

PARK DEVELOPMENT PLANS SUBMITTED

Commission Makes Public Improvements Suggested In Center Springs Area by Landscape Architect; Outline Shows Desire to Treat Natural Advantages of Section in Practical Manner

Manchester's park commission today released for publication a proposal for the development of Center Springs Park. The proposal which is published herewith was drawn by Thomas H. Desmond, a landscape architect of wide reputation living in Simsbury. The entire proposition and the sketch accompanying it is tentative, but as it now stands embodies the suggestions of the park commission for the development of the property. The plans are now submitted to the townpeople for their consideration. Action towards bringing about the suggestions rests with the commission, the Board of Selectmen and town meeting.

Town Property.

The Center Springs Park property is owned by the Town of Manchester. The major portion was deeded as a gift by Cheney Brothers 12 years ago and additional property was given by the Hilliard family. At various times under the supervision of the park commission some improvements have been made in the area but most of it is in its original state. The lake area has been begun and most of the paths are fairly well defined. A stone stairway on the Main street side has been constructed in such a way that it can be embodied in almost any proposal for further development of the park.

Should the park commission and Selectmen feel that public opinion favors completing the work at the park the matter will probably be put before town meeting. The Selectmen do not feel that the entire project should be attempted at once. It is their proposal that the work be done in stages. An appropriation of $10,000 for street or 10 years would complete the plan suggested in this article.

Horace F. Murphy.

The Sketch.
The proposal which is carried in today's issue of The Herald is accompanied by a sketch printed on Page 7. In following the suggested plan outlined by Mr. Desmond the reader should refer to the sketch. In order to simplify the drawing many of the features suggested are noted in the margins above and below the sketch. For example in referring to the "outdoor theater" the reader should follow the plan down and directly below the printed words he will find the location of the feature designated. In referring to features

Oriental Silk Expert and Son of Czarist Officer Come to Manchester as Guests of Cheney Executives.

When the Empress of Canada docked in Victoria, British Columbia, on Dec. 2 last, two of the passengers aboard were listed as George Chernetz and Ralph Buchanan from Shanghai, China, enroute to New York. Christmas Day these same two young men drove into Manchester in an automobile bearing China markers, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cheney and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Huber, completing a journey that began on Nov. 18 at Shanghai. Both young men are connected in various capacities with the United States Testing Company, interested in the culture of China silks.

Seen at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Huber yesterday, Mr. Buchanan talked about his thirteen years in China in the interests of the silk industry. Mr. Chernetz, a member of the Shanghai staff of the Company, is the son of a high officer of the former Russian Czar's imperial army. It is his intention to enter Loomis Institute in Windsor, this state in the near future.

The Striving of China.
Mr. Buchanan told of the rise of the Nationalistic regime in southern China, resulting in the taking over of many projects hitherto supervised by either Europeans or Americans. In this connection it is expected that sericulture will be taken over by the Chinese, who have been shown the modern methods of silk worm culture in an effort to produce, by an elimination process, only the best and most virile of silk worms. China, old as it is in the silk industry, has been taught many things heretofore unrevealed to the original mind.

Great Britain has suffered because of stand taken by the new government in taking over interests formerly controlled and supervised by the western world. Mr. Buchanan said. Other countries with proportionate interests have also been hard hit.

"The governing body of China today has accomplished much," explained Mr. Buchanan. "Many creditable improvements have been made, together with many other outlined for future action. But to my mind it will take another generation to place China as a whole on a stable footing suitable for the proper handling of governmental

POLICE CAPTURE BANKER'S SLAYER

Arrested After Five Hour Chase and Placed in Jail for Safe Keeping.

Bowling Green, Ky., Dec. 28.—(AP)—One of three bandits who Thursday shot and killed John Robert Kirby, Smith's Grove bank president after robbing the bank at Oakland, this county, was captured here early this morning and taken in an auto to Nashville, Tenn., for safe keeping.

The man, Elmer Grayson, a former resident of Indianapolis was found in the home of Blaine Duff, a connection by marriage after officers had been close on his trail for five hours.

Britain's Big Dirigible To Undergo An Operation

London, Dec. 28.—(AP)—As a sequel to its recent trials Great Britain's giant new dirigible, the R-101, will undergo among other modifications a surgical operation. Hoover Breaks Old Precedent to Return Good Will Visit of Mexico's New Chief President Hoover broke a custom as old as the Presidency when he personally returned this call which President-elect Pasqual Ortiz Rubio of Mexico made upon him in Washington. They are pictured above at the White House, with President-elect Rubio, left, on his mission "strictly of social good will," and next to him President Hoover, Senora Rubio, Mrs. Hoover and Mexican Ambassador Manuel C. Telez. Later, as a cordial gesture toward Mexico, President Hoover set aside the precedent that no Chief Executive shall visit any official less than the actual head of another state.

NOW ABLE TO CREATE PLANT RUST AT WILL

Scientist Describes Latest Discovery in Plant Diseases; "Super Corn" Soon to Be Grown by Farmers.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28.—(AP)—New strains of destructive wheat rust, made at will in the laboratory, were described today by American and Canadian "plant doctors" before the American Phytopathological Society, meeting with the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Margaret Newton, Thorvaldur Johnson, and A. N. Brown, pathologists in the Dominion rust research laboratory, Winnipeg, described the production of new rusts which look like others, but behave in very distinct manners when inoculated into various plants.

Nectar was mixed from the pustule of one strain of rust on a barley leaf with that of another strain on another leaf. Many different forms, unlike the parents, resulted.

New Plant Diseases
The sudden development in nature of new forms of the dangerous disease, the pathologists said, makes the eradication of barbery all the more imperative, since it is on the barley alone that the crossing can occur in nature.

Similar citations of the danger of new diseases were brought by Dr. E. C. Stakman of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station, and M. N. Levine and R. U. Cotter, pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Super Corn"
A promise of "super corn" for agriculture was made before scientists meeting with the American Society of Agronomy by Henry Wallace, editor of Wallace's Farmer, and Dr. H. K. Hayes of the University of Minnesota.

"By the new method of inbreeding," Wallace said, "we are given such a mastery over corn that we can control it in almost any direction that we think desirable."
"By 1940 we are going to have corn with a stiffer stalk; ear height is going to be brought down to a uniform average of about three and one-half feet; and we may find it worth while to devise a corn with a much stronger tassel."
"The newer method of corn breeding will be the first great contribution of the science of genetics to practical farming. We shall not have been fully successful until we are able to produce as much corn on 40,000,000 acres in the corn belt as we now are producing on 50,000,000 acres."

LINDYS LEAVE OHIO

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife were visitors here for an hour between 3:30 and 4:30 yesterday afternoon. They conversed with friends among the officials and pilots and the field but none of the casual airport visitors recognized the famous flyer. Questioned as to his destination Col. Lindbergh said: "Oh, I'm just pushing along." He left for an unannounced destination at 4:30 p. m. yesterday.

Ill Several Weeks

Pantages, who is in jail here pending decision of his appeal from the conviction and penitentiary sentence to one to five years, has been ill several weeks. He petitioned for release under bond on the ground that jail life was menacing his health. Physicians who examined him at the request of his attorneys testified that he was in danger of becoming gravely ill.
This was the second time Pantages has been denied liberty under bond. The court refused immediately after conviction to admit him to bail.
Judge Fricko said he believed Pantages was suffering more from "prison psychosis" than from any pathological cause.

CHINA PLANS MANY REFORMS, LEADER SAYS

Shanghai, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the Nationalist government, announced today through Kuomintan, the official Nationalist news agency, that he had completed "a comprehensive program providing for sweeping political reforms in the administration of the nationalist government."
The announcement said the program would be made public on New Year's Day. At the same time Chiang issued a statement to the press of China in which he encouraged free and constructive criticism and discussion by newspapers throughout the country of things relating to party and government affairs.

CHRISTMAS TREES SADDEN HIS LIFE
Drys Not Satisfied With Report of Law Enforcement Commission; Board Makes Public Its Progress.

Washington, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The prospective prohibition report of Hoover law enforcement commission only partially satisfies the demands of "dry" Senators who have been clamoring for information on the progress of the commission's survey.

An effort will now be made, Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, said today to break down the policy of secrecy under which the commission has been operating and bring about the substitution of open hearings.

Report Ready
The commission has prepared for publication a report on its prohibition conclusions so far as its survey has gone.

This takes cognizance of four conditions believed at error and recommendations will be made for legislation to relieve congestion in Federal courts; centralize control of the border traffic now shared by the Coast Guard, Customs, narcotics and immigration services; unify and centralize administration of the "dry" laws in the Justice Department by transferring to it the agencies now in the Treasury; and codify the Federal laws dealing with prohibition.

PREHISTORIC SKULL IS ON EXHIBITION

Dr. Andrews Says Discovery Is Most Important in History of Evolution.

Peiping, China, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The skull of the new "Peking Man" recently discovered by a Chinese geologist working in quarries near Peiping, was shown publicly today for the first time at a special meeting of the geological survey of China.

The skull, scientists here say, is the most complete find of its kind in history and they point to the fact that the entire brain case is intact, which is not the case in the Pilt-down man and other near-dawn men discoveries.

Prof. Amadeus William Grabau, chief paleontologist of the Chinese geological survey, has expressed belief that the skull is the nearest approach to the so called missing link that has yet been unearthed, while Roy Chapman Andrews, noted explorer, has expressed the opinion that the discovery is the most important in the whole of human evolution. Mr. Andrews had nothing to do with the discovery, nor the explorations, which have been carried on by the survey with funds from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Million Years Old
Scientists here estimate that the skull is more than a million years old. This conclusion is drawn from the geological surroundings in which the skull was unearthed, which is a splendid state of preservation and, as shown today, was still imbedded in part of a block of travertine in which it was found.

The skull was brought into the assembly room in the arms of Dr. Davidson Black, former director of the geologic research laboratory of the geological survey here. Dr. Black, who is also a professor of anatomy at the Rockefeller Foundation hospital, handled the delicate piece of bone with care. He placed it on a table while the spectators eagerly craned their necks. Among those present were Dr. Sven Hedin, the noted Swedish scientist and explorer, Prof. Charles Wilson Brown, head of the geology department of Brown University, and Prof. Grabau.

Found By Chinese
Dr. Black gave full credit for the discovery to W. C. Pei, youthful Chinese member of the geological survey who unearthed the skull on Dec. 2 on the last day of the season's work.

Dr. Black called particular attention to the fact that the skull was found in a position which was not only in their night clothes and were given shelter by neighbors living across the street. The house is located almost on the site where the first settlers established Windsor in 1633. Damage was about $5,000.

WINDSOR MAN RESCUES HIS FAMILY AT FIRE

Hangs from Window Sill of Second Floor and Drops to the Ground.

Windsor, Conn., Dec. 28.—(AP)—By hanging from the window sill of the second floor of his house and then dropping to the ground, Philip Pickman was able to save himself and his family from being burned to death when their house caught fire at 3 o'clock this morning. After man handed her husband their two small children, one of whom is ill with tonsillitis and then she swung out on the window sill in the same manner that her husband had and he caught her, so that she was not injured. The entire family were clad only in their night clothes and were given shelter by neighbors living across the street. The house is located almost on the site where the first settlers established Windsor in 1633. Damage was about $5,000.

PRINCE GOES HUNTING

Melton Mowbray, Eng., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The Prince of Wales came into the hunting field today for the first time in several months, and rode with the Belvoir hounds. He came over from Sandringham with his brother, the duke of Gloucester, after a Christmas spent with King George and Queen Mary at a family reunion.

The "call of the hunt" apparently has proved too strong for the prince after his quiet Christmas at Sandringham. It had been supposed he had foresworn hunting, to hounds as well as cross-country horse racing.

POLICEMAN SHOT IN LIQUOR RAID

New Haven, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Shot while making a liquor raid, Patrolman Raymond Zoller, 40, of West Haven was in a serious condition in a hospital in the right arm by Dante Palmi, 30, at whose home three barrels of wine were seized. Palmi was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. Zoller's arm was amputated last night and today hospital authorities said his condition was poor. He suffered seriously from loss of blood. Three Make Raid. William Miller and Joseph Fox armed with a search warrant, went to Palmi's West Haven home last night. While two attempted to gain entrance through the front door, Zoller guarded the rear of the house. Palmi came out the rear way and found Zoller waiting for him and opened fire. Police said Palmi obtained a .12 gauge double barreled shot gun and fired. Miller and Fox heard the report and ran to the back of the house and placed the man under arrest. A subsequent search netted the wine.

SHANGHAI FOLK HERE ON CHINA ANTE PLATES

(Continued from Page One.) Affairs. The new China is progressive but in my view is somewhat regrettably so as a whole. Modern But Tiresome. Shanghai, known as the greatest cosmopolitan city of the East is not wholly unlike New York according to Mr. Buchanan. Of the night life of China's greatest city, Mr. Buchanan says: "Shanghai at night has its cabarets, with bobbed haired waitresses and men dancing and eating in all the splendor of the oriental lighting. It is a strictly modern city in every way but one soon tires of it. It just does not seem quite real amid all the squalor and filth of the surrounding country." "The boulevards of Shanghai are comparable to American roads for some twenty miles outside the city. There they dwindle to mere trails over which the coolies shuffle in their age-old gait with their heavy burdens." "The Western-educated Chinese exerts a powerful force in the Provisional government and the consular and diplomatic service contains the best of China's deft propagandists. "Our trip from Japan was perfect," continued Mr. Buchanan. "The car was sent ahead aboard the Dollar liner 'President Jackson' and we took passage on the 'Empress of Canada' arriving at Victoria, B. C., on Dec. 2. By easy stages we motored to Seattle, to San Francisco and skirted Los Angeles on our way to New York via the Bankhead Highway through Texas. We found the roads in Arizona in very bad shape, rutted and worn with much travel. We visited the Roosevelt and Coolidge dams in the Southwest and was especially impressed with the quiet prevailing in that section. "We covered a distance of 5,200 miles from Victoria to New York and very little trouble until Marshall, Ill., was reached. There a heavy storm caused us some worry and hard driving in deep snow piled high above the radiator. But we pulled into New York having had but one puncture enroute from the coast. We used a total of 464 gallons of gasoline at a cost of $122 and drove, between us, a total of 150 hours. Mr. Buchanan speaks two of the major dialects of China and considers China his home after more than a dozen years residence there. He will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Huerter here after New Years, when he will return to New York.

"In the present stage of its preparation," Dr. Black said, "it thus becomes apparent that the brain case has been almost completely preserved, while most of the facial region would be lacking." Mr. Andrews, who had a private view of the skull last week in the Rockefeller hospital where the skull is being kept in a safe said: "The skull will settle once and for all many points about the early human type which heretofore have been in dispute as it is so nearly complete giving scientists much to work on. It is more complete than anything of the kind yet discovered." "The skull was found deep in a cave, nearby were many other bones, chiefly animals, but no tools and so signs of fire were discovered indicating that it was the skull of a man living prior to the discovery of tools and fire. Many of the bones found were those of hyenas and from this it was deduced by some of the scientists that men and animals might all have lived in the same cave.

OPENING STOCKS

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Stock prices drifted downward on a renewal of selling pressure at the opening of today's market. Allied Chemical dropped 2 3/4 points and Columbia Gas, American Smelting, Safeway stores, Union Carbide and Westinghouse Electric yielded a point. General Electric was one of the few strong spots, opening 1 1/2 points higher.

ROCKVILLE

Mayor Opposes Raise. Inaction is being blamed for killing or delaying the increase in the firemen's salaries. It has also been charged up to failure to advertise in conformity with the city charter. It is pointed out that there was ample time in which to advertise the ordinance twice before January 1, if there had been a disposition to do so. Advocates of the increase in pay of the officers and members of the Fire Department assert that Mayor Forster is opposed to the ordinance and has written an unfavorable endorsement on the back of the ordinance document. The reason for Mayor Forster's objection to the ordinance could not be learned today. The ordinance would grant a fifty per cent. increase to all officers and members of the department. This would raise the salary of Chief George B. Milne from $300 to $450, that of Assistant Chief Conroy from $200 to $300 and that of Superintendent of Fire Alarms Dickinson from $225 to $337.40. It is expected this subject will be aired at the next meeting of the common council, which will be held next Tuesday evening. Automobile Thefts. On Thursday night the police were notified that a Whippet sedan had been parked all day in Henry Park on Fox Hill. It was found to be in perfect condition and the thief had tossed a blanket over the radiator to keep it from freezing. The owner, who proved to be William Silk of 27 Center street, Stafford Springs, drove to Rockville for the car. A car owned by Ray Connors, who conducts a taxi and jitney service in the center of the city, was stolen during the early morning of Thursday. Connors was notified that his car was on the West Stafford end of the Crystal Lake road and that it had been overturned. He found his car lying on its side. It was not badly damaged. No clue has been found as to who the guilty parties may be. Burpee Corps Installation. The Burpee Women's Relief Corps will install officers in G. A. R. hall on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Florence Jackson, past president of Robert O. Tyler Corps of Hartford, will be the installing officer. Officers of the corps are: President, Mrs. Lillian Buckmaster; senior vice-president, Mrs. Evelyn Keeney; junior vice-president, Mrs. Mary Keeney; treasurer, Mrs. Anna Dickinson; chaplain, Mrs. Emmeline Ludwig; conductor, Mrs. Gertrude Milne; guard, Mrs. Nellie Willis. The appointive officers will be announced at the meeting. At 6 o'clock a members' supper will be served, with the A's and E's in charge. Plans will be held for the 44th anniversary, to be held Jan. 1.

Walter Smith was elected sashagamore, Francis Tournaud junior sashagamore, William Schield, collector of wampum, an office which he has held for the past 18 years, James Foley, chief of records, William Leggett, keeper of wampum and Alex Wilson, prophet. The remaining officers are appointive and will be filled at the next meeting. "New Haven's" Plans. New Haven, Dec. 28.—(AP)—A three year program of box car rebuilding having been completed by the New Haven road, announcement was made officially today that the railroad shops of the system here, would be closed next week, to be reopened on January 6 with a new line of construction work. The statement follows: "The box car rebuilding program which has been in progress at the New Haven shops since 1926 has now been completed. Next week the shops will shut down so far as production is concerned while a reduced crew of men are engaged in the work of re-arranging tools, equipment, etc., to take care of work under a reorganized schedule. "Washington, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Federal district attorneys have been instructed to comply with an order of 1922 which required the department permission must be asked before any cases, including prohibition prosecutions, are nolle prossed. "The move was looked upon as the government's latest step in its announced intention to tighten up enforcement of the dry laws. "The instructions to the district attorneys, sent out in the form of a letter, pointed out that all applications for permission to nolle prossed prohibition cases must be accompanied by the views of the representative of the prohibition department who is attached to the district attorney's office which makes the application. ST. BRIDGET'S CHURCH FINELY DECORATED Annual Manger Scene is Exquisitely Done—Rev. C. T. McCann Lover of Flowers. Worshipers at St. Bridget's church tomorrow morning will view an exquisitely decorated altar and sanctuary. In keeping with the custom every year at Christmas, the impressive manger scene, which always thrills the children is arranged at one side, the little figure of the babe resting on straw. Mary, Joseph, the Shepherds and Wise men are all represented by statues in the finest French pottery, beautifully molded and painted in soft and varied colors. All around the picture are evergreen trees, every twig and branch of which is covered with artificial snow. Rev. C. T. McCann whose love for flowers was known and who always takes great pleasure in personally planning and carrying out the decorative scheme, has concentrated his efforts this year on the sanctuary, with the exception of a few wreaths at the organ loft and elsewhere in the auditorium. Cedar and evergreen trees are used in profusion, with many large Christmas wreaths, brightened by a touch of red, the work of the rector's sister. Potted pink Lorraine begonias and numerous gold vases filled with fragrant pink and yellow tea roses, make the scene one of great beauty, and one that cannot fail to delight the eyes of all beholding it.

ABOUT TOWN

Although Santa Clause has gone back into hibernation for another eleven months, Hosi Companies No. 3 and 4 of the S. D. are to hold their Christmas parties tonight just the same in their own headquarters. Supper at each will be served at 6:30 and there will be a surprise entertainment in store for the fire fighters. The committee in charge of each affair has worked hard and anticipates a big success. Daughters of Liberty gave a jolly Christmas party in Orange hall last evening for the members and their children, a large number of whom were present. The lodge hall was beautifully decorated, a large tree occupying a central position in the room. Miss Margaret Bell played for the singing of Christmas carols by the children who gathered around the piano. Worthy Mistress Mrs. Annie Tedford gave the address of welcome. Dorothy Tedford and Florence Leemon played piano solos. Doris Stratton sang, accompanied by her brother, Milton Stratton; Madeline Bell and Mary Law sang vocal solos and Dorothy Johnson and Mary McCaughey gave readings. The Christmas story was read and Santa remembered the children with a gift, an orange and a box of candy. A supper for the members and children followed in the banquet hall. A party of assessors consisting of S. Emil Johnson, Sam Nelson, Thomas Lewis, tax collector George H. Howe and Joe Albiston, chief of the Manchester Green Fire Department caught 26 pickerel yesterday in ponds near Manchester. The big catch of the day was made by William Barrett and Allen Howe with a five pound pike measuring 24 1/2 inches long caught in a certain lake "out east."

KIP RHINELANDER GETS HIS DIVORCE

Las Vegas, Nev., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander, member of a wealthy New York family has obtained a divorce here from his wife with negro blood, Alice Jones Rhinelander. Rhinelander who came here a year ago and established his residence preparatory to the filing of divorce proceedings against the daughter of a New Rochelle, New York negro coachman was present when the decree was granted but had no comment to make, other than to say he intended to continue his residence at Las Vegas. The once wealthy New Yorker now estranged from his family, who was 22 years old at the time of his marriage five years ago to the 28 year old Alice Jones cited in his complaint that he had separated from his wife after he had "by her wiles and artifices taken advantage of his youth, and experience and so dominated her that he was induced to leave his family, until they became estranged from him, great mental distress and humiliation." The document further alleged that "habits and conduct of the defendant" had endangered his life.

BUILD ORGANIZATION FOR COTTON GROWERS

Washington, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Development of an airtight legal structure for the $30,000,000 cotton corporation, was the chief task of the Federal Farm Board and cotton representatives as they went forward today with the final draft of a charter and by-laws. Frank Buford of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, counsel for the national organization committee, was directed to confer with Stanley Reed, general counsel of the board, on a program that would comply with provisions of the Capper-Stevedad act and report to the subcommittee preparing the draft. Members said the board was substantially in accord on the aims of the corporation but that a number of highly technical questions of organization and operation were yet to be settled. Summary of Features. A summary of the more intricate features was outlined by Carl Williams, board member representing cotton. Heretofore, he said, co-operatives have been authorized to pay their members only a certain per cent of the value of their crop when delivered, the remainder being paid when the commodity moved into market channels. Now, it has been proposed that a national marketing board be set up to buy the product outright if so desired. Such procedure was authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Act and it now has become important to work out a program that will not conflict with state laws.

The racketeers had gone to the offices of President Michael Powers of the Tire Workers and Repair Vulcanizers Union, demanded $10,000 or Powers' life. If Powers did not pay they warned him, they would get him out of the way and take over the control of the union themselves, under the racketeer theory that might be right. Powers called on police for protection. Officers were concealed at the union headquarters when the racketeers arrived. Five minutes later a police ambulance drove up to take one police man, slightly wounded to the hospital and three bodies to the morgue. ZEP TO MAKE FLIGHT OVER POLE IN 1931

Berlin, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The Aeroarctic Society has issued a statement that the projected North Pole expedition in the dirigible Graf Zeppelin has been called off for 1930, but that it is fully expected the flight will be made in 1931. On Dec. 23 the Berlin offices of the Zeppelin company announced that the flight had been cancelled. Previously there had been a difference of opinion between Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the craft, and Captain Walter Bruns, secretary of the Aeroarctic Society, as to the feasibility of the proposed flight. Dr. Eckener said that neither the Zeppelin company nor the Aeroarctic Society had been able to obtain insurance and that the Zeppelin Works were turning to other projects for further demonstrating the serviceability of the Zeppelin as a means of conveyances over long distances. Among other things a flight to Latin America was being considered. Captain Bruns, however, said the Aeroarctic Society hoped to obtain insurance. Apparently these negotiations broke down.

Sunday School Lesson

Worship And Community Spirit

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 28, 1929. Monday, Dec. 29, 1929. The Community Spirit, Psa. 122:1-9; Heb. 10:23-25.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

The general title for this lesson is in the simpler form "Fellowship Through Worship." Both in the topic as given for young people and adults and in this simpler form it emphasizes the fact that there can be no real worship that is not associated with some form of fellowship or communal life.

Even the private prayer that the prayer in which the individual unsees by his fellow men pours out his soul in sincere expression to God, cannot be in any real sense merely personal or individualistic if it touches the real life of the one who prays; for real life is lived in a community.

No man liveth or dieth to himself. The community in which we live may be small, and we may make it much smaller by our own narrowness of outlook or by our prejudices, but, small or large, if we are to live at all we must live in relationships with other people.

Linking Men Together On its Godward side, also, worship is a matter of fellowship, for unless God be a mere image of our own thoughts, and that great spirit of creative power and goodness whose life is in the whole universe and in whom we live and move and have our being, in calling upon God, or in bringing our adoration to him, we inevitably link ourselves through him with our fellow men.

These thoughts were always dominant in the teaching and practice of the Old Testament seers and prophets. The social note is always found in their references to religion. With their worship of God is associated Zion, or Jerusalem, or Israel, or the House of Jehovah, but in whatever form the expression, or concept, there is always reference to some communal life. It was the very character of the prophet to feel his oneness with the people.

So, also, it is, that the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews as he looks back into the heart of the religion of Israel, lays profound stress upon this communal element in worship. True worship is associated with the assembling of people together that they may express their common faith, hopes, and aspirations and encourage one another to good works by love and devotion.

As fellowship and worship are so fully related, so they react upon each other. A large conception of fellowship brings a correspondingly large thought of God, and a deep and magnanimous spirit in worship. On the other hand, likewise, a large thought of God, a conception of him as the God of all peoples, the Lord of the whole earth and not a mere tribal deity, lifts worship to the plane of universality.

Worship is the one thing that ought to enlarge our horizons and make our hearts and minds both broad and deep. To know God is to Text: Psa. 122:1-9; Heb. 10:23-25. I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together. Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord.

For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces. For my brethren and companions' sakes, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

Because of the house of the Lord our God I will seek thy good. Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; for he is faithful that promised; and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works.

Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching.

partake of God's knowledge, to adore his love in sincerity and in truth is to seek to manifest that love; and to believe that God is a lover of all men is to assume toward men without distinction of rank, nationality, race, or color the attitude of love that God himself assumes.

The Joy of Worship If we were more concerned about reality in worship we should perceive these things, and we would not be content merely with its forms and expressions. Going to church would mean for us what it meant for this ancient psalmist. We should go up to the House of God with rejoicing and with a great sense of the glory and dignity of worship, because we realize that we were simply part of a vast company of those believing in the same God and facing life with the same prayerful aspiration. Going to church may not in itself be the highest and most important thing in the world, but the man who has never learned to go to church in the spirit of the psalmist with his prayer and quest in his heart has missed something very real and very noble in the experience of life.

This is a good lesson for the close of the year, but it is an even better lesson for the eve of the coming year, suggestive of good resolutions and new habits that would bring to our lives elements of joy, refreshing and glory, throughout the coming year, and the whole future of our lives.

The Exaltation of the Spiritual

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE. Intentional Sunday-School Lesson Text, Dec. 29. As His custom, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day.—Luke 6:16.

Recently much has been written concerning church going which fails to comprehend the vital and broad uses of public worship. Not self-intelligence, but the Word made our guide. It is in no way lacking. It contains every precept and doctrine needed to make the life perfect. It so fully clothes the mind of the Lord that it is rightly declared that in the Beginning the Word was with God, and the Word was God. It is so formed that He can send His light and life through its holy pages. Search it concerning the duty of churchgoing, and the answer will be found in the Lord, our Exemplar, who "As His custom was . . . went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day."

At no time in the world's history has the influence and example of churchgoing been needed more than it is in this age, when some are calling for a new and modern Bible adapted to the times, and others are trying to remove evils or excuse them by a false psychology, and others attempting to supplant religion with materialistic science. The Word of the Lord is not given to teach what man discover out for himself, but to reveal God, and give the light in which the soul, eternal life, and all spiritual facts can be rationally seen by those who desire truth for the purpose of living it, rather than merely to know it. Not until one transcends the stature of Jesus Christ can he sanely ask for a new Word. It is adapted to the times, for we have not spiritually eclipsed the life of the Lord.

The church, admitting the defects that characterize those who are of it, stands not for human frailty, but for the perfect Lord, without whom no flesh can be saved. The modern achievements of wealth, power, and natural science would bring only self-destruction, if spiritual power in man's mind does not dominate over all. Science may save the physical for a short time, but it cannot give eternal life or save the soul. The church holds aloft the true standard. Reflect upon a city without a church. It would be like a nation without schools or teachers. Jesus's custom was to go into the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Likewise His faithful followers should do.

New York Society Notes from the long streamers of smilax that festooned the walls. Blue balloons and silver birch twigs, suspended from the ceiling, completed the silver-and-blue Christmas-night color scheme. Christmas week was not without its weddings. The nuptials of Miss Lettys Curtis and Dr. Daniel Scott Jackson of Corbridge, Northumberland, England, which was of international interest, carried out a white color scheme in the gowns of the bridal attendants and the decorations of the Madison avenue Presbyterian church, where the ceremony took place. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Ronald Eliot Curtis, wore a simple gown of ivory panne velvet, made with a long full skirt which fell in a train of three tiers, the longest of which was bordered with Point de Venise lace. She wore a long tulle veil and carried a sheaf of lilies. Her bridal attendants were costumed in frocks of cream-colored taffeta, made with tight-fitting bodices, short puffed sleeves and long circular skirts. They wore long white gloves and small caps of gold and silver mesh. The only color note in the ensemble being the red anemones that sprinkled their bouquets of white carnations. The music lovers in society's ranks deserted the debutante galleys Friday evening to hear the "Messiah" presented by the Oratorio Society of New York in Carnegie hall. Hundreds of the fashionable filled the boxes during the oratorio which was conducted by Albert Stoessel. Jeannette Vreeland, soprano; Nevada van der Veer, contralto; Paul Altohouse, tenor, and Alexander Kisselburgh, bass, appeared as soloists. A setting representing the rock-bound coast of Norway, sloping down to the ice field of a fjord, has been chosen for the pageant in which hundreds of society's members will skate and dance. A Viking ship which is set afire and a battle in which sixty Vikings on skates will contend will be highlights of the spectacle. Members of society known for their skating ability are deep in rehearsals and fancy-dress costume designs. Others are planning to entertain box parties. While the larger part of New York's smart folk joined in the holiday galleys at home, many journeyed far afield to spend the winter season. Mrs. William G. Rockefeller was among the fashionable who embarked for Cuba, and the West Indies. Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt expects to leave shortly for Florida, and others of society's members are already dividing their time between the golf links at Pinehurst, N. C., and the bride paths at Aiken, S. C. Consider the alarm clock. It goes along giving people bad news for years and never has to have its face lifted.

CENTER SPRINGS PARK

The proposed plan of development for Center Springs Park, as presented by the landscape gardeners to the Park Commissioners in a report printed in the news columns of this issue, is worthy of the careful consideration of every citizen. We feel free to say that of a good many such schemes of beautification, produced by experts in this line and which we have had the privilege of examining at one time or another over many years, this is the sanest, most fascinating in its promise and at the same time most conservative in the matter of cost, results considered. Whether or not the plan is worked out in the near future the Park Board is to be congratulated on having selected, for the designing of this highly desirable improvement, an architectural firm which evidently combines with vision and engineering skill a very large measure of common sense; something, we take the risk of adding, which is scarcer among park landscapers generally than a willingness to disregard the item of cost.

This is perhaps not the easiest of times for the promotion of park development. Not so much because of lack of financial capacity on the part of the town as because the utilization of parks everywhere has suffered through the growth of the motoring habit. Nevertheless it would be a crying shame if Manchester did not very soon come to a realization of its tremendous luck in having such a remarkable recreational asset lying almost fallow in the middle of its settled area. It is doubtful whether in the whole of New England there is such another delightful natural park so situated, or one where every dollar of development money would return so much in satisfaction to the whole community.

We don't know how much the completion of the architects' scheme would cost, but we feel convinced that their plans do not involve the wasting of a single cent, and, judging the layout by some of relatively similar undertakings that we have seen, we are quite sure that there are some very celebrated landscaping concerns in the country which would have proposed the spending of five times as much money without getting one-fifth as desirable results.

The plans submitted for public consideration by the Park Commissioners are worthy of the fullest endorsement by the people of Manchester. And the more money the town can squeeze out of its annual budget for the not-too-belated completion of this program, the better. Finished, according to this design and these specifications, Center Springs Park would be something of which every Manchester resident could be not only proud but braggy proud.

We are unqualifiedly for the whole project, just as it stands.

A PROPOSITION

We have a suggestion to make to the Society Against the Eighteenth Amendment, whose motives we believe to be excellent and in whose tolerance and good sense we have reason to put considerable faith. It is this. Let that society, as representative of the best and most candid thought among the opponents of prohibition, put up to the Anti-Saloon League, the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, a proposition in effect as follows:

"The Society Against the Eighteenth Amendment pledges itself to support, to the very limit of its ability, every proposal to strengthen and reinforce the enforcement of the prohibitory laws; to use all its influence to enlarge popular and governmental efforts to put an end by legal measures to the traffic in alcohol; to support sincerely and to the extent of its ability any and every legal measure proposed by the adherents of prohibition, even to the degree of accepting every penalty advanced for violations of the liquor laws, no matter how drastic, and every request for greater appropriations and heavier taxation that seem to the dry organizations to be desirable; to aid in bringing about the appointment to high office in the enforcement field only such persons as may be nominated or fully endorsed by the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and the Methodist Board of Temperance and in filling every place on the enforcement organization with workers approved by these bodies.

"The Society pledges to align itself with the dry organizations in bringing pressure on Congress and the administration to provide whatever amounts of money and whatever numbers of personnel the dry bodies may deem necessary to fully enforce the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead and Jones laws, even though such amount of money exceed all other expenditures of the government and such numbers of personnel have to be greater than the roster of the army and navy and all present civil employes of the government combined.

"Provided: That if at the end of three years it cannot be demonstrated that the traffic in alcohol is 25 per cent less than it was in 1929 the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals will in turn agree that the experiment of national prohibition is not a complete success and will further agree to work earnestly and in good faith for temperance and regulation of the alcohol traffic along new and different lines."

We make this proposal because we believe we shall get nowhere in honest, uplifting work for temperance in this country so long as those agencies presumably most eager to attain these ends persist in adhering to the form rather than the substance of their idea, and that there will be no hope whatever for practical reform while the loudest advocates of reform remain infinitely more concerned with the vindication of a snap judgment arrived at in 1919 than with the splendid purpose of licking the vice of drunkenness. There seems to be no other way of inducing the dry organizations to undertake constructive temperance work in America—just possibly they may be tempted by a sporting proposition such as this.

WHEREFORE?

There is something just a bit puzzling about the Danny Murphy case. A bum was arrested in Chicago, apparently just for being a bum. He was in a fair way to go to the hoosegow when he dropped the word that he was a ballplayer. "By golly!" exclaimed a court attendant, "I thought I recognized that guy. Why, he's the Danny Murphy who used to be with the Philadelphia Athletics!"

Quizzed, the bum admitted that that's just who he was. Danny Murphy! Down and out like that! Well, well, well! So attendants cried and the judge cried and suspended sentence, while a purse was made up for the poor unfortunate who had fallen from such high estate.

Then Danny Murphy, once of the Athletics, who is prospering in Jersey City, sent word of protest to Chicago. Quickly the fact became crystal clear that the Chicago bum wasn't THE Danny at all. So they didn't give him the purse but flung him into the hoosegow after all. The gall of him—pretending to be Danny Murphy once of the Athletics!

Yet the bum's name was Danny Murphy and he too had played pro baseball in the state of Pennsylvania—not in Philly but in a bush town. We've been trying and trying to figure out why a bush leaguer who happens to get into the Big Show—we remember the Athletics Danny when he was a Connecticut bushier—is to be forgiven for being a bum and have a rose pinned on him, and why a bush leaguer who doesn't happen to make the Big Show can have no forgiveness for being a bum but gets slammed into the Bastille with loud and raucous execrations. As yet no answer has come.

STREET NUMBERS

Perhaps it has not been an unheard-of experience on the part of a Manchester merchant to be in Boston on business, to have to stay over night and to want to go to a theatre; to buy an evening paper, look over the theatrical advertisements, select his show and his theatre—and then try to find the theatre!

The advertisement never tells him even on what street it is, let alone the street number or the nearest street intersection. The Boston theatre manager assumes that everybody knows where his theatre is. He forgets that much of his business must come from strangers.

The probabilities are that this failure on the part of the managers to indicate the whereabouts of their establishments costs them, in the long run, many times as much in lost business as it would take to pay for an extra line of type in the ads.

But if you were to tell the same Manchester merchant, who in Boston became disgusted and stayed away from the theatre because there was no knowing where it was, that he is, in a great many cases, guilty of a similar sin, he would be astonished. Yet it is to be doubted if there is in Connecticut or anywhere else an otherwise snappy business district so deficient in its display of street numbers as Main street from the Center to the South terminal. Ever think of that, Mr. Business Man?

To be sure, almost every established Manchester resident knows just where every store is, in that area. But not all the potential customers are Manchester residents of long standing. Some are newcomers; many are from out of town. And "Main street" doesn't mean much when it's three quarters of a mile or thereabouts along the area indicated.

Some stores have street numbers that you can see, some have them secretively disposed, many haven't any. It would be good business if all of them had plainly displayed street number markings that could be read from a passing motor car. How about?

IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 28.—Only one woman in all the world has undisputed access to The Players' club, that strictly bachelor theatrical organization which never allows "the ladies" to enter its purple-brown portals on Gramercy Park. This is Mrs. Ignatius Booth Crossman, daughter of the great Booth—whose name stands at the head of any thespian list. Years ago a "Booth room" was created in the club. In years ago, the great Booth maintained rooms there, and if when his daughter cares to visit, these rooms are open to her.

There have been, I am told, but six exceptions made to the "no ladies" rule in the club's history. The celestine bars were lifted once for Sarah Bernhardt, whose chief interest was in looking upon the rooms once occupied by Booth. A tiny elevator, seldom used since the death of one of the greatest actors of all time, takes the visitor to the upper floor in which he lived. It's an old-fashioned elevator, scarcely capable of lifting more than a couple of persons at one time. Few, if any, try to use it. It operates by the old rope-pulling system, which makes difficult and particular weight. Generally the passengers give up and climb the stairs.

Tradition haunts the upper floors of this historic spot, which is one of the landmarks left in the Gramercy Park square. The walls are lined with paintings of the famous ones who have made their way to Olympus—Mantell, Booth and all the rest.

There are, perhaps, more tales of Mark Twain floating about than of any other old member, excepting Booth. One of the favorite tales concerns the inadequacy of Twain as a billiard player. He was to be kind to only fair. Arriving one Saturday afternoon, he found the place all but deserted. Finally he urged one of the few loungers to play with him. While the game was in progress, Howard Kyle, "kibitzer" in pool, billiards, bridge or poker, Kyle watched for a few moments from the side of the table. Twain (or Sam Clemens, if you prefer) was shooting a particularly bad game.

"Say, I've seen you shoot better than that," interrupted the spectator. Twain, chalking his cue, looked soberly at the "kibitzer" and then, in typical form, replied: "You see, I'm like a chameleon, I take my color from the opponent I play against."

The Booth library, by the way, generally is used for a reception room, when private parties are gathering. If you listen to the old-timers who still gather there, you'll hear the tale of how Richard Harding Davis invited a crowd of guests for a dinner party and then neglected to show up himself. The guests waited for a time and then sat down and ate heartily. Long about midnight, Davis remembered his party and called up. He explained that he had been traveling toward it, the dinner rendezvous, when he encountered William Harper, the publisher. Harper, according to the story, was so engrossed in one of Davis' stories that the author was touched. He wound up by going to another club with Harper, and all but forgot that he had a party of his own at another place.

FRUIT JUICES

There is a tantalizing and refreshing flavor to fruits, and for this reason they are often used in favoring drinks and desserts. Real fruit juices are not only pleasant to the appetite, but they possess real value in containing important minerals which are necessary for the body. All of the fruit juices possess these minerals which have a tendency to neutralize acidity in the body and add to the alkaline reserve of the blood. Three of the best fruit juices are orange juice, cider and grape juice. They possess a definite food value and many people notice an increase in energy soon after drinking these wholesome juices.

They may be used for eliminative fasts, as they do not require much effort of the body to digest them and they do not interfere with the work of the digestive tract. This is also the reason why many patients living exclusively on the fruit juice diets for a time are able to continue with their daily activities and often notice an increase in strength at the same time. There is a bit of difference, however, in the pure crushed fruit juices and the flavorings in artificial fruit drinks which can be manufactured at a much less cost, and most of the drinks and punches are made from artificial colorings, cane sugar, water and some acid, usually citric acid or phosphoric acid. It is a good idea to encourage drinking fountains to serve the real fruit juice which are health promoting, and to discourage them from selling the fruit imitations.

Almost any of the fruits can be made into wholesome drinks. Among these we find orange, lemons, grapefruit, limes, apples, grapes, pineapple, peaches, apricots, blackberries, loganberries, raspberries, strawberries, pomegranates, plums, and in fact any of the juicy fruits of the season. Pleasant drinks can also be made from any of the dried fruits by soaking them overnight in water and then slowly simmering the juice and the fruit for a few minutes, straining out the pulp. Among these we find unspiced peaches, figs, prunes, pears, dates, etc.

There are a number of vegetables which likewise make good drinks. For example the juice can be extracted from raw rhubarb and mixed with water and honey with perhaps a little beet coloring. The juice from beets can also be squeezed out and used as can sassafras root, licorice root, etc.

A very simple method of extracting the juice is first to mash the fruit with a potato masher or fork, or by running it through a grinder and then extracting the juice by squeezing it through a cloth bag. A potato ricer is sold on the market consisting of a perforated drum and a plunger inside. This type of ricer serves very well as a fruit press, as well as in fact any of the juicy fruits of the season. Pleasant drinks can also be made from small quantities of fruit juice are desired. For those who wish juice in larger quantities, there are several fruit presses and fruit mills, the latter grinding the fruit and separating the juice from the pulp. Every home should have some sort of fruit juice extractor. Fruit juice can also be bottled and pasteurized for future use, using just the same processes as you would in canning fruit.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Cysts on Head)
 Question:—T. J. writes: "I have three or four lumps on my head. They are about as big as marbles, and I can move them about with my fingers just like a little piece of loose bone under the skin. There is no pain, whatever, but would like to be rid of them. Would also like to know what causes them."
 Answer:—The cysts you write about as probably fatty tumors caused from an unnatural growth of fat cells accumulating in one group. Where there are as many as three or four of these growths it surely shows faulty metabolism and the need for living according to better health rules than you have been doing. WASHINGTON DAYBOOK
 BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—It won't be many weeks now before a six-foot, 190-pound Congressman from Wyoming brings out a baseball and glove in an effort to lamber up the right arm that once brought him fame as a crack pitcher.

Vincent Carter is spending his first winter on capitol hill as Wyoming's sole representative in the lower house of Congress. But he has his public base in Wyoming. In the spring of 1930, and if he finds his arm still has some of its old power, then he will volunteer for mound duty.

In school his chief sport was baseball. He earned quite a reputation as a pitcher and, since he is now only 38 years old, his friends think that with a little practice he may approach his old form—at least sufficiently to strengthen the G. O. P. pitching staff.

His secretary, who was his manager in the Congressional campaign, has been unofficially designated as a product of the west. An Easterner there is little about the big Wyoming man that suggests the section he represents in Congress. He is more of an easterner than a product of the west.

Born and educated in Pennsylvania, he studied law at Fordham University in New York, and has lived in Wyoming only 15 years. But this is the rule rather than the exception where Wyoming members of Congress are concerned. The state never has had a native son to legislate for it in Washington.

Senator Joseph M. Carey and the late Senator Francis E. Warren, who were Wyoming's first two Senators, were natives of Delaware and Massachusetts respectively. Senator Clarence D. Clark, the third man elected to serve in the Senate since Wyoming was admitted as a state, came from New York. And Senator John B. Kendrick, who is now a member of that body, was born in Texas.

Of the four men to sit in the house, Frank W. Mondell claims Missouri as his home state, Charles E. Winter comes from Iowa, and Carter from Pennsylvania. Senator Clark represented Wyoming in the House prior to his election to the Senate.

Into Politics
 Carter struck out for the west after teaching school for a short while when he had completed his law course. He soon attracted the attention of Judge Walls, one of the veteran politicians of Wyoming. Walls found a place for Carter in his office as a deputy attorney general.

Here was born his desire for politics. He decided to make the race for state auditor and was elected. And when Charles E. Winter quit his seat in the House to run for the Senate against Senator Kendrick, Carter made a bid for the seat.

Wyoming is about 500 miles long and 400 miles wide. Carter set out from his home at Kemmerer, 400 miles from Cheyenne, the capital, to cover the state. Over mountains and through dry wastes—some 22,000 miles—he traveled by automobile. When the votes were counted he had defeated his Democratic opponent by 2,963 votes.

In addition to his ability as a pitcher, Representative Carter is also a good horseman. He is a captain of Wyoming cavalry.

Washington society people should not be quarreling about where they sit. Look at poor old Bill Vare, with no seat at all!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

EDITOR'S NOTE This is the second of two articles by Rodney Dutcher reviewing the work of the new administration of the Indian Bureau installed by President Hoover.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER.

NEA Service Writer.
 Washington, Dec. 28.—Somehow a few marked exceptions to a general condition have given many persons the idea that most Indians are rolling in wealth. As a matter of fact, among 337,000 Indians at 82 federal agencies, about five per cent have money and the other 95 per cent are very poor.

About 90 per cent suffer from lack of sufficient food. Tens of thousands of Indians, always close to starvation, are barely keeping alive, it is admitted by some of the Indian Bureau officials now trying to solve the problem. On the Pine Ridge reservation where President Coolidge spoke and posed for pictures with some of the noble red men there is suffering almost beyond description in the winter. Many Indians are able to raise crops to live them through the worst months, but those on some reservations must contend hopelessly against barren plains or parched desert.

Only the Osages are Rich.
 There is a great contrast between those Indians and the 2250 Osages of Oklahoma who became known as the richest per capita people in the world thanks to the discovery of oil on their land. At one time oil leases and royalties were bringing as high as $13,000 a year to every Osage man, woman and child.

Officially, there are two classes of Osage Indians—the competent and the incompetent. When an Indian gets to attain a certain degree of education and intelligence the Indian Bureau declares him competent to administer his own affairs. In the case of other Indians who have money, the Indian agent turns the money over to each one as he thinks advisable.

In every community where the Indians have had any money, sharpers have preyed upon them, and this has been especially true with the Osages of Oklahoma. The Osages used to live in Kansas. They sold their land there in the nineties and the money was used to buy cheaper land in Oklahoma. They still own this land as a tribe and the money obtained from the leases they have sold oil interests has been divided equally among them. Thus they had no chance to amass the enormous fortunes which a few Indians gained by having their own allotments of land—as in the case of Jackson Barnett, who was forced to take 160 acres of seemingly worthless land after he had refused to accept any at all and later found he had the most valuable 160 acres in the world.

The government has done all it could to protect the money of the Osages and other Oklahoma Indians, but it has been badly handled by a mixture of state and federal authority. The state courts there appoint guardians for Indians and the Indian agents have to listen to the guardians who advise as to how money shall be turned over to their wards.

There is no federal check on what the guardians do with the money when they get it and some of them have done everything with it except turn it over to the Indian owner. The high point of oil production on the Osage reservation has been reached and the value of leases is now on the decline, in the Indian Bureau's opinion. Last year, however, 16,829,000 barrels were produced from the reservation and the Osages received a return, including certain deferred bonus payments of $7,442,000.

Gets Added Power.
 Congress this year extended the trust period on the Osage lands, moneys and other restricted properties until 1959 and also gave the Interior Department considerable more discretion in determining the acreage of Osage land to be leased each year.

Other Indians have valuable lands, but not many. Those on the Quapaw reservation in Oklahoma have valuable lead and zinc deposits and last year received nearly $10,000 for lease sales and in royalties. Other Indians in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Wisconsin have leased more or less valuable timber lands. There are also rich farm lands on some reservations and although the government has tried to persuade the Indian owners to till this land they more commonly lease it to white farmers.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

ALEXANDER I

On Dec. 28, 1818, Alexander I of Russia gave his peasant subjects the same right with his nobles to establish manufactures.

Alexander was a liberal and this was one of a number of constructive measures he instituted. To further uplift the country, he instituted the Imperial bank, and Odessa was made a free port and the laws on debts and mortgages were amended. Today also is the anniversary of the birthday of Woodrow Wilson, on Dec. 28, 1856. And on Dec. 28, 1832, John C. Calhoun resigned as vice president because of the president's nullification proclamation. On Dec. 28, 1846, Iowa was admitted to the Union. listed below the drawing the reader should go up from the notation until he finds the location of the particular object.

There are several features which will appeal immediately to the townspeople. One is the proposal to build at least three comfort stations.

Want Opinions. The park commission and the present park superintendent, Horace F. Murphy, are responsible for this draft of suggestions.

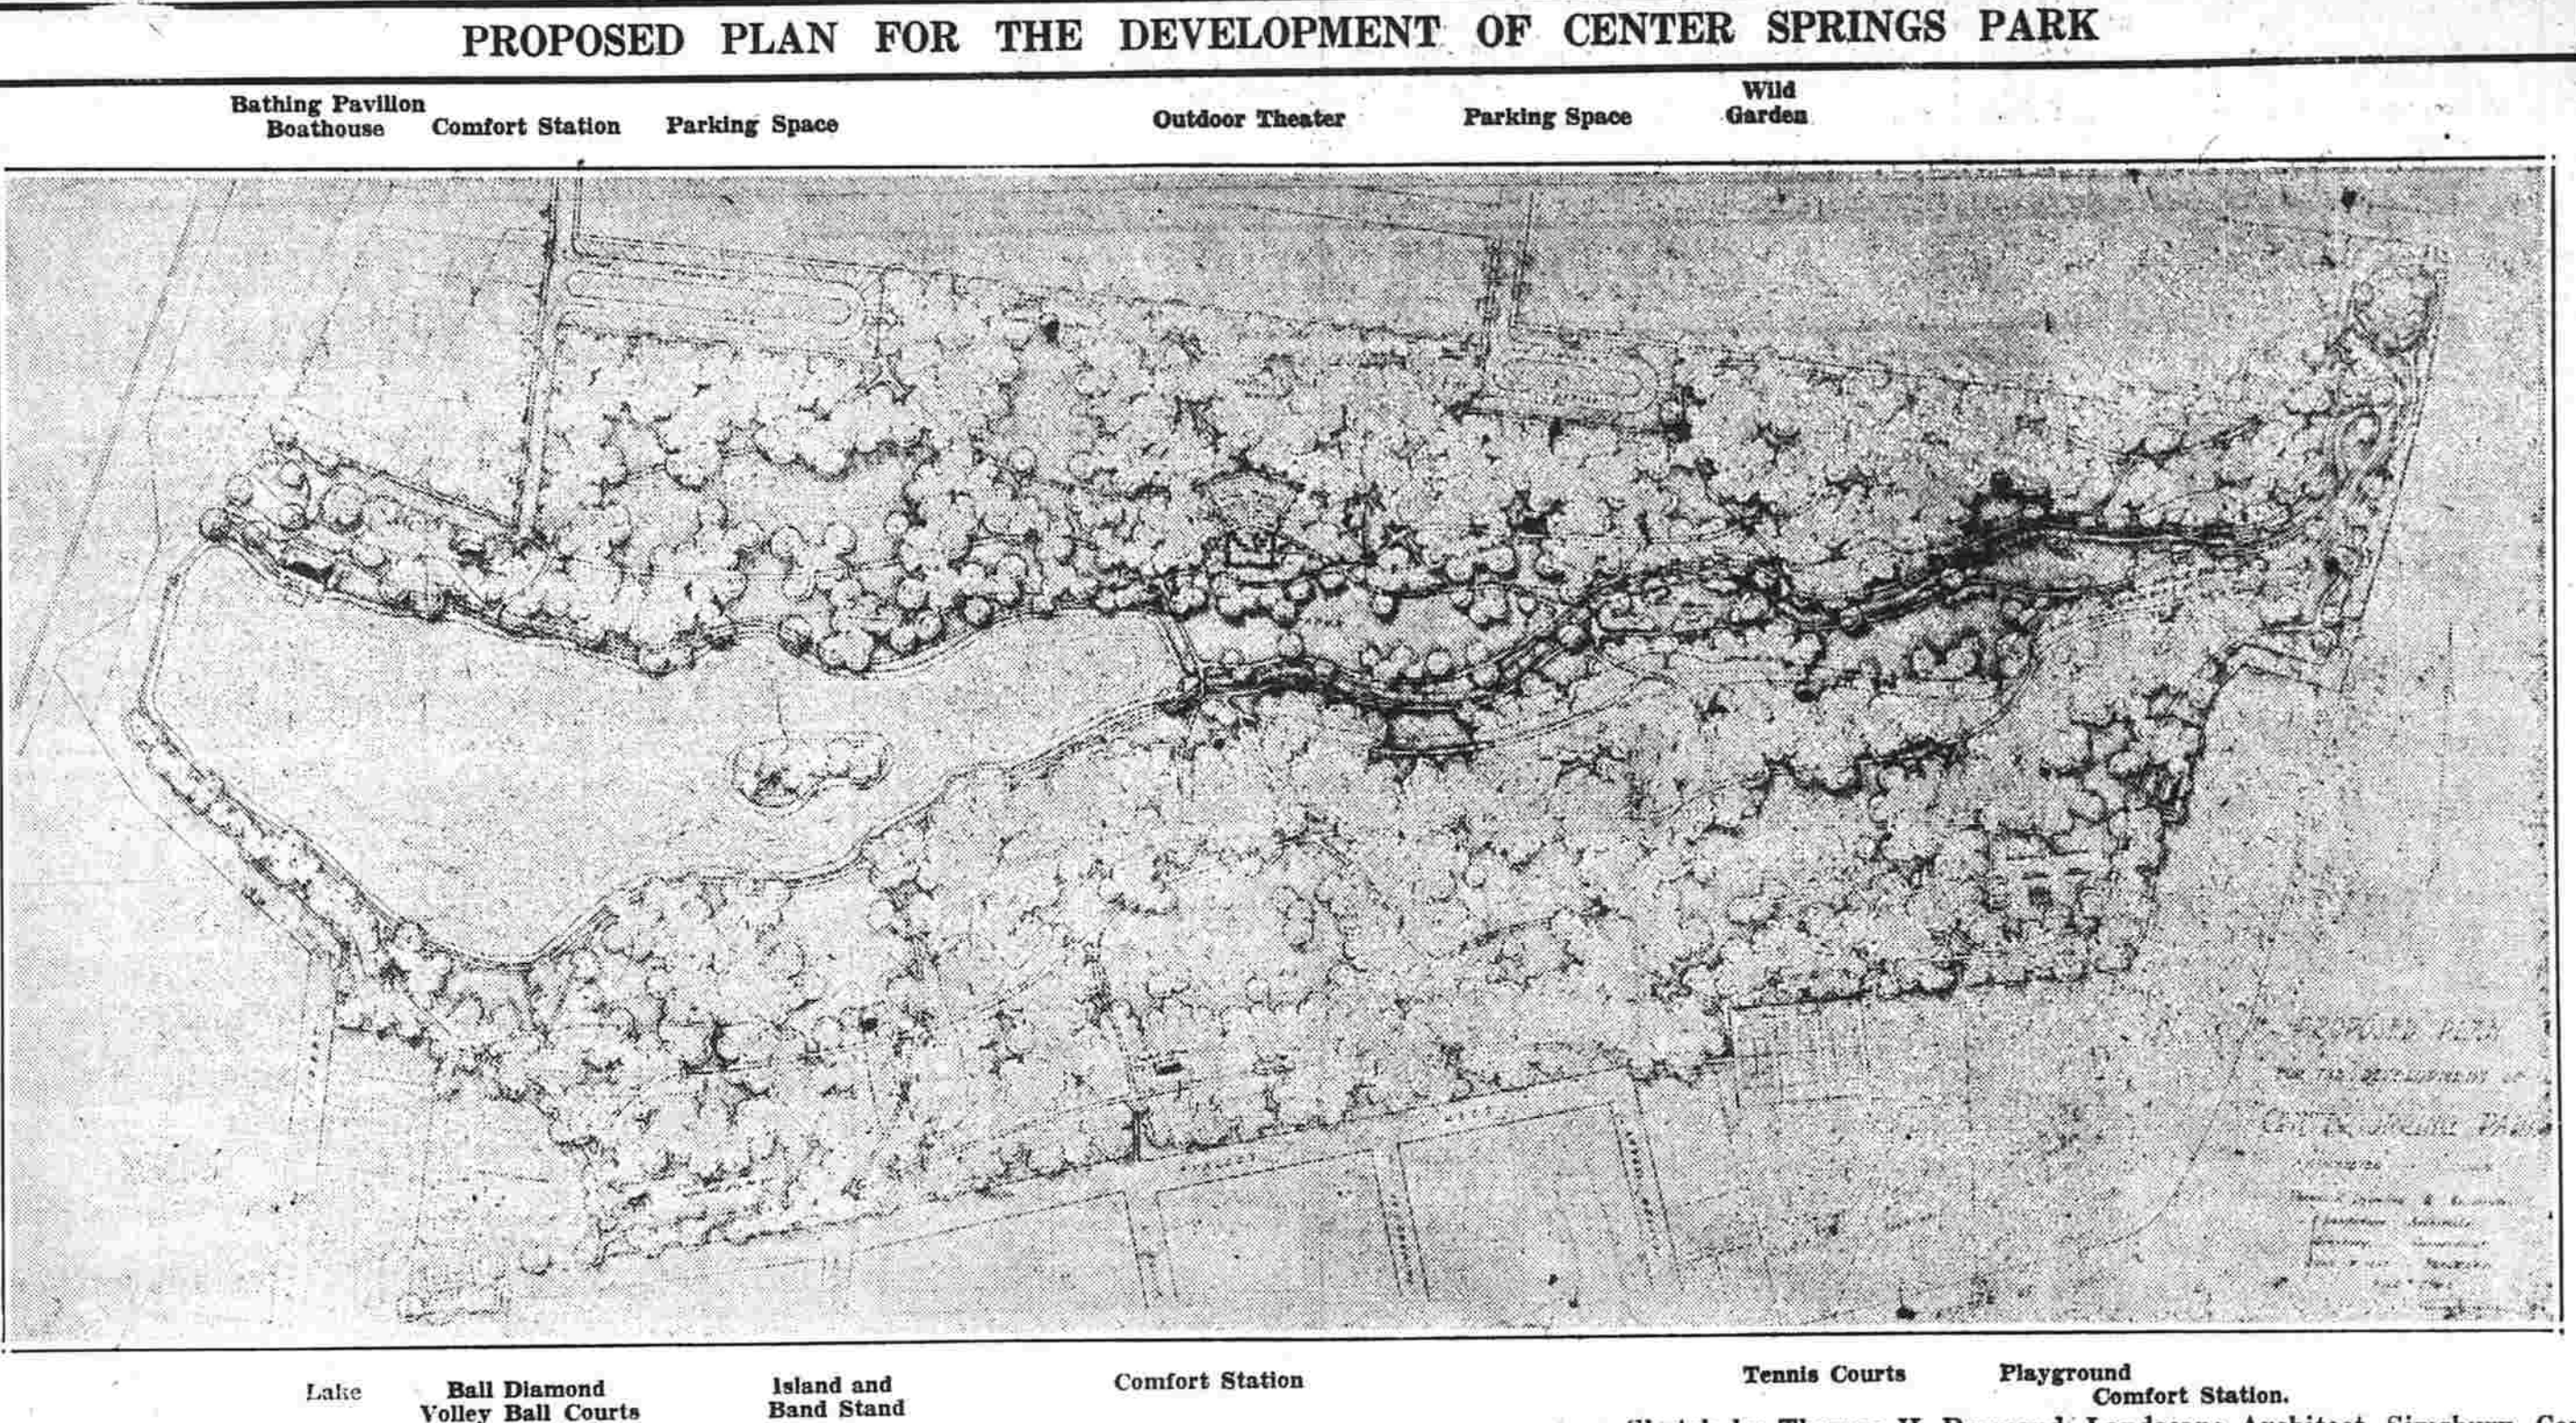

REPORT ON CENTER SPRING PARK AT MANCHESTER, CONN.

By Thomas H. Desmond

Manchester is particularly fortunate in having such a tract of land as the 58 acres known as "Center Spring Park."

Being as close as it is to the center of the town making the park very accessible to all. Bounded on the east by Main street and a small amount of private property, on the south by public and semi-public land, and Valley street, on the west by Edgerton street and private property which is mentioned later in this report, and on the north by the existing street, the park is effectively screened by existing trees it is apparent that the park is admirably located with opportunity for entrance as shown.

Circulation about the park is obtained by foot paths which enter the area as often as is necessary and lead one to points of interest, both natural and introduced. A wider path, marked 6 feet at intervals, will accommodate the park department car or small truck for general maintenance and servicing.

—Sketch by Thomas H. Desmond, Landscape Architect, Simsbury, Conn.

pebbles are better to withstand the more intensive use.

The existing naturalistic features of the park, reached by footpaths, are probably the most important and interesting part of the development when considered from an aesthetic point of view.

Three Groves. It will be noticed that the plan suggests open glades and vistas out through the existing growth. Discretion must be used in carrying out these suggestions since it is comparatively easy to remove large trees but difficult to replace them.

To allow more intensive use of the park still keeping in mind that the area is essentially a bit of country, several features not incongruous with the type of design employed have been introduced.

Playgrounds. For the entertainment and recreation of the children, two playgrounds are proposed. One directly below the district school is intended for smaller children and is to be equipped with standard playground apparatus.

to the extremity of the outfield. A court for both volley ball and basketball can be placed as shown behind the baseball backstop.

In any park certain buildings are necessary for maintenance of the area and the comfort and convenience of its users. These buildings must be in keeping with the feeling of the park in selection of material and type of architecture.

The administration building, located near the large children's playground for obvious reasons might best be of native stone done in a park style of architecture.

A final suggestion is the purchase of at least part of the private land at the northwest corner of the park as shown by the rider plan. The large plan is designed without acquiring this tract and the result is a sharp corner and steep grade in the road to the parking space.

Although the project as put forth on the plan is a comprehensive one and probably too expensive to carry to completion immediately, it has been proposed with foresight for the future and is a plan to work on as an ultimate goal.

Construction Has Been Consistent In 1929

CONTRACTORS BUSY AS YEAR NEARS END

Look Forward to Busy 1930 As Plans for Much Construction Are Being Drawn.

The closing of the year 1929 finds most of Manchester's contractors quite busy. There are several major projects that are being finished at the present time. The outlook for 1930 is good. Manchester has always been fortunate in the fact that the yearly growth of the town, building-wise, has been on a conservative enough basis so that there has been no depression.

During the past year the following major jobs have been completed or started in Manchester. Early in the year saw the addition of one story to one of Cheney Brothers factory buildings. This work was done by the Abernethy Company, of Boston. Gustave Schrieber and Sons, completed a magnificent new home for Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cheney, at the present time all of the boiler plants of Cheney Brothers are being remodelled for oil heat instead of coal which has involved the laying of extensive pipe lines in underground conduits. Oil for the various burners in the boiler rooms about the plant will be supplied from a battery of tanks located near the Forest street crossing of a spur track of the South Manchester Railroad.

Gustave Schrieber and Sons and Arvid Seaburg are completing a new sub-station for the Manchester Electric Company, on Hilliard street just west of the S. M. R. tracks.

The Manchester Construction Co., at the present time has the new addition to the Center church closed in and interior work will start shortly. This is one of the most important projects of the year.

The new home of the Southern New England Telephone Company, was completed nearly in the spring of this year and adds another fine and imposing building to Manchester's public edifices.

Another major project of importance completed during 1929 was the large addition to the Hollister street school the general contract for which was held by Gustave Schrieber and Sons.

The remodeling of the Purnell Block owned by George Keith is being done by the Manchester Construction Co. This is the largest of this type of job that has been done in some time. The Manchester Construction Co. are general contractors for the work. In addition to the work in the main building the wooden structure in the rear of the block has been moved from the north corner to the south corner. This was done to provide storage facilities for the Economy Grocery Co., who are to occupy the larger of the two stores.

In the north end the W. G. Glenney Lumber Co. is having a house remodeled and enlarged that faces North Main street, to provide offices for the business. In the rear of this they are building a large covered lumber storage shed that will have almost the capacity of all their old covered sheds combined.

The year now ending has seen the reconstruction of the Oakland Paper Mills by C. H. Dexter & Sons of Windsor Locks and the starting of

REAL ESTATE MEN HERE OPTIMISTIC

Smith and Holl Believe Developments Will Continue to Grow.

Robert J. Smith who has developed a large number of real estate projects in Manchester was very optimistic when questioned regarding his opinion of business for 1930. The rapid growth of Elizabeth Park during the past year was pointed out by him as what he considered a very good barometer of business. He expects that the coming year will see this popular residential tract practically sold out and extensively built up.

Edward J. Holl, who "cuts the earth to suit your taste" and who has cut up a large number of portions of Manchester into successful developments is more than pleased with the results he has seen in 1929 and is confident that 1930 will be a banner year. He is of the opinion that the location of the Pratt and Whitney and Chance-Vought plants in East Hartford will bring many desirable home owners to Manchester.

Among the various real estate developments in town the following have seen a rapid growth in the past year: Elizabeth Park owned by Robert J. Smith, Bluefields owned by Edward J. Holl; Marvin Green owned by Morris Elman; Coburn owned by Harry England; Lakeview owned by C. Elmore Watkins and Clearview owned by the Manchester Construction Company; and Arthur A. Knofa.

William Knofa president of the Manchester Construction Co., says that his firm is figuring plans for a large volume of work for the new year and that prospects for 1930 seemed very bright. They are starting work at once on the remodeling of their former storage plant on Middle Turnpike west which is to be converted into an auto body works and an addition will be built for a paint shop.

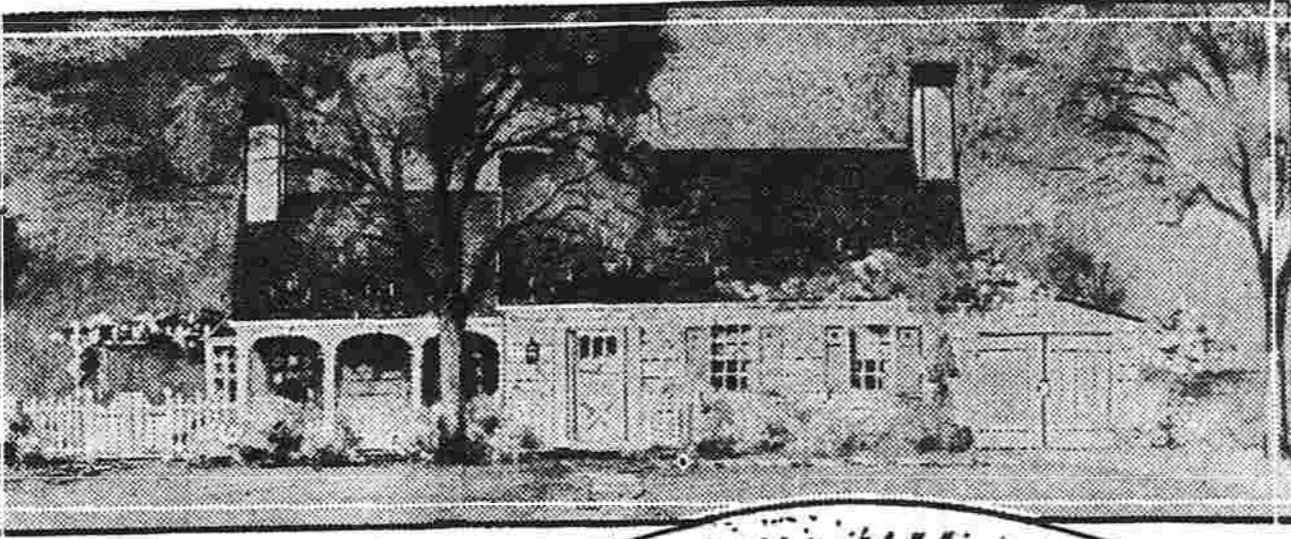

Gustave Schrieber of Gustave Schrieber & Sons said that he was well pleased with 1929 and that in his opinion the outlook for construction activity in 1930 was good.

IT'S A COLONIAL BUNGALOW

BY CORA W. WILSON NEA Service Writer

A home generally is the most important investment of a lifetime. And homes having the influence they do upon the human beings who live in them, three items are of paramount concern in planning them—comfort, attractiveness and livability.

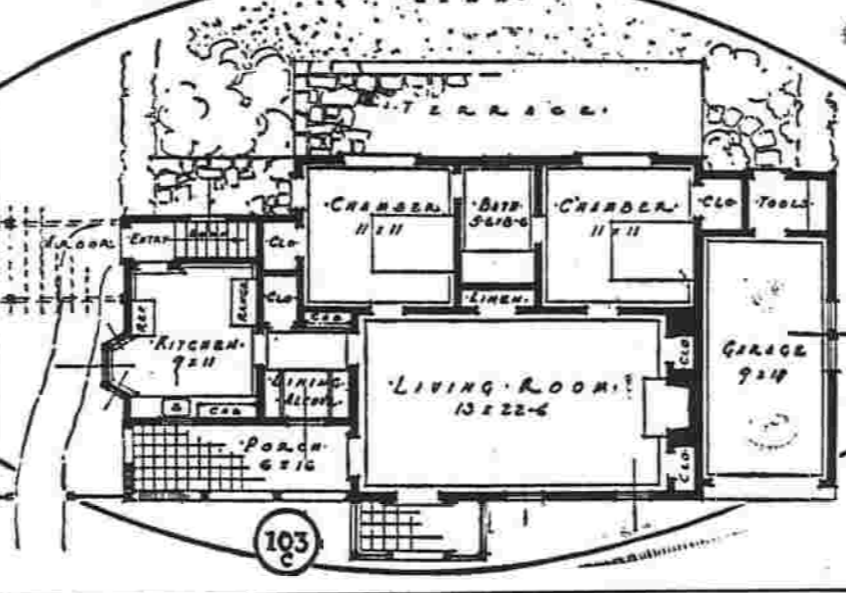

The little house shown here is a bungalow type of Colonial design that will meet these requirements. There are four adequate sized rooms numerous closets, a dining alcove, a bath, a garage and, in the rear, an open terrace.

The front entrance leads into a large living room. Here is a beamed ceiling, an open fireplace of Colonial design, two large windows and ample room for comfortable furniture. To the right is the garage, with a closet for garden tools.

In the back of the living room are two bedrooms with a modern bath; there also is a linen closet. To the left of the living room are the kitchen and dining alcove.

The house throughout is of lumber construction. The shingles for the exterior walls are a thick but cedar painted white. The ordinary cedar shingles for the roof are stained brown. The ornamented cornice and archways are of white-painted pine. The chimneys are white stucco. The shutters are blue green.

Striking in originality, this house vibrates with the modern art of housekeeping—no stairs to climb, closets at one's elbow, rooms that can be made attractive without costliness.

For additional information and cost estimate write to Mrs. Cora W. Wilson, 420 Madison Avenue, New York City, and be sure to enclose the clipping from this newspaper.

"MODERNIZE PLUMBING ALSO" SUGGESTS VETERAN PLUMBER

The great advance in building practice during the past two decades is evidenced especially in the plumbing industry, according to Samuel Little of Johnson & Little.

When Mr. Little started out in the plumbing business the comforts and conveniences of these days were unknown. It is a far cry from the built-in tubs and tiled baths to the baths of those days. Shower baths were uncommon and plumbing unsanitary according to modern standards.

Commenting on Home Modernizing Mr. Little says, "There is no doubt that Home Modernizing will be of great benefit to home owners in general. Every day or so, I come in contact with old-fashioned plumbing that is sadly in need of being made up-to-date."

"No other line of business has advanced so much as the plumbing. New types of equipment are being constructed and improvements made in older designs. Tinted porcelain is now in vogue and color harmonies are being emphasized. The modern bathroom has this as well as the newer pedestal bowls and quietly operating closets.

"I have noticed a steady increase in the number of home owners who are replacing their water lines with non-corrosive materials. Every leak is a waste, you know, and nothing is so annoying as leaking plumbing. The home owner can save many dollars by advising with the plumber and putting in the best.

"The ideal time to look after the plumbing is when remodeling the home. By doing it then after expense, due to cutting into the walls to get at the pipes is eliminated. This usually calls for the services of a carpenter in addition to that of

GASPARRI'S SUCCESSOR

Vatican City, Dec. 28—(AP)—Retirement of Cardinal Gasparri as secretary of state for the Vatican and substitution of Cardinal Pacelli, who has been papal nuncio at Berlin, for him in that post, continued today to be the talk of the Vatican.

It was not expected the change actually would take place until January 1, or possibly January 15. It was said Monsignor Pizzardo, now undersecretary of state for the Vatican, might be offered the Berlin post, but it was understood he would refuse it, preferring to remain at Rome, these and other questions of course will be thrashed out with assumption of Cardinal Pacelli in office.

gone by, and the light and power industry has completed its forty-seventh year of service to the people of the United States.

Looking backward to 1882, when the first central generating station was placed in operation, the industry has some measure of pride in its accomplishments during these comparatively few years. The cost of the finest artificial lighting the world has ever seen is the most unimportant item in the household budget. Drudgery is no longer necessary in the home. The workers in our great industries are no longer manual laborers; they are directors of power. The railroads, the street railways, the telephone, the telegraph, the radio—all acknowledge their debt to electricity.

These have been years of constant striving to improve and extend the service and at the same time lower the cost to the consumer. Not a little of the success which has crowned these efforts has been due to the splendid cooperation of the American public.

We look forward with all confidence to another year of this same cooperation.

A Home On The Unit Plan

This charming Connecticut home, in a revised design instead of the usual "saltbox" type, may be built in units or in its entirety. If the builder desires less space at first, the dining room and kitchen on the first floor, and two bed rooms with bath on the second, could be erected. The dining room would then be used, of course, for a living room, as the dining alcove is ample for a small home. The living room, garage and porch units could be added later, either singly or together. In the complete plan, four master bed rooms and a maid's room over the garage, with a rear stairway connecting, are provided. Cross ventilation and unusual storage and closet space are attractive features. Brick is suggested for the first floor exterior, clapboards or shingles for the second and a white shingle roof. A front door in green with a plant box on each side of the entrance adds the desired touch of color. Blinds should not be used with this design. Estimates of construction costs in the larger cities range from $18,000 to $20,000.

MODERN, NOT MODERNISTIC

There is nothing about this design that savors of the so-called modernistic art. It is simply a striking combination of old forms and motives which have stood the test of centuries. We, who build well, do not build for the day or even for the lifetime, and houses well built should last a lifetime, therefore we should not rush into any particular unproven style, lest we find ourselves in the course of a very few years, the owner of a house that is as much out of date as a five year old frock. Our homes are the outward expression of ourselves and they can ill afford to radically depart from the conservative. The long studio window in the front gable admits a flood of light into an unusual living room. The end of this room has a high timbered ceiling in pleasing contrast to the low rough plastered ceiling of the balance of the room. The circular stone flower box under the studio window forms an interesting note from without and within. The house contains 26,400 cubic feet and would cost approximately $12,400 to build.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-206.

Painted Pots For House Plants

BY HELEN B. AMES
There may be times when we go too far in poking fun at the taste of other generations, but one by-product of the naive decade which certainly merits our jeers is the clumsy jardiniere. Squatty and cumbersome and seldom of pleasing color, it had to be obscured by neath overhanging plants in order to achieve any semblance of grace. Today the flower pot is as decorative as its contents. The geranium on the kitchen window sill, the azalea in the living-room, and the trailing ivy and spreading fern in the sun parlor, are all planted in pots that intensify their natural charms. Cobalt blue, brilliant yellow, apple green, vivid reds, offer a wide choice, making it possible to harmonize the pot with the colors of the plant and fit it in with the decorative scheme of the room. And if the plant is moved from one room to another, where it clashes with the furnishings, the pot can easily be painted, enameled or lacquered with a new color.

Or you can start fresh with an ordinary terra cotta flower pot and decorate it according to your own fancy. Stencil designs and decoupage transfers will be of great assistance in planning the decorations. For the sake of durability, the transfers should be shellacked after they have been applied and for the same reason it is also advisable to give the pot a final coat of varnish.

Make Christmas Cheer Permanent With This New Gas Fire

What better gift can you make the whole family than real comfort—day or night—not only for this winter but for the winters that are to come?

The Radiantfire is a remarkable new gas fire, entirely different from the old fashioned gas logs and asbestos grates. For the first time the convenience of gas is combined with the cheery glow of the old-time open fire. You get double the heat at much less cost—only a few cents an hour.

The scientific burner of a Radiantfire generates a blue flame which is absolutely odorless. In an instant the radiants glow into an incandescent mass that sends out amazing heat—radiant heat, like the heat of the sun. Pure, wholesome, convenient, economical.

Just see one in operation. Convince yourself that there is nothing which will give you all such real comfort and lasting pleasure.

There is a size and style of Radiantfire to meet every requirement, from the inexpensive portable type to art models for artistic fireplaces. See the many attractive designs in our showrooms.

Christmas Carol

By Charles Dickens

BEGIN HERE TODAY
It would be hard to find a more hard-hearted, cold, grasping miser than EBBEZEN CRATCHIT. And JACOB MARLEY, his former partner had been like him. Marley had been dead seven years.

But on Christmas Eve the Ghost of Marley paid a visit to Scrooge. Wrapped in clanking chains and raising a melancholy cry, he mourned for opportunities wasted in life and tried to make Scrooge see the error of his ways in shutting mankind out of his heart.

"You shall be haunted by three Spirits," said Marley's Ghost. "The first will call when the clock strikes One."

And it did. It called itself the Ghost of Christmas Past. On the wings of the wind it bore Scrooge back through the years and let him see himself once more as a boy—a boy much like other boys—then as a young man, and beginning to lose the love of his fellow men.

The Spirit then departed. At the stroke of One, the second Spirit appeared. This one called itself the Ghost of Christmas Present. He takes Scrooge abroad on Christmas morning. Bells are ringing. People are preparing for dinner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
VIII
In time the bells ceased, and the bakers were shut up, and yet there was a genial shadowing forth of all these dinners, and the progress of their cooking, in the thawed blotch of wet above each baker's oven, where the pavement smoked as if its stones were cooking.

"Is there a peculiar flavor in what you sprinkle from your torch?" asked Scrooge.
"There is, my own."

"Would it apply to any kind of dinner on this day?" asked Scrooge.
"To any kindly given. To a poor one most."

"Why to a poor one most?" asked Scrooge.
"Because it needs it most."

"Spirit!" said Scrooge, after a moment's thought, "wonder you of all the beings in the many worlds about us, should desire to cramp these people's opportunities of innocent enjoyment."

"I!" cried the Spirit.
"You would do better to begin their means of dining every seventh day, often the only day on which they can be said to dine at all," said Scrooge, "wouldn't you?"

"I!" cried the Spirit.
"You seek to place these places on the Seventh Day," said Scrooge. "And it comes to the same thing."

"I seek!" exclaimed the Spirit.
"Forgive me if I am wrong. It has been done in your name, or at least in that of your family," said Scrooge.

"There are some upon this earth of yours," returned the Spirit, "who lay claims to know us, and who do their deeds of passion, pride, envy, hatred, and self-love, in our name, who are as strange to us, and all our kind and kin, as if they had never lived. Remember that, and charge their doings on themselves, not us."

Scrooge promised that he would; and they went on, and he would have been before, into the suburbs of the town. It was a remarkable quality of the Ghost (which Scrooge had observed at the baker's), that notwithstanding his ghastly appearance, he could accommodate himself to any place with ease; and that he stood beneath a low roof quite as gracefully and like a supernatural creature as it was possible he could have done in any lofty mansion.

And perhaps I might have thought the good Spirit had in showing off this power of his, or else it was his own kind, generous, hearty nature, and his sympathy with all poor men, that led him straight to Scrooge's clerk's front, he went, and took Scrooge with him; holding to his robe; and on the threshold of the door the Spirit smiled, and stopped to bless Bob Cratchit's dwelling with the sprinklings of his torch. Think of that! Bob had but fifteen Bob a week himself; he pocketed on Saturdays but fifteen copies of his Christian name; and yet the Ghost of Christmas Present blessed his four-roomed house!

Then up rose Mrs. Cratchit, Cratchit's wife, dressed out but poorly in a twice-turned gown, but brave in ribbons, which are cheap, and make a goodly show for sixpence; and she laid the cloth, assisted by Belinda Cratchit, second daughter, who also braved in ribbons; while Master Peter Cratchit, plunged a fork into the saucenap of potatoes, and getting the corners of his monstrous shirt-collar (Bob's private property, conferred upon the boy in honor of the day) into his mouth, rejoiced to find himself so gallantly attired, and yearned to show his linen in the fashionable parks.

And now two smaller Cratchits, a boy and girl, came tearing in, screaming that outside the baker's they had smelt the goose, and known it for their own; and basking in luxurious thoughts of sage and onion, these table, and excited Master Peter Cratchit to the skies, while he (not proud, although his collar nearly choked him) blew the fire, until the soft potatoes, bubbling up, knocked loudly at the saucenap-hd to be let out and peeled.

"What has ever got your precious father, then?" said Mrs. Cratchit. "And your brother, Tiny Tim?"
"And Martha wasn't as late last Christmas Day by half an hour!"
"Here's Martha, mother!" said a girl, appearing as she spoke.

"Here's Martha, mother!" cried the two young Cratchits. "Hurrah! There's such a goose, Martha!"
"Why, bless your heart alive, my dear, how late you are!" said Mrs. Cratchit, kissing her a dozen times, and taking off her shawl and bonnet for her officious zeal.

"We'd a deal of work to finish up last night," replied the girl, "and had to clear away this morning, mother!"
"Well! never mind so long as you are come," said Mrs. Cratchit.

"Sit ye down before the fire, my dear, and haves warm, Lord bless ye!"
"No, no! There's father coming," cried the two young Cratchits, who were everywhere at once. "Hide, Martha, hide!"

So Martha hid herself, and in came little Bob, the father, with at least three feet of comforter, exclusive of the fringe, hanging down before him, and his threadbare clothes darned up and brushed to look seasonable, and Tiny Tim upon his shoulder. Alas for Tiny Tim, he bore a little crutch, and had his limbs supported by an iron frame!

"Why, where's our Martha?" cried Bob Cratchit, looking round.
"Not coming!" said Mrs. Cratchit.
"Not coming!" said Bob, with a sudden declension in his high spirits; for he had been Tim's blood-horse all the way from church, and had come home rampant. "Not coming upon Christmas Day!"

Martha didn't like to see him disappointed, if it were only in joke; so she came out prematurely from behind the closet door, and ran into his arms, while the two young Cratchits, headed by Tiny Tim, and bore him off into the wash-house, that he might hear the pudding singing in the copper.

"And how did little Tim behave?" asked Mrs. Cratchit when she had rallied Bob on his credulity, and Bob had hugged his daughter to his heart's content.
"As good as gold," said Bob, "and better. Somehow, he gets thoughtful, sitting by himself so much, and thinks the strangest things you ever heard of. He told me, coming home, that he hoped the people saw him in the church, because he was a cripple, and it might be pleasant to them to remember upon Christmas Day a poor old beggar like me."

"As good as gold," said Bob, "and better. Somehow, he gets thoughtful, sitting by himself so much, and thinks the strangest things you ever heard of. He told me, coming home, that he hoped the people saw him in the church, because he was a cripple, and it might be pleasant to them to remember upon Christmas Day a poor old beggar like me."

Bob's voice was tremulous when he told this, and it trembled more when he said that Tiny Tim was growing strong and hearty.

His active little crutch was heard upon the floor, and back came Tiny Tim before another word was spoken, escorted by his brother and sister to his stool beside the fire; and while Bob, turning up his cuffs—as if, poor fellow, they were capable of being made more shabby—compounded some hot mixture in a jug with gin and lemons, and stirred it round and round, and put it on the hob to simmer, Master Peter and the two ubiquitous young Cratchits went to fetch the goose, with which they soon returned in high procession.

Such a bustle ensued that you might have thought a goose the rarest of all birds; a feathered phenomenon, to which a black swan would be counted as a thing of course—and in truth, it was something very like it in that house. Mrs. Cratchit made the gravy (ready before hand in a little saucenap) hissing hot; Master Peter mastered the plumage with a can; and the two young Cratchits, while their mother busied herself with the carving, looked on anxiously to see the bird to be sacrificed.

At last the dishes were set on, and grace was said, and the good feast began. There was a breathless pause, as Mrs. Cratchit, looking slowly all along the carving-knife, prepared to plunge it in the breast; but when she did, and when the long-expected gush of stuffing issued forth on all round the board, and even Tiny Tim, excited by the two young Cratchits, beat on the table with the handle of his knife and feebly cried Hurrah!

There never was such a goose. Bob said he didn't believe there ever was such a goose cooked. Its tenderness and flavor, size and cheapness, were the themes of universal admiration. Eked out by half-sauces and mashed potatoes, it was a sufficient dinner for the whole family; indeed, as Mrs. Cratchit said with great delight (surveying one small atom of a bone upon the dish), they hadn't a scrap of turkey left.

Every one had a good time, of course. The pudding was a great success. It was a sufficient dinner for the whole family; indeed, as Mrs. Cratchit said with great delight (surveying one small atom of a bone upon the dish), they hadn't a scrap of turkey left.

"A merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us!"
Which all the family re-echoed. "God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all.

He sat very close to his father's side, with his little hand in his, as if he loved the child, and wished to keep him by his side, and dreaded that he might be taken from him. "Spirit!" said Scrooge, with an interest he had never felt before, "tell me if Tiny Tim will live."

"I see a vacant seat," replied the Ghost, "in the poor chimney corner, and a crutch without an owner, carefully preserved. If these shadows remain unshaken by the future, the child will die."

oranges were put upon the table, and a shovelful of chestnuts on the fire. Then all the Cratchit family drew round the hearth in what Bob Cratchit called a circle, meaning a half a one; and at Bob Cratchit's elbow stood the family display of glass. Two tumblers and a custard cup without a handle.

These held the hot stuff from the jug, however, as well as gottle and spoons would have done; and Bob served it out with beaming looks, while the chestnuts on the fire sputtered and crackled noisily. Then Bob proposed:

"A merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us!"

THE BOOK SURVEY

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer

In "Twelve Against the Gods," William Bolitho traces the careers of a dozen assorted adventurers; and he makes the word "adventurer" broad enough to include such diverse characters as Casanova, Mahomet, and Woodrow Wilson.

Bolitho is a man who has ideas. Furthermore, he can handle the English language in magnificent fashion. On top of that, the 12 characters—ten men and two women—who he has elected to discuss led lives that were more than ordinarily interesting.

The result, as you might expect, is a book that is out of the ordinary. It gives you history, biography and philosophy, all rolled into one. It is one of the outstanding books of the fall season, and if you miss it you are going to miss something that is very much worth your while.

But why to fail to whom even Against the Gods? Well, Bolitho sees the adventurer as a man who plays a lone hand; a man who cuts out for himself, who dares to attempt the impossible, who is doomed, by the very nature of his success itself, must inevitably turn into disaster. These people whom he describes lived in a sort of lonely grandeur, eternal rebels, wandering far outside our orbits. They defied the gods—and they lived magnificently.

Put this book down on your holiday list. It is published by Simon and Schuster, and it sells for $4.

A Distinguished Author Writes a Poor Book
Edith Wharton's newest novel, "Hudson River Bracketed," has drawn shouts of praise from most of the reviewers, but to my notion it is distinctly a second-rate book, unconvincing and fumbling.

It details the life history of a sensitive, poetic young chap who goes to New York from that raw, crude middle-west which bulks so large in the minds of some novelists. It is filled with a number of well-drawn characters; yet, in the end, not one of these characters behaves believably. The feel of life, somehow, isn't in the book.

In addition, Mrs. Wharton betrays a woeful ignorance of the middle west. Her hero, thirsting for poetry and beauty, spends four years in an Illinois college—but graduates without even having heard of Coleridge, Marlowe, Shelley or Keats! That simply isn't true. Obviously, Mrs. Wharton is writing of a quite imaginary middle west. Her whole story, thus, is based on a false picture. One doesn't expect that from an artist of Mrs. Wharton's standing.

Probably you'd better ignore my opinion. Everybody else seems to like the book. But, as you may have gathered, I disliked it intensely.

It is published by Appleton and retails at $2.50.

A New and Entertaining Book About Europe
"Europe in Zig-Zags" by Sisley Huddleston, is another of those gossipy, chatty books about European cities, European people and European customs. Such books have come upon us in a flood, lately; but this one is a great deal better than the average, since Mr. Huddleston manages to avoid the obvious and presents a series of sketches that are genuinely interesting.

I took up the book prepared to dislike it, and I was pleasantly surprised. Mr. Huddleston covers ground that dozens of other roving writers have covered; yet in some way he makes his subjects seem fresh. He writes of Mussolini and Rivera, for example—and actually succeeds in giving you a couple of new aspects of these two highly-publicized dictators. He discusses Spanish bull-fighting—a hackneyed subject if ever there was one—and puts something new into his discussion. He talks about post-war Vienna—another topic that has been written to death—and does it so entertainingly that you wish he had written more.

What I'm trying to say is that "Europe in Zig-Zags" is a book you're almost sure to like. It is published by the J. B. Lippincott Company.

The Thrilling Story of a Great Naval Hero
"Commodore David Porter," by Archibald Douglas Turnbull, is a story of high adventure; a tale as thrilling and exciting as a Sabatini novel. Considering the career of its hero, it could not well be anything else.

Commodore Porter really belongs in the first flight of American naval heroes. His name should be bracketed with the names of John Paul Jones, Stephen Decatur and David Farragut. He was a great sailor and a great fighter; and with a slightly better break in the luck he would have made a record fit to compare with Drake's.

In his little 38-gun frigate, the Essex, Porter set out, during the war of 1812, to ravage British shipping in the Pacific. He succeeded admirably. Before he was finally overpowered by superior forces he had cost the British empire millions of dollars, and had contributed very materially to that British dissatisfaction that ultimately enabled America to make a better peace than her military performance really merited.

Mr. Turnbull's book tells Porter's story and tells it well. It is a splendid tale of high adventure. If you have any feeling at all for the brave deeds of the "Old Ironsides" era, don't miss it. It is published by The Century Co., and sells at $3.50.

NOT MRS. CROUSE
Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 28—(AP)—Hopes which arose yesterday that a woman found wandering in Emory park here was Mrs. Beacher M. Crouse, missing Utica society woman, were waning today.

The description of the woman given at General hospital, where she is a patient, tallied in many respects with that of Mrs. Crouse, amnesia victim, unheard from since November 14, but a marked difference in the teeth of the two apparently has again discouraged the lost woman's husband.

GRIMES SEEKS DIVORCE
Canton, O., Dec. 28—(AP)—Burling Grimes, hurler for the Pittsburgh Pirates is plaintiff in an action for divorce on file here today against Florence Ruth Grimes whom he married in Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1917. To her interference in his work he attributed his withdrawal from the Brooklyn club.

DR. GOODENOUGH MARRIES
New Haven, Dec. 28—(AP)—Marriage yesterday in New York of Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Goodenough, formerly of here and elsewhere in the New York east Methodist conference to Mrs. Alice B. Davis, widow, was made known to friends today. Bishop McConnell, presiding in this conference read the service. Dr. Goodenough is 79 and his bride about 50.

Parachute Queen

Here you see the darling young aviatrix after she had made her 740th leap from the wings of a plane—a record for women. She has made the highest and lowest parachute jumps ever attempted by women, too—from altitudes of 18,700 and 150 feet respectively.

More WOMAN'S DAY

The woods is full of advice on beauty—how to massage the wrinkles from the furrowed brow, how to retain a skin you love to touch, how to get rid of an extra chin, or keep white hairs at bay.

In fact, there is infinitely more advice than there is good information. And like most advice, you can take it or leave it as you will.

But in the Chicago Flower Technical high school, I observe that beauty culture is being recognized as a legitimate study, quite as important in its way as domestic science or algebra, and it is being taught logically and intelligently.

The girls are being taught the chemistry of their own skins, their hair and something of the action of lights, sun, air and water on the same. They have lectures on the circulation of the blood, the digestive system, and the action of certain stimulants and sedatives.

ANALYZING BEAUTY.
But it is not the most important thing from a practical point of view. They are taught how to analyze face powders, creams and soaps, so that they can tell just what is in all the various expensive and high-priced cosmetics on the market—so they know whether they are paying for real quality, or for fancy labels and pretty boxes and ribbons.

In examining critically the content of a highly advertised cosmetic, I found a formula for cold cream, which any druggist could put up in a few minutes, was quite as effective, and more pure, than some of the expensive brands.

In short, they learn about cosmetics as they learn about cooking. They can make them as they would cakes, and know what should make them cleansing, and good, just as they know what makes devil-foods rise and fall or stick to the pan.

NOW, IN GRANDMA'S DAY—
Most of us moderns know little or nothing about what we use on our faces and hands, and that is why we will buy anything that looks "attractive." Our grandmothers were much more wise than we, because, in their day, they made their own lotions and potions.

They knew how to make good bleaches compounded of such harmless ingredients as cucumbers or lemon juice, and of their own ranges they used to stir up a cream that was better than we can buy at five times the price, because it contained only pure products.

We are inclined to believe that beauty culture is something peculiar to this age, just because we see so many advertisements, and know so many cosmetics: are sold. But women have always "beautified" and many a belle of a generation or so ago spent infinitely more time on herself than the modern maid, who wears cosmetic gobs at night, and sometimes a mask of suet to keep her face soft and unlined. She "rinsed" her hair. In fact, she did practically everything we do, but did it more quietly and with more mystery.

So the Chicago high school girls, if they are attentive, may some day become as wise in beauty as their grandmothers for many generations back—back possibly to Eve!

I love the direct look of little children. When they lose it, when they begin to look from side to side, or down at the floor, or up at the ceiling, certainly the angels are weeping in Heaven.

Whatever we do, we should try to preserve that straight clear gaze of children's eyes into ours. When we set ourselves up as judges, will that look hold? If we pretend to be crushed, broken-hearted, inconsolable over some childish misdemeanor, will it hold? If we turn into furies, will those trusting young eyes continue to gaze into ours with frank courage and confidence? Certainly not.

Just about the biggest job on earth is to make friends and keep them. When I see a mother or a father with children who stand up and talk to them fearlessly and trustingly with that honest, straightforward look that only exists between friends, I know the confidence there. No fear or breach of confidence there.

Put Gloom to Rout
That is why I think it is an excellent plan for parents to learn to control not only their tongues but the expression of their faces. Children don't turn from a smile, I believe we underestimate the value of a smile on little children, and older children, too, for that matter.

I know—we are beset by worries, we become over-tired, the work is too much for us, debts prey, we can't see a clear way ahead, and it's the very hardest thing on earth to keep the corners of our mouths turned up, and the rasp and hardness out of our voices.

But why take it out of the children? They won't understand. They see the frown and hear the worried voices and unconsciously they absorb the idea that they are the cause of our troubles.

It's too bad that little children are so sensitive and self-conscious, but they are. They get the idea every time they see an unpleasant expression on their mother's face, that they have caused it.

Try to Appear Happy
Of course, there are times when things go wrong that we must be serious with them. That's to be expected. But so often we look fierce, or gloomy, or unhappy, or worried, for other reasons.

For the children's sake, and to encourage their confidence and trust—in other words, to cherish that direct look of happiness and love, can't we control our expressions more than we do?

It is a strange truth that the most obedient children usually have parents of cheerful, and brave dispositions.

Cheerfulness is an intense motivating power in this world. Let's smile at the children and have them smile back, even when trouble looms.

It's all so worthwhile. Smiles become a habit after a while. They cost nothing but a little trouble. And then, once mastered, watch for the difference in the children.

Weak But Plucky Alumni Five Bows In 27-15 Loss

PERFECT MAN

No Evidence of Attempt to Emulate H. S.-Alumni Farces of Past Few Years; Spanking Does Good.

Mothers are right when they say that spankings are often the best cure for naughty children. The same applies to basketball relations between Manchester High and its Alumni. Two years ago the contest was such a farce that school officials threw the game completely off last season's schedule.

The Alumni didn't come anywhere near beating the High school but it wasn't because they didn't try. On the contrary it was due to entering the game with a much weaker team composed almost entirely of last year's team. Even so, the Alumni put up such a courageous, determined battle that the High school was unable to look anywhere near as impressive as it did against either East Hartford or Rockville. Yet the schoolboy quietly and richly deserved its 27 to 15 decision.

The Right Attitude.

A good sized crowd watched the encounter but it would have doubtlessly been larger but for the unavailability of action of the Alumni teams of recent years. Last night's game, however, went a long way toward restoring the contest to its proper standard. However, it wouldn't do any harm to organize a stronger team to face the school outfit next December.

Scoring Divided.

The scoring for both teams was very well divided. The work of Al Smith, Johnny Torney, Marcus Moriarty and Opizal was especially noticeable. Nicola and Dowd scored most for the winners and Renn and Opizal for the Alumni. Manchester's next game will be at Bristol next week Friday night.

In the preliminary game last evening, the High school seconds did not move that they could chew in the Renaissance five, a local junior outfit, which beat them 36 to 24. Kerr, McConkey and Schiebel were beat for the scrubs. McHale starred for the losers. The box score of each game follows:

MAY RECOMMEND FOOTBALL CHANGES

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The football coaching problems may be settled next week in connection with the annual meeting of the American Football Coaches' Association, Coach Collins, University of Carolina coach, is slated to succeed Lou Little as head coach at Georgetown and negotiations to bring this about may be complete within a few days.

Major Frank Cavanaugh is expected to sign for another year as head coach at Fordham.

Collins and Adam Walsh, Yale line coaches both have been mentioned for the Georgetown position. Walsh was head coach at Santa Clara, California, before going to New Haven.

FIREMEN'S LEAGUE

The sympathies of Team No. 3 go out to the Phillies, the Robins and the Red Sox. Especially the Sox, for they are becoming more and more familiar with the socks. It seems that when the other teams' aces run wild, it is Team No. 3 that is at the receiving end.

Night before last, "Pete" Hansen of Team No. 2 boosted the high single up three more notches to 130 and the three string from 329 to 363 while Team No. 3 wallowed in the slough of despond.

The night was a sort of a family affair where all the raw was passed over without very much happening but tonight, well that's different. Team No. 3 proposed the champions in an attempt to keep Team No. 4 somewhere within sight of the rest of the bunch. "Bill" Montie has his team all groomed and ready. He has even considered asking the West Side to show up so that George can close up and join the meet.

Last Night's Fights

Chicago.—Earl Mastro, Chicago, stopped Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., by a knockout.

Des Moines.—Joey Phalen, Omaha, stopped Ray Michaelson, Minneapolis, Louf.

A CHALLENGE.

The Tuffy five would like to play the Cardinals of the north end for fun, money or mables. "If you don't think there will be any fun or you haven't any marbles, well, we will play anyway," says the Tuffy manager.

MRS. MOODY BACK PLAYING TENNIS

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP)—After demonstrating to her own satisfaction that honeymooning has not spoiled her tennis game, Helen Willis Moody and her husband, Frederick S. Moody, Jr., were back aboard the yacht Galathea today, continuing their wedding cruise.

Slipping quietly into San Diego harbor yesterday, the newlyweds temporarily abandoned the sea and while Mr. Moody kept a business engagement, his wife played a few conditioning sets of tennis on the courts of the naval hospital.

Defeats Opponent.

Mrs. Moody first met Allen Blade, local clay court champion, defeating him 6-3, she then teamed with Dolf Muehleisen, San Diego county champion, to administer defeat to a team composed of Blade and Bob Muench, University of California net player. She carried the greater share of the game in the 6-3, 6-4 victory.

Big Audience.

The matches were arranged as a private affair, but the news spread until a gallery of 200 surrounded the court.

"I wanted to see if I still could keep my eye on the ball," Mrs. Moody explained after the three sets.

The courts will not lose her to the kitchen, Mrs. Moody declared. "It is so easy to keep in training that I think I will continue tournament play with the same enthusiasm as before," she said.

Falls Through Ropes Causing Own Kayo

Chicago, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Earl Mastro, Chicago's contender for the featherweight championship of the world today owned a technical knockout victory over Bud Taylor, the old Terre Haute terror. Taylor, victim of one of the most peculiar accidents in ring history, regarded the black mark against his record, while nursing a badly sprained back.

The incident which threw 17,211 spectators into hysterical excitement terminated the second meeting of the pair in the ninth round of a ten rounder at the Chicago Stadium last night.

Outpointed for eight rounds but still waiting for a chance to end the fight with a knockout, Taylor did the most accomplished his purpose in the ninth round, when he floored the Chicago man. The intensity of his efforts proved his undoing. When Mastro regained his feet after a count of three Taylor tore in for the finish and fell through the ropes wrenching his back.

He carried Mastro with him and it looked like a double knockout until the Chicago sharpshooter managed to regain his feet at the count of five. Taylor, rigid and apparently Mastro.

MEET FIRST DEFEAT IN NEW UNIFORMS

The Young Men's Community Club basketball team of the North End suffered its first setback in four games last night when it bowed to the older and more experienced Central Auto quintet of Hartford. The score was 39 to 18. Coleman started for the Manchester team which only a few nights ago tacked a 31 to 17 defeat on the Howitzer Company. The locals made their initial appearance in new uniforms last night and possibly spent too much time in self-admiration. Hartford led 8 to 4 the first quarter, the score was tied at 10 all at halftime and the visitors led 23 to 14 at the third quarter.

COMING TO THE STATE

"Flight" Featuring Jack Holt, Ralph Graves and Lila Lee to Play Here Three Days.

"Flight," the all-talking aviation special, with Jack Holt, Ralph Graves and Lila Lee, which comes to the State Sunday night, Monday and Tuesday, is a mighty drama of adventure in the sky, featuring the most sensational air feats ever photographed.

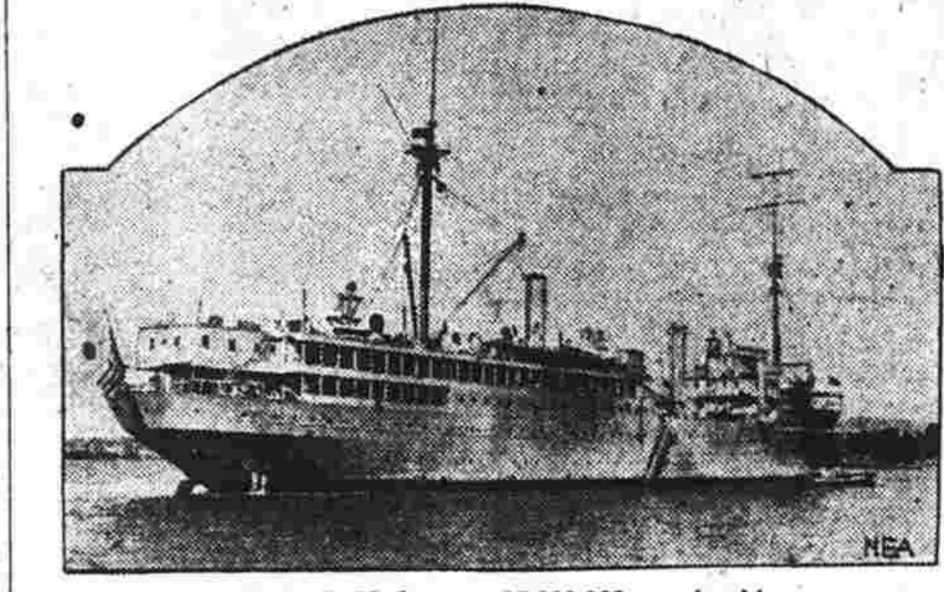

Against the varied and picturesque backgrounds of a marine flying base, the rough wilderness of Nicaragua and a Central American dance hall, these awe-inspiring flying feats lend color, thrills and daring to a poignant love story and the great friendship of two buddies in the Marine Corps.

"Lefty" Phelps, enacted by Ralph Graves, driven by shame to leave college because of a bonched revenue football play, joins the marine aviation service. He wins the sympathy and friendship of "Panama" Williams, played by Jack Holt, a hard-boiled sergeant. Their friendship is disrupted temporarily when they both fall in love with the same girl. This situation leads to an intensely dramatic conclusion. Battle scenes between the American insurgents and the American marines are tremendously realistic and thrilling. Here is one of the rare achievements in motion pictures—a good story, excellent acting, fine direction and awe-inspiring situations. Jack Holt was never better in his long career before the silent and talking camera. Ralph Graves runs him a close second for the stellar honors and Lila Lee, as the heroine, adds the necessary romantic touch, mingled with laughter and pathos.

Selected Vitaphone vaudeville acts and the latest Metropole sound new will complete the program.

GOOD DOUBLE BILL AT CIRCLE TODAY

"Smilin' Guns" and "Red Swords" on Silent Program for Two Days.

Hoot Gibson in "Smilin' Guns," and Marion Nixon and William Oller, Jr., in "Red Swords," are the feature attraction which make up an excellent double feature bill which will be shown at the Circle today and Sunday.

"Smilin' Guns" is by far the best and most entertaining western picture Universal has turned out in a long time. The popular and versatile Hoot Gibson is presented in a new and entirely pleasant role. While the energetic Hoot has injected a certain amount of comedy in previous pictures, in "Smilin' Guns" he gives his audience, along with the usual amount of good riding and thrills, some of the best comedy anyone could desire. Portraying a devil-may-care but rather unkept cowboy, Hoot affords many laughs by his inimitable performance. But it is not until he decides to become a polished gentleman that the real laughs commence. There are spots in the picture during which Hoot rises to veritable heights as a comedian. Blanche McWhaffey, beautiful and talented young Irish colleen, heads an excellent supporting cast, which includes Virginia Pearson, Leo White, Walter Brennan and Dad Gibson.

"Red Swords" is a fiery and intensely dramatic story of the turbulent days in Russia. Marian Nixon and William Oller, Jr., have the leading roles, and deliver performances which testify to their "ramp" roles and her work goes far in making the picture far above the average program picture.

The program will also include the concluding chapter of "The Final Reckoning" and a cartoon comedy.
