

SCHAFFER SCORES DRY LAW AS A CRIME BREEDER

Wisconsin Congressman Says Prohibition Has Ush- ered in an Age of Corrup- tion and Intemperance.

Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The assertion that prohibition has "ushered in an age of corruption, intemperance, disrespect for law and contempt for government such as this nation never before witnessed" was made today in the House by Representative Schaffer, Republican, Wisconsin.

Making a charge that the "constitution has been changed from a charter of rights and liberties into a criminal statute book," the Wisconsin Representative asked:

"How can people respect a constitution that makes the act of temperance a crime?"

Granted an hour by consent of the House, Schaffer spoke on the subject of "Prohibition versus Christianity."

"You must choose between prohibition and the Christian religion," he said. "You cannot have both, for they are eternal opposites."

"An unbridgeable gulf separates one from the other, with God and Christ standing on one side and the dregs on the other."

Predicts Failure.
Without mentioning names, Schaffer said "the recent hysterical outburst of the Four Horsemen of the prohibition forces indicates the demoralization in their ranks and that they have reached a realization of the failure of the sumptuary prohibition laws."

He suggested that the "Four Horsemen" turn their "oratorical guns and attention to the states of Georgia, Idaho, Texas and Nebraska, where a deplorable condition exists today as a result of prohibition."

Senator Harris lives in Georgia, Borah in Idaho, Sheppard in Texas and Howell and Norris in Nebraska. All are Dry leaders, and have taken a part in the recent dispute.

Crime Rampant.
"In these states," Schaffer said, "under Federal prohibition, bootlegging, drunkenness, and drunken vehicle drivers has increased tremendously. Fundamental rights guaranteed to our people under the Constitution flagrantly violated; lives snuffed out without due process of law by irresponsible fanatical enforcement agents; the privacy of life and the sanctity of the home guaranteed under the Constitution ruthlessly violated."

Dry Case Weakened.
Asserting that the "unwholesome conditions in the country resulting from prohibition had weakened the 'dry' case, he declared that 'dry' leaders 'are now en-

FRENCH BACK DOWN ON SOME DEMANDS

Delegates at Hague See Speedy Solution of Repara- tions Problems.

The Hague, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Modification of French insistence on military sanctions guaranteeing German reparations annuities, led to belief today that that formidable barrier to an agreement here soon would be removed.

The French have not yet conceded the demand of the Germans that the protocol adopting the Young plan contain a clause similar to that in the German-American agreement to the effect that the creditors rely solely on the good faith of Germany for execution of the plan.

They have, however, practically abandoned all claim to the right to resume military occupation of the Rhineland in case of default by the Germans. They have reduced their pretensions to a purely juridical or arbitral solution procedure upon declaration of a default.

Soon to be Settled.
The question will come to a head with a written reply by the Germans to the French memorandum on the subject. There was some expectation this reply would be couched in such terms as to make an agreement between Germany and the creditor nations possible.

Meanwhile the delegates continued with their efforts to unravel other matters and details of application of the Young plan. Principal among these were matters connected with commercialization of the unconditional annuities and date of payment of installments.

With the League of Nations Council meeting only three days away and the London naval conference just more than a week removed, desire to end matters here was accentuated and it was expected every effort would be made to hurry matters through to a successful conclusion.

READY TO WED TO KEEP JOB

New Britain Youth is Penniless But Says He Can Get a Girl to Accept Him.

New Britain, Jan. 10.—(AP)—If it is necessary for Estrino Tucci, aged 29, to marry to get a job, he will lose no time in taking a bride.

Tucci entered police headquarters several weeks ago and told a story of having been deserted by his parents in Pennsylvania and being thrown on the mercies of a cold world. As he was destitute, he was accommodated with lodgings for the night. Next day it was suggested that he join the Army.

But he expressed a preference for the Navy as he liked the blue of the sea service. The Navy recruiting office was not available at the moment and he decided to cast his lot with the Army. But he failed to pass the examination because of imperfect knowledge of the English language. There being nothing else to do, the city gave him a job.

Tucci was informed by Director Frank Rogers of the city employment bureau that he must step aside and give his place to another man in keeping with the policy to give as much work as possible to as many men as possible. Rogers explained that preference is shown men who are married.

"All right, if you must be married to hold a job I'll get married next week," Tucci replied. He was reminded of his financial circumstances but he left undaunted saying that he had made the acquaintance of a girl a few weeks ago and would ask her to marry him.

Wants Further Recognition.
Try to Get More Members
On Important Senate
Committees; McMasters
Demands Interstate Post.

Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—An attempt by some of the western Independents to gain further recognition in the Senate Republican organization forestalled final action today by the party's conference on the new Republican setup for the Senate.

Senator McMaster, of South Dakota, complained at the Republican conference that his seniority had been disregarded in placing Senator Hastings, of Delaware, on the Interstate Commerce committee.

Senator Howell, of Nebraska, moved that the new organization be referred back to the committee on committees with instructions to put McMaster on the Interstate Commerce committee.

Phipps' Motion.
Senator Phipps, of Colorado, countered with a motion that the committee on committees be instructed to follow the rule of seniority in all cases, pointing out that this would place Senators Coff, of Virginia, and Metcalf, of Rhode Island on the Finance committee in the place of Senators La Follette, Wisconsin, and Thomas of Idaho.

The Republican Regulars who conceded the demands of the western Independents that La Follette be placed on the finance committee, and who waived the rule of seniority to place Thomas, of the "Young Guard" also on this powerful committee, spoke somewhat resentfully of the new uprising, with Senator Moses of New Hampshire, doing the talking.

Another Parley.
Calling another party conference for tomorrow, Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, predicted that La Follette and Thomas would be recognized as members of the finance committee.

Senator McNary of Oregon was unanimously chosen as assistant leader of the party succeeding Senator Jones of Washington, who resigned to become chairman of the appropriations committee.

WHERE 72 CHILDREN DIED IN FIRE PANIC

The moving picture being shown that day was titled, ironically enough, "The Crowd." And as this picture was taken, the bodies of more than 72 dead and dying children still choked the aisles and stairways of the Glen Cinema house in Paisley, Scotland, where a small fire started a frantic stampede for exits among more than 1500 boys and girls at a special holiday performance. Here you see anxious relatives standing outside the theater immediately after the panic, which was one of the greatest theater disasters in modern Europe. Allen Bebbie, below, left, a football star, and Isa Muir, extreme right, candy salesgirl in the theater, both are credited with saving the lives of many children. That the panic did not assume even greater proportions was credited in part to the coolness displayed by James Glen, a theater attendant, shown in the center as he was questioned by a police official.

WOMAN WITNESS DEFIES SENATE LOBBY PROBERS

Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Mrs. Gladys Moon Jones, a young woman smartly garbed in blue, proved a defiant witness before the Senate Lobby committee today and her examination had proceeded only a short time before she had threatened to take "up with some one" the action of the committee in obtaining copies of her personal letters.

The attitude of Mrs. Jones, who is a publicity worker for the United States Sugar Association, toward the committee was indicated even before she took the witness stand. She had prepared a statement in which she accused Chairman Cavanaugh and his fellow members of playing politics, of trying to embarrass President Hoover and of violating the "spirit of the Fourth Amendment" by taking personal files from offices.

Wasting Time.
Caraway read a copy of the statement, laughed and remarked that no one "would read it anyhow" and a few minutes afterwards Mrs. Jones became exasperated and asserted with spirit:

"You are wasting so much time and the taxpayer's money asking me silly questions."

"Nor did the subsequent proceedings mollify hers. Several letters Mrs. Jones had written which were obtained from the files of H. C. Lakin, of New York, president of the Cuba Company, were produced.

"I maintain you have no right under the Fourth Amendment to have those letters in your hands," she said, her voice rising sharply. "I'm going to take it up with someone."

After testifying that she received $230 a week from the sugar association, $1,333 from the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba, and that she also did publicity for a number of other organizations, Mrs. Jones asserted that she had handled publicity for a low sugar duty and intended to continue to do so.

"So far as I can see there is not the slightest objection to it," Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, told her.

Turning to the newspapermen, Mrs. Jones said laughingly:

"Be sure and get that."

Broke Into Her Office.
Mrs. Jones protested that an investigator of the lobby committee had obtained correspondence from her office and said "he broke into my office," adding that she objected to "someone coming into my office without a warrant and taking my papers."

She said sugar interests advocating a high sugar duty elected "their lobbyists to the Senate."

Asked for particulars she said Senator Smoot was chairman of the tariff making Senate finance com-

15,000 Frozen to Death In China, Says Report

Shanghai, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Loss of 15,000 lives as the result of intense cold in the Suiyuan district of Inner Mongolia, near the border of Shanxi province, was reported today by the Nationalist government news agency, in a dispatch.

The report said unusually cold weather gripped the entire northwestern part of China, resulting in widespread suffering among the populace.

Upwards of 100 persons were reported to have frozen to death in two days in the tri-cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang. Twenty Chinese coolies were found dead in the streets of Hankow, and the search when the vapor which held visibility to 25 feet lifted. Friends of the men who asked the Coast Guard to make the search, said the boat was almost new and was powered with a new engine which they feared might have given some trouble.

PROHIBITION REPORT TO BE MADE MONDAY

River in Swanton, Vt. Higher Than in 1927

Swanton, Vt., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Vermont Marble Company mill, in the center of the town, and farms were inundated today as waters of the Missisquoi river reached a level higher than during the destructive flood of 1927. Attempts were being made to dynamite an ice jam at the mouth of the river to release the backwaters.

WAVES POUND FREIGHTER ON BLOCK ISLAND ROCK

Sailors Predict Ship Will Be Total Loss—Crew of 48 Remain Aboard—Coast Guard Cutters Standing by

Block Island, R. I., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The freighter Edward Luckenbach, which grounded on Southwest Point in a dense fog early today, will probably be a total loss, it was believed here as a strengthening southeaster pounded the vessel with heavy seas.

The freighter rests on a rocky section of the shore, scarcely 100 yards below high-water mark. She came on at high water, and as the tide ebbed the Luckenbach settled more firmly into her rocky bed.

Water entering through her bow hull flooded the engine room and the pounding broke open her fuel tanks. Oil washed ashore fueling the beach a slimy coating.

Although the surf continued to sweep over the freighter at low tide—she was so high her propeller was out of water—her crew of 48 elected to remain on board. The Luckenbacher rests beside to the beach and to the racing seas.

Coast Guard on Scene.

Coast Guardsmen from the cutter Henley, in a small boat, boarded the freighter, and another crew station gained her side in a surf boat after battling the heavy seas and a hard tide.

With the incoming tide and a strengthening southeast wind, Coast Guardsmen said the vessel's plight would be even more precarious. There appeared little chance of hauling her off into deep water even if she would remain afloat, which seemed doubtful because of damage to the hull.

Coast Guard Officer.
Ensign Miner, remained aboard with the Luckenbach's crew, to signal to the shore in the event of an emergency.

Residents who know the treacherous point are confident the vessel's doom is sealed. With wry humor they recall other vessels that have in the past attempted a "shot" across the point of land. The cut across the point was lost there a year ago and the schooner Lone Star left her bones on the point three years ago.

ZITO SUSPECTS LODGED IN JAIL

New Haven Police Prepar- ing Case to Be Presented to Jury on January 21.

New Haven, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Vincenzo Pero, one of four men arrested here in connection with the slaying of Dominick Zito, has been removed from police headquarters, to the county jail, it was learned today.

Orazio Maltese, Pero's brother-in-law and alleged leader of a bootleg and white slave ring of which Zito was a member, and Dominick Schifano were lodged in the county jail sometime ago. It is understood that Matteo Scuteri of Ansonia is being held in a cell at police headquarters.

Preparing Case.
Police today continued to prepare the case against Arthur Brown Corrigan to slaying Zito, and Maltese for presentation to the Grand Jury on Jan. 21. Brown who is serving a year's term in a New Jersey workhouse confessed that he was paid $15 by Maltese to slay Zito. First degree indictments are expected to be sought against Brown and Maltese.

Police have given no indications as to what charges if any will be lodged against Schifano, Pero and Scuteri.

Hartford, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The city of Hartford's appeal from the Superior Court judgment awarding $500 damages to Katherine Burlant, injured in a fall on Ann street in March 1928, was the first case before the Supreme Court of Errors today.

In the case of Abbie E. Farnham against Louis Schreiber, appealed by the plaintiff from Superior Court, and involving the incorporation of Louis Schreiber, Inc., the plaintiff originally claimed $12,000 damages and an injunction restraining the defendants from transferring their shares of Louis Schreiber, Inc., stock pending judgment. The Superior Court found the issues for the plaintiff against two of the four defendants, Louis Schreiber and the plaintiff, and awarded damages to the plaintiff from the first two defendants of $9,719.

FISHERMEN MISSING

Portland, Maine, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Two young Portland fishermen who started out yesterday in a 35-foot open boat to set their trawls 17 miles south southeast of Cape Elizabeth, were unreported today while Coast Guard vessels and shore stations stood ready to renew the search when the vapor which held visibility to 25 feet lifted. Friends of the men who asked the Coast Guard to make the search, said the boat was almost new and was powered with a new engine which they feared might have given some trouble.

President Decides to Trans- mit It to Congress; House Leaders Against Report Being Submitted to Joint Committee—Nature of Recommendations of Law Enforcement Commission Carefully Guarded.

Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Faced with a disinclination of House Republican leaders to have prohibition matters considered by a joint Congressional committee, President Hoover decided today to transmit the first report of the law enforcement commission to Congress on Monday.

Previously announced had been made that the recommendations, which deal with several different phases of the prohibition enforcement problem, would be sent to Congress as soon as the joint committee had been created. The Senate adopted a resolution for such a committee, but the House rules committee has failed to act upon it.

Leaders Argue.
Chairman Snell having announced, in agreement with Speaker Longworth and Majority Leader Tilson, that it was desired to handle the commission's recommendations in the regular way, it was stated at the White House that the President would place the various administrative officials of the government at the disposal of the regular House committees.

It also was stated at the White House that the whole question in its present tangled form could be expedited by the several regular House committees. The President's proposals directly and immediately.

To Be Made Public.
It was added that the White House had no interest in the question of parliamentary procedure; desired only expedition of legislation and would adapt itself entirely to the wishes of the House leaders in any method they might adopt for early consideration of the nature of the recommendations which the law enforcement commission made to the President. It has been carefully guarded at both the commission offices and the White House. The reports will be made public with their submission to Congress.

MRS JONES ON STAND. Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Glady's Moon Jones, the only woman to be questioned by the Senate lobby committee, went on the stand with a statement today in which she sharply criticized the committee's procedure and asserted it had degenerated into a mockery of the bill of rights.

Mrs. Jones, publicity worker for the United States Sugar Association, which opposes a raise in sugar tariff rates, said the committee could have performed a public service but had only succeeded in warning "vicious lobbies to be more aggressive." She added that the committee might look into the activities of those whose years of lobbying experience had caused them to replace fireproof filing cases with modern incinerators.

Bothering President. She also asserted that the chief purposes of the committee seemed to have been to create political difficulties for President Hoover and "to whitewash the 25 years activities in Washington of the domestic sugar interests."

Chairman Caraway had a copy of the statement when he entered the committee room. He sat down at the table, read it and laughed. "You weren't supposed to see that," Mrs. Jones told him jokingly. "Well, nobody will read it anyhow," Caraway said, "so it makes no difference."

Gets $200 a Week. Mrs. Jones told the committee her salary from the sugar association was $200 a week and that it also paid the office expense which ranged between $400 and $700 a week.

The witness said she issued news releases advocating a low sugar duty in the tariff bill. She added that she also had handled publicity for the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba, Fleischmann Yeast and the Ford Motor company.

In her statement Mrs. Jones said the committee was guilty of playing politics by striking "through witnesses at any political opponent whose name may have been mentioned in private letters."

PROHIBITION REPORT TO BE MADE MONDAY

RUSSIA'S JEWELS WORLD'S GREATEST Soviet Values Them at $264- 000,000—Are Kept in a Big Steel Cage.

Moscow.—(AP)—For better safe-keeping Russia's $264,000,000 collection of crown jewels, probably the finest array of gems ever assembled at one time, have been placed in a huge steel cage in the State bank, a great coffer resembling a steel-barred cell in an American prison.

The dazzling gems, which date from the time of the extravagant Catherine the Great to the last Czar, are placed in plush-lined leather cases on long tables within the "cage," where they may be viewed by Americans and other foreign visitors.

Upon presentation of proper credentials visitors are admitted to the great steel cage to see this wonderful Arabian nights display of diamonds, rubies, pearls and emeralds, much the same as they would today, except it is the body of Vladimir Llyitch Lenin, which lies in state in a wooden tomb in Red Square, attracts the attention and excites the curiosity of visitors quite so much as the crown jewels.

Hard to Get Permit
It is by no means easy to secure a permit to see this gorgeous assemblage, in the collection of which the Emperor and Empresses of Russia of centuries past ransacked the diamond mines of two hemispheres and spent staggering fortunes. Special guards within the steel-barred jewel-cage keep a vigilant eye on the precious treasure, which forms a part of the Government's gold reserve for the issue of paper money.

The principal gem in the great collection is the magnificent crown worn by Catherine the Great at her coronation in 1762, which is valued by the Soviet government at $24,000,000. Eager to see how it feels to wear a royal crown, many American visitors to the State bank tried to put this crown on their heads, but were prevented by Soviet guards.

The Orloff Diamond
Other Americans have been attracted by the huge Orloff diamond, which is as big as a bisected egg, and weighs 196 carats. This superb stone was presented by Count Orloff, one of Catherine the Great's favorites, as a birthday remembrance to his sovereign.

Ever since the 1917 revolution the Soviet government has been trying to dispose of the crown jewels for cash, or to convert them into tractors, locomotives or other pressing-needed articles. As the government, however, has placed a high antiquarian valuation on the gems, very few foreigners have offered to buy any of them.

The American jewelers and diamond experts who have examined the jewels declare the Soviet government will never succeed in selling the treasure on a basis of historic or antiquarian valuation. They insist the fact the gems once belonged to the Russian family who were murdered, and therefore have historic interests, only militates against their value, and that the only equitable valuation is one based upon the sheer weight of the jewels in carats, and appraised at current market prices.

TREES IN ADDISON HAVE LONG HISTORY

A triangular shaped plot of ground, one half acre in size located between the south end of Keeney street and Hebron Avenue, in Glastonbury, has a history dating back a hundred years, when a "cider brandy still" was in operation. The cellar excavation is there yet. Forty-five years ago this land was owned by William Hamford Howe. Mr. Howe owned the property north of this plot and lived in the house now occupied by George Fyler, a member of the Addison forest fire crew.

A word picture of a colored man, Simon Hall, making a call on Mr. Howe, and tipping his hat. "Good morning, Mr. Howe, I have come to see you to get your permission to set out a dozen maple trees on your triangle."

"Go right ahead and set out the trees, Simon. Your idea is a good one."

"Thank you, Mr. Howe," said Simon and he was happy to have the opportunity to plant trees that would benefit his fellow man in years to come. Those trees have thrived, several being 80 feet high and 83 inches around the butt—C. S. Strickland, in "The Wooden Nutmeg."

REAL SAILOR KING WILL OPEN PARLEY

Britain's Ruler Has Paced
Decks of Own Command
In His Days.

London—(AP)—Fate has called George V. Great Britain's "Sailor King" to open the five power arms conference which will compose a new refrain about naval parity for that stirring old hymn "Rule Britannia, Britannia Rules the Waves."

King George's part as presiding official at the first plenary session of the delegates in the royal gallery of the House of Lords will be formal execution of his duties as monarch. He will read an address prepared and approved by his ministers, but "Sailor King" calling convoys of great world powers for the purpose of reducing armaments appeals to the imagination.

Trained for the British Navy instead of for the throne, the British monarch probably could qualify for a post in the experts corps which will accompany the chief delegates to London, for from youth he planned a naval life and he had served fourteen years afloat and commanded his own ships before he was called to the throne. The Duke of Clarence, and turned his own career to higher and heavier responsibilities of government.

Is Real Sailor

The naval titles of King George are not merely honorary attributes of royal power. Before his illness last year he had the rugged look of an old seadog. In his time he has paced the decks of his own command, faced all the dangers of tempest and tide, maneuvered with the feet and brought his ship safely to port.

In his twelfth year the present king and his elder brother became naval cadets on the "Britannia" at Spithead and step by step he rose to his rank as an officer during fourteen years service in all parts of the world.

After five years together the two brothers were separated, the elder to prepare for kingship. Prince George became a sub-lieutenant.

Go Through College

Upon his return to England he passed through the Royal Naval College at Greenwich and the gunnery torpedo schools, corresponding to training at Annapolis Naval Academy. In 1885 he was promoted lieutenant and served on H. M. S. "Thunderer," "Dreadnought" and "Alexandria" in the Mediterranean squadron.

In 1889 he was put in command of the gunboat "Thrush" for service in the North American and West Indian station. Two years later saw another promotion, to commander. He commissioned H. M. S. "Melampus," the commander of which he relinquished on the death of his brother. Duties as eventual heir to the British crown precluded continuous life at sea.

In subsequent years he has been promoted captain, rear admiral and vice admiral because of his royal position, but the lower ranks he earned on his merit as a sailor and naval officer. Alone among monarchs and presidents, King George is a trained service man. From the sidelines of the conference, his palace of Buckingham, he will watch the proceedings of the naval negotiations in London with full knowledge and understanding of what is happening.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
(Exercises Stimulate)

Question:—Mrs. W. D. asks:—"Will you tell me the cause of nervousness directly after doing various exercises before retiring at night? This nervousness lasts about ten minutes. Is it some nervous trouble?"

Answer:—It is best to take your exercises early in the evening at least an hour before going to bed, the exercises if taken just before going to bed will stimulate you so much that you will probably stay awake for an hour or so. They do not really make you nervous, but endurance to such an extent you feel much stronger, and it is difficult to relax.

(Eczema and Carbohydrates)
Question:—Mrs. L. W. H. writes:—"My husband is troubled with eczema. He always eats oatmeal for his breakfast, and I have heard that it is bad for eczema. Should he stop eating oatmeal?"

Answer:—Those troubled with eczema should avoid all starches and sugars until the tendency to such skin eruptions is entirely overcome. Oatmeal is undoubtedly more irritating to this class of disorder than are the other starches.

(Noise in Ears)
Question:—Mrs. G. writes: "I have been following your diet for three months, have lost 20 pounds, feel fine and can sleep soundly. My liver was sluggish but this condition has greatly improved. Can you tell me the cause of a roaring in the ears, like the sound of hissing steam? It does not trouble me especially, but would be glad to be rid of it."

Answer:—The roaring in the ears comes either from catarrh of the inner ear, or from high blood pressure. Have your doctor take your blood pressure and in this way establish the cause of the trouble. You can follow the proper dietetic treatment to cure either of the conditions mentioned.

CANT STOP THIS HEN

New Lexington, O.—G. H. Starner prevented his Rhode Island hen from hatching her last nestful of eggs by removing them from the nest. But the next thing Starner saw of the hen she pranced back with four fluffy chicks behind her. Evidently the old lady hen had another batch of eggs to hatch, or hatched some other hen's batch.

THE NAVAL PARLEY

As the American delegation to the London conference on naval arms limitation is steaming eastward across the Atlantic there is, on the part of the people of the country, serene confidence that the London gathering will not be fruitless. And this in the face of the fact that the delegation goes to the conference without a definite program—because of that fact, in truth.

Heretofore, in all such gatherings, the nation has expected, because it has been led to expect, that the American delegation would either outsmart the other conferees or bust up the show, so to speak; it has been, first of all, anxious that the Yankee traders should not let the other fellow put anything over on them. Behind the delegations of every nation, heretofore, has been the same sentiment. Every arms conference has been a contest of wits, with a shrewd desire for military advantage of some sort the real animating impulse of every set of conferees.

In other words, previous disarmament conferences have not been held in complete good faith. They never could be held in complete good faith so long as each conferring nation held a blue print of naval advantage on its knee under the table and secretly consulted it at every stage of the proceedings.

That is why President Hoover made this parley, so far as America is concerned, a job for statesmen and kept the scheming naval strategists off the delegation. That is why the United States, at least, is going into this conference without a program and in a calm faith that naval arms limitation can be achieved if it be regarded as a matter of principle and not as a matter of technique—and in no other way.

THE "WET" PARADES

We do not believe that any thirty million Americans will parade next spring in a nation-wide demonstration against prohibition, in spite of statements to that effect made by enthusiasts who are preparing to organize a spectacular expression of wet sentiment. We do not believe that three millions will parade. It is the exceptional American, as a matter of fact, who is not fundamentally opposed to participating in any sort of political demonstration outside the polling booth. And we doubt whether many men and women, relatively speaking, would be willing to challenge the social reprisals sure to be inflicted on them by fanatic dries if they took part in any such demonstration as the one envisioned by the militant wets.

However, it is probable enough that if the proposed show of sentiment be properly organized it may be made rather impressive. And we have in mind one way in which it could be made especially so.

If the Society Against the Eighteenth Amendment or whatever group is undertaking the promotion of the display will go to work now and effect, during the remainder of the winter, the organization of all the bona fide total abstainers from alcoholic beverages who are utterly opposed to federal prohibition, and if it can induce one out of three of these persons to parade in units, they will be presenting an argument that may have a real influence on the outcome of the struggle.

If this particular element in the population would show its colors it would probably amaze not only the dries but a great many of the wets to learn how numerous it is. Drinking wets may be accused of opposing prohibition through the urge of their own appetites, and however untrue the charge may be it is difficult for them to effectually disprove it. But the non-drinker who opposes prohibition on principle and because he is convinced that it is a mistake is in an unassailable position. We are convinced that there are enough of such persons in America to make a procession greater than all the armies that ever passed in review on the face of the earth.

THAT MONOXIDE KILLER

Very meagre is the announcement that a professor of Johns Hopkins University has discovered a means of eliminating the carbon monoxide liberated by automobile engines which has occasioned numberless deaths when confined in garages and nobody knows how much injury to health when mixed with the air of congested areas. This announcement was made several days ago and we have been waiting for amplification of the information to become public. Rather surprisingly the matter seems to have stirred up no great amount of interest.

The catalytic agent which Professor Frazer has discovered will, he asserts, not only break down the poisonous carbon monoxide but neutralize all offensive odors and consume exhaust smoke. If the claims made for the catalyst are warranted by the facts—and it is not customary for Johns Hopkins professors to talk at random for publication—and if the cost of application is not excessive, this would seem to be one of the most important developments in connection with the automobile in a long time.

Since the subject is one that naturally lends itself to wide discussion and inquiry, and since it has scarcely been mentioned after the first brief statement, one wonders whether it has not been deliberately squelched as a subject of discussion—perhaps until the big boys of the many automotive ramifications have bottled up, if not the rights to the discovery, then possibly the sources of ingredient supply.

EDUCATION

An address made by Dr. Thomas H. Briggs, head of the secondary education department of Teachers College, Columbia University, delivered at Harvard yesterday, is reported in a special dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune, part of which we quote:

So ruthlessly has public money been spent on schools in the last decade that state and district attorneys in almost any American community could present indictments for malfeasance in office and misappropriation of public funds against educational authorities. Dr. Briggs said. The investment that the American people have put into education has "failed to produce even reasonable dividends," he continued, and "in this failure, educators have squandered the public investment and weakened society."

"The social prestige resulting from the passing of courses that contain no vital interest and later manifest no material influence on action or on character is mischievous and deceiving," Dr. Briggs said. "It wastes annually millions of dollars of public money and precious time, and it deludes youth into a false sense of possession, which the world assuredly, if gradually, corrects."

"There has been no 'respectable' achievement in public education, according to Dr. Briggs. A 70 per cent average in mathematics is not 'respectable for schools' and 'in business it would soon lead to bankruptcy or to the penitentiary.' Students of French in high schools are not able to translate simple sentences, and Latin, educators to the contrary, interferes with English expression more than it contributes to it. They generally learn to decipher rather than to read Latin."

It is indictments like this to which the educational wasters will have to make convincing answer before long or yield their control over the public purse.

DON'T BLAME THE COPS

Any disposition to jeer at the police of Connecticut or the other New England states for failure to recapture the three convicts who recently escaped from the State Prison at Wethersfield seems to us to be ill considered.

The difficulties in catching either escaped convicts or fleeing criminals of any sort has been enormously complicated in recent years. Since the development of the automobile there is probably a hundred times as much inter-community movement of population as there was thirty or forty years ago, and the extent of it is increasing all the time. Every road, every little hamlet, experiences the presence of any number of strangers nowadays, and nobody notices them. On every hand are parked automobiles waiting for somebody to come along and drive them away. A police search for a wanted individual is a good deal like trying to identify one particular pond shiner among a moving school of hundreds.

Yet it is true that most escaped convicts are eventually returned to their prisons. This comes about, however, in the great majority of cases, through their being apprehended in the commission of some new crime and being identified by the police through the inter-department system of descriptions.

If Roland Lalone and his two companions are not all back behind the bars of Wethersfield within a year or two it will be surprising. Meantime if there is anyone to blame for their not being there now it is hardly the police.

LIKE BRYAN?

There is some justification in recent events for wondering whether Senator Borah doesn't fall into the classification of those men who, possessing unquestioned talents much in excess of the endowment of the average person and displaying in later youth or early middle age many of the qualities of greatness, nevertheless peter out at a time of life when by all the traditions of the race they should be still growing in mental and moral stature and in influence.

This phenomenon is by no means rare enough to approach the unique. Its most conspicuous example in this country was, perhaps, the late William Jennings Bryan, who at thirty-six was almost a superman and at fifty-six was little more than a doddering shadow of his former self.

Borah's silly petulance in blaming the personnel of the enforcement services "from top to bottom" for the failure of prohibition was altogether unworthy of a real thinker. And now his demand that the military government of Haiti be abolished without waiting for a report from a special commission asked for by President Hoover is the cheapest kind of cracker-box statesmanship.

It really looks as though the big man of Idaho were slipping.

DRAWING A CROWD

It may possibly be that the rioting of more than four thousand persons because they could not get into a New York lecture on the Einstein theory indicates an avid thirst for scientific knowledge on the part of a surprisingly large number of persons in the metropolis; but it is our guess that at least seven out of ten of the gate-crashers had the general impression that Mr. Einstein's formula has to do with making 10 per cent grow where 5 per cent grew before.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

THE TREATMENT FOR VARICOSE VEINS AND ULCERS

Varicose veins occur more often after middle life and more often to women than to men. The veins of the lower leg are more often affected, becoming enlarged, numb, or painful, and of a purplish-blue in color, so that it is easy to see them wending their tortuous way just beneath the skin. In the beginning, there is a sense of weight without pain, due to the weight of the blood which the valves in the veins are not holding back properly. People who stand at their work are most often victims of this disease. It is interesting that man is about the only animal who suffers from this trouble, probably because since he stands upright, there is a great pressure of blood upon the veins of the legs.

Varicose veins, unless carefully treated, tend to become worse as the vein becomes widened and its valves stretched, allowing the blood to throw extra weight upon the next valve below. Ulcers may also form if the disease exists for a long time.

The usual causes of varicose veins are prolapsed abdominal organs, pressure of feces, or tight garments such as garter or belts. Many patients suffering from this disorder are advised to have the veins surgically removed or rendered fibrous by the injection treatment, or the patient may be advised to wear a rubber stocking. I believe that a more satisfactory cure depends upon a general health-building regime to improve the blood so that the veins will have a proper nourishment for developing strong walls. It is also necessary to correct any prolapsus or a tumor of the abdominal organs which may be pressing on the veins. Local treatments should also be given if one wishes to reduce the enlarged veins to a normal size. Certain kinds of electrical apparatus which can only be used by a physician are extremely valuable for this. You can benefit yourself, however, by taking certain exercises for improving the circulation. A good exercise is taken while lying on the back on a slanting board with the feet elevated, as in this position the abdominal organs are pulled away from the lower pelvis and this relieves the congestion on the lower extremities. Gentle massage while the legs are elevated is also beneficial. The strokes should be made from the extremities toward the heart. After the veins have been treated in this manner, you can benefit yourself by application of a lump of ice to the enlarged veins. This should be done several times daily. The ice may be held against the vein with a towel so that your hand will not become too cold, but the smooth part of the ice should be placed directly against the swollen vein while the leg is in the air so the blood has an opportunity to drain out of the vein.

After three or four months of this treatment, the vein will usually become strengthened and contracted by this ice treatment. During the cold weather a substitute for the ice can be had by sitting in the bathtub and elevating the leg and allowing the cold water to run over the part where the enlarged veins are located. The ice treatment, however, produces the best results.

When varicose ulcers have developed, there is at first only a discharge of serum, but in advanced cases blood and pus are also exuded. The best treatment for varicose ulcers can be administered by a doctor who uses the actinic light. Often

(Red In Eyes)

Question:—Miss M. M. S. asks: "What causes red streaks in one's eyeballs and what can be done, if anything, to make them clear again?"

Answer:—A common cause of red streaks in the eyeballs is from eye strain caused from reading too much or staying up too late nights in the bright lights. There are other causes from various toxemias due to constipation and sluggishness of the eliminative organs.

(Cod Liver Oil)

Question:—J. S. asks: "What is your opinion of taking cod-liver oil for a grown person who is about twenty pounds under weight, not sickly, but not strong either, and with little endurance? I eat moderately of good wholesome foods and fruits in proper combinations and try to live in accordance with all the rules of hygiene, but cannot seem to gain in weight and vitality."

Answer:—I have never had any remarkable success in giving patients cod-liver oil. If you are twenty pounds under weight it is because you do not assimilate your food well enough. A better selection of food combinations will help as well, and also an increased amount of exercise to make your muscles and tissues call for more nourishment. Only weight gained in this manner will be of any value to you.

(Dimples)

Question:—Henry writes: "I am a youth of eighteen. Can you tell me how to get rid of a dimple that is growing in my skin? Would an operation be necessary, and to what expense? What caused it to grow?"

Answer: A dimple is a perfectly natural formation with some people and generally considered a mark of beauty. It might be possible to get rid of it by surgery, but if you consult your girl friends I am sure they will convince you that you should keep whatever dimples you have.

Bloomers are named after Ann Bloomer, who was the first woman to wear this type of dress.

"BEWARE PARROTS" DOCTOR'S WARNING

Three Persons Critically Ill from Contact With Imported Birds.

Washington, Jan. 10 — (AP) — Surgeon General Cuming of the Public Health Service, today advised avoidance of contact with recently imported parrots until officials complete an investigation of a highly fatal disease several cases of which are thought to have been contracted from the birds in Maryland.

In response to an appeal from Governor Ritchie, two public health doctors have been sent to Baltimore and Annapolis to study the condition of three persons, critically ill with what is thought to be psittacosis or "parrot's disease," the symptoms of which are similar to those of pneumonia and typhoid fever.

Dr. Cuming said he did not fear an epidemic of the disease, since it is generally believed that it is transmitted only from bird to human being, and not from person to person. He urged, however, that contact with parrots and their cages be avoided.

"I advise the precaution" explained Dr. Cuming "simply for the safety of individuals who otherwise might be exposed. There is at present no indication of widespread prevalence of the disease, but I would urge that the people avoid contact with possible carriers, the birds, until we have completed investigations."

Scanning reports from Hamburg, Germany, that a "parrot's disease" alarm had been sounded by many country, Dr. Cuming called assistant surgeon general into consultation today with himself and Dr. G. W. McCoy, director of the hygienic laboratory.

How's She Hitting? Liniment Care

By ISRAEL KLEIN

With cold weather practically here, the careful motorist should watch the daily weather reports more closely than he has during the rest of the year. For as the weather goes so goes the operations of the car, especially in relation to the cooling system.

On the temperature of each locality depends the amount of anti-freeze solution one should use in his cooling system. This is especially important if denatured alcohol is the anti-freeze.

Proper proportions of anti-freeze and glycerine for various ranges of temperature in winter, have been worked out by engineers of the United States Bureau of Standards. These engineers have formulated a table based on their findings, in order to guide the motorist properly in the care of his automobile in winter.

Table with 3 columns: Fahrenheit, Alcohol, Glycerine. Rows show percentages for different temperature ranges.

The alcohol here considered is the denatured variety, 188 proof. The glycerine is the pure, distilled chemical that is being put out in several commercial forms for radiator use alone. Forms of ethylene glycol may be considered for the purpose of this table as "glycerine."

The temperature given is the lowest to which the anti-freeze and water may be used with safety. Below that temperature the proportion should be increased in order to keep the solution from freezing.

Water freezes at 32 degrees Fahrenheit. In order to keep it from freezing when the outside temperature is below 32, a proportion of anti-freeze must be added to the water. Since the freezing point of the anti-freeze is lower than that of water, the mixture of this liquid with the water of the cooling system lowers the freezing point of the resultant solution proportionately and tends to keep it from freezing.

This is the reason for the use of anti-freeze.

As the temperature of the air outside drops, it is obvious that more anti-freeze would have to be added. Thus, according to the table given, if the outside temperature is expected to go down to zero, which is 32 degrees below water's freezing point, alcohol to the amount of 38 per cent, or nearly two-fifths the total cooling system content, should be added after that amount of water has been drained out. If glycerine is used, the proportion is slightly higher.

In order to know the proper amounts to use for any cooling system, the capacity of each system must be known. This is furnished in the instruction booklet that goes with each automobile, or it can be ascertained from the various dealers or service stations.

In the case of alcohol, only so much should be used as is necessary to satisfy present conditions, or at least for a time until a rise in temperature is expected. When the rise comes, it is advisable to drain out some of the solution and add water, or the alcohol would cause the solution to boil out too quickly. When it becomes colder again, more alcohol should be added.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — By fast thinking and adroit maneuvering, the Hoover administration has solved the great Gann problem in a manner which satisfies nobody but which at least has the merit of making the situation no more embarrassing.

Inasmuch as it had been expected that the controversy over precedence between Mrs. Edw. Gann and Mrs. Alice Longworth, wife of the speaker, would have to be decided definitely and irrevocably by the White House, this successful passage of the buck is no small achievement.

The official hostesses of Washington, except in the diplomatic establishments, have followed the White House lead. The vice president and Mrs. Gann are invited to all large functions where precedence doesn't figure, such as balls and major receptions, but American officials have avoided inviting them to dinners where the speaker or the chief justice or any of the diplomats were also to be invited.

How the Job Was Done Mrs. Gann has been frequently entertained, however, by the official hostesses of Washington society.

The White House strategy in dodging the missiles of the Gann-Longworth war has been as follows:

First, besides the formal customary dinners given each year to the cabinet, the supreme court and the speaker, there will also be one for the vice president, Mr. Curtis and Mrs. Gann will be the guests of honor at the vice presidential dinner and Mrs. Gann will take Seat No. 1 at the president's right, but they will not be at the other dinners. If there were no vice presidential dinner the omission would seem rather pointed.

The Hoovers refrain from inviting the Longworths and the vice president to other dinners, such as those recently given to President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico and the Japanese naval delegation. Similarly they avoid the large dinners given to the Longworths and the vice president to other dinners, such as those recently given to President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico and the Japanese naval delegation.

Mrs. Gann was conceded something of a point on New Year's Day when she and Vice President Curtis descended the grand stairway at the White House directly behind Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, ahead of the cabinet couples. But of course the vice president and his wife have always followed down the stairs and the diplomats march in line alongside her father, the secretary of the treasury, whose official hostess she was. The New Year's day parade downstairs marked the large amount of recognition yet handed Mrs. Gann by the president, but it doesn't change the status quo. The president hardly could have told Curtis to "leave down the stairs" or make her walk by herself at the end of the procession.

Mr. Gann came too, of course, and was ushered directly into the Blue Room while his wife and brother-in-law were taken upstairs with the cabinet folks. In the Blue Room assemble a certain select group of minor notables on such occasions, roped off from the multitude. The cabinet couples go there after parading down the stairs and the diplomats have the privilege of assembling there after they have been received.

Incidentally, the Longworths and Curtis and Mrs. Gann were observed talking pleasantly together in the Blue Room during the reception.

Plenty of Recognition So much for the White House. Meanwhile, the diplomats are still left holding the bag — the only group in society which has conceded Mrs. Gann full recognition. They had to. Secretary of State Kellogg, leaving office, ruled that Mrs. Gann should be parked below both diplomatic wives and the wives of the highest American officials. Curtis protested publicly and Stimson, appealed to by the diplomats, obliterated the Kellogg ruling by refusing to take any stand.

But when he added that this government would appreciate any courtesies extended to Mrs. Gann there wasn't much left for them to do but to award her the precedence she wanted. But of course they don't expect the Longworths to come to the same parties. Like the rest of society in Washington, they have carefully avoided that since Mrs. Longworth and Mrs. Gann to her dinner and both refused to go.

WAPPING

Wapping Grange will hold its first regular meeting of the new year next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The subject will be New Year and Roll Call and the literary program will be in charge of the worthy lecturer, Mrs. Hattie D. Lane.

The First Congregational church of South Windsor who have just engaged as their pastor, Rev. Harry S. Martin, have just installed a new bulletin board in front of the church which was a gift of Jean E. Shepard and they also have the money raised for a new pipe organ for the church.

Irving W. Metcalf of Springfield, Mass., who struck and killed James Riordan, last week, was released under $1,000 bonds following an investigation by the police. Metcalf was driving north on Main street and was about to meet another car coming from the opposite direction. At that moment he saw a man step from the edge of the highway. Robert McKinnon a student at the Springfield college was in the car approaching from the other direction and he claims Mr. Riordan stepped in front of the Metcalf car.

FIGHTS WITH THIEF

New York, Jan. 10 — (AP) — Dr. Nicholas Partos, a 48-year-old manufacturing druggist of slight physique, struggled for more than five minutes early today with a thief who had secreted himself in the third-floor ante room of the Partos home in Fifth avenue.

The thief, armed with a section of iron pipe, broke away after beating Dr. Partos over the head, and fled in his stocking feet, leaving behind a pair of black shoes, size 11; a dark fedora hat and a black overcoat.

READING SPEECHES IS NOW IN STYLE

For Generations, Members of Parliament Would Never Think of Using Notes.

London. — (AP) — Socialists in the House of Commons are taking a running start to break another old Conservative tradition in Parliamentary circles.

Conservatives gasp. Liberals look pained, but the Laborites go right ahead — and read their speeches. For generations it has been deemed a prerequisite for election to the House to have an ability to orate "extemporaneously" at great length without even the aid of notes. But more and more Labor ministers and important members are very frankly rattling their sheaves of papers and openly reading their speeches.

Some Exceptions There have always been a few exceptions to the unwritten tradition. Ministers making important policy statements have usually assured themselves and their colleagues of accuracy by reading prepared documents. Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Lloyd George, both availed themselves of the privilege during their days as prime ministers. Mr. MacDonald does it, too, and is very frank about it, though with ordinary discourses he relies on nothing but his ready wit and memory.

Woman Reads Speeches Miss Margaret Bondfield, the sole woman minister, when introducing her unemployment insurance bill, read her clearly stated exposition of the bill from type-written sheets. Another woman member caused a very grave shock when she read her maiden speech from a loose-leaf note book, and made no attempt to conceal it. Arthur Henderson, the foreign secretary, reads the greater part of his addresses, while several other CONNECTICUT girl Prize Winner ...

"MARIAN was delicate and nearly always fretful," says Mrs. A. Bacon, 115 Westland St., Hartford. "She was sallow and bilious; didn't want to eat and couldn't digest her food right."

"California Fig Syrup has changed all that; and made her a different girl. It regulated her bowels quickly, improved her appetite and digestion. She has had no trouble since; but has continued to gain until today friends say she's a regular prize winner for health."

Mothers by thousands are praising California Fig Syrup. Physicians endorse it. A pure vegetable production; it is safe for any child. The prompt relief it brings bilious, head-achy, constipated children lasts; because it helps tone and strengthen bowels and stomach. Appetite increases; digestion improves with its use! A youngster's entire system benefits. Next time bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness warn of constipation, try it with your child and see how it helps!

AUSTRALIA IS HOME OF STONE AGE MAN

Scientific Party Returns from Wilds With Thousands of Feet of Films.

Sydney, Australia.—(AP)—In remote Australia, untouched by civilization, man still exists in the Stone Age. A few years more, and the opportunity he presents for scientific study will probably have gone.

Under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute and at the invitation of the Australian Scientific Research Association a party headed by Dr. Porteus, professor of racial physics of the University of Hawaii, Dr. Paul Wirtz of Honolulu and Ralph King, a photographer, have, by penetrating inland from the far north west coast of the continent, obtained more than 25,000 feet of extraordinarily valuable films, and a mass of data.

Natives Hostile

The natives were shy and hostile, and several times spears were thrown at the party, but no serious opposition was met. Great difficulty was encountered in coming into contact with the natives, but films of high scientific value were obtained, mainly at Osborne Island, where the party succeeded in winning over a native through whom they gradually won the confidence of the inhabitants, who had taken to the bush, but who drifted back in bunches and dropped their weapons as a sign of friendship.

Fascinated Cameraman

Mr. King, who has been on many expeditions and who has studied the customs of the natives of Tibet, Africa, China and Peru, says never before was he so fascinated and often he became so interested that he forgot to operate his camera. The expedition also made a large collection of native birds, animals, and reptiles for scientific purposes.

In Western Queensland

The expedition came to an untimely conclusion on account of Dr. Wirtz having his hand poisoned by a piece of rusty wire. Sepsis became so acute that, under the greatest difficulties, he was rushed by air and rail over 2,500 miles to Sydney for special treatment. His life was saved, but he was at the point of death several times en route.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 10.—Out in the horseshoe pitching belt, where the old boys gather of summer afternoons, they may be interested to know that "the horseshoe king of the world" is a New Yorker and not a small town.

His name is Pete Conty, and almost every day of his life his auto makes the rounds of the Manhattan blacksmith shops, picking up as many as 10,000 shoes in an afternoon. All of which is sold as old metal to the foundries. His route runs well "up state" and, so Pete will tell you, he's had it for going on 25 years.

Horseshoes, I learn, bring a better price than other old metal.

"But I have to dig harder for them every day," says Pete, a bit sadly. "Oh, yes, there are still a lot of smithies die out. Three or four quit just a little while ago. Someone wanted to build a new building on the places where they had their shops. Most of 'em got down by the river now. You gotta go around near Manhattan bridge and there. We cover more territory and get less shoes. I s'pose that some day, I'll have to go trading in old iron or something."

During those very, very gay holiday parties of recent memory, an entirely new "hoax" made its appearance. Recently, in discussing rackets of one sort or another, I think I chronicled the present vogue for not-so-practical jokes, in which I told of the "professional insulter."

It seems that several of my friends have since encountered a "badger game," which is just in good clean fun, and all that. The "badger game," you will recall, was one of the old, old forms of blackmail. The pretty lady and the trusting male found their way to a room. Whereupon the lady called for help, whether or not it was needed. In walked someone who said he was an irate husband, and hush money was passed to keep everything quiet.

At any rate, a very, very pretty and clever young woman has made her appearance recently at the gayer parties. Knowing that a few cocktails lead to hand holding and some necking, she waits for two of the more prominent guests to behave indiscreetly. If the gentleman is slightly tipsy, so much the better.

She approaches him and says, with considerable fire, "Now, I've got you. I've just been waiting for you to do this. . . . You don't remember me. Do you?"

The boob blinks and admits that he doesn't. The girl tells the boob that just a year ago at a party, he made love to her. . . . made her believe him. . . . and now he must pay.

At which several people pretend to get excited and placate the actress. But no—she will have her way.

Queer Twists In Day's News

Toronto—Ninety-eight people out of every 100 are financially incompetent, as Dr. S. S. Huebner, professor of insurance and commerce at the University of Pennsylvania, figures it. Only one out of ten men at the age of 65 has enough money to assure him an income of even $50 a month. Dr. Huebner spoke to Toronto underwriters.

New York—Folks will probably be more suspicious now of sudden delivery of "real stuff," just off a ship. Edward Sonin and Albert Glasser are under arrest. Their game, say investigators, was to go to friends or some one who had just gone abroad, present a forged radiogram arranging for completion of a deal or something such, whisper that liquor was meant, collect in advance, then send a case of water.

Boston—The Rev. George H. Woodley, a Jesuit missionary, has purchased a plane and is learning to become a pilot while home visiting relations. He hopes to take planes with which to transport medicine and supplies to needy ones who have had to wait weeks for dog teams.

New York—Harry F. Sinclair is quitting Fifth avenue. He has sold his residence at the corner of Seventy-ninth street. He purchased it in 1918 and had as neighbors Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. James B. Duke and John D. Ryan. The assessed valuation is $415,000.

Bournemouth, England—The inventor of the tin hat is dead. Alfred Bates, manufacturer, devised the steel helmet when casualties from shrapnel were heavy and he probably saved millions of lives. Memories of him are in many a home in Great Britain and the U. S. A.

New York—The laird of the island of Pula, a professor of Greek art at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn., is here after his second shipwreck. Jan. B. Stoughton Holburn survived the torpedoing of the Lusitania and was 45 minutes in the water. His second wreck was near the island he inherited and he was in the water three hours. One leg is still bandaged as a result.

Boston—It has been warm lately, but come cold or heat Vilhjalmur Stefansson Arctic explorer, proposes to continue to go bareheaded. He has no use for hats.

New York—Magistrate Doyle of Long Island City sympathizes with persons whose sleep is disturbed at 3 a. m., but proposes to enforce the law. Awakened by the playing of a hurdy hurdy, George Hanser fired at James Casvars with an air rifle hitting his nose. Regrettably the magistrate held Hanser for trial, remarking that if every victim of noise grabbed a gun it would sound as if the war had started all over again.

PROFESSORS UPHOLD SEX QUESTIONNAIRE

Washington, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Association of University Professors through a special investigating committee has severely censured the authorities of the University of Missouri for disciplining two members of the faculty who approved the circulation of a sex questionnaire among the students of that institution. The findings of the committee, published today, denied the charges of President Stratton D. Brooks and the board of curators of the university that the list of questions was shocking to the students and tended to make them lax morally.

The circulation of the questionnaire was approved by Professor Harmon O. Degraff who was dismissed from the university, and by Prof. Max F. Meyer who was suspended. The investigation of the committee was undertaken at the request of President Brooks and many members of the faculty and students in the courses of Degraff and Meyer.

LEAVES FOR GENOA.

London, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Arthur Henderson, British minister for foreign affairs, left today for Geneva where he will attend the meeting next week of the Council of the League of Nations. BUILDING AIRPORT ON AZORES ISLAND

Portugal Government Erecting First International Drome in the World.

Terceira Island, Azores Archipelago.—(AP)—Far out in the Atlantic ocean, on the little island of Terceira, which is one of the Azores group, the Portuguese government is erecting the first international, transoceanic airrome in the world. American and other airmen seeking to span the Atlantic or circumnavigate the entire globe by air, will find on this rocky coast on the Atlantic, a highly modern air base, equipped not only with the most approved form of slipways and hangars, but with spare parts and most skilled aviation mechanics ready to lend assistance in any direction.

Terceira island is 3,250 miles from New York and 2,500 miles from Le Bourget, the great French aviation center.

Ideal Spot
This island on the Atlantic was chosen as a landing by Portuguese aviation experts because it is the most sheltered of all the numerous islands constituting the Azores Archipelago and is free from high winds and other atmospheric disturbances, which hinder an airman's path. Unlike most of the other islands in the Atlantic which are of volcanic origin and mountainous, Terceira possesses the unusual virtue of being flat and is covered with a smooth and luxuriant growth of grass.

To Take Two Years
It will require from 18 months to two years to complete the new air station. The government has already approved the necessary credits which are not to exceed five million dollars. In taking this step, the Portuguese government has acknowledged that modern aviation, even with highly skilled pilots, is not altogether safe unless a series of floating airbases such as those urged by noted American aviation experts and all along by Louis Bleriot, the first aviator to fly the British channel, are established along the route of flight across the ocean.

It is believed by Portuguese aviation authorities that if such a landing point, as the Lisbon government is now establishing in the Azores, existed a few years ago, many of the airmen who lost their lives in attempting to bridge the Atlantic without a stop might have been saved.

SEIZURES AT BORDER

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Vermont Customs officers seized 183,000 bottles of liquor and 180 automobiles from rum runners during 1929. Arrested law violators totaled 3,000.

In the annual report of Collector of Customs Henry C. Whitehill published today, vehicles and merchandise to the value of $58,531 and three boats and nine pack horses were also reported seized.

Indictments were obtained against 101 persons out of 115 brought before the Grand Jury and 98 of the 101 were convicted before a United States District Court. Thirteen of the 22 defendants who stood jury trial for liquor offenses were acquitted. Total fines aggregated $13,341.

ASSESSED TOO HIGH

Boston, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in a report today on the textile tax situation during 1929 quoted State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long that the assessed values of cotton mills in Massachusetts are higher than their present-day value.

Mr. Long has told the association, the report says, that he knows of "no instance in Massachusetts where textile property changing hands has brought the assessed value, even where the assessment was admittedly low as of conditions prevailing 10 years ago."

NICE SURPRISE

Stockholders of 18 companies in the automotive industry were pleasantly surprised in December, 1929, when these companies mailed dividend checks amounting to more than $3,451,700 to them on a single day.

Rash Romance

He said, eloquently, that six weeks with her would pass like a dream.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH CAMERON, typist in a New York publishing house, who is snubbed by fellow workers, attracts the interest of ARTHUR KNIGHT, her employer. Knight is a reserved widower, lonely since his daughter, TONY, 18, and son, JUNIOR, 16, spend most of their time away from home.

Judith fascinates Knight. He takes her to dinners and concerts. Meanwhile the girl continues to keep mysterious appointments with a young man known only as "DAN". KATHRYN TUPPER, office executive, has acquired a dislike for the girl because of Knight's favor. Miss Tupper gives Judith the most distasteful tasks. At the end of a whirlwind courtship Knight asks Judith to marry him and she accepts. The next evening she is nervous and distracted and tells him she has something to confess.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V

Arthur Knight gave the girl beside him a quick glance.

Their car had halted in the teeming Fifth avenue traffic. Limousines, roadsters, a great green bus and several smart-looking delivery cars crowded about, each ready to spring at the flash of the green electric signal.

"What do you mean?" he asked in a still, far-away sounding voice. "What is it, Judith?"

"I mean—oh, you're so good! You've been so wonderful. I don't know how to say it."

The blue eyes turned away from him. Her cheeks looked very pale.

"Are you trying to tell me my dear, that you've—changed your mind?"

"How quiet he seemed, but what repressed fervor spoke through that stillness!"

Now the girl's eyes met Knight's frankly. In their sapphire depths he read appeal, embarrassment and misery.

"Oh, it's NOT that, Arthur! It's not that. But you don't know anything about me. You've never even asked."

With a sigh, as though the burden of years had been lifted from his shoulders, Arthur Knight's expression changed. He was gay, bright and smiling again.

"So that's it! You poor, foolish child, you. Stop it, Judith. Stop it this instant. No more theatricals!"

"But, Arthur, you don't understand!"

Immediately the man sobered. He placed a large masculine hand over the girl's small one (the one wearing the diamond) and met her gaze directly.

"I understand," he said, "better than you think, Judith, there is one thing of which I have prided myself all these years. I have been with Hunter Brothers. Not one man or woman whom I selected for a post of trust has ever failed. Not one of them! Do you know why?"

"Because when men come to me seeking employment I look into their faces and make my decisions. They come bringing recommendations. I don't want recommendations—I want character. Do you know, Judith, that from the very first day I saw your lovely eyes I have known you were the girl I had been seeking? Seeking with out even knowing it. Why, beloved!—there's nothing you can tell me about yourself. Don't talk about anything that hurts you. There isn't any past, dear. It's all future. Our future!"

The blue eyes were stary now, stary with tears.

Judith touched a wisp of handkerchief to her cheek.

"Oh, Arthur, I think you're wonderful."

"And you're going to be happy now?"

With a little choking laugh the girl nodded.

"I want—oh, I want so much to make you happy!" she said.

It was all over. Not once again did Judith Cameron attempt to confide to her fiancé affairs which troubled her. Not once again did Knight refer to this conversation, but for him as for many another husband, the day was to come when he should curse memory and curse himself for a fool.

Perhaps it was the reaction which made the girl and her companion very that evening. Knight ordered a magnificent repast and over it they made sentimental jokes and then serious plans.

He was anxious to have the ceremony performed. Judith seemed eager, too. She told him she had announced her departure from the office but did not recite Miss Tupper's farewell speech. Perhaps Judith, basking in her sweetheart's approval, was afraid to let him know others disapproved of her.

Arthur said he could arrange for six weeks' absence from New York. It was too bad their trip couldn't be longer. It might be arranged, of course, by waiting until after Christmas. Neither of them wanted to do that.

"Six weeks," said Judith, "is really a long time."

He said eloquently that six weeks with her would pass like a dream.

"You say things so beautifully," Judith told him.

"You DO them that way."

They talked about their honeymoon. Arthur Knight enumerated possibilities—Cuba, South America, Bermuda, a quick trip to Europe, California perhaps, or Canada.

Judith's imagination flew as he talked. Her eyes narrowed until the long lashes almost met. Her glance was far, far away on distant shores.

"I've never been on a ship," she told him.

"Nothing like it!"

"We could run down and see Tony in Italy," Knight added as an afterthought.

"Would you—mind—if we didn't go to Europe?"

"Why, of course not, dear. It's for you to choose."

So they settled upon Bermuda. He told her that Bermuda skies were bluer even than those of the Mediterranean. He described the coral beach, the little pink and white cottages perched on rocky islands. He told her they would sail in silver-winged boats in the moonlight and play in the surf in the sun. And they would visit the harbor where pirates' treasure lies buried and Judith could pin hibiscus blossoms in her hair.

The wedding, they decided should take place in 10 days. The marriage would be at nine o'clock and two hours later they would sail.

Judith agreed, with excitement in her eyes, that everything she needed to do could be accomplished in that time. But it would mean a busy week!

The subject of her trousseau arose.

"You'll need fol-de-rols," Knight said. "Bermuda's an out-of-door place. Lots of linen and cotton sport stuff and fancy dresses for evenings. Let's be quite sensible. I'm going to open accounts for you in the morning but you'll want cash too. Of course the accounts will take care of the major purchases."

He handed her a check for $500.

"You're much too good to me," Judith whispered.

During the days that followed she shopped assiduously. Judith Cameron knew good things and how to buy them. It was a delight to her to pass by millinery salons where "our own reproductions" were being sold to buy a black hat and another in beige with the names of their famous Parisian creators demurely stitched in the lining. Those hats, which looked like nothing in particular as the saleswoman held them up for inspection transformed Judith into a sophisticated, worldly young woman.

And Judith was style-wise. She did not need lessons to slant an Agnes turban at precisely the right line.

She bought a sleek and glowing black broadtail coat which seemed the utmost in elegance. She made this purchase only after consulting Arthur, and hearing his reassurances that the tremendous price was not an extravagance. She bought a soft tweed wrap with voluminous collar for ship wear and a clinging velvety sort of mantle edged with fur for formal evenings.

The cloak was black, designed to wear over her most splendid frock. The gown was of satin, cut and molded to her very figure. The extreme lowness of the back was an amazing contrast to the naive, youthfully simple bodice in front. The long swaying skirt gave majesty, and a single, spangled ornament added grace.

There were two other evening frocks, one sapphire and the other of orchid. Judith bought sports clothes in careful numbers, undergarments of cobwebby texture, negligees that were soft and lustrous, shoes, gloves and clever accessories. She adorned every purchase and her account book was so methodical and exact that Arthur laughed at her.

"I thought I was marrying a pretty wife," he told her, "not a mathematician."

"Couldn't a wife be both?"

"She could—and is!" he agreed emphatically.

Saturday morning on the tenth of December Judith Cameron and Arthur Knight were married in the chapel of St. Thomas. It was the quietest, most religious of services. There were no attendants, no guests. Knight kissed his wife's lips devotedly, then gave her his arm.

"At last, dear!" he whispered.

Judith barely echoed his words: "At last!"

They were served breakfast in a hotel patronized by royalty both of Europe and Hollywood, but all Judith could do was nibble at her grapefruit. Arthur Knight sat feasting his eyes upon his bride.

Was it maidenly timidity which caused Judith to hold back a bit as she clung to her husband's arm?

Their luggage was on the boat. They took a cab and rode across town to the docks. It was like a swift dream. Presently Arthur and Judith were walking up a gangplank, finding themselves on a beautiful big white liner. They stopped by the rail, laughing, and waving as everyone else did.

Strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" burst upon the air. Cheers rose. Hats and handkerchiefs began to wave.

"We're moving," Knight told the girl beside him. "Can you notice the motion?"

Judith nodded. She tried to cover her confusion and laugh gaily. Her head dipped and she looked up again, straight into the eyes of a slim youth with a mustache, a slouched cap pulled down on his forehead. He was standing on the docks staring at her defiantly.

Judith Knight reached for her handkerchief. It was a bad omen—weeping on her wedding day.

This rubber, which is said to equal in strength and wear the present rubber in use, is made by boiling the plant for a long while. A certain chemical is then added which forms the rubbery mass.

The WOMAN'S DAY

Those who believe that women have done nothing with the vote since it was granted to them, and who complain that they no longer uphold the fine traditions and standards of their sex, might well consider the words of Mary Agnes Hamilton, English author and Member of Parliament.

She believes that woman's contribution to politics is a new morality, and out of it is growing a new standard of conduct which is not limited to home and community, but with the socialistic ideal of responsibility to society and the greatest good for the greatest number.

"I believe that morals have improved in the last decade as they have not improved in centuries," she said, "and I believe that the emancipation of woman has a great deal to do with it."

In explanation, she pointed out that she was not using morals in the narrow sense.

"Formerly," she said, "a woman was moral if she was chaste and respectable, though she could still be as mean, petty, disagreeable, unfair and selfish as she pleased, and still keep her standing."

"Now a 'good woman' has to meet wide and more important qualifications. And in the long run society will accept only a code of morals or ethics based on sound fundamental principles."

New Moral Code

In other words, the new test for morality, so far as woman is concerned, includes obligations to fellow women, to government, and to society.

Miss Hamilton points out further that this reformation was not a conscious one, nor one instigated by professional reformers. It was merely the logical outcome of woman widening and getting outside of her home.

Women today, she believes, are not trying to reform others, or are not harping on morals and social do's and don'ts, but are merely adjusting themselves in a larger sphere. For the conscious reformer believes that the person who is always trying to make others better seldom has the humility of spirit that goes with wisdom, or even common sense.

"Thank heaven," said she fervently, "the day is past, in England, at least, when people look on women members of Parliament simply as representatives of their own sex, and not of people generally."

They have even quit thinking of women as reform agencies and I think most women have got over feeling that their real mission in life is reforming the world."

Progress

Women may not be doing all they should or could with their newer opportunities, but no one can deny that they are becoming much more tolerant, that they have a better sense of sportsmanship, and that they are developing a live-and-let-live, and give-and-take attitude toward their fellow men.

When women take their losses and defeats with a "Well, that's that," instead of tears and hysteria, they are progressing—and they are raising the moral standard!

Flares from Low Hipline and Dips Side; Expresses New Elegance for Tea and Bridge

Clothes seem to be growing more and more luxurious every day. At all fashionable gatherings, the general atmosphere denotes charming femininity, which is really quite a treat, in flattering new silhouettes which rather follow the line of the figure in Style No. 161.

It is modified Princess type that is equally suited to miss or matron and is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. The front in panel effect gives the figure the smart vertical line and slimmness so essential to smartness this season. The circular skirt at either side and at the back is smartly snug through the hips with rippling fullness at hem which dips its sides.

The bodice is beautifully moulded in "Princess" lines. A softly flaring collar of Vionnet neckline detracts from the breadth and makes this delightful Princess dress suited to larger woman.

Flaring cuffs of sleeves are ultrane and flatteringly feminine. Silk crepe, chiffon, crepe marocain, fishnet, crepe satin and wool crepe smartly appropriate.

CARBUNCLES MAY BE SERIOUS IF PROPER CARE IS NOT GIVEN

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

A carbuncle is an infection of the deeper layers of the skin and of the tissues under the skin, usually caused by a germ of the streptococcus group.

When the resistance of the tissues to infection is weakened by such conditions as rubbing with a saw-edged collar on the back of the neck, the projecting edge of a broken corset steel or from similar material, when the person has bites or Bright's disease, or a diet containing too much of some substances and not enough of others, the tissues fail to exert sufficient defense to prevent the streptococcus from setting up its infection.

When the infection starts, the tissues become inflamed and red; the white blood cells are brought to the part affected, where they attack the germs and pus is formed in large amounts. The tissues then begin to wall off the infected area; a pocket is formed with a center of degenerated and infected material. One of the great dangers of such a condition is the breaking down of the wall of resistance and the spread of the infection throughout the body.

When the physician is called to examine such a case, the first thing he does is to determine whether any of the contributing diseases that have been mentioned is present. If it is, he at once takes steps to control it, limiting the amount of carbohydrates and of sugars that are taken into the body. He will relieve the pain by the application of hot moist dressings. These serve also to bring more blood to the part affected and aid the attack upon the infection.

When a considerable amount of pus or infectious material is present, the carbuncle or boil must be opened and the infection permitted to drain. The physician does this carefully so as not to break down the retaining wall and spread the infection.

The pus should be withdrawn as rapidly and completely as possible.

If the infection seems to be spreading, it is customary to inject a local anesthetic around the infected area at a distance far enough to be in sound tissue and then to open the infected area widely so as to be sure that all of the infectious material is removed.

Nothing breaks down the health of human beings so quickly and certainly as long continued infection. Hence it is advised that patients who have been suffering with multiple boils be provided with a good routine hygiene which will build their general resistance and prevent the continuous formation of new infected areas.

Memphis is the largest manufacturer of cottonseed products.

Asked to Stop Kindness

"Oh, no, she isn't," spoke up her mother almost wrathfully. "That's just it. She isn't nervous at all. She just thinks she is. And she told me you were being kind to her and helping her. I wish you'd stop."

"Stop?" Of course I was astonished. I knew that Mary at that minute was trying to concentrate on a problem in denominated numbers, eyes blinking, shoulders jerking, and that very probably before the morning was over I would find her with her head on her desk fast asleep. She had spells of sudden fatigue in which nature mercifully found escape for her in sleep.

"We're trying to 'harden her,'" explained Mrs. Smith. "We want to get it out of her head that she can't do all the things other children do. We tell her all the time that she isn't sick."

"It might be better not to mention it to her one way or the other, don't you think?" I believe I said, "I, too, think it is a mistake to discuss children's health too much before them."

"She Needs Toughening."

"It isn't just that. You see we don't coddle her. I try to think up things for her to do. If she comes in and says she's tired, I usually make her go out again. She's had a sore knee for three or four days now, but we just don't pretend to notice it. When she says she's tired studying we make her finish. We don't want her to start pitying herself. She needs toughening. I hope you understand."

"It's helping her any, do you think?"

"Well, we've been at it since she was pretty little. She doesn't complain much any more. Oh, yes, it's helping her. I just thought I'd ask you not to be too kind. We'll have it all to do over again!"

I tried to understand. I believed the woman was convinced that she was doing the right thing, but as time has elapsed and I learn more of mothers as well as children, I lay her behavior to the door of a mother nature from acknowledging even to herself that she had a delicate child who needed sheltering. I believe this sensitive finching on the part of certain mothers taking, and that very probably before the morning was over I would find her with her head on her desk fast asleep. She had spells of sudden

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
© 1930 by NEA Service, Inc.

I came across an unusual mother some years ago who, I decided, was too far removed from the average parent to hold any special interest for most people engaged in the gentle art of rearing children.

And yet since the day she told me about her method of handling her little girl, I have come across a few other mothers who hold the same opinion more or less; I have come to the conclusion that she was not unique after all, and perhaps to tell her story may bring a few truths home to all of us. Are we sometimes unconsciously cruel to the children?

She came to the door of the school room and asked to see me. I asked her to come in but she refused. "I'll just speak to you out here," she almost whispered, stepping back from view. "I don't want Mary to see me. Don't let her know I've come, please."

I went out and closed the door. "Mary?" I had about six Mary's. "Mary Smith! She's my daughter."

"Oh, yes! She's not well is she—not very strong. I suppose you are going to ask me to make her work light. I've been trying to do that very thing. She's extremely nervous."

Asked to Stop Kindness

"Oh, no, she isn't," spoke up her mother almost wrathfully. "That's just it. She isn't nervous at all. She just thinks she is. And she told me you were being kind to her and helping her. I wish you'd stop."

"Stop?" Of course I was astonished. I knew that Mary at that minute was trying to concentrate on a problem in denominated numbers, eyes blinking, shoulders jerking, and that very probably before the morning was over I would find her with her head on her desk fast asleep. She had spells of sudden

About New York

By Richard Mascock
New York—Little tales of Manhattan:

One of the better press agents of up-and-down Broadway, known for his ability and conscientious devotion to his job, found at 8 o'clock on a recent opening night that the lobby display cards had failed to reach the theater.

Frantic, the agent scouted about until he located the posters in a neighboring playhouse, where they had been missed. Time being short, he himself began inserting them in the vacant frames. While he was thus engaged, a prominent producer, for whom he once worked, happened to pass.

For a moment he watched the publicist work. Then he shook his stick at him.

"You bum!" he said, reproachfully. "Three years ago you worked for me for $150 a week and now look at you—you're a bill poster."

A chorus girl long out of work finally took a part in burlesque, but hesitated about letting her parents back in burlesqueville know how she was getting along.

"What shall I write them?" she asked.

"Just say," said her experienced room-mate, "that you have a small job string beads."

Carnegie hall was packed for Toscanini's last concert of this season. In the lobby could be heard jovial voices of late-comers waiting to be admitted.

Stoodees, intent upon hearing the last movements of the Mozart "Jupiter" symphony, muttered about the irreverent sounds. Finally came the intermission and the audience, streaming out for cigars and gossip, discovered their source.

Mr. and Mrs. Josef Hofman were chatting with Leopold Godowsky in a friendly group.

Propriety
The other night a Madison avenue householder went to a drug store to buy some turpentine to be used in painting a bookcase. He had taken a gin bottle at his side, when a coroner cop called out to him.

"Hey, you," the policeman shouted. "Either wrap that up or put it in your pocket."

"But, officer," said the citizen, "this is only turpentine."

"Just the same," said the officer, "you ought to hide it. It looks bad."

Eats At All Hours

News about restaurants keeps cropping up. Bavarian brauhausers have spread from Eighty-sixth street to Broadway, but the novelty is a Greenwich Village place that serves breakfast all day Sunday.

This restaurant, the Daffydill, although operated by Don Dickerman, is owned principally by Rudy Valle. It was Dickerman's Heigh-Ho club that Rudy got his local start to fame. When he left, business fell off so the Heigh-Ho had to close. Because of that, Valle offered to finance another supper club for Dickerman.

It starts serving breakfast at 3 a. m., when a nickel-plated griddle is wheeled out in front of the orchestra platform.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Mary Astor, one of the few silent screen players of any prominence yet to appear in a talkie, is in a local stage production now with Edward Everett Horton, receiving critical applause for her "poise, charm, beauty and delightful voice."

Which is another way of forecasting that the screen soon will reclaim her, as it has most of the rejected silent screen players who, following Bessie Love's example, hid themselves behind the footlights and proved what they could do.

There are still a few "silent stars" by the way, not yet seen and heard in microphoned pictures.

Norma Talmadge has completed her first, "New York Nights," but it is not yet released, while Lillian Gish's "The Swan" still is in production. Buster Keaton makes his entry into talkies in "On the Set."

Lloyd Is Sold

Harold Lloyd's "Welcome Danger" already has vindicated, through box-office returns, the comedian's opinion that dialog would enhance rather than detract from his work, out Charlie Chaplin, kingpin of silent drama, has not yet changed his mind about dialog pictures in general or about his own "City Lights" in particular.

In fact, a recent full page advertisement in a special edition of one of Hollywood's film magazines emphasized his determination to remain "silent."

Chaplin's name does not appear in the ad, nor does the name of his picture in English. But a drawing of a lighted street lamp, accompanied by several foreign language translations of the title, drives home the point that its "silent brilliance" will flood all nations—the talkies can't do that, so there!—as is more plainly stated in a tagline in English.

Chaney May Talk

Lon Chaney, Hollywood's other member of the duo of real "strong silent men" of the screen, is known to be seeking a suitable vehicle for a speaking debut.

Hollywood paradoxes: There are green stockings in the picture "Green Stockings" . . . The Radio studio does not have a radio station.

Meriden High Favored To Defeat Manchester

Local Contingent Faces Tough Assignment in Silver City Tonight Despite Record.

Manchester High plays its sixth game of the current season this evening against Meriden High in the Silver City. The locals will enter the fray more or less the underdog, Meriden having one of the strongest teams in several seasons.

Meriden's latest accomplishment on the polished surface was its 34 to 24 triumph over West Hartford on the latter's own floor. Tony Tomkiewicz and Orentlicherman are the aces of the Silver City squad and if Manchester can silence this aggressive pair, it will stand an excellent chance of winning. Otherwise, it may be just too bad.

Manchester won its first four games and then met the usual defeat at the hands of Hartford. The second team has won two and dropped three decisions. The record of the first team follows:

Man. 32 East Hartford	22
Man. 18 Rockville	15
Man. 27 Alumni	15

The Charter Oaks took the Wooster team of Hartford by 52 pins in a bowling match at Farr's alleys here last night although losing the second and third games. Tennis Inquiry Reveals Interesting Changes in Rules

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Tennis players in the National ranking list, to a substantial degree favor making some changes in the rules of the game.

The results of a questionnaire sent to nearly one hundred prominent men and women players throughout the country by the magazine Tennis, developed these features:

Twenty-nine out of 92 favor playing over all net cord shots which occur during rallies. Three out of seven in the "first ten" of the 1928 want to limit the number of serves to one instead of two, although only 16 out of 92 altogether favor this change.

Twenty out of 92 favor scoring points on the 1-2-3-4 basis instead of 15 love, 30 love etc., but only one ranking women player out of 14 prefers to eliminate the word "love."

SWEDS IN TRIUMPH

The Flying Swedes trounced the Center Church Five at the Franklin gym last night, 21 to 10. The Swedes scored only one field goal but accounted for eight baskets from the foul line. R. Anderson was high scorer for the Swedes with three buckets.

The Nut Cracker

Headlines You Never See: "Professors praise coaches' work in developing students." Illegal athletic scholarships must go, was the consensus of opinion at a recent meeting of the college teachers. But maybe it will be discovered that there are no illegal athletic scholarships.

Mr. Carnera, the Powerful Panatela, has arrived on these shores. The Berengaria is being fixed up and it is believed that it can be put into shape to make the trip again.

Primo wears a 21 collar and an 18 shoe. Perhaps it's vice versa. And what of it? Bill Corum, the New York scribe, says Primo had to leave Italy because he kept getting under Mussolini's feet. And that someone threw one of his shoes at a wedding over in the old country, killing seven and injuring scores. This heavyweight prize fight situation seems to have a Herr in it some place. That guy Schmeling who left us "to take a rest" some time ago, certainly does know how to relax.

REC FIVE GIVING THRILLS A-PLENTY BY LATE RALLIES

Has Snatched Half of Its Victories Out of Defeat Sack At Last Minute.

Irrespective of the fact that last year's edition was admittedly superior, the present Rec Five is waging no time building up the reputation of giving the fans their money's worth.

Three of their six victories have been such narrow margins that the spectators have yelled themselves hoarse. Twice they have been returned one-point victors and on another occasion only two points separated the totals. In two instances belated thrilling rallies staved off impending defeat.

Next Tuesday evening the Rec Five will tackle another team from far-away when the Indiana Phi Deltis of Anderson, Ind., honor Manchester with their presence. The team is composed of ex-college stars and claims the professional championship of the mid-west. Included in their lineup will be Joe Thurston, former Florida University star.

Fresh from its one-point victory over Olson's Swedes, the Rec is desirous of taking the measure of another team of similar caliber. Two victories of this nature will surely brighten feathers in their caps. Coach Jerry Fay will be back on duty for this game. He was absent Tuesday when the Missouri team was defeated being at a conference out in Minnesota.

No doubt Fay will be highly pleased when he gets back to the old home town tomorrow or Sunday and hears the glad tidings. Jerry had hoped his team would beat the Swedes but hadn't dared expect they would. A telegram was sent to him bearing the good news but it went astray.

There is no question but what the Rec Five has improved a great deal. Jerry Fay will be back on duty for the team's play in much more systematic and the boys seem to know a lot more what it is all about. Improvement in teamplay is most noticeable. Against the Olson combination, Manchester showed a world of pep. The boys fought for all they were worth every minute of the game. A moment's letdown would have brought defeat.

The Rec Five's record to date is as follows:
Rec 43 Conn. Mutual	17	0

SPORT SLANTS Alan J. Gould

All the Old East can do about its football is to read the figures and weep.

It was bad enough a year ago when the Pacific Coast trio of Stanford, Southern California and Oregon State decisively whipped Army, Notre Dame and New York University, rolling up an aggregate of 78 points to 27 for the Eastern clans. It is worse now.

The same three Far Western outfits have cleaned up again and if you care for the total count, it was 95 to 34, with Stanford riding rough-shod over Army again, Southern California cleaning up the hitherto undefeated Pitt Panthers and Oregon State turning in the scalp of Detroit. In addition, California contributed an early season victory over Pennsylvania to make it a gala season for the Big three of the Golden State.

What's the answer? That the Pacific Coast plays superior football to the rest of the country. Not if you happen to live in the locality generally described as the "Middle West." The Southern California whirlwind that smothered Carnegie and Pittsburgh, two strong teams, was just an occasional blast against Notre Dame at Chicago, where the Irish had a bigger actual margin than their one-point victory indicated.

The "Eastern" All-Stars wiped the Far Western outfit but most of the "East's" aces were from Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota and other Mid-Western points. On the same day, another group of Mid-Western boys took an All-Southwest aggregation over the jumps at Dallas and the Iowa-Dakota combination representing the North Central Conference trimmed the Rocky Mountain climbers in the rarefied atmosphere of Denver.

In other words, neither the climate nor the altitude seemed to bother the talent from the Middle Western plains, which enjoys the distinction of winding up the only brace of major unbeaten outfits in the country—Purdue and Notre Dame from the poetic confines of Indiana.

It seems that even the high-brow sport of polo is not immune from the current activity of experts busy detecting the growth of professionalism. A writer in the magazine POLO says:

"The third class (of professionals) might be called dog-robbers. Mr. Howard Jinks who made a million in the investment trust business wants to break into society. What better way than through sport? And what sport offers a better approach than polo? Accordingly the investment trust king buys himself a few mallets, ponies, a stable, perhaps a field and all the accessories down to a 1930 Rolls landaulet.

"Obviously he cannot quite buy a team in the same way. But good amateur players are scarce, and perhaps good amateurs prefer to trade shots with friends rather than with investment kings. So out he goes and purchases players somewhat as Mr. Connie Mack purchases players for the Philadelphia Athletics and a good football coach purchases an eleven for the Alma Mater."

In a ballot to decide the best college football team of the season, Pittsburg received 442 votes and Southern California 21. And you can find out just how many each Pitt vote was worth on the afternoon of January 1 by figuring on the basis of Southern California's 47-14 victory in the Rose Bowl.

LAYTON AND REISELT TO FIGHT FOR TITLE

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Johnny Layton of St. Louis and Otto Reisel of Philadelphia will meet tonight for the National three cushion billiards championship now in Layton's possession. The defeat last night of Augie Kleckhefer, Chicago southpaw by Tiff Denton, Kansas City veteran, 50 to 26 automatically eliminated Kleckhefer and left Layton and Reisel free to fight it out in the final match of the tournament.

Earlier in the day Denton had beaten Gus Copulos of Detroit 50 to 41. Copulos also lost to Allan Hall, youthful St. Louis star, 50 to 31. Charles Jordan of the Los Angeles defeated Hary Schuler of New York 50 to 33.

WRESTLING PLACED ON SAME BASIS AS THE FIGHT RACKET

National Boxing Association Endeavors to Improve Standard of Leaderless Sport

Cincinnati, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Wrestling, a profession which never recognized any national affiliation and frequently witnessed many muddled championship situations was placed today by the National Boxing Association on the same organized basis as all governed sports.

Stanley M. Isaacs, president of the N. B. A. which last year included the mat game in its jurisdiction announced that effective immediately all wrestlers are subject to the benefits, championship awards, suspensions and discipline of the national organization.

High spots of the NBA wrestling requirements call for defense of championships three times a year, posting of title appearance forfeits ranging from $2,500 to $5,000, public bidding by promoters for the privilege of staging championship bouts, wrestlers to accept terms of the highest bidder, national champions to be decided in recognized classes by April 20 1930 and championship entries to be matched by public drawing.

The N. B. A. recognizes only four weights—heavy, lightweight, middle and welter. At present Isaacs says there is insufficient activity in the lighter classes to justify championships.

Champion Floors Verde Three Times to Prove Operations Successful

Rochester Fighter Outboxes Titleholder in First Round But Can't Stand Up Under Crashing Rights to Jaw; Out at Bell in Second.

Battering Bat Battalino bids fair to be one of the most popular boxing champions in many years. His manner in disposing of Rochester Phil Verde by a knockout in three rounds at the New Haven Arena last night was a firm stamp of approval. Altogether too often titleholders put up very unsatisfactory performances in their non-title appearances but such cannot be said for the Hartford product. Bat delights in battering his opponent into submission as soon as possible and there is no attitude more popular with fandom.

In putting the clever Verde to sleep, Battalino apparently proved that Dr. W. G. Fraclick's operations on his brittle hands has been a complete success. At least the world's featherweight champion showed no inclination whatsoever to pull his punches due to any pain. Bat floored the Rochester lad three times before he was able to put him to sleep for the necessary count of ten.

Verde Starts Strong The beginning of the scrap was a bit slow and uninteresting with Verde tying up the champion most effectively. Very few clean punches were landed in this stanza and the Rochester scrapper got in the majority. The round was easily Verde's. Battalino was guilty of missing many wild swings due to his own poor timing and Verde's cleverness. It had the effect to make one wonder what will happen when Bat risks his title against a first class boxer.

Verde stung Bat with a couple of light punches in the second round and the Hartford fistie sensation decided to cut loose. He tossed rights and lefts with almost utter disregard for defense and after the first feed had been turned into wild Frenchman square on the jaw. Ver-lunge, a stiff right caught the de west down. He was not stunned badly but could have arisen before Referee Bill Conway had tolled nine but had the common sense to take the longest res. possible.

Pounces Like a Tiger That knockdown was the beginning of Verde's downfall. It served to transform Bat into his own tiger-like self and the Hartford slugger tore into his shaky opponent. Just before the bell ending the second round, Battalino sent home another hard right to the jaw that spun Verde around. Like a flash, Bat pounced on his rival and scored a tremendous follow-up to the same point. Phil dropped in a heap and had the bell not sounded a few seconds later, it was very apparent that Mr. Verde would have still been "seeing the birds and hearing the bees" at the top of ten.

After frantic work by the Rochester seconds, Verde came out for the third very cautiously. His plan of battle was very evident. He was to coast through the round and wait until his brain had fully cleared before resuming the offense again. For two minutes he was successful, clinches and one thing and another disposing of the precious seconds. Over-confident at his early round success, Verde decided to try to sneak home a few punches himself. It was his fatal error for he left an opening and Bat crashed home another solid right to the jaw which spun the Frenchman around and down in a heap in the champion's corner for the first kayo defeat of his career.

'Something Different' for Next Sunday's Dinner? Try Broiled Veal, Venetian

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the menu which Oscar of the Waldorf, writing for The Herald and NEA Service, suggests for your next Sunday dinner:

- Anchovy Canape
- Tomato Bouillon
- Broiled Veal, Venetian
- Baked Potatoes
- Carrots in Cream
- Waldorf Salad
- Chocolate Charlotte Russe
- Coffee

Oscar of the Waldorf (right) supervises the slicing of the veal for broiling, Venetian style

Broiled Veal, Venetian
Procure some rather thick and large slices of veal and lay them on a dish with some chopped mushrooms and scallions, some thyme, bayleaf and chopped parsley. Dredge them over with salt and pepper and baste them with a few tablespoons of olive oil. Allow the slices to steep in this marinade for an hour or so, turning them now and then so that they will be equally flavored.

Strew them with finely grated breadcrumbs, place them side by side on a grill or broil over a clear fire. When done on one side, turn and baste them with the remainder of the marinade.

When cooked, arrange the slices of veal on a hot dish, squeeze the juice of an orange over, and serve.

Public Utilities Plan To Spend 45 Millions In State During 1930

Increase of 15 Millions Over the Past Year—General Extensions of Import.

Connecticut's public utility companies will spend for improvements and additions to their plant and equipment during the year of 1930 approximately $45,000,000, according to their present estimates. This is an increase of about $15,000,000 over their expenditures for the same purposes in 1929.

Improvements to plant and equipment, extensions of service and will be general throughout Connecticut, and there will also be a large amount of new construction work by many of the utility companies.

Transportation
In expenditures for 1930 improvements, the New Haven Railroad with the sum of $15,000,000 heads the list. Of this amount, $11,500,000 will be spent for improvements to equipment and permanent facilities, and $3,500,000 for new equipment.

Among the major improvements planned by the railroad are the following: purchase of ten electric passenger locomotives and 33 multiple unit cars; rebuilding and improving freight and passenger cars; improved steam and electric locomotives; improved and additional shop, power plant and steamheat facilities; improved roadway, including additional 130-pound and stone ballast with accompanying track facilities; and improved main line facilities.

Telephone Company
The Southern New England Telephone Company is listed in second place with a contemplated expenditure for equipment of $13,800,000, the largest construction program ever adopted by the company for a single year and an increase over 1929 of $2,050,000.

The company's largest 1930 project will be the erection of a new six-story building in Hartford, adjacent to its present building. A new office and equipment building will be erected in Waterbury and dial service installed there. Plant enlargements and replacements will be made in New Haven and new buildings are planned for Torrington, Bristol and elsewhere. Sizeable additions will be made to the switchboards in Stratford, Danbury, Norwalk, New Britain and Norwich.

In addition, there will be substantial additions to local plant facilities in several other cities and a large expansion of toll facilities which includes the placing of about 78 miles of toll cable. About 800,000,000 feet of lead covered cable will be used for exchange service only.

Electric Light and Power
Improvements to electric light and power service and to the manufactured gas service conducted by companies also engaged in the distribution of electricity will cost close to $12,000,000 in Connecticut during the year of 1930.

The greater part of this sum will be expended by the constituent companies of the Connecticut Electric Service Company, including the Connecticut Light & Power Company, the Northern Connecticut Power Company, the Waterbury Gas Light Company and the Winsted Gas Company. This group will spend a total of $7,600,000 for 1930 construction work.

Of this amount $1,500,000 will be required to complete work now under way and the balance will represent work started during the year. The program, spread over the entire state from Greenwich in the extreme southwest to Putnam in the extreme northeast, and from Thompsonville near the Massachusetts border to Brandon on the Sound, includes extensions and additions to electric distribution and transmission lines, extension of gas mains, purchase and installation of meters, transformers and street lighting equipment, new buildings, additions or improvements to existing buildings, and improvements on the company's various steam and hydro generating plants.

The closely related group comprising the Hartford Electric Light station of a synchronous condenser. In the western section of the state, the Danbury & Bethel Gas & Electric Company contemplates an expenditure of approximately $275,000 for improvements, including additions to transmission and distribution lines, electric plant and substation, and additions to gas manufacturing plant and distribution system.

The Derby Gas & Electric Company plans a sum of $300,000 for various betterments in both branches of its service, and the Clinton Electric Company will spend about $15,000 for its 1930 improvements.

Manufactured Gas
Public utility companies dealing exclusively in the distribution of manufactured gas will invest about $1,500,000 in additions and improvements during the year. The New Haven Gas Light Company heads the list of these companies with a figure of $650,000. The principal items covered in this amount include the remodeling of gas apparatus to increase capacity and improve efficiency; installing a waste boiler and a steam accumulator; remodeling its gas works building to house the entire operating department and to include storage room and a garage; laying about twelve miles of new main with necessary service connections and meters.

The Hartford Gas Company will spend about $300,000 for ordinary extensions of mains, service and meters, and additional pumping and storage facilities in outlying sections. Approximately $200,000 will be expended by the Bridgeport Gas Light Company. About half of the amount will be used for a new building and a new gas generating set now being installed and the balance will cover the rearrangement, improvement and extension of a certain portion of the distribution system. This work will be in addition to normal extension and development work.

The Greenwich Gas Company plans an outlay of about $250,000 for extension of distribution mains, meters, services and various miscellaneous items.

Water Supplies
Connecticut water supply utilities expect a 1930 investment of about $1,400,000 for improvements. The New Haven Water Company will expend about $500,000, half of which will be for distribution system extensions and new pipe lines, and the balance of which will be utilized in construction, the latter including the continuation of work on the company's vast North Branford Development.

Additions to plant, pipe line extensions and the purchase of property needed for future development will bring the 1930 expenditure of the Bridgeport Hydraulic Company to approximately $400,000.

At about $375,000 will be spent by the Greenwich Water Company for extensions of mains, enlargement of filtration capacity and additional pumping apparatus. Much construction work in the past five or six years has made it necessary for the Ansonia Water Company to expend only about $5,000 on new work in 1930, and for the Stamford Water Company to make only its regular yearly extensions which are estimated at a cost of $50,000. The Guilford-Chester Water Company will spend about $50,000 for a new reservoir gate house, distribution improvements and tree planting.

ITALY AND FRANCE ARE STILL AT ODDS
Rome, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Italy and France will go to the five power naval conference at London with problems particular to themselves unsettled and the lines of disagreement in their viewpoints drawn more definitely than at any time before.

Publication here of the gist of the French note of January 3 to the Italian government disclosed that the Paris government rejected the Italian proposition of naval parity, a fundamental Italian thesis for further negotiation.

It was made known that the foreign ministry regarded the French reply as rupture of negotiations which had gone on for many weeks between the two countries.

The impression in Rome since receipt of the French note is that the

He recommended that the electricity course now being given the pupils of the 8th grade school might during the remainder of the year, as the cost was very reasonable. Mr. Clough also stated that the financial outlook for the year was food and that the seats previously authorized for the Maple street school might safely be bought at this time. The new song books for the High school are being used and there are now enough for all to use.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Many thousands of acres of land which the foresters cleared for farming in southern New England are now reverting to forest, W. O. Filley, forester of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station said last night in an address before the biennial agricultural conference of Rhode Island. His subject was "Forest Possibilities for Southern New England."

Damage To Forests

Mr. Filley attributed this situation to the removal of trees for domestic and industrial use without consideration for further growth. Forest fires, insects and disease have further added to the damage, he said.

ERRORGRAMS

-FROM YOUR FIANCEE, JOAN? WON'T YOU DESCRIBE HIM TO ME? WELL, HE'S A BRUNETTE OF MEDIUM HEIGHT, AND— BUT WAIT TILL YOU SEE HIM.

Toni's Scrambled

Everybody guesses at it.

CORRECTIONS

(1) In the conversation of the girl at the left, "hancee" refers to the masculine and should be spelled fiancee. (2) In the conversation of the girl at the right, "brunette" also refers to a man and should be spelled brunet. (3) The earrings on the girl at the right do not match. (4) Florist, on the flower box, is spelled incorrectly. (5) The scrambled word is WEATHER.

CHURCH BIBLE CLASS

TO PRESENT MINSTREL Entertainment Program to Be Given by St. Mary's Men Next Friday.

St. Mary's Bible class is making enthusiastic preparations for the play and entertainment which they are to put on in the Parish hall, Friday evening, January 17.

The program is one calculated to please all tastes, including as it will selections by St. Mary's church choir, orchestral music, vocal solos and duets, short sketches, several motion pictures featuring well known comedy and other screen actors, and last but by no means least a minstrel by the Alabama Serenaders. It might be well to explain that this is the name several well known entertainers among the members of the bible class have hit upon for their blackface minstrel.

The chorus and principals are rehearsing diligently and they propose to make this one of the best programs ever given by the class. George Boyce will be the interlocutor, and the end men Robert Marcham and Wyville Peabody. The admission fee for adults and children has been made purposely low so that whole families among the parishioners and townspeople can have a full evening's enjoyment.
