

CONGRESS LEAVES WORK UNFINISHED

Half the Things President Wanted Done Not Done; Record of Special Session Worries Administration.

Washington, June 20.—A rebellious and insurgent Congress snarled its way homeward today, leaving half the things President Hoover wanted done not done, and with the threat that when it reassembles in late summer there will be fireworks aplenty.

The first session of the 71st Congress—the so-called "Honey-moon Session"—the new administration was anything but harmonious.

Grudgingly, and by dint of very adroit political maneuvering, it gave President Hoover the kind of a farm relief bill he wanted, and it passed the reappointment bill which he recommended. There it stopped.

Unfinished Business.

It left behind today a tariff bill half-finished, and it is the kind of a tariff bill that is giving President Hoover and his advisers cold shivers. Mr. Hoover wanted "limited revision" for agriculture and a few "sick industries." The House provided him, instead, with a bill revising more than 2,000 schedules upward, which Senate Republican leaders have every intention of increasing if possible. If this tariff bill passes in anything like its present form late this summer, it will put a pretty problem up to Mr. Hoover whether to veto it or approve it.

Thus, in the eternal conflict between the executive and legislative branches of the government, there appeared today to be about a stand-off, with round two coming up in late August and September.

Senate's Temper.

More significant, perhaps, than the actual accomplishments of the sixty days' session was the temper administration. While the House, with its strong disciplinary leadership, proved docile enough to the President's wishes, not so the Senate. There, as of yore, it was proved on numerous occasions that a coalition of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans can, on any given occasion, defeat the White House. It was twice proved in the farm relief fight by adoption of the debarment plan in the face of the President's earnest and emphatic disapproval. It was proved again by the Senate's refusal to appoint the prohibition committee Mr. Hoover asked for.

Probably no new president has ever been so savagely criticized as was Mr. Hoover in the sixty days that

ONE DEAD, 36 HURT IN ACCIDENT ON 'L'

Motorman Held Responsible for New York Wreck; Ex- citement Kills Fireman.

New York, June 20.—Two motormen were held today for two investigations were conducted to fix blame for the crash of two elevated trains on "death curve" last evening, which resulted in the death of a guard and injuries to 36 passengers.

Charge of homicide was placed against James McGlynn, 43, motorman of a 7-car wooden train which crawled around "death curve," at 110th street and 8th avenue, picked up speed and crashed into the rear end of another wooden train waiting to enter the next station, 85 feet above the street. He was arrested and the blame for the fatal accident was placed squarely on his shoulders by Police Commissioner Grover Whelan.

Hold Other Motorman
Lewis Grazer, motorman of the other train, was held as a material witness. The transit commission also conducted an inquiry.

McGlynn denied he had rounded the curve at anything like a speed of 40 miles an hour, as charged by one passenger. He said wet rails caused the wheels on the train to slip when the brakes were applied.

Edward Brennan, a guard, was crushed between telescoped cars and died before rescue workers could extricate him. William F. Emerson, an assistant fire marshal, was overcome by heat and exertion in climbing a fire ladder to the track and died as an aftermath of the wreck.

CONSTABLE KILLED.

Houston, Texas, June 20.—A large posse of officers and citizens were searching a woods seven miles west of Houston today for a negro who shot and killed Constable J. M. Weaver of Adicks, near here.

Weaver was shot from ambush after he and his son raided a negro booze joint outside the city last night.

Class Day Festivities Yesterday Open Program; Two Commencement Speakers

Two girl students so evenly matched in scholastic ability that school officials were totally unable to detect a shade in favor of either one, will have the honor of delivering the graduation essays at the commencement exercises at Manchester High school this evening. They are Miss Alice Lillian Modin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Modin of 148 Cooper street and Miss Gladys Ruth Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Harrison of 600 Center street.

Miss Modin will speak on the subject, "Growing Pains" and will also deliver the salutatory address while Miss Harrison in addition to making the valedictory will speak on "Assets and Liabilities." The program will open with three selections by the school orchestra, two by the Girls' Glee club and then will come Miss Modin's address. There will be two numbers by the male quartet after which Rev. Raymond Galtin, D. D., pastor of the First Church Congregational in Cambridge, will deliver the main address on the topic, "Idle Words." Howell Cheney will present the diplomas shortly after the valedictory.

There are 22 honor pupils in the senior class this year and their names follow:

Class Night

With solemn and awesome dignity, enhanced by the plainness of their caps and gowns, the seniors entered the auditorium of the High school last night and as soon as they were seated doffed the dignity along with their caps and gowns for the more natural mien of laughter and "wise-cracking," always the rule on Class Night.

To the slow music played by Miss E. Marion Dowdard's High school orchestra, the seniors moved slowly through the doorways on each side of the stage, the boys on the right, the girls on the left. With the audience on its feet, the class encircled the room, coming down the center aisle to their seats with well timed precision.

Heat Terrific

The terrific heat, of which the multitude of makeshift fans and handkerchiefs spoke volumes, caused the class to remove its caps and gowns. William Johnson, president of the seniors, spoke a few words of welcome and then introduced the vaudeville acts.

First of the acts was a scene in the principals office, namely C. P. Q's. The act was made up of personal quips, directed at teachers and students alike. The parodies on the latest song hits, caused heart-forgetting laughter among the crowd. When the "teachers" appeared to file complaints against the pupils, laughter could not be restrained.

Kenneth Graham impersonating a woman teacher, was a scream. Chief among the giggle-producers

REPORTS STATE TRADE SCHOOLS ARE OVERPAID

Commissioner Hall, of New Britain Discovers That Vouchers Were Shifted to Get More Federal Aid.

Hartford, June 20.—The State of Connecticut has been drawing about $20,000 per year too much from the Federal government under the Smith-Hughes act, to be used for trade school and teacher-training work, according to an announcement here today by E. F. Hall, of New Britain, state commissioner of finance and control, and has been getting it by a shifting of the vouchers in the three divisions under which the Smith-Hughes Act allotments are made.

The matter was reported to A. B. Meredith, state commissioner of education, and he in turn took it up with Governor Trumbull who has announced "such procedure will be discontinued no longer." As a result of the discovery, Connecticut will get $55,000 from the federal government this year instead of $75,000 as for several years past. The overpayments were discovered when the State Board of Finance and Control checked up on the books of F. J. Trinder, recently resigned as head of the Vocational Education Division of the State Board of Education.

How Payments are Made.

The payments under the Smith-Hughes act are made according to the amount of work each state does in full time trade schools, part time trade schools, and teacher-training schools. Commissioner Hall announces that the state has done more than its share in full time trade school work, but much less in the teacher-training and part time trade school work.

In order to show the government, Connecticut was entitled to the full allotment, vouchers for the full time trade schools were entered among those covering the two other divisions, according to the discoveries made by the Board of Finance and Control.

Meanwhile the State Board of Education is working on plans to bring the three sections up to the Federal requirements and so assure the state of its right to the full Smith-Hughes payments. Until this is done, the state will accept only the proper payments, and has so notified the Federal authorities.

YOUNG TOM HEFLIN IN TROUBLE AGAIN

Charged With Driving While Drugged—He Says He Had Been Drinking.

Washington, June 20.—There is likely to be another woodshed meeting between Senator J. Thomas Hefflin, Sr., (D) of Alabama, and his son J. Young Tom Hefflin, Jr. "Young Tom" is in trouble again. He was at liberty today under $1,000 bond, charged with driving an automobile "while under the influence of drugs." He was arrested after his automobile crashed into the rear end of a laundry truck on Pennsylvania avenue when the traffic light turned against him at Seventh street.

But the drug part of it is all wrong, according to the Senator's son. He told the police he had taken some veronal tablets, but that was a ruse, he admitted today, to conceal the fact that he had taken on several drinks before starting out in his car.

Had a Few Drinks.
"I had several drinks during the day," said young Hefflin, who is 28 years old. "When the cop rushed up he smelled liquor on my breath. On the way to the station, he asked me what was the matter with me. I didn't know what to say. I promised my father I would never take another drink following the New York episode several months ago. My father also told me that the next time I got drunk he was going to sell my car."

An Old Excuse.
"Four years ago when I was in the University of Alabama, I was placed on probation for drinking. Things went along smooth until I got drunk at a football game. My friends told me just to say I was drunk from veronal tablets. I did and got by with it."

"So that is the reason why I told them I had been taking veronal tablets after I was arrested. It was just a first impulse. When they asked me if I had been drinking, I told them no, but had just taken several veronal tablets. That was just trying to get by."

Story Didn't Work.
"Instead of getting by, the darn fool charged me with driving a car while under the influence of

WHAT WORLD WANTED TO KNOW

FIRST INSIDE STORY OF LINDY'S WEDDING

Even Guests Were Deceived by Carefully Planned Ruses—Invitations Sent in Code Over Tapped Wires—Anne Had No Engagement Ring—Lindy Picked Her Bridal Bouquet.

EXCLUSIVE!

By JULIA BLANSHARD

(Copyright, 1929, NEA Service, Inc.)

New York, June 20.—This is the "inside" story of the wedding of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Anne Morrow. It is the story of how a secret was kept, with virtually the entire world endeavoring to pry in upon that secret. And it is now possible for The Evening Herald, through the Newspaper Enterprise Association, to describe in detail for the first time the scenes attendant upon the marriage of the world's most famous flyer and the daughter of the American Ambassador to Mexico.

The ceremony uniting Lindbergh and Miss Morrow was simplicity itself. But behind the scenes were incidents as full of thrills and romance as might be desired by any young woman of Miss Morrow's age.

Matched Wits With World

With the entire world clamoring for news of the wedding date, with newspaper reporters and photographers standing guard day and night, with suspicions that even the family telephone line was tapped and that the house servants were being offered bribes, there was an unprecedented battle of wits.

And as Col. Lindbergh and Anne stood quietly before the minister in the living room of the Morrow home at Englewood, N. J., it might have been said that the peaceful scene thus presented was the answer to the old question of how to keep a secret.

Like the battle campaign of a great general, the wedding plans of the famous pair were perfectly camouflaged and executed with the simplicity of swift genius.

Even Guests Didn't Know

Not a single guest invited to the Morrow home at Englewood, N. J., on the afternoon of May 27, was aware that the wedding was to take place then. No house guest knew it until Anne appeared in their midst in her wedding gown.

None of the servants in the house, with the exception of the trusted chauffeur and housekeeper, even dreamed that Lindy and Anne had been married until two hours after the ceremony, when the bride and groom already were safely lost in traffic en route to their honeymoon yacht.

Six people were in on the secret: Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow, Elizabeth, Dr. Brown, the minister; Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, and Mary Smith, the dressmaker who made Anne's wedding gown and helped her dress.

The whole army of newspapermen, photographers, curious townsmen and tourists were thrown off the scent by the large reception Sunday in honor of Col. Lindbergh's mother and visiting relatives. It was deliberately planned to conceal the main event.

This reception proved a perfect ruse. Guests motored out from New York Sunday afternoon. Some did not depart when the event was over. The house was filled with great bowls of Anne's favorite garden flowers.

One of the guests attending the reception quite openly carried in a huge box that contained the wedding cake. This neighbor, whose name like the Morrow's begins with an "M" had the exciting honor of selecting Anne's wedding cake as if for her own daughter. An unsuspecting caterer interwove an "L" and an "M" atop the roebuck frosting of the big cake she ordered, totally unaware that those magic initials he traced stood for the most popular man in the world and his favored bride.

Invitations Were Casual

Most ingenious of all the reception plans was one of Anne's. For the reception she donned a charming little French ensemble of cross-bar printed blue and white Longest Grill in History of Columbus, O., Police; Ad- mits Being With Miss Hix On Night She Was Killed.

Columbus, Ohio, June 20.—Following more than 16 hours of grilling, Dr. James H. Snook, who has been held for investigation in connection with the murder of Miss Theora Hix, 25-year-old Ohio State University co-ed, admitted today, according to Chief of Police Harry E. French that he had been with Miss Hix the night of the slaying, and that he burned some of her clothes two days later.

Snook had been subjected to the longest grilling in the history of Columbus police.

The questioning took place at the city jail, after which Snook was returned to his cell at the county jail. At 7:45 o'clock, an hour and a half later, the probers made a sudden dash from the city jail to the county bastille, and with a stenographer, entered Snook's cell.

A sensational announcement was momentarily expected.

Brutally Beaten

Horribly mutilated, the body of Miss Hix was found among the weeds of a rifle range on the outskirts of the city, June 14. The girl had been brutally beaten and slashed to her death the previous night.

Until his admission early today,

DRY FORCES PLAN BIG CLEAN-UP OF CANADIAN BORDER

NORTH END'S QUIET MEETING BLOWS UP

Only 29 Present But Inter- esting Arguments Devel- op as Questions Are asked

Just 29 voters of the Eighth School and Utilities district attended the annual meeting of the district last night in the Robertson school on North School street and transacted the entire year's business. It was a hot night and as there was nothing of particular interest started for action the great majority of the voters remained away. However, annual meetings in this particular district, usually develop something of interest to those who attend and last night's meeting proved to be no exception.

Asks Questions

The meeting was scarcely under way under the guidance of Wells Strickland as moderator, when George H. Williams, who apparently had given the reports of the officers printed in The Herald on Tuesday evening, some thought and study, began to ask questions. For instance, he wanted to know why there was such a large increase Congress Departs Grum- bling Over Present Trend of Enforcement—Fails to Carry Out President's Re- quest to Appoint Commit- tee to Transfer Prohibi- tion Authority to the De- partment of Justice.

Washington, June 20.—Vastly relieved over the departure of Congress and a consequent slackening of the drumfire of criticism, prohibition authorities pressed forward today with their plans for "a grand clean up" of the Canadian border situation, with Detroit as the spearhead of the drive.

Congress departed grumbling and critical over the present trend of enforcement.

In the closing hours, President Hoover was subjected to the most savage attack he has yet experienced in Congress, at the end of which both Houses failed to carry out his request for the appointment of a joint committee to study the question of transferring enforcement from the Treasury to the Department of Justice. And Mr. Hoover himself was accused of "pusy-footing" on the whole question of prohibition. The accusation came from no less a Dry than Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, himself a former secretary of the Treasury.

Lowman Criticized

The refusal of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman to hear the report of Louis Jacques on prohibition border shooting was severely criticized today by Rep. Clancy (D) of Detroit. Jacques resigned as a customs patrol leader in the Detroit sector some days ago because, he said, he "couldn't stomach" the gun-play enforcers' methods insisted upon by the higher ups.

"I am surprised that Secretary Lowman would not listen to the story of a man who has first hand knowledge of conditions in Detroit," said Clancy.

Reign Of Terror

"Citizens of Detroit know that there is a virtual reign of terror on the Detroit river, caused by the promiscuous use of firearms by prohibition agents. Lowman should have been glad to hear Jacques."

"I resigned my position solely in protest against these shootings," Jacques said. "I do not understand why Washington authorities do not want to know the facts."

Referring to Lowman's statement that he should have heard his story to his superior officers first, Jacques declared that he had protested to higher officers of the Dry "army" in Detroit and that his protests fell on deaf ears. He then decided to come to a higher authority, he said.

Need 50 Millions

Fifty million dollars or more probably would be required to continue the drive and to leave sufficient forces in the sectors "cleaned up" to hold them against revived activities of the bootleggers.

In addition to appropriations for the Prohibition Bureau, Coast Guard and Customs Service, it would be necessary to furnish more funds to the Justice Department for the expansion of the judiciary and to augment forces of the United States attorneys.

The 1930 Budget

Consideration of the 1930 budget will start in a preliminary way soon after the end of the fiscal year June 30. The treasury will prepare its estimates of the sums needed to satisfactorily prosecute the prohibition drive to meet the pledges given the country in the campaign of President Hoover. Figures will be submitted to the budget bureau in July and formal hearings will take place later.

There may be some objections to the heavier appropriations for prohibition enforcement because of the rapidly mounting costs of other phases of government operation and the fact that the Treasury will be required many millions of dollars for the administration of the new farm relief bill in the 1930 year.

Must Economize

In order to avoid a deficit in 1930 it will be necessary for the

MRS. DE PRIEST'S DUTY TO MEET MRS. HOOVER

Wife of Colored Congress- man Was Invited to White House Tea and She Went; Editor Explains Incident.

Chicago, June 20.—Mrs. Oscar De Priest, wife of Chicago's negro Representative in Congress, attended the now famous tea given by Mrs. Hoover at the White House because she thought it was her duty and not because she had any social aspirations or a desire to mingle with "white folks."

Her friends here in Chicago's far flung colored district, home of 175,000 negroes and second to Harlem, New York, in colored population, made this assertion today in discussing the social stir occasioned by the tea party incident.

Nothing Else to Do

"What else could she do?" asked Robert S. Abbott, editor of the Chicago Defender, the leading colored newspaper of the country in an interview with International News Service. "She was invited by Mrs. Hoover. She went."

The Mrs. De Priest incident will serve a good purpose in that it will help show what the colored people really are seeking in the way of race equality, in the opinion of the editor.

Want Equality

"We want social equality only in so far as business and official affairs are concerned," Abbott explained. "We do not seek to mingle with white people in their homes. But we do believe that equality should prevail in hotels, theaters, restaurants, trains and the like where we pay for service and, as citizens of the United States, should get it without the slightest suggestion of discrimination."

"Why should Mrs. De Priest have to undergo the slightest humiliation? Her husband was elected to Congress. She went with him, to Washington as many other Congressmen's wives do."

Was Invited

"When she was invited to tea at the White House, along with the wives of about sixty other Congressmen, she regarded the invitation as a request—almost a requirement. She represented not the negro race but the American people."

Mrs. De Priest, he declared, has no social ambitions. In Chicago, among her own colored folks, she never entertains on a sumptuous scale.

"Had Mrs. Hoover either ignored or snubbed Mrs. De Priest the incident would be deplorable and would have aroused intense and bitter feeling on the part of people of our race who feel that in many ways they are being discriminated against."

FAMED PAIR'S CLEVER PLOT TOLD IN PICTURES

A reception on the previous day brought some of the guests and the big wedding cake.

Anne didn't have an engagement ring.

Not even the guests knew the wedding was to take place until Anne appeared on the arm of her father.

Little old newspapermen guess that a bride and groom had driven right past them.

The "Lone Eagle" was his own best man.

That morning, to disarm suspicion, Anne went for a drive dressed in her going-away costume.

Mrs. Morrow sent code messages to the guests.

Lindy himself picked the bouquet of larkspur that Anne carried.

Even Dr. Brown, the minister, wore an ordinary business suit.

Instead of having another fitting, Ambassador Morrow told reporters the ceremony already had been performed.

Monday morning, Anne again put on the same ensemble for an auto ride with Lindy. This time photographers succeeded in getting a picture of her. After lunch she and Lindy took a second ride, a short spin, Anne still in the same costume.

As the guests began chatting again, Lindy and Anne were hurriedly a few minutes before refreshments were served. This proved the most honey touch of all. For Anne and Lindy's wedding guests had lemonade that Mrs. Morrow and Elizabeth had made themselves, and cake that Lindy and Anne cut.

To answer with honor Life's call.

As the depth of true friendship is

The memories of joy and of cheer.

Theaters

AT THE STATE

"His Captive Woman"

Those who enjoy a well told screen story, wherein rugged sentiment develops logically from a dramatic beginning to an astounding climax, are finding "His Captive Woman" the new First National picture with sound effects, now showing at the State theater,

Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackall are co-featured and offer some of the finest work of their careers. George Fitzmaurice produced and directed the picture, which is laid in tropical island locations for the most part, though it contains one of the finest courtroom sequences in any modern photoplay.

"On the same bill are two very good Vitaphone vaudeville acts and also a comedy and novelty reel.
Friday and Saturday a big double feature bill with Reginald Denny in talking picture "Clear the Decks" and also a mammoth special production "Simba" will be shown.

GLOBE WILL OPEN
SEASON SATURDAY

Playgrounds in Use Monday; Instructors Named; Tennis Courts at East Side Repaired.

Although the weather man brought at least temporary relief with cool, refreshing winds last night, hundreds of Manchester people will be interested to know that the Globe Hollow swimming pond will be officially opened for the summer season Saturday and both the East and West Side Playgrounds on next Monday.

Director Lewis Lloyd of the Recreation Centers today announced the staff of workers who will assist in the playground and Globe Hollow duties. Frank C. Busch and August Mildner will have charge of the lifeguard work at Globe Hollow with Mrs. William Mack in the canteen. The corps of playground instructors are Miss Viola Lalonde, associate director, Herbert Carlson,
Miss Francis Tibbets and Elmo Mantelli.

Instructor's Qualifications
Miss Tibbets has been teaching in the Eighth District and lives on North Main street. She has had charge of playground work in schools and also has had charge of camps in the summer. Carlson and Mantelli are well known local athletes. The latter is a graduate of the local high school and entered Bates College last fall.

Carlson, also a local high school graduate and star athlete here, graduated from Arnold College in New Haven and also attended Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania. He has also had two years of clerical training and a wide experience in gymnastic work in and around New Haven both in schools and public playgrounds. Last summer he worked on the night shift of the playgrounds here but now has been assigned the work done
then by James Dowd.

Playground Hours
The playgrounds will be open from 10 to 12 in the morning, from 1 to 5 in the afternoon and 6 to 9 in the evening every day except Saturday and Sunday. Saturday hours will be from 10 to 12 and the playgrounds will not be open Sunday.
Carlson will alternate between the two playgrounds in the daytime with Miss Lalonde and Miss Tibbets. Mantelli will have charge of the East Side playgrounds nights with the West Side being taken care of by Carlson.

Important Improvements
The tennis courts at the East Side which have been in very poor condition for several weeks are being fixed and will be in good condition. This has been next to impossible when the playgrounds have been unguarded. Small children have persisted in breaking down the wire fence and the courts have been cut up by players wearing shoes instead of sneakers, the proper footwear. A door will be placed at the court entrance and kept locked when the courts are not being used. The key will be left at the fire house opposite the Nathan Hale school when an instructor is not present.

Several important improvements have been made at Globe Hollow.
The biggest is the building of a long concrete retaining wall with bleacher steps from the dam to the end of the bathhouse. The water will come up to within six inches of the bottom step. A concrete fountain water bubbler has also been installed in the center of the "kiddie" section. The bathhouse has been renovated. A wire basket check system has been put into effect which takes care of 400 bathers at one time which is more than twice as many as before. Electric lights have been installed and picnic tables put in shady places for persons wishing to carry their lunch. A lifeguard will be on duty from 10 to 12 in the morning and from 1 until dark at night weekdays and 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Saturdays. No time will be taken for supper hours this season.

TO SUE GOVERNMENT

Plattsburgh, N. Y., June 20.—Mrs. Frank Stay, mother of young Arthur Gordon, slain by customs guards near the Canadian border, may file suit against the government to make restitution for the death of her son.

Judge E. C. Gordon, former assistant United States attorney and former city judge, will act for the mother in her effort to compel the government to make restitution for the death of her son.

The suit will be the nature of a test case, as it has been proven that young Gordon was transporting liquor when fired upon.

Meanwhile both the government and District Attorney Loyal O'Connell were marking time today in anticipation of the preliminary hearing of the case which comes up Monday. The hearing is expected to bring the case to a showdown.

Hawking Catarrh

Human Blight

The catarrhal victim makes evident his vicious presence everywhere. You breathe, hawk, spit, cough, gag! Personally he is uncomfortable, as he makes others unhappy.

Doctors say, All the germs that penetrate to and infect innermost recesses of nose, throat and lungs; then promote the healing of the deeply hidden spots of raw, tender, inflamed mucous membrane. Gargling, sniffing liquids or spraying cannot reach these diseased spots. Physicians recommend inhaling "DEO" vapors of heated eucalyptus and other antiseptic, soothing, healing oils. "DEO" vapors reach every nook and crevice of the respiratory system—bringing instant relief and speedy end to even stubborn catarrh.

and possibly to result in murder charges against Customs Guards Chatham and Covey. The guardsmen who claim the killing was accidental have been transferred to another county and have thus far refused to accept summons, although Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman has promised to instruct them to accept subpoenas.

WRECK FREES CHICKENS

Norwalk, June 20.—Frank Malo, 18, of Lawrence, Mass., is in Norwalk hospital for observation today following an accident near Wilson's Point in which his truck loaded with crates containing $50 chickens plunged into a tree and was wrecked. Samuel Shatz, also of Lawrence, owner of the truck, was treated by a physician after the accident and returned to the scene of the wreck with a crew of men to hunt the chickens, all of which were liberated. Shatz estimated he would get all but about one hundred of the fowl which scattered through a swamp or fled up and down the highway in frenzy.

Tent Caterpillar Practically Eliminated from State Rights of Way After Two Year Fight.

Practical elimination from the state highway rights of way of tent caterpillar nests has been accomplished by the campaign conducted against that tree destroying pest by the Connecticut Highway Department during the past two years, according to an announcement made today by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald.

When the highway department district supervisors set out this spring to renew their war on the caterpillar, they found that the nests so prevalent on the trees along the highway rights of way in previous years were almost entirely missing this year. Only in a very few instances were caterpillar nests found on the state highways and in each of these cases they were promptly eliminated.

Two years ago, Commissioner Macdonald issued instructions to all district supervisors of the highway department to begin the elimination of the tent caterpillar. At that time the insect was spreading rapidly throughout the state and causing increased damage to various types of trees and especially fruit trees each year.

The campaign was vigorously conducted each spring. The nests of the insect pests were sought out both on the highways and on lands adjacent to the roads. Branches carrying the tent-like nests were removed and burned. Whenever the pest was discovered, on adjacent lands, the co-operation of the land owner in its quick elimination was secured.

The almost complete disappearance of the caterpillar from the highways this spring, indicates the success of the campaign. Inspections will be made along all highways each year, however, and immediate action taken to kill off any trace of the destroyer which is found.

80,000 HAVE SEEN
THE CONVICT SHIP

A total of 80,000 people, which will probably be increased to 90,000 by Sunday night when the exhibit closes in Hartford, have been aboard the ancient Convict Ship, "Success" since her arrival at the foot of State street a little less than four weeks ago. For length of stay of a single exhibit and number of visitors, this probably eclipses all records for Hartford.

The number of visitors has ranged from two to five thousand during the week days and on Sundays has been between the six and eight thousand marks, touching the higher figure the first Sunday the ship was in port.

For the first ten days or so the number of visitors was almost exclusively from Hartford and suburbs. Then, in line with the policy of the ship, methods were used to attract a radius of thirty-five to forty miles. Springfield was reached during the last ten days and has been contributing its thousands to those anxious to see the oldest ship in the world and to listen to her strange history as a relic of the days when men, women and children were transported from the United Kingdom to Australia for terms of imprisonment that were never less than seven years although the offenses committed were frequently of a character that today would be considered trivial.

FACING THE FUTURE

In Manchester as everywhere in the United States this week girls and boys, young men and young women, are arriving at the close of an epoch in their lives. They are graduating from the grades, from high school, from college. Regardless of their own opinions; in all too many instances also the opinions of their parents, they have not all the "book learnin'" they ought to have to help smooth their pathways towards success in maturer years. Especially is this true of those who, having reached that age where compulsory attendance is no longer required, give three cheers and "get a job." Immature in mind and body the vast majority of them swell the great total of those who never rise to a point of efficiency above that of low mediocrity. They prefer what they believe is freedom from distasteful tasks to a continuance of the discipline of the schoolroom.

No doubt exists that many of these are not students and never would become such. In some cases the abandonment of school is, perhaps, as well. But the pity of it is that this sizeable proportion lacks also the incentive to learn a trade; to be willing to submit to the several years apprenticeship necessary for the groundwork in a chosen occupation. Their one desire is to have money of their own to spend for pleasure. The pity of it is that it is years later before they realize that, poorly equipped as they are, what little they can earn must go for other and more material things than pleasure.

THE BORDER SITUATION

President Hoover did not long remain silent to the protests that have been general in connection with the many recent unjustified prohibition killings. They have not been inspired or provoked by hysteria. Firm conviction that attempts at enforcement were getting out of control and in the hands of irresponsible, in many instances, caused that flood of protests. Secretary Lowman has now issued orders, not of his own volition we believe, but as the result of a direct order from the President, taking away from enforcement officers their sawed-off shotguns and rifles. They are forbidden to fire upon any suspected person trying to run from them. Enforcement of these orders will help to reduce the mortality among innocent persons whose business or pleasure takes them anywhere in the vicinity of our northern border.

While the President, refers to "international criminals" as those responsible for the conditions he deplures and promptly acts to improve, we cannot escape the fact that it is our own people who are responsible. Were there no demand among otherwise law-abiding citizens for the forbidden beverages there would be no "international criminals" to run the stuff into Detroit and other ports along the border.

REAL POLICE WORK

Two notable bits of police work in Connecticut might well serve as examples to the murderous customs guards and border patrols. They represent efficient police work by brave, determined men. Three desperate youths who escaped from the reform school at Manchester, N. H., who were known to have a loaded revolver they had used to accomplish a robbery, were captured by State Policeman Harry Tucker of the Ridgefield barracks. If any man had provocation and, perhaps, a right to shoot, this policeman had it. He knew he had reckless armed youths to deal with but, even after the driver of the speeding car had swerved and upset the policeman racing alongside, he refrained from shooting.

He remounted and finally captured them.
 Only a day or two ago Sergeant Amos Anderson, known as the "Lone Wolf of the Post Road," raced at times at 70 miles an hour in pursuit of a robber's car filled with loot for which he had been watching. Although he drew his gun, it is reported, he refrained from shooting because of the danger of hitting some innocent in the traffic crowded highway. But he got his man!
 We submit these two examples as work of the best kind of police work. Other officers please copy and merit praise and promotion; not condemnation and jail.

A VETERAN SENATOR

Now and then something occurs to remind us that there are other men in Congress than those who are featured by reason of their frequent appearance in the news of the day. Such a one is Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming, whose eighty-fifth birth anniversary is today. He has served in the Senate thirty-six years, longer than any other man ever has had that honor and he is the only Grand Army veteran now in that body. He is not a mere figurehead. The last eight years he has been chairman of the great Appropriations Committee and as Senator McKellar, a Democratic member of that committee from Tennessee, pointed out in a speech the other day, he has seen to the handling of government estimates totaling $40,000,000,000. Alert, active, a tireless worker and master of detail, he had previously served in his state legislature and as governor of his state before being sent to the Senate. "There never has been a more indefatigable worker in the Senate than he has and still is," said Senator McKellar. And yet his name seldom is seen in press reports. Which might prove that those who are seen and seldom heard have their places in the affairs of the nation, and important ones, too.

DISILLUSIONED

Sailing today from Europe is a disillusioned youth. He has been called a hero by his father. Other less pleasing terms have been used to designate him by the public at large and aviators more especially. Arthur Schreiber, cables advise us, has slowly come to the realization that what he believed was clever and smart is not so regarded by others. Those three brave Frenchmen have treated him as few others could have brought themselves to treat him. He has been forgiven by them for preventing them from carrying out in its entirety their dearest dream. He begins to fear that his visions of wealth and a reputation on his return that would equal that accorded Lindbergh were not soundly founded. His doubts are based on a certainty. He never has had a job. He knows no trade. He has been one of those who is always going to do something. At last he has something permanent; the job of carrying through life the reputation of risking more to be the mark at which is pointed the international finger of scorn and derision than any other man has ever done.

VICTORIOUS AGAIN

Charles Lindbergh, a young man you may have seen mentioned in the public prints, has returned from his honeymoon of three weeks and resumed work. He returns once more victorious. That's a habit with him. He conquered the Atlantic by air, alone and unaided. He won the affection and love of the entire world by his conduct in victory. He routed the minions of the movies, the vaudeville stage, the exploiters of youth and fame, that he might win for himself a most enviable place in the esteem of maturer men of equally far-sighted vision as his own and aid materially in the promotion of the science of aviation. Undoubtedly he considers his winning of a delightful young woman for his bride as greater and more worthwhile than anything else he has done. But we shall always believe that his utter defeat of the hounds of the press of this country is a triumph. Our admiration for Col. Charles Lindbergh continues to be boundless.

DROWNED

The pity of it is that with the coming of the first warm weather we must have the sad list of drowned. We talk about the heat and exclaim because of the humidity which makes life unbearable. A certain percentage of us, swimmers and non-swimmers, rush off to the nearest water deep enough in which to drown. The enthusiasm and heedlessness of youth is matched by the irresponsibility of the more mature in years. Those who do not voluntarily wade into strange waters to suddenly step off into a hole, gingerly climb into canoes, totally ignorant of their management. All too often the result is the same. Names added to the long list of needlessly dead. Yet we claim to be an intelligent people and strong for education.

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 20.—The Manhattan variation on the county fair may be found almost anywhere in the year either at Grand Central Palace, or, less often, at Madison Square Garden.
 Everything from pure food to airplanes have their day at the endless round of exhibitions which, but for their "bigger and better" atmosphere, might be a part of the annual affairs staged in the more rural communities.
 The whole world is drawn to the New York shows, I am told—chemists, florists, manufacturers, furniture fancies and home decorators. Exhibits come from every point of the globe and some twenty-five million people have looked upon them.

Here it was that many years ago a young woman went about with a basket of hot dogs. Today this individual is many times a millionaire—Harry Stevens, the "not dog kind" of America, who made his pile from the appetites of the city dwellers. Other fortunes have been made here in cornucopias and odd caterings such as one might find on any fair grounds.

In a Madison Avenue shop there appears a window display of neckties which are advertised as "the ties preferred by Lindbergh."
 They are not exactly the ties one might expect the "one eagle" to wear. That is, unless you believe that the lone eagle screams. For they are a bit loud.

The story behind the window display is to the effect that Anne Morrow, just before her marriage, was trailed by a flock of reporters who followed her to this shop.
 There she bought an assortment of the ties, presumably for Lindy. When the papers revealed the wanderings of Miss Morrow, who had not been recognized by the clerk, the shop immediately decorated its window.

And while talking about shops, there's a place just opened where the millions of bachelors in New York can go to have their socks darned. A 24-hour service is maintained.

The problem of getting socks mended is one of the major difficulties facing the unmarried here, I am told. A number of women have taken sock darning up as a business, but to my knowledge this is the first mid-town shop devoted to such an industry. Most of the business is received during the evening hours when the gents come home from work and find the sad state of their laundries.

And a new shirt I saw in some snappy shop is called "the Traffic" because they're bright red and green.

When, the other night, the Players club gave "Becky Sharp" as their annual revival, the original "Becky" was sitting in a box looking on. She was Missie Madden Fluke, who, through some magic, seems to have come upon the recipe for eternal youth. It was something like 30 years ago that Mrs. Fluke created the character in Langdon Mitchell's "dramatization of the Thackeray novel."
 Only a few persons in the audience were aware of her presence since she slipped in after the rise of the curtain to prevent any special fuss being made.

GILBERT SWAN.

STEAMER CROSSES OCEAN

On June 20, 1919, the first steamship succeeded in crossing the Atlantic ocean.

This was the Savannah, of 330 tons, measuring 100 feet in length, originally built to ply between New York and Savannah as a sailing packet. She was purchased by Savannah merchants and fitted with steam machinery, the paddle wheels being constructed to fold up and be laid upon the deck in stormy weather.
 Under the command of Captain Steven Rogers, this vessel sailed from Savannah May 20, 1919, but did not venture on the high seas until the 25th of the month.
 She reached Liverpool, England, June 20, after a voyage of 28 days—during 16 of which she used her paddles. Of Cape Clear she was mistaken for a ship on fire and was pursued by the British cutter Kite. The Savannah afterward visited St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, Stockholm and other foreign ports.
 Captain Rogers, having failed to dispose of his vessel to the king of Sweden, started for home and reached Savannah Nov. 30, 1919. The engines and boilers were afterward removed and the ship was used as a sailing packet. She was finally wrecked off the south coast of Long Island.

Washington, June 20.—Perhaps some of the dry brethren in the more remote sections will sleep smugly tonight under the quiet illusion that some of the embassies here have gone dry and that there is more or less hope of drying them all up in the near future.
 In the interest of truth and light, it must be said that such an idea is considerably exaggerated and that it is considered very doubtful whether there will be any change whatever in the diplomatic liquor situation, despite all the recent commotion.

It may be that the pique of British Ambassador Sir Esmé Howard will lead him to stop serving alcoholic beverages at his official functions; he may even carry out his threat to stop importing any more bottles into the embassy, though he will do neither of those things if he listens to the Americans here who are accustomed to attend his parties.

There is no question that Sir Esmé has been sore at all the criticism and publicity which his embassy has received merely because it took advantage of the diplomatic liquor immunity enjoyed by all foreign diplomats. It is also true that his prestige as dean of the diplomatic corps is sufficient to withstand any resulting social obloquy.

But the embassy isn't dry now and a large consignment of wet goods is already en route to it over the high seas and when that is consumed will one be able to tell just what's going to be done. Other diplomats have made it perfectly plain that they aren't going to give up the wines and liquors to which they are accustomed and the British curtail on their American guests they will be virtually alone in that respect, and common belief is that not even the British are going to stop serving what they please among themselves and at private functions.

Foreign diplomats here, always jealous of their privileges, generally are only too happy to treat thirsty American friends—and few, if any, are the American friends who are not even more delighted about it than their hosts.

Wines and liquors have become an arm of diplomacy under the Volstead Act. Sinister and insidious as the thought may be, diplomats have found themselves increasingly more popular and the Americans a whole lot more interested in their affairs. Obviously, the Anti-Saloon League and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals mean nothing to an ambassador. But there are cabinet officials, senators and other officials and public men who can help him directly or indirectly in promoting the interests of his country. And good diplomats are not supposed to overlook any good bet to improve personal relations with them.

Serving liquor to Americans has actually become a serious drain on some of the diplomatic missions whose budgets are restricted. In fact, an attaché of one legation recently wrote complainingly to a Washington newspaper of "the extraordinary thirst of American legislators and public officials."

"It is embarrassing," he wrote, "to turn a deaf ear always to influential American officials when they make the fact exceedingly obvious that they are not annoyed when packages of choice liquors are thoughtfully sent to their homes."

Of course the question of drying up the foreign embassies here is more or less linked with the proposition of drying up our own diplomatic establishments abroad. Some dries think our own diplomats ought to set the example.
 A bill extending the prohibition law to America's diplomats in foreign capitals doubtless will appear in Congress sooner or later, though it won't have the approval of the State Department or the White House.

After that it doubtless would be considered necessary to install a prohibition agent in each American embassy or legation to make sure of the law's enforcement and to keep out the bootleggers.

THERE'S A BIT OF SCIENCE IN GOING TO MARKET TODAY

By Sister Mary
 A market list of some sort is of course indispensable. The list prevents over-stocking and makes for economy.

However, when marketing the housewife should be sure to buy the meat that is offered at the most reasonable price. She should not go with a fixed idea of the exact fruits and vegetables she must purchase regardless of price. Green peas may be her choice for the succulent dinner vegetable for the night, but if she finds the peas shriveled and yellow and a poor investment she should make another choice. A list suggesting a variety of possible vegetables would have helped her in selecting the best one available.

Remembering the Menu.
 The inexperienced shopper may find it necessary to revise her list and practically remake her menus. For instance, lamb with green peas, cream potatoes, tomato salad and strawberry shortcake may have been in the housekeeper's mind for dinner. Lamb may be impossible to find, so she may have to substitute beef or veal which would mean a change in the dessert if beef were chosen as well as a change in the green vegetables.

When making the list, the way in which meats, fruits or vegetables are to be used should be kept in mind. Vegetables wanted for soup need not be as perfect as those wanted for table service. Coarse outer stalks of celery are quite as good for soup as choice hearts and are much cheaper. So a little notation on the list suggesting the use is helpful.

THE CURE OF BRONCHITIS

In yesterday's article I explained about the differences between acute and chronic bronchitis. In treating these disorders the treatment, of course, varies somewhat in both an acute and chronic form because of other contributing causes, such as derangement of the heart, kidneys or liver. However, the following instructions may give my readers some helpful suggestions about methods of treatment which may be used.

Acute Bronchitis

This is usually known as a cold on the chest. If this cold is rather severe, it is well for the patient to stop all work, go to bed between woolen blankets, and increase skin elimination by copious perspiration. Put a hot water bottle at the feet and at the start, use a treatment over the chest with a high-candle-power therapeutic light, an electric pad, hot towels, or some similar treatment. Rubbing the chest with all of wintergreen also acts as a good counter-irritant and will help start the sweating.
 The dietary treatment is very simple. Patient should take only wheezing so that within a few days he can start taking systematic strength-building exercises.

 After the fruit fast, the patient should live on a well balanced diet, comparatively free from starches and sugars. Milk should also be eliminated for some time.

Two things to remember in the cure of chronic bronchitis are: first, to build up the general strength through systematic exercise and to eliminate for at least several weeks all foods containing large amounts of starches, sugars and fats.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Coddled Eggs
 Question—Mrs. J. H. G. asks: "How are coddled eggs prepared?"
 Answer—Coddled eggs are prepared by pouring boiling water over them while in the shells and allowing to stand about eight minutes. When broken open, the egg should have a jelly-like consistency, but at the same time, should be so well cooked that there is no transparent albumen.

First Aid to Fresh Cuts

Question—Mrs. F. G. T. asks: "What would you recommend to wash a fresh cut with—water and carbolic acid? Or should the inside of the cut be painted with iodine?"
 Answer—Cuts and abrasions should be washed with sterilized water as quickly as possible after the injury, and then painted with iodine or mercuric iodine.

Potatoes Easily Digested

Question—Lila W. asks: "Which is more easily digested—potatoes or bread? Which is more fattening?"
 Answer—If potatoes are cooked properly they will be more completely digested than bread, and are not as fattening as bread, as potatoes contain only about one-third as many calories or heat units as bread.

Gall-bladder Removed Question—H. J. G. writes: "A year ago my mother had her gall-bladder removed. Now she has a rash all over her body, and her doctor tells her it is because she has no gall-bladder. What can she do? Would an orange juice fast do her any good? I have tried the orange juice fast, myself, for eight days and feel like a different person."

Answer—There is probably no connection between the removal of your mother's gall-bladder and the rash which she is now bothered with. The gall-bladder, if irradated or diseased, may become a regular cesspool of poison. After such a gall-bladder is removed, the patient should feel better for a year or two, but if the same habits continued which produced the gall-bladder trouble in the first place, other symptoms and disorders must inevitably result. The orange juice fast would certainly be a good treatment for her to take to cleanse the liver and remove excess toxins. Tell your mother to be especially careful afterwards to use good food combinations.

Senator Heflin got no response when he dared any Democrat in the United States Senate to declare he would support Al Smith for president in 1932. All those senators are supporting themselves for president right now.

AUTO EDITORIAL COST OF NEGLIGENCE

The life of an automobile depends on its owner. Automotive statisticians have fixed the average life of automobiles in general at around seven or eight years, but few cars of whatever the make remain that long in the hands of a single owner.

The reason is obvious. Besides things of the same means of transportation, the owner falls into the human falling of neglecting his old stand-by. And so the car deteriorates faster than it should. In much less than the seven or eight years for which it is marked, it is ready for the scrap heap.

Even the highly improved machines of today face this short end, due to the negligence of their owners. Their motors may still be like new, yet their bodies have become shabby and unattractive. rattles, bangs, creaks and minor dimbulities threatening the comforts of driving have arisen.

There is no reason for this condition in cars of today, except that of human neglect. Service has become a highly specialized part of the automotive game. There are few dealers who can't be depended on condition. It only remains for the owner, as soon as he feels something wrong with the car, to take it to his dealer or nearest service station for a check-up and whatever repairs are needed.

It is such constant watch on the car and such minor repair work that will keep the automobile in good operating condition for a much longer time than we are accustomed to have it.

WORLD FIGURES OF AUTO INDUSTRY

New York, N. Y., June 20.—World-wide figures on the automobile industry, compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, show that:

The United States leads all other countries in motor vehicle registration, with 24,493,124 units—the entire foreign registration is only 7,285,000; the United States has 3,005,614 miles of roads—its nearest rival is France, with 440,085 miles; Argentina is the leading customer for American-built cars; Mexico has the most automobiles per mile of road with 37; Russia, with .06, has the fewest cars per mile of roads; the United States has the fewest persons per car, with 4.3; China has 17,000 persons for every motor vehicle in the country.

MOTORISTS PROTEST ROAD RACING

Los Angeles, Calif., June 20.—The recent series of stock car speed trials held on state highways is arousing the protest of motorists who feel that such runs are dangerous and unlawful.

"Why should we be arrested for driving at a much slower speed while race drives are allowed to pilot fast cars at speeds of 70 miles an hour or more?" states one protesting letter filed at the Automobile Club of Southern California.

It was pointed out that with over 2,000,000 cars using the state highways it isn't safe for cars to be driven in excess of the state law, which allows 40 miles an hour.

Shipments of tractors from the United States in 1928 amounted to more than 57,700 and were valued at more than $37,700,000.

Old and New Meet in New Mexico

Ancient Civilization and Natural Wonders Attract Thousands of Tourists.

The roads of New Mexico, as map shows, take the motorist past such marvels of a past civilization as the pueblo village shown above, and such natural wonders as the "Enchanted Mesa" of legendary fame, shown at lower right.

Santa Fe, N. M., June 20.—Offering natural wonders majestic enough to awe even the most blasé of motorists, New Mexico, the youngest of the states, is acting as host to thousands of tourists this year.

The world first heard of this territory three centuries ago when Francisco Coronado and his Spanish soldiers invaded and conquered the country. But long before that time civilization flourished here and remnants of this ancient Indian culture is still to be seen throughout the state.

And even though cliff dwellings, old Spanish buildings and old Spanish customs mark the traveler back to those forgotten days, the present hustle and bustle throughout the state leaves the impression that New Mexico is an up and doing part of the country.

Entering this state in the northeast corner on the National Old Trails Highway, the first stop is Raton, a quiet little city nestled close to the mountain side and a center of stock raising and mining. This city is strictly modernized. Leaving it, with the intention of making Santa Fe, two roads are optional. U. S. Highways 485 and 85 lead through interesting country abounding in historical lore.

The former leads through the town of Taos, where the famed character Kit Carson made his home. The home still stands and thousands of tourists visit this and his grave which is close by. Taking road number 85, which is in excellent condition, the route leads through old Fort Union to Las Vegas, scene of the south's great rodeos, past hot springs and caves, and finally into Santa Fe.

Here is a city worth many miles of travel to see. Built on a plain, about 7000 feet above sea level and surrounded by mountains from 10,000 to 13,000 feet high, this city vividly presents two distinct civilizations—the Indian and the modern.

The old Spanish part of the city has adobe houses and narrow streets, and still retains some of the customs of the ancient people. The modern part contains good, wide streets, modern business blocks and pretentious, present-day residences. Points of interest are turquoise mines, Indian pueblos, Indian dances, mountain hunting, ancient ruins, cliff dwellings, one of the oldest churches and one of the oldest government buildings in the country.

Weeks could be spent in this locality visiting the 22,000 acres filled with cliff-dweller ruins, artificial caves, stone sculpture and a variety of other reminders of prehistoric life and living, but passing on to other wonders, U. S. highways 85 winds down to Albuquerque, 66 miles south of Santa Fe.

This city, too, is built in two parts—the old city founded by the Spaniards and the new city developed by business. Here is the large state university, industrial and business concerns, hospitals and numerous health resorts. This largest city in the state is sometimes called "The Health Center of the Southwest."

Continuing south on highway 85, the tourist arrives at Los Lunas. Two routes offer themselves here. One, 68, running due west eventually leads to Gallup, nearly on the western border of the state. On this route, a magnificent drive, the Continental Divide is crossed near Thoreau. Cliff dwellings are seen in the Chaco Canyon, and all along the route one sees the remnants of a once great race, the Pueblo Indians.

At Gallup is one of the greatest irrigation dams in the country. Lava beds, petrified forests, natural bridges and other scenic wonders are found close by. The second route, a continuation of highway 85, terminates at Hot Springs, famed health resort. Fishing abounds in this district. Another road goes on south to Las Cruces on the way to El Paso, Texas.

At this southern terminus, the tourist strikes northeast on U. S. highway 386, through arid climate into Roswell, the site of Hondo Dam. South on state highway 2 eventually brings the tourist into Carlsbad, home of the famous Carlsbad Caves.

No one can tell after driving over a good part of the state's highways just what sort of a state it is. There are so many sorts of localities, mountains, valleys, deserts, irrigated lands, fertile river valleys that no one can accuse New Mexico of lacking variety.

Indian tribes are numerous. One can make the acquaintance of Navajo, Pueblo, Apache and Hopi tribes—all in their native garb and living their own life.

Traveling in New Mexico, the roads are found to be truly highways. Most of them traverse elevations from 3000 feet to the foot of mountain peaks rising 14,000 feet into the clouds.

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

Because of a fine sense of honor, NAN CARROLL, private secretary to JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, lawyer, decides to resign when she discovers she is in love with him. Morgan is deeply in love with his beautiful wife, IRIS.

Nan postpones her resignation because she thinks Morgan may need her assistance in his defense of a supposed friend, BERT CRAWFORD, whom Nan distrusts. A letter innocently placed in Nan's hands by little 6-year-old CURTIS MORGAN reveals the story of Crawford and Iris' affair. After Morgan wins Crawford's acquittal, Crawford leaves town and Iris follows almost immediately.

She writes Morgan she will never return, but cleverly omits reference to Crawford. Nan resumes Morgan from despair by romantically leaving him more deeply into his work. She acts as long-distance housekeeper for him and little Curtis, who adores Nan. Nan goes to the capitol to take her examinations and upon her return, Morgan tells her of his proposal, telling her of his and the boy's need of her. She accepts. They are quietly married, and Morgan makes her a partner in his law business.

They are prevented from leaving town by the arrival of DAVID BLACKHULL, a wealthy father. Morgan goes with the boy, who says he will give himself up and Nan waits alone in her new office. Realizing there will be no honeymoon, Nan calls her new home and leaves order for dinner, instructing the maid to remove the picture of Iris from above the fireplace. The secretary brings her the paper with a sensational account of their marriage and a picture of the beautiful Iris.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXI.

It was nearly 2 o'clock when the dog of Nan's office opened to admit her husband. This was the first time she had been alone in private with John Curtis Morgan since the ceremony had been performed that morning. She had dreaded the moment and longed for it with sickening intensity. Now that it was upon her she wanted to run away. . . . So terribly much depended upon this first moment alone together. Would he murmur something dear and tender? She loved him so intensely that her love was a knot of almost unbearable pain in her heart. If he did not love her at all, was only grateful.

Well, Nan! How usual and cordial an unembarrassed she seemed to be, Nan thought despairingly. If he loved her even the tiniest bit, he would feel all choked up now. "Like it? It was a mean trick to play on you, turning your own face without consulting your tastes, but I did want the surprise to be complete."

"I—I love it!" Nan gasped and rose to turn half from him for a moment so that her eyes should not betray her love and despair. "Look how the sunshine pours through these gold gauze curtains! And this Persian rug is a sinful extravagance—"

Morgan laughed, a deep, musical sound that vibrated every nerve in the girl's body. "Whoa! That's my business! Remember, young lady, the partnership didn't go into effect until today, and you have no right to challenge any business expense of mine incurred previous to that partnership! Seriously, Nan dear, I couldn't give you anything but the best. You've earned it all, and so much more."

He was coming toward her, both hands outstretched, his deep-set black eyes very tender, when again there was a knock at the door.

"Lord! Keep me from hating that girl!" Nan prayed to herself fervently, as she called "Come in!" "Pardon me, Mr. Morgan—"

Kathleen O'Hara mangled and smiled, as if she knew what those two had been up to—"but District Attorney Brainerd is on the phone!"

"Put him on this phone, please," Morgan told her, seating himself at Nan's desk. A minute later the connection was made and almost at Morgan's first words Nan forgot her own problems and heartaches. She listened avidly until her husband hung up the receiver.

"Brainerd wants to talk over the Nolan case," Morgan told her, his eyes twinkling, his lean, austere face flushed with triumph. "He's going to move to dismiss the indictment, I'll bet my best hat!" Nan crowded.

"Looks like it," Morgan grinned. "Knows he'll lose the second trial. You were right about tipping off the press to some of the new evidence we uncovered. He can brag in his next campaign speech how he saved the state the heavy cost of a second trial by having the indictment dismissed. I told him I'd be there in 10 minutes."

"Oh!" Nan could not restrain the little wall of disappointment, but she recovered quickly. "Good luck, John. I did want to go over the Blackhull case with you, find out what you'd learned today, and all—but that can wait till this evening, can't it?"

set back—John." How hard it was to say that name! "I thought I'd go out to the house and see that everything's in order. I'd like to see Curtis, too, before—"

"A good idea!" Morgan agreed heartily, but the flush deepened on his lean face.

He did not kiss her goodby. But he was so used to her in the office, so accustomed to coming and going that it would have seemed queer to give her his first kiss there, Nan argued with her despairing heart. And after all, this was a business office, not a place for love-making. But he'd kissed Iris in his office. She'd seen him—a score of times.

"Stop it, Nan Carroll!" Nan commanded herself angrily, forgetting for a moment that she was now Nan Morgan and not Nan Carroll. "You're being too torturing yourself with comparisons of his attitude to you and to Iris. He divorced her of his own free will and accord and married you. You are his wife now, not Iris!"

Before leaving the office she gathered up the typed sheets of David Blackhull's story, thrust them into the fine, flexible leather briefcase that she had found among her new possessions that morning. Stamped in gold on the front was her new name, "Mrs. J. C. Morgan." How sure he had been that she would go through with the marriage! And what a lot of planning he had done to prepare these wedding gifts for her. Gratitude and jealousy and forboding—surged through her heart. As she bade Kathleen O'Hara goodby for the day, Nan looked the happy, beloved bride that they all—even Evans and Blake, who had known Iris—believed her to be.

Curtis, playing on the lawn with Cop, who had grown into an enormous police dog, and "Little Pat" O'Brien, saw Nan as she turned up the flagstone path to the house.

"Hi, Nan! Your trunk's here! Listen, Nan, are you going to stay all night? Maude and Estelle wouldn't let me. They said to ask you." He flung himself upon her, almost strangling her with the vehemence of his embrace. "Are you, Nan? Are you? Hi! Look at Cop! He wants to shake hands with you, Nan!"

Curtis, feeling himself almost grown up at 7, had long since discarded the humiliating, nursemaid nickname of "Nana" with which Iris had laughed him, when he was 3 years old, to address his father's secretary.

Nan knelt and held him close to her heart, regardless of neighbors or servants who might be as she looked him over proudly, with as much love—she thought—as if he were her own flesh and blood. He was a very different child from the spoiled, anemic little boy that Iris Morgan had carried filled nine months ago. His cheeks had filled out, there was astonishing strength in the round arms that clung to her so tightly.

"Listen, Nan!" he plunged on breathlessly, without waiting for an answer to his other important question. "You know what? We had a physical 'amination' today, and you know what? . . . I got A-plus! Honest! The doctor said my weight was just right, and my hemoglobin—"

"Hemoglobin—what can spell it, too?" was 94. Little Pat's hemoglobin is 98, but I betcha mine'll be about 150 by next term. You are going to stay all night, aren't you, Nan? Can I sleep with you?"

Little Pat, who had drawn near, let out a warwhoop of delight at that innocent question of Curtis', but there was no smile on Nan's face.

"Gee, Nan, you're red as a beet!" Curtis informed her.

"I'm going to stay all night, and as many more nights as you want me, Curtis," Nan said in a low voice, as she gently released the boy's arms from about her neck.

"Hi, Pat! Nan's going to stay all the time at my house!" Curtis shrieked and tore across the lawn to his chum, followed by a madly excited police dog.

Nan walked slowly up the path to the front veranda and, without ringing the door bell, stepped through an open French window into the drawing room. Her eyes flew to the fireplace. Estelle had lost no time. Nan could imagine with what malicious pleasure the maid, who adored her and despised the house's former mistress, had yanked down the life-sized portrait of Iris Morgan which had dominated the drawing room, the whole house, even the life of John Curtis Morgan.

But Nan, at the banishment of her rival's portrait, felt no relief—only dismay. For the picture was more conspicuous by its absence than it could have been by its presence. It had left as indelible a mark on the wall as it had upon Morgan's heart. Where the picture had hung there was now a great rectangle of paper many shades darker than that of the surrounding space. Nan stood staring helplessly at the spot where the picture had hung. What could she do? If John came home to find that dark, blank space where he had been accustomed to seeing almost incredible beauty, would the terrible thought occur to him that Nan, in banishing his former wife's picture, was trying as cruelly to banish her from his heart? And would he be forced to face the fact that his heart was as empty without Iris as that blank space above the fireplace?

Nan sat desperately about for a solution. No, there was no other picture in the house anywhere near large enough to fit the space. No piece of tapestry large enough or worthy to fill so conspicuous a place.

No time to have the room redecorated or to purchase a picture before John came home.

ated or to purchase a picture before John came home.

"Oh! Excuse me, Miss—I mean Mrs. Morgan!" It was Estelle entering the drawing room with a basket of logs for the fireplace. "I didn't know you were here, ma'am. May I congratulate you, ma'am? But as I said to Maude O'Brien, it's Mr. Morgan that's to be congratulated."

"Thank you, Estelle." Nan forced herself to smile naturally. "That blank space looks awful, doesn't it? Will you please re-hang Mrs. Morgan's picture?"

The maid looked shocked and scandalized, but Nan gave her no time to protest. Stepping to the French window, she called to Curtis.

Five minutes later the little boy was importantly and excitedly helping her to unpack her trunk, which had been placed in the middle of the big guest room.

"Can I play like I'm the husband and sleep in one of the man-and-wife beds, Nan?" he suggested with eager hopefulness. "You let me sleep with you that other time, because you weren't man-and-wife—"

Nan plunged, her cheeks scarlet. "I'm your father and I am man-and-wife now, honey—"

The boy's face fell, the big, liquid black eyes became so somber that Nan's heart almost stopped beating. "Aw!" he wailed disgustedly. "Then Father will sleep in here. Somebody's always taking the joy out of life," he added with so patient an imitation of little Pat's more mature manner that Nan laughed shakily. "Listen, Nan! Can I bring Father's things in? I won't drop anything, honest!"

"Are you glad I'm going to stay? That your father and I—am man-and-wife?" the heart-hungry girl urged, her voice breaking.

"Sure! I always did want you to come here and live," Curtis assured her offhandedly. "Listen, Nan! Can I bring Father's things in? Can I?"

It was then that Nan made the decision upon the threshold of which she had been trembling all day. "No," she said gently. "Let him bring them in himself—if he wants to."

BEAUTIFUL DESSERT.

A lovely dessert is made by using French ice cream as a base, topping the whole dish of it with glazed fresh strawberries and using strips of almonds to mark off the top as if it were a pie.

Paris—New York.

DARLING OF MODE

The darling peplum frock the little folk of 2, 4 and 6 are wearing is typically French in every detail. The long-waisted bodice has cap sleeves, Peter Pan collar with a peplum attached at lower edge, just like older sister wears. The brief, belted skirt that sways so prettily at each move of small wearer, is stitched to the bodice. It combines plain jaunty yellow linen with yellow and white polka-dotted linen with piping in soft brown linen. Style No. 576 is made at a remarkably small cost. It is too cute for words fashioned of orchid organdie with white organdie collar and piping. Sprigged dimiti, cross-barred dimiti, printed lawn, chambray, cotton broadcloth in polka-dots, pastel voile and checked gingham also appropriate. Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

We suggest that when you send for this pattern, you enclose 10 cents additional for a copy of our Fashion Magazine. It's just filled with delightful styles, including smart ensembles, and cute designs for the kiddies.

MAN OF FUTURE AGES IS DUE TO BE TALLER AND HEALTHIER

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN,
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The estimates of the geologists to the effect that mankind has been in this world some hundred thousands of years have always seemed to the public somewhat humorous. Those who are fundamentalists insist that the biblical account records the actual status of affairs. Of course, there is good evidence to the effect that man as we now know him has been in the world many thousands of years beyond the biblical accounts and that the evidence regarding prehistoric man fully justifies the claims of the anthropologists and ethnologists.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton © 1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

There is a point that is considered absolutely essential in the bringing up of children. It does not come out of psychology book, at least in the way I am going to put it, and it may be a nice point for argument, as it somewhat refutes the "single purpose" idea we like to talk about—but I think it is too important to ignore.

But I have in mind just now the older child whose plans for life are beginning to change from the nebulous into more compact form.

It is while these plans are still plastic that the parent usually steps in. For instance, a boy may decide he wants to be a soldier. But his father wants him to study law and be ready some day to step into his shoes in the firm.

Suppose the boy dislikes the thought of law. What is to be done? Make him unhappy all his life by suppressing his natural craving? Not so deliberately as that, I'd suggest.

Regrets Later, Perhaps Then let him give up the idea of law and be a soldier which may be only a temporary hobby and which he may regret when he is

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SCHUBERT

A world war veteran of British Columbia, unable to get work, was helping with the family washing. His tie caught in the wringer and he was strangled to death.

Not only does it seem ironic that a man could escape unscathed from a war and then die in this way, but some figures from various insurance companies to the effect that many more fatalities occur from just such unexpected little things about the house than in any so-called place of "hazardous employment" seem ironic, especially in light of the fact that very few housewives carry insurance or are credited as doing very important of "hazardous" work.

BEAUTY OF UNIVERSE.
It will be interesting to see what becomes of Miss Louise Goldarbeiter of Austria, recently selected as The Most Beautiful Girl in the Universe. (One wonders how they found about the girls of Mars, but let that pass.)

We have a theory that if a girl has beauty she needs nothing else, and yet a roll call of selected beauties of recent years proves, too, that beauty still brings its troubles as it did to Helen and Cleo of old.

Still, most of us would take a chance on the troubles in such a cause!

MONEYED TRAGEDY.
Most of our love tragedies center about the fact that either the boy or girl is poor and of humble parentage, and the other a favored member of society.

But the love tragedy of Miss Ruth Wilson and her fiancé, Horace Roberts, Jr., of Moorestown, N. J., centers about two young people to the manor born. The murder-suicide theory to explain the two young people found dying in the girl's home was changed to a double murder theory, and one broken engagement after another seems to have preceded the tragedy.

Sometimes life remains at too smooth a level and more trouble comes than when it has its high and low spots.

MALE COOK BOOK.
It took a man to get up a cook book of all the things that can be cooked without pots and pans. The book is called "Jack Knife Cookery" by James Wilder. He tells how to make cranberry or apple pie without pan, and all sorts of stews to be cooked in leaves of osprent shells. The author's life as a wanderer and explorer made him find out how to do these things. Now he tells the world.

After all, we are learning more and more that the realm of cooking is not a woman's province solely, and that most of the real "finds" in this realm have been by men.

JUST LET 'EM DARE!
Speaking of cooking, have you heard of the famous French club of gourmets, called the Club des Cents? Each member has to prove that he really knows good food and drink before he can join the famous club. The club gives occasional dinners at a restaurant which deems worthy of its patronage. It may be an obscure little place made famous overnight by the tribute paid it by the gourmets.

Imagine any American boy or man daring form such an association! American husbands, willy-nilly, are forced by American wives into the great national game of dieting. They may laud the vitamin, but never the trusted and ruffed fowl. Well, apologize for food in this land, never laud it!

CLEAN SPONGES.
Bath sponges should be thoroughly cleaned weekly. Steep them in a solution of salts of lemon and then rinse well and dry in the open.

RUSTY UMBRELLAS.
If you rub a little vaseline into the hinge portion of a new umbrella's frame, it is a sure prevention against rust. Also vaseline does smooth a level and more trouble not spread as other oils do.

Your Pet Recipes are always successful when Rumford is used. They score on all counts—perfect leveling, texture, flavor, appearance, dependability, economy! Rumford always reflects credit on its user.

MAX HAS PUNCH BUT NOT CHIN; PAULINO CHIN BUT NOT PUNCH

Walsh Tells How Both Can Win and Lose; Good Fight to Watch, Not to Bet On.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, June 20.—They will be telling you shortly in a very knowing manner just who is going to win, Schmeling or Paulino, day night and being an impulsive generous fellow, that way, I'm willing to mention without further preamble at least two ways in which both of them can lose. It has been demonstrated before that no fight should be called in advance; this is one that can't be called, unless you are one of those geniuses who go in for the blindfold test in a big way.

In brief, it is the writer's opinion that all serious attempts to call the turn on this one can run very doggedly for Sweeney and most of his first but they won't be able to tell you why they did it. This Schmeling, for example, is far and away the class of the two men—as far as the eye is able to see. But the eye never looked through a man's jaw and it is history that he has been belted right on the buckle, or whisker, by some very comical opponents, including Larry Gaines, Gypsy Daniels and a clump by the name of Rumlur or something. True, he claimed he wasn't looking but, unfortunately, everybody else was, so the series of incidents in question got in the record books.

Outside of this, the fighter seems to be fool-proof. He has everything else, including as great a right hand as ever lunged on the arm of a man. But can Schmeling take it?

This is the question that will bring more than $500,000 into the Milk Fund on Thursday—yes, the promoters concede now that they will never be able to use the million they thought was on the way. It is a question that intrigues the imagination for it means that one of two things may happen and both of them are likely to be sensational: Schmeling or else will win with his punch or else with his chin.

This is one of three ways in which he can lose; the others include the possibility that he will allow himself to be out-branched in the clinches and the question of whether, in the event that the fight goes the limit of 15 rounds, he can keep going beyond the tenth with a man who figures to be considerably his superior in strength and stamina. Infighting had Schmeling floundering in the Risko fight. Besides, no one is justified in going too far on a limb with a man whose jaw seems to be open to reason. On the other hand, he has picked up what they call the "winning habit" and sometimes that is hard to kick.

The boys have been up in Hoosick Falls starting intent for days at a time at the spectacle afforded by Paulino going through his workouts. They are trying to discover what he has, a secret known only to the hundreds of thousands who have seen him in his fights. Paulino is the same heavyweight who came to America several years ago and he never will be different—an honest fighter whose only defense is to cover his chin until he would jab a punch. Meantime, he bores everlastingly in, so that his short arms will get the range for a body attack. If he can do this, it is one of the ways he can win.

He can lose by being too cautious with that elbow-barricade defense of his, letting Schmeling would jab his way to a point-victory while Paulino was doing nothing. This was the way he fought Delaney, who also was presumed to have a great right hand. Finally, of course, Paulino can lose if he gets hit on the frontpiece. He may be tough but that punch of Schmeling's is a certified wow and you can go right out and bet on it.

All in all, it seems to be established that Schmeling has the punch but not the chin and Paulino the chin without the punch, which brings us to the question: whether are we drifting? And the answer is, everywhere.

For this will be a fight to look at, not to bet on.

VETERAN SPORTSMAN DIES AT POUGHKEEPSIE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 20.—Followers of boxing today mourned the death of William A. McCabe, veteran sportsman who passed away in Dr. Jes E. Sadler's sanatorium here last night at the age of 69. During the World War, McCabe met Gene Tunney in France and became the Marine's ring mentor during his rise to the heavyweight championship. He was Tunney's confidential advisor, though not his manager, and arranged both of the title bouts with Jack Dempsey.

McCabe was a close friend of John L. Sullivan and was in the Boston strong boy's corner on the night when the champion fought Jake Girma.

He was police commissioner here and for eighteen years was a commissioner of the New York State Prison Department.

JONES GOES AROUND COURSE IN EVEN 70

New York, June 20.—"It looks like Jones again," was the plaint of contenders for the open golf championship today when they learned that the incomparable Bobby had shot a 39-70 in a practice round at Winged Foot yesterday. This is the lowest score turned in to date by a contender playing the championship course this month.

Bobby's second nine was played in five under par.

New York, June 20.—The Chicago Cubs, who have been letting St. Louis and Pittsburgh set the pace in the National League scramble, are back in first place today as they continue their climb since their disastrous series with the Giants. McCarthy's maulers doze on home cooking and have been creeping ahead slowly but surely on their own grounds during the past two weeks.

The Braves' double triumph over the Cardinals yesterday, by scores of 7 to 3 and 11 to 3, has revived the pennant hopes of Chicago fans. Pat Malone won his tenth game of the season in the first game, thanks to Wilson's homer with two on and four hits by Hornsby. In the nightcap Sylvester Johnson of the Cards couldn't locate the plate and lost his first game of the season.

The Cardinals fopped all the way to third place below the Pirates, who got off to a six-run lead against Cincinnati but just lasted to the wire to win by a nose, 6 to 5. Manager Hendricks of the Reds buried sixteen players into the breach but unfortunately was allowed to use only nine at one time.

Baker Bowl, the cradle of circuit clouts, ushered eight new home runs into the world as the Giants debauched the Phillies twice, 15 to 14 and 12 to 6, in more than six hours of alleged baseball. The opener lasted 11 innings. Roush got eight hits and Ott seven, and each player smacked two homers.

With Smith and Seibold doing the throwing, the Braves subdued Brooklyn twice, 8 to 4 and 9 to 0. Clark and Dudley, the Brooklyn hurlers, were hit harder than Max Schmeling's sparring partners. The embattled Yankees will face the Athletics tomorrow with a 7-1-2 game deficit, but with renewed confidence gained by their 13 to 2 slaughter of the Red Sox yesterday. The champions rapped out twenty hits for a total of 31 bases while Dead Pan Eddie Wells was pulverizing the Boston batters.

The Yanks got so far ahead that Bob Meusel, never noted for his energy, walked after a fly by Alex Gaston, allowing that lucky young man to make a home run. Meusel was a terror at bat, however, opening four hits. George Ruth, the big crab and fish man of Chesapeake Bay, made one appearance at bat and gracefully grounded out.

The champions have been unable to shake off the St. Louis Browns, who scored their ninth win in ten starts against the White Sox, 5 to 2. Adkins outpitched Gray but his wildness was costly.

The Tigers were clawing the Indians viciously when rain ended the feast after six innings, with Detroit leading 8 to 3.

RHINELANDER DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Calif., June 20.—Independence Day, or thereabouts, has been chosen by Leonard Kip Rhinelander, son of a wealthy New York family, to file his suit for divorce in a Nevada court according to Rhinelander's Nevada Attorney, Harley A. Harmon, who was in Los Angeles today.

"Kip is not in the limelight for notoriety," Harmon said, "but rather for freedom." Harmon, district attorney of Clark county, Nevada, said word has reached Las Vegas that Rhinelander has been residing since early this year, that Alice Jones Rhinelander, daughter of a colored New York cab driver, will not contest her husband's new suit.

The tropical year contains 355 mean solar days, 5 hours, 43 minutes and 46 seconds.

UNUSUAL ACCIDENT

Boston, June 20.—Two unusual automobile accidents were recorded in New England today.

NAKED BLACKS KILL VICIOUS LIONS WITH PRIMITIVE WEAPONS

Seek Lions Not for Food But For Revenge Because They Kill Their Cattle.

The most thrilling moment in "Simba," the big game hunting motion picture made in Africa by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, which is coming to the State Theater, is that which shows the naked blacks of the Lumbwa tribe, armed only with spears and shields, attacking and killing full grown lions. It seems incredible that the king of beasts could be slain by such simple weapons, but the camera shows exactly how it is done, and the scene keeps spectators on the edges of their seats.

As Martin Johnson, who photographed the battle, tells it, he, with his wife, Osa, and their safari, had trekked down into Tanganyika on the trail of lions. This says Johnson, is the most wonderful big game tract in the world.

"Not long after we entered Tanganyika," he says, "we met forty naked Lumbwa warriors in war paint out after lions. The native hunters were armed with long spears and shields of buffalo hide. Each man had decorated himself and his shield with his own idea of war paint. The blacks had spent days in working themselves into a fever of courage which would nerve them to face 'simba' in his own haunts. Considering their inadequate weapons, I think they needed a lot of courage."

Do Not Kill for Food "These blacks were not after lions for sport or for meat. They do not eat lion meat, they have no use for the hides, and they take the fur only for amulets. They were out for revenge because the lions had been killing their cattle. We saw them kill six lions, one after another, and every performance was thrilling and nerve-racking."

First the natives sent out a line of scouts. When these scouts located a lion in the grass or brush, the scouts fell back to the main body, and then the whole troop advanced in a sort of semi-circular formation. The lion usually lashed himself into the fray over the intrusion of the blacks and prepared to give battle to any who opposed him. Only twice did I see a lion turn and run, and that was because he felt himself outnumbered. He just trotted away as if he had business elsewhere.

Usually, however, there was no doubt of the lions' determination to fight. As soon as the natives were sure the lion was going to charge, they halted. This was always the high point of the drama. The lion, crouched, with lashing tail, ready to charge; the naked blacks with spears and shields, waiting for the lion's attack, and then the lion would spring.

A Gripping Scene "Then, with a roar, the lion sprang. At once a cloud of spears were hurled at him. The blacks nearest the lion took those tearing claws on their tough shields, crouching as they did so, while the men behind plucked their spears into the lion's back, and then the lion was down, and the natives were on top of him. One or two natives were badly mauled and killed. But I never saw one of the natives killed."

"There is nothing that could give one as good a idea of the courage of the lion as to face with deadly odds, he still turned and fought just as long as he could stand. He's a great sportsman and fighter, is 'Simba.'"

FOURTH DISTRICT CUTS ITS DEBT BY $2,500

Annual Meeting Re-elects Its Officers and Continues Its 4 Mill Tax Rate.

Twenty-five hundred dollars has been reduced on the debt of the Fourth School district last night revealed. The district has a grand list of about $1,000,000 and of the money to be collected by Harold Richmond, about $80 remains uncollected. This sum will be secured later.

The present school debt is $12,500, but during the past year the school has been repainted and several new pieces of much needed equipment have been added which cost $1,300. This bill has been paid.

It was proposed to continue the tax rate at the same rate as last year, 4 mills, which will allow for a further reduction of the debt. With less interest to pay, and a much smaller bill for repairs a $5,000 reduction is expected this coming year.

The tax rate is high, but the community is growing rapidly and the better class of homes is being erected in the Fourth District. Some of these were not included as finished houses in the list last year and with other houses already under construction to be finished before October 1, the grand list will be added to considerably.

The same board of officers was re-elected without opposition: Committee, C. Ely Rogers, Stephen Hale, and Mrs. William Rush. Mrs. C. Ely Rogers, secretary and treasurer and Harold Richmond, collector.

NOON STOCKS

New York, June 20.—New favoring in the Public Utility stocks were pushed as speculative interest in the gas and electric lighting securities was reported on the increase.

The success of the pools with the utility stocks in the last few weeks has brought in a county-wide demand for the shares of other well managed and profitable corporations, for which higher prices have been bid.

Pacific Gas, Pacific Lighting, Louisville Gas, California Edison and Standard Gas sold up from 2 to 5 points today in the lead of the utility stocks, the first four being newcomers to the active list. Public Service of New Jersey was carried along in active trading to a new high at 121 1/4, and Utilities Power & Light to 44 1/2.

The Copper stocks and the Industrials were offered in good volume in the second hour, accompanied by the usual Thursday predictions about increasing brokers' loans and a possible raising of the rediscount rates, now that the government's June financing has been completed.

Market rumors were concerned principally with the merging of Public Utility properties, the American Waterworks with Standard Gas & Electric; the Brooklyn Union Gas Company with Consolidated Gas, and the expansion of a number of the western power and lighting concerns.

The "big store" stocks, including Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck, renewed their forward move in the second hour. Montgomery Ward was up about three points. Steel, Copper, Oil and Equipment stocks were firm. Call money 7 per cent.

GAS BUGGIES—An Offer Spurned

By FRANK BECK

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

Some girls prefer that love be expressed in figures instead of words.

SENSE and NONSENSE

SPECIALIZE. Versatility fails. Not advancement, my son. For a jack of all trades is a master of none.

IN THE MAJORITY. "Many men owe a lot to their wives." "Yes, and more of them owe a lot because of their wives."

Customer: "I want five pounds of sugar. I'll carry it with me, if it isn't too heavy." Clerk: "Oh, it will only weigh three or four pounds."

A Russian was being led off to execution by a squad of Bolshevik soldiers on a rainy morning. "What brutes you Bolsheviks are," grumbled the doomed man, "to march me through a rain like this." "How about us?" retorted one of the squad. "We have to march back."

Professor (after hour's dissertation on Egyptian archeology): "Does anyone care to ask any questions?" Voice in the back of the room: "Just one question, professor. In your opinion, what is clam digging—fishing or argiculture?"

If all the telephone conversations in the United States were laid end to end it would be 5 o'clock and you would be trying to use that line to ask the wife if there was anything she wanted you to bring home for supper.

Dick: "You remember Miss Jones, don't you?" Dave: "I don't recall her face, but her knees are very familiar."

Wife at Head of Stairs—Is that you, John? Heavy Voice from Dark—"Who was you expectin'?"

Mr. Masterful went into the kitchen and informed the cook that his wife's aunt was coming for a visit.

"I've made out a list of her favorite dishes for you," he said. "Yes, sir," replied the cook. "And," he added, "the first time you serve one of them—you go!"

Voice from Darkness: "Squeeze me tight." Another Voice from same Darkness: "I can't squeeze you tight." V. F. D. "And why not?" A. V. F. S. D. "Because you're already tight."

The departing guest had been given his bill, and shortly afterward the manager said to the head waiter: "You gave the man in room 20 his bill, didn't you?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "I didn't forget to charge for anything did I?"

"Not that I know of," answered the waiter. "Strange, very strange," muttered the other; "I can still hear him whistling."

Consider the postage stamp. It sticks until it delivers the goods. The most dangerous word in this language of ours is "yes."

METER GOLF

A SUMMER SPORT It pays to be an EARLY RISER today for the par is pretty high. Unless you can beat the par solution you will have to take nine strokes. One solution is on another page.

EARLY RISER word search grid.

THE RULES.

- 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed. One solution is printed on another page.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

The farmer proved that he was kind. Said he, "I guess that I will find some way to keep the crows away without my old scarecrow. You Tinymites must have your fun, so you go right ahead and run away with Mister Scarecrow. He'll enjoy it too, I know. "I wish that I could join you too, but there are things that I must do. I have to hitch my horses up and journey down the road. I just found out the other day that I am getting short of hay. I'll journey to the nearby field and quickly get a load." And then the farmer went away, and soon the bunch heard Cloway say, "I wonder if he'd let us have a little pleasure ride. His wagon's nice and big I'll bet and on the back we all could get. We wouldn't bother him if we sat quiet, side by side." This plan struck all the bunch just right and ere the farmer went from sight, wee Scouty cried, "Hey, farmer man! Do you want company? The farmer stopped, and turned around, and said, "If you'll go where I'm bound, I'll sure be glad to have you all ride right along with me." "Hurray! Hurray!" The whole bunch cried. "We're going to have a dandy ride." "Come on," exclaimed the farmer, "we will hitch my horses quick." The Tinies helped as best they could, like any little fellows should. And when the job was finished the old farmer said, "That's slick." He hopped up on the seat and said, "Come on there, and go ahead! Clidnap, and don't start loafing. We have quite a load today." The horses then began to run. Oh my, oh my, what heaps of fun. The Tinymites all hopped aboard, and they were on their way. (The horses run away in the next story.)

BOBBED TRESSES LEAD TO A LOCAL DIVORCE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Catlett Separate When She Crosses Husband's Wish.

The fact that his wife bobbed her hair out of spite after promising not to do so, was the chief reason which led to the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Catlett of this town and to the divorce granted Mr. Catlett on the grounds of desertion in Superior court yesterday afternoon.

His wife, an East Hartford woman, left him June 23, 1925. The custody of the child was given to Mrs. Catlett with the husband getting the right to visit the child every Saturday afternoon.
