little consolation from the fact that seemingly Mr. Hoover is interested only in tightening up and expediting in every way the enforcement of the 13th Amendment and the Volstead act. The executive said nothing about determining the causes behind widespread public disregard of the law, or possibility of modification.

Company

EVERY business day in 1928, the 26 million policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who are its sole owners, added a million dollars to the great reserve fund needed for their protection against the hazards of life and business—present and future.

Happily, more and more persons have a new understanding of what life insurance promises, what it can do and what it does do. They are learning that it does many different things equally well.

While the original purpose—to take care of the breadwinner's dependents in event of untimely death—has never been lost sight of, today life insurance is largely and directly concerned with the business of living.

ONE form of life insurance provides education for children at the very time when their education costs most... Another kind of policy tides over enforced idleness because of accident or sickness. Another form of policy, paid for in regular installments, is a sound financial investment, as well as a protection.

Employers and employees join together in buying another kind of insurance which provides leisure and freedom from financial worry in later years.

Business men build needed credit for business with life insurance policies... Final payments on homes are made certain by insurance.

About one person in every five in the United States and Canada shared in the Metropolitan's greatest year of service.

AUTO CLUB'S HEAD HAS POLICE RECORD

"North American" Promoter Sole Works of Service Body, Chamber Learns.

The spring months are the open season on automobile service clubs. There are good clubs and there are a lot of bad ones. There are many, in between, which are extremely doubtful. Anyone who pays dues to a service club should be sure that he is joining a national organization, properly organized, officered and financed.

The Chamber of Commerce has had a number of inquiries regarding the North American Automobile Club. The dues in this organization are higher than in some of the old established national organizations, but vigorous salesmanship has placed a large number of memberships in this community.

A special investigation discloses the fact that a man named C. George McPaul is the sole promoter of this so-called club. A number of complaints have been received from subscribers and also from garages and service stations because of inability to obtain settlements of claims of service charges.

Often Before Courts According to the report received by the Chamber, the promoter of this organization has appeared before the courts on several occasions for drunkenness, disorderly conduct, and for receiving stolen goods. He is reported to be out on bail from a New York court pending the outcome of his arrest, with a man named Turner, for having stolen stock certificates in their possession. Turner claims to have won these stock certificates in a crap game in a Boston hotel, and that McPaul was helping him to market them.

The character of the association itself is summed up in the following sentence, which appears in the report: "They praise big things which similar concerns having much capital behind them cannot afford to promise."

Atlas Match Company The Chamber of Commerce has just received a warning notice from a national organization in connection with the Atlas Match Company of Trenton, N. J.

Last January an Oak street merchant asked the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the Atlas Match Company. He stated that its salesman, "P. Barry" (the same man against whom the warning is issued) had sold him a consignment of matches and taken a deposit, but that he had never received the matches.

Inquiry in Trenton revealed the fact that there was no such concern and the Oak street merchant had simply paid another installment on his lessons in experience.

Suits by Mail Despite the repeated warnings issued by the Chamber through the columns of the Manchester Herald, another suit-by-mail clothing solicitor has been through the north end and secured a considerable number of orders on what appeared to be absolutely false pretense and misrepresentation.

The man took a deposit of $5 on each suit, promising to make deliveries in person, check the fit of the garments, and make collections of the balance due. Instead of this, the suits were received by mail, c. o. d., no examination allowed, and the price was $6.40 more than the agent represented.

Some of those who bought the suits refused to take them out of the post office, preferring to sacrifice the $5 deposit rather than take a chance of getting "stung" for a large amount.

All the losses cited in the three preceding incidents might easily have been saved had the victims chosen to call the Chamber of Commerce before, instead of after, they had paid their money. The Chamber is always glad to investigate and report facts on any proposition concerning which there may be doubt.

BID ADIEU TO CLUB MATE LEAVING COUNTRY

Mrs. Paulina Bellucci of Cottage street, who is to leave in April for her old home in Italy, was the guest of honor at a party following the regular meeting last evening at the School street Recreation Center of the Italian-American Ladies Aid society. Mrs. Louis B. Bellucci, president of the society, in behalf of the members, presented to Mrs. Bellucci a beautiful silver fruit dish. Mrs. Bellucci hadn't time to recover from her surprise when Mrs. Nettie Aceto gave her a fine large cake which she had made and decorated in the Italian colors, red, white and green, with a small Italian flag and the words, "Bon Voyage." Mrs. Angeline Andisio presented to Mrs. Bellucci a three pound box of chocolates. The members expressed keen regrets at losing Mrs. Bellucci as she has been a long-time member, and wished her and Mr. Bellucci a pleasant journey and a happy future in the homeland. Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

NOT AN ENEMY HAS ROCKEFELLER

dimes, saying: "I made these up at my house last night." Arrives on Time. Mr. Rockefeller, a stickler for punctuality, arrived at the first tee at exactly 10:12. His time for teeing off was 10:13. He came in a limousine, which, strangely enough, has no handles on the outside. He wore a gray cap over his silver hair, a gray sweater and long trousers. He face is tanned by open air life. He wore yellow rimmed spectacles and white kid gloves.

As he emerged from his car he was confronted by a dozen tourists, cameras in hand. He graciously posed for a picture or two. He was attracted by the cute appearance of a golden haired girl of about six. "What pretty curls," he exclaimed, toying with them. He reached into his pocket and produced a dime for the blushing child, as her mother looked on proudly.

Hands Out Dimes. And then he saw a little boy. He trotted over to him, handed him a dime, a then raised his leg over the boy's head, as if to show how fine he was feeling. Everybody laughed. He jollied with one or two other children, and then it was time for him to tee off.

In Mr. Rockefeller's foursome were William T. Sheppard, an attorney of Lowell, Mass., Miss Marie L. Callender of Madison, N. J., and Mrs. I. De Ver Warner of Bridgeport, Conn., with this writer as a gallery, and four colored boy caddies, they teed off.

John D. assumed an open stance on No. 1, a 335-yard hole. We understood he was always straight down the fairway. But this time he hooked his drive into a Palmetto grove to the left. He shot another off the tee and this one went straight as a die 150 yards down the fairway.

He has a very slow backswing. The club seems to quiver in his hands as he brings it back. But he "lays into" the ball in an amazingly vigorous manner. His brassie shot was a pippin and he was down in two putts for a seven.

"Too many looking at the first tee," he commented. His drive on No. 2, 269 yards, was fine, and again he had a great brassie shot. He holed out for a four.

No Favorite Shot. "What is your favorite shot?" "You look awfully good with your brassie, but you are not using your irons."

"I haven't any favorite shot. I'm just learning this game," he smiled. He hooked his drive on No. 3, 460 yards, but again his brassie was a bell-ringer. His second brassie was good, too, and he laid his approach dead. He "blew" an easy put, however, and walked off the green without holing out. He had to take a six.

He took another six on the fourth, a 465 yard hole, because he overshoot the green with his brassie. On this green Mrs. Warner holed a 30-yard putt and she sank it. John D. shook hands with her and handed her a dime. It was observed that she wore a bracelet made of new dimes.

Clean Cut Drive. A clean cut drive, a neat chip and two putts gave John D. a four on the 168 yard, fifth hole. The star shot of the day was made by the "oil king" on the 470 yard, sixth hole. He was laying five in the rough, and before him was a tall hill and a stretch of water. Taking his old reliable club, he addressed the ball carefully. Whang, he cut into it with a fine follow through and it went sailing straight as an arrow for the green, stopping ten feet from the flag. He was down in two putts for a seven.

"That brassie was the only shot I made today," he said gleefully. It was a pip at that, worthy of a first-class golfer.

On the short seventh, 166 yards, he took a four, missing a five foot putt.

He made a par four on the 315 yard eighth hole, and called it a day. He never shoots more than eight holes. His card 42 for eight holes indicated he could "break" 100 for 18 holes.

"I believe in moderation," he said. "I could play a few more holes without tiring, but I don't believe it's the thing to do."

"What message would you give other folks in the twilight of life?" "I wouldn't give anybody else a message—I'd give it to myself," he replied, then, with a smile, he added: "I have ideals, but I don't know that I live up to them. Everybody should have ideals."

A dozen or so tourists crowded about us. Mr. Rockefeller smiled at them benignly. He addressed them, saying: "You folks make me happy. This is food for me. This is health for me. This is happiness for me. Bless you—all of you."

Then he passed around some dimes.

POLICE COURT

Frank P. Fyler of 132 Newbury street, Hartford, paid a fine of $25 and costs in the Manchester, police court this morning for driving his car recklessly last night on Main street near Bissell. Fyler was arrested by Policeman Joseph Prentice and he with three witnesses, Jacob Greenberg, Harold Clemson and Dorothy Lear, testified that Fyler was going altogether too fast and that he drove over the crosswalk at Bissell street at such a speed that he came very nearly striking Miss Lear.

22,964 OF US, SAYS THE NEW DIRECTORY

Book Just Out Has Historical and Statistical Review of Town.

Although classed as a town, Manchester leads seven Connecticut cities in population and wealth and is the third largest community of its name in the world and the first in per capita wealth.

This information is part of the statistical review, a new feature in the latest edition of the Manchester town directory which is being distributed today. Other facts given are that the town's present area of 27 square miles, formerly known as the "Five Mile Tract," was purchased from Chief Joshua of the Mohegan Indian tribe in 1672 and later became known as Orford Parish through the establishment of the General Assembly in 1772 of the Orford Ecclesiastical Society.

The review goes on to say that the Hockanum River eventually relieved the early settlers from sole dependence on agriculture. A saw mill was built in Hilliardville in 1672 and a paper mill was operating in Union Village before the American Revolution. The news of the Battle of Lexington, incidentally, was printed on paper made at this mill. The growth of the town is traced to its present stage.

Estimated Population 22,964 The Town Directory estimated the population of Manchester at 22,964 with an assessed valuation of $54,000,000. Only six colored persons are reported as living here. There are about 2,000 more males than females. Seventy-four percent of the population is native born. The predominating nationalities are British, German and Swedish.

Other interesting information included in the statistical review follows: Six parks with a combined area of 60 1-4 acres valued at $205,150; post office receipts, $91,040.33; telephones, 4,620; churches, 13; 116 new dwellings constructed during the year with the value of building permits, $1,260,081; real estate transfers, $90; 24 industrial establishments employing 3,700 men and 1,920 women at a cost of $9,768,000 annually and having products valued at $24,429,000 annually; retail trade sales, $5,000 people within a radius of 20 miles; seventeen schools valued at $2,353,666 with 5,000 students attending.

Also, that the total street mileage is 130.15 of which are paved; 35 miles of gas mains, 40 miles of sewers, 13 miles of street electric lines; capacity of water works, 2,000,000 gallons; 36 miles of water mains.

Otherwise the Town Directory is much the same as in previous years. One of its advantages is the fact that the date of death and age of all persons deceased within the year are included. The directory is published by The Price & Lee Company of New Haven.

A NOVEL SHOW

Not only Manchester's merchants but the entire town must infallibly be in a stronger position today as a result of the truly remarkable joint display made by the stores on the occasion of the "Spring Opening" last night.

It was so long a step in advance, in fact, that the suggestion is automatic that Manchester's stores are capable of converting their general Spring Opening into an event important enough to attract visitors from very considerable distances—in a new and different way comparable to New Orleans' Mardi Gras, New London's boat-race day or any of those various local events, institutional in a number of American cities, which draw large numbers of outsiders, acquaint the country with the merits or beauties of the communities that maintain them, and constitute the finest kind of town or city advertising.

This is said, not because it is supposed to be the kind of thing to say, but because this Spring Opening stunt, as it has progressed, has developed the fact that Manchester's store keepers have a peculiar genius for the decorative and social side of business, without which such undertakings must necessarily fall rather flat. This might have been suspected at any time in the past, because every stranger who comes here expresses surprise at the unusual smartness and brightness of the Manchester shops.

BLOOD LUST

It is said that 20,000 persons were gathered along the Daytona Beach sand track when Lee Bible was whirled to his death yesterday in the wreck of the speed car in which he was seeking to break the record made two days before by Major Segrave. Probably every one of the twenty thousand would indignantly deny that he was present in hope of witnessing the killing of a human being—and would believe in his denial. Yet if the automobile that was out to make the record were being somehow automatically driven, without an occupant, and if every arrangement could be made and were made to prevent the possibility of death or injury to spectators, how much chance is there that the test would have been witnessed by 20,000 persons—or a tenth of that number?

Such spectacles as this depend for their appeal to the spectator almost wholly on the element of risk that is run by the driver. The more ghastly that risk the bigger the crowd. Indeed, following on the heels of the Triplex tragedy, should Major Segrave announce that ten days hence he would attempt to add another 20 mile notch to his speed record, an enterprising promoter would probably be able to organize a half million dollar "gate" for the show.

Humanity may have advanced a little from the point where gladiators were sent into the arena to kill or be killed for the entertainment of the crowd, but not beyond that at which pop-eyed, eager crowds will jostle to witness the killing of the gladiators match themselves, voluntarily, against perils at least as great as those of the Coliseum. It is no complaint to the Creator when men and women place such small value on their lives as do the Lee Bibles, the Segraves, the stunt fliers, and the like—nor can it be expected that the public will value those lives more highly than their possessors. The real tragedy at Daytona was the killing of the unlucky cameraman, Traub, victim of the "line of duty."

IN EXPLANATION

The Manchester Evening Herald is occasionally requested by some citizen or group of citizens to print a communication in refutation of comment or news matter appearing in some out-of-town newspaper to which such person or group takes exceptions, and it seems difficult sometimes for these contributors to understand why this newspaper is not always willing to give space to material of this class.

We wish to say here and now that the Herald cannot afford the space necessary to debate every comment made by "foreign" newspapers concerning Manchester or Manchester's affairs. Horace B. Cheney's recent statements concerning the silk industry, made before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington, for example, no doubt excited criticism in a hundred newspapers of the South and West. Suppose that each of these newspapers had fallen into the hands of some Manchester citizen and each citizen had written to this newspaper replying to the comment in question—what sort of newspapering would it be to print this dreary mass of refutation of something that the Herald's readers, almost as a whole, had never heard of or seen in print?

The vast majority of the Herald's readers do not know and do not care what out-of-town newspapers say about Manchester and its affairs. If in some such paper there appears an article which its occasional Manchester readers do not like, it is hardly fair to expect the Herald to give up its columns to refutation of that article or statement or whatever it may be, when it is something that nine out of ten of our readers never heard, and for which the Herald is in no remotest way responsible.

We could fill this paper with contradictions of and exceptions to statements and opinions appearing in other newspapers, but there is no reason on earth why we should and every reason why we should not. The Herald is responsible for its own utterances. It isn't yet ready to assume responsibility for the utterances of the thousands of other newspapers in America.

POLITICS ON WINGS

A contest for the position of manager of the Hartford municipal airport at Brainard Field—the merits of which are strictly a Hartford affair—suggests that here is one more field in which political log-rolling and intrigue may very easily figure and become. In the future, one of the big problems of the aviation ever does develop to the point embraced by the present expectations of many people, the control of a municipal airport is almost sure to become a large responsibility. It is very little trouble to imagine what might transpire in the way of favoritism to this, that or the other line of passenger or freight carriers on the part of the management of a great municipal terminal; or the opportunities for graft, direct or indirect, that might arise from the possession of authority or power by the individual or board in control of the field.

Not only honest but honorable administration of such terminal or landing facilities—or else the creation of an applied body of statutory law of extreme particularity—will be a vital matter if air transport grows as it now promises to grow. And wherever there crops up a rivalry of interests for facilities of a public airport there is extremely likely to crop up, along with it, political contests for the control of such facilities.

All this, of course, has nothing in the world to do with the Hartford situation of today; for all we know that may be the most ordinary rivalry for a job. But the future possibility of an entanglement of the airports with politics suggests itself, quite naturally, with the introduction of any sort of contest for the management of a municipal flying field.

A GUESS-WHY WAR

Everybody in Mexico and out of it, with the exception of those unlucky enthusiasts who wind up their careers against an adobe wall and the windows and orphans in the case, will be well pleased if the present revolution makes good its present promise of degenerating into sheer opera bouffe war. It is the greatest of mistakes to assume that Mexicans habitually fight their battles with their heels, for there is record of many a desperately bloody conflict on their soil. But in the present instance the will to die facing the enemy seems strangely lacking.

There is a good deal of evidence that this situation is accountable for by the fact that in many cases nobody but the leader seems to know which side he is campaigning on. The Yaqui general who told his troops that they were fighting for the government and about to be attacked by rebels, when as a matter of fact the approaching troops were federalists and he was secretly supporting the rebellion, has been matched in at least two instances by loyalist leaders who pretend to be part of the rebellion and then used their forces to help the government.

You can't run a war in any such way as that and expect that the men in the ranks will wade knee deep in blood to attain their objectives. To be either a vigorous loyalist or a desperate rebel you have to know whether you are the one thing or the other, and with considerable positiveness. The Mexican battlers have to do altogether too much guessing while they are in the war.

IN NEW YORK

New York, March 14.—The "Big Town" gossip. They tell me the real name of Walter Hampden is Dougherty, and that he's a nice little Irishman from Brooklyn. A student of the Brooklyn Polytechnic high school, he got his introduction to Shakespeare at the age of 16, when bewigged and bewiskered he played Shylock in a high school performance. Today Hampden, America's sole actor-manager and torch bearer of the Mansfield-Booth tradition, is best known in Manhattan for his "Cyrano," which seems always to bring back whatever money he may drop in earlier experiments of a season.

Clara Bow came to town under the moniker of Stella Ames, which happens to be the name of the character she will play in her next picture. Believe it or not, she would have nothing to do with reporters or press agents, announcing that she had come for a holiday and did not want to be bothered.

And another young man who "slipped out" on the press was Ralph Barton, the cartoonist, who recently wrote a novel history of America called "God's Country." The usual number of tears, interviews and such had been arranged for him, when without notice he jumped the Ile de France for Paris. It was rumored that he contemplated wedlock again. And this, if and when—and to the best of my memory—will be the sixth. Which put him in a class with the late Nat Goodwin, and the best of them.

On the contrary, M. Chevalier, who is what they call the "vogue of the moment" at M. Ziegfeld's gay roof establishment, is doing his darndest to become a gladiator. A shy, kindly young man, he has a slight physical resemblance to Will Rogers. There the resemblance ends, for there is nothing of the wisecracker about him. His only costume when performing is a tuxedo and a straw hat. It is a funny, queer straw hat and the fact that it's a mid-winter "doesn't" bother him. It links him to an unconventional ally sadly needed in these days when young men, following meticulously the dictates of style, appear in uncomfortable swallow-tails—and don't seem to have much fun doing it, either.

At lunch the other day, M. Chevalier, who soon will also appear in his first movie, confided to me that he's looking for an American song as good as his own "M. G. and Mme. Elephant"—but I don't know where he's going to get it. He also confided that he wants to spend his next few years 50-50 between New York and Paris. For, said he, there should be someone to mix the Latin humor with the American comedy. And he insisted, whether or not he is very successful and grows rich here, he will always go back to the Paris which idolized him—for he wouldn't have them think, for the world, that he has been won by gold or that American success has turned his head.

Would that a few Americans who have met success abroad, were half as loyal to their land! And they whisper that that movie of Gloria Swanson's has been "shelved." Written and partly directed by Eric von Stroheim, it was at first known as "The Swamp." Then the name was changed to "Honky Honk," and von Stroheim was called off the job when, as usual, he was accused of taking too long to make the picture. He had promised it within a few months.

A new director was called in to finish it. Something like half a million dollars had been spent. They do say that Joseph Kennedy, the young man who popped into the cinema fame over night, was heavily interested. Kennedy's disappearance from the "big spotlight" was as sudden as his rise, by the way. As the head of old FBO pictures—now Radio Pictures—he was looked upon as a young financial genius. He was soon financially reorganizing half a dozen lame film outfits, and was a major figure in the screen world. Then—flippity—he was mentioned as papa of Fathe and interested in the Swanson picture—and new names made their appearance where once his had flashed. It's all very mysterious.

GILBERT SWAN.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, March 14.—Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska is far from convinced that the prohibition law will be enforced, but he believes he knows how. Norris is a dry who doesn't drink, and he supports Al Smith for president. He has been a prosecuting attorney and a judge and so knows something about law enforcement. He is probably the only senator or public official here who is at all times willing to blurt out what he thinks and his answer for the prohibition problem is consequently both strange and unlogic.

"First," said Senator Norris, interviewed, "I would take prohibition out of politics. I would refuse to permit the politicians to name the enforcement officers. If I had my way, all judges, district attorneys, prosecutors and other officials having to do with law enforcement would be appointed without regard to politics in any event. And no man would be discharged because of his political belief."

"But when mixed up with prohibition, politics becomes a dangerous because of the financial profit involved. There are millions in prohibition. A large scale bootlegger can afford to pay a million dollars to get the right man in the right office. All sorts of jobbery have been resorted to in order to get people into these prohibition jobs. Members of Congress and national committeemen naming the appointees, what does anyone expect other than what we have."

Norris and his Nebraska colleague, Senator Howell, got together some years ago and put over a Democrat as prohibition administrator for Nebraska. The Democrat was Elmer Thomas, an Omaha lawyer with a record of success in prosecuting local option cases and a man of exceptional ability and integrity.

The assistant prohibition director came to Norris and bleated long and loud about the trouble such an appointment would make. Especially what a lot of trouble it would make for Norris in his next campaign. Norris told him, ineffect, to go chase himself; he promised honest, effective enforcement under Thomas.

It was under Thomas, as some readers may remember, that Omaha gained such an astonishing reputation over the country for its aridity. Of course the politicians maneuvered Thomas into a subordinate position in the end, but he was a holy terror to the bootleggers while he lasted.

Norris admits that there probably will always be bribery and graft in prohibition enforcement, but now, he says, men enter the service because they are crooks and expect to make a cleanup. As long as the politicians have three men to choose from after any civil service examination for an enforcement post, he believes, the situation won't improve.

"Second," he continued, "I would devote the energies of my force to the big fellows and forget the little fellow who takes a drink or carries half-pints. I would try to get the man who makes the biggest sale and presents him with a suit limit. If we got those fellows prohibition would be a success."

Norris scoffs at the idea that the evangelistic efforts of Mr. Hoover and others to persuade people to stop drinking is going to do any good. You can't reform people overnight, he says, or even in three years, as has been demonstrated. Neither does he think enforcement officers ought to waste any time trying to convert drinkers. He would leave that to the churches and the unofficial professional reformers.

"Naturally, I am opposed to drinking by public officials," he says, "but I wouldn't go around raiding dinner parties and small family gatherings. Nevertheless, if I knew there were a lot of high hat fellows, official or otherwise, who were staging a large party with plenty of liquor, I would raid it simply with the idea of finding the source of supply."

"We won't have to worry about the people who drink if we can get at the main supplies." Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, another dry and especially interested in his ability as a prosecutor, agrees with Norris about the need of getting the big operators, but is more optimistic about the possibilities of evangelistic efforts.

"Mr. Hoover spoke an indisputable truth," Walsh commented, "when he said it was utterly futile to expect any successful enforcement without the backing of public sentiment. I have read an intimation that he would look with disfavor on the dispensing of liquor by anyone holding an official position, at dinners or like functions. That would be a splendid place to start a movement to make drinking un fashionable."

"Also I think it rather unfortunate that most prosecutions have been confined to small retail peddlers rather than conspicuously to those who must be engaged in the illicit traffic in a stupendous way." Walsh said vigorous enforcement and aroused public sentiment should operate together, but did not care to say whether he thought the first could succeed in case the current educational efforts should fail.

'BE YOURSELF,' IS SINCLAIR LEWIS' MESSAGE IN HIS LATEST--AND PERHAPS--BEST NOVEL

After Studying American Tourists Abroad, He Discovers, in "Dodsworth," the Other Side of Main Street.

BY GENE COHN

Sinclair Lewis has discovered the other side of Main Street. But he came upon it by a circuitous route. It was necessary to cross the Atlantic and wander through the ritzy salons of London and Paris; it was necessary to meet all sorts and conditions of European peoples and American tourists abroad; it was necessary to find those expatriated Americans who, from their points of European vantage, sneer at their homeland and apologize for it; it was necessary to make a long pilgrimage through the highways and byways of most of the other Main Streets of the world.

Sinclair Lewis... has discovered the other side of Main Street

Babbitts All Alike
And when this was done, Lewis returned and found that Main Street was still there, but that it had two sides. And that the Babbitt of Zenith was perhaps no worse nor better than the Babbitt of Vienna or Naples; that around the corner from Babbitt's mansion was another estate where lived people who essentially belong to the year 1929—people who need merely to cut a few wisps of hair, in an international sense, to get along pretty well anywhere.

And so Lewis has added to his study of peoples and places a book about an automobile millionaire by the name of "Dodsworth"—a book which is likely to attract more attention than anything Lewis has done to date.

For Lewis has raised a large number of points and started a vast number of arguments in this work—most of them well barbed for the army of poseurs this nation has been producing.

"Be Yourself," His Advice
So one of the outstanding admonitions of Lewis becomes... "Be Yourself"... If that self is interesting, honest, kindly and worth while, you'll not need to blush for it in any part of the world... Don't four-flush and make yourself ridiculous... Forget the self-consciousness which so many Americans acquire abroad."

Well, at any rate, "Dodsworth" learned all about these things—as Lewis did. And there is good to be a lot of conjecture about how much of this book is auto-biographical.

For instance... Sinclair Lewis, upon returning to America, immediately bought a farm in Vermont and spent the summer of 1927 on it. And Dodsworth, upon journeying through Italy, found that one of the greatest factors in achieving a solid foundation was the traditional love of the soil. The American farmer, he recalled, was urban-minded and moved to the what passed for culture, and became a climber and a "yes man" of titled circles. She was quick to accept the theory that the European male knew more about romance and love than the busy Americans—all of which was perfectly all right until she actually prepared to marry one of them, and then she found that she would have to toe the mark, bow to centuries of tradition and get over being spoiled. Which was too much for her.

Meanwhile Dodsworth found, for instance, that a Britisher or Frenchman could criticize America for having troops in Nicaragua, but that the very heavens fell if one dared mention the French in the Rif or in the Congo. He found that an American was supposed to swallow the accusation of being the world's greatest money grabber, whereas he found the business figures of France and London quite as avid. He met the expatriate youngsters from the middle west, sitting about the Dome and the Select and he thought them rather tragic in their failure. And finally, he found that, cut lose from his wife, and taught lessons in self-assurance and simplicity by a woman of the world, that he was able to live among some of the "very best people."

Thus, through a woman of the world, did Dodsworth learn his own value and when he again met his selfish, self-centered wife, he couldn't stand it. He needed, as most men need, the confidence and respect of their women—something more than superficiality, and some definite bond of understanding.

"Dodsworth" is a book that will cause a lot of comment!

BOSTON FLOWER SHOW TO BE BIGGEST YET

Centennial flower shows do not happen every year, but those who make it convenient to journey to Boston next week will see the largest exhibit of its kind ever held. The Massachusetts Horticultural society is this year celebrating its one hundredth year of existence and the climax of the festivities is the big flower show at Mechanics hall, March 19-23. The show is usually held in Horticultural hall, but owing to the magnitude of the exhibit from cities all over the country, it was necessary to stage it in Mechanics hall this year. Leading horticulturists from all over the United States are expected. It is believed it will surpass in beauty and size the big show held this week in New York. It will be in itself a liberal education in floriculture, not only of the east but of the Pacific coast, the western deserts and the tropics.

An exact reproduction of an old-fashioned garden and house of 100 years ago will be one of the attractions. A redwood tree exhibit from California and a desert garden at a cost of $25,000 will be others. The display of roses and carnations alone will fill Paul Revere hall. An immense lily display will be the contribution of the William H. Vanderbilts of Newport. Another fine lily display will be made by Dr. J. H. Lancashire of New York and Manchester, Mass. Over 50 people are contributing cups, one of them over 100 years old and worth $1,000.

RAILROADS MUST PLAN TWENTY YEARS AHEAD

Boston, March 14.—The railroads must plan now for the kind of service which business men will need a decade hence; they must expand at least ten or twenty years ahead of general industrial development in order to provide adequate facilities, General W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania declared today in an address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce. "That is the purpose in electrifying the eastern portion of our line, in developing trans-continental rail-air service, in co-ordinating bus and truck service with railroad operations and in the study of numerous projects for improvement," Gen. Atterbury said. "Electrification is one of these projects, but it must not be thought that extension of electrified railroad lines implies that the days of steam transportation are ended. Steam power, on the contrary, is basic to railroad operation. Special conditions of a densely populated rapidly growing district, make electrification desirable. "The new era in railroading will not supplant the old but will supplement it."

CITIZENS' TRAINING CAMPS POPULAR

The following announcement was made today at the Headquarters in New Haven, for the Citizen's Military Training Camps to be held during the month of July, 1929, by Honorable John L. Gilson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War for Connecticut.

"The Campaign for the Citizen's Military Training Camps is now in full swing throughout the First Corps Area and is meeting with gratifying success.

"After eight years these camps throughout the United States are no longer in the experimental stage but have become so successful that no other governmental activity has won more unqualified approval."

"The number of C. M. T. C. camps throughout the country has grown from ten camps in 1920 to fifty-two camps at the present time. This increase of camps is due in part to the greater number of men in training but also to the necessity of saving costs of transportation and making camps more accessible to the visits of parents and friends. "No matter where located, the same provisions of comfortable quarters, excellent mess, expert training, with transportation, uniforms, equipment, medical care and all other necessary expenses are covered by the War Department for the training month."

"An increasing percentage of students each year is returning for the succeeding courses in the 2nd, 3rd and 4th year. The first year or basic is limited to the Infantry while in succeeding years a student may continue in the Infantry or take Cavalry, Coast Artillery or Field Artillery."

"The military discipline of the camps is considerate but effective. Character building is a definite contribution of camp training."

"Strictly military drills are confined almost entirely to the mornings while the afternoons are devoted to a great variety of outdoor sports. The social and religious phases of the camps have been developed with the utmost care."

Daily Lenten Thought

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

Worry is a form of distrust. It is an enemy of the soul because it never makes any situation better. There are, of course, situations in which worry seems inevitable and in which it seems the right attitude toward trouble. We cannot think highly of a person who deludes himself into imagining that there is nothing wrong when, perhaps, there is a great deal wrong; and there are people in life who shirk their burden of worry and who take everything easy only by passing on the burden to somebody else. But if we analyze the matter at all, we shall see that there is a great difference between the courage of faith, meeting wrong situations with the purpose of making them right, and the worry that simply weakens one's power of wise and courageous action in great emergencies. Worry never yet solved any difficulty. The darker the night of one's experience, the more need there is of seeking light and hope and faith; whereas, worry only lets the gloom of night darken all the windows of the soul. Worry breaks down the spirit, while hope and faith build up and inspire. It is just when there is most to worry about that one most needs the attitude of faith. Nervous diseases are much more prevalent among brain workers than among other sections of the community.

EVERYBODY WILL LOOK IN THE ATTIC TONIGHT. Editor, The Herald: I am sorely perplexed over a question of etiquette. I have purchased all known books of the subject but can clean no information. Since newspaper editors are famous for being informed on all sorts of odd subjects I herewith present my problem. In the attic of a house in the rear of my domicile an electric light has been burning continuously for the past two weeks. Now should I, without a formal introduction, write these folks to tell them about that burning light? Sincerely A. W. Editors Note: The Herald's etiquette editor is ill with lumbago from bowing too much, but the science editor suggests you sneak out some night with a good, sharp bread knife and cut the wires that connect the house with electric current. Five story structure (right) once site of old Roberts' Opera House, to be replaced by modern ten-story addition to Wise, Smith and Company.

HARTFORD

PLAN TEN STORY MAIN ST. STORE FOR WISE, SMITH

Structure to Add 100,000 Square Feet of Floor Space for Retail Trade.

WILL BE ULTIMATE IN APPOINTMENTS

Work to Start in Month on Historic Site of Old Roberts Opera House.

Wise, Smith & Company, a leading department store of Hartford for thirty-one years, announces the most decided building expansion movement of its career with the announcement today that within one month the first step in erecting a new large central unit for the establishment on Main street, to consist of ten floors for retail trade, will be started.

The new building, which will represent the ultimate in department store architecture and appointments and which, it is said will bring to Hartford shoppers some modern conveniences and facilities which have not yet reached the shopping center of New York, will present a new sixty-foot Main street front, extending from the present ninety-story section of the store, which will remain.

Nine stories above ground, each floor representing an extension of the corresponding level in the present building to the south, which is now the latest of the Wise, Smith & Company group, and extending two floors below the street level, this future nucleus of a larger and yet more centralized department store system will increase the firm's floor space by over 100,000 square feet.

THE BLACK PIGEON

© 1929 By NEA Service, Inc. by ANNE AUSTIN

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

RUTH LESTER, secretary, finds the body of an employer, "HANDSOME HARRY" BORDEN, Monday morning, sprawled beneath the airshaft window of his private office.

McMANN, detective sergeant, questions the following suspects: RUTH, MRS. BORDEN, estranged wife of Borden and mother of his two children; RITA DUBOIS, night club dancer, with whom Borden was infatuated; and JACK HAYWARD, Ruth's fiancé, instantly broken with office directly across the narrow airshaft from Borden's.

McMann's belief in Jack's guilt is strengthened by the discovery that Jack's Colt's .38 is missing; by Jack's own admission that he returned to the seventh floor Saturday afternoon, and by the testimony of elevator boys, MICKY MORAN and OTTO PFLUGER. BILL COWMAN, Jack's friend, tells McMann he heard Jack threaten Borden's life.

JAKE BAILEY, Borden's bodyguard, is sent for. Meanwhile McMann quizzes BENNY SMITH, BORDEN's office boy; ASHE, his manservant; MINNIE CASSIDY and LETTY HILL, two young girls floor scrubwomen; and CLEO GILMAN, Borden's discarded mistress. Cleo gives an ironclad alibi. McMann exits when he finds a fresh scarr in the brick wall outside Jack's window and a flattened bullet on the cement steps below. He says Borden fired the bullet in self-defense in his murder who stood in Jack's window!

MARTHA MANNING, mother of Borden's illegitimate son, is brought into the investigation by Ruth Lester. McMann mercilessly questions her about her relationship with Borden. Then he fires at her: "When did you last see Harry Borden?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"What do you mean—could not?" McMann caught her. Borden would not give him a divorce. She knew—about my baby, and was determined that her own children should never know of their father's sin. When I insisted, Harry—Mr. Borden—left me."

"Benny had fallen in love with Cleo Gilman. Isn't that more like it?" McMann interrupted.

The woman shrank against her chair, but only her great, tormented brown eyes answered, with such piteous appeal that Ruth's own eyes stung with sudden tears.

"And so," McMann went on, "you followed him about, telephoned him here at his office and at his home, wrote him letters which he did not answer, made an excuse to enter another office in this building so that you could observe your intended victim, then, by a lucky chance, discovered how you could use that other office at the scene of your crime?"

"No, no!" Martha Manning screamed, springing to her feet, her eyes blazing, but her face ashen, except for those ghastly spots of rouge. "You're cowardly, despicable! You know you have no foundation for a charge like that."

"I haven't made any charge—yet," McMann reminded her grimly, as he too rose and pushed back his chair. "Come here, Miss Manning! You know you have no foundation for a charge like that."

"Then let me remind you," McMann retorted. "That is the private office of Mr. John C. Hayward, insurance broker, the very agreeable and handsome young man you consulted, not so long ago, on the subject of a policy on favor of your son. . . . Do you remember now?"

"I don't remember," she said, her face pale, her hands trembling.

"You mean you followed him about?" McMann pounced.

Martha Manning smiled strangely, and did not answer. But she tapped out her half-smoked cigarette in the ash tray, and took up the pen from the desk, and dropped her hands into her lap—as if she could not trust one of them under the piercing eyes of the detective.

"I ask you again, Miss Manning—when was the last time you saw Harry Borden?" McMann asked with angry impatience.

"My last interview with Mr. Borden was on Christmas Eve. I'm afraid I took rather an unfair advantage of his manservant's carelessness—as he probably would have done—succeeded in speaking with Mr. Borden."

"Ah!" McMann raised his bushy brows. "And what was the purpose and the result of that impromptu interview, Miss Manning?"

"As to the purpose of the interview, I decline to answer. Its result you undoubtedly know already," the woman answered calmly, but Ruth saw her hands were gripping each other tightly in her lap.

McMann laughed an ugly sound. "You're a cool one, all right!"

Yes, the man Ashe had told us that you and Borden, in the presence of Jake Bailey, Borden's bodyguard, had a row, that ended in a fight in which you were almost knocked out. I see the cut on your hip has healed. . . . You tried to kill your lover then, didn't you?—and didn't quite make a job of it?"

The woman's great dark eyes blazed with scorn. "May I remind you that it was I, and not Mr. Borden, who was injured in that encounter?"

"But"—McMann leaned forward toward her across the desk, his eyes narrowed to slits—"you've hated him and planned revenge ever since that night! That's what it is!"

"No," the denial rang out sharply, then, in a voice that quivered and broke with emotion: "I loved him. I loved Harry Borden from the day I met him till the day he died. I still love him—when he is now, and will love him till I die!"

The detective settled back in his chair, regarding the trembling woman with that twisted smile of his which Ruth Lester had passionately to strike from his mouth.

"Suppose we get down to brass tacks, Miss Manning. I'll tell you a few things, and then you tell me a few. Fit for fat. Fair exchange. First: you have a son—" he said with awful casualness, then paused to watch the blood slowly drain from Martha Manning's thin face, leaving the rouge spots in ghastly relief. "A son you have tried to force Harry Borden to recognize and support as his illegitimate child."

"Stop!" Martha Manning half rose from her chair, leaned toward the detective with clenched, trembling hand, as if she were going to strike him. "Harry Borden did not deny that he was the father of my son! He knew—oh, my God, how well he knew!" and she sank back into her chair and pressed her knuckles to her mouth to stifle the sobs that were shaking her whole, frail body.

McMann was apparently unmoved. He went on relentlessly: "You loved this man, you bore him a son, you lived with him for years, and yet for months before his death he would not even speak to you on the telephone. He left order with his secretary and with his manservant that if 'the woman with the contra-voice' called, Mr. Henry P. Borden was 'not in.' How do you account for this, Miss Manning?"

The woman raised her head, and with light-clasped hands, fought a moment for self-control. "I asked something of Mr. Borden which he would not—or could not—do. I demanded that he marry me, so that our son might bear his father's closed for a moment, before she answered in a voice so low it was almost a whisper: "No, I won't deny—that. Of course I wrote him. I could reach him in no other way."

"And when did you write your last letter to your former lover?" McMann persisted.

"Martha Manning moistened her dry lips. "I—don't remember the exact time."

"Then let me refresh your memory," the detective suggested, slowly drawing a large, orchid-tinted envelope from his pocket.

The woman half started from her chair seemed about to ask a startled question, then subsided, her gaze fixed in terrible fascination upon the closely written sheet which McMann drew from the envelope and laid before her.

"Do you recognize this letter? You admit you wrote it?"

"There was no need for an answer, and Martha Manning made none."

"You will note," McMann pointed out obligingly, "that it was written Friday afternoon—the day before Henry P. Borden was murdered. Now if you will kindly read aloud the last three sentences of this letter"—and he turned over the single sheet of orchid stationery.

One of those betraying, thin hands reached out, hovered over the sheet, but did not touch it—dropped instead to the green blotter with which the top of the desk was almost entirely covered—lay there, quivering.

"You won't oblige me?" McMann asked cheerfully. "Then let me repeat them from a very good memory. 'But Harry, in all solemnity, I warn you that you will be sorry if you do not do what I ask. I shall telephone you Saturday morning. If you answer is still no—but I won't think of that now!'"

That pitiful, quivering hand started to lift itself from the blotter, but with the quickness of a sleight-of-hand artist's the detective's big hand shot out and covered it, flattening it against the green surface of the blotter. With his other hand he seized a full ink bottle and tipped it, so that the fluid ran in a dark tide beneath the pressed-down fingers of the woman.

"How dare you?" Martha Manning gasped, struggling to release her hand. "What are you doing?"

"Merely saving time by taking your signature myself," Miss Manning," the detective answered, as he lifted her ink-stained hand and pressed the fingers upon a sheet of white paper.

There will be a meeting of the Iroquois Saturday afternoon, March 16, at 2 o'clock at the home of Captain Elizabeth Norton. First class sewing contest will be given to all who wish to take it. Let's try for 100 per cent attendance.

The monthly rally held Friday March 8, at the School Street Rec was in charge of Captain Richards. The judges of the song contest were Charles Holman, Heide Pearson and Mrs. Supernaut. The badges were presented by Mrs. Nelson Smith to the following: Thelma Jackson, 2nd class; Eunice Brown, craftsman; Lois Wilcox, scholarship.

Troop 7

The Girl Scout laws were reviewed by means of "drop the handkerchief." The two best bird stories were told to the troop. One was given by Mrs. Nelson Smith and the other by Irene Keeney. First class singing was reviewed. Virginia Armstrong, a prospective member, visited the last meeting. A bird photography contest is now being held. It will extend through May.

Brownies—Acorn Pack

Last meeting was an enrollment meeting. Five "Tweentles" were enrolled as Brownies. They were: Marlon Alley, Janet Elliott, Frances Peabody, Alma Birch and Marcella Hollister. There were two visitors, Mrs. H. A. Alley and Mrs. A. L. Hollister.

Instead of serving cream over everything from bread pudding to gelatin, why not try our new sauces. Fruit juice drained off canned goods makes an excellent base. Heat lemon or orange sauces and even a hot apple sauce seasoned lightly gives a welcome change.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLEN SCAVNER

Sometimes in the fairy tales even without marrying handsome, rich, and world-famous Gene. And now—the hero and God divine of them all, Colonel Charles Lindbergh himself, "Lucky Lindy," is to be wed to Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, daughter of Dwight Morrow, ambassador to Mexico, a man of Wall Street, millioned to an nth degree, with all the fairy tale gifts that station of name and wealth can give.

So here you are, three of the world's most eligible young men engaged or married to three of the world's most matrimonially eligible young ladies!

So many observations could be made. No doubt there are many who, reading of these romances in the day's news, made comment on the effect that "Young men are smart these days. They pick for wives the girls that can do them the most good as wives—girls with money, name, social station, connections that will advance them to the highest pinnacle."

There's no use evading the fact that, beloved as "Lucky Lindy" is, there have been several rather bitter comments made to the effect that he didn't dare choose romance and love in place of "the best marriage."

There are doubtless thousands who reflect that Lindy probably has or probably could love some humble little girl as remote from the place in the world of an Anne Morrow as Texas Guinan is from Queen Mary.

But it is equally true that love flowers from propinquity, and that the very stations in life of the John Coolidges and Gene Tunneys and Colonel Lindberghs have naturally thrown them with the Florences, Trumbulls and Polly Lauders and Anne Mornings more than with girls of lesser rank.

Let's believe, anyway, that real romance of the stork book kind, and not calculated wisdom and caution, motivates the Colonel's "flier."

TO BE ENVIED.

In fact, most Helens and Jeans of the ribbon counter or the punch press would debate that Miss Florence Trumbull was quite to be envied even without "copping" a president's son.

Some of you may remember Gene Tunney, once heavyweight champion of the world, though he is doing his best, what with smashing cameras and what not, to make the world forget that he's anybody of importance (except when he gets good pay for a testimonial or radio appearance). Gene married one Miss Polly Lauder, heiress to millions, another girl whom lesser girls would say was supremely blessed

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Most of the tooth brushes sold today are too large for efficient brushing.

There are all sorts of shapes available with many strange distributions of bristles, but so far as is known it is impossible to make a tooth brush that will conform exactly to the shape of the dental arch inside and outside.

Some tooth brushes are made with bristles higher in the center and low at the ends, some with the bristles high at one end and low at the other end, some with bristles lower in the middle and high at both ends.

This seems to make little difference, the only necessity being that the brush be such that it can be manipulated so that the bristles will reach the front, back and sides of every tooth.

The tooth brush demands proper care to give it long life and to prevent its acting as a carrier of infections rather than as a preventive.

When a tooth brush is split, when bristles begin to break off and come out, the tooth brush should be thrown away. A new tooth brush should be put in a strong salt cold Water solution for two hours before using.

Cold water should be used to moisten the brush before using, and to rinse it thoroughly after the teeth are brushed. The brush should then be hung in the open air in such position that the bristles will not come in contact with anything else for 24 hours before the brush is used again.

Obviously, therefore, persons should have two brushes, one for morning and one for evening use. If a tooth brush is kept moist for Q.—What is the epidemic of ring-worm that is going around?

A.—A recent examination of students in a college indicated that two-thirds of the men and at least one-third of the women were infected with ring-worm of the feet. It is most commonly contracted in showers and on floors of gymnasiums and clubs. There is itching between and under the toes with maceration and splitting of the skin. The spread of such infections is best prevented by frequently scrubbing with soap and water the shower rooms and gymnasium floors.

The Spring Opening of the Stores. The Main street merchants were favored with ideal weather last night for their fashion displays of wearing apparel, home furnishings and all the other items. The crowds on the streets and in every store were greater I believe than at any previous spring opening. Beginning at Keith's, a party of us tried to take in the high spots all along the line, but there was hardly time within the two hours allotted, so numerous were the attractions.

excellent opportunity for local people to note the effect of this style of furnishing. Displays of furniture for the kitchen, the sun porch and other parts of the home were of the latest models.

Rubnow's apparel shop was another filled during the evening, with women and men interested in the spring fashion parade there on living models. Seats were arranged all around the spacious store but many were obliged to stand. The models came from the rear and before returning stepped into the show windows thus affording people on the outside a view of the handsome new garments to be found at this shop.

Keith's displayed all the newest ideas in furniture, kitchen appliances and linoleums. The Park Hill Flower shop had a marvelous collection of baskets and vases of roses, snapdragons, tulips, and potted snappers in their windows and within the store. Every business wearing apparel for the men. Within the store was filled by people of them were decorated with colorful artificial flowers and vines.

House windows were beautiful in wistaria velvet drappings and wistaria blossoms. These colors set to advantage the new things in wearing apparel for the men. Within the store was filled by people who came to see the style exhibits and also to hear the singers of the Beethoven Glee Club.

Frudin's also staged a fashion show with living models to display their extensive line of women's ready-to-wear dresses and coats. One of the young ladies, a graceful solo dancer, executed several numbers for the entertainment of the throngs at this store.

Millikowski the florist had most attractively arranged windows and interior, using the spring flowers, ferns and plants.

The Manchester Electric Company, according to their counting device had more than 2600 visitors during the opening hours. Mrs. Rowe, home economics expert at the store displayed a planked vegetable dinner, sponge cake and pie cooked in the electric and Thermax ovens. Coffee, sandwiches and cake were served to as many guests as could be taken care of and the electric appliances were demonstrated by members of the force at the Main street store.

MARY TAYLOR.

Hale's windows, the next in line, came in for their share of admiration. They had the largest display of women's and children's garments and accessories. Along the whole length of the store on the left side yard goods in the latest patterns and fabrics were artistically displayed. The store was beautifully decorated with flowers, natural and artificial and painted plaques. Curtains were draped at all the windows, adding to the beauty of the scene and at the same time showing the new ideas in draperies. The garment department was crowded every moment of the opening hours. Manager Frank Anderson, after every appearance of the fashion models, was obliged to direct traffic through the store in order that all who visited Hale's during the opening might have an opportunity to glimpse the models and the lovely ready-to-wear goods they were showing.

The young women who acted as fashion models were graceful and fully equal to the part they played. The smart spring hats and suits, afternoon dresses and sport ensembles, natty shoes, which were furnished by House's were greatly admired, and the little tots, boy and girl models who showed up in the beauty and simplicity of the togger for children, fairly captivated the onlookers. The little coats and ensembles, the party dresses and others in the fadeless, washable prints, are lovelier than ever this season. Hats, shoes and stockings were worn in one color, say red, black or beige, and the effect very pretty with the little pongee or print dresses.

Coming Track Season Most Important Here

Meriden and Manchester High Schools Each Have Won League Title Twice; Season's Prospects.

The coming track season will be a most important one so far as Manchester High is concerned. The local school is tied with Meriden, each having won two legs on the Central Connecticut Interscholastic trophy. If either school wins this year, it will gain permanent possession.

Sixty-five candidates attended the first meeting of the track squad Tuesday afternoon at the school. Coach Charles L. Wigren addressed the boys and outlined the chief points one must observe to train properly.

Seven meets are on the program this season. Manchester will take part in the state meet at the Yale track in New Haven. The season's objective, however, will be the league title. Manchester and Meriden meet in Meriden this year. The schedule opens April 25 when Chapman Tech of New London comes here.

Many believe that Manchester will have the strongest team in years. Among the veterans back are as follows:
100 and 220 yard dashes: Cheney, Treat, Murphey and Buckland.
440: Robertson, Spears and Lyons.
880 and mile: Greenaway, L'Heureux and Captain McCluskey.

Field events: Johnson, Spencer, Mercer, Scariato, Cheney, McCaw, Nelson and Nicola.
Coach Wigren concedes this well-balanced team a good chance of winning the state meet. The manager has not been appointed yet, but it will be either Bill Davis or Bob Glenney.

HOW AND SLIDES

Henry L. Burrell

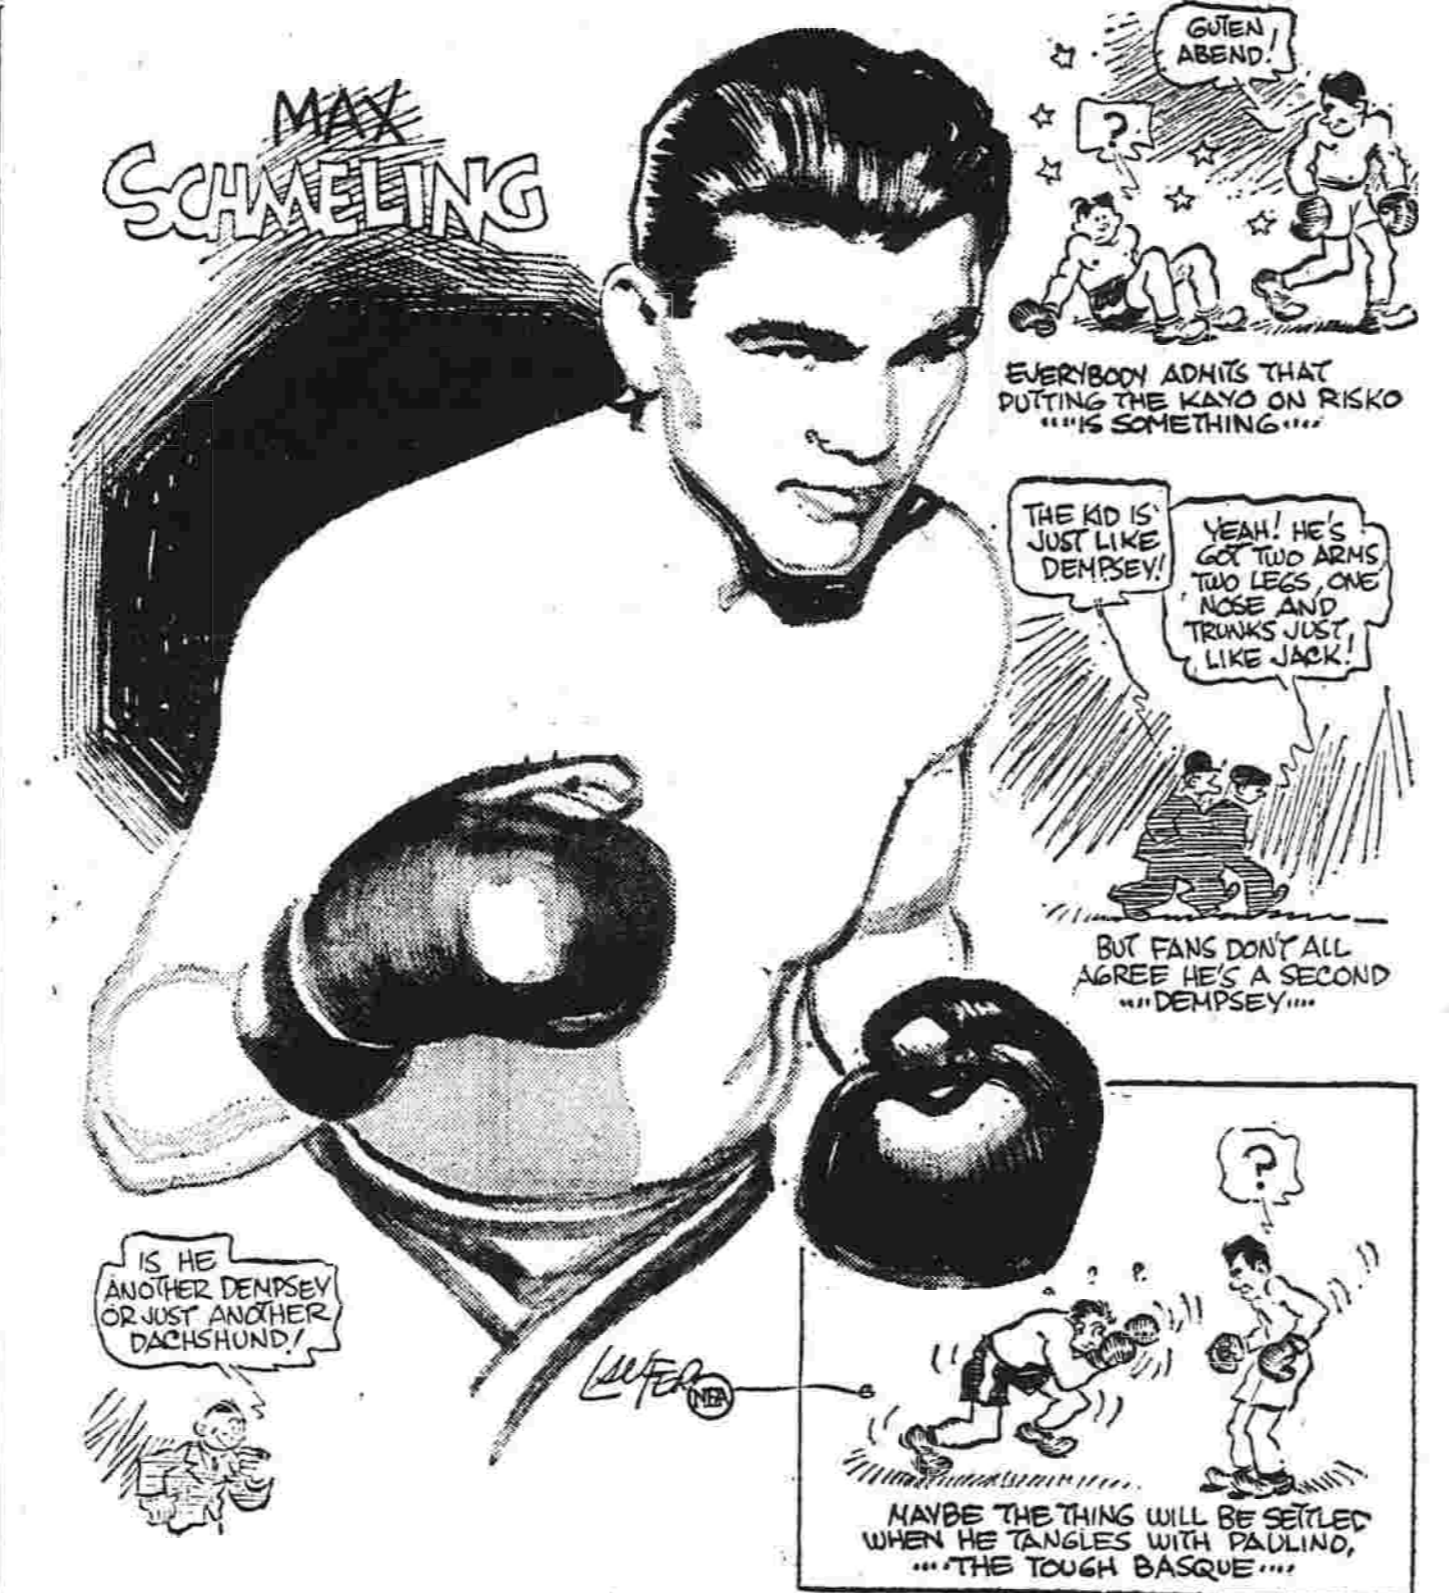

MY, SUCH A QUESTION!

With the Babe, considering that he is a high-priced journalist and newspaperman on the side, is a hard nut to interview. In his newspaper writing career he has learned yet that a reporter has to ask foolish questions at times just to satisfy the curiosity of the editor.

Was forced to put a foolish question to him in the Yankee training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla. He was full of sweat and a little out of breath and patience, perhaps, and I might have picked a better moment.

"Who's going to win the pennant this year, Mr. Ruth?" I asked him, and the first response was a swell glare.
"Don't give me that Mister stuff. Are you trying to give me the razz?" he gruffed back.
Then he thought for a moment and said: "Well, the Athletics ain't going to win this year, and neither are the Browns or the Detroit. Now use your own bean."
I suggested rather meekly that he meant the Yankees were going to win through as greatest.
"You've got a great bean," he said. "That's just what I mean. The Yanks are in."
He took a big slug of water out of the cooler and wiped off his face on his dirty sweat shirt and went into a little oratory.
"You're a helluva expert to be asking questions like that," he said. "What do we need to win a pennant that we ain't got? What have them other guys got that we ain't? We got pitchers and hitters, and we got guts."
"And, if you was about last year, you know what guts meant to our club. When you want to ask me what year it is, come around again, and you don't have to rap on the door. Walk right in."
Babe in Great Shape.
The Babe seems to be himself again after a very unfortunate experience that he was forced to go through during the winter. No one speaks about the experience to him, of course, but we know from some of his few intimates that he has shaken it off. At least when he is on the ball field.
There is so much real love of baseball in the Babe that he can't think of anything else when he is on the field. What he consoles or distracts himself with off the ball field is his own business. But he obviously is in good condition.
"Through as greatest."
Personally, I think that the Babe is through. At least, that he is through as the Babe who was so magnificent in the World Series. The other ball players agree that he will be a good ball player as long as he is able to walk, but a great number of them I have talked to in the spring training camps think he is through as one of the greatest ball players of all times. If "in the greatest."
They think that his legs are gone, in baseball, as the legs go so does the nation.
"Anyway," most of them said, "the dirtiest jockeys in the league are on the Yankee bench, and they won't ride their own man."

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

When Schmeling returns, he will be paired with Paulino Uzcudun, the winner to meet Jack Sharkey in the finals for the crown. Just how the German Dempsey will make out with the rough and tough Umsie will be interesting to see. If he should duplicate the form he displayed against Risko and knock out the Basque, they'll have to make the beer steins larger in the Rhineland. Also they'll have to polish up the crown for heavyweight coronation ceremonies.

Hartford, March 14.—Tony Leto of Tampa, Florida, who battles Eddie Lord of Waterbury, state junior lightweight champion, in the feature bout at Foot Guard hall tonight, said at the conclusion of a fast workout at the St. Nicholas gym here yesterday that he expects to score a kayo over Lord.
Leto has the distinction of being the only pro boxer ever to floor Bat Batters. He will get another shot at Bat, if he beats Lord tonight.
The star bout this evening is down for ten rounds and there are two sixes and two fours, with an eight-round semi-final.

BIBLE LOSES LIFE IN TRY FOR RECORD

Ocean Speedway, Daytona Beach, Fla., March 14.—Thundering down the nine-mile speedway here yesterday afternoon in an attempt to break the world's automobile speed record, Lee Bible, the driver of the American car "The Triplex" skidded while he was going at break-neck speed and plunged into a sand bank.
He died shortly after being taken from the wreckage. Charles Traub, a Pathe News cameraman was also killed.
Bible was streaking up the smooth sandy beach at a speed of 202 miles an hour when his car struck a wet spot, swished violently to one side, bounded several times, and plunged into a hill. Then it rolled back on the beach.
The car struck Traub and cut him in two. Both men were married.
Bible was the third auto racer killed in three years. J. G. Parry, Thomas, English driver, was killed at Pendine, Wales, in 1926 and Frank Lockhart, American driver, lost his life at Daytona Beach April 25, 1928.

SOUTHWORTH SAYS PENNANT CHANCES ARE GOOD AGAIN

Has Well Balanced Team; Sherdel, Haines and Alexander Vets of Pitching Staff.

Avon Park, Fla., March 14.—Billy Southworth, the boyish looking manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, last year's national league pennant winners, realizes he has a hard job cut out for himself but he thinks well of his Club's chances of again capturing the flag.
"I've got an experienced, well balanced ball team and I expect it to deliver," he told International News Service today as he sat on the bench at Avon Park watching his players go through their spring training paces.

Southworth, a former big league outfielder, managed Rochester to a pennant in the International League last season and was selected to fill the shoes of Bill McKechnie, last year's manager of the Cardinals, who was deposed after the Red Birds lost disastrously to the New York Yankees in the World's Series.

Asked to outline how his club probably will line up when the season opens, Southworth said:
The Infield
"Bottomley, of course, will play first. Either Frank Frisch or Carey Selph will take care of second. Selph hit .312 for Houston last year and looks like a great infielder. Charley Gelbert, who played shortstop for me at Rochester and hit .354 last year, will be at short. That is settled. Either Andy High or Frisch will go in at third.

"Rogers in right, Daulton in center and Hafey in left probably will make up our outfield. However, I may play right myself if the situation calls for it, and I have Orsatti in reserve for center and Holm for left."
"I may not get into the game myself at the start because I injured my arm when I slipped on the hardwood floor of my home and tore a ligament in my right elbow. Put I still think I have major league ball in me."
"Jimmy Wilson and Earl Smith will most likely do the bulk of catching, with Gus Mancuso and Clarence Jonnard filling in. That's a pretty good catching staff.

CLUBS PADLOCKED

New York, March 14.—While dry agents were applying the Jones law to Broadway with six raids and 14 arrests early today, padlock proceedings against twenty night clubs in New York City and ten more in Westchester county were announced by Assistant United States Attorney General Maxwell Shapiro.

It is expected that the "cleanup drive" in the White Light district will be extended to Rum Row in a few days when a new fleet of cutters will be put into service.

The ten padlocks which Shapiro seeks for Westchester county would be distributed in New Rochelle, Yonkers and Mt. Vernon.

You can afford the things you want
In time—no doubt—
If you don't buy the things you

Can do without.

"Where were you boys when I called for you to help me an hour ago?" asked Farmer Jones.
"I was in the barn setting a hen?" said one.
"and I was in the loft settin' a saw," answered the other.
"I was in grandma's room settin'
the clock," came the response.
"I was up in the pantry settin'
a trap," said a fourth.
"You're a fine set," remarked the farmer. "And where were you?"
he asked, turning to the youngest.
"I was on the doorstep settin' still," was the reply.

Another one of these "high fliers" come to roost. An Irishman about three sheets to the wind was on his way home. It was after midnight, and as he crossed a bridge he saw the reflection of the moon in the water, when a policeman approached from the opposite direction. The Irishman, addressing the policeman, said:
"Wha' that down there?"
"Wha' that's the moon," replied the policeman.
"Well, how in the deuce did I get up here?" asked Pat.

"What is the biggest problem?"
we asked the manager of the in-"Getting 'em to pay up after they have paid down," he sighed.

Salesman: This is a companion-ate piano.
Customer: "Companionate?"
Salesman: "Sure. You try it two months, and if you don't like it, don't keep it."

Two men went hunting for the first time and borrowed a few dogs from a farmer. After they had been out for a while they returned.
"Wha' that's the matter?" asked the farmer. "Do you want more shot?"
"No," they replied, "we want more dogs."

"Daddy, may I have a dime?"
asked little George.
Dad obliged him with a smile.
"Time you won't make me give it back after the company's gone, will you daddy?" was George's loud remark.

"We are now," announced the guide, "passing through a rural hamlet."
"Ohi," exclaimed the sweet young thing, "I thought a hamlet was a little pig."

It was a fashionable wedding.
The groom had no visible means of came to the par' where he had to repeat, "with all my worldly goods I thee endow," his father was heard to say in a horse whisper:

"Heavens, there goes his bicycle!"

LETTER GOLF

A SHORT ONE

Par is only four on today's letter golf hole and that may account for the CLOSE SCORE part of it. One solution is on another page.

Grid for Letter Golf puzzle with words CLOSE and SCORE.

THE RULES.

- 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes.
Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2-You change only one letter at a time.
3-You must have a complete word of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4-The order of letters cannot be changed.
One solution is printed on Comic page.

Beggar—Kind lady, I was not always like this.
Lady—No. Last week it was your other arm that was missing.

Household Hint—Two old evening gowns sewed together make an excellent pen-wiper.

Long hair is coming back say the fashion experts, but not so as to bring any hope to a bald-headed man.

THE ANYMITES

(HEAD THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)
While Cloway slept below the ground, the others still were standing 'round the funny little wooden shaft they'd found upon the hill. Wee Carpy gazed down in the shaft, and then jumped back. The others laughed. "Why, even looking down," said he,
"gives anyone a chill!"
"it goes way down and gee, it's dark, and no place I would care to park. Who'er goes down might soon be lost or injured.
Who can tell? The cave where Cloway chanced to crawl may not lead up to this at all. As far as we know this place may be nothing but a well."
Then Scouty grabbed hold of a rope, that hung way down, and said, "I hope that something's on the end of this to help us solve this mess. In pulling it there'll be no harm. Come on, somebody, lend an arm. It's rather heavy, but we all can pull it up, I guess."
"No! Wait a minute," Cloway cried. "A crank is right there by your side. All we need do is turn it and the rope will quickly rise."
"Your're right," cried Scouty.
"This is great. There is no need to hesitate." And, as they pulled in a bucket 'rose. A treat for all their eyes.
"Ah, ha!" cried Scouty. "Here's a plan. You two jump in as best you can, and I will slowly let you down till you come to a stop.
Then, after you are safe and sound I'll also leave this outside ground. I'll slide right down this little rope, and trust that I won't "flap."
The two did just as they were told and down they went, into the cold, cold ground that lay below them. Then they shouted, "We're all right." So Scouty, tied the rope up good, and slid right down, as best he could. "My goodness, wha't's to happen now that they're all out of sight?"
(Cloway finds a little coal car in the next story.)

GET TOGETHER CLUB TO SEE HERALD PLANT

Cheney Brothers Group to Dine in Composing Room and See Newspaper Made.

The next session of the Get-Together Club of Cheney Brothers will be a most unusual one. Instead of being held at Cheney Hall where only dinner and entertainment form the attraction, next Thursday's meeting will be in the plant of the Manchester Evening Herald, at 13 Bissell street.

This will afford the members of the Get-Together organization an opportunity to learn all about the printing of a newspaper. The meeting will be held in the composing room of the newspaper plant which is on the main floor. Linotype machines which cast the type for the printing matter will be in operation as well as other machines necessary in the various processes of making up a newspaper.

Herald representatives will be on hand to explain the various details. Every step from the time a story is typewritten until the moment it comes off the press will be shown to the visitors. Dinner will be served in the composing room and will be put on by Chef Urbano J. Osano. The Old Mill is in charge of the program. Between 175 and 200 are expected to be present.

BRIDGE WIDENING MAY MEAN NEW STATE ROAD

State Highway Dept. Work Beyond Love Lane May Indicate Middle Turnpike Improvement.

Indications that the State Highway Department is contemplating early improvement of the Middle Turnpike route from the Love Lane Junction to Bolton are seen in the fact that employes of the Highway Department are now taking soundings preliminary to the widening of the bridge over the Hockanum west of Love Lane. Soundings are being taken north and south of the bridge and on both sides of the Hockanum.

For two or three years the Highway Department has been making tentative gestures toward the development of the Middle Turnpike route and has made at least one survey from Manchester Green to Bolton. Several layouts have been made of this part of the route, though no actual construction work has been done beyond cutting down the curve at Manchester Green and moving back one house. It is understood that one contemplated plan involves doing away with the bridge at Bolton Notch and the building of a new road that would cut through the pond west of Bolton Notch railroad station, which would greatly alter the road map in that locality.

The operations at the Love Lane bridge seem to point to a definite purpose to develop what would be in large degree a wholly new through route from Hartford to the country east of Manchester.

According to the International Congress of Chefs, an egg is "new laid" for ten to twelve days; it is "fresh" until it is 21 days old; then it becomes a "cooking egg."

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

THE SMACKS RETURN

The first of those gallant little ships that go up to the edge of the ice fields after Halibut have returned, with the first catch of the season. Pinehurst is enabled therefore to offer Fresh Caught Halibut as a special feature of its weekly seafood menu—the first of the year. Are you interested, incidentally, in the fact that the "hal" syllable comes from "Holey" and the fish got its name from being, originally, most served on holy days? Anyhow you'll find this Halibut delicious.

Pinehurst's Fish Business has been particularly heavy this Lenten season. Perhaps it's because in no instance have we permitted an order of fish of any kind to go to a customer unless it was in absolutely perfect condition—in the fish trade condition means everything.

Incidentally you can order Fish by phone, here, in absolute safety. The inspection before delivery is absolute and the delivery made at any time you wish after 8 in the morning. Phone 2000.
