MABEL'S LEGAL MIND

Mabel Walker Willebrandt, considerably beset by her responsibilities in the matter of the Jones law, and who has already abjured her federal district attorneys to use their beans in enforcing that weird statute, is out with a new pronouncement concerning it. She explains that it is a loss of time, a loss of opportunity for good results and also useless to try to make a felony out of a misdemeanor. Yet this is exactly what the Jones law was passed to accomplish. Mrs. Willebrandt has learned something from the refusal of juries to convict, that is all. It is to be noted that she says nothing about the injustice, the wickedness, the outrageousness of making a felony of a misdemeanor, merely pointing out the impracticability of doing so—in the light of the juries' action of course.

But the hypertrophied legalistic mind of Mrs. Willebrandt delivers itself also of another idea that will be interesting to a large number of persons. She says: "Although the average man and woman may be unaware of the fact every lawyer knows that the prosecutor must weigh evidence and choose (make and election of remedies is the legal term that applies) under what section of the law he will plead the case."

Perhaps the average man and woman is not quite so ignorant of the tricks of her trade as Mrs. Willebrandt, in her professional pride, imagines. But it is doubtful if the average man or woman, or perhaps even the average lawyer, quite fully realizes how far this "election of remedies" in criminal cases, tends to convert a system of government by law into a government by prosecuting officers. The system of discrimination between individual cases which Mrs. Willebrandt is urging, the enforcement or the ignoring of the Jones law at the will of the prosecutor, is one which, if followed to its logical conclusion, would reduce all law to the point of insignificance and elevate the district attorney to the position of a dictator; for then the prosecutor's will and not the will of the people's legislators would become the law itself.

Mrs. Willebrandt has enjoyed the reputation of being an excellent lawyer. We make bold to assert that her attitude in this matter of Jones law enforcement indicates that she is, instead, an extraordinarily bad one. Her mind, facile enough within its limitations, seems to be wholly unable to grasp the fundamental theory that law must apply to all persons and all similar cases alike. We cannot sustain a democracy with a legal system recognizing any such principle as Mrs. Willebrandt's "right of election of remedy" in the administration of a statute law whose phrasing admits of no possible choice of interpretations, in spite of the mushy and ridiculous trailer that was tacked onto the Jones law and which by no stretch of legal imagination can be made a part of it.

Mrs. Willebrandt's theory that a sale of liquor is a felony if you think you can get a jury to convict of felony, but only a misdemeanor if you doubt your jury, is not only shameful and mean, it is rotten law.

HUGE BUT QUIET

The Panama Canal represents an investment of approximately $280,000,000. Its building was regarded as a stupendous financial adventure on the part of the American nation. Today private interests are going ahead with arrangements for the building of a bridge across the Hudson at the foot of West 57th street, New York, which, with all the supplementary developments intended to go with it, will call for the investing of $400,000,000, or approaching half as much again as the Panama Canal—and the project can hardly make the front pages of the newspapers.

Just the same, it is a stupendous job that the North River Bridge Company proposes to do and one which, if carried out, will have a great economic influence. In fact it will make a way station of New York City instead of a positive terminal, in transcontinental travel, because trains from New England by the New Haven or from the Hudson river area of New York state by the Central bound to the west, will be enabled to pass through the city and continue on their way without necessity of the passengers seeing any more of the metropolis than the skyline—and that from the car windows.

It is proposed to link the Grand Central Station and the Pennsylvania Station and the Hudson Tubes with the new bridge by a system of tunnels, and the whole proposition is in blue print and now in the hands of the War Department for approval.

Meantime, the bridge is being opposed by shipping men because its building would require them to install collapsible radio masts, the present radio masts on some of the great liners being 200 feet high, 25 feet taller than the clearance in the highest part of the bridge above water.

Maybe the bridge and the tunnels will be built, maybe not; but at all events the fact that such an enterprise can be undertaken and (it is so claimed) capitalized, with so little noise, is significant of the vast financial strength of this country.

ELEVEN YEAR CYCLE

The eleven year sun-spot cycle theory is getting a pretty hard wallop and those of us who have been depending on its workings to bring us, this spring, something remotely approaching normal weather are slipping down into the dumps. According to our casual kind of figuring the summer of 1927 was the crest season for sun-spot devils. It was devilish enough, all right, but the recession which should have set in last summer and should by this time be at least in second gear doesn't seem to have meshed at all. With all these tornadoes, floods, too-forward and too-backward seasons that we are experiencing one is tempted to abandon his faith in sunspots after all. This is all the harder when you don't know what sunspots are, or why, or how the dickens they come to affect the meteorology of this little old earth anyway. The less one knows about any theory the more likely he is to love it—witness the street talk in any political campaign. And we have had such an affection for the eleven year cycle—it seems almost as if an old friend had just bawled us out!

TOMMY MARSHALL CIGAR

The late Tommy Marshall, whose remark that what America most needed was a good five cent cigar wasn't a joke but the expression of a profound economic wisdom, was probably thinking in pretty general terms when he made it. He was referring to extravagance and inflation of prices and habits in many relationships. But the time has come when the tobacco industry apparently must take the Marshall aphorism literally. Government figures show that in the last nine months the increase in the use of cigarettes has been almost ten per cent, while the trade in all other forms of tobacco has fallen off.

The cigar that costs approximately as much as a whole package of cigarettes is up against a competition which it simply cannot withstand. There is not enough luxury money in the pockets of the people to support the two-for-a-quarter cigar, nor yet, on a successful basis, the ten cent cigar. If the tobacco growers and the cigar manufacturers between them can produce a Tommy Marshall cigar they may be able to stall off the tremendously increasing flood of cigarette rivalry. Perhaps the stunt is impossible. But many apparently impossible things have been accomplished under the spur of grim necessity.

PARTICULAR

Manchester has, perhaps, a few fussy people; sometimes, such are the objections offered to almost any sort of an innovation, we suspect there may even be more than a few. But Manchester people are a wildly reckless, devil-may-care lot of gobs on shore leave compared to some of our neighbors in Rockville, judged by this:

The city fathers or somebody in authority, being required to provide some workable gutters on several streets and not having unlimited wherewithal at their command, hit upon the scheme of building pretty good gutters out of a layer of small stones bonded with tarva or something of the sort. All went well until some citizen discovered that the stones came from an old filtration bed. Then, "Holy murder!" "We'll all take sick and die!" wailed the Rockvillians. "The idea of using those old germ-soaked stones for gutters! It's an outrage!" It took all the doctors in Rockville to quiet the alarm.

BANK SERVICE

The new Trust Company of Scarsdale, N. Y., comes very near to being our idea of the right kind of a bank, but falls just the least mite short at that. The bank advertises that it will pay all its depositors' bills, thus relieving its customers of the bother of writing and signing checks. All you have to do, if you are a Scarsdale Trust Company depositor, is to O. K. your duns and send them along to the bank. The rest will be attended to by the genial and altruistic personnel of that institution. The only fly in the ointment is the condition that you must have the necessary money on deposit—which is a fly of elephantine proportions. What we are looking for is a bank so enterprising and snappy and so utterly committed to the policy of service that it will pay the bills without any regard to that annoying detail of the deposit. That will be a regular one!

NO MENTAL MURDER TRIAL

The public is not to be edified by the trial of some person or persons for "mental murder" in the Steinhardt suicide case, as it was indicated that somebody might be, a while ago. The grand jury investigating the case has found that Steinhardt acted entirely on his initiative in taking his life when on the point of arrest for bankruptcy frauds in New York. No one is to be charged with having prompted the lawyer's death and so there is to be no novel court case involving a huge amount of publicity—and probably resulting in nothing else.

A $24 PURCHASE

Today is the anniversary of the most historic real estate transaction in history—the purchase of Manhattan Island from the Indians for the equivalent of about $24.

This purchase, made on May 4, 1624, was the crowning event in the otherwise inconspicuous administration of Peter Minuit, director general of the New Amsterdam colony. The island, now the skyscraper district of New York, is 13 miles long, has a maximum width of two and a quarter miles, and an area of 22 miles. Its population is now more than 2,500,000, and its assessed valuation is fabulous.

Its name is supposed to have originated with Henry Hudson, who referred to the hostile Indians he found on it, as "Manhattan." Later they were called "Manhattan Indians," as if they were a distinct tribe, but historians say that they were a branch of the Delawares.

Since they were unfriendly to the Dutch settlers, the Indians probably drove as hard a bargain as possible and felt that the 50 guilders worth of merchandise they received was a good price.

The year 5290 of the Jewish era begins at sunset on October 4, 1929.

By RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington, May 5.—It may or may not be more or less significant of something or other that both the Anti-Saloon League and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment have considerably expanded their offices here within the last year.

The Association has done so just recently. Whereas it had only two rooms in the National Press Club Building it now has a suite of five, including a reception room. There are larger offices in New York City, but President Henry J. Curran has one room here. Secretary Emmet Dougherty another and Research Director John Gebhart still another.

The league used to have its headquarters under one roof on the third floor of the old Bilas building, facing the Capitol grounds. But it has divided into two departments of effort, the educational effort supervised by Ernest H. Cherrington and the legislative and political effort under General Superintendent F. Scott McBride. The McBride organization remains in the Bilas building. The Cherrington organization opened up much handsomer quarters in the Hotel Disson nearby, where Just Steuart handles publicity and research for Cherrington alongside the office of the league's college prohibition organization.

Both League and Association regard their business as good and that their followers have been more than ever worked up over the fight since election.

Congressman Edgar Howard of Nebraska is one member of the House who isn't afraid to tell his constituents that he still loves his goodnight Virginia toddy. In the last campaign he told his audiences that he didn't want to deceive anyone. He promised to accept to every request of the government for appropriations to enforce respect for the laws, as he has always done. Except for the bed-time nearly as frequent as they were at one time, simply because doctors can recognize heart disease in its early stages and warn the patient against extreme exertion; and tuberculosis is actually decreasing in severity because a tubercular tendency can be recognized in patients before the disease has actually obtained its foothold, and the patient can be warned against becoming overtired.

The man who thinks he is too busy to have a health examination is the man who will probably die at an early age from some entirely preventable disease. A few hours now spent in learning the condition of your health and the right methods of living may result in adding many years of happiness and health to your life.

COMBINATION STOVE FINISHED IN GRAY PORCELAIN ENAMEL

Designed for Small, Compact Kitchen, Is Easy to Clean; Has Many Good Features.

One feature of a modern, thoroughly tested combination range is a porcelain enamel finish in a pleasing gray. This finish is as washable as any dish, it will not rust or crack, and it will last as long as the range. The enamel is fused in under high temperature so it really becomes, according to the manufacturer, part of the cast iron and cannot crack or chip off.

This range harmonizes with any decorative color scheme and adds materially to the brightness of the kitchen. An occasional wiping with a damp cloth is all that is required to keep these ranges bright and lustrous.

Designed to meet the growing tendency toward small, compact kitchens, this range occupies a space measuring forty by slightly less than thirty inches. It combines a coal range, a gas range and a hot water heater, and performs each function well.

Pipes, bolts and other obstructions upon which dirt and grease might accumulate are absent. It is furnished either on a low cabinet or right or left side as desired, and fits flush against the wall. Equipped with coal and gas water-back, coal and gas oven, gas broiler with pull-down rack, pilot light, one giant and three standard gas burners, this range may be equipped with an ash chute to drop ashes to the cellar.

BASEMENT CONVENIENT FOR A SEWING ROOM

A sewing-room in the basement is an ideal arrangement, according to the Holland Institute of Thermology, because it does not take up valuable space upstairs and is, if anything, even handier than a second-floor location. Such a room may be made light, warm, airy and convenient. Also, it is close to the laundry where the ironing board and iron are kept ready for pressing.

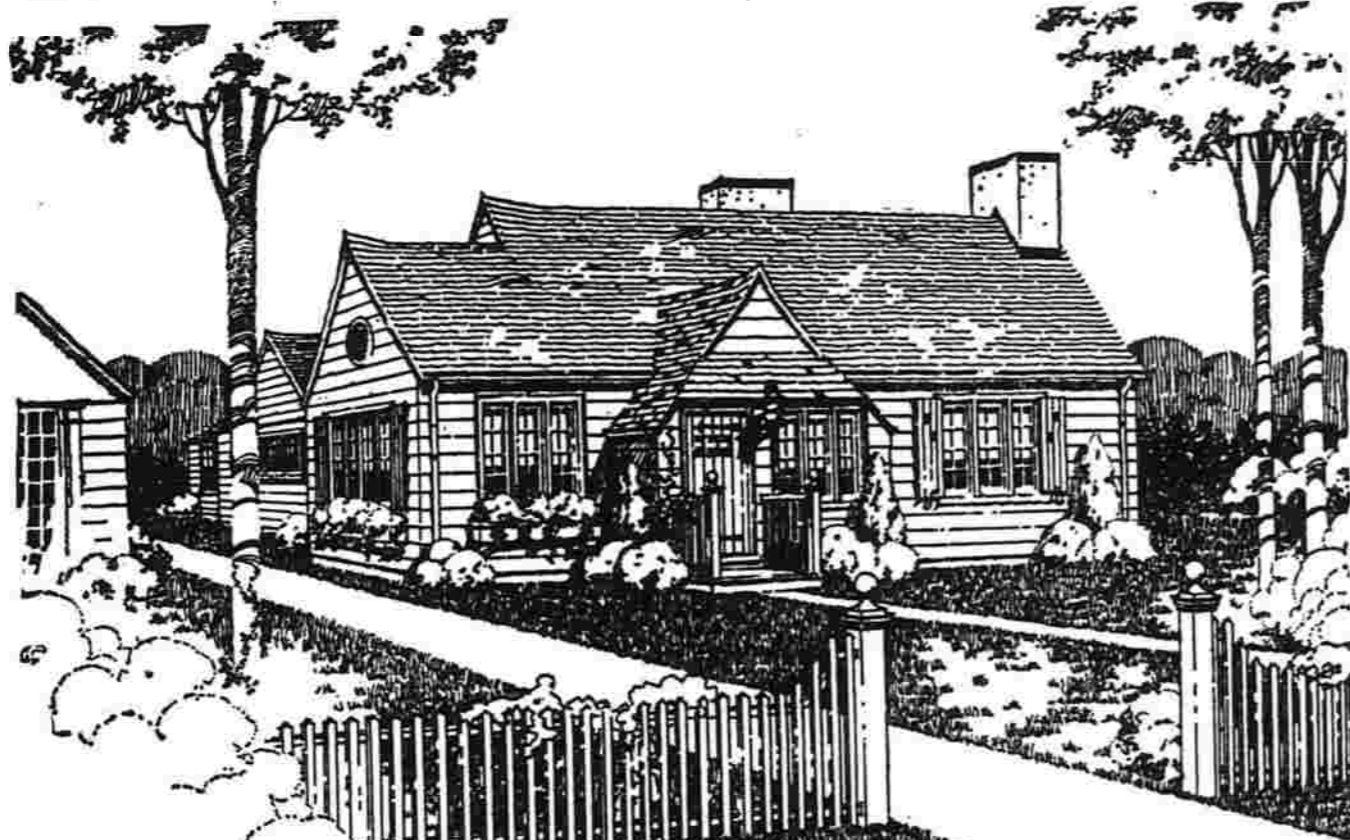

Unlike the basement workshop and gymnasium, the sewing-room should have painted walls and ceiling and an attractively finished floor. The floor-joists overhead are left exposed. This will present a pleasant appearance if the joists and under-flooring are painted in a light and pretty color-scheme. But the additional expense of ceiling and such a material with a matted surface of some neutral tone may eliminate the need of painting.

An excellent treatment for the floor would be battleship linoleum, cemented down and waxed. Or a thick rug might be laid. But if these things are too costly, it might be well to use inexpensive rag rugs of colors harmonious with the painted walls and ceiling.

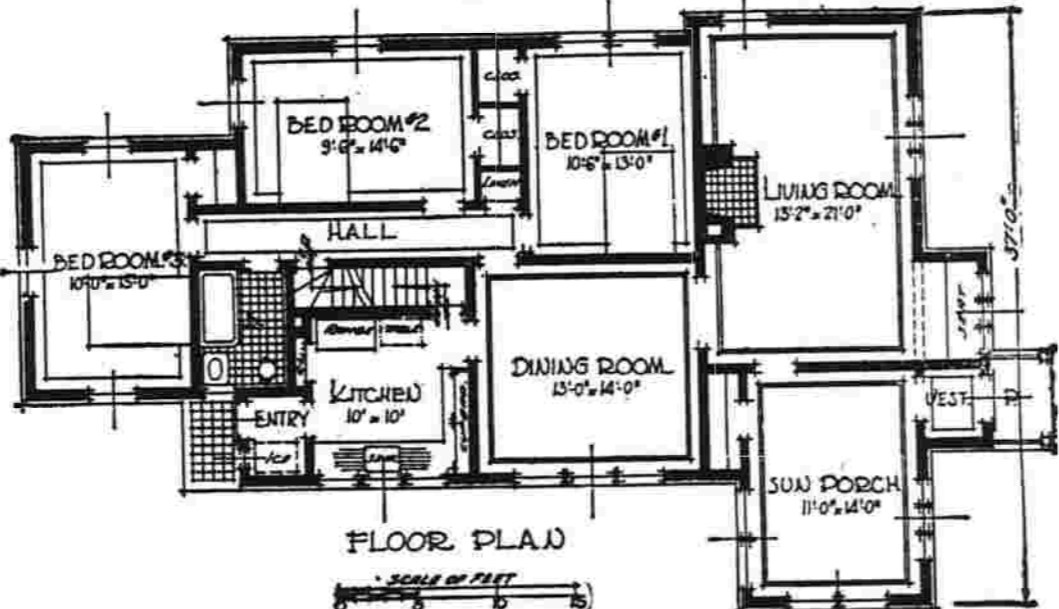

By all means build in a set of shelves to hold boxes and baskets of sewing materials. An old chest of drawers, enameled in an attractive color, would make a fine piece of furniture for such a room.

Examination of the basement will show an economical disposition of the basement space, admitting all the major requirements for this part of the home. The super-circulating warm air heating plant is placed near the center of the house. The coal bin is close to it, with filling access to the driveway on the outside. The laundry tubs are beneath the kitchen plumbing, for economy's sake.

ATTRACTIVE, ROOMY, PRACTICAL BUNGALOW

© R. C. HUNTER & BROS. ARCHITECTS, NEW YORK

Here is a house that is utilitarian and at the same time it is attractive. English in influence; it has two large chimneys that add an air of substantiality and comfort. A feeling of cheer within.

The house is entered through a small vestibule. No space is here given over to the hall; of doubtful value since its usefulness is very small. Then into the cheerful sun porch and thence into the cozy living room which has, as every living room should have, a fireplace of generous size. In addition to the fireplace, there is an attractive built-in window seat in this room.

The dining room opens from the living room on one side and the kitchen on the other, which kitchen is well equipped for convenience and comfort. The laundry tubs are in the cellar, as is the heater, cold room, etc. Three bed rooms with plenty of light and air, and good closets together with a tiled bath complete the arrangement.

The exterior of the house is shingle, and wide shingle sides, variegated shades of shingles for the roof. This is truly a nice neat home that will always be a source of pride and comfort to its owners. Costs about $12,200.

FURNITURE IS A GAUGE OF PERSONAL CHARACTER

Today the modern housewife chooses her furniture with care for she realizes that home furnishings are accepted indications of their owner's standing and good taste.

Furniture is often an accurate gauge of personal character. It speaks clearly and impressively to every caller in the home—leaving an indelible impression of the owner.

The chamber is an intimate room that reflects more accurately than other parts of the house the taste of the owner. It should always be decorated with care and the furnishings should be in keeping.

If it is daughter's chamber, let her select not only the design of the chamber but the colors and decoration as well. If her favorite color is blue, jade green, antique mulberry or rust, let her bedroom furniture be in any of these colors. Today furniture is finished to order and the colors of the rainbow are yours to select.

When a decorative motif has been selected for the furniture, the same design may be often carried through the room. The wall paper design, the figures in the cretonne drapes and the rugs may be chosen with the main theme in mind.

Often the furniture is finished in flat colors and a decorative design such as a spray of apple blossoms, is placed by means of decalcomania transfers. Often the housewife can modernize her own furniture. The paint and varnish stores are always glad to give advice as to the application of lacquers and varnish. Many of them carry the transfers in stock.

THIS HELPS SOLVE BATHROOM PROBLEM

There is an interesting combination bath and shower now on the market that is splendid for use in small bathrooms, and modernizers should remember it when they are figuring out how to make a bathroom of a closet and two feet of bedroom. It takes no more room than a shower bath. It has the appearance of an extremely short bathtub, but investigation shows that while the apparent height is no greater than the height of a bathtub, there is a portion of it sunk nine inches deeper into the floor. That is, there is a comfortable ledge to sit on, while one pads one's feet in a deeper pool.

WATCH HUMIDITY— HEALTH DEMANDS IT

The air in a house will evaporate from ten to fifteen gallons of water a day under normal conditions. Very often dry air in heated houses is conceded to be responsible for lower resistance during the winter and humidifiers do a great deal to remedy this condition. With the requisite amount of moisture in the air the temperature of the rooms may be kept in the neighborhood of 68 degrees without the occupants complaining of cold.

Proper humidity is important in the house and the home owner should install some sort of equipment to provide the needed moisture. It is necessary not only for the sake of good health but also to safeguard furniture, oil paintings, rugs, pianos and house plants.

Interior as Well as Exterior of House Needs Remodeling

MODERN EXTERIOR CALLS FOR MODERN INTERIOR

Vitally Important That Interior Give Comfort and Beauty

When the question of modernization arises emphasis should not be placed on the exterior lines of the dwelling to the disadvantage of the interior.

Too often care is taken with the exterior because this is the part that is seen by strangers. True, the casual passer-by judges the residence by the appearance of the outside, yet the house is made to live in and the modernization is complete only when the interior has been improved in a satisfactory manner.

Comfort and Beauty Needed. It is vitally important that the interior of the house give both comfort and beauty—comfort to meet the bodily needs of the occupants and beauty to feed their mental enjoyment.

When remodeling the interior of the house the arrangement of the rooms is of prime importance. The floor plans should be thoughtfully studied and alterations made to make convenient the various parts of the dwelling.

The kitchen and dining room form a unit of their own. So do the bedrooms and bath. Often these may be placed on the second floor of a house in the case of a bungalow or cottage they should be grouped together on the first floor. The living room forms a unit of its own, as do the entry, hall and the staircase.

Design your dwelling with the rooms of each group together. The bathroom, for instance, should be placed in its proper group and never as a part of another unit—off the kitchen perhaps as is often the case with makeshift alterations.

The arrangement by groups adds to the convenience of the occupants of the home. It increases their bodily comforts.

Study Each Room. Each room in its turn deserves careful study. The windows, their number, and location must be considered. Have plenty of natural light but let the windows effectively balance the wall space. Too many windows are as bad as not enough.

The floors of the interior will usually be of hard wood although in rooms of occasional or unimportant use, such as the attic, soft woods may be employed. Hard wood costs but little more than soft wood and when remodeling a wise plan is to use hardwood because of its durability, handsome appearance and true economy.

Electrical fixtures should be so placed in each room as to afford the best lighting. Plenty of electrical outlets are necessary, as floor lamps are scattered here and there in many rooms.

The kitchen—the workshop of the home—requires a special study. The sink, the built-in cupboards, the stove and the refrigerator must be placed to save steps. Each must dovetail with the others in aiding the housewife with her work.

The Decorative Scheme. The interior decorative scheme is still another problem. Each room requires its own treatment, and only a study of the room can determine the most effective design in wall tints, window and door trim, floor furnishings and furniture.

Yet the decorative scheme strikes the keynote of the home. Its treatment reflects the character of its occupants. It is vitally important that it be correct.

The Basement Deserves Thought. The basement is still another unit of the house where convenience is paramount. The heating plant and coal bins (if coal be the fuel) must be located with relation to the stairs from the main floor overhead and to the drive on which the coal truck will stand when unloading.

The laundry and drying room are important to the housewife and must be laid out with labor saving in mind. Here also will be found the workshop of the man of the house if he is handy with tools and the children's playroom.

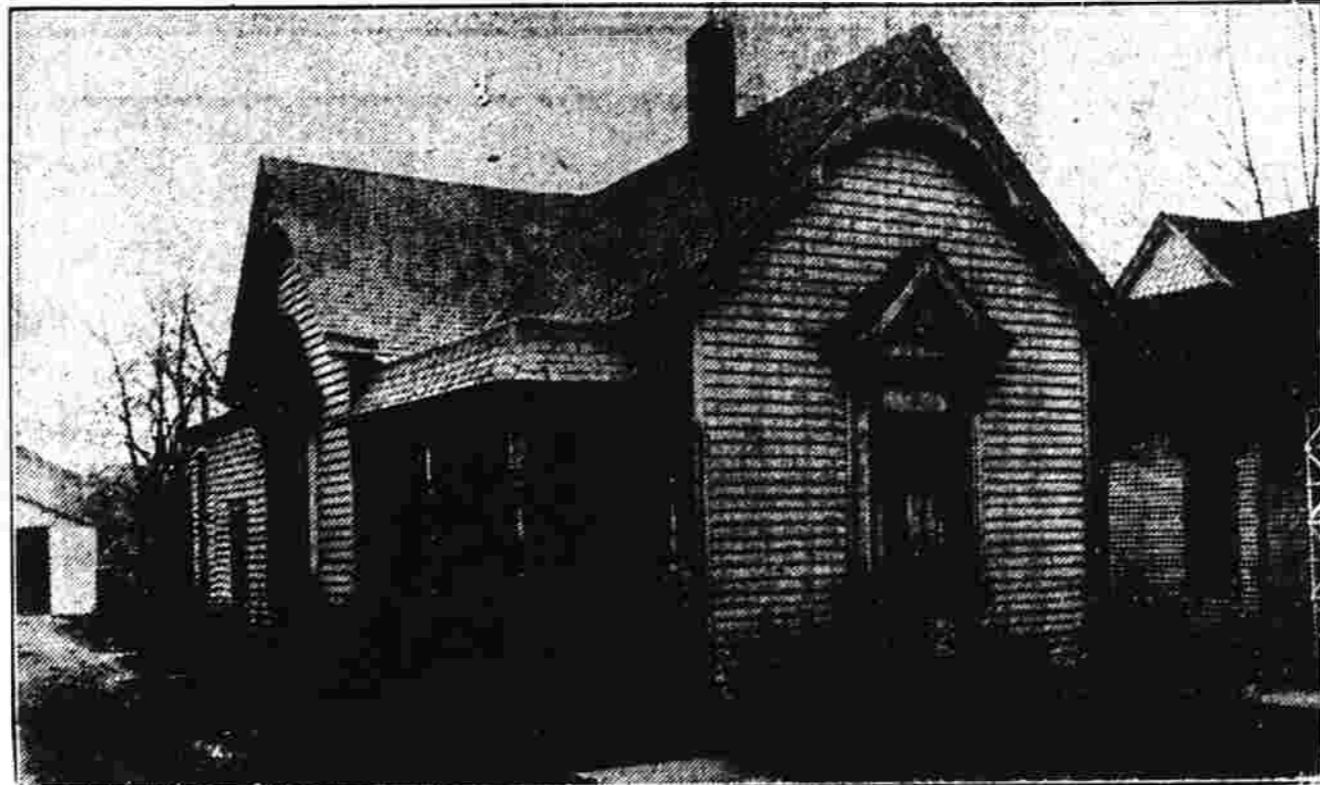

The basement can be made into a habitable group of well-lighted, cheerful rooms if thought and care are used.

Modernize the interior of the house, by all means, for neglect may mean lack of home comfort, conveniences and beauty. These are necessary to complete the fullness of life.

WHAT A COMFORT A SUN PARLOR IS!

The sun room becomes one of the most popular rooms of the house, and the wise home owner when modernizing should consider thoughtfully the advantage of such a room.

When remodeling, the open porch was turned into a sun parlor (above). Open porches are often enclosed when the home as the sun room with open windows is as airy as the average porch.

HOME TEMPERATURE CONTROL EQUIPMENT BEING WIDELY USED

Clock Type With Thermostat Keeps Uniform Warmth; Operates Automatically.

Automatic temperature control equipment for the heating plant has almost become a standard item. Owners are definitely turning away from the discomfort and inconvenience of old-fashioned hand regulation. Heat regulators are being widely used in the newer homes. The clock type automatic heat regulator not only relieves the owner of many unpleasant duties in connection with the heating plant, but also provides real heating comfort. The rooms are never overheated or underheated. A room thermostat, installed in the wall of the living room, responds to temperature changes you yourself would hardly notice. An electric control is made, operating controls in the basement which advance or check the fire.

It is a great relief to know that you will not have to apologize for rooms that are too warm, then run out to open the windows; and check the fire—or, on the other hand, to feel little shivers chasing up and down your spine, and wonder if your guests are warm enough. And it is still a greater relief to know that they will have warm bedrooms to dress in and a cozy house at breakfast time, that zero hour every hostess dreads. The entertainment of guests is the supreme test of home facilities.

Automatic heat regulation is not merely a life saver for social occasions. It functions all through the heating season making for the entire family. Children may be left alone with no fear for their safety—the heat regulator watches the fire and keeps the temperature just right for their health and comfort. Cool rooms for sleeping and warm rooms for dressing, provided by the clock-type thermostat, give a new conception of what is possible in modern heating.

No overheating means less fire danger for experts attribute a large percentage of residential fires to this one cause. In the type of installation known as "dual control," there is double protection against overheating, through a limiting thermostat placed directly in the heating plant. This prevents a sudden rise in temperature while the rooms are being heated in the morning and the room temperature is not yet high enough to operate the room thermostat in the usual way.

SLATE ROOFS AND KNOTTED WOOD

Slate roofs or slate covered roofs are the prettiest kind of roofs to have with a bright red brick house with white mortar. Knotted wood is coming back into style; stained with a natural stain, and used for trim or doors, or even paneling, it is regarded as exceptionally attractive wood, instead of worthless wood.

OUR EMERGENCY MEN

Many things have been known to happen affecting the service of making and distributing electric light and power. Storms, fires, high wind and street accidents are but a few of the disasters that have threatened, and, at times, have interrupted the service.

Our emergency crews are equipped and ready for instant action. They are trained in the ideals of constant service.

They take pride in their jobs. We are proud of the way they do their work. The reputations of public utilities are partially predicated on constancy—made possible by this sort of preparation.

Don't Overlook The Sun Room

Years ago when porches were considered to be quite essential to a home and the well-appointed house was always constructed with roomy porches. Of recent years, however, the open porch seems to be on the wane, its place being taken by the sun room or sun parlor, as it is variously called.

This change in design may be due to the influence of the city where the home owner preferred to do his lounging in privacy, or to a lack of space to spread out the structure.

The enclosed sun room has a distinct advantage over the open porch in that it can be used during the entire year. The use of the open porch is largely restricted to the hot weather of summer when the family can sit out of doors in comfort. At most the open porch was used three months of the year, the rest of the time being practically useless.

By enclosing the porch and filling its walls with many windows, the usefulness of the space becomes increased to a marked degree. During the hot summer months the windows may be opened and screened, serving as effectively as an open porch. Later when the temperature drops, the windows are closed and the sun porch becomes a comfortable, enclosed room. By installing a radiator or warm air duct the sun room is available during the coldest days. It virtually becomes another room of the house.

Cost of Enclosing Low. The advantages of the sun room over the open porch are immediately apparent to the home-owner who finds when remodeling that the cost of closing the porch is not excessive.

Its advantages far outweigh the additional expenditure. Thus the cost of enclosing the porch becomes an investment that pays big returns in use and comfort.

A single penny may produce 3,500,000 grains of pollen.

REAL CHARITY.

Cereal Springs, Ill.—"And the greatest of these is Charity." When the century-old log cabin owned by Mrs. Margaret Parks, widowed mother of five children, was destroyed by fire, neighbors came to her aid. While she attended the funeral of her mother shortly after the fire, 100 of her neighbors gathered together, built her a home, completely furnished it and canvassed the neighborhood for food-stuffs to stock the larder.

Plenty Of Closet Space Urged As Prime Requisite Of House

By MRS. HOMER CROY

I want my house to be beautiful, but I can easily be persuaded in favor of Colonial, Old English or the French farmhouse type, just so it be distinctive and the architecture true.

And here are some of the things I want. I want a dining alcove for use while my children are small and I want it adjoining the kitchen. If it can be accessible to both kitchen and dining room so much the better, for it can then be turned into a conservatory to beautify the dining room when the children have grown older.

I want things built into my house—conveniences that will give me a few moments' rest each day—the little things that architects think not worth while putting into their plans. When a woman suggests them her request is met with the advice that it will be better to put them in after the house is built instead of embodying them in the blueprints.

We women know what that means. It means we'll never get them.

Imagine a man building a laboratory or a factory without planning in advance for the labor that is to be performed within its walls. And yet our houses are our laboratories, our kitchens our laboratories.

There must be plenty of closets in my house. There must be a coat closet near the front of the house for coats for guests as well as for the family, and perhaps an extra one at the rear for the children's play coats, and this one large enough to accommodate a kiddie car and a scooter and the other wheeled accessories of childhood. Then I want a closet somewhere up stairs, probably the third floor.

lined with cedar, and a large storage closet off my kitchen for pots and supplies, and a cold storage closet as well.

There must be a milk closet set in the kitchen wall with two doors, one opening out and the other in so that supplies may be removed without having to open the door to the wind or rain. There must be a broom-closet on the first floor, and if there is room enough on the second floor, another one there.

In the bedroom closets I want poles and shelves and, if the closets can be deep enough, a box built at one end for holding blankets and quilts for each individual room. If this is not practicable then one large general closet will do for holding the household supply of comfortable and blankets.

Where a box seat is feasible in the bedroom, I want one installed, and I should like a shallow tray in the top of it for small articles.

Since my furniture happens to be Colonial in design, I want two built-in china cupboards in the dining room, easily removable should I ever want to sell or rent the house to some one whose furniture would not be in harmony with the period.

There must be an arrangement with regard to stairs whereby the maid will not have to get through the living room to answer the doorbell, or to get upstairs.

A dumbwaiter in a small house may seem superfluous to the woman who has never kept house with one, but I who have used one for several years would not build a house without one. It must run from cellar to attic and be large enough to carry a very large tray. The middle shelf should be hinged to hook up when tall articles are placed on the lower shelf. When the dumbwaiter is run up to the top of the house, the chute serves as a linen chute and there is no extra space required for this now quite common commodity.

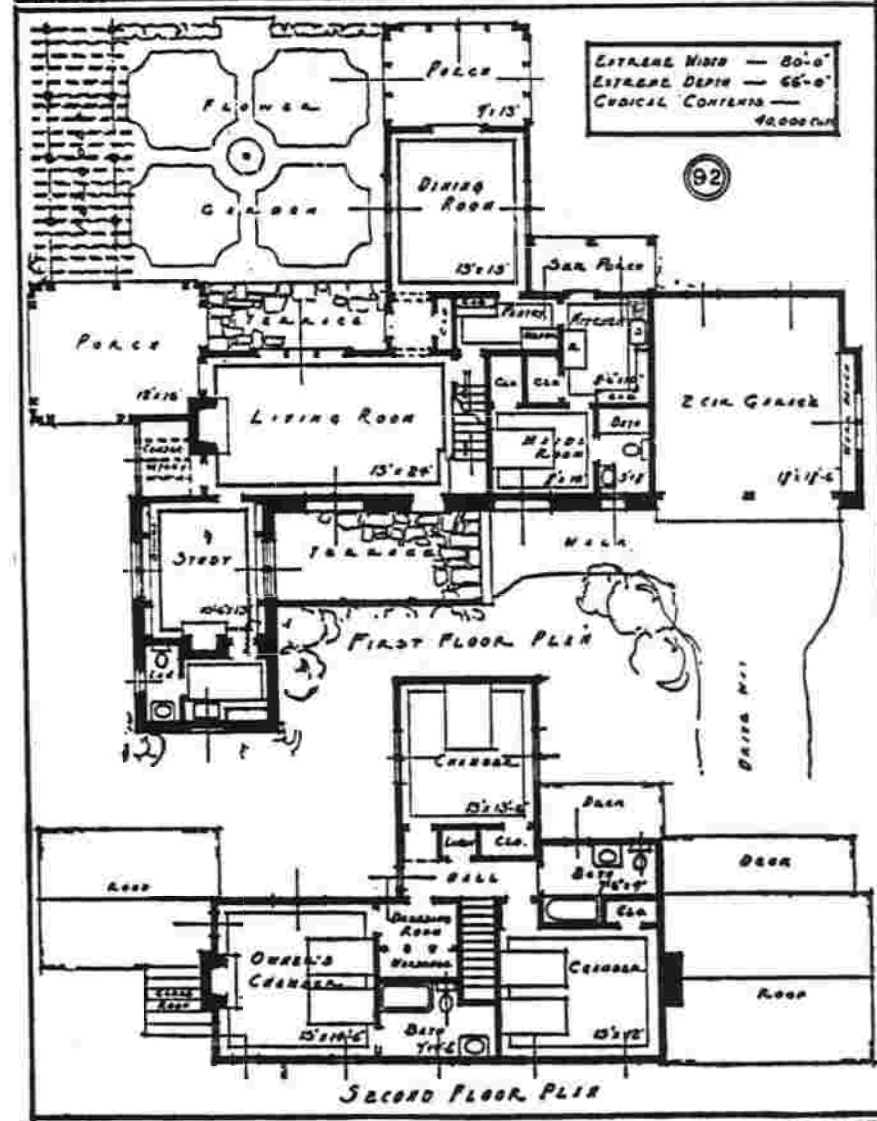

In connection with the dumbwaiter, there should be speaking tubes from the kitchen to the second and third floor halls. The use of speaking tubes and dumbwaiter will never be dispensed with by the busy housewife once she has grown accustomed to them.

I want my drainboards (one on each side of the sink), and my sink and my laundry tubs set at a designated height. My kitchen and pantry sinks and drainboards will be thirty-eight inches from the floor, and my laundry tubs thirty-four inches from the top of the tub to the floor. If my pantry space does not permit of a pantry sink, then I want my kitchen sink placed near the wall between pantry and kitchen, with a sliding door in the wall, so that dishes may be washed in the kitchen and set on a shelf or table in the pantry without extra steps.

I want cross ventilation in every room including the laundry, and it will be possible in almost every room if this feature is thought of well in advance. If there are not cross windows in my kitchen, then I want a transom over the kitchen door and I hope I may have an electric fan ventilator set in the wall to keep the air fresh and the room odorless.

In my kitchen and bathrooms I want tile. That part of the wall which is not tiled I want painted with a good grade of enamel paint that it may be readily washed. And I want color in my tiles, both floor and walls, for I have no hankering for a bathroom which makes me feel as if I were in a hospital.

LIGHT, AIR ADD TO THIS HOME'S ATTRACTIVENESS

By CORA W. WILSON.
For NEA Service.

There's high adventure in planning your house.

Wealth alone doesn't make a home, nor is its happiness measured by its size. A tiny bungalow may often make for peace and joy of living that a mansion never could achieve.

The Colonial house shown above is of wood construction. It is made of shingles with a shingle roof, heavy wooden shutters, small-paned windows and white stucco chimneys.

There are five rooms, a bath and lavatory, a large pantry, closets and a two-car garage on the first floor. The layout is extremely good for a family that likes large, well-lighted rooms and it is well-planned with regard to fresh air and terraces.

On the second floor is a large bedroom with a dressing room and cedar closets and a large black and white tile bath. A small hall separates this room from the other two bedrooms and bath. Linen closet and two cedar closets.

This is House Plan No. 92. For additional information and cost estimate, write Cora W. Wilson, 420 Madison Avenue, New York City. Be sure to enclose the clipping from this newspaper.

An incendiary fire destroyed a mechanical organ in a Chicago movie house. Police haven't even mentioned the theory that it was some Boy Scout doing his daily good deed.

WATERPROOFING GIVES STRENGTH TO CONCRETE

A new liquid integral waterproofing hardener and accelerator for concrete is claimed to permanently waterproof and harden concrete, cement and tucko of all kinds. It increases the brushing, tensile and abrasive strength of all concrete work, according to the makers.

Its function as an accelerator is to quicken the set of concrete and cement mortar and to lubricate the cement, making its workability easier.

By reducing the freezing point of concrete, it permits of work being performed at temperature which would otherwise prevent pouring of concrete or erection of masonry.

By increasing the bond of any new cement mixtures to all cement or concrete surfaces it increases the strength of laid-up and poured masonry walls, piers, partitions.

NEW IDEA IN PLUMBING DOES AWAY WITH ODORS

An odorless toilet is one of the newest things in the plumbing market—and one greatly appreciated by fastidious home-owners. By an ingenious mechanism this bowl is ventilated scientifically by air suction through a small water jet vacuum tube and dual trap. The two trapways make it absolutely impossible for any bacteria or germ producing substance or water to back up through these traps or pipe connections into the main water line to contaminate the water system. Nor is there any possibility of poisonous sewer gases backing up into the room. This odorless toilet is a very acceptable one; especially nowadays when we make every effort to make our houses weather-tight—and proper ventilation becomes a problem. Any assistance that manufacturers may give home-owners on this problem is sure to meet with success.

CELLAR HAVING ITS DAY

The cellar is having its day. It is being dressed up by leading architects and home owners throughout the country.

Stairways to the basement floor are being made wider, windows are being curtained, floors and walls

Painted cheerfulness is replacing gloom.

The old-time rust-laden furnace has disappeared. In fact, here is the real reason for the renaissance of the cellar. Grace, beauty and color, which have taken hold of every other portion of the house, have now transformed the old-fashioned boiler and cellar into something that is actually good looking.

Four hairs of good strength will hold suspended a one-pound weight.

John Akrigg, Local Man Tells of Life Among the Rough Men in Canadian Lumber Camps; Wild Timber Lands; Where Foot of Man Never Trod Before; How It Feels to Be Lost in the Big Woods for Three Days and Three Nights.

Did you ever stop to consider that every time you read a story of the wide open spaces; of rough men in strange places; of encounters with storms at sea and wild beasts on land and of adventures in frigid and torrid zones, that were it not for a writer being present, the story would never see the light of day. For the man to whom these adventures come is generally a silent man and left to himself no one would ever hear about them.

"Trader Horn" for instance was a man who knew his Africa. Were it not for the fact that one day he met an author his story would never have been written. Jack London went to the Klondike as did Rex Beach. They told about the characters they met there and so we got our pictures of that section of the North American continent.

It is said that every man, woman and child you meet has a story somewhere packed away in their brain but the trouble is to get it.

Met in Cities

In queer places these men and women are found and not always in the wilderness. The city shelters thousands of them and, for all you know, the man who carts away your garbage has lived a life of adventure that would put to shame those of the characters you read about in the present day best sellers.

And it is one of these men that today's feature article describes.

Real, Real Bad Man of the Woods Stalked His Victims on Crutches.

In all novels dealing with the Northwest there is a bad man hidden somewhere in the pages. But it is a safe bet you have never read of such a bad man as came under the observation of John Akrigg, who tells a story about rough men on this page today.

"I ran across a real bad man among bad men in my life in lumber camps," said Mr. Akrigg. "And this bad man was a cripple. From his waist up he was the most powerful man in all the north woods in my time. He had the torso of a giant. But his lower limbs were withered and he had to go about on crutches. It was marvelous to see him chop wood. He would balance himself on one crutch and sling an axe with the best of them.

"But when he was drinking he was a real bad man. If anyone crossed him he would say nothing but await his opportunity. Getting his man alone the cripple would trip him with his crutches when he was not looking and then fall on him. On the ground that cripple was a match for any three men living. He would beat his victim insensible and leave him there.

That man was feared in every lumber camp in the big woods country and foreman feared not to give him employment.

"I heard later he killed several men and was given life. He was a real, real bad man."

Camp Cook

since then until recently I always cooked for a living.

"The steamer I started off on was of the Furness Line and it plied between Canada and England. I finally located at St. John's, New Brunswick and made that my home. I remained there until 18 and then my real experiences started as I had decided to start for the west—and the west in Canada is the west.

COOK IN CAMPS OF LUMBERJACKS

FROM then on it was a series of adventures for Mr. Akrigg for he got work as a cook in lumber camps. In Manitoba. In British Columbia. In Vancouver. Along the Pacific coast and in the great northwest where the 'Mounties' have their habitat. Sleeping in fur sleeping bags, even indoors. Robbed of his savings and forced to start all over again to save up money to bring him home. Cooking on a steamer that made trips to China and Japan.

The North Woods! Let him tell about the lumber camps.

The Lumber Camps

"The lumber camps of the northwest are very tough places. To work in one of these God forsaken spots one must be tough. Miles from civilization. In the heart of the wilderness. Nothing but big trees and snow.

"The 'hicks' as the lumbermen are called are generally big, strong good natured men but when they get to drinking then hell is tapped. Those fights in the sleeping shacks! No rules of fighting. Bite and kick and gouge. When one man is down the other stamps on his face and those lumbermen wear spikes on the soles of their shoes—'caulks' they call 'em. It's a case for the coroner generally or a man is crippled for life.

"Before pay day the men amuse themselves with telling stories. These stories are generally greatly exaggerated yarns about big trees and fights with bears. Always there are one or two who can play a fiddle and they saw out reels and jigs while others dance. Most of the men, however, take out their jacks-knives and whittles. They are wonderful whittlers. That's the nice side.

Trouble Starts

"Then pay day rolls around and the men get to the nearest place where booze is sold and trouble starts. Then the fights start. They will not house somehow. I have seen them both off varnish to get the alcohol and drink that. The cook during those days keeps to his kitchen.

"These men are great eaters. They eat more in one meal than the average man eats in a couple of days. Just rough food. And how they crave for fat. In these cold latitudes men crave for fat. That is why you hear about the Eskimo-eating blubber. It is nature's way of keeping up the bodily warmth."

In Maine Woods

Years of that life and then back to the State of Maine in the U. S. where he continued to cook in lumber camps. Then three years of work on dredges out of St. John's.

"I was in two serious accidents on those dredges," said Mr. Akrigg. "Queer, wasn't it? In all those lumber camps I never was near death nor on steamers plying the ocean, but here in a small boat never more than five miles from shore I was nearly drowned twice when steamers rammed into us."

Reverting to the lumber camps, the subject of this sketch was asked if he ever was lost.

Lost For Three Days

"Yes. I was lost for three days and three nights in Miramachi, Maritime Province, New Brunswick. It is no fun to get lost in the big woods. I was on my way to a lumber camp and mistook one of the trails. There are no roads there. I walked for an hour and expected soon to hear the sounds of chopping in the slashing. Instead I could not see any trail ahead of me. I lost my head and wandered and wandered about for hours. I had nothing to eat nor any weapons to shoot game if there were any in the snow bound woods.

"Finally I came across a beaver dam. It was a little stream but I followed it for hours. I knew it would lead out somewhere where it emptied into a bigger stream.

"After three days and three nights I came upon a trapper's trap and stayed there until the trapper returned. He took care of me and later guided me to the camp. I don't know how many miles I walked in those three days but I had to

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 4.—Tin Pan Alley is rapidly changing its colorful tune.

The Wall street blues are being heard along the lanes of piano thumpers and vo-de-o-do singers. From one of Manhattan's picturesque maris, "the alley" is being whipped into a great mill; an industry which, even as it hums, knows that its old happy-go-lucky days are over.

When the talking pictures brought the theme songs into the national limelight, the voices of the bankers and the movie magnates could be heard whispering... "there's gold in them thar hills, stranger!"

And so, not so many weeks ago, it became known that Willmarks, for instance, had folded up—with a cool million for its trouble—and surrendered to the Warner Brothers.

If advance information I have received is to be trusted, within the largest deals in the history of the song industry. The rare old firm of T. B. Harms, so I am told, will also turn its properties over to the Warners—and the sum will be well up in the millions. Harms is one of the most valuable outlets for its arrangements with dozens of musical shows and music writers.

About town one can observe certain scurrying potentates from Hollywood—with plenty of bankers' gold in their jeans—getting ready for some large sized undertakings. Don't be surprised if you hear, for instance, that Irving Berlin has folded a fat check in his pocket—to say nothing of a tie-up with United Artists.

All such goings on are but preliminary to the eventual subsidization of "the alley" by the Warner song business. Already most of the major lyricists and composers have made at least one trip to Hollywood.

Recall, please, that Berlin has already ground out through these songs in a season. The latest was the "coquette" number written for Mary Pickford. And in years ago, Berlin rarely turned out more than one personally written number from his studios. Berlin will probably be announced by United Artists, and United Artists, as I have said, will probably be "tie up"—the reports say with Warners.

The theme song "racket" is just beginning to swing into shape. The Wall street investors in the movies had no idea how much money could be squeezed out of a single tune. Hits such as "Sonny Boy," which sold by the millions; like Johnson's, "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder," which peddled a million records alone for Brunswick; like

AMAZINGLY LOW PRICE

THE entire line of new Superior Whippet Fours and Sixes is distinguished by such beauty of design and richness of color as have never before been associated with inexpensive cars.

And Whippet is a big car, too, with plenty of room for you to lean back, stretch out your legs and relax in absolute comfort.

Mechanically, no other low-priced car has so many important advantages—full forced-feed lubrication, silent timing chain, big four-wheel brakes, extra long wheelbase, oversize balloon tires, invar-strut pistons, "Finger-Tip Control," higher compression engine giving more speed, pick-up and power—and, in the Six, a heavy seven-bearing crankshaft.
