DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

On June 22, 1870, Congress provided for organization of the Department of Justice.

This unit is one of the executive departments of the United States, at the head of which is the attorney general, appointed by the president for a term of four years.

Although the office of attorney general was created in 1789 and the incumbent of the office was from the first a member of the cabinet, it was not until 1870 that Congress created the office into a separate department.

By the act of June 22 of that year the several officers of the federal government, of whom there were some half dozen or more, were placed under the supervision of the attorney general, with the hope of bringing about greater uniformity in the construction and application of the laws.

The attorney general is the legal representative of the United States in cases of law and he is charged with the general supervision of the U. S. district attorneys and marshals. Among the other duties of the Department of Justice are the supervision of the penal and reformatory institutions of the United States and recommendation of judicial appointments.

In 1870 the office of solicitor general was created, the incumbent being ranked as the second officer of the department. The act of 1870 also transferred to the Department of Justice the solicitors from the Interior, Treasury and Navy Departments and the examiner of claims from the State Department.

BUILDING SUCCESS UP TO CONTRACTOR

Owner Gets No Better Home Than Builder Knows How to Construct.

By WALTER D. BLAIR, A. I. A.

The building of a house is a joint enterprise in which there are four participants, the owner, architect, contractor and workmen. Its success is dependent upon the skill of each participant and their co-operation in carrying out the portions of the task assigned to each.

If any one of the four lacks in creative ability, or fails to give the utmost of his knowledge and skill, or refuses to focus his attention on the solution of the problems of construction, material, equipment, arrangement and design which arise in every building, the joint enterprise does not reach its maximum of effectiveness and falls short of its potential possibilities.

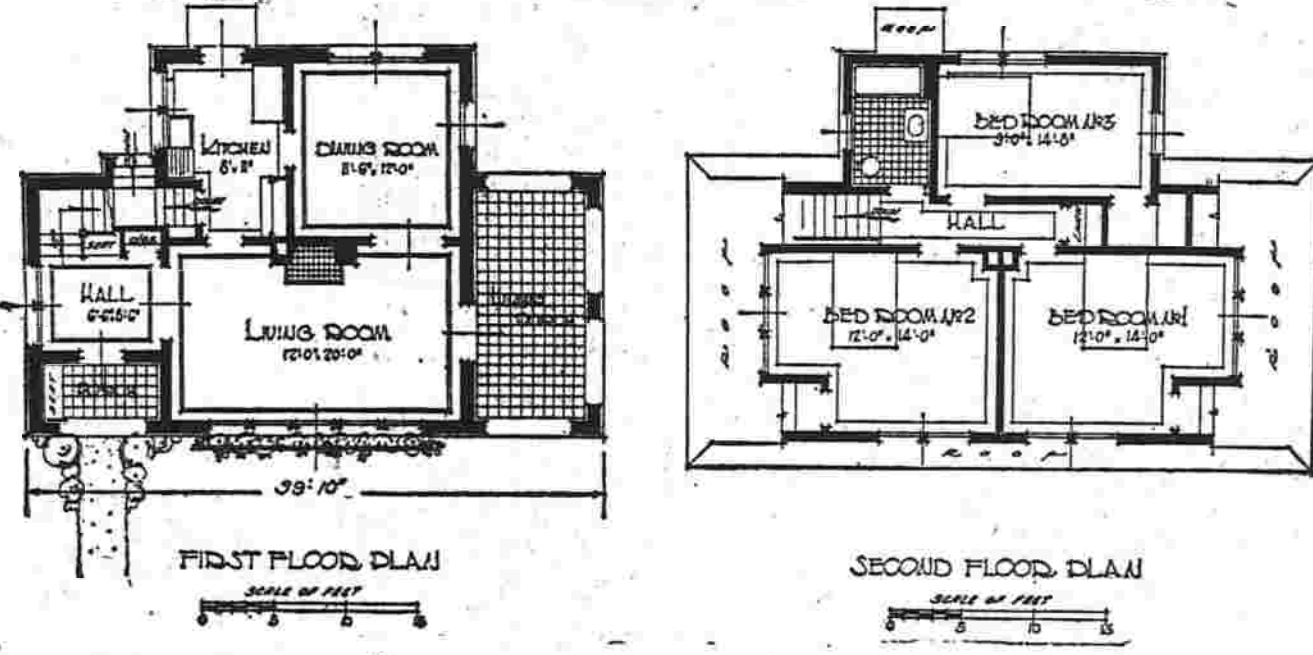

A building has its maximum effectiveness when it meets fully the physical requirements of the owner, arrangement and size of rooms, within the limits of cost desired and in addition satisfies the spiritual aspirations of pride and contentment. These spiritual needs can be met only by the creation of beauty, which results from any arrangement of forms and spatial masses, of colors and surface textures that stir the beholder's imagination and so delights him.

Beauty is the Acid Test. The acid test of the architect is the creation of beauty. That is his supreme mission, and the goal must be attained through a multitude of perplexities and difficulties. The building of any house is a complicated enterprise. It is well to examine some aspects of the activities of the four participants, their obligations to and dependence upon one another. From such an examination the conditions of successful building may be revealed. The owner is the captain of the enterprise. He it is who should determine the nature of the voyage and its destination. In other words, he should determine the elements of the problem which he asks the architect to solve. That problem is his own particular need, dependent on his manner of life, the size and nature of his household, his social contacts, his personal habits and hobbies.

Imagination Prime Requisite. No two persons are alike. Each should aspire to a house expressive of his taste and his manner of life. Of course, if the owner has no personality and is like his neighbors, is without predilections or preferences and so contrive to give the owner a domicile better than the owner had imagined. In reality, the owner has had no imagination—that is the trouble with him. The more imagination an owner has the more individuality, the more precise his needs, the easier becomes the architect's task. The very difficulties become the levers which lift the house above the commonplace.

And so in this joint enterprise the owner should formulate a precise list of his needs and state his tastes and his manner of living. If there are household possessions that are to be used in the new house they should be listed so that space can be provided for them; if pictures, suitable wall space; if books, adequate shelving; if furniture, floor and wall space without encroaching on doors and windows. It is well to remember that walls, not window openings, make a room. The owner should also state what he wishes to spend. He usually does, and the architect spends it, and often much more. That's a fault of the architect, but as the owner and not the architect pays for the fault the owner is rightly annoyed.

A Small House With Pleasing Roof Lines

The long sloping lines of the roof give this house a pleasing character, and with the hood that extends across the front, just above the first story windows, a strong horizontal effect is obtained that tends to lower the appearance of the house and at the same time to increase the apparent length.

This gives a front of good proportions that is not stilted and in no way suggestive of the four-wall-and-roof "box" that is so often characteristic of small two-story houses. To further this pleasing horizontal effect the windows are arranged in groups, symmetrically placed. Most striking is the group of five large windows in the first story that center in the living room, opposite the fireplace, giving a most unusual wall treatment and making the room bright and attractive. A flower box extends the full length under this group of windows offering a tempting setting for geraniums and hanging vines where they will show to the best advantage, both from within and without.

The first story walls are of stucco on hollow tile, giving a most effective background for planting and lending variety to the exterior in the contrast of both color and texture the plain wall affords in relation to the shingle walls and roof above.

room and one that is delightful to live in.

On the second floor are three good size bed rooms and a bath. Closet space is not lacking. All of the bed rooms have group windows that give plenty of air and sunshine.

Cost about $9,500. Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-63. By R. C. Hunter & Bro., Architects, New York City.

ELIMINATE THE CAVE-LIKE GLOOM

When electricity is cheap and efficient you are doing yourself and family an injustice when you do not provide sufficient lighting, but allow the interior of the house to be drab and gloomy. Well shaded lights are one of our economical comforts.

Gloomy interiors are caused by a number of things. Sometimes the light provided is not sufficient for the room. Other times there is plenty of light, but the walls and ceiling are so dark they swallow the light. Again, the fixtures and bulbs are dirty, preventing the light from emerging from the lamp. Dust on a shade, or on the lamp bulb can absorb as much as 50 per cent of your light output. Sometimes all of these conditions exist in a single household, keeping light and joy out of the home. One of the large public service companies when instructing their customers to check on the amount of light needed in a room, stated that when the walls and ceilings are fairly light in tone, provide one watt for each square foot of floor space. Since the wattage of each lamp is usually marked on the bottom of each lamp the number of lamps needed can be quickly estimated.

CLOSETS ALWAYS USEFUL

When modernizing the home and remodeling the interior look over the plans to see if it is possible to provide another closet. Closet space is particularly desirable from the housewife's standpoint, and it is always safe to add another one if the space is available.

Modernization Brings Back Run Down Neighborhoods

OLDER SECTIONS OF THE CITY NOW REJUVENATED

Building Values Increase With Progress.

One of the significant aspects of the Home Modernization Movement is the cumulative effect of the effort. The modernizing of one home in an old neighborhood becomes a starting point from which other residences result. The older residential sections of the city are filled with homes that were up-to-date back in the days of the World's Fair. The frames of these houses are sturdily constructed and the workmanship that entered into the residence is excellent. But they are hopelessly behind the times in many respects. Their exteriors are usually depressing, being bare, ugly and staid. The interior appointments are fully in keeping with the exterior. Old fashioned electric light fixtures, obsolete plumbing, ill-arranged rooms and bare, cramped stairs give a hint of the general state of most of these houses.

Valuable Property Yet Hard to Sell.

These houses are valuable and could be duplicated only at the expenditure of many thousands of dollars. The houses are too well constructed to be summarily discarded. Yet their general condition is such that they are hard to sell. On a slow market it is often impossible to get a price near their true worth.

Real estate agents report that many well constructed but old fashioned houses in run-down neighborhoods are sold for the value of the lot on which the house stands. Modernization will help these old houses. A small amount of money placed in improving the exterior finish of the buildings will increase immeasurably their values. Modernizing the interior of the dwelling not only aids in increasing the comforts of living but makes the old place an attractive looking home.

Modernized Homes Admirable.

A newly modernized home in a run-down neighborhood stands out from its neighbors. It becomes the subject of favorable comment of the administration. Other home owners in the neighborhood aspire to place their homes in a similar class and soon a distinct elevation in tone is apparent.

Such a small matter as improving the lawns (one phase of modernizing) with well-trimmed grass,

JUST A NEAT LITTLE COTTAGE REBUILT FOR TWO

This little cottage shows what can be done to make four walls and a roof into a charming home. Before and after views like those on this page show the possibilities that await modernization.

STEPPING STONES MAKE ARTISTIC WALKS

A touch of the artistic may be introduced into the walk in the back lawn by using stepping stones instead of the more formal concrete walks. Such walks are usually curved across the lawn and add a charming touch to the vista of lawn and shrubbery.

Stepping stones are inexpensive. They may be purchased already cut to shape or may be made by your contractor. These stones are irregular in design and may be colored with mineral pigments. Often the stones are left white, thus making a sharp contrast to the green of the lawn.

A common way to place such stones is to place them in the desired position on the lawn, cut around the edge of each stone with a sharp pointed knife or trowel, lift out the sod and remove sufficient dirt to allow the stone to set in place with a half inch clearance above the level of the lawn. After the stone has been tamped into place, fill in around the edges with loam.

Grass seed should be immediately sown so that in time the stones will be entirely surrounded by lawn.

NEW PLUMBING IDEA ELIMINATES ODORS

An odorless toilet is one of the newest things in the plumbing market—and one greatly appreciated by fastidious home-owners. By an ingenious mechanism this bowl is ventilated scientifically by air suction through a small water jet vacuum tube and dual trap. The two trapways make it absolutely impossible for any bacteria or germ producing substance or water to back up through these

FOUR WALLS AND ROOF NOW ATTRACTIVE HOME

Shingle-Clad Cottage Comes With Modernization.

When the cottage in the illustration below was first built a good many years ago, it was considered to be one of the most attractive residences on the street. As a matter of fact, these are entirely new.

The owners had taken pains to make its surroundings as pleasant as possible. The two wooden flower boxes on the front porch attest to this statement.

House Grows Old.

And yet as time passed the appearance of the house came in sharp contrast to the cottages that were later constructed in the neighborhood. The shingle-like porch with its flattened roof and round wooden pillars was like a thousand others. The home itself was a plain box with a pitch roof. The windows lacked character and individuality. Decorative appeal had been lost when an unskilled carpenter set in place the plain, narrow sash. A study of the house as it appeared after being touched by modernization shows that the greatest changes were made in the porch, and the windows and trim. As a matter of fact, these are entirely new.

A New Porch Adds Character.

Instead of a narrow porch across the front, a square porch with an entablature of wood with a steeply pitched roof and a shingled gable was constructed. The pillars at each outside corner were made of brick one-half of the height, the balance being white painted wood. The architrave is also painted white, giving the whole an effective appearance.

The narrow single windows are gone. In their stead are new sash and trim wider and not so high. To-day the high narrow windows are a sign that the building was constructed years ago.

"It's Ours At Last" --

And the young couple exultantly examined the deed to their home—the result of their savings and scrapings for their first years of married life—the culmination of a series of dreams. Once they walked down a beautiful residential street laughingly pointing to the home they would have some day—"There's the one we want—and wistfully they stood before a cozy home—never seeing the inside, but planning it to match the outside—a Living Room just large enough for comfort with a fireplace and bookcases—which were usually excluded from modern apartments—every room considered separately.

BEAUTY, UTILITY ESSENTIAL IN BUILDING HOME

Fadism in Architecture Soon Becomes Tiresome, Says Benjamin W. Morris.

By BENJAMIN W. MORRIS. The vast size of our country, with its variations in tradition, topography and climate and the resultant specialization of local conditions, would seem to make any generalizations about houses or homes to be built dangerous.

Having been engaged in the study and practice of architecture for a longer time than is pleasant to dwell upon, I have seen many phases of the tremendous strides which have been taken in architectural design and the related arts and crafts, from the latter days of the Richardson and Neo-Grec revivals to the current productions which, for want of a more precise word, are called modernistic.

What was thought to be beautiful in those days was wanted by some, and what was then called new or different was wanted by others. Beauty as we see it was rarely achieved. All of the manifestations of the late '70s, '80s and '90s are today, in our opinion, in the discard. To be merely new or different in architecture is quite inadequate or worse.

It is natural and, I believe, fortunate that the equipment and impulses of architectural designers should be highly varied for state of affairs could be worse if we were all either "producing archaeologists"—a class that has been so tagged by Professor Mather—or unlicensed and extreme self-expressionists, whose code in reality is, "It matters not that my work be practical, enduring or beautiful, provided that it be different."

It is curious that the modernist leads an exciting life, but the patient-paying-client is more interested in obtaining something in the way of a home that is practical, enduring and beautiful than in providing exercise for those who want to be different, and except for the gallant few, succeed only in copying each other.

The experience of the world proves that fadism is an evanescent thing. It is unimportant in fashions in clothes or other things of an ephemeral nature; it is not unimportant, however, in affairs of permanence. In the architectural past, with here and there a rare exception, the self-expressionist and the extreme modernist of the day and their work are of small repute today, nor were they important. I believe, in the eyes of their contemporaries.

Cities Work of Pioneers. I admire greatly those pioneering but cultivated spirits, who in their abhorrence of "productive" and "unsuccessful" trials, never abandoning the cardinal principles of composition and sound structural design.

The application of these principles in the planning and designing of a home, in my opinion, is of first importance. Pride in a home ownership is more than commendable—but that the home should be a show place or merely a novelty is quite the reverse.

Since the habits, tastes and characteristics of families are of a happy variance, how much more natural and desirable it is that their homes should be designed and built to suit these variations and their localities, rather than that they be the standardization of any current architectural whim.

Avoid Standardization. In the first place, except for labor saving devices and for a devout appreciation and discreet use of what our forefathers have found to be good, I would avoid standardization in the design of the family home as I would the plague. To privacy and the play of individual imagination the greatest possible freedom should be given, if the house is to continue in its proper sphere, as a magnet to those who live in it, or to their friends.

Our roots strike deeper than we know; the expression of a home may well recognize the racial or national characteristics of the owner's stock, for there is certainly a subconscious tendency toward an inherited taste. This thought may be qualified by regional and climatic considerations and for reasons of propriety and economy. The old New England farm group—the house with connecting lean-to, and the sheds and porch with southern exposure and then the barn—is reasonable, convenient and frequently handsome, but its new hybrid neighbor with red or green tile roof and stucco walls is generally as homely as a billboard.

To the prospective home builder of small or limited means a problem of relative and obtainable values present itself. To the person of larger means the affair is simpler. I have come in contact with many home builders, as distinguished from "houses," are what we are talking about. Some of the simplest and least costly were of far greater value in the return of happiness than others where money had been lavished.

Other contributors have discussed methods of financing necessary to supplement the ready cash and to determine how much in all may be made available. I have assumed that a house in a closely built-up metropolitan area is not under discussion. For a suburban district town, or small city, it is also assumed that full consideration will be given to time and cost of transportation from the home to the place of business, to the class of neighbors, to future possibilities of growth and change, and to reasonable and safe access to the centers of trade.

Woman is a natural gardener, and man, if, through fatigue, lack of time or boredom, he does not always contribute to its cultivation, will either help or, at worst, take pride and easeful joy in the garden achievements of his family; to this end my advice is to cling to the old car a little longer. If money is any object, don't buy a steep hill or rocky building site, where the cost of approach or excavation will mean an unnecessary dip into the budget as well as an expensive and laborious upkeep; nor a swampy, insectivorous, low-lying plot, where the cost of fill and grading is heavy and drainage is bad and costly.

The fixed charges of thorough insulation will generally be less than the savings made in fuel bills, to say nothing of a cooler house in hot weather. Take all reasonable precautions against fire, but consider well the difficulties and cost of future changes in concrete wall construction; when properly designed and built, it is a fine material for foundations, floors and chimneys, but permits few liberties for later changes in walls, girders and beams.

Chimney flues with the linings must be above reproach, both as to construction and size, and the roof surfaces nonflammable. Use copper, lead or zinc only in exterior sheet-metal work, and brass piping for hot water circulation, and plan with care the location and sufficiency of electric outlets. Plan bathrooms, pantries and their fixtures so that water circulating pipes in cold climates are never in or against the outside walls.

It is smart and decorative this season to have shoes made of two materials. Summer sandals of printed crepe de chine now use straw to match one's hat to finish the shoes.

SUBURBAN STYLE

(Copyright, Standard Homes Bureau, Washington, D. C.)

For the prospective home owner who has more room than an ordinary city lot on which to build, the Devonshire is an ideal choice. In a small space, this one-story, comfortable looking house might appear cramped, but with a generous expanse of lawn around it, it is set off to ideal advantage.

Of white stucco, with rounded, imitation-thatched roof, the Devonshire has the rambling, pleasant appearance of an English cottage. There is true symmetry of line in its gabled roofs and the treatment of the front approach.

The rooms are large (the living room is 20 feet long) and as numerous as a small family could desire. There are three bedrooms, although the one at the front, just off the living room, probably can be utilized better as a den or study.

An attractive feature is the small, central hall opening on five rooms and between the two main bedrooms. The kitchen is a model of convenience, incorporating a breakfast nook and a pantry. The refrigerator is built to be fed from the outside.

Ample storage room is provided by the large attic under the sloping roof. Part of this space, of course, may be converted into a playroom for children.

The cost of the Devonshire is between $7,000 and $8,000. For further information write the Standard Homes Bureau, Washington, D. C.

DECRIES ANTIQUE STYLE IN MODERN BUILDINGS

Antique flavor in modern buildings often means only the substituting of poor, imperfect materials for those which are beautiful and substantial.

"There is danger that the vulgarity of shinniness will merely be replaced by an equally objectionable vulgarity of slovenliness," declares Francis P. Sullivan, of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, protesting against the "tyranny of texture."

"The word texture has properly the broadest significance," Mr. Sullivan pointed out. "It is as applicable to the luster of damask as to the shaginess of astrakhan. In the architect's diction, however, it not only conveys the idea of roughness and coarseness, but also the implication that lack of finish is in some way noble and desirable."

"The bricks in the Georgian houses with which I am familiar may have been made by hand, but they are just as well made as it is humanly possible for the hand to make them."

THIS HELPS SOLVE BATHROOM PROBLEM

There is an interesting combination bath and shower now on the market that is splendid for use in small bathrooms, and modernizers should remember it when they are figuring out how to make a bathroom of a closet and two feet of bedroom. It takes no more room than a shower bath. It has the appearance of an extremely short bathtub, but investigation shows that while the apparent height is no greater than the height of a bathtub, there is a portion of it sunk nine inches deeper into the floor. That is, there is a comfortable ledge to sit on, while one paddles one's feet in a deeper pool. The tub can be filled and one can bathe as in an ordinary tub, except that one sits comfortably instead of reclining; or one can take a shower bath. It is really an extremely comfortable sort of bath, and a most desirable sort to have where space is limited, and yet a tub is wished, rather than a shower.

NEW ACCESSORIES. Stunning new is an ensemble of hat, scarf and bag which uses grey tweed for the hat, bandage and bowled in grey, cream and blue, and for the purse which uses grey, cream and blue kid for piping. The scarf is blue crepe de chine, with grey and cream checkers along its edges, made of grosgrain ribbon.

PAINT UP

A building may be perfect as to architecture and beautiful as to lines, but if it needs a coat of paint and if this important work has been long neglected, the physical beauty of the architecture disappears. Paint brings out the charm of any house, aside from the factor of preserving wood.

CHEERFUL, yet Restful, EFFECTS for the Bedroom
This room above all others, must convey an invitation to rest and repose—to this end papers of a special type are designed. There are the quaint flowered papers with their scattered designs—inconspicuous but a charming background for furniture of the Early American type. Plain papers in delicate pastel tones with a satiny stripe in silver are a perfect setting for the delicate furniture of French inspiration. Patterns with more boldness and emphasis are chosen when the room is to be furnished in pieces of more rugged modern tone.

SAUNDERS' 'PINK PALACE' SOON TO BE MEMPHIS' MUSEUM

Here is an airview of the "Pink Palace," the $1,000,000 house started by Clarence Saunders six years ago, taken over by the city of Memphis when he went into bankruptcy, and now being fitted up for use as a city museum.

Memphis, Tenn. — The magnificent dream mansion that Clarence Saunders started as his home when the original Piggly-Wiggly spurge carried him to the crest of the wave half a dozen years ago is about to become a place of enjoyment for all the citizens of Memphis.

Given up by Saunders when the great Piggly-Wiggly stock market crash forced him into bankruptcy in 1923, the $1,000,000 house is being turned into a city museum, and will be thrown open for public use late this summer.

Mayor Watkins Voertgen declares the museum will be one of the show places of the city.

It won't be like the ordinary museum. It contains, for instance, a good-sized theater, which the city has rented to a little-theater organization. It contains also a moving picture theater, a big swimming pool, a gymnasium and similar un-museum-like appendages. It has more than 100 rooms, and is surrounded by a beautifully landscaped estate.

New York, June 22.—With "fair and warmer" predicted by the weather man, baseball's all-time attendance record of 85,365 cash customers for a single day may go by the board this afternoon when the American League pennant battle to an even break yesterday. The Mexican stand-off was a moral victory for the Mackian Maulers, who put the burden of proof even more heavily upon the champions, and a professional triumph for Babe Ruth. The feat of this interesting rivalry in twice pulling the bit-and-walk play saved his mates from utter rout and thrilled thousands of fans who are expected to make the turnstiles click at a record speed today. The rival mound ace won yesterday, Lefty Grove breathing to an 11 to 1 landslide in the opener and Walter Hoyt negotiating an 8 to 3 win the nightcap. Today the rival pilots will shoot their right bows, Walberg and Piggas. The other hurlers probably will be Zachary or Heismach and Quinn or Orwoll. Ruth's feat in driving in seven runs with a pair of homers and a single yesterday was a rarity but not a record. Al Simmons also hit two homers and other bingles, but drove in only five tallies. In the National League the Pirates slaughtered the Cubs, 14 to 3, taking the league lead away from the Bruins. Grimes recorded his 11th win for the Buas and Hack Wilson of the Cubs contributed his 17th homer, which was his sixth four-bagger in four days. By taking their fourth straight game from the Phillies, 11 to 5, the Giants advanced to within less than a game of the third-place Cardinals, who were playing an exhibition contest. Bressler's homer in the fifteenth climaxed Brooklyn's 7 to 3 victory over the Boston Braves, who had trimmed the Robins three straight. Brooklyn retained sixth place while Boston dropped to seventh. Charley Ruffing, of the Red Sox held Washington to five hits but lost 5 to 4.

National Open Golf Championship Draws Big Field of Star Players

New York, June 22.—Competitive golf, oft-times the most tense and dramatic of all sports, will be busy next Thursday writing another chapter of its sprightly history, another episode of the gripping serial that unfolds itself through the years, becoming ever more interesting with the passage of time. The drama will reach its annual climax with the staging of the national open championship on Winged Foot's treacherous links; its denouement will come on Saturday when the winner will be established after 72 holes of nerve-shattering play such as no other sport can know.

It will be played over a course that was built especially to try the soul of man. Its entries include the greatest players in the Western World, which largely speaking just about accounts for the universe itself. A title event that sponsors this pair of ingredients can produce more drama in one day than the average author can write in a month.

HARTFORD FIGHT PRINCIPALS

Lack Of Real Opposition Makes Classic A Bit Dull

Except at Start Bulldogs Lead All the Way to Finish and Then Row on to Gales Ferry Without Stopping.

Table with columns for team names and statistics (Age, Weight, etc.) for rowing crews.

Two races are on the program for today. The first one will be between the substitute fleets of Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and a special eight composed of Washington and Wisconsin oarsmen. Then, when these crews have paddled one mile and a half, two four-oared crews from Navy and California will put on their annual one mile dual. These crews have divided honors during the past four years and a hard fought contest will be on the program.

Yale took the varsity race from Harvard by five cold, disdainful lengths last evening. When Ed Leader's 1929 edition of blue-shirts had crossed the finish line they kept right on rowing to their old homestead at Gales Ferry, while the Harvard men ceased firing and rested on their sweeps. It was a good day, a good time, but as it was just a get-together excursion.

Yale's time was 21:20 and Harvard's 21:39. It was a pretty tough day for those who like to see a Harvard crew at the lead of a boat race. Harvard had just as good-looking yachts, just as good-looking girls, just as good-looking feathers. Blue except for her freshmen crew, she had not much to offer in the way of racing.

The varsity race was excellent from the artistic point of view. The water was the right color of blue, the marsh grass was the right color of green, but unless one was interested in cover designs for boating magazines there was not much more to look at.

And the Yale crew seemed to feel pretty much that way about it. They did not bother to sprint in the last leg of the race. They did not bother to raise their stroke. In fact, they were doing a lazy job when they passed the flag at 200 feet out for Gales Ferry. And that trip to Gales Ferry was the most nonchalant gesture of the whole affair.

Breaking precedent, Yale did not bother to wait and cheer this hard working Crimson crew who weren't good enough. True, they remembered their manners and rowed back from Gales Ferry to Red Top to pay their respects. But that was later. And it will take some time to wash out the bad taste of entering the Harvard mounds as Ed Leader's big Blue crew just rowed right out of the picture and left Ed Brown's boys sitting thinking things over right there in the clear evening light of Bartlett Cove.

Of course five lengths is better than ten, the sad story of last year. But at that time Yale was priming for bigger try. This year she had nothing to worry about and the long march upstream from the railroad yard to Bartlett Cove was so much exercise plus a chance to hear lusty Yale yells and the mournful honks of yacht sirens screaming victory as if they just didn't mean it.

It was about twenty minutes after 7 when the two boats started out, with Harvard in the lead for the first few yards, a half length. At the half mile Yale had reversed things and the Leader boat was a quarter of a length in the lead.

Rowing Easy 51. At the mile mark Yale was rowing an easy 31, with Harvard a beat lower. The Harvard stroke showed a check big as a plaid and the Blue crew were digging the water a half length nearer Bartlett Cove. And slowly, steadily, without any apparent effort, Ell went ahead, a length and a half at a mile and a half, then Blue water between the Bruins, and when the two-mile mark was passed Yale was three full lengths in the lead. Two lengths more came in the next leg.

SENSE and NONSENSE

The Radio Bug.
"Do you carry B-eliminators?"
"No, sir, but we have roach powder and some fly swatters."

An Effective Retort.
Husband—You know, dear, I'm not perfect.
Wife—Oh, yes, I know it, but I didn't think you did.

He: "Do you know the difference between Henry Ford and Darwin?"
She: "No."
He: "Well, you see, they both have beards except Henry Ford."

Guest: "That hammock must be pretty well worn out."
Host: "It ought to be. It's the sole survivor of three love affairs."

"Give three reasons for saying the earth is round," confronted Sandy in an examination paper.
"My teacher says it's round, the book says it's round, and a man told me it was round."

"Nora, you were entertaining a man in the kitchen last night, were you not?"
"That's for him to say, ma'am. I did my best."

Somebody asked the editor, "Do you like talkative women better than the other kind?" He said "What other kind?" and then made his getaway.

Mr. Richman: How do you like this place? Shall we buy it?
His wife: Oh, it's perfectly lovely! The view from this balcony is so fine that it leaves me speechless.
Mr. R.: Then we'll buy it.

Probably the most futile thing in the world is a radio listener sassing the broadcaster.

Some music publishers complain that radio is killing jazz. That makes another murder mutual.

In some cases distance may lend enchantment, but in the case of the average radio performer it just lends immunity.

Radio has now reached the point where everyone feels free to breathe and smile, talk and be normal as the occasion demands, and yet be credited with enjoying the program.

In the old days, if a man seemed extravagant, it was said he had a champagne appetite and a beer five-tube craving on a one-tube wage.

Birds of a feather flock together. If you believe you have seen buzzards flocking with chickens you were mistaken; they were all buzzards.

There is no logic in rushing across a railroad track. There is no sense in not stopping and taking every precaution to avoid being struck by a train. There is only a world of laziness and criminal recklessness.

Texas has what some men will regard as 28,000 acres of waste land devoted to spinach.

LETTER GOLF

A SEASONAL PUZZLE. This is the time of the year to make BEACH PLANS, so here's your opportunity. For five and one solution is on another page.

B	E	A	C	H
P	L	A	N	S

THE RULES.

- 1—The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
- 2—You change only one letter at a time.
- 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
- 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

It takes less effort to make good impressions than to re-make bad impressions.

No, Gladys, a dogma isn't a puppy's mother.

Even though a farmer doesn't get a vacation he has other troubles.

THE TINYMILES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

The Tynmiles were in a fix. "Is this one of the farmer's tricks?" asked Clowny, as the wagon bounced around to beat the band. "I'll bet he thinks it means of fun to scare his team and make it run, but why he scares us too is something I can't understand."

"Oh, don't be silly," Scoury cried. "You can't convince me that he tried to make his horses run away. What would he do that for. The farmer now is far behind. Some things you say are real unkind. He may not see his wagon or his horses any more."

"I wish that we could stop this team, but frankly now, it doesn't seem that there is anything at all we Tynmiles can do. When Mister Farmer quickly jumped off of this wagon, bumpy-bumped, I think that he was mighty smart. We ought to do that too."

"Oh, no," said Carpy. "Not for me. I'm going to stick right here 'cause, gee, we all might turn an ankle and be laid up weeks and weeks. And that, of course, would spoil our fun. Just think, we couldn't even run. My goodness, how this wagon goes, and listen how it squeaks. Just then the wagon hit a rick. It almost seemed that it would knock the four wheels off, but luckily the wheels stayed where they were. The wagon teetered to and fro, and suddenly someone yelled. "Oh! The harness now is tangled up. What queer things can occur."

And this was right. The harness snapped. At first the horses, both seemed trapped, but then they gave a sudden jerk and quickly broke away. "We've lost our horses," Clowny cried. "Oh, why did we come on this ride? I fear something will happen, so we'll never forget this day."

(A big crash comes in the next story.)

YOUTH AND EDUCATION CHURCH THEME SUNDAY

South Methodists to Honor High School Graduates; College Graduate to Be Honored, Also.

At the South Methodist church tomorrow at both morning and evening services, the Relation of Education and Youth will occupy the attention of those who attend. At the morning service the recently graduated high school young people will be guests of honor, and will be escorted to special reserved seats in the auditorium accompanied by those young people who are returned from the various colleges and are home for the vacation period. Rev. Mr. Coltriss has announced as his subject, "School Supplements," with a special outstanding message to youth.

At the evening service at 7:30 o'clock for the first time in this church's history an applicant for a local preacher's license will be published.

Miss Alice Harrison.

Miss Alice Harrison, who is to be examined, and will have conferred upon her the right to this distinction. Miss Alice Harrison is the lady who will receive this privilege, and is deemed a particularly suitable candidate to receive same.

This young lady, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harrison of Center street, graduated from our local high school in 1924, and was thereafter employed in the Aetna Insurance company Hartford until 1927. She then entered Boston University taking as her study Religious Education, and is making a very satisfactory progress in her work. In the summer of 1928, with her sister Mrs. Elsie, she held the position of counsellor at the summer camp at Elliot, Maine, a camp under the guidance of the Congregational churches in Boston. While there she preached several times very acceptably at the Methodist church at that place, she has also preached on many occasions at evening services, and young people's meetings in Boston and its surrounding area. She and her sister are again going to Elliot camp this summer where they have been engaged for the work as counsellors among the girls.

It is confidently expected that a large attendance will be present at both the services tomorrow in view of the unusual interest.

SWEDISH LUTHERANS AT KNOFLA'S COTTAGE

Sixty Members of Bible Class Enjoy Party on Losing Contest Team.

Sixty members and friends of the Fellowship Bible Class of the Swedish Lutheran church went on the outing, given by the losing team in the recent drive, at William Knofla's cottage on Columbia Lake last night. Mr. Knofla placed the facilities of the place at the disposal of the class. First in order on reaching the lake was swimming for the good part of an hour. Boating and canoeing or listening to the radio occupied those not aquatically inclined. Call to eats was made only once, "dogs," cupcakes and coffee disappearing in the twinkling of an eye. Games took up the remainder of the evening. Miss Svea Lindberg was chairman of the committee in charge.

GLOBE HOLLOW OPENING DISCLOSES IMPROVEMENT

Cold Weather Greeted Swimmers on First Official Bathing Day at Outdoor Pool.

With anything but favorable swimming conditions, the summer season at Globe Hollow was officially opened this morning. Due to the comparatively cold weather, the attendance was naturally considerably decreased from what it would have been had the opening taken place during the recent hot spell.

The schedule calls for a life guard to be on duty from 10 a. m. until 12 and from 1 p. m. until dark weekdays and from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. Saturdays. Frank C. Busch and August Milderer are the lifeguards. Those who visited Globe Hollow today for the first time found several new improvements which were made to the place far more attractive.

A concrete retaining wall with bleacher-like steps leading down to the water's level, extends from the dam to a point passed the end of the bathhouse. A basket check system has been installed whereby it is possible to accommodate 400 persons. The baskets have not yet arrived and through the courtesy of the J. W. Hale Company 600 large paper bags have been donated for the purpose. There are other improvements of a less important nature which will be greatly appreciated, such as the installation of electric lights.

Mrs. James M. Shearer and Mrs. Christine Shearer of Hilliard street, Mrs. W. S. Hyde, Mrs. Emma Chaffee and Mrs. Hyde's son and daughter motored down to Grove Beach Point this morning. They will remain until July 1 at Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shearer's cottage there.

Macdonald. These new projects, eight in number, will bring the total length of trunkline and state aid road under construction thus far this year to approximately 110 miles.

Among the larger of the new projects will be the building of about three and one-quarter miles of reinforced concrete pavement on the Manchester-Willimantic highway in the towns of Bolton and Manchester. Four and one-
