

ANOTHER GIRL VICTIM OF A TORCH SLAYER

Strangled and Later Cremated, Remains of Young Woman Is Found Under Tree in Scarsdale, N. Y.

Scarsdale, N. Y., April 29.—The Leering, hideous specter of another "torch murderer," baffled detectives today as they sought not only to apprehend the fiend who strangled and cremated a young woman under a blossoming apple tree on the outskirts of this city, but also to establish the identity of the victim whose body was charred beyond recognition.

Searched fragments of a flowered costume house-dress, a milk bottle reeking with the odor of kerosene, a pair of suede skin slippers and dental bridgework in the girl's mouth—these constituted the articulated patchwork of slender clues out of which police hope to bring to justice the perpetrator of the third outrage in a year in which a human body has been made a funeral pyre.

Kept News Secret
The body was found late Saturday by Joseph Seely, a steam fitter's helper, and the horror of his discovery sealed Seely's lips for six hours, police not learning of the gruesome find until late Saturday night.

A squad of detectives was hurriedly despatched to the scene and Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire immediately performed an autopsy of the pitifully scorched body. The examination disclosed that the girl had been strangled, perhaps by her nightgown, before her slayer had transformed her body into a flaming human torch.

About 21 Years Old
Dr. Squire, who has conducted hundreds of autopsies in Westchester county, was horrified at the condition of the girl's body. The victim, he said, was about 21 years old, 110 pounds in weight and about 5 feet 4 inches tall. She had reddish brown hair, blue eyes, small ears and a slightly turned-up nose.

Two and a half miles from the murder scene, a sleuthing reporter found a bundle of girl's clothing, wrapped in a New York newspaper dated April 14. The bundle contained just necessary traveling requisites, and police are working on the angle that the slayer lured the girl from her home by a promise of marriage and murdered her.

Name on Bag
Additional clothing was found in a blue Manila paper bag on which was scrawled, in pencil, the notation: "Miss Draycott—Paid."

A pair of snakeskin slippers found in the bundle fit the victim's feet perfectly, and it is on these slippers and the dental work in the girl's mouth that hope for her identification centers. Serial numbers on the girl's shoes are being traced with the manufacturer

MOVIE MEN KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS

Had Been Planning Just Such an End to a Movie Thriller.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 29.—Three men prominent in the film colony were dead today, sent hurtling to their doom by an ironical fate that stole a stunt from a film thriller they were to produce. In exactly the manner that was to furnish the dramatic high spot for their production, the three streaked to earth in an airplane.

The dead: William Oviatt, 22, wealthy owner of the plane and son of William H. Oviatt, manager for Morris Gest, theatrical producer; Ray N. Scott, 25, actor and nephew of Charlie Murray, screen comedian, and Mack A. Fluker, 25, film character actor.

Japanese farm hands, hearing the engine's drone, looked aloft and saw the plane plunging crazily. Under full power and at height of about 400 feet, the plane suddenly dived, struck ground and burst into flames.

Horribly Burned
Burned beyond recognition, the bodies were unidentified for many hours. Before taking off for "a little spin," the three had sat in the Hollywood apartment of wealthy Sayre Deering discussing details of a production he was to finance which, by a weird coincidence, was a feature the death of three men in a wild airplane crash. Deering had arranged to finance the film. Scott had written the scenario. Fluker was to have had an important role. And Oviatt's plane was to have been used.

NO ONE NATION CONTROLS SEAS, SAYS COOLIDGE

Time Now Passed for Naval Supremacy, Writes Ex- President in Ladies Home Journal.

Philadelphia, April 29.—The prophecy that "men will not long recognize the sword as the major source of authority," is made by former President Calvin Coolidge in the second of three articles appearing in the May issue of Ladies Home Journal.

"The time has come when any one nation is likely to be able to control the sea," writes Mr. Coolidge in the article which deals with the promotion of peace through limitation of armaments. "To set up this claim would be only a fiction and to pursue it would be only a delusion."

The question of parity, that salient point in many of the disarmament conferences, is placed in a like category by the former executive.

"So much depends on the men behind the guns and the courage and skill with which they are commanded that a seeming paper parity will never be decisive in any armed conflict," Mr. Coolidge says. He points out that our commerce and commitments abroad are so large that they need a navy for their protection "without much reference to the size of the navies of other countries." The same rule, he holds, applies to others.

Another Delusion
The hope of gaining absolute security through security will be termed "another delusion" by Mr. Coolidge.

"No nation," he writes, "ever could say that its army and navy make it perfectly secure. There are too many other peoples with armies and navies. Most security will be found in a moderate force which menaces nobody but in a great force which menaces everybody."

Although Mr. Coolidge admits that "so long as there is evil in the world arms and navies will be required for domestic and international police service," he stresses the contention that "peace will never be made permanent by fear alone. It must have a main foundation of justice and good will strong enough to satisfy the reason and conscience of humanity."

A Political Problem
"The problem," (armament limitation) has its technical aspects on which expert advice is necessary, but in its essence it is a political problem," Mr. Coolidge writes.

"The movement for its further progress must come from the home and the taxpayer. The business interests of the various nations who do not wish to see their family circle broken, must all cooperate in this ideal."

ATTORNEYS FOR RICE
ISSUE A STATEMENT

Say Deputy Sheriff Was Two Miles Away When the Murder Was Committed.

Willimantic, April 29.—William A. King, former attorney-general of the state, today issued a statement on behalf of attorneys for Treavor A. Rice, who on Friday was released from the county jail at Brooklyn after being held there under indictment for the murder of William E. Jackson, county detective. The statement refers to "the remarkable statement issued by the state's attorney" "when he asked Rice's case be nolle, says that the defense could prove absolutely that Rice was not at the Jackson home the afternoon Jackson was killed but was in his own home two miles away until sent for after the killing, and ends by the declaration that "testimony given the coroner should eliminate any lingering doubt from the mind of the state's attorney."

The statement asks why the state refused to give up letters written by Mrs. Jackson when she killed herself after her husband's murder, "until they were dragged out by order of the court," and quotes testimony taken by the coroner in which Mrs. Jackson declared Rice did not kill Jackson because "there was no motive."

Proposed Addition to Center Church

PROPOSED BUILDING—CENTER CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
FRONT ELEVATION
This sketch of the proposed addition to the Center Congregational church was drawn from the architect's sketches for presentation to the church membership yesterday. The plans for the addition were drawn by Hutchinson and French of Boston, Mass.

CENTER CHURCH SCHOOL SKETCHES ARE DISPLAYED

Congregation Learns of Proposed of Committee in Service Yesterday—Will Seek $200,000 in Drive.

Sketches of the proposed addition to the Center Congregational church and a complete description of the building which will probably arise to the west and rear of the present edifice, late this summer were shown members of the congregation at the church service yesterday morning. R. LaMotte Russell, chairman of the general building committee, explained the plans and also outlined the campaign for $200,000 which will be conducted in town May 12 through 18.

The proposed addition will be two stories in height running west from the rear of the present church and a one story wing with basement running north. The addition will be of brick and of a style of architecture very similar to the present church building which is of wood construction. The entire plans are based on the assumption that the present edifice will be remodelled at some future time.

Four Departments.
The addition will provide for a modern church school building to be erected on a new site and a new church proper to be constructed later, following exactly the lines of the present building. The addition is planned so that the space it affords can be adapted to the various needs of a church seeking to make itself more useful to present day community life. It provides educational facilities for 550 pupils in four departments giving to each department an assembly room. It is capable of handling 250 more pupils if necessary.

On the first floor provision is made for a Beginners' department. This will accommodate 125 children between the ages of three and six years. There will be a large, attractive room equipped with a kitchenette and to be furnished with a table and chairs. There will also be a General Purpose room on this floor to be used either as a reception, committee or class room. The first floor plans call, too, for a pastor's study, a room for the executive officers of the church school and a rest room for women.

Department Rooms
The second floor has been planned primarily for the uses of the church school. There is a department for 150 Primary children between the ages of six and nine years. Two class rooms will be attached. There is a department of 175 juniors between the ages of nine and 12 years. Three class rooms are attached to this department. One hundred intermediate pupils, those between the ages of 13 and 16 years will be accommodated in the intermediate department which has three class rooms, a choir room, a kitchenette and toilet will also be on this floor and it is planned that these department rooms can be used for social purposes and for meetings of organizations.

One of the most attractive features of the entire proposed addition will be the Assembly hall wing. This section will be one story in height and will extend north from the main lobby of the church school addition. The auditorium which this wing provides contains 3,240 square feet and is intended for a combined parish hall and dining room. At the north end is a

WALK INTO STORE, STEAL THREE SUITS

Two Hartford Men Pull Day- light Robbery at Jacob Lauer's Today.

Five Hartford persons were arrested late this afternoon as they were fleeing in an automobile toward Hartford after committing a broad daylight robbery at the clothing store of Jacob Lauer on Main street. Detained at police headquarters at East Hartford are Charles Crogriz of 21 Frederick street, driver of the automobile, Richard Adams of 69 Buckingham street, Norman Sterling of 79 Buckingham street and Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, 15 Frederick street, all of Hartford.

Two of the men entered the store ostensibly to purchase some wearing apparel. One looked at some shirts and the other at some suits. While the proprietor was waiting on one, the other made off with three suits which were taken to the automobile which had been parked on Cottage street. After waiting on one of the men who went out, Lauer turned to accommodate the other but discovered that he had gone out. It was a few minutes later that he discovered the missing suits.

Follow Case.
Robert E. Carney, reporter for the Manchester Evening Herald, who happened to be passing the store shortly after the robbery, telephoned to police headquarters here and a few moments later took after the fleeing thieves in a car driven by R. H. Cone, salesman, who was stopped at the garage on Maple street. Samuel J. Proutie of Manchester Green is also reported to have seen the two men returning to the car with the clothing.

The chase extended down the Silver Lane road toward Hartford where the pursuers were fortunate enough to meet Motorcycle Policeman Alfred Kneet of the East Hartford police department. The latter was quickly informed of what had happened.

THREE KILLED, FORTY HURT IN "L" WRECK

Cars Take Fire After Crash In the Bronx, New York; Wreck Blocks All Traffic for Hours.

New York, April 29.—Three persons were killed and forty or more injured when two elevated trains crashed in the Bronx today.

Two cars were telescoped, the wooden cars, flared up in flames. Many passengers were trapped beneath wreckage and a number of firemen were reported hurt in rescue work. The rear train, a south-bound Ninth avenue "L" is said to have sped by a danger signal and rammed into a south-bound Lexington avenue.

Four ambulances and the fire and police department rescue squads were rushed to the scene immediately. After they arrived they sent in a frantic call for acceptance torches, indicating that some of the victims were pinned beneath the wreckage.

Cars Catch Fire.
The telescoped cars were the first two in the elevated train it was reported. These cars burst into flames after the collision which sent wreckage flying in every direction. All cars remained on the tracks. Otherwise the toll would have been staggering, for the tracks are elevated at this point.

Half an hour after rescuers got to the scene the bodies of two dead were carried from the wreckage. One was said to be that of a woman.

Four other victims were carried out a few minutes later. They were horribly burned but were alive. At 9 o'clock a hurry call was sent in for a fire department ambulance, indicating that firemen had been injured or overcome.

First Aid Station.
First aid stations were set up on the station platform and here the injured were treated before being rushed away to hospitals.

Screams of victims trapped in the piles of shattered timbers added to the real horror of the scene.

Police reserves were called out to keep the crowds from climbing to the station platform.

All south-bound traffic was at a standstill.

The Interborough Rapid Transit company issued a brief statement telling of the crash and admitting that the motorcar on the Ninth avenue "L" had run by a stop signal. It was believed he intended to halt his train just behind the subway local, but either lost control, misjudged his distance or was unable to make his air brakes respond.

THIS SAILOR WED IN MANY PLACES

Besides Four Wives Here He Had Others in Foreign Ports.

Lynn, Mass., April 29.—Pleading not guilty to a charge of polygamy, Charles Winfield Chick, 39, able seaman aboard the U. S. S. Accomac during the World War and now an everyday mechanic, was arraigned before Ralph W. Reeves in District Court today and was held in $2,500 bail for a hearing May 7th, the date he married Wife No. 4 at Youngstown, Ohio, following a courtship which police alleged consisted chiefly of reading Biblical and other quotations to the effect that "if a man and a woman cannot agree farthest corner of the earth and find another woman, and she shall likewise do the same."

On Wedding Cards
The quotation was inscribed on the invitation to the wedding at Youngstown, O., between Chick and Miss Ethel Lishon, of that city, the complainant against her husband. The quotation, according to police, was also inscribed on a license issued by a justice of peace. The invitation was elaborately printed as for a society event, bearing besides the names of the wedding couple and guests, a half-tone photograph of Rev. Levi G. Bateman, of Youngstown, who performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Ethel Chick said her suspicions were aroused a few weeks ago when she discovered letters indicating that besides the four wives on record Chick had wives in Panama, Fla., the Panama Canal Zone, Cuba and France.

NOTED DOG DEAD

Pompton Lakes, N. J., April 29.—Sonnybank Thane, Albert Payson Terhune's champion collie, termed the greatest of his breed in America, is dead today at the author's home here. The dog was the hero of a number of Terhune's famous stories.

BEST PEOPLE FAVOR NOBLE EXPERIMENT, DECLARES OFFICIAL

DRY AGENTS GET A REAL HOT TIP

Watch All Night for "Truck- load of White Mule" Turned Out O. K.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 29.—Two prohibition officers were in temporary retirement here today to evade jibes of their acquaintances.

The agents received a "hot" tip that a "truckload of white mules" would be brought into Los Angeles through a lonely pass from the desert. Armed with plenty of guns and ammunition the men stood guard in the freezing cold of the mountains all night and were rewarded at last when at daybreak they saw a lumbering motor truck climbing up the pass. With a surprise attack they stopped the driver and demanded the white mule.

The truck pilot "reached for the sky" and invited the dry officers to help themselves. In officers he found just what their tip said—three light-colored mules, soberly munching oats from nosebags.

"Sane thinkers in the United States stand with the President in the belief that prohibition is a 'noble experiment.' We do not say that we have solved the liquor problem. We do not insist that the best method, but we do insist that we are honestly trying to find the right solution. Nobody, except the fanatical Dry and the fanatical Wet, would dare to assert that, for Canada, the solution you have found may not be better than the attempt we are making."

Radio Allocation.
Castle took up the radio allocation dissatisfaction of Canada together with her tariff problem with the United States, and waterways.

"The problem of the farmer of our middle west is vital. His need for relief demands instant attention. Congress has sought for years a solution which will really help and yet will not be economically unsound. Again the United States faces an act of God, of a theory. If an increase of tariff will help, is it strange that Congress turns to such an increase? Few people stop to think of the reasons why the American farmer has heard of an act of God. Of course that farmers the world over are individualists and that, unlike industrialists, they do not get together in great selling and distributing organizations."

Castle favored the development of the St. Lawrence waterways project, a joint Canadian-American affair, rather than an all-American route through New York.

Mr. Alfred Michaelson, Dry Republican Representative from Illinois, was the latest national figure to fall under the liquor smuggling law. Before the drastic Jones-Stalker Act was passed, Michaelson was indicted in Jacksonville, Fla., on a charge of smuggling whiskey into the country. The indictment was not revealed until charges were heralded from New York that Rep. Wm. M. Morgan a Dry of Ohio, had brought in four bottles of liquor from the recent Congressional junket to Panama. The charges were denied by Morgan and were dropped.

The indictment still remains against Michaelson as he is due to appear for trial in Key West, Fla., next Monday. It is believed he will not be prosecuted until charges were dropped.

FATE OF MELLON IS UP TO SENATE

Charge Made That He Is Illegally Holding Post in Cabinet.

Washington, April 29.—The multimillionaire Andrew W. Mellon may learn today whether the powerful Senate judiciary committee, composed of the Senate's most brilliant lawyers, believes him guilty of illegally holding the office of secretary of the treasury.

This legal question, based upon Mellon's possession of a fortune in securities, has agitated the Senate ever since the late President Harding named the Pennsylvania banker to the post. Now it threatens to provoke a major political war in the Senate and a lot of embarrassment for the Hoover administration.

Put Up to Hoover
The issue already has been thrown on the personal doorstep of President Hoover as Senator George W. Norris (R) of Neb., in a tentative report to the committee, held the chief executive for keeping Mellon in the Cabinet. Any one who pleaded so eloquently for law enforcement as did the President, said Norris in effect, should be the first to set his own house in order. To keep Mellon in the Cabinet, Norris added, is to nullify the law.

A minority of the committee, led by Norris and Senator Thomas J. Walsh (D) of Montana, undoubtedly will declare Mellon holding office illegally. This will carry the question back to the floor of the Senate, forcing a direct vote on it. Thus the Mellon opposition will get the vote it was denied when Mr. Hoover avoided the issue by retaining Mellon in his Cabinet without a reappointment.

What Law Says
The law under which the issue is being fought is the Espionage Act of 1917. It provides that any person who is appointed to a position in the executive branch of the government and who is not a citizen of the United States is ineligible for such position.

The time's half gone now. We know you're anxious to know what it's all about, but the secret will be out in due time.

VARIETY OF CASES IN COURT TODAY

Eight of Them Range from Assault to Drunk Driving, All Are Found Guilty.

Eight cases were before Judge Raymond A. Johnson in Manchester town court this morning and a conviction was made in each case. Charges ranged from assault and driving with impaired faculties to drunk driving. Fines totalling $350 and costs were dealt out in addition to a twenty day jail sentence.

The names, charges and fines of those in court follow: Andrew Esadie, 20, of 205 Almond Lane, Wilkes Barre, Pa., drunk driving, $125 and costs, took an appeal; Henry Lester of 183 Hackmatack street, drunk driving, $100 and costs, took an appeal; Joseph McMaster, 37, of Glastonbury, evading responsibility, $50 and costs; William J. Valentine, 16, 32 St. John street, operating motor vehicle without proper brakes, $15 and costs; Frank Varrick, 59, of the north end, intoxication and breach of the peace, twenty days in jail; Joseph Carlson, John L. McCarthy and Frank Novak, all of Manchester, intoxication, $20 each.

Tears Up Fence. Esadie was arrested on Union street at the north end on Saturday night by Patrolman Albert Roberts who claimed that Esadie stepped on the gas and attempted to get away when commanded to stop. He was driving an automobile on Union street when he crashed into the fence along the side of the road, tore down 100 feet of fence and turned upside down. Tony Krieski, who was with him at the time of the accident was uninjured. The car was hanging over the bank of the Hockanigum river just south of the Union Pond dam when the turning over and the car stopped it from slipping into the river a good thirty feet down. Two empty wine bottles were found in the car. Both Dr. C. Y. Moore, who examined Esadie shortly after his arrest, and Captain Hieronim C. Schendel, testified that the man was drunk. Esadie said that he had not been drinking and that he had been visiting his mother in East Windsor Hill and later had attended a dance on North street. Judge Johnson suspended on a charge of reckless driving which was also lodged against Eradie, but he was found guilty of driving while drunk.

Lester was arrested on complaint of John F. Germa of 8 Grove street, Hartford, who testified that Lester was the driver of an automobile which struck his car and that he had been drinking. Attorney William S. Hyde defended Lester who was intoxicated at the time of the accident. Lester was arrested 35 minutes after the alleged accident according to the testimony of Dr. Moore and Captain Schendel. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hewitt of 109 Prospect street were in the car with Lester at the time. Both denied it was their car. Lester denied it was his car. He said that the car had figured in an accident. Incidentally, Dr. Moore said that Hewitt was also under the influence of liquor.

Lester said that he did not have a drink until he reached the Hewitt house after the alleged accident. He said he was just recovering from a bad case of the grip and was quite shaky. The court, however, was inclined to take more stock in the state's testimony and found Lester guilty. An appeal was taken and a bond of $200 was fixed.

Evades Responsibility. The most interesting case of the day was that of McMaster who was charged with evading responsibility after an automobile accident. It developed in court that McMaster's car struck a machine owned by Charles Macroft in front of Teacher's Hall last night. After the accident McMaster was taken to the police station and twenty minutes later called Police Headquarters to inform them that his car had been stolen from in front of the Hotel Sheridan.

McMaster was taken to the police station and examined concerning the accident. He claimed that it had been stolen and he did not know about the accident. A couple of other men who were with him when he drove up to the hotel and the same story was told. It was the driver of the car at the time of the accident was not learned by the police. The accident took place shortly after 10 o'clock, but the investigation continued until after midnight and no arrests were made, but this morning new evidence was unearthed.

Everything might have turned out alright but for the fact that McMaster was notified in the act of leaving the car after the accident by Joseph Sullivan, Eric Rudas and Irene Patterson. Sergeant John Crockett made the police investigation of the accident. McMaster's story that he had not been driving since three o'clock in the afternoon held it against him in convicting the Glastonbury man.

Varrick was arrested at 6:30 last night on Nelson place after he had engaged in a row with Fred Thompson, colored, along the north end. He was found guilty of intoxication and breach of the peace and given ten days on each count. Novak, McCarthy and Carlson were arrested at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by Patrolman David Galligan on McKee street. Two jugs were found in the car. All three pleaded guilty.

11TH HOUR TAXPAYERS HASTEN TO SETTLE UP

Only Two Days After Today Before Penalty Charges Run; Dog Owners Late Too.

There are only left this afternoon, tomorrow and Wednesday, in which to pay personal taxes without the additional charge of $1 being made and bringing the personal tax item to $3. The same holds true as to property tax, before added interest charge starts.

There was a long line waiting early this morning at the town tax collector's office. In addition to Collector Howe and his daughter, Neil Cheney, the assessor's clerk, assisted in the work. With three windows open the crowd was handled rapidly, but the taxpayers continued to come in in regular order all during the morning and it is expected that this will continue today and tomorrow.

There was also a busy time in the town clerk's office this morning. About all the callers at the office were looking for either fishing or dog licenses. The dogs seem to be overlooked this year, which is not an unusual custom.

Up to noon today there were only 601 dogs licensed, whereas last year there were 1,243, which indicates an eleventh hour rush. Wednesday, May 1, is the last day on which the licenses can be taken out without an extra charge being made.

FATE OF MELLON IS UP TO SENATE

is raised, prohibits any secretary of the treasury from being "concerned or interested in the business of trade and commerce."

The Mellon opposition contend that his ownership of millions of dollars worth of securities in corporations holdings which forced him to pay more than $1,000,000 income tax in a single year—required, compelled and constituted his being "concerned and interested" in the business of these corporations.

The Hoover administration naturally hasn't endorsed this conclusion. The President has been told that Mellon gave an all management and direction of these corporations upon entering the Cabinet eight years ago. The mere ownership of stock and bonds, Mellon's friends argued, would not constitute an "interest in business."

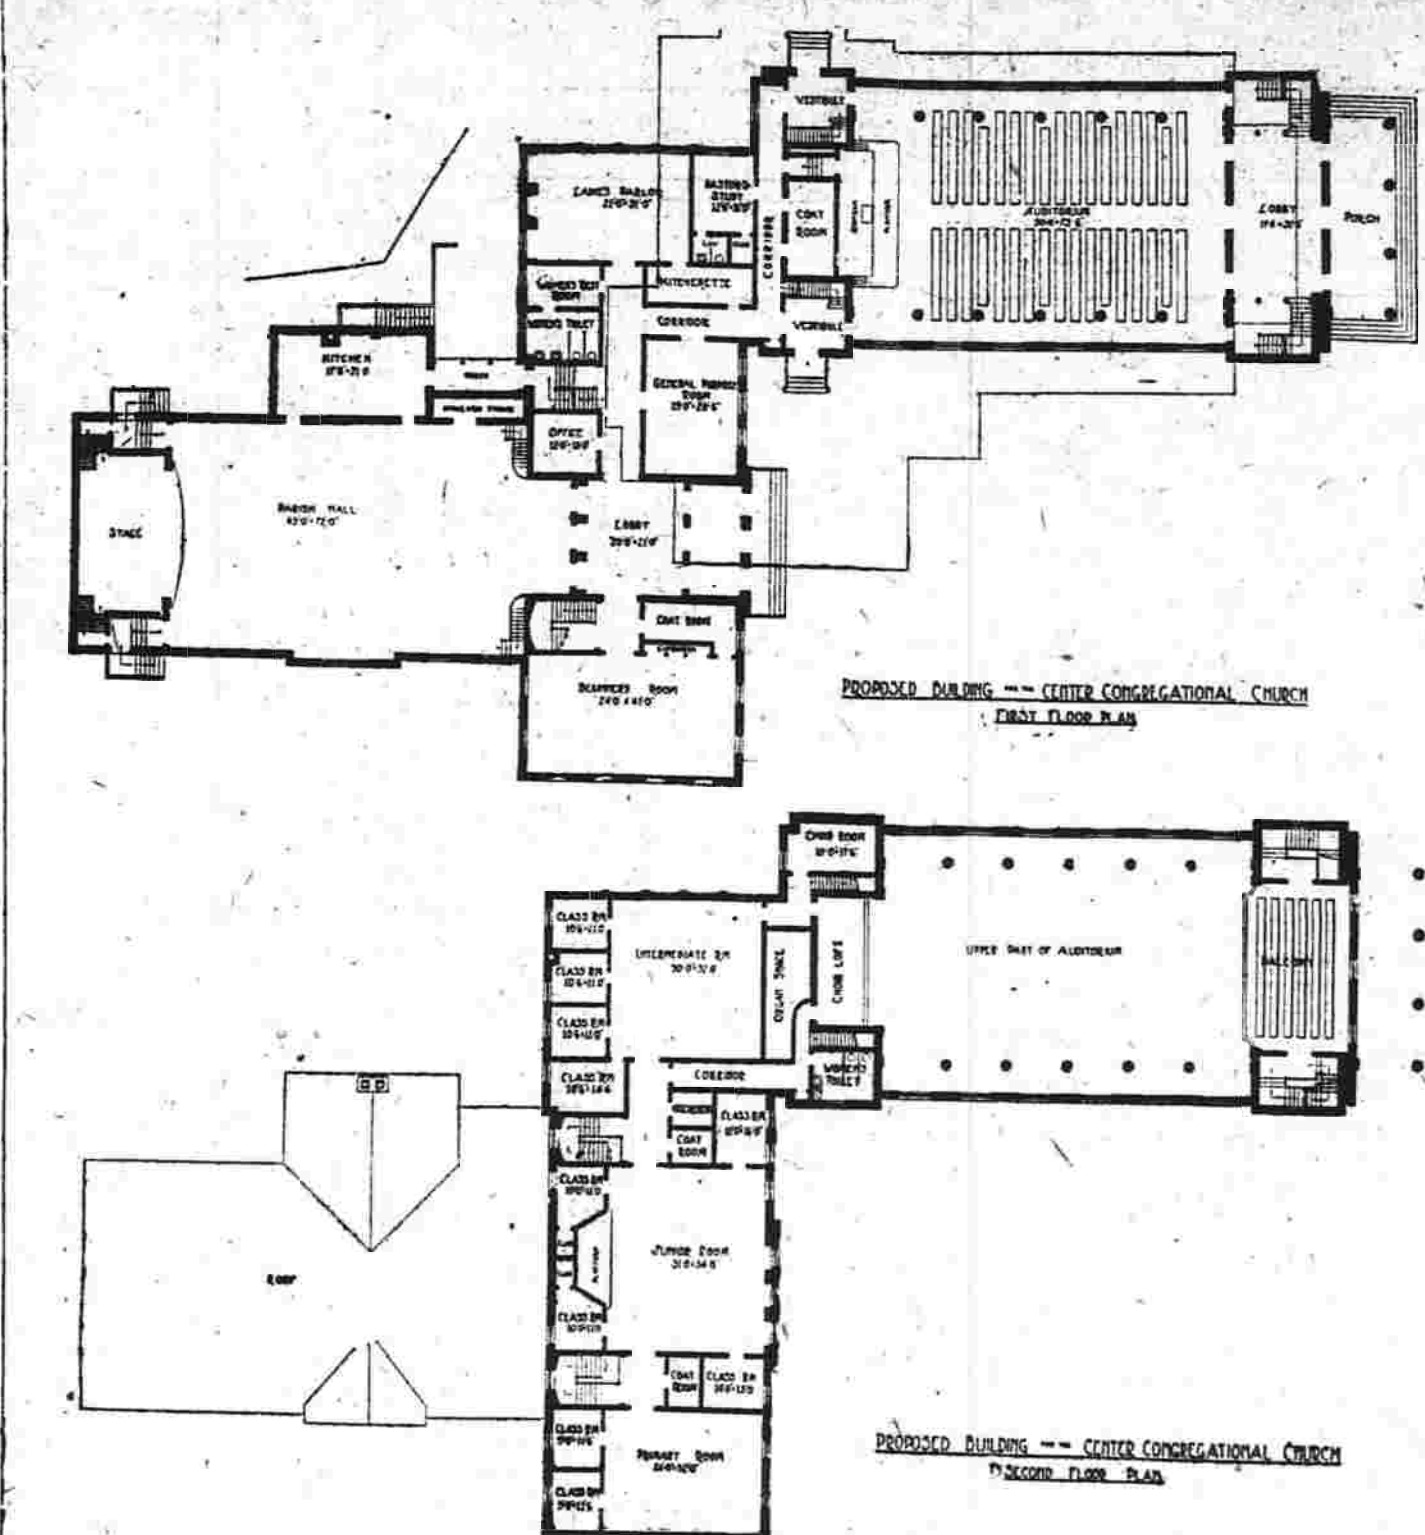

Should Sell Stocks. The Norris report, which a majority of the committee may reject, however declared Mellon, if he wished to come within the law, should "in good faith dispose of his stock." Norris pointed out that Mellon had sold all bank securities but had retained all corporation (business) securities.

The judiciary committee has met three times on this issue, without reaching a decision. The extent of debate has indicated plainly, the seriousness of the legal issue involved. Regardless of the committee's decision, the final word will be said by the Senate itself.

If Mellon wins a verdict in the Senate he can continue in office without further controversy. If the Senate finds him guilty of holding office illegally, his removal would be question of hours. Indeed, he might even be prosecuted under the law pertaining to the office of secretary of treasury, and if convicted, be fined $3,000, automatically removed from office and barred from ever holding any other federal office.

WALK INTO STORE, STEAL THREE SUITS. (Continued from Page 1) happened and took after the fleeing automobile which by this time had managed to obtain a big lead. However, the car was overtaken and all five persons taken to East Hartford police headquarters. The three suits were found in the automobile. Crogriz, the driver of the car, maintained that he had been hired to drive the two men to Manchester and was unaware of any theft. He said that Mr. and Mrs. Murphy were friends he picked up to go for a ride. They all stoutly maintained that they did not know they were being pursued.

Floor Plans of Church Addition

Plans are displayed for the Center Church School, showing the layout of the new building addition.

CENTER CHURCH SCHOOL PLANS ARE DISPLAYED

(Continued from Page 1) deep stage with ante-rooms. On the east provision is made for a large kitchen. It is planned to carry the parish hall on heavy steel girders and have a gymnasium or play room in the basement below the hall. This gymnasium plan does not show on the plans printed here, nor do the more comfort rooms, all of which will be in the basement area.

These plans are the result of over two years of study by the members of the general building committee. They embody the experiences and ideals of leaders in religious education all over New England and are designed to provide excellent facilities for the spiritual, educational, social and recreational activities of the church. The addition is not contemplated to provide only for the present, but it will provide amply for many years into the future. The work of the church school is growing. Church attendance is increasing and the work of the school is growing in even greater proportion.

The Hoover administration naturally hasn't endorsed this conclusion. The President has been told that Mellon gave an all management and direction of these corporations upon entering the Cabinet eight years ago. The mere ownership of stock and bonds, Mellon's friends argued, would not constitute an "interest in business."

It is planned to conduct a campaign here for $200,000 during the week of May 12. Fifty canvassers will be assigned to districts to solicit pledges and the finance committee is confident that the necessary money will be raised through pledges. It is hoped to break ground for the new building this summer.

The general committee in charge of building and finances is as follows: R. LaMotte Russell, chairman; Gilbert E. Willis, Leonard Church, Mrs. Emma Nettleton, E. L. C. Hohenthal, Jr., C. E. House, Rev. Watson Woodruff, Frank Cheney, Jr. and also the finance committee William L. Parks, chairman; James Irvine, Charles W. Holman, Lucius Foster, and Herbert House, treasurer.

FIVE KILLED IN CRASH

Elkhart, Ind., April 29 — Five persons are dead today, a sixth probably will not survive and ten others are nursing injuries as a result of a collision between their automobile and a Chicago-Detroit motor bus near here.

Dead: Mrs. Ural Mable, 41; Miss Vaughn Mable, 19; Charles Mable, Rev. Watson Woodruff, and Daniel P. 17; Ruth Mable, 14; and Daniel P. 20; all of Elkhart. Ruby, Ruth's twin sister, is in a grave condition.

The Mables were on their way in Papa's car to Burr Oak, Mich. Ten of the 18 bus passengers were cut by broken glass and bruised.

BURNED TO DEATH. Buffalo, N. Y., April 29 — Jack Quinlan, 38, an itinerant worker of 736 Main street, Waterbury, Conn., was dead here today, having succumbed to burns received when a pile of hay on which he had been sleeping in an abandoned building caught fire.

Quinlan had come here to get work on a lake vessel and sought refuge in the abandoned building when his money gave out.

ARTHUR A. KNOFLA TO HEAD KIWANIS

Elected President to Succeed Frank H. Anderson, Resigned.

Arthur A. Knofla became president of the Manchester Kiwanis club at the meeting held today at the Manchester Community clubhouse. Mr. Knofla has been vice-president and succeeds Frank H. Anderson, who was elected president last December. Mr. Anderson was forced to resign because his new duties call him to New York City the first four days of each week. Stephen Hale, superintendent of Cheney Brothers engineering department, was elected first vice-president to succeed Mr. Knofla.

Mr. Knofla told the meeting that he accepted the presidency somewhat reluctantly. He assured the members he would do everything possible to carry on and solicited the co-operation and good will of every member. He admitted he had a big job ahead of him but felt confident he would succeed if he had the co-operation asked for.

Following a fine luncheon served under the direction of Miss Christine Mason and ladies assisting her, Dr. Harold Stieger of Cheney Brothers department of industrial research gave a very instructive talk on "Man and the Universe." It was as admitted a deep subject but he made it so interesting he was able to hold the close attention of every member for the full 30 minutes allotted to him.

Following the luncheon, the members of the Kiwanis club were entertained by the Ladies' Guild of St. James' church. The entertainment was given by the Ladies' Guild of St. James' church.

ABOUT TOWN. John J. Kelley of No. 31 Highland street, East Hartford, figured in an automobile accident, Saturday night, at the sharp curve where Keeney street meets Wetherell street, when the car skidded and struck a tree. There was no arrest made.

T. J. Mildren, formerly connected with the Luke Horsfall Co., in Hartford and now associated with Hultman's one of Manchester's leading men's stores, has been appointed a member of the Advisory Committee on Men's Styles of the National Shoe Retailers' Association. This is an exceptional honor as the members of this committee are selected from the members at large throughout the country. The headquarters of the association is in Chicago.

The Ladies' Guild of St. James' church will give a whist, bridge and set back party Wednesday evening in St. James' hall. Mrs. John McVey is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

A surprise birthday party was given Margaret Flavell, six years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Flavell, at her home Saturday afternoon. Eighteen of Margaret's friends were present. Games were played and refreshments served. Gertrude Gardner favored with an exhibition of toe dancing. Margaret was given several beautiful presents.

WAPPING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Dewey motored to Florence, Mass., last Saturday where they spent the day with their son and his family, Charles W. Dewey.

Mr. and Mrs. George Willson and little son, Frank Congdon Willson, were guests over the week-end at the home of Mr. Willson's father, at Armenia, New York.

The Federated Workers will give a supper and entertainment at the hall on Friday, May 10. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frink and son of Vernon were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Asher A. Collins, last Sunday.

The Federated Workers held an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Homer Lane last Friday afternoon. After the business meeting, the second program in a series of programs of the lives of American poets was given. The life of Henry W. Longfellow was the subject of the afternoon's program. Mrs. Edward P. Collins gave a brief sketch of his life, Mrs. Edgar J. Stoughton described his home, and Mrs. Me. which she visited some time ago. Mrs. Robert Valentine told about the past and present history of the Wayside Inn in Sudbury, Mass. Mrs. Walter J. Foster read a synopsis of Evangeline, and Mrs. Asher Collins gave the "Real story of Evangeline." Mrs. Harry Miner recited the "Psalm of Life." Mrs. Harry Chandler sang "The Bridge," and Mrs. Florence W. Johnson gave a piano solo, "Hilwatha's March." Quotations from his poems were given by every member present. The program closed with unison singing by "Excelsior." Mrs. C. Walter Smith was assistant hostess.

CALL FIRE DEPT. TO RESCUE PUSSY

Cat Perched on High Tree for Three Days is Brought to Ground.

Firemen, like policemen, run across some unusual happenings during the course of their duty. That's what makes the work fascinating, they say.

Early this afternoon, the south end fire department was called upon for assistance in rescuing a frightened cat from the lofty limbs of a giant maple in front of the High school building.

How long Pussay had been up in the tree, no one knows. Suffice it to say that the cat had been missing from its home at Garrone Brothers' meat market across the road for three days.

Shortly before noon, the driver of Garrone's delivery truck was attracted by the meows of a cat. For some time he was unable to trace the source of the sound but finally located it as coming from a little huddled bunch of hair perched precariously on a tiny limb nearly 50 feet in the air.

Baffled as to how the cat could be rescued because of the fact that lack of love lumps made climbing impossible, some one suggested that the fire department be called.

Chief Albert C. Foy, Drivers James Schaub and William Taylor and Fireman Paul Clune went to the rescue with a ladder truck.

Clune volunteered to make the rescue. A fifty foot extension ladder was placed against the tree. Clune went up but it was with difficulty that he managed to reach the frightened feline which by this time became panicky. When he finally succeeded, he was rewarded with scratches from Pussay's sharp claws.

Once the cat got out of Clune's grasp and started back up the tree, but finally it was brought to the ground. Once safe there, the cat was given no time to scamper away. It was two hours later before it had recovered from the fright sufficiently to return home. And judging from the way it ate, it may have been a prisoner in the trees for three days. It acted as if it was nearly starved.

That women can be heartless was attested during the course of the rescue. One woman exclaimed, "Why, he's foolish to risk his life for a measly cat" and another said, "I'd drop it if it scratched me that way."

Chief Foy said he would ask the Fire Commissioners to give Clune a pair of asbestos gloves.

RACING WITH DEATH

Curtis Field, N. Y., April 29 — Two sisters, Mrs. F. W. Casper and Miss Stella McCord, took off from here early today in a plane for Des Moines, Iowa, in a desperate race against death to the bedside of their father, a prominent resident of Newton, Iowa.

The two women, who were returning from Europe, were taken off the White Star liner Baltic at Quarantine and rushed to Curtis Field in an amphibian plane. Then they hurriedly boarded the ship that is to take them to Des Moines. The sisters were notified by radio that their father was dying and arrangements were made by F. L. Maytag, a friend, to have them taken from the Baltic and rushed to the flying field. They expect to arrive in Des Moines late today.

STUDENT GROUPS IN BUSY SUNDAY

Visit Monastery, Zoological Gardens and Congressional Library on Trip.

(Special to The Herald.) Washington, D. C., April 29.—Sunday morning the Manchester High school tourists had what will probably be their longest sleep of the week. They were called at 7 o'clock and, were ready for breakfast at 7:30. Everybody was in fine humor and no one showed any effects of the long train ride of Saturday. Five busses were in readiness as soon as we had finished breakfast, and the party boarded the busses by groups. Groups 1 and 2 in the first bus, etc.

We first went directly to the Mount Saint Sepulchre Monasteries. These grounds overlooking the city of Washington are developed and kept by a group of Brothers of the Order of the Holy Land. Through the kindness of Father Reidy of Saint James' church, we had special courtesies in the beautiful chapel and grounds and were given smartly dressed guides, spotless white uniforms with the red crosses of their order on the cape. An interesting part of the visit was the trip through the underground passage, a replica of the catacombs of Rome.

See Birds and Beasts. From here we went to the Rock Creek Park Zoological grounds, and for an hour, the whole party was "let loose" among the hundreds of cages and inclosures where animals, birds and fishes, and all sorts of living freaks were on exhibition. We finally assembled at the Lion Houses, after Louie Cheney and Bob Treat had run out of peanuts. Ed Markley and Wes Warnock spent most of their time watching the otter, which is said to be the most perfect swimming and diving animal in the world. From the Zoo we came back to the hotel for lunch and a brief rest.

Early in the afternoon, we started to walk through the National Museum Group. We were particularly interested in the new National Museum with its collection of animals and glass cases of figures representing Indian life. The boys spent a lot of time in the old Museum making some of the models work. Electric switches on the wall could be pressed to cause such models as salt mine, famous type of gasoline engine, a coal mine and others to go through an interesting mechanical operation. The girls were a long time at the exhibit of dresses worn by various president's wives while everybody admired the wonderful models of the Leviathan and other noted steamships. We stayed in the Museum until they drove us out at 4:30.

In Congressional Library. In the evening our busses were again on hand to take us up Pennsylvania Avenue to the beautiful Congressional Library. After a respectful pause in the long line that waited to view the original copies of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, we separated into the various rooms and spent two hours admiring the colored marble, the stained glass windows, the works of art, and the one thousand and one things which make this one of the greatest libraries of the world. Busses brought us back to the hotel and chaperones were soon busy counting noses.

HOWITZER COMPANY SEEKS NEW RECRUITS

Wants to Raise Number of Enlistments Before Annual Encampment at Niantic.

Captain Russell B. Hathaway of the Howitzer Company today announced the launching of a campaign for additional members of the organization needed before the annual summer encampment. The present strength of the company is 60 men and three officers. Several enlistments will expire before camp time and a few of the members of the company are now out of town.

The Howitzer Company was marked "very satisfactory" after the last federal inspection according to a report just received. The company's mess fund is in good condition. A check was received Saturday night for the unit's share of the receipts from the Home Progress Exposition held recently in the state armory at Hartford for the benefit of the 169th Infantry of the United States Army.

The annual two week's encampment at Niantic is only a little over two months away and those who enlist will have plenty of time to become thoroughly accustomed with the military game before going to camp. The dates for the encampment have been set for July 7 to July 21 inclusive.

FIGHTING 5TH'S CLEANUP MEETING THIS EVENING

Mr. Manning to Explain the Guarantee of "No Cost" to the District's Voters.

Tonight is the night of final reckoning for the voters of the Fifth School district as they are called to special session at 7 o'clock, standard time, to dispose of many matters that have long been before the district for action, but which have been snuffed out by motions to adjourn and turn-over in officers in a factional war that has been waging for four or five years.

The Supreme Court of the state has decided that certain bills, contracted in the following order of making improvements and changes in the district property, must be paid.

MRS. DENNETT IS FINED THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS

New York, April 29.—"Grandmother" Mary Ware Dennett was fined $300 for sending her pamphlet "The Sex of Life" through the mails by Federal Judge Warren Burrows in Brooklyn today. The maximum penalty for her conviction could have been five years in the federal penitentiary and the $5000, previously Mrs. Dennett declared that in the event of only a fine by the judge she would refuse to pay it and go to jail instead.

With the faint possibility that her identity may be established in this way.

THIRD OF ITS KIND. New York, April 29.—The gruesome trilogy of torch murders, marking a new departure in the attempt of murderers to so near the bodies of their victims that identification and subsequent capture of the slayers would be almost impossible, began February 21, 1928.

On that date the blazing body of Miss Margaret Brown, governess in the home of James P. Gillespie, of New York, was found beside a highway near Bernardsville, N. J.

As was likely the case of the unidentified girl whose body was fired in Scarsdale, romance apparently led Miss Brown to her death. She had read a newspaper mentioned by several thousands of dollars in bonds—her life savings—and was reported to have kept a rendezvous with a man.

Never Caught. Her murderer was never caught although he sent many letters to police demanding the crime and floating over the inability of authorities to bring him to justice.

The other analogous case is that of Mrs. Mildred Mowry, whose flaming corpse was found beside a Cranford, N. J., road last February 23. Authorities investigating the Scarsdale murder were convinced by the fact that there seemed a little hope for Mrs. Mowry's identification as there now seems for the Scarsdale victim.

Henry C. Campbell who has confessed to bigamously marrying and murdering Mrs. Mowry is in jail in Elizabeth, N. J., awaiting trial.

MCCOMB-HUGHES

Miss Hazel May Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Eugene Hughes of 19 Russell street, and David S. McComb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McComb of 204 Eldridge street were married Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Watson Woodruff, pastor of Center Congregational church, the Episcopal type of service being used. The maid of honor was Miss Evelyn Johnston and the best man, William Johnston of Hartford, both close friends of the bride and bridegroom. The bridal march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Elsie Benson.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was gowned in white satin trimmed with duchess lace. Her lace veil fell from a wreath of seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a dress of wood rose georgette with a lace collar and lace cuffs. Her large hat to match her arm bouquet was of butterfly roses and snapdragons.

The reception which followed the ceremony was attended by the relatives of both families and a few friends. The bride and groom left on an unannounced motor trip, the bride wearing a midnight blue ensemble. On their return they will make their home at 17 Foster street.

The bride is a graduate of the Manchester High school and Emerson College of Oratory, Boston. She has been teaching expression and has directed a number of notable pageants. The bridegroom was graduated from the local High school and from Bay Path Institute, Springfield. He is at present employed in the auditing department of the Aetna Life Insurance company. Both Mr. and Mrs. McComb have been very active in the young people's work at Center church. He has been a Boy Scout leader and teacher in the Sunday school and has taken part in amateur theatricals.

TONIGHT'S MUSICAL IN UNIQUE SETTING

A unique platform setting has been arranged for the concert which the members of the South Methodist church choir will present at the church this evening for the purpose of aiding their pledge to the church building fund. The program or "salon musical" will be given in an improvised drawing room. The stage has been artistically arranged with palms, floor lamps and other items of appropriate furniture, together with the harp on which Miss Dorothy Silcox will play and the piano. The violin numbers by Mrs. Laura Whelan-Ross of Hartford and the solos and duets by members of the choir will be announced informally. The artists will carry out the program, just as if they were entertaining in a real drawing room. This is something of an innovation here and is believed with the attractive and varied program to be presented, will afford an evening of genuine enjoyment.

Rockville

Dunbar Repeats Former Charge. Wilson Dunbar, 27, of 103 High street will be in the Rockville City Court Monday morning charged with intoxication, breach of peace and assault with a dangerous weapon, resulting from a stabbing affair on Brooklyn street, Sunday morning. Jacob Novach of Brooklyn street was cut by Dunbar. Dr. John E. Flaherty was summoned and found it necessary to take four stitches to close a wound in Novach's wrist. He had also been knifed in the shoulder. Upon being questioned, Dunbar stated that he did the cutting with a knife but it is alleged that a razor was used. Dunbar recently returned from Toland jail where he served several months for a cutting affair. He has been convicted twice before on similar charges.

A COMMUNITY INTEREST

For nearly a century and a half the institution familiar to every man, woman and child in Manchester as the Center Church has been, in varying degree but always largely, a point about which the spiritual and social life of this town revolved. At the beginning, the establishment from which it evolved was the source of all authority as well as of all spiritual inspiration.

And never, from that day to this, has the Center Church failed to occupy in the minds and hearts of Manchester people, much of the place that it held in the hearts and minds of those settlers. It has been, always, far less a denominational unit than an historic embodiment of the spirit of the town, in a very lively sense as precious to non-members and persons of altogether differing creeds as to its members and to Congregationalists.

To some degree, the physical character and situation of the building undoubtedly contributes to the conscious or sub-conscious intimacy between the community and this particular church. It is a picture, a thing of beauty that appeals to the innate artistic element that is somewhere in almost every one of us—and it would be a thoughtless person indeed who did not realize that the Center Church is the very keystone of Manchester's most lovely urban aspect, the northward view from the business area of Main street.

But the structure and its fortunate site, its happy participation in the physical picture of Manchester, are merely fortunate symbols of the moral and mental and social influence that the Center Church has been from the day of its institution. It is an influence ripened and mellowed by time and experience and the growth of tolerance through the long years, no longer stern and pietistic but broad and kindly, leading not to mentorship but to fellowship.

In every worthwhile community activity the Center Church and its people are to be found, bearing a heavy share of the burden. For every worthwhile community activity the Center Church plant is always at the disposal of the workers. In a very real degree the church is a community interest. It challenges no man's belief, it erects no barriers and draws no lines. It is an expression of the highest and best meaning of democracy. It is the town's House of Friendship.

And now that the Center Church, filled with the ardor for greater service and broader fellowship and a higher usefulness in the community, is seeking the enlargement of its physical plant to make these things possible, it has the right to stand forth and say: "I have never with my sympathy, my services or my benevolence on creedal grounds; I will not reject the aid of my friends on creedal grounds. I have been for a century and a half a community church. I am a community church now. My new church house building is a community job."

It is a great undertaking that the Center Church has assumed. If none give to the fund but those in actual membership it will be perhaps an impossible one. But it is hardly to be believed that Manchester people, with their deep historic affection for the first of all their houses of worship, will permit the giving to be thus confined.

CITIES

The objection to city classification for such communities as West Haven usually arises in larger neighbor cities, like New Haven in this case, which regard the aspiring youngsters as their own offspring and destined, sooner or later, despite any current prejudices to the contrary, to become part of the "greater city."

This attitude is easy enough to understand but we doubt whether it is, on the whole, justifiable. A shining example of a city's increasing its accredited population through territory grabbing is our own great American metropolis. And who can say with any positiveness that Brooklyn is any better off for having become the Borough of Kings in the biggest city in the world, or Staten Island for becoming the Borough of Richmond instead of a nice little county made up of half a dozen independent and well governed communities?

We have never been convinced that mere population figures are an important asset to any community. Take the four larger cities of this state, New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport and Waterbury would be benefited, rather than injured, if it were possible for them to weed out about ten per cent of their populations and wait it comfortable, without harming the individuals, far away.

Nor have we ever been entirely satisfied that wholesale government is any better than retail government—after that is, you are able to produce government in what we might call case lots. The advantage of consolidating the various tag ends of Manchester into a cohesive unit for purposes of local government is sure sooner or later to make itself understood. But even though both the communities should grow enormously, it is doubtful if the time will ever arrive when there would be any advantage in consolidating, say, Manchester and East Hartford, even though combined they would make up a city bigger than any other in Connecticut.

West Haven is big enough to be a city. It is individual enough and sufficiently dissociated from New Haven to be entitled to be a city, if it wants to be. We never heard of two American cities going to war with each other just because they lie cheek by jowl. Let her have her charter.

HIGH POWER SELLING

Over in Waterbury a few days ago the Chamber of Commerce was quite busy temporarily investigating the activities of a young man who sold hams. His method was to rush to the kitchen door with a ham, sometimes two, and announce to the cook or housemaid that the mistress of the household had ordered the ham or hams to be delivered at once, collect. He was a bright young man and not only always knew the name of the housewife but always, too, knew that she was not at home. He did a thriving business. The only objection to it was that in no case had anybody ordered the hams to be delivered. There was no complaint that the hams were not perfectly good hams or that they were priced excessively high. The folks' money was paid out, but they got the goods.

However, the Chamber of Commerce quite rightly deemed itself justified in issuing a warning against bright young men who rush the cook with pretended orders for genuine hams.

Just the same, without in any way countenancing such a proceeding, we can't resist the thought that there isn't a speck of difference between the methods of this young gentleman and those of an unnumbered variety of high-powered salesmen who are constantly being held up as shining examples of virtuous industry and cleverness in house organs and inspirational magazines. As a matter of fact, the person who forces the sale of a perfectly sound and nourishing ham upon a household, at the mere cost of an exasperating but not highly injurious lie, is a better man and citizen, in our belief, than some of the birds who beguile harassed and bewildered "prospects" into buying expensive household appliances or other commodities, that they cannot afford, by bauling them with the installment plan. The ham man probably got his idea from reading the selling exploits of some one who is now the vice-president of a trust, in the American Magazine or in the "Making One's Way" department of the Saturday Evening Post.

GENUINE

At the opening of the baseball season in Washington, Mrs. Hoover ate peanuts out of a paper bag and the President remained through the entire nine innings—not at a Presidential practice in recent years. Now, another President could sit through a whole baseball game and another President's wife could eat peanuts out of a paper bag. But if they did, the chances are a hundred to one that a lot of folks would say they were posing. Absolutely not so in the case of the Hoovers. Everybody, everywhere, will recognize that Mr. Hoover stayed through the game because he wanted to see it, and that Mrs. Hoover ate peanuts out of a paper bag because she likes to eat peanuts out of a paper bag. That's one reason why Mr. Hoover is going to have an easy time of it in this administration, so far as the people are concerned.

A NOTABLE SEA BATTLE On April 29, 1814, the Peacock, one of the three frigates which Congress expected to have ready for the beginning of the War in 1812, but which were delayed in building, engaged the British brig, Epervier, off the southeast coast of Florida.

Both vessels were of the 18-gun type and nominally equal in strength. After only 45 minutes of spirited fighting, however, the British ship surrendered. A comparison of the casualties on both sides indicates how much more important strategy is than mere gunpowder in a naval engagement. From the point of view of decisiveness, the Peacock's victory was one of the outstanding naval achievements of the war.

Not an American life was lost and only two were slightly injured. The Epervier lost eight men and fifteen were wounded. Not a single heavy shot touched the hull of the Peacock, and her masts and spars were intact. The British brig suffered splintered masts and spars and 45 shots pierced her hull, admitting five feet of water into the hold.

A THOUGHT

Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labor that I had labored to do; and, behold, all was vanity, and vexation of spirit, and it was no profit under the sun.—Ecc. 2:11.

Questions and Answers Question: Mrs. B. G. asks: "Will you please tell me if butter is constipating?" Answer: Butter, being one of the fatty family, has a tendency to produce constipation. Question: W. A. T. asks: "What causes such swelling of the eyelids that, upon looking up, folds of skin hang over?" Answer: Swelling of the eyelids often accompanies such diseases as nephritis, anemia, diabetes, trichinosis, or angioneurotic edema. Of course, there may be some local condition such as uveitis, iritis, etc. You can see by this that a careful physical examination would be necessary to determine the exact cause.

A Good Daily Regime Upon arising in the morning, brush the teeth thoroughly for at least five minutes, using a good toothbrush and any good dentifrice. Next, do some vigorous calisthenic exercises for about ten minutes. Include with these calisthenics some deep-breathing exercises, and afterwards take a warm or cold shower bath.

Breakfast: One or two eggs prepared in any manner except by frying. Four or five pieces of melba toast, or two or three wholewheat or cornmeal muffins. Small dish of stewed fruit from the following list: Prunes, figs, pears, raisins, apples, apricots or berries. If wholewheat, oatmeal, or cornmeal muffins are desired, with this breakfast, it will be best to use only one egg, a small dish of mush or one or two muffins, with the addition of the stewed fruit.

Luncheon: Choice of one or more of the following vegetables: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, small squash, cucumber, egg plant, beet tops, small beets, turnip tops, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, pumpkin, lettuce, okra, choychoy, cyster plant (salad), mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, avocado (alligator pears), ripe olives. You may use any selection desired of these vegetables, using perhaps one or two uncooked and one or two cooked. If the mush or mash have not been used for breakfast, you may further add to the non-starchy meal by using baked potatoes, baked Hubbard squash, or three or four muffins made from wholewheat or cornmeal, canned corn can be used in place of these other starches, or sweet corn used in season.

Walking Indispensable Late in the afternoon a long walk should be taken each day. The distance should be gradually increased until you can walk four or five miles without fatigue. After returning from the walk, take some more calisthenic exercises as before breakfast and follow this with a cold shower bath. Lie down and relax for about thirty minutes before dinner.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following proteins: lean beef, mutton, turkey, chicken, rabbit, fish, nuts or cheese. The one-fourth of a pound of fresh food or two or three ounces of the nuts or cheese. Choice of a selection of those non-starchy vegetables either cooked or raw which are suggested above at the luncheon. Dessert should be some simple dish made of peetin, or a choice of some of the dried fruits which may be used dry or stewed.

An enema should be taken before retiring if the bowels have not moved sufficiently during the day. If all of my readers will follow such a good daily regime I know they will improve in health in every way. Those who follow this plan for a few weeks and still find they have unpleasant symptoms from some disorder may find it advantageous to start a fruit fast again, fasting from five to ten days on the orange juice as suggested in the first

Washington—All those who write to the State Department about an appointment of an American minister to the Vatican are answered with a form letter asserting that "the question has not arisen."

There is a tendency among government officials to believe that this letter will serve the purpose for a long time to come. Meanwhile, so many protests have been received against resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Vatican as to lead to the suspicion that some sort of a campaign has been organized against the possibility.

Two Opposing Viewpoints. Probably, there is some division of opinion. One idea is that representation at the Vatican will be more or less obligatory now that there is to be a national separate entity known as the "City of the Vatican," over which the pope will rule as a temporal as well as a spiritual sovereign. England, France and Germany, which are not Catholic nations, have had ministers there in the past. We haven't had one for many decades because we regarded the Vatican only as the seat of a religion.

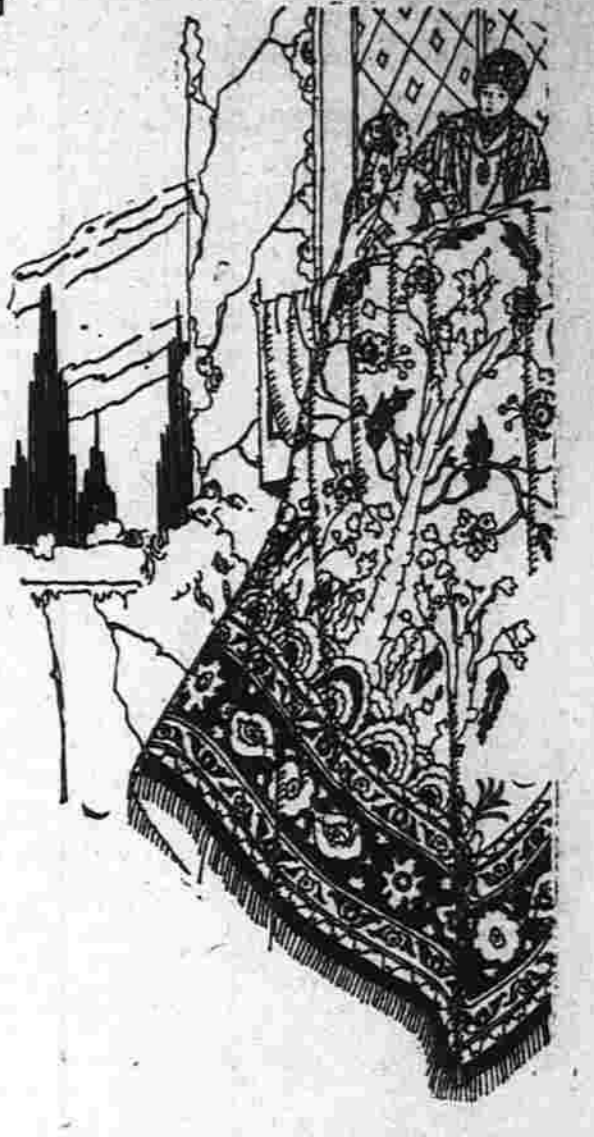

But now there are some who feel that by all the rules of the international game we ought to appoint a prominent American Catholic as a diplomat to the Vatican, as other nations do. But this viewpoint finds scant encouragement around the State Department. Apparently it is not considered this government's unescapable "duty" to send such an envoy. Up to the middle of the last century the pope ruled over a large state, with which we had a considerable amount of trade. We maintained consuls there as well as a minister. There will be no American citizens in Vatican City and there will be no trade. There is an American ambassador to Rome who may be regarded as in a position to protect any American interests which seem to need protection. Hence, one is asked, what's to be gained? State Department officials who have given the matter some thought are willing to tacitly admit, of course, that domestically the problem might be somewhat thorny.

There is an idea, in fact, that the Vatican itself may never raise the issue, if only in realization of the American situation. In that case it is more than likely that this government will merely let the matter ride. American Catholics have not yet displayed any great interest in it. Consultation with the records reveals the interesting fact that although the United States sent five ministers to the Holy See, and maintained diplomatic relations from 1848 until the cessation of the pope's temporal power in 1871, the papal state sent no minister to Washington.

That is supposed to have been because the papal minister would not have been recognized here as the dean of the diplomatic corps. In European capitals the Vatican's representative is conceded that rank and precedes the secular envoys. The theory is that he represents God.

Secretary of State James Buchanan initiated the first diplomatic relations with the Holy See, proposing the appointment of a minister "for commercial reasons." The papal state then had 16,000 square miles of territory. Buchanan, instructing John L. Martin, the first appointee, told him that the United States was in a different position from most if not all other nations represented at Rome in that "it possesses no power whatsoever over the question of religion." Martin was ordered to do no more than cultivate friendliest civil relations and work for the extension of commerce between the two countries.

BROTHERLY LOVE Griswold, Ia.—Parker W. Reynolds was to marry Miss Frances Hall on a recent Saturday evening. He started out the day before to get the license. Mud marooned him outside of town, and on the morning of the wedding he called his brother, Malcolm, and asked him to go by train to Atlanta and get the license. The train had gone at the time so Malcolm, another brother and Stewart Forsyth started off in a car. The car balked, and refused to be started again. The three of them walked 11 miles, got the license, and walked back 13 miles to give it to Parker.

TO STOP SPEEDING ON MILFORD PIKE

Investigation Discloses Considerable Reckless Driving on Wide Road. Reckless driving of two and three cars abreast at a speed between fifty and sixty miles an hour is a common occurrence on the Milford Turnpike, the four-track highway from New Haven to Milford, an inspector has reported to the State Motor Vehicle Department. The report, made after a comprehensive investigation, also disclosed that the average speed maintained on this highway is fifty miles an hour. In almost every case it was found that cars were traveling too fast for conditions. Several prosecutions have resulted from the investigation, and a recommendation has been made to the State Police Department that the patrol assigned to this road be increased. This recommendation carries a suggestion that the State Police fix a maximum speed which will be reasonable and consistent with conditions caused by the great traffic increase on this road in summer months. The excuse invariably offered for fast driving on this highway, according to the report, was that the operators "thought there was no speed limit on this road." "Connecticut's reasonable speed law is not an invitation to drive at high rate of speed or without regard for conditions," Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel said today in discussing the situation. "It must be understood that a reasonable rate of speed is required at all times. When it is necessary authorities can define the rate that is permissible under the state law. To other words, they can take the prima facie determination away from the operator and indicate for him where and when such action is necessary. The Connecticut speed law has behind it two thoughts. The first is the control of speed for purposes of transportation and traffic in a manner that will be so elastic that the changing problems as they arise in actual practice can be met. The second is that if a reasonable speed is prescribed by law the operator

Second Local Young Man Becomes Member of Force; Goes to Canaan Barracks. Thomas Donnelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donnelly, of Cooper street, and an employee in the South Manchester post office, leaves the department tonight and tomorrow is to report to the State Police barracks in Canaan having been appointed a member of the State Police Department. The recent act of the present Legislature allowing for an increase in the department to bring the total to 105 men made possible the opening and Mr. Donnelly's application was favorably acted upon. The barracks to which he is being assigned is considered a training quarters and gives the student policeman much work during the day and evenings. Donnelly is the second Manchester man to be appointed to the State Police Department since Robert T. Hurley, now commissioner, and a former Manchester man, has been at the head of the department. Kenneth Ringrose, who was the other Manchester man appointed is now located in Centerbrook.

RICH GIRL POOR GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

MILDRED LAWRENCE meets STEPHEN ARMITAGE when he rescues her fox fur from a thief. Their friendship grows until PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of her employer, tries to lure him away from her. HUCK CONNOR becomes infatuated with Pamela and she plays both men. Her brother, HAROLD, is in love with Mildred, who tries to keep him from gambling with her money. When Stephen continues seeing Mildred, Pamela has her discharged and also turns Stephen against her by saying that she is trying to marry Harold for his money. Bitter at Mildred, Stephen permits Pamela to marry him. He enters into an engagement when she tells him that is the only way she can break with Huck.

Huck commands Harold to prevent Pamela's marriage under fear of exposure concerning a forged check. Harold says he can't force Pamela so Huck plans to dispose of Stephen. He has one of his gang frame him for stealing a firm car, and the detective arrests him after finding a roll of bills, a gun, and the auto key which have been planted in his room.

Stephen calls Harold to his cell and tells his story, asking him to bring Pamela to see him. But she is busy trying to cover up the news of her engagement to a man who has been arrested and refuses to go near the jail. He spends two gloomy days despairing of help when Mildred comes to see him, and promises aid.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXX

Stephen scarcely could credit Mildred's statement with much importance, especially as she refused to tell him anything more about the "clew."

She had spoken impulsively, wanting to comfort him, but instantly she perceived that she was being disloyal to one who had given her his confidence.

But she meant to make Harold grant her permission to tell Stephen about Huck and the latter's threat to ruin him. If he did not, she would tell anyhow. Only she must first give Harold her ultimatum; that was but fair.

She jumped to her feet as Stephen pressed her, and told him she would come back in the morning.

"And then I'll bring you some news," she promised excitedly.

Stephen could not fail to be somewhat fired with hope by her air of sincerity.

"You've cheered me immensely," he told her when they said goodby.

Those words gave Mildred courage for her coming interview with Harold as she went in to see him, but they were not, as she thought, altogether inspired by faith in her "clew."

Stephen was only half convinced that she could help him, but he was wholly pleased that she had shown implicit faith in his innocence.

Mildred found Harold at the Judson. He was sticking close to home, having no heart for the society of others. He came down to join her in the lobby and when Mildred told him she wanted to have a serious talk with him they went to a deserted reception room, where they could be assured of complete privacy.

Harold had an inkling of what was to come, having no doubt that Mildred had read of Stephen's arrest. He thought it better to let Mildred have her way with no one about to overhear.

"Are you going to let Stephen stay there in that jail without doing anything to help him?" she began as soon as they were alone.

"How the devil can I help him?" Harold retorted.

"You know who put him there!"

"You're crazy," she cried.

Mildred looked at him in utter amazement. Then her anger flamed up in a white heat.

"So you're going to sacrifice him to save yourself," she cried, and the words flung at her with the sting of a lash. "Well, if you don't do something I will. I'll tell him that you knew Huck Connor was planning something like this. And I can guess why. It was to get Stephen out of jail. It was because he was jealous of him."

"Mildred, you know I'd rather die than have Huck get Pamela."

Mildred was merciless. "I know you'd rather let an innocent man stay in jail than have your father know what it is Huck's got on you," she fired back bitterly.

"But I tell you I don't know anything about it," Harold denied.

"Huck hates Armitage—he's jealous, yes, but that doesn't prove that he's back of Stephen's trouble."

"It doesn't? Don't pretend to be stupid. If the circumstantial evidence hadn't been planted in Stephen's room, I might believe that Huck had nothing to do with it. But someone wanted Stephen arrested. Who could it be if not Huck?"

"Well, there's nothing to prove that Huck had anything to do with it," Harold replied. "You can't convict a man on suspicion, just because he's an enemy. In that case it may have been someone else who hated Stephen. How do you know that it wasn't?"

"Oh, you're just a coward," Mildred charged, "but I'm going to tell Stephen all that I know."

"You have no right to do that," Harold protested. "You nagged at me until you got me to tell you about Huck. And I swear, no matter how much I might suspect him, that I don't know anything about the theft."

His words were so accusing, so fraught with fear, that Mildred wavered.

"If he finds out that I've been babbling to you he'll finish me. Harold won't be pleased. And what if he didn't frame Stephen?"

I'd be done for just the same. You ought to have proof before you go that far."

"Just telling Stephen won't do you any harm unless Huck is at the bottom of his arrest," Mildred pointed out. "If he is, Harold, you ought to be willing to have him found out. Then he'd have no chance to marry Pamela."

"You don't know what it means to me," Harold groaned. "Huck would soon know it if Armitage put anyone on his trail; then he'd make me pay."

Mildred felt suddenly nauseated. Harold's cringing fear of Huck sickened her.

"I'm sorry," she said colorfully, "but I've got to tell Stephen. It's not my fault that he is here."

Harold collapsed like a pricked balloon. Mildred shrank from touching him, but she was forced to give him what comfort she could.

"I'll see that Stephen doesn't do anything to let Huck know we suspect him," she promised, "and if we can prove him guilty you won't have anything more to fear. You see that, don't you?" she added, her aversion overcome by pity.

"You're a fraud," Harold cried, getting up to face her; "a cheating scoundrel. You wormed all this out of me just because you're in love with Armitage. And I thought you were the one friend I had in all the world."

Mildred thrust out a protesting hand. "Harold," she cried, "I didn't want to help you. I had no idea Stephen was mixed up in it. You only told me that the last time I saw you."

"But now that you know you're going to throw me to the lions," Harold sneered and turned away from her.

"I'm not," Mildred said tearfully. "I want to help you both."

Harold wheeled back. "Then you don't care for Huck Connor," he declared hotly. "You can prove him guilty as hell, but that won't save me. I tell you the man's a fiend. Lay off it, please Mildred, for God's sake."

Mildred shrank away from him, her face going white as parchment. "Oh, she moaned, "I can't. Stephen is innocent. I must help him."

Her decision seemed completely to unnerv her. He dropped down in his chair again and his shoulders shook with suppressed sobs.

Mildred could not bear to look at him. When a few minutes later, he lifted his head to speak to her she was gone.

He immediately became obsessed with a desire to find her. He tore madly from the room, he hurried to the magazine and from there he ran down to the lobby, attracting not a little attention by his frantic manner and searching movements.

But Mildred had gained the street and was out of sight around the corner on her way home, all thought of seeking employment gone from her mind for that day.

She wanted to be in her room, undisturbed, to think. There came a charge of broken faith hurt. There came a way in which she could help Stephen without further agonizing the boy who had given her the one clew to Stephen's trouble that she held.

Harold did not allow her much time to find a solution to the problem. Her innate loyalty offered, guessing that she was honorbound, he followed as soon as he could in a taxicab.

For several days and nights after that, Harold nagged Mildred's footsteps, pleading with her to keep silent.

Stephen wondered at her changed attitude. She had come to him, as she promised, but only to tell him that she wasn't yet free to reveal her "clew."

Her failure to decide against Harold made her stiff and self-conscious in Stephen's presence. She felt that she was not being a good friend. Consequently she had existed on a first visit to his cell was lacking in the others, though she did not fail to come each day.

Stephen was cheered by her visits in spite of being conscious of them. He thought it was fine of her to come at all and he told himself he couldn't expect her to show a lot of enthusiasm over a guy in jail.

From Pamela he had received no word or sign of interest.

Mildred was torn with sympathy for him. Harold had told her that Pamela considered the engagement broken. Deep in her heart, Mildred experienced an exultant moment when she heard this, but Stephen's dejected air and pain-ridden eyes made her hate Pamela with a hatred she had not known she harbored in her nature.

They did not speak of Pamela, but once when Mildred brought him an unfolded paper and discovered too late that it contained a photograph of Pamela and she saw his painful reaction to it, she told herself that she couldn't much longer continue to yield to Harold's entreaties.

Soon after that her troubles were lightened. She got a satisfactory position as secretary to the president of a large merchandising firm.

And she felt she was succeeding in the campaign she had undertaken to awaken Harold's sense of fairness to the point where he would allow her to reveal all she knew of Huck Connor to Stephen. She even hoped that Harold's moral courage would finally conquer his cowardice and force him to defy Huck.

Things he said, mere suggestions as they were, indicated that his burden was becoming too heavy for him. He seemed plunged in a hopeless despondency. Mildred believed it was only a question of a short time before he would see that it did not matter what happened to him so long as he saved the rom-ants of his self-respect. When that day came, Mildred was firmly convinced, Huck would be exposed as the plotter of Stephen's misfortune.

Perhaps another entertaining thought. At any rate, Mildred one day answered the telephone on her desk where she was employed and heard a gruff voice ask for Miss Lawrence.

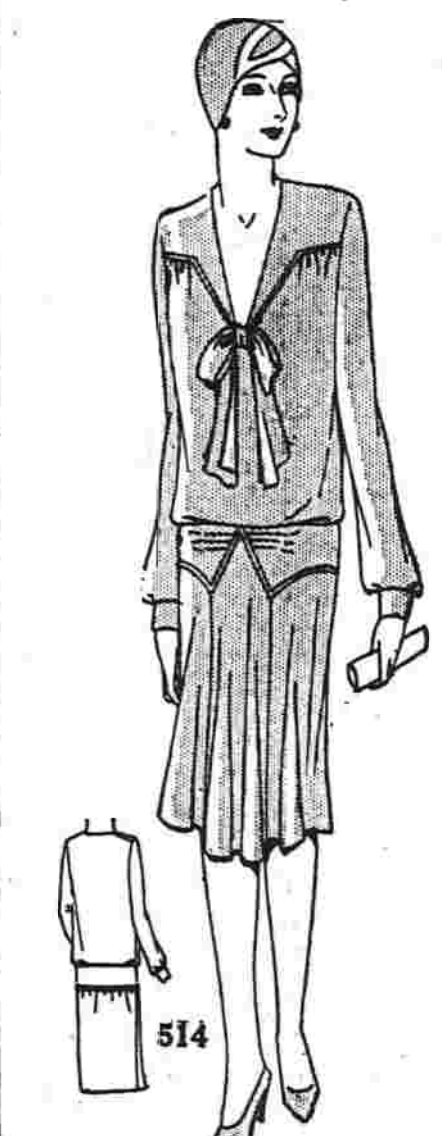

"I'm Miss Lawrence," she said, wondering who could be calling her here.

The man's next words sent a shiver of apprehension coursing over her.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

April, May, June—vacation! Then what?

Perhaps you are too busy with housecleaning and letting down dresses to think of vacation days yet. Or did you wake up last night and sigh and turn over and wonder what in the world you'd do this year if the children got as restless and peevish about the middle of July as they did last?

"If only you could take them away—!" But there's John, you can't leave him all summer, and except for two weeks at Grandma's you suppose you'll have those children on your hands like mill-stones the entire time. Or do you wear mill-stones around your neck?

Well, anyway—That question may wake you up a good many nights in the next eight or ten weeks.

To Camp, If Possible.

Of course if you can spare any money out of the teapot I'd say send your boys or girls to an organized camp. Because that is an investment that pays big dividends.

If you can't, I should do what so many western people do, make a regular playground out of the back yard, or front yard, or side yard—or there isn't anything to prevent several families from going together and buying the lumber and using any available space offered—perhaps a vacant lot.

Oh yes, lumber! Cheap pine, as full of knots as you like or splinters and anything that will make a little more work to get smoothed up and into condition.

In these days of manual training you won't have to go far to find a boy who knows how to use carpenter's tools. I think nearly all boys know instinctively how to use a plane and saw and hammer now. Anyway, they can learn.

How to Stock Lumber.

Before I forget it, lumber isn't exactly cheap. From now on, why not save every wooden box or crate that comes your way and salvage every good board of any proportion whatever that you may discover, and stow it away in the garage or cellar until it is needed.

There are a dozen things to be made out of boards—sides, saws, swings, turning-poles, even "shanties." The average boy's life is not complete without at least one "shanty" or "clubhouse" to his credit by the way.

Societies for the promotion of organized play give away books with directions and suggestions for making these things, but if you have difficulty getting one, a book-store will have the material you need. Such a book would keep the children busy for days. But after all they don't have to have a book. Half the fun is in discovering ways to do things themselves.

GILEAD

Harry N. Holmes, field secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship, was the speaker at the meeting of the Tri-County Christian Endeavor Union to be held in the Hebron Congregational church last evening at 7 o'clock standard time. Mr. Holmes made a tour of the city in 1912 under the auspices of a religious movement and on his way back to the United States he passed through South Africa and was persuaded to remain there for two and one half years. During the war he had charge of the Y. M. C. A. work in the areas of the British armies and France and Flanders. He was a delegate in 1925 to the First Institute of Pacific Relations which was held on Honolulu. Mr. Holmes looks upon the Pacific Ocean as the coming center of international affairs and he addressed the meeting on "The Lure of the Pacific Through the Centuries," and "Are We Drifting to Peace or War?"

DOING HIS DUTY

New York—Mortimer Sanderson, 17-year-old Boy Scout, died here in the act of doing his daily goodturn. At a subway station, young Sanderson stepped aside to let a woman alight from a crowded car. In doing so he brushed against an intoxicated man, Charles Eckert, who struck him and knocked him onto the platform, fracturing his skull. Sanderson died later.

Then and Now

IN NEW YORK

New York, April 29.—In these last days of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, a strange assortment of souvenir hunters, curio collectors and such have been bobbing up.

One man has already put in a bid for the first bit of stone to be clipped by the wreckers.

Autograph collectors have appeared in droves, most of them aiming to get the signature of Oscar, the famous chef, before he leaves. Two shrewd collectors have haunted the dining rooms, getting the names of all the old-time waiters on their fixtures and decorations which have antique value. Artists are at work here to have a peculiar value when the historic place is no more.

Persons who have been guests at the Waldorf in the early days have written in, inquiring about certain fixtures and decorations which have antique value. Artists are at work here to have a peculiar value when the historic place is no more.

It is now the intention to have the old hotelery go out in a quiet and dignified celebration. They would make this a worthwhile affair; a series of memory wakening episodes lifted from the past; a recreation of famous events.

They would use the theater-like ball room as a setting and therein they would react moments from receptions and balls which have made Manhattan's social history. Some would even have the guests come in the particular costumes of the times and would invite as many of the original participants as are still alive. All the organizations that have used the banquet rooms prepare to gather.

One by one some of the spectacular and almost legendary figures of the hotel's history pass again in review.

Just the other day the famous "lady of the diamond heels" returned for a farewell visit. In the gay and giddy nineties, "the lady of the diamond heels" was a tending sensation. She fairly knocked the breath from the naive thrill seekers.

She had appeared from Indiana, wearing a red hat with two such plumes as might have been found on D'Artagnan, while her French heels glistened with clusters of inset diamonds. It was whispered about that 38 one-karat stones had gone into the making of those heels.

Her name was Mrs. Charles Haines Anthony, and she hailed from Muncie. When she reappeared recently she could not have been distinguished from any member of the lobby throng. Smartly tailored, she was just another well-dressed visitor slipping into old age.

But when Peacock Alley was synonymous with splendor, Mrs. Anthony cut a swath that has seldom been equalled. In addition to the heels, she glistened with necklaces, chains, bracelets, earrings and buckles. There was an old wheeze to the effect that lobby loungers carried smoked glasses to protect their eyes and that Oscar ordered the lights dimmed. There one newspaper reporter talked with was also a story to the effect that her husband in Muncie and he wryly commented: "Oh, yes, a set of diamonds you can buy for $5 a bucket." But no one believed this.

And there is one whose connection with the Waldorf has, for some reason, been overlooked in the shuffle of events marking its passing. He's the man who, seated behind the scenes, has been largely responsible for much of the halo which has settled over the tavern during the past 20 years. He is Al Crockett, the hotel's publicity representative, public relations counsel, or what you will.

Crockett was perhaps the first to establish a contact relationship in New York between a hotel and the newspapers. He got the idea when, as a reporter, he was sent around to interview celebrities. It seemed to him that a press man stationed in a hotel, could be of great service—and so he was. How much he has contributed to the glamour of the place it would be hard to say.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLEN S. CUNNINGHAM

Now comes Congressman Soyke's job of being accepted as rather a Bloom of New York with his own pet little theory as to what is menacing the Great American home. And how much. He says that it's the lack of domestic help. In an attempt to stave off this catastrophe, Bloom plans to introduce in Congress a bill amending the immigration law to admit without quota restriction European domestics.

He believes that this would help solve Europe's problem of the surplus female as well as help solve the American housewife's problem.

THEY'D LEARN

He says that there is no use avoiding the fact that all American girls prefer anything in the world to domestic service, and that the serious problem will continue till his bill is in effect.

It does not seem to occur to the congressman that as soon as these foreign-trained girls in the art of domestic work become Americanized, and learn that labor in the kitchen is infinitely more below cast than laboring in a factory, they, too, will take up hairdressing and typewriting, and the same old problem of nobody for the dishwashing will be with us.

NOT SO DIFFERENT

"Don't wear embroidered pink silk underwear." This is just one of the don'ts in a book of instructions on how to crash into society, written by a Chicago University student.

One must not wear woollens, use a tablecloth or lamp, ever serve dinner with out candles, permit a maid to remove more than one plate at a time from the table, never say "pleased to meet you" when introduced, or ever carry an umbrella or package.

This is certainly the height of silliness. These "don'ts" apply no more to the job of breaking into Chicago society than to the job of being accepted as rather a fault anywhere.

OLD AT 85

The problem of "the older woman in industry" is the problem of the woman over 35. That makes one shudder a little in an age which makes 35 look as 22 of a few years ago, but one sees it in the eyes of women whose last year's suits and hats tell the story of trudging the town for work.

"I tell every woman over 30 to adopt a business age of at least five years less," an employment manager told me not long ago.

"The Older Woman in Industry," by a Mrs. Lobenz, bravely sets forth the spectre of "what comes after 30?" that haunts many a woman confronted at that age for the first time with the problem of making a livelihood. The author says that it is not at all a fantastic possibility that if employers' prejudice towards the employed woman of over 35 continues, society will have to work out a dole system for the older woman who is denied the right to make a livelihood.

WOMEN'S BARS

Tales of special bars for women in Paris with a brass football in everything, with shaded lights and crumpled chairs, will bring a gasp from the woman raised in the teetotal era. To tell Grandma that there is probably little more rivalry or drunkenness in these emporiums than in a tea and pastry shoppe would be unbelievable to her.

The teetotaler still believes that the lips that touch liquor are doomed to a drunkard's grave. Our grandmothers would rise up in holy horror if told that their own intemperance in gorging at box socials and church suppers was probably infinitely greater than the intemperance of the average woman who takes an average occasional cocktail.

basis for many of the notions that have been mentioned.

Many famous orators have found relief from sore throats and a new clarity of speech when enlarged and infected tonsils have been removed. Many famous singers have been enabled to develop more power through the removal of infected tonsils and their voices have not been altered in the slightest manner in quality.

The notions as to the relationship of the tonsils to the procreative power are utterly without basis as demonstrated by millions of children of persons whose tonsils have been removed. No doubt this belief has to do with the fact that one of the infectious diseases—mumps—sometimes has as a secondary complication, serious inflammation of the glands that are concerned in procreation. The ignorance by analogy of a similar relationship to the tonsils.

Approximately one-third of Hawaii's 348,767 population lives in the city of Honolulu and one-half resides in the county of Honolulu.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

REMOVAL OF TONSILS IS BASIS OF MANY FALSE BELIEFS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Some people believe that removal of the tonsils will interfere with speech, spoil the singing voice, or ruin the procreative power. The strange ideas that have developed relative to the danger of removal of tonsils are, no doubt, due to the fact that the exact functions of the tonsils were not known for many years and the imagination was therefore permitted to run riot concerning them.

The tonsils represent the remains of lymphoid structures associated with the destruction of bacteria. Under modern conditions of life, the bacteria which develop on the tonsils make them a source of infection to the rest of the body, as well as a menace in themselves to the condition of the throat.

The fact that the tonsils have been removed safely in hundreds of thousands if not millions of cases should be sufficient evidence to indicate the absolute lack of

Melhorn Would Have Improved U. S. Team

However, He Didn't Fit In With British Customs and So Was Left Behind.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, April 29.—Boisterous Bill Melhorn, the untamed, probably is laughing down in his shirt bosom today at the American Ryder Cup team which set sail for England with a bandwagon and finished on Saturday with a piccolo solo. Wilfrid William, you understand, didn't know that you are at peace with a spoon and in other ways lacked the cultural niceties that appeal to British taste, so among the 110,000,000 Americans who weren't mentioned for the team, William was one.

Bill Melhorn, the untamed, probably is laughing down in his shirt bosom today at the American Ryder Cup team which set sail for England with a bandwagon and finished on Saturday with a piccolo solo.

This isn't the real reason, by the way, but it is close enough to the truth to serve the purpose. Because of certain manifestations, American golf sensed the fact that the British wouldn't approve of the way that Melhorn, the case, William, and this being the case, but to ignore the young man in a great big way. He had the golf. He didn't have the piping hot manner, as specified by section A, rule 1, of the international in view of this state of affairs, to say that Melhorn's absence brought about America's most unexpected defeat but the statement in question was a bit out of focus with the facts. These may be summed up brusquely by stating that the best Ryder Cup team American golf ever sponsored sustained what, in some respects, was the worst Yankee defeat in the history of the national team play because the British were much too good for us.

Local Sport Clatter

Bill for Dudley. Melhorn might have drawn the decision finer than the ultimate score of 7 to 5. He might have replaced Dudley with Sarazen's partner on Friday and pulled out a squared match, instead of the 2 and 1 defeat sustained. However, there was nothing in the rules that compelled him to play better than Dudley, so this is largely ordinary, he couldn't have affected Saturday's returns, for these saw the British playing golf that just wasn't in the director's script. We have been a lot of people who are floating about our superiority in international golf but, if England's effort on Saturday wasn't a one-day gesture, the day when it will be prepared to re-assert a degree of dominance wouldn't seem to be far distant. It was the way they did it that churned our buttermilk. Any time the so-called big three take a liking such as Hagen, Farrell and Sarazen absorbed, then you can bet that a not altogether unassuming occasion as an American golf is concerned. Melhorn didn't figure to displace any one of this trio and, if he had, could he have done any better than Hagen, or Sarazen, or Farrell, who lost to C. Whitcomb 8 and 6, or Sarazen, whom Compton defeated by 6 and 4? I doubt it.

With spring vacation period taking place here this week, there will be no school sports in Manchester this week.

Next week, Manchester High will engage in two baseball games and two track meets. Monday our track team goes to West Hartford and Friday to Meriden. Wednesday West Hartford plays baseball here and Saturday the local team journeys to Meriden.

The Montgomery Ward Company here has offered a brand new fielder's glove to the first member of the High school nine whaling a home run this season. "Whites" Byholck has come the nearest to the honor so far with a lusty triple in the Middletown game.

Promoter Ed Hurley realizes the popularity of Pancho Villa, New Bedford featherweight, and has matched him to meet Eddie Lord of Waterbury at Foot Guard Hall next Thursday night. The winner is promised a shot at Bat Battalione when the outdoor season gets underway. Lord recently beat Tony Leto and is an excellent boxer. He stands a good chance of beating Villa. Eddie Red, meets Jimmy Picard of Boston in an eight-round semi-final. Reed has not been defeated since turning professional.

With the return of Daylight Saving Time, baseball should be getting underway here among the semi-pro teams but there probably won't be much action until the weather man is inclined to be a bit more behaved. When it hasn't been raining, it has been too cold to play, like yesterday.

Manchester Green and the Bon Ami are going to be represented by baseball teams. Just what other teams, if any, will represent the town, remains to be seen. No doubt Bert Gibson will organize another team if a twilight league is formed.

With the resignation of Jerry Fay as director of the Community Club, there will be no Community Club Twilight League as was in existence last season. However, when the weather gets a bit more agreeable and the summer further organized, the sports writer of The Herald intends to take steps toward the formation of such a circuit. It will probably be underway in two or three more weeks. A meeting will be called in the near future.

Ben Cheney, first baseman on the Manchester Green team last season, is on the Yale squad, being understood to Vincent the regular infielder who bats in the clean-up position. Cheney is said to be a better fielder but Vincent a surer hitter.

Parents who continue to allow their children to swarm all over the West Side playground field when games are in progress are liable to repent. Despite persistent efforts to keep them away from the playing territory, the youngsters insist on getting in the danger zone where they are apt to be hit by a batted ball and seriously injured.

Four Team Legion Junior League To Start On Tuesday

First Game Will Also Be Played Tomorrow Evening; League To Operate Tuesday and Thursday Evenings; Candidate Must Be Under 17 Years on September 14.

The squad of candidates now trying out for a berth on the American Legion junior baseball team to represent Dilworth-Cornell post of Manchester, will be divided into four teams at tomorrow afternoon's practice session at the West Side playgrounds.

The purpose of this arrangement is to get a better idea as to the respective ability of the various boys seeking berth on the legion team. It will afford all of the candidates plenty of opportunity to show their worth giving them considerable fun in the meanwhile. The league will operate on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

The final selections for the legion must be made June 8 and Coach Jack Jenney expected to complete a two round league in the meantime. The four captains will be selected by the coach tomorrow evening and then the candidates will be asked to take their position on the team. They will then be assigned to the different teams. In event of a shortage of players, captains will be allowed to get players who have not yet reported.

Here Are Ryder Cup Scores In The Singles

By virtue of winning five of the eight matches in the singles, Great Britain overcame the slight lead which the United States had made in the foursomes and won back the famous Ryder Cup Saturday by a score of 7 to 5. Leo Diegel and Horton Smith were the only winners in the match. The results were given in the Herald Saturday but here are the scores, hole by hole:

INCREASED DEMAND FOR OAKLAND AND PONTIAC

John W. Kemp of Kemp Brothers, the Manchester dealers in Oakland and Pontiac points out that great changes have taken place in the automobile industry. "The automobile today," says Mr. Kemp, "is a transportation unit to a larger extent than ever before and buyers acquire their new cars regardless of the season and put them into commission immediately after purchase. That is one of the reasons why sales of Oakland and Pontiac have been in such encouraging numbers. The American public is thoroughly sold on the idea of motor vehicle transportation which is individual in character therefore quite independent of set schedules or other forces.

"One of the marked changes that have come during my experience is putting away the idea that cars should not be put into service until the May flowers are in evidence. We have gotten by that stage which is quite as it should be for we need transportation whether it is January or July.

"The public inclines to clean equipment but no longer does the owner leave his car in the garage because it is stormy. Wet feet, to say nothing of the inconvenience of doing without a car constitute a menace and in comparison a wash for the car seems rather a trifling matter in cost.

"More and more buyers are coming to the idea that cars have to be used at all times and replaced regardless of season or weather conditions and that means sales of Oakland and Pontiac in winter or any other season of the year."

Kemp Brothers are associate dealers of the state distributor, The A. C. Hine Company of Hartford.

SCHALLER TO BUILD ADDITION TO GARAGE

Henry Schaller, owner of Schaller's Garage today purchased from John D. Stone land to the west of his garage and having an extension from Center street through to Olcott street. He intends to start work at once on the erection of a garage to be sixty feet facing on Center street and extending back to the south a distance of eighty feet. The new garage being built to provide a work-room and storage for his business which has greatly increased since Schaller started the day and night service. The building will be of brick and will be entered on a level from Center street, but because of the peculiar slope of the ground there will also be a basement which can be used for storage purposes.

LETTER GOLF

A MATTER OF LUCK. How POOR is your LUCK? Unless it is very poor, you should have little trouble with today's letter golf hole. Par is five and one solution is on another page.

Letter Golf grid with letters P, O, O, R and L, U, C, K.

THE RULES. 1—The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, C . . . HOW, HEW, HEN. 2—You change only one letter at a time. 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4—The order of letters cannot be changed. One solution is printed on another page. Wife—I just bought a set of Shakespeare. Husband (angrily)—How many times have I told you not to buy those foreign tires?

THE TINIES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) "Oh, my," exclaimed the Goofy-goo. "It's awful! What am I to do? The Tinies' cabin falling and they all are tucked inside. I brought them up here in the air, and now it seems it wasn't fair. I never should have taken them on such a high-up ride." The Tinies, in the meantime, saw that they were falling, and in awe, they all began to holler. "Help! We're dropping to the ground. Won't someone make this cabin stop before we take an awful flop." The cabin kept on falling, as it swerved around and around. Down through a cloud they quickly fell, and kept on dropping down pell mell. It seemed they must have been real high, which added to their plight. A short fall wouldn't be so bad, and many of that sort they'd had. But this was quite a long one, 'cause the earth was not in sight. Then Scouty loudly shouted, "Oh! I see a patch of ground below. I fear that's where we're going to hit. It's almost over now. Why, I can hardly catch my breath. Are we to all be dashed to death? I'm praying that the Goofy-goo will rescue us somehow." And then the Goofy-goo came near and said, "Cheer up, lads! I am here. I'll do my best to save you, though my plan may fail to work. Just don't fall out, but hang on tight. Perhaps this will turn out all right. When there are things for me to do, I'm never known to shirk." Below the cabin he then flew. It was a right smart thing to do. The Tinies watched him closely. They were very near the ground. The Goofy-goo then got a whack. He caught the cabin on his back. It finally balanced upright, and the bunch were safe and sound. (There is more excitement in the next story.)

LOCAL TEACHERS STUDY NEW METHODS IN N. Y.

Thirteen of Them Spending Their Vacation Visiting Bronxville Public Schools.

Thirteen Manchester school teachers are spending the spring vacation this week visiting other schools in New York City and Bronxville. The purpose of their visit is to study methods used in other schools.

Those who are making the study are Miss L. S. Hanna, Miss Emma Borowski from the Washington school, Miss E. Reed, Miss Edith Eaton, Miss Catherine Shea, Miss Anna McGuire, Miss Elizabeth Bennett from the Barzard school, Miss Hildah Butler, Miss Alice M. Marshall, and Miss Carmita Lasher from the Nathan Hale school.

The individual plan or what is known as the Winnetka Plan was introduced in Bronxville a few years ago under the direction of A. J. Stoddard now superintendent of schools in Schenectady, New York. While in Bronxville, Manchester teachers will make a study of the results of this method.

The schools to be visited in New York are the Horace Mann and Lincoln Schools, both experimental schools connected with Columbia University. New York City public schools which have been selected are Public School No. 45 Bronx, under the direction of Angelo Patr. nationally known educator, and Public School No. 61 Bronx, under the direction of Edward Maguire who is promoting the group study plan.

SAVINGS BANK INSTALLS NEW POSTING MACHINES

System Now Used Insures Bank and Depositor Against Error—Is Latest Method.

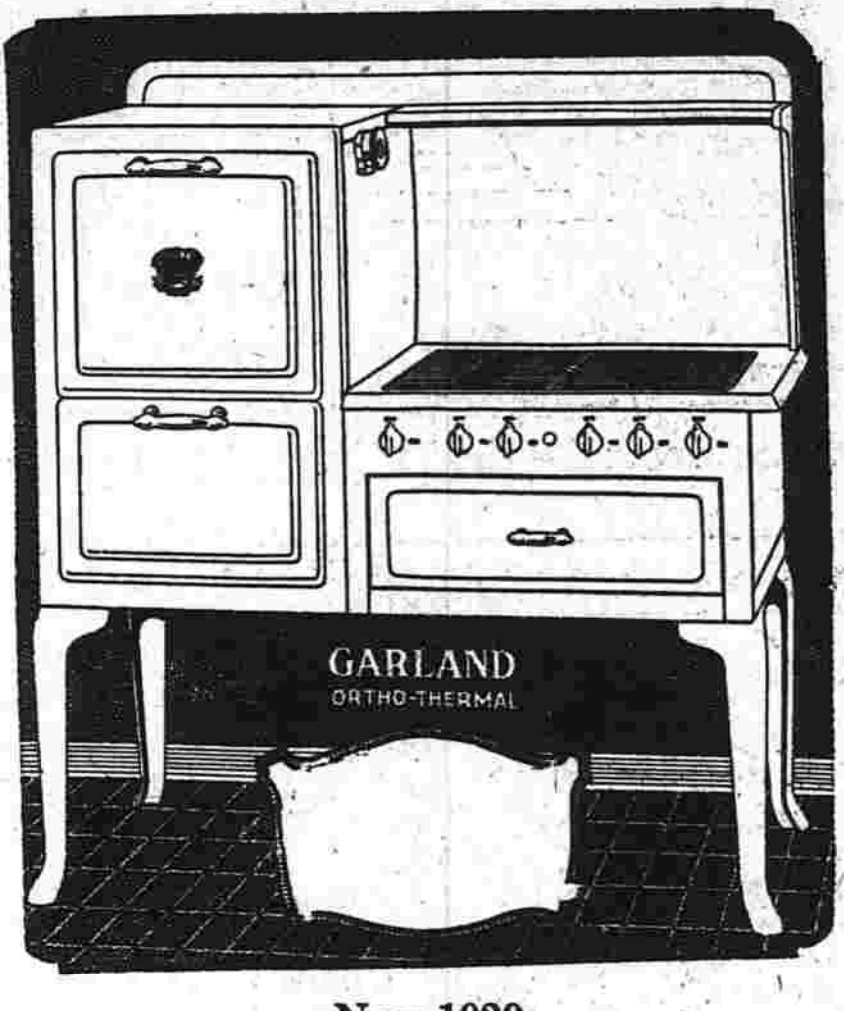

The Savings Bank of Manchester has installed new posting machines which facilitate service and reduce the possibility of errors thus providing a modern protection for savings depositors. A most interesting demonstration of the new equipment was witnessed today by a representative of The Herald. The machines operate speedily and accurately making simultaneous and identical entries on both the depositor's pass book and the bank's ledger card.

The Savings Bank of Manchester, a mutual institution wherein all profits accrue to the depositors, has long evidenced the prosperity and thrift of the people of Manchester. Its deposits of over $6,000,000 are steadily increasing and the bank is recognized as one of the larger mutual savings institutions in the state.
