

RUMORS PLACE HONEYMOONERS IN MANY SPOTS

Lone Eagle and Bride Have, Thus Far, Eluded News- paper Searchers; Friends Aiding Famous Couple.

New York, May 29.—With public fancy and unconfirmed rumor continuing to place them in any one of a score of spots in as many parts of the United States, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride remained definitely among the missing today.

All efforts on the part of energetic searchers to learn where the Lone Eagle and his bride were two days, the former, Anne Spencer Morrow, were spending their honeymoon, were doomed to absolute failure.

Had Planned Well
By some masterpiece of strategic planning, in which dozens of willing friends, pledged to secrecy, apparently aided, Col. Lindbergh has seemingly achieved the impossible. Though probably the best kept and certainly the most sought after couple in the world at the present time, they have somehow eluded all pursuers, and miraculously succeeded in attaining the supreme wish of all honeymooners—seclusion from the world's prying eyes.

Although all those intimately or remotely concerned with the flight or the family of Dwight W. Morrow, American ambassador to Mexico and father of the bride, continued to deny all knowledge of their whereabouts, there were definite indications today that to some persons at least, the disappearance of Lindy and Anne is not so very much of a mystery.

Are Well Hidden
A close personal friend of the flier and his bride, who declined to allow his name to be used even in connection with such a negative statement, made the following declaration to International News Service early today when confronted with the flood of contradictory reports purporting to reveal the whereabouts of the honeymooners: "You can put them anywhere you want to," he said; and the tone of his voice indicated the unspoken addition: "Because you won't be able to find them anyway."

As the hours passed and no definite word came through to tell where Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were passing.

AUTO JUNK YARDS MUST BE LICENSED

New Statute Goes Into Effect on July 1—Town Must Give Approval.

Every person who displays two or more old unregistered motor vehicles which are unfit for reconditioning and highway use is subject to the provisions of the automobile junk yard law adopted by the 1929 Legislature, according to interpretation of the bill by the State Motor Vehicle Department.

The new statute also states that storage places for used parts or old discarded material of cars, equal in bulk to two or more motor vehicles, shall be regulated under the provisions of the act.

Clean Up Now
To eliminate inconvenience for persons who, obviously, have no intention of doing an automobile junk yard business, the motor vehicle department, co-operating with State and City police, is seeking a clean up of such places before the law becomes operative July 1. Letters have been sent to 11 town and city civic and enforcement authorities asking co-operation in listing such storage places for old automobiles which might be included in the definitions of the bill.

The department will then ask all persons on the list not doing a junk business to get rid of the old material and avoid the formal inspections, application or licenses and fees which will be necessary as soon as the law becomes operative.

In the letter to the town authorities, the department points out that every business which comes within the scope of the definitions in the law must take out a license. Also, that "many of these places which apparently need licenses are probably run by people who have no intention whatever of coming under this act. They will be willing, doubtless, to clean up if someone explains the law to them and tells them how they can escape. Inspections Free."

A strong point in connection with this stand and in favor of making a full explanation, is that

THE TWO ATLANTIC PLANES

FIRST MEMORIAL EXERCISES TODAY

Survivors of Civil War Honored at H. S.—All Plans for Tomorrow Are Made.

With the wheels of industry at a standstill, all schools closed, streets and private homes bedecked with American flags, Manchester will pause tomorrow to pay tribute to the memory of its Civil War heroes. There will be the usual parade and exercises, the latter at Cheney hall and the Center park.

If the weather is favorable it is expected that several thousand persons will take part in the memorial day parade and exercises. Hundreds of others will head for their favorite shores or lakeside resorts early in the morning. There will be only one baseball game in town. That will be at Mt. Negro at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Memorial day ceremonies started late this afternoon when the few remaining Civil War veterans of Manchester were honored at the High school, where a special assembly program took place.

Today only eight of the original list of 234 members of Drake Post, No. 4 Grand Army of the Republic, are alive. They are Commander Lucius Plimney, Adjutant George M. Barber, Chaplain Rev. Charles E. Baker and comrades Jared Pearl, Chauncey B. Ellsworth, A. B. Pierce, Isaac Quinn and Oscar W. Prentiss. Rev. Mr. Baker lives in Stafford and Mr. Quinn in New London. All the rest live in Manchester. There are three other Civil War veterans here who are not members of Drake Post. They will also take part in the ceremonies. They are John M. Allen, Elmer I. Hotchkiss and Corodan Beebe. One veteran, Timothy P. Hodge of Glastonbury, died during the past year.

Veterans at M. H. S.
Superintendent F. A. Verplanck presided at the High School assembly program this afternoon and extended the official greeting to G. A. R. members as he has done for several years past. Principal Clarence P. Quimby spoke on the significance of Memorial day and there were two student speakers, Miss Sylvia Hagedorn speaking on "Our Memories of War" and Miss Eva Koehler on "Poems That Must Never Die." Miss Lora Hills read an original poem, "Our Honored Dead." There was a musical program by the glee clubs, orchestra and male quartet.

At the conclusion of the school program, the heroes of '64 were taken to the parlors of the South Methodist Episcopal church where Rev. Robert A. Colpitts presided over a full explanation, is that

FIVE HUBBIES HAS THIS LADY

Fourth One Has Her Arrested and Then Discovers She Has Married Another.

West Brookfield, Mass., May 29.—Arrested on a charge of polygamy, Mrs. Bessie Lee Balne Russell was in East Brookfield jail today awaiting the outcome of her investigation into the allegations by her fourth husband that she has five husbands.

William Lewis Dreyer, of Fairview, a World War veteran said he married Mrs. Russell in South Boston two years ago. Two days later, he said, she told him that a former husband, whom she believed dead had been found. Dreyer discovered that she had three other husbands before him and tried to have his soldier's pension of $45 a month transferred from his wife back to him. The fifth husband, according to police is Harry Russell, 41, a resident of East Brookfield, in whose home the woman was arrested.

FARM RELIEF IS DELAYING EARLY RECESS

House Must Yield a Bit on Measure or Congressmen Will Face an All Summer Session.

Washington, May 29.—Administration's pledge for enactment of a farm relief measure this spring, alone stood today in the path of a recess of Congress from June 11 or earlier to September 9. With the House enacting the tariff bill and the Senate insuring a vote this afternoon on the new emergency reappropriation bill, Congress will carry out the two most important steps in the administration's program. The tariff bill will go to the Senate finance committee for lengthy consideration while the reappropriation bill, once enacted by the House, will find clear sailing in the Senate.

House of Contentions
The farm bill, however, remained a subject of controversy between the two branches of Congress, because the Senate added the export debenture plan over the objections of President Hoover. Thus far, the House has refused even to consider the bill in conference so long as it contains the debenture. The Senate conferees have retaliated by refusing to take any other action until the conference has acted on all other sections.

There were rumors today of a pending compromise, since the House must yield a bit or there can

Unfortunate Mishaps to Both Planes, Delays Hop-off; Green Flash Stuck in Sand Before It Could Clear Ground—Yellow Bird Starts All Right But Develops Leak in Gasoline Tank—Coast Guard Plane Following Sends Out S. O. S. and French Ship Returns Safely After Flying Ten Miles Over Ocean—Flyers Are Dis- appointed.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 29.—Unfortunate mishaps caused the postponement until tomorrow of the international air Derby.

Running down the beach on the takeoff, the America-to-Rome monoplane Green Flash became stuck in the sand and before the work of dislodging the plane could be completed the tide had come in and Pilot Roger Q. Williams announced the postponement until tomorrow.

The flight of the Paris-bound French monoplane Yellow Bird was definitely postponed until tomorrow. The Yellow Bird, with a perfect take-off, today went ten miles to sea when a leak was discovered in her gasoline tank and she was forced to return hurriedly to the beach.

The French plane was humming 400 feet in the air above the Portland lighthouse when the tremendous vibration of her 600 horsepower motor opened a seam in the fuselage gas tank. A Coast Guard aviator, hovering overhead, saw the Yellow Bird turn back and sent out an S. O. S. distress call which brought a Coast Guard patrol boat to the spot. Both Coast Guardsmen followed the Yellow Bird back to the beach.

Armeno Lotti Jr., sponsor of the French flight was gloomy over his ill luck, said that he put back to save the lives of his companions but declared that they were determined to go to Paris and leave tomorrow when the break in the gasoline tank was repaired and when more fuel was put aboard.

FRENCHMEN RETURN.
Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 29.—A scheduled international trans-Atlantic air race developed into a medley of confusion here today.

The America-to-Rome monoplane Green Flash, rushed down the beach for a take off at 9:52 a. m. (E. D. T.) became struck in the sand.

At 9:58 a. m., the French monoplane Yellow Bird took off for Paris.

The Yellow Bird had proceeded a short distance and was suddenly turned around. Circling the beach, the French fliers landed. The Yellow Bird made a perfect landing. She experienced difficulty in getting altitude.

When the Frenchmen reached the beach they began climbing over the tops of their planes and began an examination of the motors.

The motors, however, were found to be running smoothly.

Would Not Talk.
Armeno Lotti, Jr., radio operator and sponsor of the flight of the Yellow Bird, refused to answer questions of the press. He said he had decided that it would be impossible for the French plane to start again until low tide tomorrow forenoon. Not only had the gasoline tank, which had cracked a seam, to be repaired but a thousand gallons of gasoline had to be brought to the beach for the refueling of the Yellow Bird.

WATER FOR FRENCH; WHISKEY FOR YANKS.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 29.—Provisions for the two long trans-Atlantic flights were placed aboard the French monoplane Yellow Bird and the American monoplane Green Flash, just prior to the takeoff here today. The provisions follow:

Yellow Bird—Two dozen bananas, three gallons of water and one dozen of toast beef sandwiches.

Green Flash—Five thermos bottles filled with coffee, two gallons of water, two roast chickens, one quart of whiskey, six apples, 12 oranges and 24 chocolate bars.

amphibian plane, which set off with the Yellow Bird, landed on the beach shortly before 11 a. m., with a thrilling story of the unfortunate flight of the French monoplane. Lieut. Melka said that the Yellow Bird was speeding along at approximately 120 miles an hour when, two miles beyond the Portland lighthouse, the French plane began to veer. Both Coast Guardsmen followed the Yellow Bird back to the beach.

Armeno Lotti Jr., sponsor of the French flight was gloomy over his ill luck, said that he put back to save the lives of his companions but declared that they were determined to go to Paris and leave tomorrow when the break in the gasoline tank was repaired and when more fuel was put aboard.

Explains Failure.
Lotti made a statement to International News Service explaining the reason for the failure of his first attempt to fly from the United States to Paris. He said: "I was forced to return because of a leak in my gasoline tank. The seam was caused by the vibration of the huge motor. I had figured my take-off time perfectly, although the Yellow Bird nearly touched the water when she left the beach she rose gracefully."

"I reached an altitude of 300 feet and then 400 feet. Soon I noticed on my control dial a huge consumption of gasoline which, I knew could not have been caused if all were going well."

sonality of Premier Stanley Baldwin, a real dogged John Bull type. They plead for "safer" first and a renunciation of "fantastic" schemes. They cite figures to show improved trade and an improved unemployment situation, and claim that economic conditions in general will improve only if they are continued in office.

Labor's Answer. Labor has countered any plan of the Conservatives and Liberals to attack them viciously as being revolutionary. Labor's policies have been toned down until they are no more than a pale shade of pink.

Unless the Conservatives obtain an absolute majority, at least 308 seats, Premier Baldwin has stated many times he will decline to form a new government. In that case the King can do nothing but call upon Ramsay MacDonald to form a labor government.

YALE'S FRESHMEN IN STREET RIOT

assors had battled police forces, and the police, duly warned and with reserves pouring in from every precinct, met the students by throwing lines across Chapel street at Temple street.

Used Night Sticks. New Haven's police force is made up largely of young men, hardly older than the students themselves, and the police promptly resorted to night sticks. The student mob retreated, first in good order, and then in hot flight with police sticks urging them to stand not on the order of their going.

The safest place the students could find was their dormitory section and they soon were there. For the rest of the night police did sentry duty along Elm street.

University officials today were calculating the damage and planning the usual assessments. Until every student has paid his standing in Yale will be questioned, and there is a possibility that all freshman sports will be called off for a year. That form of punishment was meted out recently.

Chief of Police Samuel Gordon was advised by the Manchester police commission this morning that it would not sanction a permit allowing the Memorial Day parade here to go on to East Center and Center streets, Chief Gordon therefor, issued a permit to the Permanent Memorial Day committee for a parade on Hartford Road and Main street only as far as the Center.

KEEP PARADE OFF EAST CENTER ST.

Traffic Congestion Induces Police to Refuse Committee's Report Today.

The controversy over the line of march around the local police commission advised the Permanent Memorial Day committee that the authorities here would prefer that the parade keep away from the congested area at the Center. He said he did not believe that the state authorities would grant a permit on such a thoroughfare as Center street on a holiday. The state authorities however put the onus of responsibility on the local police.

Johnson has had a considerable experience with M. H. Strickland in the electric refrigerator and oil burner lines.

PARKER SMITH MESS BRINGS MANY QUERIES

Building, a large combination apartment house and office building which has been considered one of the main reasons for the Parker-Smith trouble, was listed to come up in the Superior Court today.

It was generally believed here that no opposition to the receivership would be made though no one would admit the proposition. Those interested believed that the firm would make every effort to aid the authorities in getting the situation in hand and that since the state had asked the receivership, the state would be assisted in efforts to straighten matters out.

HARTFORD WORRIED. Hartford, May 29.—Hundreds of requests for information concerning the affairs of Parker-Smith Co., Inc., of New Haven poured into the office of the State Bank Commissioner here today, as news of the troubled concern spread throughout the state.

No Idea of Loss. The commissioner had no idea of the amount of loss the note holders might be called upon to pay. The sum of one million dollars has been mentioned but so far there has been no way of determining the sum.

OPENING DANCE AT BABB'S CONGAMOND LAKE

JUNE 1st Dance With JACK MOREY'S SINGING ORCHESTRA

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 29.—With their noses pointed toward the broad reaches of the Atlantic two big airplanes at 7 a. m. today were warming up their motors for a take-off in the greatest air race the world has ever known.

The planes are the American Green Flash and the French Yellow Bird. The Green Flash is bound for Paris.

Earth-bound for days because of adverse weather conditions, the airmen of France and the United States were enabled to start today because of a shift in the weather over the Atlantic.

Both planes had been on the beach during the early morning hours under guard.

They were wheeled down the beach and the motors started. Then began a long warming up process. More than half an hour was assigned by pilots of both planes to the motor warming process.

The tide was near ebb allowing a broad run on the beach for both planes. Because of her better speed the Yellow Bird had given way to the Green Flash and arrangements were made for the Green Flash to start 15 minutes before the Yellow Bird.

TOWN DOESN'T GET FULL CREDIT FOR ITS AUTOS

According to figures appearing in the directories found at the Manchester filling stations and garages this town is credited with being the home of only 1,021 automobiles. Whether this figure was arrived at by leaving out such vehicles as are considered ready for junking is not known.

However, the correct number of alleged automobiles in Manchester is estimated at 4,500. This total is divided as follows: Buckland, 112; Highland Park, 87; Manchester, 1,021; Manchester Green, 77; and South Manchester, 3,223.

These figures were compiled last year and it is pretty safe to say that there are a considerable number of automobiles not included in this amount.

PRESIDENT'S BOARD STARTS ITS WORK

May Take a Whole Year Before Commission Will Give Out Verdict.

Washington, May 29.—Given unlimited scope and all the time in the world, President Hoover's law enforcement commission squared away today to the monumental task of determining what makes the American people so lawless, and how to remedy it.

It will be a year, more likely two years, and perhaps even longer before the commission will attempt to report a verdict. Hearings are to be held, witnesses examined, expert opinions sought, statistics digested, records gone into. At the end, a voluminous report, perhaps several reports if the ten men and one woman comprising the commission are unable to agree.

The spectre of prohibition and what part it plays in the expanding crime record of the nation will stalk the committee's sessions, however much the fact may be deplored, and however much individual members may desire to minimize it.

Not Mentioned. Both President Hoover and Chairman George Wickersham carefully avoided direct mention of prohibition in their exchange of addresses, but the chairman later asserted that the relation of prohibition to crime most certainly would be considered and reported upon.

There were two striking and significant utterances by Mr. Hoover's remarks to the commission, and Chairman Wickersham's reply. The president said: "It is my hope that the commission shall secure an accurate determination of fact and cause, following them with constructive, courageous conclusions which will bring public understanding and command public support of its solutions."

Chairman Wickersham said: "We are under no illusions as to the difficulty of our task. We know there is no short cut to the millennium, but we have confidence in the fundamental honesty and right mindedness of the American people and their readiness to support sound methods of reform when the existence of evils is exposed and practical methods for their eradication submitted to popular judgment."

These paragraphs were being studied intently today by both the professional prohibitionists, who have been fearful that the commission might possibly deal Volsteadism a solar plexus blow, and by the anti-prohibitionists who have been equally fearful that the commission would...

ing their first honeymoon days, it became increasingly obvious that the filer and his bride had been planning their "getaway" for days or even weeks, and left no stone unturned to insure absolute privacy for a little while at least.

So far there has been nothing to indicate that any of the explanations of the "disappearance" which flooded the country yesterday has the slightest ring of truth.

More than 16 hours have passed since the couple was married at the Morrow estate in Englewood, N. J. Since then, there have been nothing but the wildest rumors. With the exception of those who know and won't tell, there is no one who has the slightest idea where Lindy and his bride went after they motored away from the Morrow mansion soon after 4:30 Monday afternoon, half an hour after their marriage.

Public fancy has carried bride and bridegroom to dozens of places, by every means of locomotion known—fast automobiles, private cars, luxurious yachts, small launches, seaplanes, amphibians and land planes. Only battleships, submarines and Zeppelins were left out of the range of possibility.

"Dummy" Planes. In the face of these reports, one rumor maintained that the honeymooners had outwitted everyone by sending "dummy" planes all over New York state to throw searchers off the track, and remaining themselves at some spot very near the Morrow home in New Jersey.

This rumor was based largely upon the assertion that Mrs. Morrow, another of the bride, was planning a large reception for the couple toward the latter part of the week, and for this reason the honeymooners were staying within easy motoring distance of Englewood.

But this, too, proved to be merely a rumor, unconfirmed and apparently unconfirmable. Plausible Report. One of the most plausible reports which cropped up late yesterday was that Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were on their way to the "Honeymoon Cottage" at North Haven, Me., in the luxurious yacht Trillora, owned by S. R. Guggenheim, a close friend of the flier.

The report was strengthened by the sighting of an "unidentified" amphibian plane in a cove on the Guggenheim estate on Long Island. An immediate search for the Trillora was made, and the yacht was found anchored in the Hudson river.

A white pennant with a blue ball hung from its mast, this symbol meaning that its owner was ashore. There was no guest flag flying, which maritime courtesy would have demanded if the Lindberghs were aboard, and until an early hour today, there was no unusual activity aboard the vessel.

The Epworth League will take charge of the program following the supper. There will be group singing and selections by a trio from the Maxwell Mandolin club. Mrs. R. W. Wilson will give readings and the principal address will be given by Stephen Klein, president of the league. Miss Ethyle Lytle is chairman.

Tomorrow's Parade. Wilbur Loveland is to be marshal of the parade tomorrow. He has appointed Walter Tedford as his Chief of Staff. The following aides have also been selected: Arthur Maldred, Edward Quish, Arthur Keating, Arthur E. Loomis, Howard Gould, Pearl Martin and John Jensen. They are members of different organizations taking part in the parade.

Included in the line of march will be a platoon of police, the marshal and staff, Board of Selectmen, Police Commissioners, Salvation Army Band, Company G. Howitzer company, Center Flute band, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Salvation Army and Boy Scouts, Sunnyside Junior Circle of International Kings' Daughters, Manchester High School band, school children, Silk City band, Co. F. W. FARM RELIEF IS DELAYING EARLY RECESS no settlement. The unexpected heat wave here in the last 24 hours, giving Congress a taste of what an all-summer season would mean, probably will have a peaceful effect upon both warring factions.

Debate Killed. The debate plan, however, has had its death-knell sounded. Admittance of the plan, which the president's Senate would eliminate if another vote were taken. This is at least his hope.

The Senate's next vote upon the debate will present a slightly different issue than the one which was adopted, which the president denounced. Then, it was a question of asserting individual judgment against the president's judgment. Now, it will be a question of having a debateless farm bill or having the farm bill without the debate.

National Origins Doomed. The president's recommendation for repeal of the National Origins Act appeared doomed. It never has had the endorsement of administration leaders on capitol hill, who fathered the law that goes into effect July 1, fixing immigration quotas upon the basis of National Origins. The proposed repeal incidentally has been rejected by the Senate immigration committee and the only way the subject can get before the Senate is by discharge of the committee—a highly difficult parliamentary task.

The fight over publicity in the Senate may be decided next week. There appeared to be a unanimous sentiment favoring publication of all roll-calls and an overwhelming majority for public consideration of presidential nominations whenever a majority so sees fit.

GIVE ADVICE TO BEAUTY SEEKERS OF HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood.—Several choice bits of advice to women who would be beautiful, and some interesting comments on beauty, issued from an informal discussion among several of the screen's leading male experts on feminine beauty in Hollywood today.

Millard Webb, noted director, who has spent four years looking for a beautiful girl, unloaded a deal of comment he has accumulated during his quest, which ended recently when he selected Mary Easton to play the leading role in his next picture.

Webb's advice was chiefly in reference to women who are inclined to be buxom, but his opening comment referred to women's knees in general.

"Knees are ugly and awkward," he declared. "Women should keep them covered up. They should wear their skirts below the knees."

Then he dwelt upon how fat women, or women inclined that way, may look slender.

"Women who are fat, or inclined that way, should avoid elaborate gowns. Smart looking women cling to plain lines on all occasions if they can't do without their ruffles and fluffs, they should put them below the hips, and the lower the better."

"If the limbs need slenderizing, they should wear dark hose. To unlovely arms, long tight sleeves will give grace and slimness. The upper arm is generally fat and homely, anyhow."

"Fat women should avoid figured materials, and wear black dresses. They should never wrap a necktie about the throat. If they must wear beads, they ought to have them on a long string."

The camera always takes the truth, said Webb, who photographed many beauties during his quest. And the truth is that no girl is 100 per cent perfect.

PLAN STILL ALARM HOOK-UP BY PHONE

Incidental to the establishment of the dial system at the Manchester telephone exchange there is to be a general hookup of all of the fire stations in the South Manchester fire district.

The system is to be so installed that in case of a still alarm the call can be taken at the headquarters on Spruce street and relayed to the other stations. Thus it will be known at each station that there is a fire, what part of the district it is in and which company is to answer the call.

This is expected to prevent two companies being called on by duplicate alarms. The chief will go out on all still alarms and if more apparatus is needed he will call it.

Add this to your list of smiles: As cold as a hot-roasted peanut in a ball park.

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his 47 years' practice, he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us it helped when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, its mild, gentle action is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

DON'T STAY FAT IN THESE DAYS

You see countless people who have gained new beauty, new health and vim, by fighting excess fat. Some have done this by abnormal exercise and diet, some in a modern, scientific way. Why not follow these examples?

There is a way based on scientific research. It combats a cause of excess fat which starvation cannot fight. That method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets, now used for 20 years. Millions of boxes of them. The results you see whenever you look should induce you to accept them.

Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the reasons for results. So there is no secret, no reason to fear harm. You will know that all the good results come in a natural way. Go learn them now, by asking your druggist for a $1 box of Marmola.

Vet Can Decorate His Own Grave Memorial Day

"I'm still alive, despite what the War Department says," declares George W. Woodruff as he toils at the meat block at his butcher shop in Buffalo. At the right is the official "death notice" his wife received and a picture of the grave that bears his name in France.

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer

Buffalo, N. Y., May 29.—George W. Woodruff, sometime private in the 312th Infantry, 78th division, piles his trade as a butcher in a combination meat market and grocery store at 3001 Bailey avenue here and spends no more of his time than is necessary in thinking about the things that happened to him during the war.

Nevertheless, Woodruff has plenty to think about if he cares to. He is a man whose name got down, somehow, in the books of death—and in the far-away American cemetery at Meun-sur-Yvre, in France, there stands a white cross with his name on it.

According to the United States government, Woodruff was killed in action; so this Memorial Day, like every other Memorial Day, has a special significance for him.

Can Decorate Own Grave
Still living, he has his own grave to decorate—that is, he has it if he could get to it.

Still living, he possesses an engraved certificate signed by the distinguished hand of John J. Pershing, bearing his name with a sober flourish and relating this gratifying statement:
"He bravely laid down his life for the cause of his country. His name will ever remain fresh in the hearts of his friends and comrades. The record of his honorable service will be preserved in the archives of the American Expeditionary Forces."

This certificate George Woodruff spread down on the meat counter for the perusal of his interviewer. He grinned.
"Funny, isn't it?" he asked. Then the grocer, across the store, called from the telephone:
"George, Mrs. Blain wants a couple pounds of lamb chops and she says give her some real lean ones."
Woodruff fixed the lamb chops and came back.

How He Enlisted
"I didn't think much of anything about the darn war when it first started," he said. "You see, I got married in the spring of 1917, and I just had my own business started—that was in East Otto, N. Y., then. So I didn't pay much attention to it for pretty near a year.
"Then a lot of guys began getting married to keep out of the war, and I didn't want to be put in that class. So I went down to the draft board and got moved up into the eligible class, and on May 1, 1918, I went to Camp Dix. Six days later I got a letter saying my wife had had a baby—a boy.
"We went overseas May 19, and after landing at Liverpool and crossing to France by way of Dover and Calais we went up into the Arras sector in northern France for six weeks' training. Then we were in reserve behind the British lines for a couple weeks, and then we went down to the St. Mihiel sector—that was on Sept. 12—to follow up the big drive there. And about a month later we went into the Meuse-Argonne.
"I suppose," remarked the interviewer, "that you saw considerable action then?"
"Yeah," he said. "We saw considerable action."
"He was silent for a minute.
"Funny," he went on, after a pause, "how they happened to report me killed. I wasn't even wounded—never was away from my company until after the armistice, when I got me a leave and went traveling. Say, I saw some nice places—went down to Nice, and had a swell time.
"But anyhow, about the first of November my wife, back home, sent a telegram from the War Department telling her I'd been killed in action on Oct. 23. She hadn't heard from me for several weeks, and naturally she had a pretty bad time of it for a while. . . .

"Then, a month later, she got a letter from me, dated after the date when I was supposed to have been killed. So she wrote me, right off, asking how come. Gee, I didn't know anything about it, but I knew I was alive, all right, so I wrote her right away. She felt a lot better then.
"I got back home that winter, and we had quite a reunion. I saw my kid for the first time. Funny thing—for a while she hadn't ever figured he'd ever see his old man.

"Well, about six months later my wife gets a letter from the Graves Registration Service. There was a picture of my grave in it, and a lot of blank forms to fill out, and a letter telling her that if she'd fill out these forms and return 'em they'd ship my body back to this country."

Woodruff handed a worn little photograph across the counter. It showed a white cross, amid a multitude of other white crosses bearing his name, with "died, Oct. 23, 1918" beneath it.
"I wrote 'em, right away, telling 'em I was alive, but nothing ever came of it," he added. "I guess they still figure I'm dead. I don't know."
He produced the letter from the Graves Registration Service; a much-folded, somewhat grimy keepsake, read and re-read many times.

Message of Condolence
One paragraph, addressed to his supposed widow, reads thus:
"You will be comforted to know that his body has been recovered, that it lies buried in a spot which is under our care and control, and that there will be no danger of its loss or neglect."
The American Graves Registration Service sent out a good many thousands of form letters like that. But this one, probably alone among its kind, was greeted with laughter when it arrived.
"Decoration Day?" said Woodruff, repeating a question. "Oh, I don't know—probably I'll take the wife and kids on a picnic somewhere."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 29, 1929

MEMORIAL DAY
 Tomorrow will be a day set aside from all others of the year for doing formal reverence to the memory of the many thousands of those who have died in the nation's wars. In every city, town and village throughout the United States there will be some set observance of the day, some definite recognition of its purpose. In these observances a relatively small number of persons will participate. The majority will dedicate the occasion, not to the memory of those who gave their lives "that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth," but to the personal enjoyment of a day off.

It would perhaps be a sign of a higher civilization if all the people were possessed of the imagination and the spiritual stature to now and then address themselves to solemnities and noble sentiment, to all join together on occasions such as Memorial Day in serious reflections on the lessons of war and sacrifice and abnegation. But the cold fact is that not all the people, nor anywhere near all the people, are thus made up; and there is no good end to be served by scolding them for not being different in their spiritual and temperamental structures, or in fulfilling trying to alter the pattern of their creation.

A very considerable part of the population of the United States—some because of the personal losses or the family traditions that bring the day close to their consciences, some because they are naturally given to sober thinking—will celebrate Memorial Day according to the intent in its establishment. That fact makes the continuation of the holiday worth while.

As for the rest, if they will but go sanely and decently about their outings and their diversions it is about all that can be asked of them in the way of honoring their nation's dead—and quite all that can be expected.

GARGANTUAN CITIES
 There is no doubt that the "city planning" idea which has taken such a powerful grip on the imagination of many American communities has much merit, but its virtue probably lies in its ability to arouse dormant fancies and to encourage visions of beauty, good taste and the fitness of things rather than in its capacity for prescribing future courses of conduct in municipal development.

Something like a million dollars has already been spent, over a number of years, by a group of engineers and city planners in preparing what might be called a schedule of development for the greatest city of all times, which is expected to include not only New York but a huge area and a vast population not embraced within the political limits of that city or even that state. The tremendous design provides for countless parks, bridges, tunnels, airports, express highways, water transportation routes, railroad belt lines, over a region including all of Long Island, several counties in New Jersey, others up the Hudson in New York state and part of Fairfield County in Connecticut, and calculated to become the home of twenty million persons by 1965.

It is easy to imagine the designers of all this as having had a wonderful time and as having become fascinated with and carried away by the grandeur of their conception. And perhaps some part of their planning may some day become actuality. But thirty-five years is a long look ahead in a period when ideas and manners and economic conditions are shifting so rapidly.

It is to be wondered whether the framers of these glorious plans have ever stopped to consider whether there is or is not any sound reason why twenty million people should live in an area which, if squared, would measure about 100 miles long by 55 miles wide; whether there is any economic justification whatever for the huddling of so many human beings within such a small space while there still remains limitless unused space far better adapted to the existence of most of them, and far better adapted to the uses of the industries on which most of them depend for their living, at many points a long way removed from this metropolitan area.

When there is so extensive a readjustment of ideas to the development of methods of communication and transportation, it would seem far from visionary to speculate on the likelihood of a future breaking up of such congested units as New York, Chicago or London into much smaller groups dispersed over the country, instead of a persistence in the economically and sociologically unsound practice of centralizing populations as they have been centralized in the recent past.

It is probably true that all the business of all kinds now done in New York—an enormous amount of which is industrial—could be done more efficiently, with less effort, to greater profit and infinitely more to the happiness and well being of the people concerned, if the great city were divided into a dozen widely separated parts. The centralization of a nation's business on so large a scale into so relatively small an area as the environs of one mammoth city is without any real basis save a habit of thought, a state of mind. And to assume that such a state of mind is going to persist until New York and its suburbs contain 20,000,000 of people is to assume a tremendous great deal.

Likely enough New York, even the New York that is pictured by these city planners, won't have half as many people thirty-five years from now as it has today. They will be living where they can live and work more happily and more efficiently.

SLOW DRIVERS
 The New York Herald-Tribune recently joined the ranks of those who insist that the slow and timid driver of an automobile is as great a menace on the road as the headlong, chance-taking individual who lacks sufficient imagination to have fear.

Admitting that the hesitant, unsure driver may cause an accident through vacillation or because he does the unexpected thing, we submit that such a driver almost never is the cause of a fatal accident. If the roads were full of only such drivers there probably would be plenty of bumps, but there would be few serious crashes. It takes the momentum of speed to make an automobile accident serious, almost always. And if the slow driver sometimes fools the fast one into a collision, it is certainly the speed of the latter that makes the accident serious.

However, this is largely academic, because the official figures do not support the Herald-Tribune's position at all. According to the report of Ethel Usher, statistician of the Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles, 1,190 accidents resulted in this state in 1928 from "driving too fast for conditions." This is apart from 2,213 other accidents attributed to skidding, very many of which would not have happened if the speed of the cars had been less. But in sharp contrast to the number of crashes from too fast driving is the number of such accidents caused by "driving too slow for conditions." Of these there appears in the report just a single one. One accident from driving too slowly, 1,190 from driving too fast. There you have it. The figures corroborate the logic.

We have experimented with practically uncontrolled speed in this state and we are continuing to experiment with it. Meantime, as the percentage of accidents in proportion to the number of automobiles goes down somewhat, the percentage of killings and the serious injuries goes up. Can you blame the slow drivers for that?

THE BEAR MARKET
 So many times has it appeared as if the period of real deflation in the stock market had arrived, only to be followed by an artificially stimulated revival of the insensate bull movement, that the present disappearance of large amounts of superheated air from the quoted "values" of speculative securities brings no certainty that actual values are likely to rule the prices of stocks once more and permanently.

At the same time it really looks as though the bokum and apple sauce out of which thousands of artificial fortunes have been built was about to shrink pretty well out of sight. The sooner the better for legitimate business. This is a prosperous nation. How long it would continue to be prosperous with its major industry consisting of writing up imaginary values against the names of mergers, and attempting to collect in lump sums the earnings of industries for the next hundred years, is something no one could tell.

There would not be much incentive for the brainy young men of the country to devote themselves to constructive business and industry, if the sure and easiest way to create a fortune were always to be the creation of new stock issues by combining old railroads and old factories and multiplying their capital stock—and that is precisely the temptation offered by these chronic bull markets.

For five years the whole country has been on a speculative toot. If the toot is really over, perhaps the nation will settle down to actual work. Which will be better for everybody, including the thousands who are daily going broke. They were broke before only they didn't know it and realization is the best thing that could happen to them.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, May 29.—There used to be a theory that leisure was bad for working people and that if they had too much of it they would become lazy and squander their substance, which would be a very bad thing.

That theory appears to have been knocked out for good and all by the recent report of the Committee on Recent Economic Changes, of which President Hoover, as head of the Harding conference on unemployment from which the committee was formed, was chairman. The committee paid a perfectly beautiful tribute to leisure in a section of the report which seems to have gone generally unnoticed. Increasing leisure and its utilization, the committee found, was one of the major factors in the last few years of prosperity.

Optional Purchases
 Becoming steadily less concerned with the primary needs of life, food, clothing and shelter, we now demand a broad list of goods and services which the committee calls "optional purchases." The margin between the cost of living and present-day wages plus the increased leisure to enjoy what used to be thought of as luxuries had tremendously increased consumption and hence production of "optional purchase" goods.

The committee has coined what seems to be a new phrase—"the consumption of leisure." Business has come to realize, it says, that leisure actually is "consumable." Furthermore, that people cannot consume leisure without consuming goods and services, and that leisure which results from an increasing man-hour productivity helps to create new needs and new and broader markets. The committee adds:

"The increasing interest in the fine arts and in science; the increased sales of books and magazines; the increase in foreign travel; the growing interest and participation in sports of all kinds; the domestic pilgrimages of some 40,000,000 motor tourists who use more than 2,000 tourist camps; the greatly increased enrollment in our high schools and colleges; the motion picture theaters and the radio—all these reflect the uses of increasing leisure."

The committee says in effect that the more leisure the more consumption of goods and services. It makes no attempt to suggest that the process should continue to a certain point and then stop.

Shorter hours for industrial workers have coincided with a rise in the time necessitated for household work resulting from increased use of devices saving time and labor, so that increased leisure has been general.

Henry Ford, who instituted the five-day week in his factories several years ago, believes that it is not eventually put into general application the country will not be able to absorb its production and stay prosperous. He believes that shorter working periods and higher wages are both essential, and Hoover's committee obviously agreed with him. The idea isn't exactly new, but it is significant that the best authorities are coming to realize it.

As Ford points out, people who spend all their time in factories or at other labor have little use for automobiles. But the more they get out and around the more they want.

Working Hours Decrease
 Latest figures showing the trend of working hours come from the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, which has reported on its survey as of 1928 of union wages scales and hours for 964,000 members of organized trades in 47 important industrial cities. The bureau reports a continuation of "the steady downward trend."

The average decrease between 1927 and 1928 was half of one per cent. This applied to bakers, building trades workers, chauffeurs and drivers, granite and stone workers, laundry workers, longshoremen, street railway workers, barbers and printers. Their hourly wage rate, in the same period, increased four-tenths of one per cent.

In Europe there are more than 125,000,000 members of the Roman Catholic Church.

"Now, If Twaren't for My Pesky Rheumatiz—!"

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 29.—While quite aware of many of the features which make Manhattan "bigger and better" than any other four-round circus, still it is a bit staggering to think that you live in a town where, for instance—

A child is born each four minutes.
 The telephone wires needed for intercommunication would, if stretched out, run some 30 lines to the moon—which is not exactly across the street.
 Some nine million people scramble daily for subway seats and about a million taxi fares are paid between dawn and sunset.
 The great buildings which dot the island in a vast population of more than six million and there are $81,818 such buildings.

Such statistics, gathered from a pamphlet just sent me by the New York Merchants' Association, are sufficient to make even a dyed-in-the-wool Manhattan gasp.
 But listen in for a moment while we broadcast a few more figures:
 Fourteen persons are married each hour. . . . Taking a yearly average, 23 new buildings are erected per day and six are torn down. . . . 7,000,000 eggs are consumed each day, an amount which would supply most cities for years. . . . Each second of the day, 200 persons pick up a telephone to make a call. . . . For there are 1,700,000 phones ready for use. . . . Food supply accounts for 1000 pounds per person annually. . . . And 2,800,000 quarts of milk are used daily.
 There are 800 theaters which can seat 350,000 persons. . . . 800,000 persons come to New York each year solely to attend conventions.
 More than a billion dollars' worth of women's clothes are made each year. . . . The New Holland tunnel handles 21,000 cars per day.
 And so it goes! A parade of figures, truly staggering when one contemplates the wheels within wheels which must be on spinning.

And I haven't begun to tell the whole story.
 Small wonder then that New York is the magnet that it is and that its lure extends to the most remote countryside.

And here are some items from a week's notebook: . . . George Gershwin, of "Rhapsody in Blue" fame, has temporarily turned down the piano for the paint brush. He's been doing quite a bit of intensive arting atop his Riverside Drive pent house, which, by the way, is said to be the last word in modernistic decoration. . . . Well, Peter Crosby, cartoonist, turned writer and penned "Skippy."
 The smart shoppes warn men to buy blue hats next season. . . . And I saw Johnny Weismuller, the swimming champ, doing an extra bit in "Glorifying the American Girl" over at Astoria the other day.

And down from Washington there comes a gag about Harry New York, the richest prisoner. Two Broadwayites were making a bet that he wouldn't keep his job as pharmacist. "And why not?" someone asked.
 "He can't mix ice cream sodas and make sandwiches."
 Saw Harry Thaw at the dance marathon with two new eye teasers. . . . He can still pick 'em. . . . Don't ask me how he does it. . . . Lincoln Colcord, who stirred up all the fuss about Joan Lowell, is going to be a book club judge himself as soon as a new concern gets going.
 And in case it should happen to interest the folks out in Houston, the youngster they picked out for the Smart Set "typical American girl" contest is doing very nicely in New York. Thank you. Arriving as a contest figure, Miss Carlisle landed herself a job with one of the biggest advertising agencies, so they told me at the "typical" banquet for the typical girls the other night.
 GILBERT SWAN.

however, the stomach and intestines are practically empty of food, as occurs during the latter part of the night and early morning, it is possible that a large quantity of water swallowed at this time will reach the colon before being absorbed and this is a valuable remedy in many cases of abnormal dryness.

Where the intestinal muscles are weakened or where there is a pro-lapse or a kink as the cause of constipation, the cure is not so simple and treatments by a doctor who understands manipulation and uses the sinusoidal electrical current are usually necessary. Deep massage is of special value in loosening adhesions and lifting prolapsed areas of the colon, or straightening kinks. The internal muscles may then be exercised by electrical sinusoidal treatments, a machine which contracts or relaxes the muscles as the current is alternately turned on and off.

Chronic cases should also begin with a diet of several days of acid fruit fasting and the use of enemas which, while they do not provide a real cure, are valuable in lessening the inflammation, and increasing the flow of lubricating secretions.
 After your fruit fast, begin your regular diet and eat large quantities of greens to provide the intestines with bulk. Even though much effort seems necessary in curing constipation, the reward of feeling good and being entirely free from the disease resulting from constipation should be of sufficient encouragement. One who is entirely free from constipation can enjoy life and is brimming over with energy.

RIVAL WIVES

by Anne Austin
Author of "The Black Widow"

"Why are you going to all this trouble to save Morgan's wife for him when you're in love with him yourself?"

THIS HAS HAPPENED

When NAN CARROLL, private secretary to ATTORNEY JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, discovers she is in love with Morgan, she determines to resign. She temporarily postpones her resignation, however, because she believes Morgan is going to need her more than ever in the coming defense of BERT CRAWFORD, a supposed friend, who is indicted for embezzlement.

Nan distrusts Crawford and IRIS MORGAN, beautiful wife of the lawyer. Crawford and ROY BLAND, treasurer, are accused of stealing funds derived from a whirlwind stock-selling scheme intended to finance a packing plant.

Morgan has implicit faith in Crawford, but Nan is suspicious and by means of a listening-in device manages to hear a conversation between Crawford and his switchboard operator, ALICE BELTON, which takes place in Morgan's private office. Crawford bribes the private office. Crawford bribes the cashier of the bank approving the check young Bland cashed just before his disappearance.

Nan transcribes the notes she took while listening in, secretes two copies in her desk, and tucks one folded copy into the pocket of her skirt. When Morgan arrives, Nan accompanies him into the private office, where Crawford, Alice and Morgan go over Alice's testimony. Morgan is delighted that Crawford has such a splendid witness. Alice unwittingly tells that Bland's secretary, GLADYS PAYNE, secretary in Crawford's office, is from South America. Crawford insists this is another evidence of Bland's clever planning. Nan asks to see Crawford alone. She confronts him with the transcription of his conversation with Alice. "I'll promise not to show this to Morgan on one condition," she tells the shrinking Crawford.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

"The condition," Nan Carroll began slowly, "is that you give Iris Morgan up!"

"Iris Morgan?" Crawford repeated the name violently, but in his violence there was relief as well as anger. "Do you mean to incite me?"

"I'm not inciting," Nan corrected him implacably. "I have an incontestable proof of your relations with Mrs. Morgan as I have of your witness-fixing. And the only price for my silence, in both instances is that that illicit relationship shall be terminated this moment."

"If you know so damned much, why haven't you tattled to Morgan?" Crawford snarled. "Because I am not a snitch, and I have his happiness at heart," Nan answered evenly. "He loves his wife. Knowing what I know about you and Iris Morgan would wreck his life."

"That being the case," Crawford caught up triumphantly, "you aren't in a position to make me keep any promise I might make you."

"You interrupted her sharply. I had finished," Nan told him firmly. "If you go on with Iris, the two of you will wreck his life anyway. If you don't give me your promise now to have nothing more to do with Iris Morgan, I'll place all evidence I have against you, both in connection with this case and as regards his wife, in Mr. Morgan's hands tonight. He will throw your case out of this office, and when he does so you will stand convicted in the opinion of the public, which includes the jury, you know. For everyone knows that John Curtis Morgan refuses to defend anyone of whose innocence he is not thoroughly convinced."

"God!" he choked, flinging up an arm to hide his convulsed face. "Well, and if you promise to leave Iris Morgan alone, and keep your word, I'll perform my duties as Mr. Morgan's secretary to the best of my ability," Nan said grimly. "Of course," she added, "you will not be foolish as to try to fix anything on me."

"Why should I?" Crawford blustered, color coming slowly back into his cheeks. "I'm innocent, I tell you."

"You needn't bother," Nan interrupted coldly. "I'm waiting for your promise, and that promise is that you will not again make love to Iris Morgan, that you will have no more clandestine meetings with her, that you will not communicate with her by letter or telephone."

"Hold on!" Crawford growled. "How am I going to let her know that it's all off between us, if I'm not to telephone or write her?"

"I was going to say," with the exception of one telephone call to which you make it quite clear to her that you find it expedient to drop the affair, you can tell her—and truthfully!—that someone 'knows all' and that it would be fatal to your chances of being acquitted to go on with the relationship. Make the call from a pay station, and be sure that you are not overheard."

"You think of every little thing, don't you?" Crawford sneered. "But what has me stumped is why you're going to all this trouble to save Morgan's wife for him, when you're in love with him yourself!"

Nan's steady brown eyes did not flicker, but her lips were white as she said, still in that deadly quiet voice: "I haven't received your promise yet, Mr. Crawford. Crawford flung at her bitterly. "What else have you left me to do? Give me a Bible and I'll swear on it, if you like!"

"I'll have ways of knowing if you fail to keep your promise," Nan said, ignoring his last words. "Goodnight," Crawford said.

"Listen, Nan," Crawford begged, suddenly humble. "I know Morgan sets a lot of store on your opinion and help in working up his cases. You won't work against me with him, will you?"

Nan, busy with papers on Morgan's desk, did not look up. "I am not working for the prosecution, Mr. Crawford, but for Mr. Morgan, who is unfortunately the attorney for the defense in this case. I shall continue to try to earn my salary by heaven, you're a cold-blooded little devil!" Crawford snapped, but he walked almost jauntily to the door that led into the outer office.

During the next two weeks, which ended in the opening of the trial of Herbert S. Crawford on the charge of embezzling funds of the Mid-West Packing Company of which he was president, Nan Carroll had good reason to believe that Crawford was keeping his promise. She had wrung from him, Morgan himself told her that Crawford had shown the good sense to discontinue his "friendly" visits to the home of his counsel, lest reporters comment too suggestively on the intimacy of the accused and his lawyer, and Iris Morgan's discontented, restless, unhappy face, when she brought its loveliness to her husband's office, spoke more loudly than any words of Crawford's could have done.

When Crawford and Iris met in the lawyer's office no one but Nan could have detected the strain and artificiality of their manner, but the pain and hunger in Iris' blue-green eyes when they devoured the blond hair of the accused and his lawyer, and the conviction that Crawford was keeping his promise, in spite of her contempt for Iris, Nan was sometimes moved to pity for the woman who was obviously so much in love with a man she could not have. "We're sisters under the skin, in that respect at least," Nan admitted with bitter humor.

When at last, on Monday, December 19th, the case was formally opened in Judge Hawell's court, the Morgans sat in a reserved seat in the first row, immediately behind those chairs that were traditionally sacred to reporters and feature writers. She had wanted to sit at the counsel table beside the defendant, but Crawford himself had cautioned her that it would not be wise, and Morgan had gratefully seconded him.

Nan knew that Iris stayed at the courthouse the whole dreary first day, sitting through the slow process of impaneling a jury for the accused, her husband to his office after court had adjourned.

"I believe I'll attend the trial every day, Nan," she said, moving restlessly about the outer office while her husband was engaged in a confidential telephone call in his private office. "I really think I should know more about Jack's work, and this is such a good time to begin—on a case in which I have a friendly, personal interest, you know—not some horrid, bloody murder trial. It was really quite interesting. The judge is an old dog. He had the press photographers snap us together—said he wanted to be sure HIS picture would get in the papers! Of course he was joking. And, oh, by the way, an artist for the Morning Star sketched me. I begged him not to, but he insisted—"

"Isn't attending the trial going to interfere with your Christmas shopping?" Nan suggested, going on with her typing.

"Oh, I finished that ages ago," Iris assured her. "My packages are all wrapped and addressed. I do hope you'll like your gift. Jack left the selecting of it to me this year, because of the trial. I do think they ought to have put the case over until after New Year's, so poor Bert could have had a nice Christmas. But the jury will give him the best Christmas present of all: if that awful Brainerd doesn't take up so much time that the case will have to go over until next week. Jack says the defense probably won't take more than two days. Oh, I hope it will all be over by Saturday! Bert's promised to play Santa Claus for Curt, but only if the trial is finished."

Nan made no attempt to answer or to comment, for the lump in her throat was too large to permit words to pass. Iris, not John Curtis Morgan, had selected her gift. Always before, at Christmas time, Morgan had bought and presented her gift personally, and now that she knew she loved him, her hungry heart had fed upon the certainty of receiving another proof that he held her dear as a friend, studied her tastes and wishes to give her pleasure. And now—probably Iris had bought her a bottle of toilet water or perfume, and she never used the stuff!

During the next few days, however, she had little time to think of Christmas, for the Crawford trial was hurrying on toward a climax. Thanks to the revelations of Alice Belton and his own thorough investigations, Morgan, as defense counsel, had suffered few shocks of surprise as District Attorney Brainerd presented his case to the judge and jury.

It was unquestionably a weak case, depending largely upon the unsupported testimony of Gladys Payne, who claimed that Crawford had investigated and financed Roy Bland's sudden departure for South America, and that Bland had told her that he had drawn the large checks against the bank account of the Mid-West Packing Company at Crawford's order and had turned the cash over to Crawford.

On cross-examination Morgan had so nullified Cashier Wolfe's testimony concerning his alleged telephone conversation with Crawford, in which Crawford was supposed to have given his O. K. to the last check for $100,000, that reporters and feature writers were freely predicting a quick vindication for the defendant.

Even Nan was shaken in her intuitive belief that Crawford was guilty. A man might be a scoundrel and a wife-stealer and yet draw a million dollars from the company he had organized. And then, at the 11th hour, fate, using so strange and ironic an instrument that even hardened old harridan must have chuckled, put conclusive proof of Crawford's guilt into the hands of the secretary of the man who was defending him, the man who had staked his professional honor on the innocence of his "friend."

Doctors say, soaring waste in baby's digestive tract is usually back of any failure to gain weight according to schedule. And the best proof, this is true, is the quick way, when you cleanse their stomach and bowels and put them in order with a few doses of purely vegetable, pleasant-tasting Fletcher's Castoria. ## The WOMAN'S DAY

It costs exactly one thousand dollars a month, $12,000 a year, to support the two little sons of comedian Charlie Chaplin, according to a recent probing of funds by the divorced wife of the actor, Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin.

Hundreds of thousands of more garden variety parents—the sort, perhaps who are managing to support families of five on about $15 a month—would be mighty interested in an itemized account of what each small boy needs and wants per month to the tune of $500.

AS WELL OFF.

Hundreds of thousands of parents too will cringe at the idea that their boys can't have the best. This cringing and fear that they are doing an injustice to their own offspring by not having $500 a month to spend on their little boys is a thing for which there is little doubt that the social set-up of today offers the poor boy about what it does the rich.

Every time little Charles Spencer or Sidney Chaplin have their teeth straightened or their hair and sideburns yanked out, their father pays an extra fat bill so that some poor little Jack or Jim can have his teeth straightened and his tonsils yanked out for nothing.

THE WOMAN SOBERED.

Hell hath no fury like the woman scorned, is a proverb rather contradictory to others which insist that woman's love is a sublime, changeless thing.

Here's Emily Pocheo, sometimes known as Emily Delphin, who is sending a man back to the pen because he loved a younger woman. The man is Robert Elliott Burns, till lately editor of "Greater Chicago" which was a radio station in charge of escaping from a prison road camp seven years ago where he was sent for helping "stick up a grocer" and getting $4.

ANYTHING ELSE.

The woman who "squealed" to police was 52 when he was 36. She helped him get back on his feet. He married her. Then he met a younger woman. He asked a woman to release him toward a jail. But the detectives came a few days later. He faces ten years on the chain gang.

There is little doubt that if he had beaten her or deserted her or committed any cruelty he would have been betrayed. It is "the other woman" that is always the last straw, whether woman number one wants him much or not. Jealousy is the most firmly implanted human trait.

APPEZZIZING DINNER MENU

A delicious ham loaf holds the honored position in a dinner menu outlined this morning by Mrs. Arra Sutton Mixer, home service director of the Hartford Y. W. C. A. Her recipes this morning included ham loaf, smothered potatoes, pepper and radish salad, and banana cake with opera icing. They are summarized in the following paragraphs:

Ham Loaf.
One package lemon gelatine, 1 1/2 cup boiling water, 2 teaspoons vinegar, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 2 cups cooked ham, ground (1 pound), 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon catsup, 1/2 cup onion pulp, dash of cayenne, cloves and nutmeg.

Disolve gelatine in boiling water. Add vinegar. Worcestershire sauce, mustard. When slightly thickened, add remaining ingredients. Turn into loaf pan. Chill until firm. Unmold on platter. Garnish with parsley.

Smothered Potatoes.
Six potatoes, 2 medium sized onions, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, boiling water.

Peel and cut potatoes and onions in thin slices. Arrange in layers in a frying pan. Add salt and pepper. Pour enough water to keep from sticking to the pan (about half way up on potatoes) cover and cook over a low flame until the mixture is soft. Add butter and onion. When the potatoes are done they should be only a small amount of liquid.

Pepper and Radish Salad.
1 cup green peppers, shredded; 1 cup radishes, cut fine; 1 tablespoon chives, chopped; 1 cup mayonnaise.

Mix ingredients together. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Banana Cake.
1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup shortening, 2 cups pastry flour, 3 eggs, 1/2 cup milk, 2 egg yolks, beaten light; 1/2 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Cream sugar and shortening until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, then flour mixed and sifted with baking powder and salt, alternately with the milk. Add vanilla, fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased layer pans at 375 degrees for 20 minutes. When slightly cooled, pour bottom layer with sliced bananas. Pour over Opera Icing, place second layer on top. Pour over remainder of icing, and top with sliced bananas.

Opera Icing.
Two cups powdered sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup canned or bottled milk.

Mix ingredients and heat slowly to dissolve sugar. Boil 2 minutes. When a little of the mixture is dropped into cold water, it should just hold together. Remove from fire; beat until creamy. Spread on

Hint On How To Keep Well by World Famous Authority

MAN WEIRD BELIEFS CENTER OF THE HEALTH OF MUSICIANS.

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

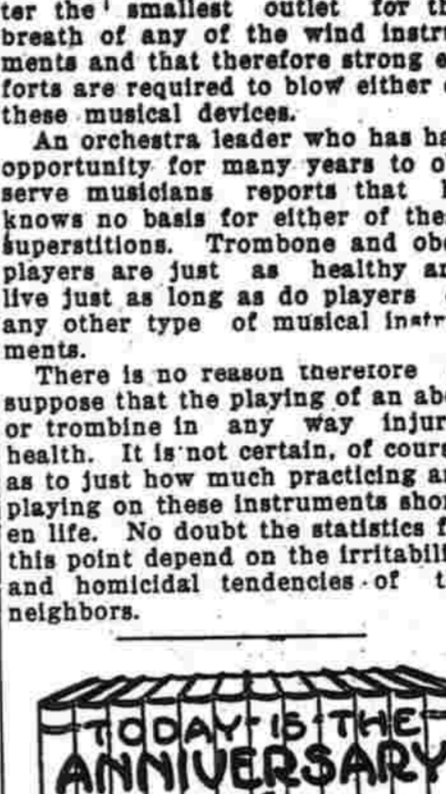

There is not, of course, any reason to believe that the blowing of any musical instrument will injure the lungs; in fact, it is more reasonable to assume that such a performance will exercise the lungs and thereby make them more capable and more healthy. Some of the superstitions associated with the playing of musical instruments constitute in themselves remarkable notions.

Many people think that all violin players have long hair and there is hardly a hair-headed violin virtuoso who does not spend at least five per cent of his income on hair tonics trying to justify this superstition.

It is argued that all players of the base horn are obese. It is said not only the trombone but also the trumpet and particularly the oboe interfere with the condition of the lungs. Probably the statement about the trombone and the oboe arises from the fact that the former has a great long tube and the latter the smallest outlet for the breath of any of the wind instruments and that therefore strong efforts are required to blow either of these musical devices.

An orchestra leader who has had opportunity for many years to observe musicians reports that he knows no basis for either of these superstitions. Trombone and oboe players are just as healthy and live just as long as do players of any other type of musical instruments.

There is no reason therefore to suppose that the playing of an oboe or trombone in any way injures health. It is not certain, of course as to just how much practicing and playing on these instruments shortens life. No doubt the statistics for this point depend on the irritability and homicidal tendencies of the neighbors.

On May 29, 1890, the judiciary committee of the House of Representatives reported in favor of amending the Constitution to permit woman's suffrage. It was one of the first shows of interest the federal government made in the suffrage movement. Nothing came directly on the report, but it moved several states to individual action and was a milestone in the "Votes for Women" cause.

At the time no state and only one territory, Wyoming, extended full suffrage to women. Wyoming's law went into effect in 1869.

The suffrage cause began in an organized way in 1848 with a convention at Seneca Falls, N. Y. It lost momentum, however, during the turbulent days of the Civil War. The constitutional amendment, which went into effect in 1920, is one of the shortest in the document.

It says, simply:

1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

2. Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article.

An ounce of prevention is better than an official probe.

The oftener a habit is repeated, the more lasting its effect is. What takes effort and thought at first, in a short time becomes reflex and is done without thinking at all.

That is why it is necessary for children to be taught good and regular habits when they are small. One of the greatest mistakes we make in training children is that we keep putting things off because we think they're not old enough.

Manners Begin Early.

Teach a child to be polite when he is young and he will be polite all his life. Allow him to be rude and uncouth, and, although later on he may be able to gloss over this lack, under circumstances when he forgets self, his early training is almost sure to manifest itself. It's the same old story of the set, the habit, character and destiny.

Not long ago, I met a very wonderful woman who had gained great prominence as a welfare worker. She was very quiet and uncommunicative and I put it down to a personality of woman will. I thought she didn't like me and wouldn't put herself out to talk.

But one of our friends in common told me the truth. She has a terrible complex about talking. She was an orphan and grew up with a family that was kind but illiterate. Later a relative took her and had her educated—very well educated—but if she forgets herself for a minute, she'll say "I seem" and things like that, and not notice it until it's too late. She's so sensitive about it that she has become very silent. She's pure gold and Miss Ethel Usher who is employed in the automobile department at the Capitol has returned from Albany where she attended a conference.

The Tolland Study Club held its annual banquet Friday evening at the Vernon Grange Hall. Vernon Grange patrons served a chicken pie dinner with all the "fixings".

After the banquet was served the members of the Study Club adjourned to the hall and Mrs. Mildred Mason of Hartford accompanied by Miss Alice Hall sang two groups of songs in a very delightful manner. Dr. Samuel Simpson read a humorous sketch on New England weather by Mark Twain and Rev. W. S. Stocking of Manchester spoke. The Tolland Study Club members were generous in their praise of the way in which Vernon patrons served their guests.

Patriotic societies from Rockville were represented at the morning service at the Federated church, Sunday. Rev. William C. Darby gave a very interesting patriotic sermon and at the close a service was held on the green to the unknown dead. The soldiers' graves at the three cemeteries were decorated by the societies with appropriate ceremonies.

Theaters

For today and tomorrow (Memorial Day), the State theater is presenting a most unusual and attractive holiday program. Two splendid features and a snappy variety of other diversions have been arranged for, and to say that they are to be presented amidst the cool and refreshing atmosphere made possible through the gigantic Typhoon Cooling system, the State will undoubtedly be filled at all performances.

The first feature presents the adorable Alice White, famed little flapper of the films, in her first First National Vitaphone talking picture, "Hot Stuff."

Miss White, who is recognized as the cutest personality in the movies, is seen and heard to the best of her advantages in this rollicking, breezy story of college life. Her voice is splendidly suited to the mannerisms of Vitaphone. She is supported by a cast including William Bakewell, Doris Dawson, Louise Esakewitz and Buddy Messenger.

The associate film feature is a William Fox production, entitled, "Blue Skies." Beautiful Helen Twelvetrees, a new screen star, has the stellar characterization with Frank Albertson in support. An MGM Oddities reel will also be shown.

Friday and Saturday the State will present Dolores Costello in the Warner Brothers Vitaphone talking picture, "Glad Rag Doll."

Middletown Trips Manchester Unexpectedly, 6-0!

WHITEWASH LOCAL SCHOOLBOYS FOR FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

Silk City Nine Fields Okay But Home Team Hits Much Harder; Coach Kelley Absent Because of Illness.

Manchester High's string of three successive baseball victories came to an abrupt and unexpected end yesterday afternoon when Middletown won the local team was trounced to 0.

It was not errors which paved the way for the downfall of the local City aggregation; in fact the locals played their best game of the season. Middletown, however, was hitting much better, getting 13 safe blows against six for Manchester. No less than half a dozen drives went over the heads of the steep chester outfielders up onto the steep bank next to a chicken house.

Manchester was landlocked by the fact that it played without the services of its coach, Tom Kelley, who was confined to his home with a bad cold. Faculty Manager Edson M. Bailey looked after the team which was directed by Captain Ernie Dowd.

Neither team scored for three innings, then Middletown cut loose with a barrage of hits which netted them a pair of runs in each of the next three innings. In the fourth was Manchester's best chance to score. Marcus Moriarty singled and Domenic Squatrito singled, but Lupien and Magnuson both hit foul flies to the third baseman and Bycholski struck out.

MacDonald pitched mighty fine ball for the winners allowing no hits in the pitches. Only two men got to third, Marcus Moriarty in the fourth and the same player again in the ninth.

Hugh Moriarty started on the mound for Manchester but was hit hard and relieved by Dave McConkey in the sixth. M. Moriarty and Squatrito were the best for Manchester while Cubeta, McAvey and MacDonald stood out for the winners.

Manchester's next game will be at West Hartford Friday afternoon. The latter is a strong favorite to win, being considered the best team in the league. Yesterday's summary:

CALLAHAN WINS

Los Angeles, May 29.—Mushy Callahan's junior welterweight crown was still intact today despite the desperate efforts of "Dummy" Mahan of San Francisco in a sensational title bout at the Olympic Arena last night.

The champion stopped Mahan in the third round, but only after Mushy himself had been floored twice. The wild-swinging Dummy knocked Callahan to the floor in the first round and again in the second. Dummy was trying desperately for a haymaker in the third when he happened to stagger into one himself.

In other classes. The same thing applies to the championship activities of our middleweight and welterweight title holders of the decade: Walker, Flowers, Greb and Wilson came into the middleweight title via official decisions. So did Dundee, Latzo, Walker and Britton in the class immediately below.

As in the case of Dempsey among the heavyweights, you have to go back to the days when Leonard was good to find a lightweight champion who could win and hold a title by the one-punch method. When Benjamin withdrew himself from circulation, the art apparently passed away with him. Jimmy Goodrich, by a combination of miracles, succeeded to the title and James couldn't punch his way out of a paper bag. He blew it immediately to Rocky Kansas, who was old enough to remember Grover Cleveland and couldn't punch with any great degree of vulgar finality, either. Old Rocco then passed along, leaving the championship with Sammy Mandell, who punches often but neither resoundingly nor with the slightest malice. Lynch and Villa, respectively at the expense of Johnny Buff. And, at that, he was ready for Monday's wash when this happened.

Fifty Years Ago. No, boxing isn't what it used to be and the funny thing about that is that it never was. Fifty years ago, it wasn't what it used to be. They were beginning to get away from the bare knuckle idea at that time and old timers felt that the race was softening. Twenty years later, the "fish fight"—so called because it always meant somebody's—was a thing of the past.

The forty-five round fight became popular but many were against it because they said that sometimes a man couldn't be beaten up sufficiently in that time to be convinced that he was the loser. Later, as the modernists began to exert their influence for good, the dance was cut to twenty-five rounds, then to twenty. Today, the championship distance is fifteen and most of the fights are decided on a ten-round basis, including two of the last three heavyweight championships.

By degrees, we have arrived at a state of culture, uplift and gentility. I trust that in the years to come the evolution goes no further. I have been splashed at the ringside with witchhazel, liniment, salva and false teeth. But I draw the line at d'jer kiss.

Good Old Fashioned Wallop Gone From Boxing; Ring No Longer Tough

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, May 29.—Any time one of those Professional Old Timers wants to tell you that boxing isn't as tough as it used to be, just reach right over and—well just reach right over and shake hands on it, because he has you licked. Boxing, in comparison with that of the hard boiled school, is about as tough as a female impersonator and, while the professor, Sir William Muldoon, says this isn't so, I suspect him of talking merely to hear his teeth rattle.

The proof? Easy? You answer that question by asking one that can't be answered, to wit: What champion, during the last five years or so, has won his title by a knock-out?

Greatness Measured. This, the only means by which a fighter's greatness was measured in the bad, bold days, no longer is necessary for the passage of a title from brow to brow. They dance deftly, they ruffle each other's eyebrows with licking lefts, they wrestle, they embrace, they punch that soothes and woos its victim into sylvan slumber? Where is it today? Quite so. It isn't.

You have to go back to the Dempsey of 1919 to 1923 for a heavyweight who was capable of winning and holding the title in the good, old fashioned way. The rest of them couldn't knock your feet off a desk. The recent succession of light heavyweight champions, Loughran, Delaney, Berlenbach and McGuire, fell heir to the title and defended it without, so far as I know, inducing anybody in particular to seek the axminster. Loughran was down twice with Lomski but got up; Berlenbach forsook the perpendicular with Delany but arose and went on to win; the next time out, Delaney won without the slightest evidence of vulgarity by either party; McGuire simply outstepped Sikki for twenty rounds. Therefore, you have to go all the way back to Sikki's knockout of Carpenter to get anything really decisive in this class.

BATTALINO-LORD SCRAP NEXT WEEK

The Eddie Lord-Bat Battalino bout, which will headline the next outdoor boxing show at the Bulkeley Stadium, Hartford, Eastern League baseball park, will be for the featherweight championship of Connecticut. State Athletic Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue has given sanction to designation of this battle as a title event. Commissioner Donohue says Lord and Battalino stand far out in front among the featherweights of Connecticut and that the winner of this bout is clearly entitled to wear the crown of state champion.

Lord and Battalino have started active training for this bout; both, in fact have been in training for a fortnight for this bout, the most important either has had, and now are getting down to the hard kicks on the home stretch. No bout, scheduled for Hartford in many a season, has created like interest. Battalino has long been Hartford's outstanding boxer. The great little East Sider made his entry into the boxing game as an amateur; he disposed of all opposition in this section until his name was known in amateur circles through New England and then he stepped up to Boston to win the national amateur featherweight title and to earn national fame among the simon pures.

Then came his crossing over into the professional end of the sport and he has been signally successful in this more exacting field. Knockouts have adorned his record from the early days as an amateur right through to the present time and he is confident he will kayo Lord.

Lord, on the other hand, is a greatly improved boxer. He defeated Tony Teto, the only boy ever to drop Battalino and recently he scored a technical kayo over Pancho Villa of New Bedford, conqueror of "Chick" Suggs. Denny McMahon is confident Lord will beat Hartford's pride, Battalino showed his real caliber in the Leto bout when he recovered from a knockdown to beat Leto so badly that the fight was stopped.

Sportdom Razzes Jack For Leaving Fugazy

Dempsey Takes $40,000 With Him for Two Months Time; Contract Gave Him the Cash Legally.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, May 29.—It seems that the boy friend, John Dempsey, has accumulated for himself a lot of incidental abuse on Broadway because of the manner in which he was deemed to have left Humbert J. Fugazy, the big burlap man from Bagatelle, in a moment of inspired reason the other day. Fugazy, it appears, was left with one thing and without another, the former being abrupt haste and the latter something like $40,000 that you couldn't buy sleeve garters with the difference.

This sum was advanced to John so that he could pay himself off as befitting his fancy over a period of one year. The idea was silly on the face of it, John being the smart fella he is. He simply got ultra-intelligent and paid himself off in two months.

Within His Rights

In so doing he was well within his rights, as provided by the terms of his contract. These demanded that Fugazy and Edwin Cole, the lad who protects millionaires against themselves, provide an outdoor arena in New York City by May 25, which they didn't, and failed at a very early date. Also the forty grand, at least insofar as their legal interest in it is concerned. Their personal interest may be designated as absolutely unswerving and it with are conferring avidly about it with barristers and other persons who can be relied upon to pull the rabbit out of the hat, provided it isn't a freshman's skull cap. However, they have no great sustaining hope about it, as John is believed to be in Wilmington, Del., today awaiting the first good train west and, besides, one contract says it is his money, anyhow.

The point is that the contract and Broadway say two different things. The latter's story is that Dempsey should have kicked back part of the money and that his failure to do so was not quite the "sporting" thing, although what Broadway can possibly know about sportmanship hasn't been clearly established.

Got No Break

Anyhow, they say that Fugazy never has got a break and won't unless he leaves his leg in a revolving door some day, whereas, according to the story, Dempsey is a millionaire and doesn't need money any more than Stetson needs a hat. This only goes to prove that Broadway has got John confused with the Hollywood millionaire on the same name. When he is anywhere east of needles, Arizona, he is just one of the boys doing the best he can. The fact of the matter is that he has plenty of money in Hollywood and he hasn't been there for five months.

No Warning Either

I wouldn't be surprised if he was working his way there now, but no matter. For Broadway hasn't finished with its indictment. The rest of it concerns the allegation that, whereas Dempsey knew weeks in advance of the impending break, he gave Fugazy no warning; that, in fact, he had his efforts removed from his matchmaker's office after the premises had been closed for the day in order that Fugazy might have no inkling of what was to transpire.

In short, there can be no doubt that the developments of recent date have left Dempsey with less popularity with the so-called "mob" in this town. He did what virtually every one of them figures to do at all times—make sure that he got the right change—but the boys have seen fit to disapprove of the proceedings. I'm not sure that Dempsey doesn't finish a winner on that end of it, too.

NOON STOCKS

New York, May 28—Speculative interest shifted over to the railroad stocks and the public utilities at the beginning of trading today. New gains of a point or two were recorded in a few of the well known stocks in each group, but buying demand in the pre-holiday session, with so many uncertainties hanging over the money market, was not very keen.

The drop in market prices of many of the speculative favorites has invited bargain-hunting, according to reports in the commission houses, and this has prevented further declines in the popular Motor, Steel, Copper, oil and manufacturing stocks. Uneasiness over Reserve Board rates is gradually driving down, since for the third day in succession call money is being provided at 6 per cent.

New York Central was a leader in the upswing of the Rails, with a 3/4-point jump to 187 1/4. Atchafalaya was all bought above 217 on reports of forthcoming 40 per cent stock dividend.

New Gains of a point or two were scored by Chesapeake & Ohio, New Haven, Western Maryland, Union Pacific and Frisco.

The drop in wheat prices was reflected today in lower prices for stocks of agricultural implement concerns. International Harvester dropped 3 points to 100. Advance Rumely, one of the speculative sensations of the year, dropped ten points to 37. The Preferred also lost ten points at 48, as the result of President F. P. Mount's statement that recapitalization had been indefinitely postponed. Earlier in the year Rumely Common was run up to 104 and the Preferred to 119.

The people of the United States spend approximately $50,000,000 a day for food.

RELAXATION NEEDED. If you are WEARY and TIRED, today's puzzle should relax you a bit. Far is an interesting eight strokes and one solution is on another page.

WEARY and TIRED crossword puzzle grid.

THE RULES. 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in pairs, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW HEN.

Who is the man, he thundered, whose record shows 100 per cent. efficiency in every job he's undertaken? Whose modesty is a by-word? Who has done more to cement international good-will than any other? Who is the man—stirred by his ardor, the crowd rose to their feet and roared the building with their cheers.

Advertisement says that the secret of poise is money in the bank. At least, it's the secret of balance. I have discovered that about the time a man begins to have good common sense, old age makes him childish, so he can't use it after all.
