DESTROYING, SAVING

It is so much easier to destroy life than to save it that it seems odd that most of our monuments and memorial wreaths should go to the destroyers rather than to the saviors.

That, however, is the way we do things. Some day, perhaps, we shall have a better sense of values. Meanwhile—

The latter part of the 18th century and the first part of the 19th saw about as much wholesale destruction as has ever been crowded into a similar period of history.

It happens that there was an Englishman living in those days who managed to save more lives than the combined efforts of Wellington, Nelson, Napoleon and the rest destroyed.

His name was Edward Jenner. Is that name familiar to you? Probably not; most history books dismiss him with a paragraph.

Jenner, born in 1749, was the son of a country clergyman. He grew up in a day when smallpox was the most dreaded disease known.

Many years of study and experiment followed—until, in 1800, he was able to present the results of his researches to the world and get the endorsement of 73 prominent physicians.

During the years that ensued Jenner himself vaccinated more than 600,000 persons, and vaccination became recognized by medical men everywhere as the great weapon against smallpox.

The battlefields of Europe were bloody during these years. Armies moved and fought almost without ceasing, generals built vast reputations, the unwieldy ships of Lord Nelson sent their broadsides crashing into French, Danish and Spanish ships and Napoleon made his name a household word.

But Jenner, the quiet son of a country parson, was saving more lives than all of these battles were destroying.

this plan by one citizen on the score of insufficient notice for such an important contract. How are engineering firms generally to become aware of such a big job in time to properly look over the ground and present estimates, when only ten days are permitted to elapse between advertisement and award? This was the burden of his query.

It seems to us that the reply that was made to this argument is a poor one. It was that the engineering firms knew all about the job long ago—that they always get such information through the "grapevine system" and the advertising was only a matter of form anyhow.

Perhaps there is a good deal of truth to what the author of this explanation said. Possibly it is an established custom of engineering contractors to have representatives hanging around the offices of municipal engineers, looking over their blueprints as a plan grows and keeping in close touch with the situation so as to be ready to bid the moment the job is advertised.

The Norwalk case is one in point. There were four bids submitted—on a million dollar contract. There are probably a hundred engineering contractors in the east who are qualified to bid on that sewage disposal job. But, if so, ninety-six of them did not bid.

It is not to be assumed that the Norwalk City Council has the remotest idea of letting that contract at an excessively high price. But we very seriously doubt that, if it were a private job and to be paid for by the members of the council, as a firm, they would consider the full and adequate advertising of it a thing to be neglected.

We would almost be willing to bet a cookie that if the Norwalk Council will advertise the contract all over again and allow thirty days for the reception of bids they will receive several that are considerably lower than any of the four received under the curious arrangement adopted—and from fully responsible concerns.

Expressions of indignation over the condition in which the Bolton road has been placed by the peculiar construction methods followed there by the State Highway Department seem, at casual glance at least, to be pretty well justified. There appears to have been a rather unnecessary degree of indifference to public welfare, perhaps for the sake of making an easier job for the road builders.

So far as we are aware it has not been the usual practice of the Highway Department, in rebuilding such important trunk lines as that between Manchester and Willimantic, to utterly ignore the comfort or safety of motorists by tearing up the whole road at once.

What makes the situation especially aggravating is the fact that the Department seems to be indulging in a joke by calling the road open to traffic and by failing to mark out, as it might have done, a very inconvenient but at least not extra-hazardous detour, through Foster and Finlay streets.

Perhaps the New York mayorality campaign will be less interesting as between Walker and La Guardia than as between La Guardia and William M. Bennett. While Bennett, though at one time a state senator, is strictly a local figure and politically unknown to many outsiders who are fully aware of both Mayor Jimmy and La Guardia, he is presumably an entirely respectable personage; and it is on the basis of respectability that he becomes interesting.

being, of course, almost no dry Democrats, the Bennett vote should represent within reasonable latitude the vote of all the drys in town. That is, of those who are really, seriously dry.

TOURIST GROWS CAREFUL. It is a tradition—started by whom and when it is impossible to find out—that the tourist is the most careless, inconsiderate and thoughtless of all living mortals. Happily, however, it begins to look as if the tourist is mending his ways.

"Carelessness in handling campfires, smoldering cigars, cigarettes and matches at one time presented quite a problem," he writes, "but in the last few years, thanks to the co-operation of park visitors, this cause has been reduced."

Going Places AND Seeing Things. Detroit, Mich.—One day last winter, I was lunching with one of those more-or-less celebrated English novelists who visit our shores and spent the rest of the year writing about it.

Next to canned milk, the various forms of canned tomatoes are next in importance. The main reason tomatoes are canned in such large numbers is that they grow abundantly, they are easy to pack, and easy to sterilize on account of their acid content.

Well, I'm sitting in a hotel room on a very hot day, looking down upon a triangular park and streets hedged in trees. I don't know my Baghdad and ancient Orient perhaps as I should. Nor can I find any columnist who recorded the day-to-day impressions.

Being closer to those problems one hears discussed on street corners, it was the new skyline of Windsor, Ontario, which left me staggered.

Looking over the narrow expanse of river and watching the fleets of little boats rushing back and forth, one cannot but wonder how a vast traffic in wet goods is to be curbed, if I ever see my English friend again, I'm going to ask him what part the English ale played in his Detroit adventures.

WASHINGTON LETTER. By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Next to canned milk, the various forms of canned tomatoes are next in importance. The main reason tomatoes are canned in such large numbers is that they grow abundantly, they are easy to pack, and easy to sterilize on account of their acid content.

Next to tomatoes, more peas are canned than any other vegetable or fruit. The peas are shelled in a modern cannery without having the pods picked from the vine.

Corn is the next most popular vegetable. It is put up in three styles. The "Maine" style means that the tops of the kernels are cut off with a knife, then the cob is scraped to get the pulp off afterwards.

Two modern developments of the canning industry are vegetable and fruit salads consisting of mixture all ready to serve as combination salads.

Washington.—"Work for the Indians!" is the keynote of the program which Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur is working out for the rehabilitation of the 350,000 red men on the government's 200 reservations.

Wilbur and Rhoads are going on the theory that the Indian's lack of opportunity for productive effort is largely responsible for his many troubles. Hence, conditions on the reservations, which have long been a public scandal, are now traced to under-nourishment brought about by the Indian's inability to feed himself.

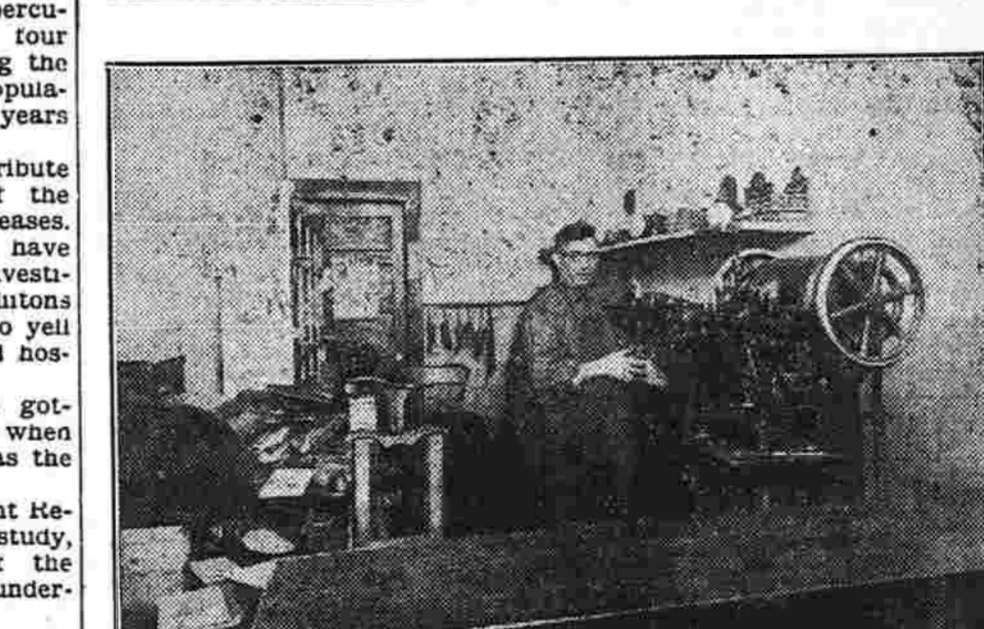

Wilbur says they have lacked food because they have lacked jobs. On the reservations they are isolated and absolutely idle, with no chance to earn any money.

"ON WITH THE SHOW" IS COMING ON SUNDAY

Sensational "Talkie" at State Photographed in Natural Colors.

There is coming to the State theater next week a gigantic and spectacular film production which has completely upset the talking picture industry. It is Warner Brothers' new 100 per cent all-talking, singing and dancing film, "On With the Show," which opens for a special three days engagement at the State beginning Sunday evening.

This thrilling and glamorous drama which takes you behind the footlights of a big Broadway theater and shows you what goes on in the daily routines of an entertainer, is heralded by critics as without a doubt of any kind, one of the most stupendously gorgeous pictures ever made.

The entire production, besides featuring an elaborate array of sparkling talent from both stage and screen, has one other highlight. It is photographed entirely in beautiful natural colors.

LETTER GOLF

ONE TO SETTLE

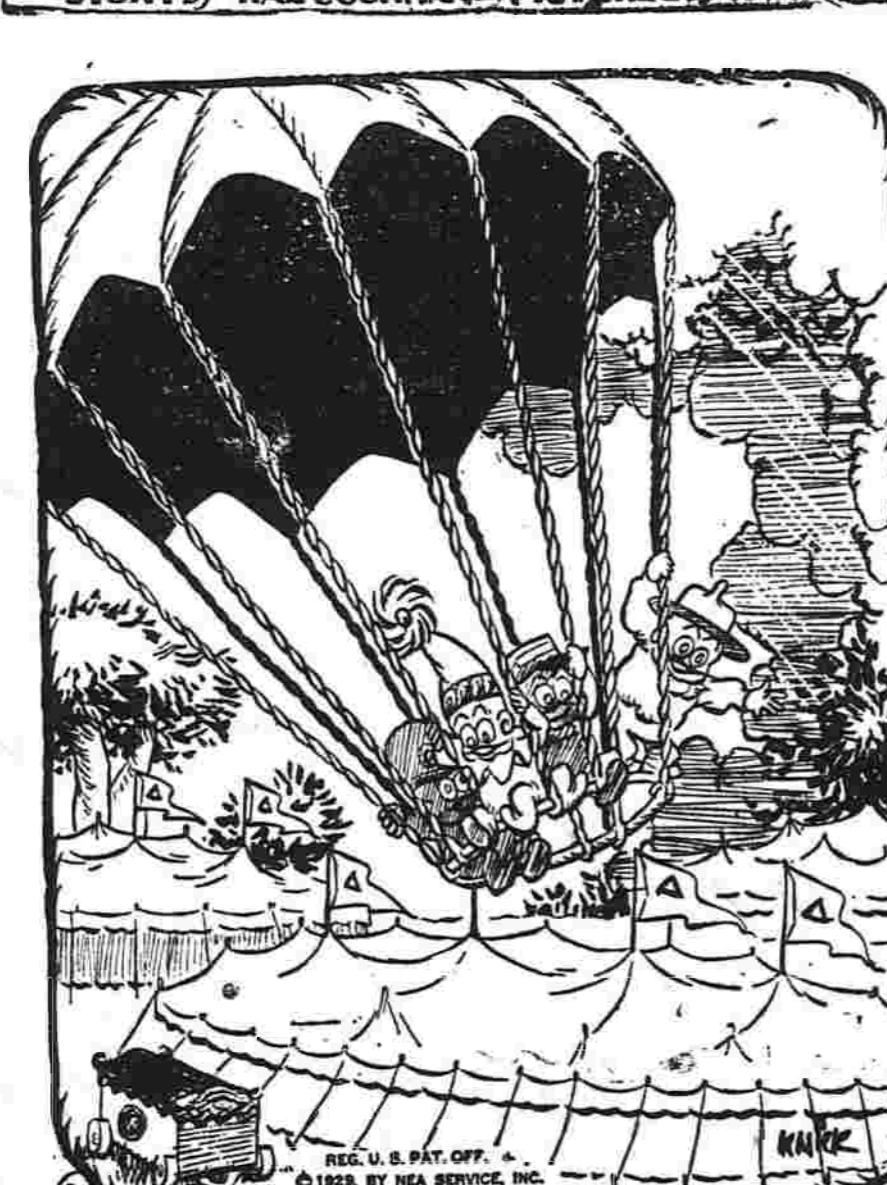

One OWES a DEBT for a long time in letter golf. Far is nine, but perhaps you can beat the solution on another page:

Letter grid for 'OWES' and 'DEBT' with empty spaces for other letters.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Out through the air the big plane sped and suddenly wee Clowny said, "Hey, Mister Aviator, will you take us through a cloud, I think that that would be real fun. We'd hide away from old man sun. Come on and do it for us, if it's something that's allowed." The aviator smiled and said, "Sure! There's a cloud right over head." And instantly he turned his plane and headed up that way. It wasn't long till they were in the cloud. "Twas just like smoke, real thin." "Oh, my," said little Carpy, "It's like night-time, 'stead of day." Then out into the sun they flew. "I'll tell you what you Tinyms do," exclaimed the friendly flyer. "Now, a lot of strands of rope, which you can nicely use, I hope. You're going to make a parachute, if all of you will work. Upon your tent just tie the strands. Get busy now, with both your hands. I think that you'll enjoy a drop from up here to the ground. Be sure and make the knots real tight so everything will work all right." The bunch soon were so busy that they didn't make a sound. The tying work seemed heaps of fun and the parachute was done. Then Carpy said, "Where will we drop and then where will we go?" The aviator said, "Right here and there is not a thing to fear. You'll land right where you want to. There's your circus, right below." The canvas then was folded tight and every little Tinymite grabbed hold of one long piece of rope. "Then jump!" the aviator snapped. Right soon the canvas was unwrapped. The Tinymites were in the air. Their biggest thriller yet. (The Tinymites land on the circus ground in the next story.)
