

VOTING LIGHT AS TOWN POLLS FOR OFFICERS

Only 430 Had Visited Municipal Building at Two O'Clock — Annual Open Meeting Held Tonight.

The usual light early vote had been cast in the town election here at two o'clock this afternoon, the total number of electors who visited the polls in the Municipal building up to that hour being 430. Democratic Registrar of Voters Louis T. Breen had named C. S. McFale as moderator of the election.

Many voters went through the machines without registering an expression on the proposed charter amendment raising a high school committee. Some even asked for the privilege of returning to the booths to vote on this question. This, of course, was out of the question. The position of the high school committee question on the machine is above the Republican party level.

Meeting Tonight
The polls will close at eight o'clock when the session will be adjourned to the High School hall for the open town meeting on budget appropriations and other matters that must be voted upon in this meeting. Tonight's gathering will hear the Selectmen's recommendations on the budget for next year. This budget automatically determines the tax rate. It has been pared closely by the Selectmen and unless there is a movement on the part of the voters to cut any one item drastically, it is expected that the Board's recommendations will be accepted.

(By Associated Press)
Citizens of 153 of Connecticut's 169 towns made their annual pilgrimage to the polls today. In some of the towns, they went to vote for officers, in others on public questions, in many for both.

Three cities—Norwalk, Torrington, and Bristol—also had elections. A fourth city, Waterbury, will vote tomorrow.

Where officials were to be elected, most of the candidates were running for re-election, with nominees of parties not represented in office making strong partisan battles. Bristol's elections alone were non-partisan.

Bristol voted, in addition to offices, on two important public questions. One concerned the purchase of Hotchkiss Aviation Field, at a cost of about $45,000 for a municipal airport. The other concerned school district consolidation. "Greater Hartford"

In Windsor, Wethersfield, Bloomfield, Newington and West Hartford the citizens considered the question of a metropolitan plan for "Greater Hartford." West Hartford alone had a special election on this question, the others placing it before the voters at the regular election. On November 5, Hartford will vote on it in the city election. Wethersfield, like Torrington had third party candidates to consider, those of the Citizens' ticket. A few other towns, among them West Haven, also had third parties in the field, known by various names, some of them being "Independent Republicans" or "Independent Democrats." Thousands of ballots representing tons in paper were printed by order of the secretaries of state for the elections.

THREE MEN KILLED IN SHIP EXPLOSION

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—(AP)—An explosion on board the cargo carrier Eelback today, killed three men and injured a number of others. The blast occurred while the vessel was being made in the ship's hold, the cause of which has not been ascertained.

One of the injured men was blown overboard, but was rescued. The explosion occurred while the freighter was lying at a wharf at Snyder avenue, Delaware river.

Shipping Board Boat
The Eelback is owned by the U. S. Shipping Board and is under the agency of Charles A. Revlin, Inc., Philadelphia. The vessel arrived here September 24 from Santos, Brazil, by way of Baltimore with a miscellaneous cargo.

She is 401 feet long; 55 beam and 32 feet depth of hold.

CHICAGO PLANE STILL UP
Chicago, Oct. 7.—With the half-way mark only two days away, the "Chicago-We Will" continued to cruise in lazy circles above the harbor airport today in its fourth attempt to surpass the 421-hour refueling endurance record of the "St. Louis Robin."

At 6:52 a. m., the "Chicago-We Will" passed the 168th hour. Exactly seven days.

The flight promoters and field attaches still declined to disclose the identities of the plane's two pilots.

FRENCH FLYERS THOUGHT LOST REPORTED SAFE

Coste and Bellonts Forced Down in Manchuria; Had Covered Over 5,500 Miles on Trip.

Tokio, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonts, who had been missing a week, today were safe in Manchuria after establishing a new world's non-stop flight record and after a series of hazardous adventures including their arrest at the hands of Chinese soldiers who thought they were Russians.

Advises received in Tokio today placed the French flyers near Tsitsihar, northwest of Harbin, Manchuria, where they had landed Sunday Sept. 29. They had flown for fifty-two hours and had covered between 5,500 and 6,000 miles from Le Bourget, considerably better than the former record of 4,358 held by the Italian flyers Ferrarin and Delprete.

Fragmentary accounts received by the Rango News Agency from Harbin stated the men had landed because of a shortage of fuel in a village north of Tsitsihar. They were mistaken for Russian military aviators and were held in custody while General Wan Fu-Lin, head of the Hohungkiang provincial government, telegraphed to Mukden announcing that his troops had captured an enemy plane and asking for instructions.

Week Without Word
These circumstances apparently explain why it was a week before assurance of their safety reached the outside world. The dispatches said the aviators were living at Fu-Lin mansion at Tsitsihar as guests, but that they had not yet been permitted to proceed. The French consul, consequently, has gone from Harbin to clear up the official obstacles.

Coste further telegraphed the French consul at Harbin that his plane, the "Question Mark" crossed the Manchurian border at one o'clock on the afternoon of Sept. 29 and that he saw the Chinese and Russian position below. The scene of his crossing was near Manchuli which has been the center of several encounters between Russian and Chinese troops growing out of the controversy over the Manchurian railway.

FOUR AUTO DEATHS OVER THE WEEK-END

18 Are Injured; Two Other Violent Deaths in State from Other Causes.

By Associated Press
Week end casualties took six lives and injured a score, two seriously in Connecticut.

Four fatalities were results of auto accidents and 18 of the injured persons received their hurts in such accidents.

Two of the deaths were consequences of other causes, one man dying in New Haven of a fractured skull received under mysterious circumstances, another succumbing in Derby of injuries received in a street brawl.

Two of the injured, one a policeman, the other a former reformatory inmate, were wounded in shooting at each other in a police pursuit.

William Jones, 40, of no certain address was found dead in New Haven at the rear of the home of William Jackson. According to the opinion of the medical examiner there was evidence of foul play.

At Stonington, Anthony Mucci, 24 of East Boston, Mass., was killed when a car driven by Joseph Panara was forced off the road by a passing machine and overturned. Several other persons in the car were injured. Panara was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Would Punish Buyer Under Volstead Act

Washington, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Amendment of the Volstead Act to make the purchase of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes prohibited under law, was proposed in a bill introduced today by Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, the sponsor of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Senator Sheppard's proposal would make the purchaser equally punishable with the manufacturer or seller of intoxicants. He said the amendment was necessary because of a recent court decision which held that the purchaser was held not liable in connection with an act of transportation.

The Texan said he had been under the impression that the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes was punishable in connection with an act of transportation but that the decision made it advisable to definitely prohibit purchase by the terms of the Volstead Act.

HE HAD REASON TO SHED TEARS

He Confesses He is Running Alcohol.

Cumberland, R. I., Oct. 7.—(AP)—A motorist burst into tears when halted by a motorcycle policeman for passing a red traffic light here.

"What are you crying about?" the officer demanded.

"I've got 50 gallons of alcohol and two cases of good Scotch and I hate to lose it," replied the driver.

The driver, who gave his name as Joseph Daniels, 29, of Cambridge, Mass., was fined $75 and costs for illegal transportation of liquor. The liquor was confiscated.

COOLIDGES BACK FROM VACATION

John Back at His Work and Florence to Arrange Furniture Today.

New Haven, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Major John Coolidge, back from his honeymoon at Mooshead Lake, took up the prosaic duties of a railroad clerk in the operating offices of the N.Y., N.H. and H. railroad today, having driven from his father-in-law's home in Plainville in time to report at his desk on schedule.

Mrs. Coolidge, who was Florence Trumbull, remained at the home of her parents, Governor and Mrs. John H. Trumbull, she and her husband having arrived there from Wednesday, the transfer of the stage of their trip from the summer camp of the governor yesterday in her roadster.

Arranging Furniture
The apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge in Westville, suburb of this city, has been made ready for their occupancy but it will be necessary for the bride to arrange the furniture and fittings as most of the former were not delivered until last Wednesday. The transfer of the furniture from the vans to the apartment was watched by the neighbors. One of the close neighbors called to the telephone by another neighbor said that she had noticed all her neighbors were looking the furniture over and telephone conversation had to be very brief.

NO MORE WAR IF PACT IS MADE—MacDONALD

BOSTON BOXER IS VICTIM OF BRUTAL ATTACK

Alfred Downing Thought Dying—Had Been Beaten With Hammer—Fire Suspects Are Arrested.

Boston, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Alfred Downing, 32, a West End boxer and alleged former convict, was believed dying at the Haymarket Relief hospital today, victim of a hammer beating by gangsters while five alleged assailants were held awaiting the outcome of his condition.

Downing, who was said frequently to have posed as Bryan Downey, the former middleweight champion, and who recently was released from the Kennebec county jail in Maine, was found in a gutter unconscious, his skull fractured and his face and body a mass of wounds. Nearby was a bloody hammer head and a diligent search by a squad of detectives soon afterward brought to light the broken handle in a street several blocks away.

Names Assailants
Police said that the fact that the handle had broken was probably the only thing that accounted for the fact that Downing was discovered alive. In a lucid moment at the hospital, Downing named the five whom he charged had beaten him.

One of these was Charles Kaplan, 32, well known to police and alleged leader of the gang. Another was Bartholomew Varney, 37, supposed to be a friend of the dying man and whom police charge "put him on the spot." The others named and arrested were Henry Wittingham, 36, Albert Nadeau, 21 and William McCreadie, 18. They were booked as suspicious persons.

Both Convicted
Downing and Kaplan were each convicted three weeks ago of mutual assault and authorities are convinced that the attack on Downing, which apparently occurred early Sunday morning, was a sequel to the earlier affair. Immediately after arresting Kaplan, police raided his room where they say they found a large quantity of liquor. They charged that all concerned were involved in the bootleg racket.

Sergeant Hugh Sullivan of the Joy street police station told his superiors he had seen Downing and Varney together late Saturday night and had advised the former

WORLD FINANCIERS BEGIN DISCUSSION

Find Many Difficult Tasks in Way of Forming an International Bank.

Baden-Baden, Germany, Oct. 7.—(AP)—The conference on establishment of the Bank for International Settlements got under way today with consideration of definite ideas on the statutes of the proposed bank.

The difficulty and delicacy of the task were forcibly brought to the attention of the delegates when concrete proposals came up. Not only had they under-estimated the purely technical work that was needed, but in discussing the material available from the committee which had worked over the weekend, they found divergence on various questions.

Unsolved Problems
Among the matters still needing solution were:

- (1) Do the statutes include the charter and bylaws, or only the latter?
- (2) Just when does the bank begin to exist?
- (3) Is the text in conformity with the laws of the countries interested?

(4) In short, into what would shall the bank be cast?

The bankers here realize they are creating something that never existed before, and hence that they have no precedents upon which to act. Furthermore they must first learn, as it were, to speak a common language.

Each of the three or four paragraphs adopted today was fully debated and when agreement was reached a drafting committee was appointed.

PREMIER SPEAKS BEFORE CONGRESS

British Statesman Fills Senate and House Walls With Applause With Statement That Kellogg-Briand Treaty Will Stand Out Like Monument in History — President and Premier Issue Joint Statement.

Washington, Oct. 7.—(AP)—President Hoover and Premier MacDonald, joined today in expressing gratification over progress in discussing questions that might cause Anglo-American friction, and later the British statesman filled the Senate chamber with applause with the declaration that the Kellogg-Briand treaty renouncing war would stand out like a monument in history.

The heads of the two great nations expressed their views in a joint statement issued shortly after their return from a week-end at the rustic Hoover fishing camp in the Virginia mountains from which they announced a conference 'looking to further naval limitations would be called.

First Visits House.
Shortly afterwards, the prime minister departed for the Capitol, where he was received by the House which he spoke briefly. He then went to the Senate. The galleries of both chambers were filled, foreign ambassadors and other members of the diplomatic corps in their brilliant uniforms vie with fashionably dressed women, including Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, in adding color.

"There can be no more war; it is impossible if we will make the peace pact effective that any arm of our forces, sea, land, or air will come in conflict," the lately MacDonald asserted as the Senators and those looking on burst into applause.

"We have come together and said what is all this bother about party," he continued. "Partly! Take it."

Speaks From Notes.
Again there was applause. As the prime minister spoke he occasionally referred to notes scribbled on several torn sheets of paper lay before him. He held his glasses balanced on his left thumb, and took hold of his coat lapels with both hands as he spoke. The Senate listened intently.

The British premier paid a glowing tribute to the late Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister of Germany, asserting he was a quiet, heroic man standing surrounded by omni not only abroad but at home, determined to play a perfectly straight game.

After again thanking the Senate for his hearty welcome, MacDonald was escorted to the front of the presidential officers' by Vice-President Curtis amid another outburst of applause.

Here the members of the Senate filed by to shake the hand of the premier.

Washington, Oct. 7.—(AP)—President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald in a joint statement today said gratifying progress had been made in the review of all questions that might give rise to friction between Great Britain and the United States.

"We have frankly reviewed all questions that might give rise to friction between our peoples," the announcement said. "Gratifying progress has been made and the conversations are continuing."

The statement was made immediately after the arrival of the chief executive and the British statesman at the White House after their week-end at Mr. Hoover's Rindigan camp where they conversed intimately in the rustic setting.

The President left his guest within ten minutes after they arrived, going directly to his office.

The prime minister returned to his own apartment at the White House and there quickly changed into formal dress for his visit to Congress. He was accompanied by Capitol Hill by Walter Newton, administrative assistant to the President and until recently a member of the House of Representatives.

Arrives at Capitol.
The prime minister reached the Capitol about noon. He proceeded first to the House where he was greeted at the wide stone entrance steps by Chairman Porter of the foreign affairs committee and Representative Lintchum, of Maryland, the ranking Democratic member.

The premier, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador and the American and British officials who accompanied them were escorted to the Speaker's office. Speaker Longworth is absent and Representative Hadley, of Washington, was designated as Speaker pro tem for the day.

Chaplain's Prayer.
The House chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, in opening the session prayed for world peace and a better understanding not only between Great Britain and the United States but all nations.

The House session was brief, adjourning immediately to the premier might be introduced. He was escorted into the Chamber by Porter and Lintchum.

Applause greeted his arrival. This swelled in volume as he was presented from the Speaker's rostrum by Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the Republican leader.

Addressing his audience as "Fellow Members of Congress," Mr. MacDonald said he had been paid a very high honor by being permitted to greet them. "It awakens many memories of other days in Washington," he said.

After a talk of several minutes, the prime minister stepped down into the big well of the House where the members were presented to him one by one.

Daughter in Gallery.
Watching from the gallery the cordial reception was Miss Ishbel MacDonald who wore a gray dress with almost invisible diagonal stripes and a dark red hat. Lady Isabelle Howard, wife of the British ambassador, was dressed in a blue suit with white blouse and white hat.

Leaving the House Chamber, the premier walked through a lane of applauding men and women lining the long corridor through the Hall of Fame and the rotunda to the Senate side.

He was escorted to the vice-president's room where he was greeted by Senators Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader; Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, Borah, of Idaho, and Swanson of Virginia, ranking Democrat on the foreign relations committee.

Enters the Senate.
He entered the Senate chamber at 12:25 p. m.

The Senate stood in recess. The galleries were crowded to overflowing, with many in the diplomatic row. Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, sister of the vice-president, and the vice-president's row with Mrs. William Howard Taft.

As at the House side, Miss MacDonald sat in the diplomatic gallery with Lady Isabelle Howard.

The premier was applauded warmly by the Senators.

Vice President Curtis welcomed the British statesman as a representative "of a great people" and expressed the hope that his visit would result in bringing about an agreement on the pending questions.

Saying the walls of the Senate chamber were not unfamiliar to him, MacDonald explained he had sat in the galleries but that he would not stand here in this place as I am standing here today receiving your good wishes.

The prime minister said that deep down in his heart that any misunderstanding between the United States and Great Britain did not belong to the substance of things. He added that he was satisfied that misunderstanding would be swept away and his audience applauded him.

Referring to the Kellogg-Briand Pact for the renunciation of war, the visitor said this would stand out like a monument in history.

"Speakers in your country have said that war between your country and my country was unthinkable," the premier continued amid another round of applause.

No More War
"There can be no more war; it is impossible if we will make the peace pact effective that any arm of our forces, sea, land or air will come in conflict."

He predicted that this agreement would end competitive armaments. "In these democratic days when heart speaks to heart, deep speaks to deep, and silence talks to silence, personal contacts are the important things," he said.

"These things are to be as important as anything in laying the foundation of an enduring peace."

"In these days when two nations talk together, it should mean hope and confidence to the rest of the world, especially when neither of us will form any alliance toward any other nations on the face of the earth."

ROOSEVELT TAKES OATH AS GOV. OF PORTO RICO

San Juan, Porto Rico, Oct. 7.—(AP)—With his hand resting on the Holy Bible with which his father took oath as president of the United States, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt swore to uphold the Constitution of Porto Rico and the Constitution of the United States as governor of the island.

The governor's ship arrived an hour late, owing to headwinds, and the actual inaugural ceremony took place at a party in a heavy downpour of rain. The colonel continued to speak, saying "We don't mind a little rain, do we?" But the bad weather dampened his ardor to the extent of preventing him from making his speech in both English and Spanish as he had intended. After a paragraph in English, which he repeated in Spanish with apologies for his pronunciation, a great shout came from his hearers.

During the storm, amplifiers ceased to work, but a large part of the crowd remained until the end. Mrs. Roosevelt sat nearby while the colonel was speaking. She was unable to dodge the raindrops that came through the palm covering of the platform.

be stationed on the old roadway north of the canyon and the height nullified its power. When the chain was put around the rock and the power turned on the weight was sufficient to cause the derrick to tilt dangerously.

It was not until the steam derrick from the East Hartford railroad yard arrived that the rock was removed. Even then, it was necessary to make two small blasts to break the sheet into pieces. It was late afternoon before traffic was restored and meanwhile the schedule of three trains was affected. They had to be re-routed. Passengers here were taken by bus.

REV. BROOKES CONTINUES HOLY LAND DISCUSSION

Rockville Pastor Tells Kiwanians How Recent Trouble Between Jews and Arabs Began.

Rev. George S. Brookes, of the Union Congregational church in Rockville was the speaker again today at the Manchester Kiwanis club meeting at the Country clubhouse. He completed the story he began two weeks ago on Jerusalem. His remarks today were centered upon a Safid and Hebron. He gave many interesting facts about the "Wailing Wall" and the people who go there. From reliable sources he informed the club that of all the people who go there less than half are really serious in their beliefs; a large percentage going just for show.

In discussing the trouble that has taken place in Jerusalem this past summer, the speaker thought the British government made a blunder when in 1917, through Arthur Balfour, they practically guaranteed it a national home for Jews for all time. He thought that the Arabs were to be pitied. He said in 1916 the British government had agreed to assist the Arabs in maintaining their ascendancy there. It was virtually a war measure and the British should not be held down to it. Mr. Brookes believed that the trouble between the Arabs and the Jews arose from a misunderstanding as might be found right here in our own country.

Among the guests today were Hugh McKenna, president of the New Britain Kiwanis club, who came especially to urge the Manchester Kiwanis to attend the inter-club meeting which is planned for Wednesday, October 30 in New Britain. This meeting is in honor of Clarence P. Quimby of this town who was recently elected lieutenant governor of the first district. Hartford has agreed to send a large delegation. It is also proposed to make it ladies' night for Hartford, New Britain and several other clubs. John I. Olson was appointed to have charge of the tickets and to arrange for transportation of the Manchester party. The affair will be held in the new Masonic Temple in New Britain. A set of quotes, the gift of Lieutenant Governor Toward of Waterville, Maine, who visited here in August, was presented to the club today by Arthur A. Knofo, chairman. The attendance prize today was also from Poland Spring, Maine, and was donated by C. P. Quimby. Fourteen names were drawn out of the hat and each man received two bottles of Poland Spring Water. A bottle of the mineral water was at each plate.

The annual meeting is scheduled for November 18, and the following nominating committee will bring in a slate of officers for the coming year: Lawrence W. Case, chairman; E. J. Holl, C. P. Quimby, C. R. Burr and Wilbrod Messier.

LA GUARDIA OFFERS AL JOB IF ELECTED

New York, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith declined to comment on the proposal of Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for mayor, to invite him, if elected, to head a commission to reorganize the city government. Mr. Smith made an address from the pulpit of the Cornell Memorial Methodist church last night.

Mr. La Guardia said New York's one big need was an entire reorganization of its municipal government. He remarked that when he was governor, named Charles E. Hughes, a Republican, to reorganize the state government. I will follow the lead of Governor Smith," said the candidate. "I will ask for the creation of a committee of citizens, regardless of party, who understand the city government, and offer the chairmanship to Mr. Smith."

TEAMSTERS STRIKE TIES UP MARKETS

Hundreds of Cars of Produce Are Spoiling on Docks—Over 2,000 Out.

New York, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Seven hundred teamsters at the Harlem market on East river went on a sympathy strike today with 2,000 North river union market drivers. The latter walked out on Saturday, when their demands for an eight-hour day and increased overtime pay were refused.

Union officials also said 500 teamsters in Newark, N. J., would be called out today unless an immediate settlement of the strike here is reached. The New Jersey drivers are members of local 308 of the International Brotherhood of teamsters. Joseph Hanwright, president of the New York Local, 202, said several commission merchants had been trucking produce into the city from New Jersey through the Hudson tubes. Unless this is stopped at once, he declared the union drivers in Newark would strike.

Produce Spoiling. The strike of the New York market drivers is holding up $6,000,000 worth of perishable produce consigned to New York, in railroad yards in New Jersey while the city faces a fresh fruit and vegetable famine.

The Market Truckmen's Association will meet with the Fruit and Produce Trade Association later in the day in an effort to settle the strike.

Watkins Brothers Observe Their 55th Anniversary

Store Here Enjoys Fame That Has Spread to Farthest Points of the Globe—Was Originally Casket Making Firm.

Some one has said that "if you build a better mouse-trap even though you live in the wilderness, the world will soon beat a path to your door." The idea expressed is, that if one should start with an acceptable, working model of something helpful to the community and the world at large and by studious and intelligent application in an effort to improve upon the original, that commodity would in time become the one most desired by all people.

Manchester has a fine example of this principle in the records of a local business house, Watkins Brothers, Inc., for 55 years furniture dealers in this town. During the eventful days of the Presidency of Ulysses S. Grant—days which marked the passing of Horace Greeley; the great fight at Little Big Horn that immortalized General Custer; days now memorable for the governmental recovery after the Civil War, the two Watkins Brothers started in business with their mother's endorsement on a $1500 note.

Undertakers First
In 1874 the very idea that was to finally develop into one of the greatest firms of home decorators, had its beginning in an undertaking establishment, for the Watkins boys were undertakers—par excellence. Their skill and pride in making caskets all of which were then made to order) soon developed an innovation in this field—the ready made casket. So great was their interest in the principle of lines of decorative beauty that Watkins Brothers were shipping wagonloads of ready-made caskets to Hartford undertakers, before the days of the hearse.

World Shrine
Specialization has given Watkins Brothers a nation-wide reputation. When the new building was erected in 1920, the late Elwood S. Ela, editor of the Herald said, editorially: "This artistic shrine will be the Mecca for pilgrims from all over the country."

This has been literally true as shipments to all parts of the country have been made as well as Ireland, England, Africa, China and other countries. Deliveries from the store have been made to 45 towns in 8 different states from a recent check-up.

A special feature along the lines adhered to by the company is the establishment of a "model cottage" within the building. This cottage is refurnished in period designs several times each year and is the attraction for all beauty lovers. At the present time the cottage is furnished as follows:

Living room: Georgian period; davenport and chairs, secretary, drop-leaf table; and incidental furnishings in keeping with that period. Dining room: Queen Anne, suite of walnut, draperies green and henna stripe; Bedroom: French Provincial; gay bright red and gray drapes to harmonize. Louis XV style furniture, beautiful yet carrying the lines of peasant France. In this set-up there is one beautiful bedroom of early Jacobean, with the bed showing the old linen-fold paneling on head and footboard. The room is simply furnished but beautiful in design.

Big Contracts
Among recent important contracts awarded to Watkins Brothers are the following: Masonic Temple, Manchester, The Wethersfield Bank and Trust Co., Wethersfield; The University Club at Hartford; The Hartford County Court House; Recreation Buildings, Manchester; Telephone Building, The Elm Tree Inn, Farmington; Storrs Community House, Storrs; Conn. 2 dormitories at Tufts College, and many old Colonial houses furnished in original antiques. One interesting old house was completed by the company; the work begun at the point where it was left off in 1765. The original tools of the Colonial artisans were left scattered around and where they had been dropped when the workers went to work. The firm's decorators are now at work on the beautiful Eushnell Memorial, directly across from the capitol in Hartford.

Late Improvements
"Everybody wanted to get a look at the new truck," he said. We found that modernization increased business and we always took advantage of the latest improvements. The old delivery wagon driven by Ed Fish was inadequate, so the company was forced to leave romance and historic interest behind in the progressive advance."

Most Beautiful
Development and enlargement upon the original idea of beauty of design and decorative perfection has inspired honors upon Watkins Brothers. Furniture dealers from all over the country are constantly calling or writing to the Manchester store for ideas that can be used in their own business. Recently, this store was voted the most beautiful small-town furniture store in the United States, in a nationwide poll conducted by a trade paper in which 20,000 entries were considered.

"We not only try to carry our ideas into the larger field but we aim to be of special help to the small buyer," said Mr. Watkins. "A housewife phones in for a piece of furniture or she may call and select what is the decorative scheme of your house? By this we mean to tell those who do not know, just what type of furniture and decorations are required to make the home attractive. We would much rather see the home furnished along lines of beauty than make a hasty sale."

Just an Example

HERE'S truth behind our slogan "Where you can afford to buy good furniture." It is not just a catch line to help fill up our ads—advertising space costs too much to be dwindled away with useless copy. Our slogan represents our store. It tells in just a few words what you may expect to find at Keith's—and it is substantiated by facts that prove no store could be more worthy of such a claim.

Consider the factors that facilitate our offering good furniture at lower prices. Low rental—low overhead—group buying power—and a famous credit plan, giving a cash discount with up to a year to pay. What other store has so many advantages?

The Chippendale Wing Chair (illustrated above) is just one example of values that are a part of our every day policy. You can always expect more in trading at Keith's.

Now Celebrating Our 30th Anniversary

Opposite High School South Manchester

C. Elmore Watkins

The Brothers were glad to accept an opportunity to buy out the furniture department of William H. Cheney in 1877, a line in which they could carry out their original ideas of decorative beauty, and their enthusiasm grew with the business until 1890 when they had grown the space available they built their first plant—a home occupied for thirty years—on the corner of Main and School street.

In 1920 the New Storehouse occupied their new store with its 75,000 feet of floor space as compared with the 15,000 in the old store. At the time of building this tremendous space appeared to be foolhardy to the outsider, but the Brothers were looking far ahead to the time that the "world would beat a path to their door." That apparently foolish vision of 1920 is today upon this fifty-fifth anniversary strangely prophetic.

Members of the company have always been leaders. Not only have they kept in step with progress but invariably have been a step ahead. They were the first to install a telephone in Manchester and owned the first truck, as well as the first motor-driven hearse. In this connection the company was flooded with orders when motorized deliveries were started. C. Elmore Watkins, treasurer of the company, recalls a typical conversation of the period.

"Hello, hello—is this Watkins Brothers furniture store?"
"Yes."
"This is Mrs. John Smith. I would like a kitchen chair delivered to my home. And please—will you have it sent up by the horseless delivery wagon—please."

"Everybody wanted to get a look at the new truck," he said. We found that modernization increased business and we always took advantage of the latest improvements. The old delivery wagon driven by Ed Fish was inadequate, so the company was forced to leave romance and historic interest behind in the progressive advance."

Starting with two men in 1874 the business now employs nearly sixty people in Manchester and 14 in the Hartford store. The salesmen use nineteen passenger automobiles in their regular work, a feature which saves an enormous amount of time and raises the services they can render to a higher degree.

Development and enlargement upon the original idea of beauty of design and decorative perfection has inspired honors upon Watkins Brothers. Furniture dealers from all over the country are constantly

Weekly Cable Review

All the world's eyes were turned to Washington this week. The arrival of Prime Minister MacDonald for his conference with President Hoover, which is expected to set world disarmament far on the road to success, is one of the great diplomatic events of a century already marked by many momentous changes.

The President and the prime minister went to the presidential fishing lodge in the Blue Ridge mountains over the week-end, and all observers drew a deep breath as they waited for the real work to begin. After the promise of so much, everyone is waiting for the performance.

Speculation is useless at an hour when the diplomatic traditions upon which it is usually based have been set aside in so unprecedented a fashion.

Moved by Welcome Mr. MacDonald was obviously moved by the eagerness and enthusiasm of his welcome in New York and Washington.

He spoke frankly of his aims. He had come to America to convey the desire of the British people for cordial friendship with the American people. At the same time, he assured the other nations of the world that no alliance of the old, entangling sort was envisaged.

"Nothing, I am sure, would please both us more than that any success resulting of misunderstanding between America and Great Britain should be at once followed by removal of misunderstanding with or between other nations," he declared.

The First Problem The problem which Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald are attempting to solve presents itself, first of all, in terms of agreement between England and the United States on their respective naval forces.

But behind this is a five-power naval conference, which may be held in London in January, and behind that again is a vista down which one may see the goal of world disarmament by air, land and sea.

All these hang upon the conversations which took place at Mr. Hoover's fishing lodge; where, perhaps, there was even a word for such other great matters as the principle of freedom of the seas and the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Mr. MacDonald's government significantly prepared for exchange of ambassadors and resumption of relations with Russia during the week. The agreement reached at Lewes by Foreign Secretary Henderson and Ambassador Dovgalevsky depends upon ratification by both governments. There is no doubt that the British parliament will accept it.

One grave event produced on the international horizon a little cloud that might become a great storm. This was the date of Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann, Germany's ablest post-war statesman, at a moment when so much in Europe, including the all-important Franco-German rapprochement, depended on his personal friendship with Premier Briand of France.

Loss of Stresemann's support for the Young plan and for Briand's great European federation idea leaves a gap in European relations which it will be difficult to fill.

Forecasts Crisis In Germany itself, President von Hindenburg acted quickly to forestall a crisis for the Mueller government. Dr. Julius Curtius, minister of economic affairs and one of the German representatives at the Hague conference which approved the Young plan, was appointed foreign minister ad interim.

Another well-known statesman disappeared from the political scene of the Far East. The death of Baron Gichi Tanaka, former premier of Japan, left the Conservative Party, of which he was the leader, in great disarray.

Empress Nagako of Japan gave birth to another daughter. The Mikado is as yet without a male heir.

In Far East Elsewhere in the Far East, war and revolution were lively and menacing specters, threatening to materialize at any moment. A revolt by Left-Wing groups of the Kuomintang Party in China was reported to have been suppressed, but the situation is full of danger for the Nationalist government at Nanking.

Border skirmishes between Russian and Chinese troops in Manchuria continued. Russian prisoners in Manchuria were said to have been barbarously treated by their Chinese captors, and American Consul Hanson was ordered to investigate conditions at the Harbin detention camp.

Financial Matters The committee of bankers from seven nations, who are to organize the Bank for International Settlements provided in the Young reparations plan, held their first meeting on Baden-Baden, Germany, and elected Jackson E. Reynolds of New York chairman. The death of Stresemann retarded their work, which will be carried on in private sessions.

Dr. Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, said the Young plan would be taken as their starting point and "red tape" would be ignored because they were businessmen assembled to do business.

Aviation There were three important flights in progress. Coste, France's premier aviator, was reported to have set a new world's record for long distance non-stop flights, from Paris to a point beyond Irkutsk, Siberia, but he had not been definitely located at the end of the week though his passage was several times announced from the wild Siberian country east of Lake Baikal.

Colonel Lindbergh arrived at Belize, British Honduras, ready for his exploration of the Yucatan by air, in search of remains of the Mayan civilization. The Russian aviators who are flying from Moscow to New York were forced down en route from Sitka, Alaska, to Seattle. They will start again.

COVENTRY Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Maskell, Edwin Mackie and Mrs. John Kingsbury and son John E., Jr., have returned from a visit to the former's son at Astoria, L. I.

The church meeting held Friday evening it was voted to buy another furnace for the church, also an electric blower for the organ. Lester Hill was chosen chairman for the "Every Member Canvass." The Ladies Fragment Society voted to stand back of the board of trustees to the extent of $500. in repairing the walls of the vestibule of the church.

The funeral of Fred Chase was held from his late home in Hamden, Conn., Saturday morning. Rev. G. E. Reichter of Fall River, Mass., officiated. Burial was in the Center cemetery with Rev. J. N. Atwood assisting. Mr. Chase was a resident of Coventry for many years until his health failed and he was compelled to make his home with his daughter, Hattie. He was Senior Deacon of the church and a man held in high esteem by all.

Miss Eva Koehler spent the week-end at her home. Miss Louis K. Kingsbury spent the week-end at her home. Laura has been elected president of the Girls' Athletic Association at the Connecticut Agricultural College. She has also been chosen as coach for the freshman hockey team.

Owing to a recent operation upon her knee Miss Kingsbury has had to resign from the Girls' Varsity Hockey team which she made two years ago.

The Ever Ready S. S. class will hold its monthly meeting at the chapel Friday evening.

The Huskin' Bee which was postponed owing to the death of Raymond Storrs' grandfather, Fred Chase, will be held this Saturday evening at the home of Raymond Storrs.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Mackie and family spent Sunday at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. J. E. Kingsbury.

BIG BROADWAY SHOW IN TALKIE AT STATE

Famous "Cocoanuts" Shows World's Funniest Quartet on the Stage—Was $6.60 Show.

Two capacity audiences filled the State theater last night at the initial showings of the Marx Brothers in "The Cocoanuts," and it bids fair to be the most successful picture that ever played the city. Gales of uproarious laughter greeted every movement of the screen's funniest quartet.

Praising "The Cocoanuts" is just like giving an endorsement to June sunshine. Beyond question it represents one of the greatest accomplishments of the talking screen. Here at last, is real entertainment, singing, dancing, glorious fooling—just the same brilliant features that one would see had he paid $6.60 for a seat at the Broadway stage of this popular Marx Brothers sensation.

Groucho Marx, the talkative member of the delightful quartet, a side splitting jester; Harpo with his dumb show, his expressive pantomime; Chico with his inane antics, and Zeppo the foil for his brother's madness, keep the house rocking with glee. Beautiful melodies from Irving Berlin start you humming. Mary Eaton the scintillating blonde Ziegfeld star, and Oscar Shaw, her partner in the great musical comedy success, "The Five O'Clock Girl," are splendid in the romantic leads and the chorus numbers are snappy, marvelously photographed and perfectly performed. Mall Hallett and his band, and the all talking comedy sketch "The 99th Amendment," and the latest news events complete the program.

BRONKIE AND GAMBA POPULAR IN BUSINESS Have Built Up Large Trade at Restaurant and Bowling Alleys, Formerly Murphy's.

Reuben W. Bronkie one of the owners of Murphy's Restaurant was born, raised and educated in Manchester. Despite his youth he has proven himself a capable business man and it has been his foresight and ability that to a large degree has been responsible for the steady growth of business at the restaurant that represents his latest undertaking in a business way in Manchester.

Before taking over his interest in Murphy's Restaurant and alleys he had for several years successfully conducted a milk route in Manchester. Starting with only a few customers he gradually built up for himself one of the largest milk routes in Manchester. The keynote of his success was quality and service. The same principal he is now applying to the restaurant and bowling alleys with the result that today business has more than doubled with each new day bringing a decided increase.

Mr. Bronkie is popular among the younger generation in Manchester and is an active member of the American Legion having served in the U. S. Navy during the World War.

During the short year that Bronkie has been in the restaurant and bowling alley he has made a great many new friends who wish him the best of luck this season, while he maintains the slogan of quality, courtesy and service.

The TOWN DOCTOR

SAYS

Business Goes Where It Is Invited
 Merchants who bewail the fact that "Business isn't what it used to be," yet fail or refuse to profit by the example of those with whom business is better than it used to be, have no "business" to complain if their business goes elsewhere.

Merchants who spend time crying about new or outside firms taking their business away from them, but shut their eyes for the very evident cause and reason for it, can't blame anyone but themselves if their business goes "nooey."

If business isn't good with you, "seeing" about it all the time won't improve it. Who wants to do business with a constant calamity howler anyhow?

Business is good—there is more business today than there ever was—the only difference is there are more and keener concerns after it.

Everybody knows that—you customers included.

If you are not getting the business, it's not your customers' fault. You can get the business if you will rid yourself of old superstitions and prejudices; if you will take away the nickel you are holding so close to your eyes that you can't see the ten dollar bills on the other side of it; if you will recognize that modern buyers don't and won't do business with old-fashioned sellers, unless they have to—and then do something about it, instead of standing around, wringing your hands and crying about it. If you don't invite the people to do business with you, don't give them, consistently and persistently, every reason why they should do business with you, you surely won't get their business, but the fellow that does, will.

Now, you don't have to do this—it's your business, and you can run it to suit yourself, but if you won't do it, don't blame anything or anybody but yourself if your business goes on the rocks and your customers forget you.

Don't get sore at your newspaper, either, if it accepts outside advertising copy. If you don't want the business had enough to ask for it, don't kick if others, who know how to sell, ask for it, and get it.

OPEN FORUM

BACK YORK RECORD.

Editor Manchester Herald:
 At the meeting of the Dillsworth-Cornell Post No. 102 of the American Legion, held Monday night, September 30, 1929, I was authorized to voice the opinion of the Post in connection with your editorial "The York Affair," which appeared in the Manchester Herald of September 30th.

It is felt that the information on which you based the editorial was very misleading and not a true statement of fact. In order to properly present the information to you, certain of the records are referred to you, together with a summary of the action that took place.

The following account is a brief extract and summary of the affidavits of Private Percy Beardsley, Private Joseph Konotski, Private Patrick Donahue, Private Theodore Lock, Private Michael Laccina. These affidavits were taken after being duly subscribed and sworn to at Frettes France, on dates ranging from February 6, 1919, to February 21, 1919, and are a part of the official War Department record. When taken together, they present the following story:

Seventeen men of the 2nd Battalion, 328th Infantry, 82nd Division, under command of Sergeant Bernard Early, who had with him Corporal Murray Savage, Corporal William Cutting, Corporal Alvin C. York, and the Platoon Commander to capture some machine guns that had held up the advance of the Battalion. The detachment under Sergeant Bernard Early circled around the hill on which the machine guns were situated and approached it from the rear. In doing so, they surprised two German Medical Corps men, who ran through the underbrush, whereupon the detachment deployed and followed them. They came abruptly a clearing and surprised about 100 Germans who were sitting at the foot of the hill. A few shots were fired, whereupon the Germans surrendered. Beardsley fired at the machine gun, opening fire on Sergeant Early's detachment, wounding him, killing Corporal Savage, wounding Corporal Cutting, and killing six privates. Corporal York was caught in the open at the foot of the hill. The remaining eight men sought cover, either by moving so that the prisoners were between them and the line of fire or by seeking protection behind trees. Corporal York, who was now in command, had no time to give orders and issued none. His position was exposed to machine gun fire from different angles and at a range estimated as close as 25 yards. In spite of the terrific fire, he shot every German that exposed himself in the group doing the firing. Six of the Germans charged him, led by an officer. Each of these he shot, and when the German officer was killed, the German Major offered to surrender if he would then formed the prisoners in such a manner that his own men were protected by the prisoners from further German fire. Upon his return to his Battalion Headquarters, the prisoners were counted, and the official record shows that there were 132. The affidavits from which this account has been extracted credit Corporal with having killed and wounded no less than fifteen of the enemy.

WAPPING

The South Windsor farmers have banded together and have posted all the land from Station 31 to East Windsor Hill. Game Warden Loeber will patrol the land and trespassers will be arrested.

Willie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael McGrath of station 36 showed a lot of grit for an eight-year-old the other day. He came into the house smiling and announced that he had fallen off a stone wall, and guessed he had broken his arm. His mother thought he was romancing and paid no attention to it. Pretty soon, however, he fainted and an examination showed that one arm had suffered a bad fracture. The lad was rushed to a physician in Warehouse Point who set the injured member. During the process the boy did not whimper.

MAURICE SULLIVAN BALKED BY '69 FLOOD

Tried to Get to Wapping to Vote But Wasn't One of Seven Who Did.

Recent reminiscences of the Manchester flood of 1869 today brought out some further recollection of that memorable storm, this time from Maurice Sullivan of Wapping. Mr. Sullivan, who still drives his own car and makes nothing at all of frequent runs into town, was here this morning.

He was 21 years old at the time of the 1869 deluge and had recently married. He and his wife were staying, temporarily with relatives of the latter in Parkerville. The South Windsor election was held in the Wapping district that year and Mr. Sullivan set out to attend the town meeting. He never did get there, however, as every bridge was down. Only seven voters made the grade and Mr. Sullivan recalls that these seven elected John S. Clapp and Sanford Buckland as selectmen. It was a week before he could get to Wapping, which he did by driving across the Hockanum at Oakland standing up in his wagon. That day he arranged for the purchase of the property on which he has lived ever since.

His fording of the Hockanum at Buckland followed an unsuccessful attempt to cross the river at Union Village, where the bridge had been swept away, together with what was known as the "yellow house," and Fred Snow, later a Manchester constable, had been marooned in a tree all night.

WILLIAMS OIL-O-MATIC HEATING

Listed as Standard by the Underwriters Laboratories

An Automatic Oil Burner That Assures You COMFORT—CONVENIENCE ECONOMY—SAFETY

Recognized the world over as the one perfect Automatic Oil Burner that burns cheap fuel oils.

The Most Successful Domestic Oil Burner for Central Heating Plants, Hot Water Installations, Industrial Boilers and Direct Heat Job.

OIL-O-MATIC burns fuel oils of 28-32 degrees Be density, (Diesel Oils of 24-26 degrees Be) or lighter, flash point 170-225 degrees F, open test, also crude oils. These are the cheapest oils obtainable for burning without preheating.

OIL-O-MATIC burners are started, ignited, stopped and restarted automatically by thermostat controls, acting with 2 degrees F. deviation from any desired point at which thermostat is set.

OIL-O-MATIC is provided with a series of Automatic Safety Controls to prevent burners from running, if for any reason the oil does not ignite, if excessive pressure is created in boiler.

OIL-O-MATIC pumps its own oil supply; automatically, from tank or tanks placed at suitable distance.

OIL-O-MATIC automatically measures required supply of oil, atomizes it mechanically, under low pressure, mixes it thoroughly with proper amount of air, ignites it by electric spark, and burns it in suspension, in the presence of refractory material, thus complying with all scientific principles of oil burning as enunciated by competent scientists.

OIL-O-MATIC produces a clean and hot flame which is free from soot and odors, and develops in the combustion chamber about 18,000 B. T. U.'s per pound of 28 degrees Be (.88 gravity) fuel oil.

The benefits of OIL-O-MATIC heating, and its advantages over all other systems, are so numerous that it is impossible to mention them all. Just a few of them are:

CONSTANT, even heat of predetermined degree, automatically regulated by thermostat which can be set to any degree desired, by day and by night, assuring perfect comfort and banishing sickness from homes.

SAVING LABOR of firing, removing ashes, cleaning the heating plant, cleaning the building, and furnishings. These savings are considerable enough to offset the cost of OIL-O-MATIC in a very short time of operation. In industrial plants, absence of ashes eliminates damage to machinery by abrasion.

DEPENDABILITY of fuel supply, as fuel-oil can be stored in abundant quantities in very small space, thus avoiding interruption of fuel supply on account of strikes, delivery troubles and other emergencies.

GAINING of considerable space in building by eliminating fuel storage space, as oil supply tanks are usually buried under ground or mounted above, leaving floor space free. This space can be utilized for a number of different practical purposes.

DESIGNED as one complete mechanical unit—not merely an assemblage of stock parts. The most important parts are of aluminum die-castings. Oil-O-Matic is listed as standard by Underwriters Laboratories.

INDEPENDENCE from worry about carelessness or inefficiency of personal otherwise entrusted with the maintenance of heating plant. Oil-O-Matic automatically maintains the desired uniform temperature.

The OIL-O-MATIC Burner is built in two sizes. Both of these sizes have a wide range of heating capacity.

IGNITION. Where city gas is available, this may be used for ignition;—electric spark ignites gas, which in turn ignites oil. Gas flow and electric spark are shut off automatically when oil is ignited. Where gas is not available, burners are equipped to operate on electric spark ignition, and in this case we recommend the use of fuel oil having a flash point of 200 degrees F or less.

AIR SUPPLY is furnished by fan at rear end of motor. This has blades 4 inches wide, except that, when used with hot-air furnace, or steam boiler for not over 600 sq. ft. radiation, or hot-water boiler for not over 1000 sq. ft. radiation, fans are furnished with 2 inch blades.

COMBUSTION CHAMBER in furnace, boiler, etc., must be lined with fire-brick according to plans we furnish for each kind of installation. Floor-space of combustion chamber should be not less than 1 sq. ft. for each gallon of fuel oil to be burned per operating hour.

THE YORK CASE

In a letter to the Herald printed today H. R. Mallory, under authorization by the local post of the American Legion, instructs this newspaper that its information in the York case was misleading and cites the records of the War Department as conclusive in the case.

The Herald begs to submit that the story of the York case, as presented in Mr. Mallory's letter and substantiated by the Department records, has long been familiar to the whole country. What York's former comrades are trying to do, and what many New England newspapers have been trying to do, is to obtain, if possible a correction of those records, which appear to have been the product of something very like hysteria.

For instance, the affidavits upon which the York record are based are remarkable in one certain respect. If they are accurate, then the men who made them could have been doing nothing whatever but watch York shoot Germans. And we take the liberty of doubting that any American soldier, while an officer and six enemy privates, were charging one of his comrades, ever devoted himself to the job of checking up each of that comrade's shots.

We think he would be shooting too, not keeping score, if able to do anything. Mr. Mallory, we feel sure, is animated by the purest motives in his criticism of the Herald's editorial, and so is Dillworth-Cornel Post. But perhaps neither he nor the post is too familiar with the history of War Department records. On the records of that Department one major-general of the Civil War still stands forth as a splendid figure at the battle of Chancellorsville, though analysis of his proceedings by a number of the ablest military writers of that generation showed pretty conclusively that he was directly and inexcusably responsible for one of the bloodiest disasters of the war.

War Department records are useful, but if they were never checked and revised in the light of research they would make queer history. What the New England newspapers have been seeking was not, by any manner of means, the destruction of Sergeant York's fame as a war hero, but the correction of a false impression that his companions cut no figure in the bloody affair in which he earned his celebrity. They did cut a figure in it and they had never received any recognition until the New England newspapers began to make a fuss about it.

"METROPOLITAN DISTRICT"

If the proposal to unite the five towns of West Hartford, Windsor, Bloomfield, Newington and Wethersfield with the city of Hartford, in the formation of a "metropolitan district" for the performance of certain functions of municipal government as a unit instead of as separate communities, fails of approval by all the towns in the election today, it will probably be because the authors of the undertaking tried to go a step too far with it.

Joint and co-operative control of waterworks and sewage disposal is an advantage, for communities situated as these are, too obvious for extended discussion. If the charter of the so-called metropolitan district had covered only these highly important and essentially related activities of the towns in question it is improbable that any great amount of opposition would have been encountered. But the maintenance of intertown streets is a somewhat different matter; and when the charter-builders tried to include "regional planning" in the agreement they put their foot in it, so far as creating enthusiasm for the plan was concerned.

City planning, town planning, regional, district, county planning—these are terms that we frequently hear, nowadays, but which very few people, relatively, understand. Indeed, there is some small doubt whether in the minds of their advocates themselves they are very definite in their meaning. There are a great many American communities which have found town and city planning to be the source of more squabbles than concrete results. The trouble with community planning is that it requires a great deal of imagination, and when imagination is permitted the sway that it must be given, to produce any results at all, it is extremely liable to run wild—and sometimes to run wildly in an exactly wrong direction.

It is rather doubtful whether the proposed metropolitan district of Hartford contains one single individual endowed with the gift of prophecy—and lacking that gift it is impossible to establish definite regional planning without at least a fair risk of committing some colossal blunders.

There is also another consideration that enters into these "planning" projects—the ever present risk that some of the planning may be done with a shrewd eye to the accumulation of private fortunes by the planners or their heirs or their friends and their friends' heirs. Community planning would have a somewhat easier row to travel if populations could be entirely sure that altruism invariably controlled the purposes of the planners. Unfortunately they cannot be thus convinced of the rectitude of future officials, perhaps still in school or possibly not yet born.

Anyhow, it is certain that the establishment of a planning power is always a proposal that arouses the suspicion of a very great many persons. It is doubtful whether it has helped the cause of the promoters of the Hartford district idea.

Another thing: What is this "metropolitan district," after all but the creation of a new county within a county? Hartford and its environs are not alone in the predicament in which they find themselves. New Haven and its suburbs and Bridgeport and its suburbs face much the same problems. Isn't the thing we need a rehabilitation of the county organization rather than the creation of a lot of these "metropolitan" districts around the state?

A REAL PARLEY

The call for a five-power naval disarmament conference in January has been almost a foregone conclusion ever since it was definitely announced that Premier Ramsay MacDonald was to visit President Hoover in this country.

While the intimate details of the Hoover-MacDonald conversations at Washington and the Rapidan camp are not likely to become known to the public, the fact that these two men have been in personal conference for many hours on the subject of the impending parley carries with it one assurance for which the people of both nations have long waited. The United States and Great Britain will enter one naval conference, at least, which will not be dominated by naval militarists but by trustworthy representatives of rulers determined to reduce armament through the medium of actual reduction.

There will be no Shearism, no cabal of admirals, at the January conference. Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald will make very sure of that. And there will be no stumbling block of mutual suspicion to prevent the two greatest naval powers in the world from leading their associate powers into the path of rational reduction of the burden and menace of great navies.

Ramsay MacDonald, during his first day in America, utterly convinced the American people of the sincerity of his desire to rid the world of the curse of militarism. They were already convinced of their own President's similar determination. There never was a time in modern history when the tub-thumpers had so little influence in this country as they have today. The conference now called is not going to be just another of those useless naval parleys—it is going to mark the beginning of the end of wastage of the world's labor and substance on useless and mischieft-making sea armaments.

IMAGINARY LOSS

We read this morning of a Burnside farmer who is almost broken-hearted because a young man in whom he childishly confided, and with whom he went into a brokerage business that he didn't in the least understand, has been cheated out of a very great deal of money and has nothing left, in his old age—but a $50,000 farm.

According to the newspaper story the now faded wealth consisted of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of securities which had increased fabulously in value since he bought them. The old man, in fact, feels that he has been robbed of almost a million dollars, and is in despair. "I worked like a slave all my life for what I had," he wails. Of course he didn't do anything of the kind. Nobody ever made a million dollars by manual labor. What he did was to take a little surplus money and employ it exactly as a crap shooter sometimes does—he kept throwing naturals or making his point, allowed his winnings to "ride," and let the other stock gamblers "fade" him. When the new partner shifted the dice on him and the cubes fell "snake-eyes" he didn't actually lose anything but his original stake, which wasn't so much.

If he only knew it, he's a great deal better off without all that easy money. If he has a $50,000 farm and the habit of manual labor, which he seems to love, all he needs is a little sporting blood to be perfectly happy.

A $50,000 farm, to a born and habituated farmer, should be the source of more joy than all the stock certificates in Wall street.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct.—Waitresses in the swanky Fifth avenue and Madison avenue tea rooms are now as carefully hand-picked as are the members of a Broadway beauty chorus.

Not only must they possess master as to face and figure, but they must be able to achieve a certain grace in giving service.

The average height must be five-foot-four and the prescribed weight is 115 pounds. There is a sort of "casting director" before whom they must wait. They are then asked to give their prettiest smile and recite an imaginary order in their best voice.

This has all come about as the result of an effort to draw the club handies away from their club luncheons and bachelor grills.

Whereas, down in the Broadway belt there has been quite a demand for handsome, sheldish young men as waiters in restaurants wherein the working girls of the theatrical belt dine. Most of the luncheries in the mid-Forties are patronized by girls and women, and a fan following for a waiter is a great asset—particularly when one considers the thousands of young ladies who are moon struck by matinee idols and screen stars.

A young waiter who can approximate the attractions of the theatre personalities finds this situation highly profitable. I heard of one the other day who has been making $75 a week in tips alone, to say nothing of his valuable telephone number list.

The old-time scramble among the millionaires of Manhattan for fine brownstone locations on "the avenue" now takes the form of seeking sky supremacy.

Many whose grandfathers prided themselves on a squatty red mansion close clinging to the earth today boast of the most elegant triplex apartments on top of the world. At the moment the largest and most elegant of these sky-high luxury spots—the largest apartment in the world, I have been told—is tenanted by E. F. Hutton, the millionaire broker. It consists of 63 rooms, a considerably large amount of territory that should be claimed by the old-time show places.

The care of a 63-room place is, in itself, no mean task and if anyone wonders what a family can do in this number of rooms—don't ask me! I'm more than passingly puzzled myself. I'm sure I should become weary and lost in the maze. However, I am told that soon an even larger apartment will pass into the hands of Hugh Baker, president of the National City Bank, when one of the newest Fifth Avenue sky-towers is completed. He has, according to information, purchased the right to use any of the space above the 12th floor. And the building will be something like 16 stories high, with a penthouse to boot.

A purchase of this sort, according to the best realty figures, involves better than a million dollars. And something like another million must be spent in decorating it—and fixing it up.

Not long ago it was said that the highest rental in New York would come from the apartment at the top of the new Delmonico's, a charge of some $45,000 a year. Oh yes, it's possible to spend quite a little money in this village! GILBERT SWAN.

HEALTH-DIET ADVICE

Dr. Frank McCoy says "The Best Way to Health" is to follow a diet that is good for the body and the mind.

SUCCESS AND EARLY DEATHS

It might be well for all of us to occasionally make a check-up of our habits of living. An analysis of these habits may startle us.

We can perhaps classify our habits into those which are GOOD, those NOT SO GOOD, and those BAD. GOOD, TOLERABLE and BAD. We will be surprised to find how many of our daily practices actually belong in the "bad" class.

All habits, whether good or bad, rapidly gain in strength when often repeated. Habits which are at first as easily broken as a spider's web will, if persisted in, finally bind us as with chains of steel. It may seem more difficult to cultivate GOOD habits, but when they are once developed they are just as hard to change and really as difficult to break as BAD habits.

Good or bad habits of eating are usually developed haphazardly, and we too easily get into the rut of eating what we are used to, or what the chef finds profitable to serve.

Do not suffer from the delusion that being good because you have practiced it from your youth; others have tasted death too quickly because of the same misapprehension. NOW is a NEW time—with new possibilities and new problems which must be met in a new way.

A "hazard" diet might have seemed sufficient for your grandparents, but you are living in a new time—a scientific age—when your diet must be as scientific as the new evolutions in commerce and invention.

If you would show the pep and efficiency necessary to excel today, you must not burden yourself with excesses of food, or with the use of any kind of food unsuited to man's evolutionary development. If you use an overabundance of even the best kind of food, you will be speedily out-distanced by the one living on a more frugal diet.

Successful men are often sluggish with disease caused by indiscretions in eating and drinking. But you will always find that their success came before the chains of bad habits.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington.—The drinking wets of prohibition America are getting onto a home brew-moonshine basis nearly everywhere.

The average drinker, if he is not consuming home-brewed beer or domestic wine, is nearly always drinking whiskey or gin or beer in which the kick is produced by alcohol from an illicit still.

For some time his chances of getting the "real stuff" have been down to what seems to be a minimum. These facts are gathered from authorities in the Prohibition Bureau.

At one time a tremendous amount of industrial alcohol was diverted into the bootlegging business. A great deal of this alcohol still finds its way into the national drink supply, but not nearly so much. The government has tightened up in its supervision over industrial alcohol and it has become harder to get.

But the smaller the flow of industrial alcohol into bootleg channels the greater the production of alcohol from moonshine stills. And the moonshine alcohol is, as prohibition enforcers admit, pure grain alcohol. It does not contain the horrible and more or less poisonous concoctions which the government has been putting into industrial alcohol in order to keep it out of cocktail and high-ball glasses. And the consumer does not have to worry about the bootlegger's expertise in the process of rectifying.

As I think back over the past years I recall the deaths of more than a dozen of my social friends. These men had at least a degree of success in the business or professional world and yet, at between forty-five to fifty-five years of age—at the height of their maturity—they reaped early deaths from what they had sown in bad habits, such as indiscretions in eating and lack of physical exercise. The lessons of their lives should mean something to us.

It is ridiculous for any of us to consider ourselves wholly successful if we have not succeeded in mastering ourselves.

It is up to us, as captains of our ships, to steer our course that we may come to the port of a successful and at the same time, a healthy maturity.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Cracking in Knee.

Question: C. J. writes:—"I have some cracking noise in my left knee which has been going on for months. Am in my 40's, but hardly think this can have anything to do with it. Kindly advise if there is anything that can be done to stop this cracking."

Answer—The cracking in your knee is caused by something very similar to that which causes rheumatism. A long course of alternate fasting and dieting, with foods to suit your condition, is necessary. Send for special articles on rheumatism.

Only about five per cent of the seized liquor is found to contain what was once diverted industrial alcohol. In some locations, of course, especially in large eastern states where industrial alcohol is more readily available, the percentage is considerably higher.

Throughout the south, the middle west and the mountain states virtually all the whiskey and all the alcohol found appears to have come straight from the still. The best market for straight alcohol is found in the states where the law is most nearly enforced, owing to the greater convenience of carrying alcohol.

In comparatively dry agricultural states such as Iowa and Kansas, alcohol is used by the ultimate consumer to "spike" near beer.

The chemists are not surprised to observe what appears to be the generally increased popularity of gin, for they explain that gin is much easier to make than whiskey if the maker only has the alcohol.

"As the supervision of alcohol becomes more effective and our treatment of it becomes more difficult to overcome," a prohibition official told your correspondent, "the illicit alcohol and whiskey stills will do a correspondingly larger business. Of course, these are much harder to control. When we get down to a moon-shine proposition it is up to the local authorities to help suppress the traffic. The federal

Meikle and St. John Register Touchdowns; New Britain Makes More First Downs But Fewer Threats to Score.

Outrushed five first downs to one during the first half which ended scoreless, the town champion Cubs took on a new life in the remaining two periods to outplay the classy New Britain Blues at Mt. Nebo yesterday afternoon and grasp a most notable victory. The score was 13 to 0. Tommy Meikle and "Lefty" John Cuyler registered touchdowns. The Blues were reinforced by three members of the "late" Hartford Senators.

The Hartford City aggregation, under the personal guidance of Dr. Frank E. Zwick, presented a tough nut to crack and for a time it looked as though the locals had bitten off a bit more than they could chew. The Blues registered ten first downs against eight for Manchester but green-clad Manchester warriors were superior.

All told, the battle was a pretty even affair with the Cubs having the edge due to the fact that they were more alert and took more chances. The game also brought out the importance of good kicking. Jack Stratton and "Ding" Farr got off punts that carried many more yards than the kicks for the Blues. This was a most vital factor in deciding the outcome. Several times the Blues were put in bad holes through faulty punting.

Good Punts Important. During the first half New Britain gained far more yardage but was still unable to get inside Manchester's forty yard line. Yet the Cubs, without the aid of a single first down, once had the ball on New Britain's 24 yard line as the result of a penalty and poor kick. On this occasion the Blues quickly forced Manchester to surrender on downs.

A little later Stratton intercepted a pass 32 yards from New Britain's goal but again the ball was lost on downs. It was at this point that Minicucci dropped a forward pass 13 yards away from the double-stripe. Just before the half ended, L. Puppal, right end for the Blues, almost got away with a long forward pass. Manchester started poorly as the second half got under way, fumbling on the first two plays but a couple of first downs followed for the first real Cub advance of the day. A long kick by Farr forced New Britain to punt from close to its own goal and the boot only carried to the Blue's own 30 yard line where Manchester took possession.

Cubs Get Break. Dahlgquist tossed a pass that Donnelly all but caught on the 15 yard line but Manchester took the ball at this point when the officials ruled that Zaleski had interfered with Donnelly on the catch. Three ensuing plays netted seven and a half yards. It was fourth down on the 9 1/2 yard line with two and a half to go. The Cubs came out of a huddle and Meikle shot through an opening at right tackle into an open field, sprang around to avoid a tackle and dashed over the goal line. Dahlgquist passed to Cheney for the extra point.

The second score came without any warning. Stealing New Britain's craze for throwing forwards, the Cubs worked one for a touchdown. Dahlgquist threw the ball from midfield to St. John who made a neat catch in the middle of a group of players and dodged the remaining 30 yards for a score. Dahlgquist's drop kick for the extra point missed its target. Meikle contributed a pretty 20 yard skid of right end just before Dahlgquist threw the pass to St. John.

With Kyeski, their star fullback bearing the brunt of the attack, the Blues marched to within 13 yards of a touchdown in the closing minutes of play only to be forced to give up the ball on downs at this point. Johnny Groman nailed Kyeski for a tackle that stopped the Blues on the fourth down with three to go. While the Blues showed powerful club, they were inclined to play too much straight football, taking few chances outside of forward passes.

Donnelly Is Star. While all the Cubs' backs made good gains at one time or another, the line-plunging of "Coody" Donnelly stood out conspicuously. This chap follows his interference well, picks his holes cleverly and then, with his head nice and low, hits harder than any other back on the team. In addition, he is a deadly tackler. In the latter art, Dahlgquist was also particularly effective yesterday. Eagleson played well.

On the line, it was the work of Captain Walter Harrison, Albin Pentore and "Jumbo" Belgrade that showed up the best for Manchester with Brody and Beck doing the most damage for New Britain. Both teams started with strong lineups but rushed in regularly before the battle had been underway long. Manchester was penalized 40 yards, New Britain 35.

Charlie Root May Pitch Opener, Not Pat Malone

Earnshaw Still Seen as Mack's Initial Choice; New Gate Record Certain If Series Goes Full Limit; Heavy Hitting Expected; A's Favorites in First Game.

BY ALAN J. GOULD
A. P. Sports Writer

Chicago, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Baseball's "biggest show on earth" comes to town tomorrow, featuring the highly trained white elephants of Cornelius McGillicuddy and the Battling Bruins of Joseph McCarthy in the main event of the game's colorful carnival.

Stripped of the bill board phrases, it's the Philadelphia Athletics against the Chicago Cubs for the world's championship, the honors that go with it and perhaps a richest money reward for the participants in series history.

It will be another million-dollar party, the first since 1926, if the battle between the American and National League champions goes as far as five games, as it seems quite likely to do. Six games, at the rate of a shade over $200,000 per game, and a sell-out already assured, might top the previous record "gate" of $1,207,864, set by the Yankees and Cards in 1926. A struggle to the limit of seven games certainly would establish a new money record.

Crowd of 50,000. Fully 50,000 fans, a record for any series game ever played outside of New York, are expected to jam Wrigley Field to the limits of its bleacher extensions tomorrow for the battle that renews a baseball rivalry between Philadelphia and Chicago of 19 years ago. It marks the re-entry of Connie Mack's Athletics into the series for the first time in 15 years and the Cubs after a lapse of 11 years.

Nineteen years ago the proud Cubs of Frank Chance's era were heavy favorites, only to be trimmed in a five game series.

Tomorrow, the modern A's, still directed by the veteran Mack, will go into the fray favored at 7 to 5 in the betting to win.

The batteries for the opening game were expected to be Earnshaw and Cochran for the A's, and Root and Taylor for the Cubs, thereby pitting two powerful right-handers against each other.

Two Right-handers. The announced selection of Charlie Root, famous for his wrinkle ball, instead of Ironman Pat Malone, was backed by a record of fine performances under fire. Malone who has won more games than any of the Cubs' pitchers, was originally slated to take the mound for the first game. Root, however, was returned to form in the past fortnight.

Earnshaw has been the big worker of the A's staff, performing more consistently than any of his mates, including the famous southpaw, Mose Groce, over the last few months.

Outside of the pitching, the series promised to be a spectacular contest between the heavy hitting Cub array, featuring Hornsby, Wilson, Stephenson and Cuyler, and the strong Mack cast, boasting a superb battery of pitcher plus an attack starring Al Simmons and Jimmy Fox.

Decline Practice. The Cubs after being beaten in their last two games, expected to work out at Wrigley Field and will not be seen in uniform until practice before the roar that starts the first game tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., Central Standard Time.

With all reserved seats sold, hundreds of fans prepared today to take up the vigil outside the park and stick it out all night, to make sure of a place when 12,500 bleacher seats at $1 go on sale at 8 a. m., or earlier tomorrow. An hour later, 2500 standing room tickets for the grandstand go on sale.

Minicucci; rfb, Farr, Donnelly; to, Meikle; lb, Beck, Forbitt; ig, Cheska; A. Anastos; c, G. Fuppel; Arroyo; rg, Brody, Mackennany; rt, Negro; lv, Nevulis; re, Falls; Lindgren; qb, Westman, Fenger; lbh, Bratton; Gripp; rfb, Genatt; Zaleski; lb, Spilko, Kyeski.

Moske, Spillane Score As Majors Win, 14 To 0

Middletown Team Furnishes Nothing More Than Good Workout for Dwyer's Tribe; Trick Forward Works Again.

Another victory—in reality a practice session—goes up on the Majors' scoreboard, said victory being the result of the Majors' set-to or set-up with the South Ends of Middletown at Hickey's Grove yesterday afternoon, the Manchester team scoring two touchdowns and winning 14 to 0.

Just because the score was no larger, is no sign it couldn't have been, because Coach Jack Dwyer stuck to his policy of using two and a half teams. He yanked out the entire first team in the second quarter and then put them back in one with the first team again playing in almost its entirety.

When the Majors received the kickoff running it back 25 yards to the 40 yard line, the team successfully executed the same play that gave it the only score last week—a combination criss cross and forward pass—Wright to Benevento to Moske, who threw the forward pass to McCarthy. Although not good for a touchdown, it netted 30 yards and paved the way for a score.

Moske Goes Over. With the ball on the South Ends' 30 yard line Wright went around right end, headed by perfect intercept for a first down. Moske then shot through a yawning cavity at left tackle for the touchdown, four minutes after the kick-off. Spillane took the ball through center for point number seven.

Receiving on its 25 yard line, Middletown Ends tried to pass through center that didn't gain a yard. A kick followed that only covered five yards. With the ball in the Majors' possession Spillane, the Majors' new find, dodged through a broken field for twenty yards, bringing the ball to the South Ends ten yard line when the quarter ended.

Wright cut off five more yards at tackle, then Moske walked into a hole at right end and was felled with the ball a foot from the goal. Wright shot through the enemy line held off the thrusts of Seherick and Moske but weakened to let Spillane go over for the touchdown. Wright scored the points after on a line plunge.

Faced by an entirely new team on the ensuing kick-off, the South Ends took heart and marched from the vicinity of its 30 yard line over into the Major's territory but there lost the ball on downs. At the half the ball was see-sawing about near the center of the field.

Loss on 10 Yard Line. In the third quarter Rowe passed to Brennan who threw a forward to Benevento good for twenty yards. The South Ends were offside, but the Majors took the gain instead of the penalty. Benevento again snared a pass. Brennan then shot through the line for a big gain. A forward, Chartist to McCarthy and an end run by Brennan brought the ball to the ten yard line, where the Majors lost it on downs.

Middletown kicked. Benevento recovering near the South Ends 29 yard line. The next two plays netted losses of about 10 yards as the South Ends broke through the Major's defense. The South Ends then crashed through center led by Voleski, right half back, but Brons intercepted a forward pass and made 20 yards before being downed. The ball lay near the center of the field at the end of the game.

The Majors made 11 first downs to seven for the South Ends. Penalties amounted to 15 yards for the former, and 20 yards for the latter. Spillane, Moske, Wright and Brennan starred for the winners, Voleski, McCarthy and Gayeski for the losers.

Intimate Sketches of World Series Stars

AL SIMMONS

Al Simmons is to the Athletics' offense what Rogers Hornsby is to the Cubs' . . . When Simmons is hitting, the Mackmen are tough to beat.

Fortunately for the Athletics, he is in a batting mood most of the time . . . Simmons has the most unorthodox style of any major league player . . . He pulls badly at the will and has what is known as "the foot-in-the-bucket" stance . . . When he joined the Athletics, every critic said he hadn't a chance to hit major league hitting with such a style . . . It was suggested to Connie Mack that he believed in him and correctly so . . . Simmons has great power in his arms and can hit ball hard, on which he has been badly footed . . . The long strides, coming in from the ground and a sure catch . . . The spark plug of the Athletics' offense.

ROGERS HORNSBY

Rogers Hornsby is one of the greatest batters of all time . . . The punch he added to the Cub's offense and the steadiness he gave to the infield were two big contributions to the Cubs' 1929 pennant . . . Joe McCarthy, a great manager, proved he was right when he told Owner Wrigley, "Get me Hornsby and I will give you a pennant."

Hornsby, by his fine behavior, has disproved the belief of many that he is a bad actor and would upset the discipline of the Cubs . . . Slowed up a trifle, Hornsby doesn't cover as much territory as he once did . . . However, he has lost none of his cunning and he picks 'em better on the entire season he has batted .350 or better . . . Feels that this is to be his great year as a series player and says the Cubs are sure winners . . . That doesn't mean a thing unless he picks 'em better on the diamond than he ever did at the bat.

Innocent Cheat

AUTHOR OF "RICHARD - POOR-GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

HELEN PAGE feels hopelessly in love with her guardian, LEONARD BRENT. A chance meeting with a Syrian beggar, CHARLES NELLIN, causes Brent to change his plans for Helen's future. Soon after he tells her that she is the only grandchild of a millionaire, CYRIL K. CUNNINGHAM. Brent takes her to Cunningham and offers proofs which the lonely old man accepts. Hoping to make up for the injustice done her mother, Cunningham shows the girl with affection and gifts.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva ENNIS and her brother ROBERT, who falls in love with her. Brent finds another lock to prove Helen as the heiress. He also becomes jealous of Bob and plots to secure Helen for himself quickly. Hearing the doctor say that a sudden shock would kill the old man, Brent gets the servants out of the way and rushes into the sick room shouting wildly that Helen has been killed. His plan works and when the attendant returns, Cunningham is dead. Then Brent appears as friend and former guardian of Helen and takes charge of arrangements.

Brent tries to break off a love affair with Eva without arousing Helen's suspicions. Meanwhile, a chance meeting between Helen and Bob reveals their love for each other, but she tells him she has promised herself to another. Next day Helen goes to New York to speak to release her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

Helen was admitted into the foyer of Brent's apartment by a Japanese servant. She stepped quickly over the threshold and glanced beyond to the living room that could be glimpsed through an open doorway. "Miss Nellin," she said as though it did not matter, and moved on, paying no attention to the man's words. He was saying that Mr. Brent was out.

Someone had drawn the heavy draperies against the brilliant sunshine of the early autumn day in the living room and turned on a soft light near a divan.

Helen's eyes went to the light instinctively, but instead of seeing as she expected, Leonard sitting under it, she found herself staring into the bemused countenance of "one of his women."

The phrase flashed through her mind unsummoned, perhaps as an echo of thoughts she had entertained on the train.

She recognized Carmel at once—as the woman she had seen with Brent when she and Shallimar had gone to the Ritz.

She did not know who she was or what she was, but she felt an antipathy rise within her even before the woman spoke. Another time she'd have mistaken it for jealousy; now she believed it to be annoyance over a third person's presence when she desired a private talk with Leonard.

"I took the liberty of asking you to come up because even Toto, or POCO or SOTO or whatever his man's name is, doesn't seem to know what has become of Leonard," Carmel said, indicating by a nod toward the slightly that she expected Helen to sit beside her on the divan.

Helen stood, thinking swiftly. "Have you an engagement with him?" she asked pointblank, deciding that if such were the case she would go and come back later.

"My dear, one never has engagements with Leonard," Carmel answered patronizingly. "One catches him on the wing. But, of course, possibly in your case..." Her voice rose on a mocking interrogatory note.

Helen returned her glance with the steadiness of steel but inwardly she was quaking lest the irritation she felt should show in her face.

She turned and took a seat in an armchair near the table, and quite nonchalantly turned on a second lamp. She would not go now and appear to this insolent woman to be running away from her jibes.

"Smoke?" Carmel asked, taking out a platinum case and extending it to Helen.

The latter shook her head. With considerable ostentation Carmel put the case aside, rose and walked over to a desk and dug a long amber cigarette holder out of a drawer.

utes went by and Helen sat calmly turning the pages of the magazine (though nothing but calm beneath her exterior). "The girl looks a decent sort," she told herself as the nucleus of a scheme to thwart Brent began to form in her mind. "She won't stand for much dirt."

"She put down her cigarette holder and looked at a clock on the mantel. It was very close to 12 o'clock.

"Leonard invited me to lunch," she remarked offhandedly, ending in a laugh. "Were you included?" she added, compelling herself to speak graciously.

Helen saw no reason to lie to her, let her think what she would. "As you suggested," she said evenly, "I am trying to catch Mr. Brent on the wing on business that is very important to him."

"Of course," Carmel agreed pleasantly, "but no doubt he will wish you to stay to lunch. Generally he leaves it to me to see that there is something to eat." She reached up and took off her hat, adding carelessly, "I go with you."

Helen began then to wonder as much about Carmel as Carmel had been wondering about her. Why should this woman take other women so casually in regard to Leonard? Had she some secret she told to him that gave her security?

Helen discarded the thought as unworthy of herself and an injustice to Brent. She knew, she told herself, that the women of his acquaintance were colorful individuals, but all concerned with conventionalities. But Leonard had professed to love only her; he could not be interested in anyone else.

However, when Carmel proceeded to take off her wrap and went into the tiny kitchen, where Helen could hear her humming and making greens to do with pots and pans, she could not remain blind to the significance of the woman's conduct. Certainly she was no stranger to the place.

But what of that? Leonard was a Bohemian in many ways. And she, Helen, she'd heard that many smart women got a thrill in playing around in a bachelor's kitchen when wild horses couldn't drag them near their own.

Presently Carmel came out to the living room and opened up a small table, over which she spread a luncheon cloth that she had brought from the kitchen.

Helen recognized it as one that she herself had made for Leonard at a time when she hoped to keep house for him. She viewed it with mixed feelings as Carmel smoothed it in place and laid the napkins on it.

"We really may be disappointed, you know," Carmel volunteered gaily. "Shall I shake up a cocktail to help us bear it if Leonard doesn't return?"

Helen declined. Carmel did not laugh at her. Helen's poise was beginning to impress her. She could better have understood a girl who threatened to make a scene. For she did not believe that bluff about important business for a minute.

She was a bit quieter herself when she went back to the kitchen to grind the coffee that she knew how to make so well.

When Carmel had an axe to grind she never discussed any helpful detail. Brent was particular about his food, coffee especially. He insisted that it must be freshly roasted and freshly ground to be fit to drink. He had found a coffee shop not far away where he left an order for fresh coffee to be delivered to him daily, and he always had it ground just as it was to be used.

But even with this care he was disappointed when his man prepared it for him. Carmel had found him in a temper over the matter one day and had insisted upon making coffee as she had learned to make it from an Egyptian gentleman who had become Parisian. Brent had been delighted, and Carmel had not forgotten.

She would have it just right for him today—everything else too—fer when she had put into effect the plan that was in her mind she would need every aid at her command to appease him.

While she worked she left the kitchen door open so that she might listen for the sound of the doorknob that would announce Brent's return. He wasn't, she knew, in the habit of using his key. And she had sent his man away on a small errand in order to have an excuse to open the door herself.

Suddenly she appeared in the living room and remarked that if Leonard did not come soon he would probably not come at all. "You will find a well supplied dressing table in the guest room if you wish to touch up a bit before lunch," she added airily. "Leonard is such a thoughtful person."

Helen struggled with a desire to sit stonily in her chair, but conquered it with a laugh. "Thank you," she said with emphasis, "but that implied she was ready to accept this woman's assumption of the duties of hostess in Leonard's home. Then her voice changed and she said in a tone that startled even Carmel's blunted sensibilities: "By the way, what's your name?"

"Does it matter?" Carmel retorted rather warmly.

Helen shrugged. "It's a bit stupid not to know, since you appear to be entertaining for my host."

Carmel did not answer. She had turned back to the kitchen where Helen could hear her making a great deal of noise. Helen smiled, but not in mirth.

She knew she had succeeded in concealing from the woman's eyes her own perturbation, but she did not gloat over it. Caught in the drift of gossip herself she had no wish to make another suffer unnecessarily.

She was infinitely relieved when

BY SISTER MARY

Cool mornings make many mothers feel that children of school age should have a hot drink of some sort for breakfast. Coffee being taboo for growing boys and girls, just what to serve becomes more of a problem.

A cereal drink served with hot milk may appeal to older children, but young children from six to ten or twelve years of age need a drink containing more actual food value than the cereal beverage unless it is made wholly of milk.

Cocoa, which is really chocolate with some of the fat extracted, makes an excellent flavoring for the cup of hot milk suitable for the juniors' breakfast.

Their Chemical Action

Although cocoa does contain a substance which is related to the caffeine in tea and coffee, when it is used merely as a flavoring for milk there is not enough of this substance present to cause any stimulating effect.

Cocoa itself contains fat, starch and protein, and when whole milk is used and sugar in added the result is a drink of high food value, nourishing and wholesome.

Since cocoa contains starch, care must be taken in making of the drink. Thorough cooking is necessary for the starch but undesirable for the milk, so it should not be added to the cocoa until this has been well cooked.

The "skin" which sometimes forms on top of cocoa is the albumen of the milk coagulated by heat. Care in not overheating the milk does much to prevent this. Beating with a Dover beater after the milk is added increases the smoothness of the drink and removes the "skin" if the milk was allowed to scald.

Chocolate and cocoa may often be used interchangeably, but cocoa is easier to digest and makes a better beverage for children especially.

Almost everyone now realizes that an infected food handler can pass his disease on to other people. Unfortunately, legislation and the enforcement thereof for the control of food handlers has not been efficiently developed in most communities. Obviously, physical examination of every person who handles food in any way in a restaurant, hotel, or barbecue emporium is an almost impossible task.

It is not necessary to know, of course, whether or not the food handler has flat feet or bowlegs. It is important, however, to know that he is not subject to active tuberculosis, septic sore throat, diphtheria, or chronic tonsillitis; that he has not typhoid fever; that he has not a communicable skin disease, or in the case of males, at least, any venereal disease.

Most states are beginning to demand at least certification of every food handler that he is free from the conditions mentioned. In order to have such certification, it

The WOMAN'S DAY

"If you want to make a hit with Clara Bow, don't mention 'It' in her presence, warns Dan Thomas, Hollywood correspondent.

Doubtless many other women would like to inscribe ditto marks under Clara's request.

For that insignificant little five-cent word has been so overworked in recent years that it has no meaning at all, and is just a blanket expression for any form of feminine attraction.

Not only is the word cheap, shop-worn, tattered and torn, but the fact that one word is so utterly adequate to describe all the infinite variety of woman's charm puts a crimp in feminine ego.

I remember a middle-aged man—a literary celebrity he was—viewing with obvious disapproval a party that was predominantly flapper and commenting scathingly upon the younger set.

"You would think," said he, "that they had discovered sex in this generation, the way they high hat an old timer like myself. And you would think that sex appeal was something discovered by Eleanor Glyn, except something as old as Eve."

"When I was in college, we recognized sex appeal—I'll say we did—but we called it coquetry, flirtation, allure, fascination, dash, verve, or any one of a dozen terms. And we had sirens in those days, too. Today they are just 'hot babies,' and any form of charm is 'it.'"

Sex Appeal Minus

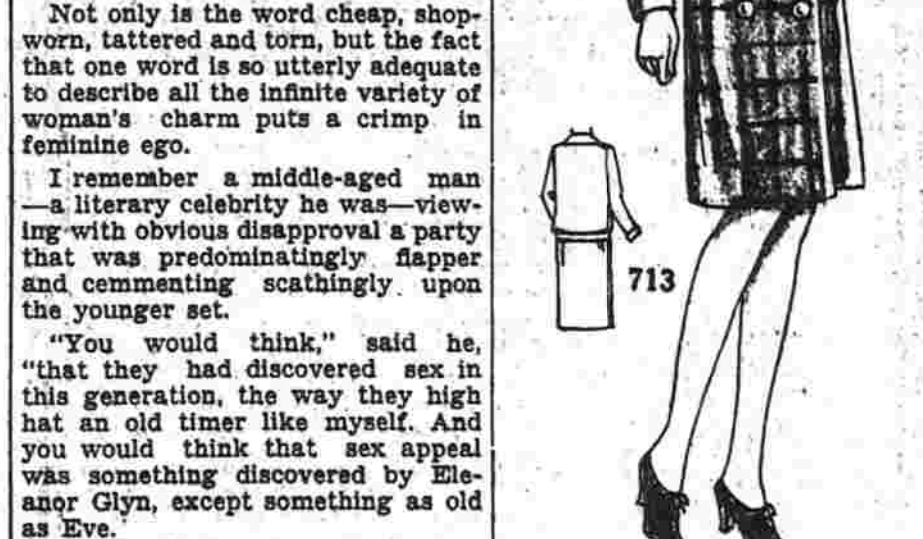

He went on to say that the young men of today were the laziest of suitors because women demanded no gallantry of them, scorned it, in fact, and that girls, in spite of all, were supposed to know about sex, were the least captivated by it, had been at any time in their history.

I think he was a little unfair and naturally so. He was having a rather dull time, since none of the smart looking youngsters were paying much attention to him, and the personal bias may have influenced his words. It takes youth to understand youth, and no one can really speak for any generation but his own.

We live in a canned age, but must we can our language, as well as our songs and our speeches?

With a whole dictionary of words to draw on, and with all the poetry that has been written extolling her many moods and her infinite variety, can't we heed to Clara's appeal—and put some more words into circulation?

"It" needs a rest.

DARLING COAT DRESS.

A jaunty little model for girls of 8, 10, 12 and 14 years is illustrated in feather-weight tweed in beige and brown. A brown suede belt denotes fashionable raised waistline. The collar is of plain beige woolen which is repeated in turn-back cuffs.

It is double breasted, trimmed with huge beige and brown bone buttons.

The entire effect is smartest ever. It is made at a small outlay, and practically only side and shoulder seams to join. The fronts are underlaid and rolled into revers with the attached straight collar.

Style No. 713 will instantly appeal to the girl with sophisticated taste.

It is most attractive too in navy blue wool crepe with vivid red suede belt and matching bone buttons, with collar and cuffs of white crepe de chine or of white pique.

Kashmir printed wool jersey in copenhagen blue colouring trimmed with harmonizing plain blue jersey is very smart.

Plain wool jersey, homespun, tweed printed silk, crepe de chine, velvet, cotton broadcloth ideal selections.

Pattern price 15 cents, in stamps or coin (coin is preferred.) Wrap coin carefully.

We suggest that when you send for pattern, you enclose 10 cents additional for a copy of our new Fall and Winter Fashion Magazine.

One of Chanel's new sport suits is of rich, mahogany red. The plain, crew neck is collarless and the tucked-in blouse has cut ruby and rhinestone buttons up one side from the belt-line to the shoulder. The skirt is old high-shoe length.

A stunning new lounging pajama set is of white satin, with an amusing little sleeveless bodice much be-trimmed in exquisite deep ecru lace. The flaring pajamas are edged in lace and the three-quarters coat is lace from the waistline down.

A brown hazard sandal has a graceful strap, piping and heel of brown kid, edged in gold.

While worsteds grow soft and pliable as silk crepes, the failles and other tartans and the new satins assume a stiffness that is much more dignified than last season's silks. These are excellent for the new, more normal modes.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Along about the fourth and fifth year, when a child discovers that he is a unique personality, and begins to experiment with the big world about him, a very common reaction is that of secrecy.

When a child of this age begins to hide things and hug bits of knowledge to his heart, things that no one else knew in secret, he is trying to break him of the habit, and no reason to worry. It's part of his experiment to set his own ego apart from that of the other people, but rather kindly and tactfully aid him. Keep the little secrets he whispers to you and pretend to be very much interested and surprised.

The thrill will wear off after he establishes the fact of his own importance to his small satisfaction. When he is ready for school the chances are that he'll not be at all interested in secrets any more.

But there is one thing that mothers should watch out for: that is a different sort of clandestine urge from the natural secrecy found in character development.

Pleasure in Concealment

It is the deliberate action of a child to conceal what he doesn't want other people to know, because he finds more pleasure in concealment than in openness.

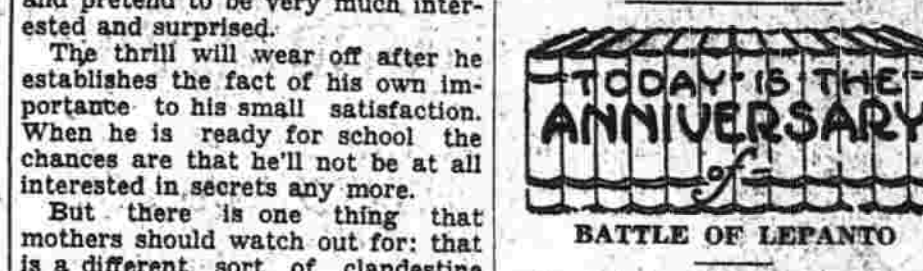

Now it must not be supposed that children fall into secrecy only from motives of misbehavior, although that is, I suppose, the commonest cause. But there is a sort of sensitive, shy, rather suspicious sort of child who can't stand the sun of observation. He is unhappy when people look at him or notice what he does.

He should rather play alone, or perhaps with one companion who understands him. He prefers quiet little games off in a corner somewhere, or like one little chap I knew in a sort of Peter Pan house up in an apple tree where he kept his tin soldiers and toys. Such a child doesn't like to play in a group of children.

Little minds are strange. Just what causes this love of the secret, solitary life is hard to say. Sometimes it is an over-sensitiveness that sometimes starts with teasing, ridicule, or unkindness, and sometimes it is there with simply no apparent cause at all.

"Solitary Fruits Are Sweetest"

In most human beings there is just enough of the old Nick to make good the saying that stolen fruits are sweetest. It is an easy transition from bashful secretiveness to other forms less innocent. That is why I advise mothers to carefully but per-

BATTLE OF LEPANTO

On October 7, 1571, a desperate naval battle was fought, between the combined fleets of Spain, Venice and the Papal States and a powerful Turkish armada.

The battle, which was fought near the Curzolari Islands, at the western entrance to the Gulf of Patras, was brought about by the determination of Sultan Selim II to wrest Cyprus from Venice.

The fleet of the states united in the Holy League consisted of about 200 sail, of which nearly 200 were great galleys. The allied fleet was commanded by Don John of Austria, the natural brother of the king of Spain. The Ottoman fleet, under Ali Pasha, was of equal numerical strength.

The battle resulted in victory for the Christian fleet. About 8000 Christians were killed while the Turks lost 20,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners.

More than 100 galleys were taken, besides a large number sunk. Some 12,000 Christian galley slaves were liberated by this victory.

The engagement, however, failed in its chief object, in that before the battle was hardly under way news came of the successful invasion of Cyprus by the Turks.

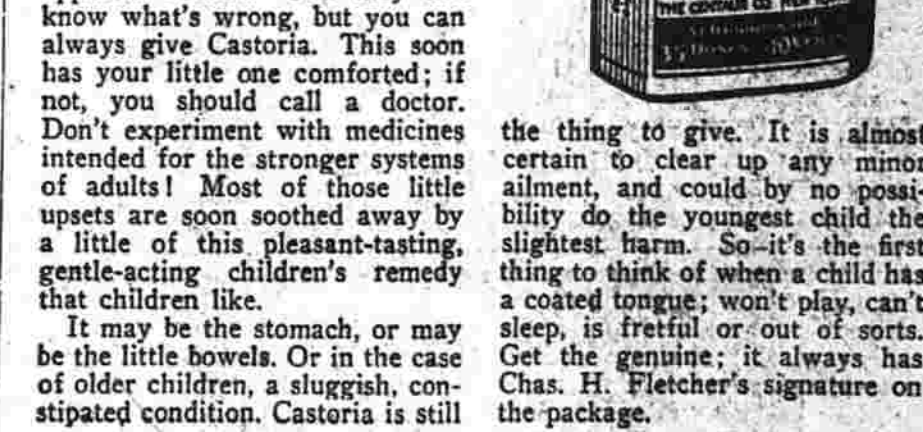

With one side drooping, low and the other flared back, a hunter's green velour hat makes a very soft frame for the face. Matching green satin ribbon cuts through the flares and knots a wee bow in the back.

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Monday, October 7. Since the world did not come to an end at the time scheduled by the erratic Mrs. Watta, the villagers of Chomplins Corners are joyfully planning to attend a taffy pull at the general store when the Red Devils appear before the microphones of the WJZ chain at 9:30 Monday night. The occasion will be more than a mere social event and has a philanthropic purpose behind it. Candy will be sold by the ladies for a worthy cause recently discovered by Mrs. Templeton Jones. The proceeds will be used for the relief of the starving batik workers of Java. Beatrice and Ruth Glenn, harmonium crooners, who have been heard as outstanding radio artists for the past year, will sing their soft harmonies with Rosy and His Gang during the broadcast through WJZ and allied broadcasters at 7:30. Both girls are famous on both vaudeville and musical comedy stages. Last year Ruth was co-star of the Cleveland symphony orchestra.

FINDS CHESTNUTS FREE FROM SIGN OF BLIGHT

Principal Thomas Bentley of the Eighth District schools has had under observation for some time a perfectly healthy appearing burr-bearing chestnut tree not far from his home in Bolton. Yesterday, knowing that it was time for the nuts to be ripe, he visited the tree for the purpose of gathering as many as possible of them with a view to turning them over to the state forester. He found that the squirrels had anticipated him to such an extent that the remaining nuts were comparatively few. He managed to collect several handfuls, however, and this morning said he intended to send them to Forester Filley at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station at New Haven. Presumably they will be planted there. The nuts gathered by Mr. Bentley appeared to be not only free from any indication that they were the fruit of a variety of tree cursed with the worst blight ever known to American forestry, but they were also entirely free from the worms that formerly infested these nuts before the trees blighted. Mr. Bentley expressed the belief that quite possibly the long period of practical extinction of the chestnut tree had starved out the worm pest for good.
