TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO LAW OBSERVANCE WAS ISSUE

The International Sunday School Lesson for September 15 is "Teaching The Law Of God."—Nehemiah 8:1-18.

BY WILLIAM F. ELLIS.

Old-fashioned believers in a Divine Providence will perceive a significance in the occurrence, at the present time, of an International Sunday School Lesson upon the theme of law-observance. When this series of Lessons was planned, several years ago, by a committee of scholars representing the United States and Canada, and the leading denominations, no man foresaw that the whole North American continent would at this time be undergoing a veritable crisis with respect to the place of law in the people's life. The International Lesson Committee thought only to teach the story of a high hour in the experience of the restored Jewish nation. But, lo, the opportuneness and pertinency of the tale to this very day is so extraordinary as to be deemed Providential.

This is old truth for the new times. Ripe with the experiences of twenty-five hundred years, the message comes thundering down the corridors of time that without the Law there can be no national security, solidarity or safety. In vain are the walls of the city restored unless the changeless law of the living Lord is their buttress.

Law is more than restraint; it is constraint. It not only prohibits, but it also propels. Law is an impulse and a purpose, as well as an obligation. It inspires men to do, as well as to forego. Motivation is a mightier element in law than negation. This positive aspect of law is what makes a solid group out of scattered individuals. It was the tie that bound the Jews into nationhood, and redeemed them from dispersion by dispersing, even as it had once unified them out of slavery.

After the Building, What? After a nation has become rich and powerful, what then? Jerusalem's walls had been rebuilt by Nehemiah, and its enemies repulsed. Safety and prosperity had arrived. What then? Nothing is clearer than that mere things can never satisfy either a man or a nation. The world's travel lanes are dotted with discontented men who have made their fortunes but are miserable in trying to discover the next step in the experience and enjoyment of life. After security, what?

In the case of the returned Jews, the Lesson tells the story. The people were gathered at the capital near the rebuilt temple, and the

THE LIGHT THAT CIVILIZES

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE

International Sunday-School Lesson Text, Sept. 15. The entrance of thy Word giveth light.—Ps. 119:130.

Books, art, inventions, learning, science do not in themselves constitute civilization. A savage does not become civilized by his using a high-powered repeating rifle instead of a bow and arrows. A form of government, however perfect, does not make a people civilized if laws are used only for self-gain and oppression. The most desperate criminals have between them of selves codes for the division of plunder.

Self derived intelligence has no more civilizing power than is possessed by the worship of graven images. No nation ever was or will be really civilized that engages in aggressive warfare. War for gain is the dominant principle in the highwayman and the savage.

We have been accustomed to call national civilization in proportion to their art, learning and science. The world is coming to a conception of civilization other than that given by the dictionaries. The coolie pulling his ricksha with gladness and the joy of service is more civilized than face life. The sermon subject is "Day Dreams."

Mrs. H. R. Brennan of Hartford, formerly Miss Mabel Pollard, Director of Religious Education in this church, will speak at the Epworth League service at 6 p. m. Harvest Moon Lawn service at 7 p. m. There will be an instrumental quartet from the Salvation Army Band to lead the singing and play special numbers. The sermon subject: "The Great Stone Face."

CHURCHES

NO. METHODIST EPISCOPAL

Marvin S. Stocking, PaPastor

The attendance at the Church school at its opening session last Sunday was gratifying. Every class is asked to aim at one hundred per cent attendance tomorrow at 9:30. "The Genius of the Discoverer" is the topic of the sermon at the 10:45 service tomorrow. "Seeing Things" is the topic of brief talk to the boys and girls. There will be anthems by the choir, organ selections and the hymns beginning, "Father of all, from land and sea," "Tell it out among the nations" and "Joy is a fruit that will not grow in nature's barren soil."

The leaders of the 6 o'clock Epworth League service will be Misses Hilda Magnuson and Marguerite Marks. The topic for study is, "What do we mean by 'Real Living'?"—Matt. 7:24-27. The Epworth League invites its friends to a social in the vestry, Thursday evening. A joint meeting of the two missionary societies, both home and foreign, will be held with Mrs. C. I. Balch, Friday at 2:15 p. m. The first Church Council meeting of the fall, held last Monday night, was well attended and the business of the coming season was given a good start.

The Ladies' Aid society at its meeting last Wednesday, planned a number of events including an all-day sewing party at the vestry, Wednesday, Sept. 25, a rummage sale Thursday, Oct. 24 and the annual chicken pie supper, Wednesday, Nov. 6.

KEITH'S

Where you can afford to buy good furniture

A combined BUYING POWER of $10,000,000

The magnitude of the Allied Furniture Buyers Syndicate is clearly revealed by this map of New England showing only communities in which there are member stores. In this section only at Keith's do you receive the benefits derived from this great buying organization.

.... reaching every community in New England ... enables Keith's to serve Manchester with fine furniture at lower prices than ever before

OVER one hundred of New England's finest furniture stores have combined their efforts to buy as a unit and cooperate in giving better styles, better values and better service than individual stores could ever give. Our membership to this group gives us advantages in furniture retailing that no other store in this vicinity can offer. The Allied Furniture Buyers Syndicate—as it is called—does not in any way affect our local management or personal service. It is for buying purposes only—providing us with quality furniture at lower quantity prices never before possible. In every case these savings are reflected in our new low prices to you. We can obtain quality furniture built to our own exacting requirements and trade marked with our own guarantee. Factories introducing new designs come first to our organization. That is why it is only natural to find the newest styles and finishes first at our stores. Experienced buyers are always searching the markets. Their purchases represent all that is new and beautiful for the home.

Already a goodly portion of our stock is represented by this merchandise: new—beautiful—and low priced. Another vital factor in making Keith's the place.

Fighting Tuaregs In African Jungle

Local Man Tells of Hand to Hand Encounters With Knife Hurling Tribesmen With the Temperature at 125 in the Shade—A Grim Story by a Former French Cavalry Man.

YOU'VE heard of the Foreign Legion. That outfit of soldiers who fight savages under the French flag, to join the band of adventurers like signing a death warrant, because few return alive. Men, of all nationalities are found here. It takes courage of the most desperate type to stand the rigors of the campaigns against the men whose cruelty would make a red Indian blush with shame. And yet there are found men who join up just for the sheer joy of fighting against desperate odds.

In your walks about town you may have, perhaps, seen a smallish built man working in his garden. As he tends the beans and potatoes at his prosaic task, he probably is thinking of jungles, fights with savages and strange deeds in far off lands. He lived through all these and the years have not dimmed his memory but it is difficult to induce him to speak about himself.

Difficult Task
Here is a tale that took about three years to obtain. The man was approached a half dozen times but it was only this week that he consented to talk a little about his adventures in Africa. And the reason he talked was that he was soon going back again to France and it did not seem to make much difference if his adventures found their way into print.

"If I intended to remain here I would imagine that the people would think I was boasting. I will tell you the simple facts and you can arrange them as you will. Chances are that I myself will never read the article. I lived through it. That is enough for a lifetime."

A GAIN a little known street pops into the narrative. Who knows where Windemere street is? It is found on the highest portion of the Homestead Park section of the town. This section is really in the geographical center of Manchester but is somewhere far off. It is seldom visited and autoists shun it, as the streets for only a few months of the year, are passable.

Here was found Alfred Rollet in his cozy little front room, surrounded by his wife and two children. He was talking in French when the interviewer entered and then changed into the English language as he asked the visitor to be seated.

Is 54 Years Old
At the start a little was learned about his early life to serve as a background for the tale he was about to tell.

He said he was born in Lorient, a small village in France. The nearest big city was Lure, little known in this country. There were besides himself, two sisters in the family. The villages were all woodchoppers and this was what he followed after completing his early education. Later he went to night school where he picked up his knowledge of Italian which he spoke almost as fluently as his mother tongue.

HIS ADVENTURES START WITH RUSH
ONE bright morning a captain walked into Robert's tent.

"Your adventures are about to begin," he said. In the morning you start for the jungles of Africa and if you return with an adventure is not satisfied I will miss my guess. My only advice to you is to take care of yourself for where you are going it is a case of every man for himself."

A Trooper's Horse Guards Him When Asleep in the Jungles.

HOW a trooper loves his horse, is one of the highlights of the interesting narrative told on this page today by Alfred Rollet concerning campaigning for nearly three years in the jungles of Africa.

"Did you love our horses? Why, man, our horse was wife, sweetheart, father, mother and protector for us. Never was a whip used on the animals. They understood even our whispers.

"Hundreds of times I slept in the jungles in the midst of all sorts of dangers with my horse on guard. That mare could smell the enemy and scores of times awoke me in time. Her name was Bertha and when I heard of her death, years after I left the army, I cried for a week.

"The first time I tried to ride her she threw me. I got into the saddle again and drove her until she almost collapsed from weariness. I used the spurs on her for the first time and last time in my life. When she realized that she had to do as I bid her, she became my best friend. She led me out of trackless wilds in darkest nights when I lost all sense of direction.

"One night I was awakened by her snorts as she struck at something in the darkness. She was evidently fighting something on the ground. I lit a match and there I saw the biggest snake I ever saw in my life. That horse had trampled it to a jelly.

"Had I been alone I would have been killed by the snake.

"There is no use with arguing to a trooper about his horse. He knows that a horse is man's best and truest friend."

Jungle Fighter

was a predicament. I was fighting with unseen enemies. How many there were or where they were did not trouble me. I was trying to get my foot out of the stirrup and get from under that horse. I felt an awful pain in my other shoulder and knew that some bones were broken. The knife was still sticking in the shoulder and I was getting weaker and weaker. I knew I must stay conscious and whispered to the horse to be quiet. She obeyed me and got on to her feet. I held on to the reins and dragged myself to my feet. Any second I feared the Tuaregs would rush me but they did not. They were waiting to see if I had been killed, I guess. Another seemed hours while I stood there leaning against the horse when I heard a rustling in the bushes and saw the outline of a man. I fired and the man fell. Then I became unconscious.

Found By Pal
"The sound of the shot was heard by another patrol who found me with my horse standing patiently over me. Nearby was the dead Arab. He had been alone.

No first aid kits did we carry. My pal bound up my wounds as best he could and helped me on to my horse. And then began a 24 hour horseback ride until I reached a place where my wounds could be treated. How I lived through that I never knew. We must have been tough in those days. Three months in a hospital and then back to the jungles."

NATIVES THROW KNIVES AT THEIR ENEMIES
"Those knives were wicked weapons," said the narrator as he continues his story. "They were called yatagans and were very heavy. The Arabs could throw them with remarkable accuracy. They did not use guns because the sound of them might bring other French soldiers to the scene.

"We were pitifully few to keep order among those thousands but it was a case of sheer nerve with us. We bluffed them. The uniform gave them a scare but we had to be stern. We could give them no leeway or we would have been killed. It was a case of watching day and night. They were lazy people and would rather rob than do anything else. We had to act as detectives, judge and executioner all by ourselves. The women would try to vamp us but we knew that meant death, so we kept away. They were always laying traps for us."

Lived on Natives
"How did you live?"
"That was the easiest part of the job. When mealtime came we would approach a house and order the man to kill a couple of chickens for us. He would mutter something about 'white dogs' but he'd prepare the chickens all right but we had to watch carefully to see that he didn't try to put poison in the food."

"Were you ever lost?"
"Many times but the worst one was when I was lost for three days. I lived on berries but there was no water and I was dying from thirst. I lost all sense of direction so let the horse go where she wanted to. That faithful old beast found water for us on the third day. Some natives found us and guided us to the nearest village.

Snakes Everywhere
"The snakes were the bane of my life. There were big ones, big enough to crush a horse and they would lay in wait on trees. I was always on the lookout for them. But one day I was feeding my horse when a smaller one bit me in the leg. I cut the puncture with my knife and sucked out the poison and never felt any effect. See the big slice I took out of the leg," and he showed the wound. He also showed the scar in his shoulder where the Tuareg's knife had struck him.

"What about these sheiks they rave about when they see them in the movies? They come from that country?"
"Sheiks? Of all dirty looking bums in the world they are the lowest. They are also the meanest on earth. One day I was admiring myself in a small mirror. You know, soldiers always think they are good looking. As I looked into the glass thing created to please each individual: in fact, everybody found some of the laws running counter to his own tastes and interests. But all were to be obeyed, alike, the laws that were pleasant and the laws that were unpopular. Eclecticism in law observance is equivalent to the repudiation of all law. For if I choose to disregard the prohibition law my neighbor on one side may, with equal right, choose to disregard the law concerning property and my neighbor on the other side may choose to disregard the law concerning murder. Each of us may have justification for our lawlessness, from the individual viewpoint.

Laws That Last
One notable fact about this festival of the law in the experience of the Jews, twenty-five hundred years ago, is that the thousand-year-old Law they were hearing and celebrating has continued to this day as the Law of Civilization. Modern society is built upon the Law we should see more clearly. Soundness and safety and sweetness of life are to be found only in the keeping of the eternal law of the living God.

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS
He who wishes to secure the good of others has already secured his own.—Confucius.

The first thing to consider in life is the end of it, its highest and ultimate designs.—W. L. Watkinson.

I am only one, But I am one. I cannot do everything, But I can do something; What I can do, I ought to do; And what I ought to do, By the grace of God I will do. —Canon Farrar.

The initiation of all wise or noble things comes and must come from individuals.—J. S. Mill.

I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake.—II, Cor. 12:10.

Who gives himself with his aims feeds three.—Himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me. —Lowell.

In life, as in a football game, the principle to follow is: Hit the line hard; don't foul; don't shirk, but hit the line hard.—Roosevelt.

FIGHTING ON BORDER

Moscow, Sept. 14—Heavy concentrations of troops have been carried out on the Manchurian frontier near Pogranichnaya indicating that serious fighting is taking place or has taken place in that region, according to reports from Harbarovsk, today.

The reprisals threatened in the recent communication of Acting Foreign Commissioner Litvinoff against the Chinese are being carried out. Many Chinese, accused of opium and money smuggling, have been arrested here and in Leningrad.

The reprisals were threatened as the result of ill treatment of Soviet citizens in Manchuria and China proper.

fective than most sermons. Let the people hear what God has to say in His word and there will not be need for motion pictures, book reviews and politics in the pulpit. No revival worth the name will ever come except by way of a clear presentation of the Bible.

Anarchy in High Places
Everywhere one goes nowadays, people of all sorts are to be found discussing laws. There is more practical anarchy being talked, by men and women who should know better, than ever before in history. Certain groups of highest and lowest are united in a weird fellowship of the profession and practice of law-defiance.

Their basic assumption and agreement is that laws which they do not like may be disregarded. They refuse to accept the principle of the whole body of society, and not for the pleasure of the individual. Nor do these law-defiers comprehend that all man-made laws get their sanction from their consonance with the universal and eternal laws of God, which are summed up in the Eleven Commandments.

When Ezra read the Law to the assembled Jews in rebuilt Jerusalem, he did not offer it as some-

BENITO, U. S. NEEDS YOU

Rome — Italy's going-and-get-it Benito Mussolini, is the man the United States needs to enforce its prohibition law. "In the past five years," says the Premier, "I have closed 27,000 saloons. Most Builders Demand Fireplace In Home

There are hundreds and thousands of people today who wouldn't own a home unless it had a fireplace in it. The fireplace certainly has come into its own in the American home. You find them large and small, plain and ornate in thousands of our new homes. The above picture gives one a good idea of the fireplace in the Herald-Elizabeth Park Exhibition Home. It is well designed and its size is in keeping with the house and the living room in which it is located. There are just as many ideas regarding the use of fireplaces today as there are houses. Some people prefer gas logs—some special electric heaters and many more who prefer to burn wood as in the days gone by, when fireplaces were about the only source of heat in the New England house. There is no question but what the wood makes the cheeriest appearance when it is burning. There is a special powder manufactured now that when sprinkled on wood gives the same beautiful colors that come from driftwood taken from the ocean.

FIRE RESISTING ROOF WINS MUCH APPROVAL

The fire resisting roofing used on the Herald-Elizabeth Park Exhibition Home brings to mind the thought that in a check up of new home construction today one will find that in a majority of cases this type of roofing is being used. It has the approval of the Underwriters' Laboratories and comes in three classifications or grades, A, B, and C. A great many times one hears of this type of roofing being referred to as "fireproof". This is not the case for really there are very few things that are fire proof. Even a concrete building can be destroyed by fire if the contents are such that they produce an intense heat that spells the concrete and exposes the steel reinforcing. On the other hand these modern composition shingles are very fire resisting and will not ignite even when blazing embers fall on them.

In view of this fact they are in great favor with the Insurance companies and in localities where all buildings are covered with such roofing a lower rate is obtainable. It has been intimated that the time is not far hence when the Insurance interests will endeavor to have all city covered with fire resisting roofing in preference to the wood shingle.

With modern facilities for production these composition shingles can be produced to sell at very reasonable prices. They are also produced in a pleasing variety of patterns and colors that look very well when laid. Almost any harmonizing color arrangement can be secured with these shingles. They have been a great help in

Compact Bungalow Saves Steps---and Dollars

By CORA W. WILSON

Bungalows—compact living quarters—are in the spirit of the times. The house pictured here was designed to save steps, conserve space and above all to save money. It requires only a 50 foot lot.

Of Colonial architecture, this bungalow will look well in any location.

A Sequence of Beauty

The visitor enters a small vestibule which leads into a living room that is 11 by 19 feet. Here are a lovely fireplace, leaded glass windows and cross current ventilation. From the living room one enters the dining room—a square room easy to furnish—and here also is a group of leaded glass windows. Opposite this room is the ideal kitchen, small in size but containing every modern convenience, a small porch and entry which is a great help to the housewife.

A hall runs from the dining room to the bath. On the right is a bedroom; in the rear a garage; and on the left two other bedrooms. These rooms are well fitted with closet room and a linen closet in the hall.

"BROADWAY BABIES" COMING TO STATE

Cherie—here comes the Princess of Pop again!

Meaning none other than Alice White, First National-Vitaphone star, whose latest talking, singing and dancing offering, "Broadway Babies," comes to the State theater for three days beginning Sunday.

Miss White is energy and effervescence personified. She has been termed the Apostle of it, the Tired Business Man's Joy, and Exhibit A in the Exposition of Jazz.

It was Miss White who was correctly labeled in "Show Girl" as "the hottest little wench who ever shook a scanty at a tired business man."

In "Broadway Babies" another story of the Great White Way and life behind the scenes of a theater, the adorable Alice has an ideal vehicle for her talents. It is declared. She plays one of a trio of hoofers—the others being Sally Sellers and Marion Byron—who try to kick the Big Town. Their experiences make up a story that has much interest and will appeal to everyone.

The supporting cast of "Broadway Babies" includes Charles Delaney, Louis Natheaux, Tommy Dugan and a chorus of sprightly girls. It is 100 per cent dialogue from beginning to end.

"Broadway Babies" is intended for entertainment purposes only, and will be welcome to local theatergoers who like their screen stories full of ginger and pep.

Appearing on the same bill is Bob Nelson, versatile entertainer and singer of Keith vaudeville fame. This snappy and clever artist is featured in a Vitaphone specialty offering that is a sure cure for the blues.

Better Homes Makes Manchester A Beautiful Community

The Navy's But A Family Rendezvous For Halletts

What is believed to be a country-wide record of War service, and an enviable one, has been disclosed in the war record of the Hallett family of Yarmouth, Cape Cod, which Francis H. Hallett of 82 West street, employed as a carpenter by Cheney Brothers was the youngest member. Barely old enough for service during the late World War, Francis Hallett served aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma during the late unpleasantness together with his father and older brother, George, until the end of the war. Under the big guns of the huge dreadnaught, this patriotic old Cape Cod family followed in the footsteps of other illustrious forebears, setting a mark that is well nigh unattainable.

The paternal great-grandfather of Francis Hallett of South Manchester, wrote the first page in the family war record. Promoted to Captain, Charles W. Hallett of the Revolutionary Naval forces rendered valuable services in his country's dire struggle for freedom, and by so doing set the precedent for the line to follow him.

All On One Boat
Such is the partial record of the Hallett family of which Francis of this town is the youngest male member. The boys of this family are four in number and there are three girls. All are proud of their father's Spanish War and World War record as attested by the eagerness expressed aboard ship with him. Charles W. Hallett's excellent Spanish American War record was a determining factor in influencing the Naval authorities in placing him aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma as Chief Machinist Mate. The father was barely settled on the big battlewagon when he pleaded the cause of his son, George, and aboard he came. Then Francis at the Newport training station looked wistfully seaward, hoping against hope that he, too, might be allowed to complete the family party. And noble Dad Hallett went up to the skipper once more to plead for his younger son. To say that the Executive officer was surprised would be putting it mildly.

City, Schools, Urged To Unite In Planning Of Playgrounds

Effective use of the large municipal investments in school buildings, toilets and equipment as well as the co-operation of city and school departments in the organization of joint school and playgrounds is urged by Charles H. Cheney, chairman of the city and regional planning committee of the American Institute of Architects, in a report on playground requirements in city and regional plans.

"The cost of maintaining playgrounds is a problem which most cities find difficult," Mr. Cheney points out. "Development of playgrounds might naturally be expected of the school board, which has the duty of training the children's minds and in some states at least must also provide them with physical education."

"But in no city are school budgets sufficient to do the playground work necessary outside of school hours or keep playgrounds open in summer. Hence it is common practice for cities to have separate playground department for play activities."

Facilities Overlap
"Sometimes this department is placed under the Park Board, sometimes under a separate playground commission. To carry on this work the budget of the City Council as much or more money than the physical education department of the school budget."

"As these play activities of both city department and school department are for children in the same neighborhood. It is decidedly uneconomical to provide separate playgrounds, toilets and field houses for the city department when school buildings, toilets and school grounds already exist."

In recent years a co-operative plan between the City Council and the School Board has been worked out in a considerable number of cities, whereby they join together, each paying half the expense of a good superintendent of playgrounds and physical education combined. He organizes the physical training in the schools during school hours and supervises the playgrounds outside of school hours and on holidays, Sundays and vacations throughout the year.

A Pleasing Bungalow in the Spanish Style

House No. 641

A MODERN version of the old Spanish style, this bungalow with its patios, informal sweeping roof lines and attached garage, presents a rambling appearance that is indeed inviting. The designer, while preserving the informal feeling in the architecture, has not overlooked beauty, permanence and upkeep, for he has chosen the face brick for the walls, tile for the roof, steel frames for the casement windows, and either terra cotta or stone for the twisted columns around the living room windows. The combination has given him his choice of the beautiful range of color available in face brick while at the same time taking advantage of the fire-safety and low upkeep costs that accompany such construction. This home is one that will present the same attractive appearance years hence, and should it ever need to be sold it will command the highest resale value.

One enters this home through the low-walled patio shown in the perspective. On the inside, a vestibule opens into the living room and also connects with the hall leading to the three bedrooms on the right. A feature of these bedrooms is that all have windows on three sides. Not only does this provide exceptionally good ventilation, but the rooms have more light than is usual. The bath is conveniently located between the two rear bedrooms. The living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and garage are compactly designed to occupy the left half of the house. With a fireplace in the corner, triple windows on the front and one on the side, the 14 foot by 20 foot 6 inch living room is a cheery place. An arched opening leads from it into the dining room directly behind it. Through casement windows, the dining room looks out over a charming patio that has been placed in the rear. A swinging door connects the dining room with the breakfast room on the left and this room is fitted with a china cabinet that is built-in. Directly behind the breakfast room is the kitchen with more cabinets—a room plenty large enough to be called a real kitchen.

If you are interested in working drawings for House No. 641, the editor of this paper will gladly tell you where they may be obtained.

GARDEN, AS PART OF HOME, NEEDS CAREFUL DESIGN

Atmosphere, Character and Interesting Features Essential to Success.

Trees Must Harmonize.

By J. Franklin Meehan
The successful garden must have atmosphere, character and interesting features. It must draw its atmosphere from conditions with which it is immediately associated. Its character must be the interpretation of the object for which it is intended. Special features must be those which are appropriate for the object desired.

Access From Pergola
The garden design for the house shown on this page, because of its important connection with the house and wall effect, is really a part of the architectural structure.

The character of the walks is always important, and their use is determined according to the individual fancy of the owner. The grass walk is undoubtedly the most effective and appropriate, provided it is not subject to too much wear. Kept clear of weeds and with one variety of grass, it presents a definite and finish effect which cannot be attained in any other way.

In the design for this house, rose arbors are established on either side, which give access to the lawn on the right, and the vegetable garden on the left.

Interesting vistas may be had from every part of the garden, with pergola and pool as the axis. The most important vista terminates at the rear wall where two Japanese Weeping Cherry trees and two Arbor Vitae are located.

The basis for hardy flowers presents a real bouquet and the plants are selected to give bloom through the entire flowering season. Peonies, iris, ground phlox begin the display in the spring. From that period through the summer there are always flowers and bright colors until autumn, when the chrysanthemums and mums conclude the display. The value of hardy flowers is being appreciated more and more every day, not only on account of the garden effect, but because they are so satisfactory for table purposes. Many varieties may be continuously cut to advantage, the cutting bringing out additional young wood and bloom. Background Well Cared For. The background is well cared for by the anonymous and try on the wall. The flower background is established by the use of the mallows and hollyhocks, which begin to bloom in early July and last into September. Even after the beds have been cared for and covered for the winter, the garden is still a source of interest by the assortment of rust-colored evergreens. Water features are always effective. The pool in this garden is of rustic design, planted with appropriate vines and flowers.

Preparing For The Painter

By MARIE HULSER

For those who are contemplating having painting done during the autumn season it is none too soon to offer some timely suggestions.

One of the most important steps in securing a good paint job is to arrange with the painter for a date well in advance of the time you wish the work to commence. After the date has been determined and appropriate colors decided upon, it is advisable to give a day or two to making a thorough inspection of the interior as well as the exterior of the house. A list should be made of all little repairs or refinishing jobs which need attention, and then if a day of rain interrupts the progress of exterior painting, time will not be wasted, for the painter can turn his talents to interior work. If there are doors or drawers which are difficult to open these should be planned before the painter arrives. They will then be ready for retouching without delaying other equally important work. It is often wise as well as economical to engage the carpenter for a day or so before the painters arrive so that any small repairs or alterations will be ready for retouching. If there are slight changes which you would like to make, such as hanging a medicine cupboard in another location, or putting up hooks on the inside of a closet door, or any of the little countless things that improve the convenience or appearance of a home, by all means attend to them, so that when the painters depart, all of the little odd jobs will have been completed as well as the big important ones. This is also a good time to do a little furniture renovation. Look about in the attic and see what can be salvaged, for a few fourches of the paint brush will do wonders to pieces of furniture which have been discarded because of unattractiveness.

Many Financial Institutions Aid In Home Modernizing

BOOST MOVEMENT BY FINANCIAL AID

The home owner today who is looking for financial aid when modernizing his home has at his command a varied source of institutions who stand ready to help him in carrying out his plans.

He can go to these financial institutions with a clear cut proposition and he can be assured an interesting sympathetic audience.

Modern bankers are interested in home modernization for they know that the movement is not only building up the town, but is placing their depositors' money in a safe investment.

Varied Source of Money

When the home owner is ready to seek money for carrying out his modernizing ideas, he has a varied source of institutions from which he can usually secure the cash to pay the bills.

He may have saved the money and have it standing ready in his savings or checking account. The average man, however, has to borrow the money from some financial institution.

Banks, national and state, building and loan associations, private individuals and some insurance organizations stand ready to lend their money on real estate loans of this character.

Modernization Risk Is Good

These financial organizations are willing to loan money on modernization programs because they know that the risk is good. Money invested in improving property ever dollar invested in modernizing a home adds to the value of the dwelling by just so much. Many home owners who have modernized their home state that for each dollar invested they receive two or three dollars in increased value in the house.

An investigation made by one organization showed that 32 per cent of the number questioned believed that they received nearly two dollars in increased value of the old house per dollar invested. 18 per cent of the others stated they had received double their investment. 15 per cent felt that they had received $4.00 and more for every dollar they spent in modernizing.

Financial men know that the value of the house immediately increases when money is spent on modernizing and that the loans are placed where the return is sure.

Furthermore, the opportunity to secure this money is now available through a varied list of institutions organized to aid the reserving home owner.

The man who wants to modernize, who has his home clear as far as the title is concerned, and who has a good moral record will find that the financial institutions of the locality will look with interest upon his application for a loan.

AMERICANS APPOINTED TO INTERNATIONAL BANK

Paris, Sept. 14—The bank of France announced this afternoon that Jackson E. Reynolds, of New York, and Melvin A. Traylor, of Chicago, have been accepted as the American representatives on the organization committee which will work out plans for the proposed bank of international settlements. This is the bank which will collect and distribute German reparation annuities.

HERE AGAIN MODERNIZATION PROVES ITS CASE

The lovely little cottage above with its shingled sides and white trim was modernized from the weatherbeaten old timer at the left. These illustrations prove that modernization really does all that is claimed for it.

Modern Kitchen a Convenient Workshop

Plumbers recommend sinks made of one piece including the back because of their sanitary features. Many housewives when purchasing new kitchen equipment insist that the sink will be high enough to allow them to work without bending their backs when washing the dishes. Many sinks in the older kitchens were entirely too low.

Tinted enamel may now be secured in sinks so that the color scheme may be carried out in this equipment.

The cooking stove should be handily located with reference to the sink and work table. Nowadays when color is the vogue, the stove also comes in gray colors such as red and green, thus permitting the decorative ideal to be carried out still further.

Whether the refrigerator should be within the kitchen or in an entryway depends on local conditions. It must be handily located to save steps. When ice is used, the refrigerator should be near the door to prevent tracking of dirt into the house.

Many city apartments are provided with outdoor "icing," the ice being inserted into the box through a door in the outside wall. The iceman does not enter the kitchen at all. The refrigerator is of course provided with a door matching the outside door in the wall. Electric lights should be located to give good illumination. Central lights often give shadows and one housewife when modernizing her kitchen avoided this disadvantage by insisting on several wall lights.

BRICK NOT COSTLY

A comparison of costs between face brick and frame construction disclosed very interesting facts in Denver, Colorado. Bids received on building a standard bungalow both of frame construction and of face brick backed by common brick. The bungalow cost but $112 more with the solid brick wall.

If you think talk is cheap just look at any of the recent financial reports of the telephone company.

TRIM LITTLE COTTAGE RESULT OF MODERNIZING

Even the neighbors were amazed when the builders finished their work on the clean little dwelling shown to the left. They could not realize that it was possible to make such a charming cottage from the old, worn-out house below.

To the casual passerby the modernized version of the old place is an entirely new structure, for it is up-to-date in line and execution. The shingled sides, the new window sash and trim, the enclosed porch are features of the modernized home.

Exterior Changed

When the subject of remodeling the old house came up it was immediately decided that the old porch must go. Open porches are seldom used nowadays, and the owners knew that they were getting only a few months use out of the old porch. By enclosing the porch and making a sun room out of it, they were securing an addition that could be used the year round.

Even during the hot months of the year the sun parlor is as comfortable as an open porch, for the windows can be opened wide to let in the cooling breeze. During winter months the room can be heated either by radiator or warm air duct, depending on the type of heating plant in the basement.

When adding the sun room the roof lines were changed to give a full sweeping effect. Now the roof instead of being abruptly chopped off at the cornice sweeps on to cover the sun parlor. The enclosing of the porch necessitated a new entrance and this has been made at the right side of the house. Here the roof was extended sharply down to cover the entrance. The irregularity of the roof lines adds to the picturesque appearance of the dwelling.

Windows and Trim Accentuate Architectural Lines

When the old house was originally designed the architect favored the use of small window openings. Today, however, the window openings are large and a number of sash units are combined to fill the opening. This modernized version keeps these characteristics. The double hung windows are combined to fill the openings, adding considerably to the lighting and ventilation of the interior. The window trim has been painted white to contrast with the siding of the house. The painting of window trim in contrasting colors always brings out the architectural lines and emphasizes the features of the design.

The siding has been covered by shingles, tinted a warm color to aid in bringing out the cozy, comfortable atmosphere which the design engenders. The shingles were placed directly over the old clapboarding.

Both at the front and side the old bay was torn out when the new sash and trim were installed. The ornate decorations plainly indicated the age of the house and stamped it as being in need of modernization.

Stepping Stones a Unique Touch

The use of stepping stones from the public walk to the new entrance adds a touch of the picturesque to the dwelling. Stepping stones carry out the comfortable intimate feeling and are always artistic and informal. The new entrance with its arched head and plain door, with peephole is attractive.

Batten blinds are placed at each side of the windows at the front to add to the appearance of the trim. Around to the side of a casement window with out swinging ventilator has been added to the gable. This casement not only adds an architectural touch to the side, but also aids in ventilating the attic.

COLOUR HARMONY

A "symphony in color" is a term that has been aptly used to describe the charming effects secured by builders of face brick homes. So many shades and textures have been made available that each home is given an individuality of its own through the clever and yet careful planning of the wall construction.

FAKE MARRIAGE

New Canaan, Sept. 14—An immigrant girl who thought she had been married by a priest is in Stamford hospital under treatment for shock that followed the revelation of the real situation. Joe Pap-pich, 18, is locked up here charged with forgery and is facing possible charges for having been the "bridegroom" in the wedding. At the same time police are seeking a local man who acted as the "priest."

According to police Pappich and Miss Mervine Carey, lately coming from Ireland, worked for Mrs. Mary E. Aldin, who has an estate on the Darien line. Pappich stole some blank checks from Mrs. Aldin and secured $240 by cashing two. Then he asked Miss Carey to marry him.

BAR KENNY'S BARBER FROM ENGLISH SOIL

Southampton, Eng., Sept. 14 — Louis Arico, principal figure in the $1,000 hair-cut episode engineered by William F. Kenny, millionaire American construction magnate, was refused admittance to England when he arrived here aboard the Leviathan today.

Arico, it was discovered, left New York without a passport and the uncompromising immigration officers at this port lost no time in deciding that the New York barber had no right to set foot on British soil.

There is still hope for Louis, however, as the case was immediately referred to the home office, which has power to admit Arico without the formality of a passport if it so chooses.

FACE BRICK APPEALS

Builders have found that when it comes to the resale of a house, the face brick structure makes as great an appeal to a buyer when it is old as it did when it was new. Bankers, too, have shown a preference for face brick when making loans.

Whether You Are Building A New Home Or Modernizing An Old One Let

Own A Home In Manchester, The Ideal Residential Town

Home Builders' Desires Have Revolutionized

The other day I heard a man tell on the conditions, so that sixteen-foot lumber could be used.

It is always possible to go through the plans and specifications of a house and, with the aid of the friendly architect, to trim and cut, to eliminate little items of expense here and there—less expensive wood trim and mill work, china closets, bookcases, wardrobes, less expensive painting, decorating, and finishing—without appreciably reducing the qualities of durability. It would be folly to cheapen the house in that way. But the innumerable small economies, which take the middle grade of materials and the less splendid finishes, added together, accumulate in the end an appreciable sum. Any one whose funds are limited, but who must provide a dwelling for his family, must not neglect this opportunity to minimize expenses.

There is still another class of omissions which may be added later. The electric refrigerator, the oil burner, the garbage incinerator, and all the other automatic machinery which makes housekeeping a delight may come after the house is built. Space for the extra bathroom can be provided in the plans, and it can be installed later, and likewise the porch, the open terrace, the attached garage, the sleeping porch, the fireplace. It may seem a matter of course to fit up a place in the basement for a game room, since the space is already there; but the walls can not be plastered, nor the flooring added, nor the necessary wood trim and doors put in place, without running into several hundred extra dollars. For every bit of equipment of this kind there is a substantial cost in added comfort, in increased satisfaction, in better resale values. Yet this can all be done at a later time. No one need give up these things permanently nor go without this house altogether because he cannot at first have all that he sees in his neighbor's house.

Here is one more suggestion about economical building. Very likely you can not use it, because your banker may not support it in view of its possible effect on the resale value of your house. It has to do with the elimination of the dining-room. Many families use this room not to exceed once a day. When provision is made in the house for a pleasant dining place—not over the kitchen stove, not yet under the sink, but a little alcove in a sunny corner, where there is bright morning light, the dining-room is used to its fullest extent only on rare occasions when there are guests. That is an expensive luxury. Since it has been estimated that the average cost the country over is $1500 a room, there seems to be a capital investment in the dining-room disproportionate to its usefulness.

The test of true economy is this—will it affect the durability of the house? Decide on a house of simple design, well-planned, with no more space than you need. Then go over the plans point by point, preferably with a competent local architect to help you. Cut out first the non-essentials, the little luxuries, the conveniences you can add later on. Consider the economies in materials—instead of hard wood, of ordinary window glass instead of plate glass, of the medium-grade finishes instead of more expensive ones. Prune and trim until the house comes within your budget, but remember never to lower the quality of the materials or of the workmanship at the expense of sound construction.

Good planning makes for economical building. Some money will be saved by making one chimney serve kitchen, living-room, furnace, and laundry. Every one, of course, knows the extravagance of poor plumbing arrangement. Plumbing should be stacked from floor to floor, thus saving the expense of piping across the house.

A knowledge of stock sizes of lumber makes for savings. Thus, a room sixteen feet wide means that eight-foot timbers must be used, instead of a waste of lumber and extra labor to cut the pieces to the correct length. An experienced planner would make the room fifteen feet or fifteen feet four inches depending

A COSY COTTAGE FOR TWO

By R. C. HUNTER, Architect, New York

One glance is enough to convince you that this small cottage is without a rival. Five rooms more conveniently arranged and more cleverly housed will be difficult to find.

The low sweeping roof lines add a feeling of breath to the exterior and tend to tie the house to the ground.

The sturdy stone entrance gable possesses fine English character and forms an ideal setting for the heavy oak door. The large stone and brick chimney has been nicely fitted into the composition, forming a happy union between the entrance gable and the gable end of the house. The driveway gates, painted a bright blue, are a note of interest.

As one enters thru the front door a good sized vestibule, with ample closet space, avoids all feeling of cramped quarters. From the vestibule one finds the living room, of good size and proportions. The large open fireplace flanked by a group of steel side, forms an interesting feature in this room.

The dining room is of ample size and well lighted. Both the living room and dining room enter on an open porch. A convenient kitchen with closet and rear entry complete the first floor layout.

On the second floor are two nice bedrooms, a bath and ample closet space.

The laundry and heating plant are located in the cellar.

DESPERATE CRIMINAL DISCOVERED IN JAIL

Bridgeport, Sept. 14—Glenn H. Wilhite, 47, serving a term in the county jail for breach of peace, is now being held for Mississippi authorities as a jail breaker who escaped while awaiting transportation to prison to serve a sentence of fifteen years for highway robbery.

Wilhite is known in Mississippi as "Frank Hand," a notoriously desperate criminal.

Resident here a number of years, Wilhite has a long police record for minor offenses. He went to jail on complaint of his wife. Someone in Norwalk informed the police there of Wilhite's career and they informed Mississippi authorities. Then word came back that Wilhite broke out of the Lauderdale county, Mississippi jail, just before he was to go to prison. Extradition papers are on the way here.

Wilhite is a native of Galveston, Texas.

GANGSTER IS SLAIN

New York, Sept. 14—Police today feared the war of attrition among slot machine racketeers is on in full blast. Another of the crowd, Tom Ahearn, a many-alias man of long police record, is the latest. His body was found crumpled in the back seat of an automobile early today, just a few blocks from where Jimmy Batto's body was similarly found yesterday on upper Fifth avenue.

Detectives say slot machine racketeering troubles was partly responsible for Frankie Marlow's killing some time ago. They won-

SITE, OWNER AND HIS POCKETBOOK ARE CONSIDERED

Client Should Employ an Architect With Whose Work He is in Sympathy.

BY ROGER H. BULLARD, A. I. A.

One of the most difficult problems in designing a house is to be asked by a new client to draw up plans for a site which is too remote for the architect to see. The prospective client may be able to give a fairly accurate description of the general character of the ground—the size, shape, exposure, views and surroundings of the site; but unless the architect can see the conditions for himself he cannot draw an intelligent plan or design a house with the proper feeling for its situation.

Few realize this, and even those who do are likely to overlook the fact altogether. A house which is not look as if it had been moved on to a piece of ground or could be moved away, but as if it had grown up out of it and were there to stay.

Limitations Big Factors.

Sites vary just as much as owners and their pocket-books and a properly designed house must be appropriate to the one as it is to the other two limitations. By limitations, I mean those factors which determine the character of the house to be built. Fortunately, it is seldom that a house is built without limitations, that is, a site without character, an owner without personality and a pocket-book without limitations. But it is all these factors which play an important part in the architect's mind when he begins to plan a house and the success and individuality of the result depends largely upon the material at hand when he begins.

Certain sites call for certain types of houses as indicated in the accompanying illustrations, and if an owner has a very decided idea as to what he wants he will do well to consult his architect before buying his land as well as before planning his house. There are certain practical points such as the character of the ground, drainage, water supply, etc., which can easily be overlooked by an over-enthusiastic purchaser in a country house such problems as the approach, the garden, the trees and exposures all influence the actual plan and arrangement of the rooms. This is why it is so necessary for an architect to see the site before making any mental impressions, and then if the client is wise he will give the architect a general idea of his requirements, the number of rooms and their approximate size and also some idea as to what his pocket-book will stand and then leave it to the architect to solve as many problems as he can in the preliminary sketches.

Choosing Sympathetic Architect. All owners who are about to build have acquired certain ideas as to design and arrangement and it is for the architect to assist and advise the owner how to incorporate these into a working scheme. It is the most difficult and yet the most interesting part of the proceedings for the architect to co-ordinate these ideas and to know which he should accept or reject, and to be able to justify to the owner his reasons for so doing.

An owner naturally employs an architect whose work he is in sympathy with and so avoids any radical changes in design which would be necessary if he were to select an architect with whose work he was not in sympathy.

Few clients realize what an important part they play in the development of the plans. The house can have as much individuality as the owner is willing to give to it. I do not mean the actual style of the house as much as the spirit of the home as an expression of the life, thoughts and habits of its occupant.

to 20 per cent more value than property not near a park. On the other hand, property facing ill kept, unfenced and unplanted school buildings and grounds often is depreciated in value. A clear understanding of this on the part of property owners soon would bring them to convince public authorities to keep these grounds in better condition:

"It is the function of the City Planning Commission to work out a common plan for all these developments, and then to guide that plan into permanent execution by frequent conferences with the administration boards affected. The planning commission can be of the greatest aid to the Board of Education in helping to avoid school improvements that would eventually prove undesirable or unnecessary." public park gains in a few years 10 fence. Good Buildings Deserve Good Hardware

CORBIN

Locks that guard
Knobs that beautify
Hardware that lasts
All good
ALL CORBIN

If you've ever built a home you know how much your comfort for years to come will depend on the hardware you choose today. First—the front door. Surely you want a good impression there! And absolute security as well. Corbin will see to that!

Then the many inside doors—all with locks that must function perfectly—all with knobs that can be seen. These, too, must be in good taste. And will be if they're Corbin.

Even windows require Good Hardware or they'll stick and shriek. Cupboard doors need good latches—or they'll never stay closed. And so on through the entire house—wherever there is a window or a door there should be Good Hardware—Corbin.

Which is why we so frequently say: "Remember one word—'Corbin'—and you will be able to forget hardware in your new home the day you move in.

Oldest Rhode Island Red Goes To Grave, Not Pot

"Grandma" Queen of George Miner's Flock, Achieves Much Kudos in Life and Gets a Coffin When Shows Are All Over.

"Grandma" — ten years, four months and twenty-three days of age—the oldest Rhode Island Red hen in the world and born of the Mayhood strain, finest of prize winning stock died recently of pneumonia.

Her passing was mourned by many of her friends—friends made during her appearances in poultry shows throughout New England, and especially was she mourned by her owner, George Miner of Woodland street.

"Grandma" was not an ordinary hen and for that reason her funeral was a special occasion. In a coffin lined with straw she was laid away on a hillside overlooking the chicken farm of which she was queen for so long.

Born in Hartford, April 17, 1919, "Grandma" at once began to take prizes at the various shows, a habit which grew more acute as she grew older.

When out with a flock of other chickens she always answered immediately to her name, eating out of her owner's hand. On the farm, housing 200 chickens, "Grandma" was queen of all she surveyed and always quick to fight for her rights.
