THE FIRST AUTHORIZED STORY OF THE LIFE OF THE COMMANDER OF THE ZEPPELINS

CHAPTER X

It was a great day for Friedrichshafen when the word got around in 1923 that Luftschiffbau Zeppelin was to build another airship.

Times had been hard in the village since the Bodenense and Nordstarn were taken away and the great Zeppelin factories closed for Friedrichshafen had become a Zeppelin town, and the rise and decline of Zeppelin fortunes affected all the inhabitants.

Here were located the Zeppelin shops where canvas and silk and gold beater skin were made into airship coverings and gas cells, and light-weight duralumin frames into girders.

Most of the male population of Friedrichshafen had been employed in one or another of the Zeppelin plants. In the slack post-war days Von Gemmingen, Eckener, Colman and the others had used their utmost ingenuity to give employment to as many people as possible, trying to hold together the organization.

The press that had been used to make girder parts were diverted to aluminum kitchen utensils. Maybach was building automobiles and motor boat engines, the gear plant was building gears for what customers it could find, the Potsdam hangar near Berlin was leased to a film company and here the genius of Reinhardt and others were already at work on novel scenic effects.

But the mark was still working its way downward. Industry was moving at half speed or less. There were not many people who could afford automobiles. People did not even buy new kitchen utensils until they had to.

lain he could increase the fuel efficiency of his new motors, getting better speed, and was anxious to put in reverse gears so that one or more motors might be set in reverse at the time of landing to check a too precipitated descent and so adding greater safety.

At last, in the late summer of 1924, the great ship was ready for delivery to America.

As this ship was built C. O. D., Luftschiffbau's job was not completed until he had turned the ship over to the American navy at Lakehurst.

"Who was going to fly the ship over," asked Harry Vissering, American representative of the company, curiously during the summer.

"I will fly it over myself," said Eckener simply.

"I will take Lehmann, Flemming and Von Schiller as my chief officers."

Vissering looked his astonishment. Anyone out of the three officers was fully competent to take command. Each indeed had flown airships over thousands of miles. Lehmann, the senior pilot, had piloted close to a thousand flights. And yet the doctor was to fly himself and to take his three best pilots with him.

The American ventured a protest. "It is placing all your eggs in one basket," he said. "If misfortune befalls the ship on the way across who would carry on the work? The prudent thing would be to send one of the other pilots over with the ship, to hold something in reserve."

Dr. Eckener arose from his great chair, stared down across the desk at the American.

"I have full confidence in my ship," he said. "We have put the best of our engineering experience into it. No one may say that we ourselves of all people have lack of confidence in our vessel. I shall take the ship across myself."

On the morning of Oct. 12, 400 men walked the new ship out of the hangar for final weigh-off on the field. The severe test flights over Germany and up into Sweden satisfied Dr. Eckener that Arnstein's calculations as to stresses, lift and pressure had been correct, that Duerr's workmanship had been sturdy and dependable, that the new Maybach motors could be relied on to carry the ship safely on its long trip across the Atlantic.

Four American officers, Captain George W. Steele, Commander M. E. Krause, Commander J. H. Kline, Jr., and Major Frank M. Kennedy, were the only passengers.

As Steele and later Kline were to command the ship once it passed into American hands the flight would be good training for them.

part of the ship. Maybach was commanded a final appraisal of the ship's equilibrium, podded in satisfaction, called, "Hoch, up ship."

The motors idling till now in low murmur, surged into a sudden roar. The ship moved forward, heading into the wind, swung out over Zeppelin village, out over the lake, circled back over the city, then set its rudders in a westward course.

Church bells set up the final greeting from earth, "Aufweidesehn. Good Luck."

The flight to America was under way.

The dream of the old Count was at last to be realized.

The big ship crossed the Atlantic and was landed at Lakehurst on Oct. 15, having traveled 5060 miles in 81 hours.

Shortly after its delivery to the American navy it was christened the Los Angeles and is still the navy's only big dirigible.

Theaters

PARSONS' "Diamond Lil"

Mae West, in the dual role of star and playwright in "Diamond Lil," again lives up to the reputation that she has established of being one of America's foremost actresses. As it will be revealed at Parsons' theater for three days only beginning Thursday, October 3rd, with the usual matinee performance on Saturday, this vehicle is charged with dramatic dynamite and aimed directly at that entertainment target which she set with her previous production, "Sex," the one which she was finally compelled by the law to close and which also scored a financial bullseye for her.

As a contribution to present-day drama, "Diamond Lil," probably means nothing, but a decidedly amusing and unusually interesting picture of that period placed some thirty years ago—when the Bowery of New York was in the heyday of its glory—when everything, as the saying goes, was "wide open."

The third act provides a really good and fairly accurate picture of what night life was like before the days of cabarets and cover charges. It might be stated that there are several excellent characterizations of the old time Bowery types in the sights of old New York in the gaslight era and also to those who fail to number them among their fond memories, "Diamond Lil," as portrayed by Mae West, will afford much amusement.

With the seventh edition of the Earl Carroll Vanities with a company of a hundred people opens at the Parsons' theater the playgoers of Hartford will see the best "Vanities" of the series for it is in this edition that W. C. Fields is starred. In order to obtain the services of Mr. Fields, Mr. Carroll had to break tradition and for the first time a player is billed over the famous trademark—Vanities.

ANNOUNCE TRAINING COURSE ABOUT HEALTH

Hartford, Sept. 28—Announcement was made today by the State Tuberculosis Commission at the Capitol of an intensive two weeks' course on the Principles and Problems of the Public Health movement which will be conducted next March by Columbia University Extension in co-operation with the De Lamar Institute of Public Health and the National Health Council.

There is probably more of Jolson in "Say It With Songs" than in either of his other talkies. He sings and talks as never before in a drama that is replete with human love and understanding.

WAPPING

Dr. Minor C. Baldwin, whose organ recitals are well known in the south and west was a recent visitor at his cousins, Mrs. Everett A. Buckland.

The members of the Methodist church here will hold a meeting at the Methodist Church on next Monday evening at eight o'clock, for the election of three trustees.

Friday evening, October 4th, the Burrill Grange Dramatic Club will present a three-act drama under the auspices of the Wapping Grange, entitled "Nancy Anna Brown's Folks." This play comes very highly recommended and will take about two hours to give it with fourteen characters taking part.

Rev. Elmer J. Cook, who is taking a Ph. D. degree at the Hartford Theological Seminary will preach at the First Congregational Church of South Windsor next Sunday morning. Services will begin at 10:40.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Burnham and Mr. and Mrs. Erastus D. Burnham left last week Friday by automobile for Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Olive A. Jones has returned to her home in South Windsor from spending the summer in Eastport, Maine.

The possibilities of the use of face brick for floors, walls, steps, gate posts, seats and other places about the house and garden are unlimited. For outside work, face brick is permanent and have beautiful color which never fades. The brick used may be the same color and texture as those of the house, thus linking house and garden into a harmonious whole.

Horrors Of Pogroms By An Eyewitness

Herman S. Bergen, of North End, Tells Graphic Story of How He Fleed for Years Before Men Bent on Killing All the Jews in Russia—A Tale of Unbelievable Suffering.

THESE is no need of attempting to embellish this story. No fancy words to bring out the stark horror of its details. No imagination needed to visualize the days and nights spent in cellars and on roofs and in woods, for not days nor weeks nor months—but years, by brigands prompted only by blood lust. Ragged as to clothing. Feet wrapped in bags leaving a bloody trail over snow covered roads. Nothing to eat for days at a time. Always fleeing, fleeing. They knew not where to go. One thought carried them on. Get out of Russia! Get out of Russia! That ding donged through their weary brain, day and night.

YOUTHFUL IN YEARS BUT AGED BY SORROW

OVER at the north end at Main and Hilliard streets, was found this week, a man youthful in years but aged by sorrow. He tells his story simply. At times a look of horror veils his eyes. He shakes his head to drive away the thoughts of those days of terror. He was interviewed on two successive days and confessed on the second day that he had not been able to sleep all night because of the thoughts the telling of the story, brought to his mind.

"I am 23 years of age he says but I look older. You would too if you went through what I did in my boyhood days.

Beautiful Beginning

"My story starts off beautifully. Everything looked so bright for our little family. I was born in Zelotow. I came from a Jewish family. Jews and Gentiles lived in perfect harmony in our little village which had about 500 inhabitants. My father was a miller and as things looked prosperous he decided to go to America and in a little while he would send for us. Our family consisted of two sisters, and a brother. The brother was in Rumania.

Lose Their Farm

"When my father started for America we owned our little cottage and a farm. We got that land through a grant from the government because one of our forefathers had performed a heroic deed and was thus rewarded. But when war was declared we had to give up the land. No hope from America. Cut off from the world, we began to be wanderers on the face of the earth.

REVOLUTION FREES SIBERIAN PRISONERS

THE little family did the best it could to keep body and soul together. Herman worked at odd jobs to get provisions for his mother and sisters. They were poverty stricken, of course but still they hoped that the war would not last long and then they could again get in touch with the father in America or the brother in Rumania. But the war dragged on and things grew worse instead of better.

Start Long Trek

"Packing up what little trinkets we had, we started on our long trek southward. For days we traveled, always meeting other bands of Jews who were also fleeing before the menace from the north. My mother had a few silver spoons. I had a glass cutter. In money we had three rubles, an insignificant sum. I really figure out that in United States money it is so small for 50 rubles made five cents.

Eyewitness Describes Dreaded 'Pogrom', That Nightmare of the Russian Jew.

ONE often reads in the newspapers about a "pogrom." Few know what the word means and many think it a corruption of the word "program." It is in fact a Russian word meaning "devastation." It means generally an organized massacre of Jews and so it is understood today.

Herman S. Bergen, who tells of many of these massacres on this page today, gives a vivid description of the first one that came under his eyes.

"I was 14 years old at the time. With other Jewish boys I was in the synagogue. It was a religious holy day, one of the happiest of the Hebrew calendar. It was the day on which God gave the Ten Commandments to Moses.

"Everything was quiet as the rabbi stood before us reading from the Torah. Suddenly a boy came running into the synagogue.

"Soldiers with swords are riding into town!" he cried. "We ran outside and sure enough we saw the soldiers. When they saw the rabbi they came up to him and told him they were scouts for a notorious brigand who was coming to burn down the village. They said that if the villagers could get together 50,000 rubles, 500 sheepskin coats and 200 pairs of boots, the village would be spared.

While the scouts were speaking, a woman appeared leading 300 soldiers. She was the sweetheart of the notorious brigand the mere mention of whose name made every Jew in Russia tremble. This woman was even more bloodthirsty than the leader himself. I dare not mention their names even now.

"The woman wore a yellow shirt, rode astride a big black horse and a big revolver was strapped around her waist.

"Our village was on a little island. One had to cross a bridge to reach it. As the brigands approached they were met by the Jewish populace headed by the rabbi. The rabbi carried a copy of the Talmud and the populace carried flags and a table on which had been placed bread and salt, an ancient custom of welcoming guests. The woman pulled up her horse as the procession reached her. The rabbi asked God's blessing on her and her followers and pleaded that there be no blood shed. She promised and the soldiers came into town.

"But while the leaders feasted, the soldiers ran wild through the streets of the little village, killing men, women and children right and left. A poor Jewish girl, with her throat cut was being carried on a stretcher past the house where the woman leader had been quartered. When she saw this through the window she blew a bugle and the soldiers came running to her. She upbraided them for disobeying her orders and told them to camp outside of the town.

"They did so, but before they left there were thirteen dead bodies lying in the streets of our little village."

HID IN CELLARS FOR MONTHS AT TIME

WHEN followed months of wandering from town to town. Wherever a synagogue was located the refugees hid in the cellars. The brigands lived sometimes two months at a time in cellars, fearful every moment their hiding places would be discovered. Often they would see glares in the sky and they knew it was just another village being burned. That sight became common after a while. Once they saw a mother and her child killed by one bullet. The bullet crashed through the brain of the child and through the mother's heart.

Continues His Story

Herman again takes up the tale. "We had now proceeded so far to the south that we met less and less brigands and our hopes rose. The Bolsheviks were in power now and things were settling down. I became a sort of guide for men who drove wagons of provisions to various central stations to feed the inhabitants, for everybody seemed now on the verge of starvation.

"One night I was walking ahead of the teams. I was the only one who had a passport and on that passport all our lives depended. I had an overcoat five times too big for me. It was tied around my small body with a piece of rope. There was an inside pocket to the coat and into this I thought I had placed the passport. Five miles on the way I happened to put my hand in my pocket and found the passport gone. The party gathered about me, trembling. What could we do? We

NASH INTRODUCES NEW LINE OF CARS

No Details Yet Available; Official Statement to Come Out October 6.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 28.—Wide-spread and persistent rumor that the Nash Motors Company is preparing to introduce an entirely new and revolutionary line of the famous "400" series Nash cars, which have gone down in history as one of the American industry's signal successes, were confirmed here today by President C. W. Nash.

Company officials, who for weeks past have been intensely engaged in the carefully guarded activities at the great Nash plants in Kenosha, Milwaukee, and Racine, have completed final inspections of the new cars, it was learned this morning. Intimated that they will contribute a completely new influence to the fine motor car field and will add something definitely finer to the efficiency and enjoyment of motoring.

While no details concerning the many mechanical advancements and new driving features of the forthcoming cars were revealed, it was coming cars were revealed, it was intimated that they will contribute a completely new influence to the fine motor car field and will add something definitely finer to the efficiency and enjoyment of motoring.

Public announcement and display of the new Nash cars will take place October 6, Mr. Nash declared today. At that time Nash dealers and distributors in all parts of the country will raise their show room curtains on the glittering array of brand new and epic making cars, and the entire Nash merchandising organization will stand by to demonstrate their mechanical attainments and engineering specialties. It is expected that public interest in the new Nash creation, whetted for weeks by the August announcement that new Nash models were soon to be introduced and by the close attention which motor wise people have always followed the advanced steps in Nash development, will bring about attendance records eclipsing even the high tide of a year ago when the "400" series made its initial bow to America.

"It has always been our ambition to build each new series of Nash cars so well that anyone attempting to make comparison would find them to be finer, more desirable and a significant addition to the world's transportation equipment," Mr. Nash said in affirming the date. "A year ago we announced the Nash '400' with greatly advanced engineering features which we considered an important addition to the world's transportation equipment."

My Favorite Bible Passage

A. A. Stage
Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.—Ecclesiastes 9:10.

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.—Matthew 7:12.

Peace I leave with you. My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.—John 14:27.

COMMENT.
"These three verses have come most often into my mind and have influenced my life. I think, more than any other single ones. The first I have used to stimulate my ambition and to make myself dependable and honest; the second to develop fair and honest treatment of others; the third to help me to be courageous and unafraid. The prayer upon thousands of times, is 'to be good and to do good and to follow the Master.'"

Outperforming all other low-priced sixes at lower cost than ever

During 1928, a large public utilities corporation operated 996 automobiles of 33 different makes. And according to its own accurately recorded cost figures, its Pontiac cost one cent less per mile to operate than any other low-priced six in the field at that time. Yet even that great record of economy is being surpassed by the Pontiac Big Six because of a number of refinements and advancements which this latest Pontiac includes.

WHERE TO USE VARNISH

BY HELEN B. AMES.

When you purchase a can of varnish for floor use, do you state the purpose for which it is intended, or simply ask the dealer for varnish? It pays to be specific in your wants, for a surface that receives hard wear needs a tougher and more elastic grade of varnish than baseboards, window casings and other woodwork that is seldom subjected to rough treatment.

But while varnish should be carefully chosen to increase the durability of floors and wood trim, it is something more than a useful product. On such fine woods as oak, chestnut and mahogany, a clear varnish will heighten the color and bring out the pattern of the grain, and a final coat of varnish will give added luster to painted or stained finishes. Instead of applying stain and then varnish, a stain-in-varnish ("color varnish") is sometimes used. This may be applied in one operation.

The choice of the varnish will depend, too, on whether you want a glossy or a flat finish. Most varnishes dry with a high gloss, but if you prefer a dull finish, the varnish may be rubbed with powdered pumice and oil, or a special flat-drying varnish will answer the purpose.

The number of coats is regulated by the type of finish desired. When flat varnish is applied over flat paint, one or two coats will be sufficient. A rubbed finish, however, requires at least three coats and four are even better. For a natural finish or over a stain, two or three coats of varnish are necessary for new wood, but one or two will do for refinishing. Plenty of time should be allowed for drying between coats. Forty-eight to seventy-two hours is the usual requirement, but the quick-drying varnishes are ready for the next coat in from four to six hours.

ROCKVILLE

Filtration Plant Put in Action.

The new reconstructed filtration plant was put into action yesterday afternoon. State officials and representatives of the commissions having jurisdiction over river cleanliness and many others saw the new sewage treatment plant put into use.

The work of the Manchester Construction company of South Manchester, who were the general contractors for the construction, has been given rigid tests and inspections by the consulting engineers of Newark, N. J. The old plant was built over twenty-five years ago and the methods of sewerage having changed so in that time, the old plant was unable to keep the Hockanum river as clean as it would be. The present reconstruction completes the first stage of improvement and in later years other improvements may be added to the present work for more complete treatment to any desired degree of purification.

The new plant has a power driven drum screen which is six feet in diameter and four feet wide, the outside of which is perforated with very fine slots through which liquids pass freely but which reject all solid particles larger than ordinary coarse sand. For the removal of the finer particles the flow is kept in a practically quiescent condition for more than an hour while the finer matter settles and is collected mechanically for the process called digestion. In a separate set of covered tanks these fine particles mixed with water are kept for a period of from two to six weeks and heated so that they decompose into gases. The gases are not allowed to escape into the air but are collected under the covers and are burned to provide the heat for the process. The effect is to greatly reduce the amount of solids which must be handled. The residue of the digester process, a harmless material like thick loam, is then dried and disposed of. This plant is one of the first in the state of Connecticut to utilize the modern principle of separate sludge digestion described. The entire work was carried out at a construction cost of approximately $60,000.

To Head Republican Committee.

Attorney John B. Thomas, clerk and treasurer of the town of Vernon, and for the past fifteen years secretary of the republican town committee, was promoted to the chairmanship at the meeting of the committee recently. He succeeded Chairman Lebeus F. Bissell who has resigned his duties. The effort in which Mr. Thomas has served as secretary was brought out in the meeting by Roger J. Murphy, acting chairman.

On The Last Lap Now On Exhibition Home

Heating plant at Elizabeth Park Exhibition home is now in the last lap and as they say "it won't be long now." The painters are busy finishing the interior woodwork and papering will be started next week.

Sidewalks have been extended up Henry street to the Exhibition Home and Henry street has been repaved as far as Bowers street.

This week's picture gives you a good idea of the heating plant in the Exhibition Home. Steam heat will be used to heat the house. The boiler is made by one of the nationally known companies and a size has been selected that will handle the job easily without forcing the fire in cold weather.

Too often the boiler installation in many new homes is just the reverse of the situation—too small for the job. The little saving effected between a small boiler and one large enough to do the work is eaten up in extra fuel used in cold weather for when you are forced to drive a small boiler to handle a large load it takes coal, and plenty of it.

BUILDING NOTES

The Manchester Construction Co. is making rapid progress on the Center church job. The basement walls have been poured and tally columns are being set preparatory to getting the first floor in and a start on the walls. Brick for the walls is arriving and mason work will be started very soon.

Gustave Schrieber & Sons, general contractors and Arvid Seaburg, mason contractor are cooperating in the construction of what will probably be Manchester's finest filling station, located on Main street opposite Haynes street. It is of brick construction with fancy wood trim. A feature of the structure will be the heavy ornamental cornice. A large covered section is provided in front of the station where cars may stop out of the weather.

The new houses being built in Clearview, the new development of Arthur A. Knoha and the Manchester Construction Co., are progressing and one is nearing completion. This tract has attracted much attention among Manchester home-seekers because of its slightly location.

COLORFUL RUGS AID DECORATIVE DESIGN

Color is the keynote of home decorating. Through its use the room is being transformed from a drab, dreary place into lively, charming, distinctive living rooms. The old air of formality and somberness is giving way to a new spirit of cheerfulness and friendliness. Now each room expresses the individuality of its owner plus a joyous and sympathetic appreciation of color and color harmony. Floor coverings add considerably to the effect. Rugs of oriental design create a warmth that reflects itself throughout the room.

They strike the keynote that sets the interior decorative design. The most prized floor coverings are the colorful rugs from the orient. Whether Chinese or Persian, the acquisition of one rug is generally followed by the purchase of others. Rug collecting is the pleasure of many home owners who show with pride the artistic weaving and lasting colors that are found only in these types of rugs. Use the rug as the starting point in your interior decorations. Let the furniture upholstery reflect the tints that are chief in the rugs.

Utility And Beauty Essential To Give Character To Towns

By GEORGE B. FORD

"The City beautiful" is largely a matter of harmony and appropriateness, of fitness of form to function, all of which leads to individuality or personality. A town has personality according to its function and site. As a fact, the "typical American city" is utterly lacking in personality.

It is typical only in so far as it is rubber stamped—just another standardized model struck from the same old die. By contrast, old Charleston; S. C.; Vieux Carre, in New Orleans; St. Augustine, Fla., or Beacon Hill, in Boston, do have a most refreshing personality, because they express with all spontaneity the feeling and purpose of their time and site. Every community has some individuality of its own, but we can only find it to express it.

In the last analysis the attractive city is a matter of design—design in form, in color, in texture, full of variety and contrast, and yet harmonious; where buildings, public and private, group into interesting masses and silhouettes. The color and texture should be placed so as to actually form good compositions, such as you would expect in a good painting or in a good Oriental rug. The views which yet get throughout the city or town should be an ordered arrangement.

It is not inconceivable that congestion piled on congestion, that the centers of some of our cities have attained is actually precluding the possibility of good civic design.

Perhaps we can only attain permanent civic beauty by ruthless decentralization of our cities, saying that if they will grow they must grow centrifugally by the creation of new isolated satellite communities far enough from the center so that they can always avoid the untoward congestion of the metropolitan hub.

However that may be, we will only attain "the city beautiful" as well as the city practical by establishing and maintaining a policy so logical and so appropriate that continuity is inevitable.

We are at the beginning of a new era in the planning of our American towns. The pioneer period gave way to a great period of material expansion, where efficiency and service were the watchwords. Today, with our rapidly increasing wealth and leisure, we are insisting more and more on the amenities of life.

History says that that means beauty. The new period we are now entering is one where utility and beauty will share alike. Neither will satisfy without the other. Together they will make for American towns a delightful and inspiration to all.

28 PER CENT OF DOLLAR IS SPENT FOR FOOD

According to statistics taken recently in eleven American cities, the largest part of the average dollar is spent for food.

The survey showed that when the dollar was divided, 28.51 cents were spent for this important item. Next in importance came clothing, which took up 24.29 cents of the dollar. Women, the report shows, are the chief cause of the high clothing bill, as 19.52 cents of the clothing item goes for feminine apparel. Next to food and clothing, the American public's demand for automobiles takes 12.1 cents.

"These figures show that clothing and automobiles take large shares of our dollar, but it is interesting to note that the greatest part of it is absorbed by food-stuff," stated Mr. Strickland of M. H. Strickland, local distributors of General Electric Refrigerators.

"It seems that the biggest consideration is given what we eat and we seem to eat quite an amount. The percentage spent would make the rest of the world believe we are a nation of heavy eaters. This may be so. But much of the food bought is wasted in any number of ways. One of the largest items is spoilage. Lack of refrigeration or improper refrigeration is responsible for a large amount of food going to waste. Food can be purchased more economically in large quantities. The saving thus made, attracts the housewife, but if this food is spoiled through lack of proper refrigeration, the economy is lost.

It has been estimated that about 10 per cent of the yearly food expenditure is wasted either because of inefficient refrigeration or no refrigeration at all times."

Mr. Dempsey pointed out that this percentage of waste can be reduced by installing modern electric refrigeration which keeps perishable foods and milk at a safe temperature, at all times.

"In the case of milk, especially," Mr. Dempsey said, "the government has experimented and passed on to the public, reports showing the proper temperature at which it should be kept. After exhaustive tests, the government found that the temperature should never be above 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

"I actually believe," continued Mr. Dempsey, "that the percentage of food waste would be greater if the housewife knew that the appearance of food is deceitful. It is a known fact that certain meats and foods can appear to be tasty and appetizing, yet be unfit for consumption.

"Retailers of foodstuffs are constantly checked up by city health authorities to make sure that the merchandise offered to the public is in the best of condition. To be consistent then, every home in the country should have a good electric refrigerator in which to store their purchases until used, or the care and precaution taken by the merchant is wasted."

Many old houses have sturdy frames, despite the shabby and old appearance of their exterior. Given a veneer of face brick, these houses will put on an appearance of new and will give service that compares well with an entirely new home, for the brick exterior provides protection against the elements and takes on added beauty with the years.

If you didn't send your children through college, you wouldn't have anybody around to correct your grammar.

NOTHING MORE COULD BE DESIRED

This six-room English cottage has been designed to comfortably meet the demands of the average small conveniently housed.

The exterior presents an exceptionally quiet and dignified appearance which qualities are often lacking in a small house. The stone trimmed entrance door, the unusual brick arch over the garden gate, and the bit of well placed timbering in the gable, all play their part in making a harmonious composition.

The roof is covered with shingles in variegated shades of red, while the timbering and siding are stained a weathered gray. The stucco is white with a texture finish.

The plans show a good arrangement of the rooms. The Living Room has three exposures with a glazed door at the rear leading to a covered porch which may be easily reached, by the car in rainy weather. The open fireplace is directly opposite from the entrance to the Living Room and may be seen from the Dining Room.

On the second floor are three bedrooms and a bath. There is a good size attic with a stairway leading to it.

A cellar extends under the entire house. This house contains 21,980 cubic feet and the approximate cost of construction would be $9,900.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-190.

ALL CORBIN

If you've ever built a home you know how much your comfort for years to come will depend on the hardware you choose today. First—the front door. Surely you want a good impression there! And absolute security as well. Corbin will see to that!

Then the many inside doors—all with locks that must function perfectly—all with knobs that can be seen. These, too, must be in good taste. And will be if they're Corbin.

Even windows require Good Hardware or they'll stick and shriek. Cupboard doors need good latches—or they'll never stay closed. And so on through the entire house—wherever there is a window or a door there should be Good Hardware—Corbin.

Which is why we so frequently say: "Remember one word—'Corbin'—and you will be able to forget hardware in your new home the day you move in."

SOME FARM PROBLEMS

An analysis of a recent survey of a group of electrified farms shows that

- Two-thirds of them are equipped with washing machines.
- Five per cent have electric refrigerators—the same ratio as urban homes.
- Ten per cent have electric ranges.
- Forty-two per cent have vacuum cleaners.

The farmer does not have to be taught the value of electrical energy applied to his farm work. It is interesting to note that he is just as quick to apply it to the work in his home.

Modernization May Be Started At Any Time

MODERNIZING NOT CONFINED TO TIME OF YEAR

The principles of the home modernizing movement are applicable to any out of date house, no matter what may be the time of the year. Modernization is possible during any season.

Many home owners who hesitate to improve their homes are laboring under the impression that season has something to do with the movement. Under certain conditions the time of the year enters into the calculations of the builders, but as a movement there is neither winter or summer. You can start to modernize at any time.

What's Wrong With the Old House?
One of the first steps in modernizing is to discover what is wrong with the home. Every house that was built five years or more is behind the times in some respect. Something needs to be replaced or some new improvement has been presented to the public that will add to the comfort and convenience of the household.

And as for the old house that was built back in the days of the World's Fair, when a horseless carriage was a real sight, a great many improvements may be made. Usually the lines of the house are out of date. Modern architecture has developed a new design with a distinct feeling at considerable variance with the oldtimers. Gingerbread trimming and obsolete ornamentation is distinctly out. Modern homes of good taste have simple lines, they have comfort and beauty. Often the older houses had neither.

If your house is one of those of the nineties, you will want to remodel the exterior. You can take away its bolt, upright lines by some simple device, as adding a sun parlor with a roof that sweeps out from the original roofing. The gingerbread ornaments may be removed and plain trim substituted.

The high, narrow windows are eliminated in favor of window units grouped two or three to an opening, as this practice gives more daylighting to the interior and also aids the ventilation.

The window trim in use nowadays is simple. It is often painted a contrasting color to the main body of the dwelling, for this brings out the architectural lines of the structure.

Before you start to remodel take a number of kodak pictures of the house as it originally stands. Study these views to see what improvements you can make. Consult also with the local dealers and contractors. They have had experience in remodeling and know what to do to improve the old lines.

Modernize the Interior
Your remodeling plans may call for changes in the interior arrangement. Now is the time to study the room layouts to see if shifting a wall or partition will add to the convenience of the dwelling.

Often another closet may be added to the interior. Closets are much in demand by the average housewife, and somehow or other there are never too many of them. More than one house has been rented because it had plenty of closet room.

Home Accessories Add to Comfort
The broad statement that no home is complete as far as accessories is concerned will doubtless apply to your dwelling. As you go over your modernizing plans list down the number of accessories that would be an aid in making the home a better place to live in. You will find the number imposing.

Chief among these are electrical outlets. The average home can always use another outlet, for several brige lamps are being used in many rooms. Every clothes closet needs a light.

Your heating plant may not be doing its full duty. This may be due to the heater or to the construction of the house. Insulating may be lacking, or your windows may be warped and shrunken. Since fuel bills depend on these factors, while modernizing look into this condition.

Place hardwood floors on each room of the house. This is a service. The cost is not excessive, and the convenience far offsets the additional expense. Concrete the basement floor if it has not already been done. Landscape the surrounding lot for this simple improvement often adds considerably to the sales value of the property.

Start Now
Your plans can be started at any time. It isn't necessary to wait for a certain month of season to start to plan. A many of the improvements can be worked out at any time during the year.

A Des Moines, Iowa, builder erected two small houses, identical in every respect except that one was frame and the other face brick construction. Final costs showed that the face brick cost but $84.80 more than the frame house. Total costs for the houses were $2,901.30 for the face brick and $2,816.50 for the frame.

Home of Horse-and-Buggy Days Now Modernized

Basement Comes Into Its Own As Automatic Heat Gives New Room Below Stairs For Family

By RICHARD WALSH

The stage for the basement's debut. The question no longer is "Can we use the basement?" but "How? and for whom?" Should it be a playroom, a workroom, a gymnasium, a room for indoor sports, a place to dance, a solution to the servant problem by way of its conversion into a sumptuous servants' suite? The Smiths happened to decide on a children's playroom, but any of a dozen other uses had suggested themselves as equally sensible.

Ideal Playroom for Children
In these days when most houses are built with attics too small for anything besides one maid's room and a little storage space, parents are hard put to it to find any playroom for the children except in one of their own bedrooms. What difficulties that entails for mother in straightening up and cleaning, only she knows. But with automatic heat the problem is solved. Line the ceiling with plaster-board, and whitewash the walls. Then paint the floor a bright nursery color, such as green or blue, or lay equally cheerful linoleum, and hang the walls with entertaining pictures and light tapestries. A little bookcase in one corner for Mother Goose and her descendants will perhaps get some attention from the children when the energy of the morning has been expended. A couch for the reader, and a couple of small but comfortable chairs ought to be enough furniture. More would get in the way. For now, where the coal bin and the ash cans used to be, Junior, the speed demon, can shoot in his automobile, stopping at any moment to eradicate himself from under the water heater, and parking behind the inconspicuous furnace in the corner.

Whole Family May Use It
John, slightly older but none too old, having graduated from the invention of the wheel to the age of electricity, can run his electric trains to his heart's content, and can pattern out any number of local, express and freight systems. The baby can enjoy himself in the sand-box. And promptly at 5 o'clock Betty, emerging from her doll house, will entertain the whole litter at a play tea table.

But children are not the only members of the family who will appreciate the addition to their home of a personal playroom in the basement; for there the whole family may gather nightly to test their skill at any of a dozen games that may be installed in a comparatively small space. If the laundry, the furnace and the hot water heater are ranged along the same wall, it will be simple to set up a bowling alley along the other.

Even a half century ago the Uly-

HOUSE SEVERAL DECADES OLD NOW UP-TO-DATE

Today the old homestead has been modernized. It is now one of the up-to-date homes of the country-side. The good substantial old lines have been slightly changed, a side porch of Colonial motif has been added, and a wide front porch now graces one end of the main structure.

New windows supersede the old time narrow sash. The upstairs windows on the sun side of the house are equipped with shutters which may be closed on hot summer days.

When the new porch had been placed on the end of the house a pair of French doors with many small lights were installed. These lead to a modernized living room.

Greatest Change Inside
Perhaps the greatest change has staken place within the old homestead. Like most old time houses the accessories were out-of-date and decidedly obsolete. A modern farm lighting system now provides electric lights throughout the interior. The family can have all of the comforts of the minute as expressed electrically. Floor lamps, electric washing machines, vacuum cleaners, toasters and percolators are in everyday use.

The installation of a modern septic-tank down the hill enables a modern bathroom to be installed. Here are found running water and a delightful shower so that the men folk can cleanse themselves after a hard day in the fields.

Not only in town, but also in the country are many old homesteads that need modernizing.

Under the laws of Kansas and Vermont, if strictly enforced, a person who fought in the Confederate army would be prohibited from voting.

NEA FICTION
©1929 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

By Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

Brent excused himself to Bob with the plea that he wanted to talk to Mr. Cunningham. Bob was glad to see him go.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian that he promised to reveal her parentage and she is amazed when he tells her she is heiress of a millionaire, CYRIL K. CUNNINGHAM, and says the time has come to take her to him.

Now go on with the story
CHAPTER XXII
With Eva within hearing distance, Brent was compelled to veto Helen's suggestion of an early morning drive.

Helen was politely detached and Bob was restrained in his manner. And there was plainly no wish on his part to tarry under the Cunningham roof.

Brent felt certain of Helen at that moment. It remained now for him only to play his cards with skill. Mr. Cunningham was falling fast, no one could reasonably give him very much time to live.

If they could take Len's car, she thought, and drive away—nowhere, everywhere, let their journey end where it may— "Dreaming?" Brent said, taking her hand.

you have done everything you promised my father you would do for me—you are free now.

"I know that it is aching," Helen answered. "My dear, he breathed, "I have your dear, you are no sweet and beautiful. Many men will love you. You know nothing of life. I must not take advantage of you."

For weeks after that night she lived in a world apart from that in which she moved as Helen Nellin.

"I'm worried about Helen," she explained. "She's been out on the lake with Miss Ennis much longer than she said she would be gone. I was just about to send Mark to see if anything has gone wrong."

He greeted Brent cordially enough and then revealed the cause of his agitation.

Helen was standing face to face with Bob Ennis, her hands in his in a grasp that filled Brent with cold anger.

that she was going to fling herself into his arms. He looked past her at Helen and Bob.

"What has happened?" he demanded, noticing in a flash that the clothing of all three was dripping wet.

"Oh, I forgot how long I've been away from him," she confessed. "Can you can let you have some clothes?" She paused and turned to Bob, adding: "But I don't know what you will do."

He greeted Brent cordially enough and then revealed the cause of his agitation.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service Inc.

If we wish our children to avoid the unhappy emotions such as jealousy, anger, and fear, a word applied to early training. A word covers it—unselfishness. Selfishness or self-love begets sensitiveness, and from that comes every sort of trouble.

Children naturally must be taught unselfishness at home where their personal interests are strongest. Their behavior outside will reflect absolutely what they learn at home.

One child specialist whose word merit has been given so far as to say, "If it so happens that there are no other children in the home, every effort should be made to bring a child into association with children outside."

A Lesson in Games
They should also be taught to play games willingly in which they do not excel themselves. A boy may be a fast runner and a girl may be a fast swimmer.

MAN WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE MUST FOLLOW STRICT ROUTINE
BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and Hygiene, Health Magazine.

In his consideration of high blood pressure before the meeting of the American Medical Association this year, Dr. Arthur S. Granger stated his conviction that the heredity of the patient and the over-irritability of the nervous system were responsible for the high blood pressure in the majority of the cases in which some definite change in the body could not be found.

The chief problem which confronts the physician in handling a person with essential hypertension is to change his nervous temperament, to make him stop worrying and to calm him down.

THIS AND THAT IN FEMINE LORE

Mrs. Sadie Robinson, whose Lily Beauty Shop is upstairs in the House & Hale building, strives to keep it on a par with the best shops in our largest cities, and its equipment right up to the minute.

The new, tight turbans with no front brim whatsoever can be worn by those possessing a fresh, youthful face, but we still prefer some kind of brim on most women.

The forthcoming exposition of Women's Arts and Industries in New York next month will be virtually a complete picture of the art achievements of this annual affair started 8 years ago with a handful of exhibitors and now it has become a national 100 percent feminine exposition.

SENSE and NONSENSE

"EASY TERMS"
 Europeans visiting this country often express astonishment at the American practice of buying homes, automobiles, clothing, house furnishings, etc on the installment plan. This "astonishment" is a little inconsistent when we consider their methods of repaying U. S. Loans. However, this is beside the question. We came across an article the other day concerning an "easy-terms" gentleman and his diary which we believe well worth repeating here:

"January 4. Bought an automobile today. Very easy terms. Very fine car, with cigar lighter on dash. Ought to finish payments on this in eighteen months."
 "February 4. Paid installments due on car. Bought a radio set on easy terms. Fine set, and payments will be small and monthly."
 "March 7. A little late with payment on the car this month, and will have to let the radio payment go over till April, as I bought a set of books and paid $11 down. Very fine books. Everybody should have this set of books."
 "April 15. Borrowed $50 from the boss to meet payment on car. The radio man came to take away the set, but we put out the lights and weren't at home. The chump should be around all evening, so I couldn't see to read the books."
 "June 1. Borrowed $100. from Uncle George to pay the $50 borrowed from the boss, and also to meet payments on the car. Got behind a little on the book payments, because I bought a piece of land in a new real estate development. This land ought to jump in value. Paid $50 down."
 "August 15. Somehow I don't miss the radio set much. And you can get plenty of books from the public library. The thing that hurts is that Uncle George should be so mean. Of course I told him I'd pay back the $100 on August 1st; but you can't do the impossible, can you? Trying to arrange a character loan from the bank. If I can borrow from the bank, I can get square again and everything will go fine."
 "August 16. Bank says I have no character. What a bunch of crooks!"
 "September 30. The garage man is holding the car for that labor bill. What right have they to hold the car? It doesn't belong to me."
 "October 1st. It wasn't any use. I had to let the car go. Anyway, I'd rather have the piece of land. They have given me a month's grace on that. Real estate people have more heart, after all."

 "November 15. Well, they can have their old land. Good riddance. If I knew where to get $30 to meet the payment on the piano, I'd be a right. Bought a new automobile today, on the "pay out of income" basis."
 "November 16. Income stopped. Got the sack at the office. In looking for a job you've got to have a suit of clothes, so I bought one this afternoon. Five dollars down."

The groom (immediately after the ceremony): "Phew! I never was so rattled in all my life."
 The bride: "And you seemed so cool and collected. Oh, Bob, how could you begin deceiving me at the very altar?"

When a husband gives his wife a pair of socks, they should never be to the jaw.

She: "Did you tell anybody about my pie?"
 He: "Oh, yes! I had to tell my physician what ailed me."

Jim: How long have you been married?
 Bill: "Long enough to learn that there are some things you can't say with flowers."

When you have explained your proposition and the man says: "I'll consider it," don't be fooled. He won't.

Even the man who tries to obey the law by doing nothing may get pinched for non-support, vagrancy or loitering.

Makers of baby carriages are not very strong for the birth-control propaganda.

Old Lady (about to go up in an airplane): "Oh, Mr. Pilot, you will bring me back all right, won't you?"
 Pilot: "Yes, indeed, madam; I've never left anybody up there yet."

A pat on the back sends many a man forward.

THE TINYTIMES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)
 "The Tinties eyed the wooden shoes. 'Come on, we have no time to lose,' said Clowzy. 'Let's all try them on. Upon the ground we'll sit. 'Twill be real fun to walk around. I only hope that we have luck and all of them will fit.'"
 "Soon Carpy shouted, 'I'm in luck. At first I thought my foot was stuck, but now the shoes fit perfectly. Oh, gee, but they feel queer. I'll try them now, around this place and then with anyone I'll race.' Then as he clumped around a bit the bunch began to cheer."
 "You're great," cried Copy. "Now watch me and some real walking you will see. I never have been clumsy and I know I won't be now." He started off and then he slipped. Just one more step and, whoops—he tripped. The rest began to giggle and a frown spread on his brow.
 "You needn't laugh," poor Copy said. "If you can do this, go ahead. It isn't quite as easy as it looks, I'll tell you that. I didn't feel at ease at all. In fact I felt that I would fall. You might have had a real good laugh if I had sprawled out flat."
 "Here, here," the carpenter cried out. "What is this fussing all about? You're not supposed to merely walk with those shoes. Now I will tell you just what you should do. This is a stunt that's very new. Now each of you stand very still and shortly you will fly."
 "The shoes will take you through the air. They'll float you quickly here and there. I'm sure that they will do it 'cause I picked the proper size." And so the Tinties stood real still. In just a moment came a thrill. The carpenter yelled, "Good-bye, boys," as they began to rise.
 (Clowzy drops one of his shoes in the next story.)

HIS NOSE KNOWS BEST
All is peace and harmony in the animal world out Buckingham way. Clarence Howe who lives on Keeney street blinked and rubbed his eyes the other day when he saw the litter of barn kittens playing with some strange companions.
He sneaked up closer and was rewarded with a rare sight. Several baby skunks about the age of the kittens were having the time of their lives with their more domesticated companions as they rolled over and over in youthful glee behind the barn.

NEWLYWED GIVEN SURPRISE SHOWER
Mrs. George Small, who before her marriage earlier in the month was Miss Mabel Johnson of Maple street, was the guest of honor at a surprise miscellaneous shower given last night at the home of Mrs. Ruth Waddell, 8 Ridgewood street by 12 of her friends. A mock wedding was a feature of the evening. Miss Catherine Quinn was the bride and Miss Mary Kornse the bridegroom. Games were played for which prizes were given and everybody enjoyed the evening. A buffet lunch was served by the hostess. Mrs. Small received many acceptable gifts.

SEEK WARM CLOTHES FOR NEEDY CHILDREN
The Connecticut Children's Aid society has in its care two hundred and sixty-six children. Winter is coming and these children must be clothed in suitable warm clothing that they may take their places in the community along with those children more fortunate than they are.
There is great need of clothing for children of all ages, from infancy to eighteen years; especially is there need of all sorts of babies' garments and sweaters for boys between the ages of ten and fifteen. The clothes, outgrown winter clothes or summer clothes that may not be used another year, may be sent to the Society's office, 60 Trumbull street, Hartford, Connecticut.
The need is extreme and each gift made to the society will be greatly appreciated.
Mrs. Frances Chambers, chairman of Sunset Rebekah's committee who assisted with the arrangements for the field day at Charter Oak park last Saturday, yesterday received notification that William Mason of Pearl street and W. J. Scheldige of Spruce street each won five dollars on the tickets bought for the annual event. The holder of ticket 49,983, whether from this town or some other, failed to place his or her name on the stub and if located will win $10.

THE BIG JOB of being a Mother
Every day a full day for Mother:
"Mother what can I do now?" Brother calls up the stairs. Just as the laundry man rings the back door-bell. . . Mother drops Sister's little fall coat, which she is cutting out, and starts down. . . Back upstairs again, stopping first to telephone the grocery order for the day. . . Calling the plumber, too, about that leak in the bathroom. . . An hour later she is downtown, shopping to make each dollar go as far as it can. . . Home again, to find small Sister showing symptoms of croup, and guests coming for dinner!"
On top of all this would you impose upon her the complicated and detailed task of acting as executor and trustee under your will?
It will involve, you know, court proceedings, appraising property, collecting debts, disposing of property, paying taxes, paying debts, and having the sole responsibility for the house, the family and the finances.
Come in and let us tell you how much simpler it will be for your wife, if you name us under your will as your executor and trustee.
