

NEW PREMIER PLANS VISIT TO WASHINGTON

Ramsay MacDonald Will Be Assured Cordial Reception If He Decides to Come to United States.

London, June 10.—Following the first meeting of the new Labor government of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, it was learned this evening that the Premier is prepared to go to the United States to discuss Anglo-American naval affairs with President Hoover as soon as the new Parliament adjourns at the end of July, if President Hoover favors the meeting.

It is understood that the Premier will await information upon that point when the new American ambassador, Charles Gates Daves, arrives.

Washington, June 10.—Ramsay MacDonald, the new British premier, is assured of a very cordial reception in Washington if he decides to cross the Atlantic for a series of face-to-face talks with President Hoover concerning the feature of Anglo-American relations.

London dispatches indicating the British premier is preparing to come to the United States during the summer were read with eagerness in the capital today. Everywhere in administration circles there was manifested hearty approval.

Hoover Sounded Out.

There is reason to believe that President Hoover already has been sounded out on the proposition, and that the quasi-announcement in London was the direct result of the favorable response that quickly went winging back to London. Only a few days ago, President Hoover allowed it to become known that he would not visit California during the summer, as generally expected, but would stay here throughout the hot months. Today's London dispatches throw an interesting light on the change in the president's plans.

Reason for Visit.

While the whole field of Anglo-American relations would be served by a visit to Washington.

DRY AGENTS KILL INNOCENT DRIVER

Man and Family Were on Way Home After Visiting Their Relatives.

International Falls, Minn., June 10.—Charges of murder against two Customs border patrolmen were forecast today as state and federal officials opened an inquiry into the killing yesterday of Henry Virkula, 41, confectioner, as he motored with his wife and two daughters.

The officers in custody were Inspector Emmett J. White, who admitted he did the shooting, and Patrolman E. V. Servino.

Virkula was shot through the neck. Several other slugs from a sawed-off shotgun penetrated the automobile top, narrowly missing the children, who were curled up asleep on the back seat.

State to Prosecute

Prosecuting Attorney Davis Hurlbut declared today the state would seek to prosecute the border patrolmen if the coroner recommended that the pair be held for murder.

Federal officials, however, said they would attempt to take the case into the United States District Court if the men were indicted.

The Virkulas were returning from Chicago, where the girls have been attending school, to their home at Big Fork, Minn., 49 miles south of International Falls. En route they had stopped at Duluth to visit relatives.

Ordered to Stop

They were at a point about 15 miles south of the border, Mrs. Virkula said, when they were commanded to stop.

DUTCH RUSH WARSHIPS TO ASSIST COLONISTS

Band of Men Seize Governor and Commander of Garrison and Take Them Out to Sea.

The Hague, Netherlands, June 10.—The Dutch government today rushed preparations to send two cruisers to Willemstad, Dutch West Indies, where a band of men, alleged to be Venezuelan citizens, raided and "broke" the waterfront and carried the Dutch governor and the commander of the garrison to sea in an American steamer.

The foreign minister denies there is any possibility of conflict with Venezuela. He declared that the Venezuelan government was in no way responsible for the raid.

"Situation in Hand"

The minister of colonies issued a report of the Willemstad raid, adding that the Dutch government had notified that a group of Venezuelan Nationals raided the town, took the governor and commander-in-chief of the local troops aboard an American steamer and carried them out to sea, later returning them unharmed.

TROOPS RUSHED TO SCENE

Amsterdam, June 10.—The Dutch cruiser Kortenaar has been ordered to leave Newwied tonight for Curacao with troops, it was learned today, owing to the serious disturbance reported from Willemstad, capital of the island.

Government officials have been notified that a group of Venezuelan Nationals raided the town, took the governor and commander-in-chief of the local troops aboard an American steamer and carried them out to sea, later returning them unharmed.

FRANCE OPPOSES YELLOW BIRD HOP

Flyers, However, Say They Will Start Tomorrow If Fog Lifts Over Ocean.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., June 10.—Government opposition is being ignored by Armeno Lotti, and the monoplane Yellow Bird will probably take off from this beach for Paris, France, early tomorrow morning, that the French government has been opposing the proposed flight of the Yellow Bird across the broad Atlantic was revealed by Jean Assolant, pilot of the plane, following a conversation with Armeno Lotti, now in New York awaiting favorable weather reports.

Reason for Opposition.

The French minister of aviation in announcing that his department was opposed to the flight charged that the single-motored giant of the skies was incapable of carrying 13,500 pounds into the air. Government officials of France have branded the Yellow Bird as a model plane and one not fit for such a long journey where so many obstacles of the air must be overcome if the flight is to be a success.

Although it is not confirmed it is reported the government flatly forbids the three Frenchmen, now at Old Orchard, to attempt the flight.

Jean Assolant, in the absence of Armeno Lotti, announced the owner of the plane would not halt the plans for the flight.

TORCHSLAYER NEAR COLLAPSE; TRIAL HALTED

Campbell Close Appeals to Lawyers to Take Him from Room When Bullet Is Shown to Jury.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 10.—The imminent collapse of Henry Collin Campbell Close halted his trial for murder in Essex county court, today, when the bullet which ended the life of Mrs. Mildred Mowry was shown to the jury. Campbell appealed to his lawyer and was led from the room, tottering and about to collapse.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 10.—Less than half an hour was required today to select the jury to try Henry Collin Campbell Close charged with the torch murder of Mrs. Mildred Mowry. As the talesmen were called the defense "at sight" four were challenged by the state and eight by the defense.

None of the thirty talesmen was excused by the court. The other twelve were accepted quickly both by Prosecutor Abe J. David and Francis A. Vgordon, defense counsel.

The Jury.

Clifford A. Meeker, an auditor, of Westfield, N. J., was chosen Juror No. 1 and Foreman. The other eleven are: Frederick J. O'Leary, vice president, Linden; August A. Engle, draftsman, Elizabeth; Frank M. Darnes, Standard Oil employe, Elizabeth; Fred H. Bitter, accountant, Elizabeth; William E. Brown, insurance, Westfield; William J. Kennedy, Standard Oil employe, New Providence; Charles C. Milliken, clerk, Roselle Park; Charles W. Forbes, polisher, Elizabeth; Edward F. Colgan, foreman, Elizabeth.

Campbell, a bespectacled, gaunt looking man, whose eyes blinked while his hands shook, was led into the Union county court today where his wife awaited for him.

His Beside Wife.

He took a seat beside her, inside the railing and she leaned over and patted his hand, then held it while she whispered to him. He cried and she cried and the spectators shifted uneasily. Then an attendant came to take the woman she would have to leave and Mrs. Roselea McCree Campbell, the last wife of many, left Henry Collin Campbell Close to face a jury for murder.

CLERGYMEN GATHER TO TALK MERGER

100 Delegates from Five Churches Discuss Feasibility of the Movement.

Buckhill Falls, Pa., June 10.—Prominent laymen, clergymen, commercial and political leaders, assembled here today for the four-day sessions of the Institute of Religious Unity to discuss the feasibility of a merger of all the Protestant denominations.

Discussions of the duplication of efforts by the various denominations and the study of the general trend towards consolidation and "business principles" by church groups will occupy the attention of the delegates. Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregational and Reformed Lutheran church leaders, are among the 100 delegates present at the Buckhill Falls farm, in the Pocono mountains, where the daily conferences are held.

Business Principles.

The institute was called by J. C. Penney, chain department store magnate, who believes that "business principles" should be applied to the management of the Protestant denominations.

Discussions of the duplication of efforts by the various denominations and the study of the general trend towards consolidation and "business principles" by church groups will occupy the attention of the delegates.

Three questions will be studied by a commission which will in turn report to the general conference. They include:

1. Tentative statement on merger of Protestant churches.
2. Statement of what church machinery is needed for such unity.
3. The ways in which a united church can function more successfully than the various denominations.

Today's formal session was got under way at 2 p. m. Fred W. Ramey, Cleveland business man will preside.

HUB BARBERS QUIT.

Boston, June 10.—A strike of 500 journeymen barbers, affecting 200 shops in the greater city, became effective today.

Renewal of the former wage contract, which expired June 1, and introduction of the shift system in downtown shops were demanded by the union barbers.

SWEDISH FLYERS SAFE; TO RESUME OCEAN HOP

New Britain Flyer To Try For Record

Danbury, June 10.—Carl Dixon, of New Britain, will start from the local air field Friday in an effort to stay in the air for forty hours without refueling and so set a new solo flight endurance record.

Lieutenant Dixon's test will mark the opening of the air port.

HILL ANSWERS BINGHAM ON AVIATION SUBSIDY

Head of Flying Society Asks That Congress Appropriate 40 Millions to Make United State Airminded.

New York, June 10.—The American Society for Promotion of Aviation today came back at Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, with some hot verbal shots at the latter's declaration against the proposed $40,000,000 appropriation requested for advancement of more general use of the airplane for all commercial uses.

As carried exclusively in International News Service dispatches, the aviation promotion society announced a program whereby the $40,000,000 to be asked for yearly, would be used to purchase planes for amateur flying clubs throughout the United States. The plan corresponds to the expenditure of money for National Guard organizations in all states.

Bingham Against It.

Senator Bingham last week denounced the plan as a week of "European" aviation industry in study aviation conditions in Europe we will find commercial aviation handled so efficiently and productive of such wonderful results that not only have representative of large American companies gone to Europe to study their system, but strange as it may seem, Americans traveling in Europe have availed themselves of the opportunity to travel by air, whereas in this country they have not and will not use the airplane generally as a method of transportation.

Warning up to his subject, Mr. Hill added:

"Government subsidy in America is nothing new. It has been through direct government help that many of the industries of this country have reached their present stage.

Seeds for Farmers.

"Although I am not conversant with the aviation industry in this country, I believe that the government has reached their present stage.

NATIONS CONFER ON AVIATION PACT

Delegates Meet in Paris Today to Revise Treaty Agreed on in 1919.

Paris, June 10.—Delegates from the principal nations of the world convened in Paris today to revise the 1919 aviation treaty and make it conform with the conditions of aerial traffic as they are expected to be when trans-Atlantic flying is perfected to the point where it is a businessman's convenience.

W. F. McCracken, assistant secretary of commerce for aviation in the United States government, will ete the gigantic strides made by America as an argument that the old treaty is out of date, and that a new international agreement must look towards a situation scarcely pictured by the "dreamers" a few years ago.

Although refusing to style himself a "prophet," McCracken foresees the possibility of a trans-Atlantic airplane for steady and efficient use within five or ten years. He fails to perceive non-stop planes engaged in this traffic, but he does admit that a number of "mother ships," like military airplane carriers, might be able to stand out at sea and afford comfortable haven to "Europe-by-Air" tourists.

Germany's Suggestions.

The air Congress will be asked to approve revisions drawn up by Dr. (Continued on Page 3)

Forced Down by Broken Feed Pipe on Coast of Iceland—Were on Second Leg of Flight from Stockholm to New York—To Continue as Soon as Repairs Are Made.

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 10.—The Danish gunboat Fylla was speeding today towards Skaptaros, on the southeastern coast, with fuel and supplies for Captain Albin Ahrenberg and his fellow aviators who were forced down by a broken gas feed tube while attempting a trans-Atlantic flight from Stockholm to New York.

It was expected the Fylla would reach the stranded aviators late in the afternoon.

The weather is fine. The flyers will come to Reykjavik. They are expected some time during the night.

As no airplane was available in Iceland it was necessary to send fuel to Akapatoros by boat. The sailing distance from Reykjavik is 12 hours.

The Icelandic fishing boats Odin and Tor put in at Skaptaros and found the airmen safe and well.

According to word reaching here this afternoon the Odin was due to the Swerige-Ahrenberg's plane in low and proceeded eastward to meet the Fylla.

FORCED LANDING

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 10.—Balked by engine trouble in their attempt to blaze a new aerial trail across the Atlantic ocean from east to west, the Swedish fliers, Captain Albin Ahrenberg and two companions, were encamped today at Skaptaros, on the southeast coast of Iceland, awaiting the arrival of a relief boat.

The airmen, according to wireless messages received here, are safe following an emergency landing necessitated by fighting for hours against severe headwinds and storms after crossing the Feroe islands while on the second leg of the flight.

Captain Ahrenberg, accompanied by Lieut. Axel Floden and Mechanic Hans Ljungstrom, was due to arrive here this morning from Bergen, Norway, their first stop after leaving Stockholm, Sweden, at 6 o'clock Sunday morning.

The flight from Stockholm to Bergen was made without mishap, and after two passengers were examined, the plane took off again for Reykjavik.

Report Trouble

Not long after their departure wireless messages were received stating that considerable trouble was being encountered, and fears were not alleviated until definite word came through that a landing had been made.

Captain Ahrenberg first advised the radio station here that he was planning to descend at Ingolfshofdi, on the southwest coast, and the patrol boat Odin was immediately dispatched to his assistance. Later, however, it was learned that the plane had come down at Skaptaros, and a fast gunboat was sent out from Reykjavik, equipped with spare parts, fuel and competent mechanics.

Captain Ahrenberg has advised the Icelandic authorities that he needs gasoline and spare oil pipes to replace those frozen while fighting the storms. It is not definitely known whether he plans to continue the flight, but his anxiety to obtain spare parts and re-fuel the plane immediately indicates that he may get under way again as soon as possible.

Destination, New York

Ahrenberg and his companions planned to fly to the United States by way of Norway, Iceland, Greenland and Belle Isle, their destination being New York. So confident was Ahrenberg of success that he carried presents for Mayor James J. Walker of New York and for Scandinavian consular officials in that city.

The flight is being made in a Junkers monoplane christened "Sverige." It is similar in type to the "Bremen," in which the late Baron Guenther von Hoesfeldt and two companions flew from Ireland to Greenley Island, off Labrador.

GUS WALTZ
The most widely known trolleyman in Manchester changed his last trolley pole here Saturday when the old familiar cars gave way to busses.

NEW BUSES PROVE SATISFACTORY HERE

Make Better Time, Are More Convenient Than Trolleys; Are Much Safer.

Bus service connecting Depot Square, Manchester Green and the south end trolley terminus was inaugurated here yesterday in a satisfactory manner. With the correction of a few minor details, it is a foregone conclusion that the service will prove more beneficial and popular to Manchester people than the trolleys.

The busses will operate on the same schedule as the trolleys did. They were not used much until this morning when the usual mill, store and school rush came into effect again. The busses are making fully as good time, if not better, than was maintained by the trolleys, it was stated at the dispatcher's office. In fact, the 8 o'clock trip this morning was better than any previous record made by a trolley car.

Two Running

Two busses are in operation, one plying between the Green and Depot Square, the other from the latter point to the trolley terminus at the south end. Each has a seating capacity of thirty persons whereas the trolley cars used on these lines would accommodate at least fifteen more persons. The Connecticut Company, however, anticipates no difficulty handling the crowds during the rush hours. More or larger busses will be brought here if this proves necessary.

The biggest difficulty in the operation of the busses at present is the parking question. Stops are made at the same points where trolley cars previously stopped to take on passengers. Efforts will be made by the Connecticut Company officials to get permission from the police department for a short restricted area in front of the soda shop owned by Sperber and Turkington at the Center. At present, the bus drivers are forced to pull up to the curb wherever they can find an unoccupied location.

More Comfortable

Persons patronizing the busses report that they are much more comfortable to ride on than the trolleys which swayed from side to side and jerked one about in a fashion that reminded one of the

ACTOR KILLS ACTRESS AND THEN HIMSELF

Louis Bennison Shoots Margaret Lawrence in Her Apartment; Both Had Slipped from High Positions.

New York, June 10.—Two desperate lovers lay side by side on icy stone slabs today in the City Morgue.

They were Margaret Lawrence, actress beautiful, once a magic name along Broadway, and Louis Bennison, not without former fame as a two-gun cowboy on stage and screen.

Both had slipped from the heights, the actress from the very top of her luxurious penthouse apartment atop 34 East 51st street, in the shadow of the Park avenue of which she was once part, they brooded and drank.

Bennison played his last melodrama. He fired a bullet straight through the heart of his beloved as she slept. Then he knelt beside her body and sent a bullet through his own heart.

The ex-cowboy had left a wife and child in California to live with the blonde beauty. He was given a chance to "come back" by obtaining a leading part in "This Thing

FEAR A DEADLOCK OVER DEBENTURE

Democrats and Insurgents Plan to Combine to Retain Clause in Bill.

Washington, June 10.—The Democratic insurgent alliance, that frequently wrecked legislative policies of the Coolidge administration, was arrayed in battle order in the Senate today in a drive to retain their plan to give Congress the new farm relief bill over President Hoover's opposition.

If the coalition is successful, a deadlock over agricultural relief will follow as the House has refused even to consider the debenture. Congress likewise will face the possibility of an all-summer session.

To Kill Debenture.

Administration leaders, however, predicted the debenture would be stricken from the bill by the Senate Tuesday or Wednesday and that the measure would be sent to the White House in the form, approved by the president, by the end of the week. They likewise declared their plan to give Congress an all-summer vacation had not been abandoned and would be carried out late this week.

Democratic Meet.

This morning a minority met to discuss the debenture, a party course of action on the recess. Democratic agreement for a partition of debating time next fall on the tariff had been reached. If they can be assured of a sufficient time to debate their amendments to the tariff bill, they will agree to fixing a date for final enactment of the tariff at the special session and to an all-summer recess.

HARMONY BANQUET TONIGHT IN CAPITAL

Democrats to Gather in Washington to Greet New National Chairman.

Washington, June 10.—Several hundred Democrats will gather around a banquet table here tonight to commemorate the recent choice of J. P. C. Jones as director of the permanent party organization in Washington.

It is the first Democratic gathering of national importance since the election, and in the speeches to be made may be revealed how far the party has traveled, if at all, in the direction of harmonizing the differences of the last campaign.

Widely Attended. Despite the absence of some of the anti-Smith and anti-Raskob leaders from the south, the dinner will be widely attended.

Speeches will be made by National Chairman J. P. C. Jones, Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland, Rep. J. W. Byrnes of Tennessee and by Shouse.

Raskob is expected to announce the reduction of the party deficit to about $350,000, and to ask the party leaders to get busy in their respective state organizations for liquidation of the balance.

Called Love" which was to open tonight.

An autopsy will be performed today on the bodies of the two lovers and officials will decide whether the tragedy was a suicide pact or motivated by jealousy.

A note in a scrawling hand was found pinned to the door. It read: "The sunset will take care of us both."

"TIANNA." Mrs. Gertrude Chalare of Long Island City, life-long friend of Miss Lawrence, said the note was written by the actress.

Woman Was Asleep. However, the fact that the stage star was peacefully asleep at the time suggested some doubt as to the love pact theory.

Miss Lawrence, after reaching the grim agreement, slumped off into a stupor. Empty liquor bottles and glasses littered the fashionably furnished apartment.

The revolver used by Bennison bore his initials. His friends reported that he carried it around with him and that on several occasions he had talked of possible suicide as a way out.

Discovered by Friend. Mrs. Chalare discovered the tragedy. She had been given a pass key to the apartment by Miss Lawrence and said: "If you leave me it will be the finish for the pair of us."

Mrs. Chalare does not believe in the suicide pact theory. "Bennison killed her because she was through with him," she said. "She wanted to get rid of him. Margaret had him the affection she might feel for a worshipful, stray dog—no more."

There was an added grotesque element in the tragedy. Bennison, who is bald, had selected his finest toupee to adjust before he committed the deed.

Was 39 Years Old. Margaret Lawrence was born in Trenton, N. J. She was 39. She began her stage career in Philadelphia as a member of the Orpheum Stock Company. She appeared in Chicago in 1910 after making somewhat of a name in Des Moines, Iowa. Her first New York success was in "Over Night." Her last stage play was in "Possessions" from which she suddenly dropped out and was succeeded by the Actors' Equity Association after an investigation.

The comedienne had been twice married. Her first husband was Orson D. Munn, prominent attorney and society man. There were two children, both girls, now 14 and 13. The actress obtained a divorce in 1922.

Two years later, she married Wallace Edginger, the original "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in Los Angeles. She fled suit for a divorce in 1928 but Edginger died before the case was heard.

Miss Lawrence's mother and sisters were expected from Germantown, Pa., to claim the body some time today.

Louis Bennison was born on a ranch in northern California 45 years ago. He capitalized his cowboy training in his stage and screen roles.

Toonerville Trolley in The Herald's daily cartoon. The new service is to be known as the Manchester Green & Cross-town trolley.

Regular, dependable public transportation is indispensable to your community if you desire it to grow and prosper.

In reality, our patrons are partners with us in this enterprise because, with sufficient patronage, we can make it financially successful.

Two of the four Manchester men who operated the Green and Cross-town trolleys will probably be retained as drivers of the buses.

They are Harry Slayden and George Cleveland. Cleveland ran the cross-town trolley cars at night and Slayden was relief man working days on both the Green and Cross-town trolleys.

Gustave Waltz, Frank Nichols and Thomas Tomlinson, the other three motorists who took care of the trolley service on these lines, do not drive automobiles and they are almost entirely dependent on the trolleys.

Another feature which will meet with great favor among the children will be a cement drinking fountain which will rise about a foot above the water in the middle of the sandy beach on the east shore which is used exclusively for children unable to swim because of its gradual incline and lack of danger from drowning.

The fountain will be located in about two feet of water. It will not only be used for drinking purposes but will also serve as a means of keeping the water in motion thus adding to its purification.

Director Lewis Lloyd in announcing these improvements today stated that Frank F. Busch would again be the life guard at the pond this summer and that he would be assisted by August Milder. These are the same two men who took care of the pond last summer.

When it is necessary to make a charge of ten cents will be made to all persons over 16 years of age who bathe in the pond during the season.

Children under 16 will be admitted to their special quarters without charge.

Tags were given out freely by the police or until their supply ran out and it was fully a half hour before a lane could be cleared to let the cars get to the pond.

When it was seen that the fire was under control an effort was made to get the apparatus back to headquarters.

It was then that the trouble was found with traffic. One of the companies had run into the side yard and there was a lot of trouble in the streets cleared.

Turnpike is not too wide at the best and parking cars on both sides was bad enough, but with cars parked in the center of the road there was no room for the trucks.

In order to get the line straightened out it was necessary to start at the top of Union street and have one line of cars back up to Robert Weldon's home, while others were sent around the back of the house to make room for other cars to pass.

BIG IMPROVEMENTS AT GLOBE HOLLOW

Swimming Pool Officially Opens on Saturday, June 22—The Changes.

Bathers will find conditions at Globe Hollow pond immensely improved when the summer season opens a week from next Saturday, June 22, which is the day after school closes.

The Recreation Center has gone to considerable expense to make several important changes which cannot help but meet with favor among the hundreds of Manchester men, women and children who patronize the pond during the summer months.

From the standpoint of expense, the main improvement will be the installation of a sloping concrete retaining wall with steps from the dam to a point well past the end of the bath house.

Under the new system, the wooden lockers will be dispensed with and large wire baskets used instead.

This will enable a person to check not only his valuables but all of his clothing as well.

Another advantage will be the fact that under the former system it was possible to take care of only about 150 persons at one time, while the basket check system will accommodate no less than 400 bathers at one time.

This is expected to do away with the congested conditions which occurred during the hot spells last summer.

Electric lights will be another important feature. Always before, it has been necessary for those who leave the pond late to dress in the dark.

At present the water is out of the pond and before it is re-filled the bottom will be thoroughly cleaned.

The stationary raft and accompanying diving planks in the center of the pond will be re-conditioned.

This will include a new coat of paint and new planks on the raft. A half a dozen wooden tables are also to be put up under the shade of the trees on the western side of the pond.

For the use of anyone who wishes to carry a picnic lunch.

Another feature which will meet with great favor among the children will be a cement drinking fountain which will rise about a foot above the water in the middle of the sandy beach on the east shore which is used exclusively for children unable to swim because of its gradual incline and lack of danger from drowning.

DELAY IN ALARM HINDERS FIREMEN

gether with wooden pegs. It was 60 x 100 feet and built two and a half stories high, much larger than the building which was attached to this building was a one and a half story building 20 x 80 feet on both the east and west side.

Slightly to the west of these two buildings was another barn 20 x 40 feet and to the south, another barn a story and a half high and 40 x 60 feet.

In the latter was kept farming utensils of all kinds and had also been used by Mr. Krahn's son for the storage of his automobile.

When the fire broke out in the barn which was not in the line of the fire, the automobile was being used by Mr. Krahn's son at the north end of the barn.

Mr. Krahn himself was in Lebanon fishing.

All Destroyed. Connected to this is a small building which was used as a storage room and in which Mr. Krahn kept his own automobile and in the yards between the barns was a farm wagon. All of these were destroyed.

With the exception of the shed which was in the largest barn, the horses and cattle were not in the barns, but there was a large number of hens and young chicks which were lost.

The horses owned by Mr. Krahn were not all at his barn at the time of the fire as Mr. Krahn had been doing some haying in another part of the town and most of the horses were left there.

The cows had been let out to pasture and the sheep in which they were kept were destroyed.

Traffic Jam. The automobiles were so numerous that Chief Edward Coleman, who was not in his home when the alarm sounded and used his own car to get to the fire could not get out of the jam.

He left his car in the center of the road as did others. When it was seen that the fire was under control an effort was made to get the apparatus back to headquarters.

It was then that the trouble was found with traffic. One of the companies had run into the side yard and there was a lot of trouble in the streets cleared.

Turnpike is not too wide at the best and parking cars on both sides was bad enough, but with cars parked in the center of the road there was no room for the trucks.

In order to get the line straightened out it was necessary to start at the top of Union street and have one line of cars back up to Robert Weldon's home, while others were sent around the back of the house to make room for other cars to pass.

Tags were given out freely by the police or until their supply ran out and it was fully a half hour before a lane could be cleared to let the cars get to the pond.

PUBLIC HAS RIGHT TO DECLARE WAR

Ex-Ambassador Houghton Says Power Should Be Taken from Diplomats.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 10.—Stripping of the power to declare war from the hands of politicians and professional governments "who create the very conditions from which war arises" and placing of this power on the shoulders of the people is advocated by former Ambassador B. Houghton in his commencement address at Syracuse University today.

The former United States Ambassador to Great Britain declared that if the power to declare war is placed solely with the common citizens, "the ones who give their lives and pay the bills," there would be fewer international conflicts and more lasting peace in the world.

The former Ambassador and Count Friedrich Wilhelm Von Pritwitz and Grafon, German ambassador to the United States, were made doctors of law by Syracuse University today.

"Basically my reason is simple," Mr. Houghton said. "Our governments do not protect us against war. I need hardly refer you to the past to gain support for that contention."

"You have only to look about you today to see that armaments do not decrease and preparations for war go on unabated and the search for new and more effective means of destroying lives and property continues unabated. Yet we know that competitive armaments do not provide security or peace but lead instead to war."

The ambassador declared that the peoples would have an opportunity of declaring their feelings before a state of war is proclaimed by some means of a referendum. The speaker went on to say that while the majority of the people apparently want peace the governments continue to build up their armaments thus creating fear in hearts of their neighbors and as a result they also prepare for war in self-defense, he said.

SCHOOL GIRL STRUCK BY BATTED BALL

Catherine, seven years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan of 82 Wells street, third grade pupil in St. James's Parochial school on Park street, was badly injured when struck by a batted ball during the game yesterday afternoon and will be unable to attend school for a few days if any more this term.

This is the second accident of this nature to occur in Manchester during the last few days. In the case of Mrs. Tibbetts of North Main street, teacher of the seventh grade at the Manchester Green school, suffered a broken nose when struck by a foul tip while watching a game between the Green and the Robertson grammar school teams at the Community Club playgrounds last Friday afternoon.

Yesterday instead of a foul tip, it was a line drive that struck the little girl. She was standing in a crowd near the first base line and little chance to get out of the path of the ball which struck her a few inches above the left knee.

The blow was audible for several hundred yards and it was feared that the little girl's leg was broken. The knee was badly swollen today but so far as is known no bones were broken due to the protection of flesh at this portion of the body.

The little girl did not cry despite the severe pain. Ice was rubbed on "leg and in a few minutes she was black and blue spot as big as a baseball appeared.

BY ALLARD SMITH Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland.

RECENT developments in the building industry are compelling a revision of current notions of the trend of construction activities. During the first three months of the year, new building lagged perceptibly. This led to a rather general belief that it was being throttled by high money rates. In April, however, there was a vigorous recovery, reflecting the basic and widespread nature of present prosperity.

In fact, figures of new building contracts awarded reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation totaled $642,000,000 for the month. This was a gain of 22 per cent over March and the highest level reached since June, 1928. New work being planned totals $940,000,000, an increase of 13 per cent over one year ago.

Building contracts gained in all sections of the country compared with March of the northwest. The increase was 16 per cent over the preceding month and 54 per cent over one year before. Reflecting improved general conditions in that section. The southeast had a gain of 52 per cent over March, as did New York state and northern New Jersey.

High money rates have been held responsible for retarding new construction during the early months of 1929. However, the decline was confined largely to speculative residential building around some of the large metropolitan centers. Construction of industrial buildings and commercial structures actually have increased. Higher standards of living are tending to cause improvements in all classes of structures.

KIWANIANS DISCUSS OLD MAN'S CHANCES

Thoroughly Argue Out What Opportunity Worker Over 50 Has for Getting a Job.

"Has the man over fifty a chance in modern life?" proved to be one of the most interesting topics that has yet come before the Kiwanis club. It proved so absorbing that the time was altogether too short to allow all those who wished to speak on the subject an opportunity to air their views. It was therefore unanimously voted to give the time at a future meeting, probably this fall, to a discussion of the subject.

Elmer Thielen suggested the subject some time ago but there was no opportunity to consider it until today. He told some of his personal experiences in the effort to find employment for men who had reached the age of 50. Other speakers were George H. Waddell, Doctor D. C. Y. Moore, Thomas Ferguson and E. J. Holl. It was the consensus of opinion that the man over 50 without money and without a trade is in bad luck. The crisis of the pension system, which is breaking the backs of some of the biggest concerns today, and the working men's compensation law were also discussed.

On the other hand, it was brought out that the man with a trade stood a chance, as long as his health was good, of finding employment at a fair wage scale. Tradesmen who are receiving high wages should see to it that provision is made for the traditionally "rainy day," instead of spending all they earn during the sunny ones.

CHURCH EXERCISES FOR CHILDREN HELD

Children's Day Programs in Two Churches—Graduation in Other Departments.

Center Congregational church held promotion day exercises during the session of the Sunday school yesterday and will observe children's day next Sunday. Bibles, diplomas and Go-to-Church pins for faithful attendance were distributed to a large number of children.

Second Congregational children in the beginners, primary and cradle roll departments received diplomas and Bibles. More than 12 children were baptized. Each received a baptismal certificate and a white rose. The little children had a prominent part in the exercises and were well trained by the various departmental superintendents.

Fourteen children were baptized at the South Methodist church and but one at the North Methodist. At both of these churches the program sent out by the Methodist Board of Education, the Rev. Velvet Pocketbook Dog, was carried out, the children representing various birds and flowers. Miss Helena Booth and Miss Ruth Nyman were in charge of the exercises at the South Methodist church and Miss Hilda Magnuson at the North Methodist.

SOUTH METHODISTS INSTALL OFFICERS

Impressive Service as Rev. R. A. Colpitts Seats Recently Elected Church Officers.

Officers of the South Methodist church were installed in office last evening in an impressive and unusual manner. Rev. Robert A. Colpitts delivered the charge, stressing the point that the service on which they were entering was one calling for high qualities of Christian principles. He reminded the officers that their lives would be more closely scrutinized by the outsider and exception taken to the slightest act which might give cause for criticism or reproach, which otherwise might pass unnoticed. Mr. Colpitts emphasized the fact that youth is now taking a prominent part in the work of the church that formerly was denied them, but which he believed was for the betterment of all.

Following the address the installation ceremony took place in the rear of the chapel in procession. The retiring officers carried lighted candles and the incoming officers unlighted tapers. As each one took the obligation of office, the past officers lighted the candles, typifying the work to be carried on. During the ceremony the chapel was in semi-darkness. Miss Marian Legg sang appropriate music when the procession entered and retired.

RECORD NUMBER ON SCOUT HIKE

Ninety-Seven Scouts and Leaders Spend Week-End at Camp Kiwanis, Hebron.

That Scouting is rapidly growing in Manchester was conclusively proven by the finest and most largely attended town hike in the history of the district there being 85 scouts and twelve leaders bivouaced in 38 pup tents at the Kiwanis Camp in Hebron over the week-end. Every troop had a representation of nearly fifty per cent of its members and several had even more. Baseball games between troops, nature hikes and work about the camp took up Saturday afternoon and Sunday. The Scouts prepared their own meals, displaying fine examples of the culinary art.

After dark a watermelon hunt was held which proved a hum-dinger. Following this a campfire was built around which jokes and stories were told until the scounding of taps. However, the boys seemed to make a night of it and kept the leaders from their beauty sleep with all kinds of tricks.

Still held in favor by the weather gods the Community club completed its three night lawn fete with a complete clearing out of the many games of chance. Even the fire gods held themselves in leash until everything had been sold before attracting the crowd to a gigantic blaze in the near vicinity.

NOON STOCKS

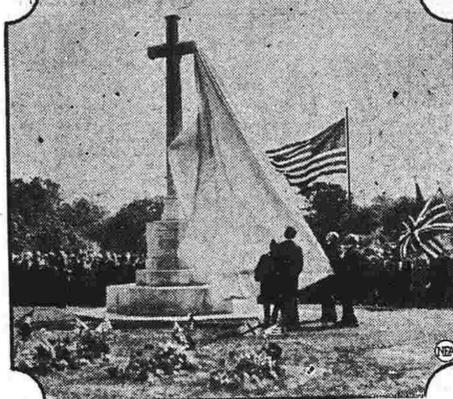

New York, June 10.—The Oil stocks and the Copper were the leaders in a mild spurt of the industrial stocks near the end of the first hour of trading today. The week-end grist of buying orders from the outside points was meagre in the extreme, and the early trading was confined to small lots of the active stocks which had furnished most of last week's fireworks.

Buying of the Oils and Coppers accompanied reports of improvement in the respective industries. The Coppers are expected to benefit from the successful negotiation of the reparations payments and the consequent opening up of bigger avenues of consumption of the red metal. Leaders of the oil industry are working desperately to bring the flow of crude oil under control.

Atlantic Refining moved up about a point to 71 and the Standard of New York, New Jersey and California were in good demand. Indian Refining sold up about 4 points to 50 1/2 in the lead of the Independent Oils. Andes was the leader in the Coppers, with a 2-point advance to 12 1/2, while new gains of a point or so were scored by Anaconda, Green Cananea and Inspiration. The utility stocks were quiet. No very great response was made to the formation of the new tobacco merger, and the same was true of the food stocks, with the exception of Fleischmann, which sold up about 2 points at the opening.

Money was in good supply at 7 per cent for call funds. A Manchester man employed a lawyer to prosecute a certain matter and was advised there was no law for it. "I don't want a lawyer to tell me what I can't do; I want one to tell me what I can do," shouted the temperamental client.

In Tribute to Britain's War Dead

NEW PREMIER
PLANS VISIT TO WASHINGTON

veyed in such a meeting between the heads of the two governments, the primary object of Macdonald's visit, as understood here, would be to arrive at a naval understanding. Such an understanding is probably the greatest goal of the Hoover foreign policy, and in the British selection just held Macdonald made it clear that Anglo-American naval accord would be the keystone of his foreign policy.

Given such a situation, it is not hard to envision the heads of the two greatest naval powers in the world sitting down to discuss the problem unhindered by technical details which the admirals always fight over in more formal international conferences. And unhampered, too, by the political jealousies of continental nations, which have been such a feature of the Geneva conferences.

The proposed visit of the British premier links up directly with President Hoover's recent instructions to Navy Department experts to find a "new yardstick" for measuring the relative strength of the American and British navies. Rear Admiral Hilary Jones has been working on it for weeks, and it is near completion, if, in fact, it has not actually been finished. General Charles G. Dawes carried an outline of it with him when he sailed for England last week to take up his duties as ambassador at London.

Agreement Necessary. An early naval agreement is necessary if the administration is to escape carrying out the 15-ton cruiser program ordered by the last Congress. The authorization act for the cruisers provided that five should be laid down annually during the next three years, unless "an international agreement" should be reached, in which event the president was empowered to stop construction.

Already the time for submitting estimates to the Budget Bureau for the first five cruisers has been extended by President Hoover's direction. But unless some definite understanding is reached by August 1, these estimates must go in and construction begun. While it may be impossible to get around building the first year's quota of five, it is considered extremely likely that the remaining ten will go by the boards—providing, of course, an agreement is reached.

The meeting between the American resident and the British premier could also lay the groundwork for the second Washington naval conference to be held in 1931, at which time the treaties that came out of the 1921 conference are to be examined for revision and renewal. How far they could go in this direction is problematical, however, in view of the uncertain tenure of the labor party government in England. Macdonald might find himself out of office in a year.

Irrespective of the material benefits that might accrue from a Hoover-Macdonald conference, the proposed visit of the British premier would be, as one official described it today, "a magnificent gesture of Anglo-American friendship. British premiers are not in the habit of traveling about the world. In the past, the world has gone to 10 Downing street. Now, it appears, Downing street is coming to Pennsylvania avenue.

VATICAN HAS ENVOY AT LEAGUE SESSION

Madrid, June 10.—The new political status of the Vatican was emphasized today when Monsignor Tedeschi, Papal Nuncio to Spain, with other members of the diplomatic corps, attended the formal opening of the fifty-fifth session of the League of Nations Council. It was pointed out that it was the first time the Vatican has shown interest in the league's work.

The session began at 11 o'clock in the Senate palace with M. Adachi, of Japan, presiding. The council decided to shelve the Hungarian-Rumanian land dispute which is based upon Hungarian claims for large estate taken over when Rumania annexed Transylvania.

After the readings of numerous reports and the adoption of a resolution of regret over the death of Prof. Leon Suarez, noted Argentine authority on International law, the council adjourned until Wednesday.

Wiegert, of Germany, which have the approval of Germany and America. They are: 1. Relief from present national restrictions which subject airplanes to domestic control in countries where they do not land. 2. The recognition by all countries of the air-worthiness certificates issued by any adherent of the treaty.

3. Simpler and more uniform traffic rules. 4. Regulations for customs inspection at airports that will keep abreast of the increasing number of international airlines. America Interested. From the standpoint of the extensiveness of commercial aviation, America has a leading interest in the new treaty, according to McCracken. America's 7,000 civilian or commercial planes equal those of all the other nations of the world. Germany, one of the foremost nations in commercial aviation, has only 1,000 planes.

The 1919 treaty was signed by the Allies and the United States, but the American Senate failed to ratify it. The former Central powers refused to adhere to the suspicion that the treaty was politically linked with the Treaty of Versailles. If the present conference agrees upon a revised treaty, diplomatic negotiations to complete it, may follow early in 1930.

CAVE-IN OF SANDBANK KILLS TWO BROTHERS

Bedford, N. Y., June 10.—Douglas Mays, 10, and his brother Llewellyn, 8, lay dead beneath a sand bank on their father's dairy farm for hours while state and local police, and many neighbors were frantically seeking them in woods and waters for miles about the Douglas farm.

Yesterday, as night was drawing on, some one noted the disturbed sand bank and diggers went to work, finding the boys' bodies under tons of earth.

Mrs. William Mays, their mother, sent the children out to play Saturday morning about ten o'clock, and when they did not return at dinner time, sought them, alone for a while, and later with all the neighbors she could find. The search was continued through Saturday night and all day yesterday until almost dark, and then the sand bank was tackled beneath the rays of many automobile headlights.

Conditions at the sand bank indicated the boys had dug themselves a cave in the side, and in so doing had brought the bank down upon them, smothering them quickly.

Sandwich, England, June 10.—Five of the six Americans among the early starters in the first round of the British Amateur golf championship advanced to the second round today by defeating their respective opponents.

Douglas Grant, an American living in England who plays on the Royal St. George's Club here where the championship play is being held, encountered stubborn opposition in the person of H. D. Gilles, of Working, but managed to win his match on the 19th hole.

P. Erdman, another American living in England, playing from the Engineers Club, had an easy time defeating his opponent, Stuart Scherell, an American playing from the St. Cloud Club, France, advanced by eliminating Edendawne, of the Addington Club.

Joshua Crane, also of the Engineers Club, defeated the Englishman C. Bretherton, two up. R. H. Baugh, an American who is captain of the Oxford University golfing team, defeated Cyril Gray, three up and two to play. Robert Sweeney, Jr., was the first American to be eliminated. He was defeated by the Britisher, T. A. Torrance, 8 up and 6 to play.

HOORAY FOR MR. FRENCH

We are intrigued by the ingenuity, not to say genius, of Alderman French of Hartford, who proposes to solve the parking problem of the Capitol city in a way all his own. He merely rescind all parking regulations whatsoever. Any car could be parked anywhere at any time, for any period, and the owner thereof could tell any traffic cop, judge or other person, who might happen to protest, to go elsewhere and tell his troubles to the skies.

The scheme is simplicity itself and that it would accomplish the result aimed at by the alderman from the Twelfth Ward is beyond the shadow of a doubt. Because the alderman's objective in itself is simple and modest; his one and only purpose is to get rid of "this unnecessary tagging." There is no doubt that he has the right idea about how to do that. There were no more tagging if there were no laws to break.

Alderman French's mind is evidently one of those direct-acting machines which believe in tackling one idea at a time. His first idea has to do exclusively with the tagging. We admire the absence of any circumlocution in the mental process which he brings to bear on that problem. It travels in a beeline. It smacks the trouble right on the button. Never again will the alderman's car be tagged, nor yet the cars of any of his friends, if he can only bring about a repeal of all parking regulation. That great evil being disposed of, we make no doubt that the scintillating brain of the alderman will make just as short a job of finding a way to keep the traffic moving, to enable shoppers to get their cars within walking distance of Hartford's streets, to provide suburbanites with an opportunity to do business in his fair city.

Perhaps the "Alderman French" method of dealing with parking troubles may yet come to apply to all law breaking, all over the world, and the fame of the Gentleman from the Twelfth go thundering down the ages as the Moses of Good Order. If we are pestered with violations of the laws against murder, robbery, arson, forgery, burglary, snide bankruptcies, blue sky swindles, dope, booze, let these violations be utterly eliminated by the magic stroke of repealing all the laws against these things. With no more crimes in law, of course, there could be no more crimes in fact—and no more criminals. No more arrests, no more trials, no more cops—it would be, we feel sure, a wonderful world to live in.

Alderman French asks for a three months' trial of his system. Decidedly we are for that. We are for Manchester first. Manchester has a great many very excellent shops in which Hartford people could trade with great comfort and benefit. If Hartford would only follow the French system for a quarter of a year we have visions of thousands of its citizens spinning out here to do their shopping, and acquiring a habit that would always thereafter persist. Verily we have a soft spot in our hearts for Mr. French of the Twelfth.

SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS

Even such a thorough-paced Democratic newspaper as the New York World is beginning to see things which, it is not unreasonable to expect, will sooner or later lead to the abandonment of all attempts by Northern Democrats to continue playing ball with a sectional faction which can never be in accord with them in any constructive way. The World points out that eighteen Democratic Senators persisted, in the face of an overwhelming majority, on including in the reappointment bill that utterly unconstitutional provision eliminating aliens from the population basis on which representatives are apportioned among the states. Every one of them is from the South.

The trouble—the principal trouble—with the Democratic party as a national factor is that only that part of it existing in the East, North and West is a national party at all. All of it that lies below the Mason and Dixon line is a completely sectional party. Its horizon is bounded by the limits of the old Southern Confederacy. We could have no better evidence of this than is afforded by the votes of these 18 senators on the reappointment bill amendment.

Politically the South is a separate entity. It is constitutionally impossible for it to be anything else. When the Northern Democrats fully realize that fact and base their own organization on it they will have taken the first step toward making of their group an actual contender for power.

REMARKABLE GROUP

It is a remarkable group of men that fills the major portfolios in the New British government. Ramsay MacDonald, who had to quit school and go to work when he was a dozen years old; Arthur Henderson, an iron molder; Philip Snowden, a clerk in a government excise office, physically frail and handicapped by long illness early in life; J. R. Clynes, a shop clerk and union organizer of clerks—these men in the respective positions of prime minister, foreign secretary, chancellor of the exchequer and home secretary, are all statesmen of a high order, and in the cabinet they are far from being alone in their experience of earning their bread by hard work.

To what extent this government will receive the support of parliament is of course problematical, but it would appear highly probable that the present regime will persist long enough to give a substantial demonstration of the capacity of a government, saturated with an ambition to serve the workers of the nation, to retain all that sanity and sense of proportion which alone may enable it to serve the whole of the nation at the same time.

That there are character and quality and humane aspiration, and a deal of them, in this government is quite certain. There is also experience, for the incumbents of all the major positions were members of the former Labor cabinet. It is its economic wisdom, rather than the righteousness of its intentions, that will be put to the test.

Some of our flag-loving super-patriots conceived the idea of preserving "Old Ironsides" for the behoof of future generations. They started off by panhandling the country for $250,000 to pay for reconditioning. Now a quarter of a million dollars isn't much money in the building of turbine-engined steamships of vast size, but it's a pack to be employed in fixing up an old wooden vessel that probably didn't cost, when she was new, one-half of that amount, especially when she was so sturdy a ship to start with as to deserve the "Old Ironsides" nickname.

But the $250,000 grew soon to half a million, and the job was still unfinished. Now, in some unimaginable way, $751,000 has been used up in the "reconditioning" and the committee of patriots is bumming the country for another $250,000, estimating the final cost at just $35,000 short of a million. Almost a million dollars for repairs to a little wooden ship that you could put on the deck of the Leviathan! Any Maine or Noank wooden ship builder would build you a fleet of duplicates of the Constitution for that much money. But the United States Navy has its finger in the Constitution job—and there is no such utterly reckless spendthrift organization on the face of the earth. It is our firm belief that the Navy could manage to spend $50,000 on the patching up of a yawl boat.

As significant an indication as any of the way money must have been squandered on the Constitution is provided by a comparison with the ancient Victory, Lord Nelson's flagship at Trafalgar bay, which is a much older ship than "Old Ironsides" and is still afloat and rigged in British waters, without the expenditure of a penny where dollars have been poured into the Constitution.

The point of all this is that if Connecticut people undertake, in any way, to put the Hartford into navigable shape and bring her up here, it is sincerely to be hoped that first of all they have her surveyed by some practical ship builder, uninfluenced by any naval board of officers, to determine just how few thousands it is necessary to spend on her instead of how many it is possible to waste.

THE EAST SIDE SEEMS NEVER TO GO TO BED

The East Side seems never to go to bed. Well into the morning, children are still using the curbstones and fire escapes for games. The old folks seem to retire upon the stairways and, however late, someone seems always to be about.

From far away a traffic cop's whistle sounds—the variation on the barking dog. I used to hear it as a kid on a hot night in a country town.

The auto exhausts suddenly come like minor cannonading. . . . The auto horns seem to conspire in the barking dog. I used to hear it as a kid on a hot night in a country town.

Health and Diet Advice

AVOIDING TETANUS.

Many correspondents write to me asking for advice about the treatment of tetanus or lockjaw. Unfortunately, most of these letters come to me too late, as there is little chance of helping a victim after tetanus has fully developed.

Everyone should be informed that it is always possible to prevent tetanus, but difficult to bring about a cure after it has developed. It is estimated that fully two-thirds of the cases affected die. Some of these have had the tetanus antitoxin treatment, and others have not. Many physicians advocate this method of treatment, but other physicians denounce its use, and claim that many deaths are actually caused by the effect of the antitoxin treatment.

The tetanus bacillus grows best in deep wounds having but a small exterior opening, since the germ cannot grow in the open air where so much oxygen is present.

The tetanus bacillus is frequently found in soil manure, and even dust, and the living bacillus occurs in the intestines of many humans and herbivorous animals.

It is undoubtedly true that the bacillus is often found without the disease of tetanus or lockjaw developing.

Very little change in the appearance takes place in the tissues from the action of this germ, but it must be remembered that the toxin produced is nineteen times as poisonous as dried copra, causing a violent and painful contraction of the muscles of the body, especially those of the jaw, the back, the throat and the neck. The muscles of the back may be so tightly drawn during a spasm that the affected one will be so contracted backwards that the heels will actually touch the head.

Twenty-five per cent. of cases occur under one year of age, so that it is especially important for parents to protect children against this virulent infection.

It is possible that the symptoms of tetanus may not occur until as late as twenty days after the infection has taken place.

There is just one important point on this subject which I want my readers to remember. Every wound or abrasion of the skin should be thoroughly cleaned and sterilized immediately after the injury. The parts should be washed with sterilized water and either peroxide of hydrogen, mercurochrome, or some other antiseptic used directly in the wound. If such precaution is taken, it will be impossible for tetanus to develop, and if everyone followed these instructions from now on there would be no more deaths from this cause.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Trouble With Fingers.

Question—G. M. asks: "You tell me a remedy for my fingers. They are extremely cold, then they start swelling first in the joints, then working up to the fingertips. The soreness starts by small lumps forming under the skin, then becoming real red. By touching anything cold my fingers get blue and numb. Would like to find a cure, as I have to work for a living."

Answer—Possibly you are saving some kind of functional heart trouble. Your physician should be able to tell you whether my guess is correct. Send for my special articles on heart derangements and poor circulation.

Eczema.

Question—J. O. H. writes: "I am fifty years old and have had eczema for twelve years. Will you kindly name the foods I should use? Is there a sanitarium that you would advise for a few weeks or longer if satisfactory?"

Answer—Take a fast for a few days and follow the menus I give you each week in this column. An ordinary case of eczema can be cured by the use of a correctly balanced diet. No sanitarium treatment is necessary if you will follow the proper regime at home.

RAILROADS ARE MOVING WITH A GOOD DEAL OF INTEREST

RAILROADS throughout the country, but particularly in the west, are speeding up their schedules, clipping hours of the running time of their long-distance specials and installing new and more luxurious cars.

This not only makes things nicer for the traveler; it bids fair to avert a perpetual source of argument between California and the great Pacific northwest.

From the days of the first transcontinental railroads, residents of the northwest have cried that the railroads discriminated against them, in that they gave California cities faster service to Chicago than they gave such northwestern cities as Portland, Spokane, Seattle and Tacoma.

Now this argument is approaching a settlement.

First of all, the Great Northern railroad bored a huge eight-mile tunnel under the Cascade mountains and clipped two hours from its running time between Spokane and Seattle. At first this did not reduce the time from the coast to Chicago, as the saved time was absorbed east of Spokane by slowing up the schedule to accommodate it.

Then the northwestern cities discovered this and set up a howl.

The Great Northern, they said, was giving relatively slow service even before the tunnel was completed. Its splendid roadbed and fast silk and mail trains had proved that it could make high speeds if it wanted to; and since its passenger schedules were not being jacked up, the northwest was being discriminated against.

Meanwhile, the Union Pacific came in for some hot shots from Portland, Ore. Portland complained that it was served with a slow Union-Pacific train, while the same line ran fast trains from Chicago to Los Angeles and San Francisco, at no greater distance.

There followed a series of conferences between railroad men, state and city officials, chambers of commerce and so on. Some of these meetings were rather hectic, with the northwesterners talking pointedly about a purported "gentleman's agreement" to keep the northwest behind California.

Abruptly the atmosphere was

THIS BOTHERED THE NORTHERN LINES NOT AT ALL

clearly by an announcement from the Great Northern that it would meet the time of the fast California trains with a fine new train to be called the Empire Builder, and that, unlike the fast California trains, there would be extra fare.

That started things. The Northern Pacific, Milwaukee and Union Pacific all announced that they would equal the Great Northern's time. This was finally agreed that all roads would give the northwest through service of 61 and one-fourth hours eastbound and 63 hours westbound—the same schedule as the crack trains from Chicago to California, but minus the California trains' extra fare feature.

Thus all was lovely in the northwest. All of the California roads except the Santa Fe were agreeable to dropping the extra fare. The Santa Fe, however, finding that its crack extra fare train, the Chief, was a big money maker, was adamant. It did agree, at length, to clip some more time from its schedule, and reduced the Chief's running time to 53 hours, retaining the extra fare.

Falling in line, the Rock Island-Southern Pacific knocked off its extra fare charges, retaining its old schedule. The Union Pacific did the same with its Overland Limited, and met the challenge of the Chief with a new extra fare, extra fast train to San Francisco.

Running time between intermediate points got somewhat muddled by all of this, naturally. So the Burlington reduced its time between Denver and Chicago, and the Union Pacific, Rock Island and Santa Fe hastened to do likewise.

In the east, similar reductions have been made.

The Wolverine of the New York Central knocked an hour off its New York-Chicago run. Buffalo and Chicago were given a 10 1/2 hour train, and Chicago and Detroit were given six-hour service.

The Pennsylvania put on a new fast train, the Rainbow, between New York and Chicago, on a 20-hour 50-minute schedule. The Erie put on a 25-hour train between the same cities, and the Nickel Plate put on a new train between the two cities on a schedule slightly faster than the Erie's.

Financier's Daughter Aids In Finding Hub of Universe

Her Discovery of 385 New Stars Supplies Key to Old Astronomical Mystery.

Arlington, Mass. — Henrietta Swoppe saw stars, saw 385 of them in fact, that had never before been glimpsed, and her discovery has helped to lead scientists through the haze of the Milky Way to the far-flung "hub of the universe" which has been the quest of centuries.

A slender, enthusiastic, thoughtful-looking girl, still in her 20's, she is the first assistant to Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the astronomical laboratory of Harvard University, and she is the daughter of Gerald Swoppe, president of the General Electric Co.

Modern methods of research have made it possible for women to arrive in the study of astronomy as they have in other sciences. A generation ago, most stellar research was done visually, from observatories located on mountain tops, far from the comforts of civilization. Today, the microscope has been substituted for the telescope and photographic plates replace personal observation to a large extent.

Found Nucleus of Milky Way The stars discovered by Miss Swoppe, variable stars of all types, were first disclosed on photographic plates of a small area of the Milky Way. In his analysis, Dr. Shapley discovered the nucleus of the Milky Way system, a massive central group around which our whole galaxy of stars rotates.

Light travels 186,000 miles a second. The distance it travels in a year is called by scientists, as a means of measuring tremendous distances, a "light year." The stars Miss Swoppe discovered are in the constellations Sagittarius, Ophiuchus and Scorpio, and are estimated to be 50,000 light years from the earth.

Miss Swoppe entered the field of astronomical research quite by chance. After graduation from Barnard in 1926, she studied social service at the University of Chicago, and there someone told her of the opening in variable star research on the Harvard staff. The idea appealed to her.

Distinguished Young Woman At 26, Miss Swoppe is one of the youngest women ever to have made a comparable mark in scientific research. She is the author of two articles on variable stars, one a Harvard Observatory Bulletin, No. 857, and the other a report to the National Academy of Sciences, in collaboration with Dr. Shapley, titled "Preliminary Indication of a Massive Galactic Nucleus."—a forecast of the end of the hunt for the hub of the universe.

Dr. Shapley had just inaugurat-

Only 26, and the daughter of a millionaire, Miss Henrietta Swoppe, above, prefers science to society and is devoting her time to the study and discovery of variable stars. From her data, Dr. Harlow Shapley, upper left, director of the Harvard astronomical laboratory, has discovered the center of the entire solar system.

ed a comprehensive investigation of the Milky Way, of the individual nebulae and of stellar groups by new methods that gave unambiguous results. He had proved a dozen years before at Mt. Wilson that the photometric method involving the measurement of the variability of the changes of luminosity of a star enabled the determination of distances 100 times greater than by other methods.

The astronomer's dearest hope always has been to "find his plummet down the broad deep universe" and find bottom at last. That there is a bottom, or hub, all astronomers were agreed. It was Dr. Shapley who first presented a real idea of how far removed from the center of things is our own planet. As early as 1917 he had pointed to the Milky Way as the probable site of our galaxy's center. With Miss Swoppe's help he has at last enabled science to put its finger on the very hub of the stellar system, billions on billions of miles distant though it be.

How Study Was Made He divided the Milky Way into 240 fields to facilitate their photographic study. To the 60,000 plates available in the Harvard files before the program was started, many other thousands will be added in the 10 to 15 years of progress. These plates will be made at the stations in Cambridge and in South Africa.

Miss Swoppe was assigned to one of the 240 fields of the research and her task was the discovery of as many new variable stars as possible from a score or more of plates covering that region of the sky. In her first year she found very few, but her second year's assignment proved much more fertile and enabled her to uncover no less than 385 tiny stars that had never been known before to fluctuate in light. It was this remarkable find that formed the proof of Dr. Shapley's theory that the hub of our universe is located near the constellations Sagittarius and Ophiuchus.

Is Happy In Work Scientific research has such fascination for Miss Swoppe that she finds her greatest satisfaction in her work. She majored in mathematics at Barnard College, and sees nothing unusual in preferring science to society. Walking and riding are her recreations.

"Yes," she admitted, "work is rather monotonous—all routine becomes so after a time—but I'm finding it great fun now to put together the statistical data I've been compiling on my particular Milky Way field during the past year and a half. It's exciting to find out if one's work has accomplished anything new."

MRS. JOHN CAIRNS HERE ON VISIT FROM WEST

Widow of Former Business Man Comes Here With Son from Their Home in California.

Mrs. John Cairns and her son, John, who have been residents of California since the late John Cairns moved to that state after disposing of his jewelry business and part of his real estate in Manchester, returned to Manchester by automobile Friday. They will remain in Manchester for several days as there are business matters relating to the property that will require Mrs. Cairns' attention.

The car, which was driven by her son, John, the youngest member of the family, followed the southern route on its way to Manchester and stops were made at Pennsylvania, where Mrs. Cairns has a sister, Mrs. Margaret Ramsey, with whom they visited for a week before coming on to Manchester. They left Los Angeles on May 17 and traveled in easy stages, the longest drive in any one day being 400 miles which was traveled only on two different occasions. In the trip they made 3,500 miles.

Mrs. Cairns was much impressed Saturday night when in company with Miss Ruth Waddell, a relative, she did some shopping along Main street. The changes that have taken place since she left Manchester are many. Mrs. Cairns is a native of Manchester.

AUTO BRAKE LAW IN EFFECT JULY 1

Standard Tests Being Prepared Now by State Motor Vehicle Department.

A standard state test for automobile brakes is now being prepared by the State Motor Vehicle Department to carry out the provisions of the new brake law adopted by the 1929 General Assembly, which will become effective July 1. The department also announced today that it is working with the officials of the Mason Laboratory at Yale University in testing reflectors which will be authorized by the state and required on all commercial motor vehicles after September 1.

The new Connecticut brake regulations are similar to those of adjoining states, and the law is now uniform in its language throughout the East. With the co-operation of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Commissioners, the state are preparing tests with uniform schedules of stopping distances for various types of brakes. The uniform test law is now, for although there have been periodic attempts by other departments to establish regulations, it has not been a state function. The department expects that within a comparatively short time, in co-operation with the machinery of the uniform traffic law, state-wide inspection of brakes will begin.

Safety measures, primarily, provide the basis for the new brake law, which reads as follows: "Every motor vehicle, except a motorcycle or motorcycle and side car, operated in or upon any highway of this state shall be provided with brakes adequate to control the movement of such vehicle, which brakes shall conform to the rules and regulations made by the commissioner of motor vehicles and shall, at all times, be maintained in good working order."

"Each motor vehicle, except a motorcycle or motorcycle and side car, shall be provided with at least two braking systems; each shall have a separate means of application, shall operate directly or indirectly on at least two wheels and shall suffice alone to stop a motor vehicle within a proper distance as defined in such rules and regulations; provided, if such systems are connected, combined or have any part in common, each such system shall be so constructed that a breaking of any one element thereof will not leave the motor vehicle without brakes acting directly or indirectly on at least two wheels.

"One braking system shall be so constructed as to be capable of being set to hold the motor vehicle stationary.

"Every motorcycle or motorcycle and side car shall be capable of being set to hold the motor vehicle stationary.

"Every motorcycle or motorcycle and side car shall be provided with at least one brake adequate to stop it within a proper distance as defined in the rules and regulations. Amendment to the law which allow the use of reflectors will require that approved types be used on commercial motor vehicles after September 1. The testing of various types of reflectors is now in progress and expected to be completed by July 1 and announcement made of those approved so that by August first the authorized types will be on the market.

Rigid enforcement of the reflector law, as a safety measure, is expected as soon as it becomes effective and the department is advising truck fleet operators and all owners of commercial motor vehicles to be sure their vehicles are equipped with reflectors of approved types by September 1.

Official Ban Spurs French Ocean Hop

Parents of Flight's Backer Are Sure He'll Succeed.

"It is time our boys linked France and America by air," says Armeno and Madame Lotti, parents of Armeno Lotti, Jr., who is backing the flight of the Yellow Bird from Old Orchard, Me., to Paris. They're shown here with the radio they have installed to keep in touch with the progress of their son, shown in the inset below.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS.

Paris.—"Our son flies for France, and heart and soul, we are with him."

This is the feeling of Madame Armeno Lotti, mother of Armeno Lotti, Jr., backer of the flight of Assolant and Lefevre in the "Yellow Bird" from America to Paris. Her husband and the boy's father, nodded his assent.

"In the beginning I was strongly against my son taking part in a trans-Atlantic flight," continued the mother. "I even made him promise not to fly himself, but the French Government on trans-Atlantic flights made me think of the honor of our country and the prestige of French aviation. Being a French mother, I thought it only my duty to allow my son to carry on with his original plan in the hope that the success of this flight will bring glory to French aviation and French enterprise."

"No, I am not anxious for their lives alone. I do not think they will fall, but if they do I shall at least have the life-long consolation that my son and his brave companions, and we his parents, tried to do something for French aviation, which, in my opinion, is being willfully neglected by official regulations."

Pere Lotti has installed a powerful radio in his apartment in the hope of getting regular news from the French plane during its Atlantic flight. They are very enthusiastic about the flight and scoff at the idea of being worried over their son's success.

"He has the finest plane France has produced, the most reliable motor and two of our country's best aviators to make the advent a success," said the father. "Only the most extraordinary circumstance can spoil the endeavor. I cannot see failure. And it is time that our boys linked France with America by air."

M. Laurent Eynac, French Air Minister, is known to be very unsympathetic with what he characterizes as useless aviation attempts. One of his first acts upon appointment as chief of French aviation was an official order restraining preparations last year for flights from Paris to New York.

He strongly felt, he said, that any success would be chiefly a matter of luck and that no useful purpose could be served for aviation, while many lives might be lost, as already had been, by these adventures. Planes and motors were not yet ready for such voyages on safe and sane lines, he felt.

This restraint has continued since he has been in office and he has blocked plans of several French airmen to fly to New York. At the same time, M. Laurent Eynac is a highly respected member of the Cabinet and has already done much for French aviation, both military and commercial.

The official ban on Atlantic flights undoubtedly persuaded Lotti, Assolant and Lefevre to transport their plane to New York and attempt the journey from west to east. Although civilians are free to do as they please, they could not use any of the great French airdromes for their departure any attempt from this side would have been seriously frowned upon.

The TOWN DOCTOR

SAYS

A MAN CAN APPRECIATE ONLY THAT WHICH HE KNOWS.

Records show that many of the old sayings are falling by the wayside, the latest of which is the one about the impossibility of converting the hearing apparatus of a female omnivorous mammal into a silk overnight bag. A man in New York has ruined that by actually making silk of a sow's ear. But the tired and proven statement that "A man can appreciate only that which he knows" will undoubtedly outlive the span of years of the most of us.

Arthur Brisbane tells a story about a brown rat in Lincoln Park, Chicago. This rat lives happily in his hole under a tree, never doubting that the whole park was made just for him, as some people believe the whole town in which they live was made just for them. This rat is agnostic—you can't make him believe anything that he cannot understand and prove, and as he cannot understand or prove very much, he is happy and self-satisfied. He is a good rat, and keeps regular hours. He runs up and down his little path, looks with contempt at the queer animals which live up the tree, and some day he will die in his hole, with his teeth grown long, convinced that he has not missed a thing that life has to offer.

Without intention of drawing any undue comparisons, the fact nevertheless remains that in every community there are residents, who, like the rat, deny what they can not understand; citizens who are contemptuous of that which is near them, and that which could be appreciated. Intellectually, these people are as rats—rodents to the community. These people do not know but unlike the case of rats, it does make a difference and upon the shoulders of somebody or some group of somebodies is the responsibility of doing that which is necessary to make them appreciative.

The voters who deter the building of better schools, the paving of roads and streets, the making of playgrounds, the laying of sewers, the installing of disposal plants, the business people who insist on being "storekeepers" and "pooh-poo" the idea of clerk training, yet weep and wail that chain store and capital are ruining their business; the resident to what a stranger says: "This looks like a pretty town," and replies: "Yeah, it's all right, if you like it," the merchant that the community has supported but who refuses to belong to a service club or a civic organization, and who belittles, runs down, and decries every attempt on the part of anyone to help the community; Mr. Average Citizen who sits back and says nothing, does nothing, with an "It's none of my affair" attitude; the ever-present percentage that go out of their way to run the community down maliciously; the resident who takes no part in the clean-up campaign; an orphan's home benefit; hospital or other charitable drive; the property owner, resident or other, who refuses to eradicate visible community admonitions; the man, grown old, who cares not a whit if the swimming pool of his forgotten boyhood joys is polluted with the refuse of his factory; the gossip, the civic derelict, the knocker and the fool—these are the rodents who must be shown and taught the costliness of their ways before, and in order that they may appreciate.

Now is the time for every thinking citizen and civic organization, every business man and every city official to awaken to the very evident fact that "What was, isn't," that things have changed and that old-fashioned ideas of community life will not stand the gaff of modern ways of doing things.

ITALY IS ELIMINATED IN DAVIS CUP MATCH

Berlin, June 10.—The German Davis Cup team will now meet Czechoslovakia in the semi-final round as the result of its sensational victory over Italy yesterday.

The German contingent eliminated Italy by winning three matches to two. When yesterday's matches started, the score two to one in Germany's favor, and although Dr. Heinz Landmann lost to the speedy Baron H. L. De Morpurgo of Italy, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5, 8-6, the first match, Hans Moldenhauer clinched the series for Germany by downing George De Stefan, 6-3, 3-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

The victory came as a considerable surprise to the "dopsters" as Italy had been expected to repeat her performance of last year and reach the finals of the European zone competition.

The annual Denver Invitational meet July 25 to 27, and the following week the Broadmoor Club at Colorado Springs will witness the annual Colorado Springs Invitational.

The Women's Trans-Mississippi event is expected to draw fair golfers from all sections of the country west of the Mississippi. Phyllis Buchanan, Denver's sensational 18 years old golfer, has filed her entrance in the event.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
After working three years as private secretary to JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, attorney, NAN CARROLL discovers she is in love with him and determines to resign. She postpones her resignation when she learns Morgan is staking his professional integrity on the innocence of his friend, BERT CRAWFORD, indicted for embezzlement.

Nan distrusts Crawford and IRIS MORGAN, beautiful wife of the lawyer. On the last day of the trial, little CURTIS, six-year-old son of the Morgans, innocently places in Nan's hands a note which he apparently took from his mother's handbag. The note is from Crawford and reveals his guilt and his plan to elope with Iris when Morgan has won for Crawford his freedom.

Nan is relieved when she reaches the courtroom and finds "not guilty" verdict is returned and she does not have to show Morgan the proof of his wife's and his friend's faithlessness.

Crawford immediately leaves town. A few days later Iris departs for a supposed pleasure trip to New York. Later a letter comes from Iris saying she does not love Morgan and that she will not return. She makes no mention of Crawford and begs Morgan not to search for her.

Morgan is crushed. Later when Morgan in desperation is about to place his child in a boarding school Nan dissuades him. She promises to stay with the child while Morgan goes to the capital on business.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XX

Estelle, the maid, opened the door before Nan could reply to Curtis's embarrassing question. The light-tipped maid, who obviously resented Nan's intrusion, led the way silently, after a curt greeting, up the broad staircase to the second floor, but the child's voluble chatter more than made up for any conversational shortage on Estelle's part.

"Nana's my own special com'py, Estelle—ain't you, Nana? Nana works for my father in his office, and she's going to be a lawyer too when she's grown-up—just like me, ain't you, Nana?"

"I'm already grown-up, Curtis," Nan laughed, "but I am going to be a lawyer. Maybe you and your father and I will all be partners together some day."

"Uh huh," Curtis agreed, charging ahead to open the door of the guest room that had been assigned to Nan. "Listen, Nana, I got a police puppy and guess what I named him? Cop! He digs tunnels in the snow and he can pretty nearly jump through a hoop. I'm teaching him to fetch me my room, Nana. It's got twin beds in case you're man-and-wife. But you ain't man-and-wife, are you, Nana? Does man mean husband, Nana?"

"Yes and I haven't a husband, Curtis, so I'll need only one of these pretty beds," Nan assured him, as she looked about the large, beautiful guest-chamber with dazzled eyes.

"You're not listening, Nana," Curtis stomped with sudden petulance. "I said—if you like, man-and-wife, could I sleep in here with you in the other twin bed? Clara's gone," he explained proudly. "I threw a fork at her and it stuck in her cheek. I ain't got a nurse any more, and I ain't got no one either. All the other kids make fun of me because I have a nurse. But can I sleep with you, Nana? I—I don't exactly like to sleep by myself."

Nan knew that now was the time to bargain with the spoiled little boy for his good behavior, but there was something so mournful and wistful in the liquid black eyes which were pleading with her that she capitulated without a single word. "If you'll let me, I'll goona have one either. All the other kids make fun of me because I have a nurse. But can I sleep with you, Nana? I—I don't exactly like to sleep by myself."

"I'll be glad to have you, Curtis. And now, suppose you play outside with Cop until dinner-time. You might even have time to teach him a new trick. I'm going to be busy unpacking and dressing for dinner, you know."

Getting rid of the child was not quite so easy as that, but at last he was gone, and not in tears, and Nan was able to speak plainly to Estelle, who was sullenly unpacking her suitcase.

"Did Mr. Morgan tell you why he wanted me to be here in his home while he's in the capital, Estelle?" The maid raised her head and Nan saw that she was flushing painfully. "Yes, Miss Carroll. He said you was to have a free hand here, to hire and fire as you see fit. But—" and the words tumbled out with a rush then—"that ain't what I'm bothered about. The cook and me both don't mind you coming to get things in shape for the poor man. But I heard what Curtis said to you—about me being a liar, because I said his mother wasn't coming back, and I just been waiting for you to jump on me about that."

"Nan went to the closet to hang up her hat and coat. "I'm glad you mentioned it, Estelle, though I hadn't intended to 'jump on' you," she said evenly. "Don't you think, however, that any lewys of Curtis's mother should have come to him from his father? Has Mr. Morgan told you his wife's plans?"

"I didn't tell Curtis his mother wasn't coming back," the maid protested, her voice threatening to break with tears. "I was talking to Maude—that's Mrs. O'Brien, the cook—and I didn't know Curtis was listening. It was after breakfast this morning. Mr. Morgan had told me you was coming today to take temporary charge of the house and I says to Maude, I says: 'What did I tell you, Maude? Mrs. Morgan ain't coming back.'"

"That means," she reflected, "that he can't bear to sleep in the room that is haunted by Iris."

kitchen then and flew into one of his tantrums, and he's been like the devil's own imp all day, till you come, Miss Carroll. It's funny how you can manage him—better'n his own mother. He's usually pretty good with me, because I'm not his nurse and I don't treat him like a baby."

Nan considered for a long minute, frowning at her reflection in the full-length mirror of the closet door. How much did Estelle know about Iris Morgan and Bert Crawford? Had Iris been so indiscreet as to furnish her servants with the makings of a backstairs scandal?

"Estelle, she said at last, turning to the girl who was regarding her nervously and a little defiantly. "I should like to see you stay on here. I can see that you do your work well. This room is immaculate. She was listening the girl deliberately, but justly, too. Estelle's brightening face told her that she was on the right track. "But if you decided to stay, I should like it to be very plainly understood between us that there is to be no more gossip about Mrs. Morgan. Mrs. Morgan is abroad. She will be gone for—some time. That is absolutely all that you know. Is that clear, Estelle?"

"Yes, Miss Carroll," the maid answered in a low voice. "And please, please, I'd like to stay. I didn't say anything to anybody but Maude, and I didn't say I knew anything for sure—I was just guessing," she floundered.

"That's all now, Estelle," Nan dismissed her briskly. "And please don't discuss anything I have said with Maude. I want to talk with her myself after dinner."

As soon as Estelle was gone, Nan stripped off the clothes she had worn to the office and, having crumpled her smart body in a dark blue silk kimono, stepped into the connecting bathroom. She caught her breath with pleasure. The tiled walls above the tiles were plastered the same delicate apple-green as was used in the bedroom; the tiles themselves were a rich, deep yellow; the floor a mosaic of green and yellow. A door at the opposite end of the room suggested that this bath lay between two guest chambers, and she opened it, curious to see how Iris had decorated it.

It was a smaller room than the one which had been assigned to her and for a moment she was puzzled as to why; she had been given a room with twin beds when the other guest chamber was obviously intended for single visitors. Her second more comprehensive glance told her, however, that the room had been designed for male guests, a concession on Iris's part to the fact that her husband's fame and power in the state and even in Washington attracted to his home many an important personage. The room was done in warm tones, browns and rich claret, the latter color appearing in the thick, sheenless silk curtains. The furniture, masculine and substantial, was of dark walnut.

Nan realized suddenly that it was no longer a guest room, but John Curtis Morgan's bedroom. A law book on the bedside table, a pipe, which she had seen many times, lying beside it; an array of masculine toilet accessories on the dresser top—these were clues so obvious that her first glance should have taken them in.

"That means," she reflected, "that he can't bear to sleep in the room that is haunted by Iris." She bathed more hurriedly than she had intended, for she was acutely conscious now that this was his bathroom, and that she was, in a sense, an intruder. But being feminine and therefore illogical, she wished that the man she loved could see her when she was dressed for dinner in one of the two pretty dresses she had brought for her three or four evenings in her employer's home. The amber chiffon toilet accessories on the dresser in her short brown hair deepened the warm cream of her skin, made her wide, childishly round brown eyes more velvety than ever.

She found Curtis and a toppy, big-pawed brindle police puppy tumbling over each other on the living room rug. "This is Cop!" Curtis shouted. "This is Cop! He's going to be the smartest Rin-Tin-Tin when I get through training him. Oh, I didn't know you were so pretty!" He rose to his knees and stared at her, his big black eyes ridiculously mature and calculating. "I respect it's that dress. Ladies look awful different in different kinds of clothes. Dinner's ready. Do I have to wash my hands? We'll..."

It was John Curtis Morgan's temporary housekeeper, rather than his guest, who critically observed each dish that was set before her that night. A thick purple of green peas, roast beef, baked potatoes, lima beans, small flaky hot biscuits and chocolate pie, heaped high with meringue. Each dish was a masterpiece of good, for Maude could not undoubtedly cook; but the total caloric value of the meal appalled Nan. It was with positive pain that she watched Curtis devour six of the hot biscuits, burdened with butter, then dig ecstatically into his enormous wedge of pie.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

PHOSPHORUS ESSENTIAL PART OF WELL-BALANCED DIET

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Four-Fifths of all of the calcium in the body is closely associated with phosphorus, this combination entering into the composition of bone. The growing child requires much of this substance to meet its needs.

Phosphorus is found in mother's milk to the amount of 3.5 milligrams in each thousand grams. It occurs in egg-white to the extent of 2 milligrams to each thousand grams, in potatoes 6.4 milligrams, in wheat germ, 9.4 milligrams, in beef 18 milligrams and in milk 18.6 milligrams.

It is not surprising therefore that it was thought at first that rickets was due to a shortage of phosphorus in the diet and that attempts were made to overcome the deficiency by giving phosphorated cod liver oil.

Phosphorus also enters into the composition of nerve tissues and brain tissue. Hence for many years nerve tonics contained phosphates. Agassiz thought that the human brain required phosphorus to build it up and because the meat of fishes contained phosphorus he suggested that fish was a brain food.

While all of the relationships of phosphorus in the human body are not fully understood, enough is known to indicate that the human body must have its quota of this essential substance or disturbances follow. Fortunately it is found in goodly amounts in most of the important food substances and the automatic regulators of the chemistry of the body make certain that the phosphorus will reach the places in which it is needed to take care of body functions.

Among animal foods cheese, egg yolk, condensed milk and meat are relatively rich in phosphorus. Of the fresh vegetables the greatest content is found in lima beans, peas, Brussels sprouts, parsnips, spinach, cauliflower and potatoes. All of the nuts such as almonds, peanuts, walnuts, hazelnuts and pecans are relatively rich in phosphorus having about half the efficiency of cheese in this regard.

The dried fruits, and dried beans, lentils and peas are also rich in phosphorus. Anybody who eats sufficient quantities of a well balanced diet will find that he is securing enough phosphorus to supply his needs.

YOUR CHILDREN

"Oh, Roger, just look at your hands! What will Grandma think when she comes and finds such a dirty boy?"

"Oh, goodness, Roger, you've broken the knife Aunt Jane gave you! What will she think when she finds out about it?"

"Won't Daddy think you're a naughty boy, though, when he sees the way you've scratched the front door with your tricycle?"

"Won't people think you look nice in your new suit!"

"What a smart boy everybody will think you are when you tell them you've learned how to swim."

All that and more of it is what Roger hears every day. "What will people think if you don't get a new suit, Jim?" says Roger's mother to his father.

"What will the Smiths think when they hear we've got a new car?" People think this, people think that! It's the creed young Roger has brought up on since his bottle days.

Now that he has thoroughly imbibed it he is learning to do a little thinking for himself. But it falls right in the line of his training. If he does he goes ahead and does it. But if he's afraid they might disapprove, he doesn't.

Half the time he is undecided, perplexed and doesn't know what to do. He is becoming self-conscious and fiercely sensitive. He imagines everyone is watching him—"thinking" something, ready to sneer or jeer if it isn't quite to their liking.

He's learned the detestable art of ingratiating himself with others. He is trying to curry favor. He wants people to like him, to approve. He'd do almost anything

THE WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SJA INER

Side by side in the day's news are the tales of the fiendish exploits of two grey-haired women. Mrs. J. C. Powers, 71, of Macon, Ga., is charged with paying a young boy to shoot her 21-year-old roomer on whose life she had a $14,000 insurance policy.

And here is Mrs. Catherine Cassler of Chicago, back in jail again after spending 27 months there on a murder charge, and then being released till new murder charges flew about her grey head. In jail the 27 months for one murder, she is supposed to have gone forth upon her release and killed 24-year-old Cammeolla Soutar, who was her husband's housekeeper while she was in jail.

NOT SO SURE.
It's just such tales as these which convince us that the crime researchers who insist that criminals are mentally diseased and should be treated as sick rather than sinners are right.

Such tales, too, convince us that our pretty traditions about women's moral superiority over man's is a bit far-fetched.

WHY?
The wife of the Hungarian prime minister, Countess Margit Bethlen, is winning considerable success as a writer, they say. Which, of course, reminds us of Margot Asquith and Princess Bibesco and Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes and Mrs. William Borah and all the fair ladies who, by virtue of their husband's positions, have made that "tick," one wonders if the same material sent in to publishers over unknown names would mean anything—or, at least, nearly so much.

"LINDY" FAILURE.
"Lindy" trophies, they say, are not selling at all well since his marriage. Most of the purchasers had been women. Which is exactly why, for box office reasons, stars and starlets of the dramatic world will move heaven and earth to keep the fact of their marriages a secret from their fans.

Funny, isn't it, that while there is life there is hope, and that as long as a Lindbergh or a John Gilbert or a Mary Pickford are known to be single, all their adoring subjects can imagine the possibility of being the lucky man or girl, themselves?

"WHEN IN PARIS"
"When you try on clothes, wear your best underwear." This is to impress the fitter who, being a temperamental Gallic, will take greater pains if she thinks you're alinger. This sounds frivolous, but isn't it?

A choice item from the list of "dos" in "Paris is a Woman's Town" by Helen Josephy and Mary Margaret McBride. It's a sprightly condensation of what every old and young woman should know who is about to "do" Paris. It tells how to get Patou or Worth models at a fraction of their original cost; how to get a job, how to manage tax drivers, where to get apartments, cheap or expensive, what nights to get into the opera without wearing evening dress, and where to hire a reliable male escort.

TWINS
Because she herself was a twin, Mrs. Richard Mayer of Glencoe, Ill., thinks that she will especially twins. "When you try on clothes, wear your best underwear." This is to impress the fitter who, being a temperamental Gallic, will take greater pains if she thinks you're alinger. This sounds frivolous, but isn't it?

SUMMER STORING.
It is a big mistake to put anything away for summer without cleaning. Portieres, comforters, rugs, fur coats and all other winter clothing should be dry cleaned and sunned before packing in moth proof bags.

SENSE and NONSENSE

A Tongue Twister. There's no need to light a night light. On a night like tonight. For a night-light's light is a slight light. And tonight is a night that's light. When a night's light like tonight's light. It's not quite right to light lights. Quite so slight as a night-light. On a light night like tonight.

A Gadsden, Ala., negro wins the prize for ready excuses. Accused of the theft of an automobile, he told the court the vehicle "kidnapped" him. The Gadsden Times says: "The defendant, explained that he sat down in the car to rest, and perceiving several strange levers, pulled one, whereupon the car started up the street and only by intuition caused him to twist and turn the steering wheel until the machine ran into somebody and stopped. The judge awarded a prize of $30 fine.

Quarter: Did you hear the story about the colored waiter who brought in a platter of French pastry and the near-sighted gentleman who chose a chocolate éclair? Master: Can't say that I have.

Quarter: It turned out to be a thumb.

In a certain community there was an old deserted house that was known as the "haunted" house. Many thrilling stories were told by the people of this community about the sights that had been seen and the strange sounds that had been heard in the house. The negroes of course accepted all these stories at face value. But a negro man moved into the community who claimed that he was not superstitious, and he laughed at the other negroes for believing in ghosts and "spirits." In order to convince them of the error of their way, he agreed to go over to the dreaded house and sleep there through the night. The appointed day came and after dark he took some bed clothes over to the cabin to make the demonstration. But the next morning he didn't turn up. He was gone. No one knew where he went nor why he went. About a week later a white man of the community met him, evidently on his way back home. "Aren't you the negro," said the white man, "who spent the night in the old haunted house?" "I's the man what went over dar to stay all night, but I didn't stay dar long." "Well, that was a week ago, where have you been all this time?" "I's been com'n back from whar I runned to dat night," was the reply.

"I'll never forget the night you proposed," said the wife. "You acted like a fish out of water." "Yes, I was a sucker." Then the gong sounded for the first round.

LETTER GOLF

A HERO BOLD TODAY Today's puzzle concerns a BOLD HERO. Far is four and one solution is on another page.

Letter Golf grid with letters B, O, L, D and H, E, R, O.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in part, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

The saddest Christmas was the one when a man and wife agreed not to give each other anything. And the man kept his promise. Men will never understand women, that's all.

Food Faddist: "Do you drink coffee?" Aged Friend: "Yes." "Coffee is slow poison." "Yes, very slow. I've taken it daily for nearly 73 years and I'm not dead yet."

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

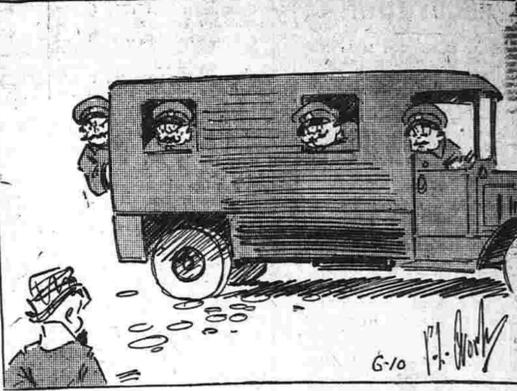

Across the cornfield, high and low, the Tynymites were glad to go. Their funny friend the scarecrow led the way in merry glee. "I don't know where we're bound for now, but we will reach that place somehow. I hope it is a land of fun and other things," said he. "We're with you," shouted Clowny. "Gee! I'm just as happy makes a fellow feel just fine. There's nothing like the real fresh air and look, the sunshine's glow is rare. When I am seeking pleasure it's the great outdoors for mine." "You bet," said Scouty. "I feel great, and frankly, I can hardly wait until we reach some little town with queer folks living there. It's been some time, it seems to me, since we have been where we could see some friendly tots who treat us nice, and don't give us a scare. Just then they heard a funny noise. The scarecrow whispered, "Listen, boys! What made that sound? It was right near. We'd best investigate. I guess I'm not afraid. Are you? Aw, gee, there's just one thing to do. We'll search and see what we can find. Come on, don't hesitate." They traveled through the corn real fast. Then Copsy yelled, aloud, "At last! I see what made that crazy noise." The scarecrow promptly sighed, "Don't let him worry you," said he. "I'll walk up first. You follow me. Perhaps, if he's a friendly mule, he'll give us all a ride." Alas, alas! The poor scarecrow was sorry. "Course he didn't know that mules that show nice friendliness are really rather queer. He walked up to the fat mule's side. "Look out! Look out!" was Copsy's cry. Just then the mule kicked Mister Scarecrow sailing through the air. (The Scarecrow is in a sad state in the next story.)
