

PRESIDENT'S BOARD ISSUES STATEMENT

Wickersham's Announcement, However, Gives Little Clue to Conclusions Arrived At.

(Special To The Herald)

Washington, Jan. 11.—President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission late yesterday issued for the first time a statement making public the character of its seven months work in detail. The statement, which was given out by Chairman George W. Wickersham, deals almost entirely with the mode of operation of the Commission and gives little or no clue to the conclusions or recommendations which may be included in its final report. It is believed here in its final report will be included preparation for the preliminary report of the Commission which President Hoover is to submit to Congress on Monday and as a part of notification to the country that it is too early to expect, from the preliminary report, anything in the way of a definite solution of the crimes problem, with special reference to prohibition.

One feature of the statement is especially interesting in view of the recent threats of certain Senators that further appropriations for the work of the Commission would be opposed unless the Wickersham group rendered a "satisfactory" report forthwith. That feature is information that the total expenses of the Commission, whose members are working without compensation, has been only $70,000 to date, whereas the original appropriation for the inquiry was $250,000. This would indicate that the Commission has little reason to worry about the withholding of funds.

Highlights of Statement
About the only thing in the statement that can be regarded as a definite conclusion is contained in the paragraph which says: "A preliminary examination by the Commission demonstrated unquestionably that the criminal law enforcement of the country is entirely inadequate; that prohibition, automobile theft, white slave traffic, migration and other criminal laws of the federal government have overtaxed the capacity and effectiveness of the national machinery for enforcement."

This, having been the understanding on which the Commission was created, is rather in the relation of a starting point than as a discovery of the Commission and it is so treated in the statement. The Wickersham communication then proceeds to give an outline of the methods by which the seven phases into which it divided the inquiry at the outset of its labors. The subjects of study by separate groups are given as follows: Police, prosecution courts, penal institutions, probation and parole, prohibition, cause of crime, cause of crime, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice and the foreign born, abuses in enforcement, statistics.

JAPAN GOES BACK TO GOLD STANDARD

Resumes It After 12 Years;
Press and Public Hail the Move Enthusiastically.

Tokio, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Japan fully resumed the gold standard today after a suspension of more than twelve years.

This was accomplished by the removal of the embargo on gold exports, which was established December 9, 1917. The embargo was lifted pursuant to an announcement made last November 21.

As the Bank of Japan resumed over-the-counter redemption of its notes in gold, hundreds thronged the institution during the half-day of business to obtain the yellow coin, which made its appearance in circulation for the first time since the beginning of the World War in 1914.

Financial leaders, however, warned that the nation must expect caution in business and slackness in the immediate future.

Japan is the last Lorient power to return to the gold standard, and unlike some others, resumes with her currency approximately at the pre-war level. The yen today was quoted at 49.25 cents against a par of 48.85.

A delay in the resumption of gold payments was due to three major economic disasters in the decade just ended. These were the post-war slump of 1920, the earthquake of 1923 and the panic in which 37 banks failed.

TO INVESTIGATE MEXICAN DIVORCE

First Wife Employs Counsel to See If Marriage of Scientist is Legal in U. S.

Boston, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The divorce obtained in Mexico a year ago by Frederick R. Wulsin, scientist of Philadelphia, and his marriage to Mrs. Susanne Carey Emery of Providence, R. I., on Wednesday were under investigation today by counsel for his first wife, Mrs. Jane Elliott Wulsin.

Proceedings were to be brought, the counsel said yesterday, to "remove any uncertainty as to the status of the parties affected. It was said Mrs. Wulsin understood a question existed as to the validity of the Mexican divorce but that she had no desire to interfere with Mr. Wulsin. They have three children.

Married in Hartford.
Wulsin, a graduate of Harvard in 1915 who has done work in anthropology in Africa, and Mexico for the Peabody Museum of Harvard was married to Mrs. Emery at Hartford, Conn. She is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Francis G. Allison of Providence and the widow of Prof. Henry C. Emery, former chairman of the United States tariff board. He died in 1924.

Wulsin was appointed curator and assistant director of the Peabody Museum last year but resigned the day the directors confirmed the appointment.

DEMAND GERMANY STATE ITS TERMS

Hague Delegates Want to Know Exactly How Far
She Is Willing to Go.

The Hague, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The German delegation to the committee of the League of Nations at the Young plan were called upon peremptorily this morning to furnish a precise statement of what Germany was willing to do to meet demands of the creditor nations.

Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, who was about to leave for the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations at Geneva, was called upon by Henri Cheron, French finance minister and Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, to tell exactly what his delegation proposed to do.

Dr. Curtius at once abandoned his idea of going to Geneva and proposed written proposals by 1:00 p. m., which the creditor nation representatives intended to consider at 2:00 p. m. The German representatives will meet again for further discussion of the situation.

The creditor nations' action followed conferences last night at which anxiety was expressed at the sluggish progress of the meeting. The meeting of the "Big Six" accordingly was called for this morning and the firm stand taken there.

Questions involved in the situation which has arisen are the matter of whether military sanctions as guarantee of German payments shall persist as part of the allied reparations policy, the question of an eventual moratorium, and maintenance of the reparations installment.

The creditor delegates called a sharp halt on further delay when they made known plainly to Dr. Curtius that his proposed departure for Geneva leaving the whole situation in the air was not to their taste. The unexpected meeting of the chief delegates at which this communication was made was the result of the nocturnal conference of the creditors who decided that there had been enough delay and that something must be done at once.

No Instructions.
They had learned that the German members of the sub-committees were still without instructions as to the work in hand and that if heroic measures were not adopted the conference could not finish in time for the principal delegates to get to the London conference.

They sent word to Dr. Curtius that they wanted to have a frank talk with him before he left for Geneva and at this meeting the German delegate was asked to state whether he had, as promised, proposals to make in writing. He answered in the negative. Thereupon M. Cheron made a plain-speaking protest declaring that the French delegation was frankly disappointed and that the other delegations could wait no longer for the Germans to decide.

NAVAL ENVOYS PLEASED WITH LONDON REPORT

Britain Announces Cut in Cruisers from 70 to 50;
News Surprises Delegates
On Way to Sea Parley.

S. S. George Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Announcement by First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander in Great Britain yesterday that his government would consent at the forthcoming London conference to reduce the number of its battle cruisers from 70 to 50, created considerable interest among the American delegation aboard this ship today.

But it was not believed that the British announcement would remove British cruiser strength as a live issue from the London negotiations. The feeling was rather that remaining difficulties would have to do with size and type of ships, instead of their exact number.

Comes as Surprise.
The announcement of Mr. Alexander came as no surprise to the American delegation who had been given to understand that that figure about represented the MacDonald government's idea of Britain's needs for security.

Neither Col. Stimson or other delegates would be quoted however as to the British admiralty lord's action. Secretary Stimson and others of the delegation also refused to comment on advice that France and Italy had failed to reach a preliminary agreement and that France had failed to agree to Italian naval parity.

George Washington will be speeded up to bring the official party to Plymouth early next Friday, so as to enable the delegates to reach London by noon.

PRESS COMMENT.
London, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Announcement of A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, that Great Britain is willing to reduce its cruiser complement from 70 to 50, at the forthcoming London conference has not found so strong a welcome in the British press as he might have hoped.

Only two papers commented on the admiralty lord's speech made at Sheffield, and in the editorials of both of these there was a distinct note of warning and fear lest the Kellogg Pact, as a guarantee of peace was being overrated and Great Britain's security might be compromised.

The Times, independent, moderately conservative but supporting any government as far as possible, called for a more detailed explanation as to how the reduction was justified.

The Daily Telegraph, conservative, declared that most people will regard the government's binding itself on the assumption of assured peace as a "reckless gamble with the nation's security."

LAREDO SITUATION
EXCITES GOVERNOR

Texas Executive Wants to Talk to Hoover on Closing
Of Mexican Consulate.

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Gov. Moody of Texas has asked the White House to arrange a long distance conversation between himself and President Hoover on the subject of the Laredo Mexican consulate closing.

It was said at the White House today that Gov. Moody would be advised telegraphically that the State Department is doing everything possible to bring about reopening of the consulate and that it is not believed President Hoover could add anything to the department's efforts.

Decision Reserved.
Decision was reserved, however, on whether the President would be able to talk to the Texas governor, White House officials planned to hold a conference later in the day with Acting Secretary Cotton who has had personal charge of the Laredo matter since its inception.

The Laredo Consulate was closed after District Attorney Walls, at Laredo, had threatened to arrest former President Calles of Mexico, if he passed through Laredo. Walls accused Calles of conspiracy to murder in connection with the slaying of Mexican army officials in the United States.

FIGHT MYSTERIOUS MALADY

Parrot fever, strange and deadly malady known in tropical countries but new in the United States has infected four persons in Maryland. Dr. L. F. Badger, left, and Dr. C. Armstrong, extreme right, U. S. public Health Service officials, have been assigned to check the spread of the often-fatal disease which human beings contract from infected parrots. In the center is Simon S. Martin, whose wife and child became afflicted with the disease at Annapolis after receiving a parrot as a present from Argentina.

Two Persons Dead From Parrot Fever

Eleven Cases of Mysterious Disease Reported from Distant Sections of the Country —Is Rare Disease.

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—With two persons dead from parrot fever and 11 cases of that mysterious malady reported from distant sections of the country, government health authorities are taking steps to prevent the spread of the disease. The deaths occurred in Toledo, Ohio, where Mrs. Percy Q. Williams succumbed to the ailment and in Baltimore, Md., where the victim was Mrs. Louise Schaeffer. Four additional cases were reported from Ohio and seven from Maryland with unconfirmed reports of three more cases in the latter state and one in California.

PEACE WITHIN CENTURY MRS. CATT'S PREDICTION

Noted Suffrage Leader, However, Believes Naval Reduction Conference at London, a Step Forward.

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Carrie Chapman Catt, who is here to preside at the conference for the cause and cure of war which opens January 14, thinks it will be 100 years before peace for the world is attained. She sees the naval reduction conference in London, however, as the cross-roads in the present search and thinks some progress may come of it.

When suffrage, to which she devoted 50 years of effort, was attained Mrs. Catt turned her attention to the peace movement. Asked today what she would tackle when peace was assured Mrs. Catt made the 100-year prediction.

Unusual Interest
She sees the popular general interest and demand for information about the naval reduction conference as a most hopeful sign. She believes, she has been a potent agency in bringing this open and above board policy about.

Women, in the opinion of this veteran leader of women's causes, are soon due to furnish a surprise, to be met by the way they will vote at the peace movement. Asked to say what she would tackle when peace was assured Mrs. Catt made the 100-year prediction.

Will Take Time
"At least I am not satisfied. I did not look for a revolution overnight. Two things have held the women voters back. One is the lack of cordial welcome from either of the political parties. The other is the evident shock experienced by men whenever a woman has aspired to an important position. However, this will all adjust itself."

Mrs. Catt has worked out a plan to keep women from talking vaguely and without point when they feel they must be heard in public meetings. At the last conference on the cause and cure of war many women complained afterward that they were not given a chance to talk.

"Fine!" replied Mrs. Catt. "I'll give you a chance at the next conference—provided you have something worth while to say."

Now such a sitting system has been worked out by this woman "general" that the women must work off any vague and hazy oratory on a round table before it can get to the general floor of the conference.

If the round table decides that what the woman has to say is worth hearing it stands a chance of getting before the convention. And the woman is satisfied because she "had her say."

SHEARER 'DOCUMENTS' JOKE, WRITER CLAIMS

Yale Plans to Build
A Village for Apes

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Representatives of Yale University, who desire to study the reactions of a colony of apes placed in a model American community, contemplate construction of seven buildings near here at a cost of about $100,000.

Bids for the erection of the buildings at Orange Park, a suburb, will be received January 20 and contracts awarded.

Small bungalows for the occupancy of anthropoid families with several bedrooms in each dwelling are planned. Individual drinking fountains, recreation quarters, a swimming pool, a hospital and a garage are among the facilities to be placed at the disposal of the apes.

A thermostatic heating arrangement will afford the same temperature which the apes enjoy in their native land.

The residences, while presenting all the outward appearances of small bungalows, will be reinforced with stone and steel.

PLANES SEARCHING FOR LOST FLYERS

Expected Back Shortly, Machine Has Not Been Seen
Since Yesterday.

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Four airplanes today started a search for an airplane missing since it took off from Farmingdale, Long Island, yesterday on an altitude test flight.

The missing ship, a cabin monoplane, was piloted by D. Marra, who had with him, as an observer, William Kirkpatrick. The two men took off yesterday on a flight they expected to complete within an hour or two, and have not been heard from since. The plane is owned by the Fairchild Aviation Corporation, a unit of the Aviation Corporation.

Blown Out To Sea?
Officials of the aviation corporation this morning said that no response had been received early today from an appeal broadcast by radio to ships along the coast last night in the belief that the ship might have been blown out to sea by the strong winds that yesterday succeeded the heavy fog.

The four searching planes which took off this morning and a fifth which was ready to go up planned to search both sea and land within a radius of 100 miles.

WIRELESS SAVES OPERATOR'S LIFE

Was Far Out at Sea When Stricken With Appendicitis;
Taken to Hospital.

New London Jan. 11.—(AP)—Red operator Louis Kleinkraus, 18, of 261 12th street, Hoboken, N. J., was reported to be resting comfortably at the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospital here today, just 24 hours after he was stricken with an attack of acute appendicitis aboard the trawler Osprey off Nantucket lightship.

Kleinkraus underwent an emergency operation at the hospital at one o'clock this morning as the climax to a desperate and successful attempt to get him under the knife before the attack had become too late. Doctors at the hospital said that a few hours more and the young man's condition would have been critical.

Ordered to Return
Stricken suddenly with intense pains the young operator recognized the symptoms and at the direction of his captain notified the office of the Portland Trawling Co., here of his condition by wireless. Without a moment's hesitation President John Graham of the Trawling company ordered the Captain of the trawler to make full speed for port with the ill radio operator. The Osprey was at least fifteen hours out at the time and in order to save an hour or two of time President Graham also requested the Coast Guard here to have a fleet destroyer intercept the trawler and speed up the radio operator's trip to the hospital.

Makes Contact
The Destroyer Monaghan was nearest to the Osprey and succeeded in making contact with the fishing boat in mid-afternoon. Making all possible speed the Monaghan arrived off the local harbor just before midnight and was met by the patrol boat CG289 which took the radio operator aboard and rushed him to the state pier. There he was transferred to an ambulance which conveyed him to the hospital in record time.

At the hospital everything was ready for the operation and as soon as it was determined that the young man was actually suffering from appendicitis the operation was performed.

NINETEEN COTTAGES ON BEACH BURNED

Fairfield Firemen Helpless
Due to Lack of Water;
Loss of $10,000.

Bridgeport, Jan. 11.—(AP)—While Fairfield firemen stood by almost helpless due to a lack of water, flames fanned by a strong wind swept through most of the nineteen small one-story summer cottages at the extreme end of Fairfield Beach, across from St. Mary's-by-the-sea, shortly after midnight, causing damage estimated at close to $10,000.

Most of the cottages were scantily furnished. When efforts of the firemen to backfire one of the cottages by soaking it with water failed to stop the rapidly spreading flames, the fire fighters turned their attention to saving as much of the furniture as possible before the blaze had spread to the remaining cottages.

Firemen Return
Several pieces of Bridgeport apparatus went out at 12:40 o'clock after the reflection from the fire was on Bridgeport's side of the creek. But there was nothing they could do to help, the local firemen returned to their quarters.

One of the largest buildings destroyed was owned by the Klondyke Amusement Club, of which William Keenan of Bridgeport is president. The reflection of the flames in the sky could be seen for several miles and hundreds of motorists were attracted to the fire.

The origin of the fire has not been determined.

POPE PIUS ISSUES A NEW ENCYCLICAL

Says Church Has First Share
In Educating Children in Religion—Family Next.

Vatican City, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Pope Pius today issued a new encyclical on the education of children in the faith. He said that the church has the first share, the family the next and the state the last in juvenile education.

For the first time in the history of the papacy an encyclical was issued in Italian and it will be followed by translation into other modern languages.

The encyclical was devoted entirely to the Christian education of youth. In it the Pontiff summarized the supreme principle of the education of youth and the necessity of applying new pedagogic theories and practical modern methods to that of the Catholic principle.

The encyclical emphasized the excellence of Christian education which must be taken care of in order to secure its perfection. Outlining the principal points in Christian education, the encyclical said that it belongs to the family in a certain measure, to the family in another and to the state in still another.

Described by Naval Expert As Secret British Papers, the Author Tells Senate Committee They Were Written as a Skit on Brit- ish Propaganda in This Country During Wartime.

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The document given to a Senate committee by William B. Shearer, naval propagandist, and described by him as a secret British memorandum, was identified today before the committee by William J. Maloney of New York as a skit on British propaganda, written by himself.

Shearer gave the committee a copy of the document during previous testimony before it, while an inquiry into his activities in behalf of a big navy at the unsuccessful 1927 limitations conference at Geneva was being made.

Chairman Shortridge handed the many-paged photostatic print of the so-called secret British document to Dr. Maloney.

Write It as Skit.
"It seems to me identical," replied Dr. Maloney after hurriedly going over the papers, "with a pamphlet I wrote as a skit on British propaganda in this country."

Dr. Maloney explained that he wrote the "satire" to offset the propaganda work in this country in 1919 of Lord Northcliffe of the British press.

The article was published and widely distributed to newspapers, Maloney said, and served as an "anti-claims" to Lord Northcliffe's report. He said 300,000 copies of the article were distributed.

Shearer, who in turning over the document to the committee dramatically described it as "the amazing secret British document," sat in the committee room today.

Dr. Maloney said he came to New York after he was discharged from the British army for wounds received in the World War.

"The British Document" was addressed to David Lloyd George, then premier of Great Britain, and dated from the British consul's office in New York City. It purported to show the operations of a vast British spy system in America with a view to "the re-conquest of America."

Dr. Maloney said that Irish societies were the main purchasers of this pamphlet.

"With the end of the fight on the League of Nations, the purpose of the paper died," he said.

Department Knew Author.
Dr. Maloney said the state department investigated the pamphlet in 1929 and knew that he had written it.

"It was read at a dinner of Senators here attended by Senator Borah, of Idaho, among others," the witness said. "It is regarded as a joke as it was meant to be."

"How does it look to you now?" asked Senator Allen, Republican, Kansas.

"I don't know what all the fuss is about. It's stupid," replied Dr. Maloney.

He said that Postmaster General Burleson barred the pamphlet from the mails and that two Secret Service men told him the writing of the document meant "20 years" but that was all he ever heard of it.

BOY SCOUT COUNCIL HERE DISAPPROVED

Continue in Hartford District Is Vote of Last Night's Annual Session.

Refusal of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America to sanction the organization of a separate council in Manchester caused a unanimous vote for affiliation with the Hartford Council for the coming year with the provision that the same fee of $900 and field executive Joseph Dean be maintained at the annual meeting of the Manchester District, Boy Scouts of America held in St. Mary's church last night.

The National Council said that under a separate council Manchester would have a secretary and a full-time executive and an office, the cost of which would exceed $5,000 yearly, a price totally prohibitive to a town of only 23,000 inhabitants and seven Boy Scout troops.

The motion followed an hour's discussion of the question at which districts affiliated with other councils and paying much more than Manchester, were not receiving as many benefits.

An investigating committee to look into the Hartford and what was paid to Hartford and for what, was appointed with John L. Reinhartz, as chairman of the following: James A. Irvine, J. Rhey Braithwaite, G. Samuel Bohlin, E. J. McCabe. The committee will meet on Tuesday and will make a report in the next issue.

Louis St. Clair Burr was elected commissioner of the district succeeding Joseph Wright, who presided at the meeting. Ralph Proctor was elected vice-president. Herbert House, treasurer. Elbert Shelton, deputy commissioner; Millard Park, assistant deputy commissioner.

The committees named were as follows: Finance committee, Clarence P. Quimby, chairman; Husbands, Hathaway, and J. McCam; organization, leadership, and training committee, William Remig, chairman; camping and hiking committee, Scott Simon, chairman; Harlow Willis, George Gienney, public relations committee; M. Brown and Erik Modan; Court of Honor committee, Charles Huber, chairman; Stephen Hale, Robert Houghton, C. Oliver and James Craig.

DEMAND GERMANY STATE ITS TERMS

insisting on immediate action, with his accustomed vigor, but without vehemence, the British chancellor of the exchequer declared that the time had come for action and put it up to Dr. Curtius whether the German delegation was ready to go on.

Dr. Curtius, replying to the creditor delegates, made verbal proposals concerning the moratorium question and the date of payments of monthly instalments. The creditors asked for it in writing this afternoon promising they would act on it soon after.

Postpones Trip Dr. Curtius thereupon decided to postpone his trip to Geneva saying that he would not leave today. It was understood that the Germany offer on the day of payments was to hand over on the fifteenth of the month the amount payable in foreign exchange and to pay the rest at the end of the month.

The Italians proposed that the whole instalment be paid on the fifteenth and that the part the Germans were unable to transfer be deposited in the International bank where it would work for everybody concerned.

Under the Young plan a moratorium would be limited to two years. The Germans have asked for a one month's instalment. The creditors have rejected this as tending to impair the commercialization value of the unconditional annuities.

TWO SILENT PICTURES ON CIRCLE PROGRAM

Reginald Denny in "Red Hot Speed" and Ranger, the Dog in "Tracked."

Reginald Denny in "Red Hot Speed" and Ranger, the famous dog star in "Tracked" are the feature attractions at the Circle Saturday and Sunday.

Without a doubt, "Red Hot Speed" is the funniest picture Reginald Denny has turned out in many a day. The idea of the picture is ingenious and entirely new to the screen. It is such an obviously clever idea that it is a wonder that it has not been done before.

"Tracked" affords Ranger, the popular dog star, the opportunity for thrilling and intelligent action which have made him the foremost dog star in the films. The locale of the story is a sheep ranch in the west, and Ranger, a sheep dog, is accused of being a sheep "killer."

COMMUNITY CLUB'S ANNUAL ELECTION

R. K. Anderson Again President—Officers Make Their Yearly Reports.

The Manchester Community club held its seventh annual meeting last evening at the White house, the club's headquarters on North Main street. R. K. Anderson presided and gave a report of the activities of the club, the only organized body at the north end of the town devoted to recreational, civic and social work.

Mr. Anderson praised the work of Miss Christine Mason who is serving her second year as director of social and recreational activities. He believed the club under her administration, had been more active, better managed and had done more real honest-to-goodness work than ever before.

Mr. Anderson stated that the club had a committee working on the Morton will, and no doubt the will of Dr. F. H. Whiton which specifies a sum of money for the establishment of a library in the Eighth District will be investigated.

President Anderson also took opportunity to praise the work of Harold Norton who has fulfilled efficiently the duties of treasurer and of the helpfulness in so many ways of Mr. and Mrs. David Hamilton who make their home in the clubhouse and care for the building. He regarded it an honor to be chosen as the club's president.

Miss Mason's report proved most interesting, giving as it did, detailed accounts of the social and educational gatherings of the children, the young people and of groups, who make up the various clubs affiliated with the Community club. She spoke of the outside societies who find the White house an ideal place for their meetings both afternoons and evenings, and of the policies, hopes and aims of the officers and directors for future activities.

The election of officers resulted in the re-election of R. K. Anderson as president, vice president, Mark Holmes; secretary, Mrs. James M. Shearer; treasurer, Harold Norton; directors for three years, Wells Strickland, Miss Grace Robertson, W. W. Robertson. The other directors, previously elected are—for two years, Aldo Pagan, William Fields, Jr., Miss Mary McGuire; for one year, Joseph Clarke, C. B. Loomis, F. B. Clarke.

Following the business Miss Mason served sandwiches and coffee. ICE RACES POSTPONED. Hartford, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Connecticut Ice Skating championships, slated for Colk Park here Sunday, have been postponed, Supervisor of Recreation James H. Dillon announced today.

Sunday School Lesson

Triumphing Over Temptation

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 12. Triumphing Over Temptation.—Matt. 3:13-4:11.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist The baptism of Jesus marks the formal beginning of his life ministry and, also, his attitude toward the religion of his time. He had not come into the world as a rebellious spirit, outworking some fantastic theories or revolutions of his own. He had come, rather, as a patient teacher and leader with the purpose of fulfilling all that is good in the religion of his age and of all that has gone before him, with a purpose of guiding the people into higher truth, and, as he finely expressed it, "not to destroy but to fulfill."

He came not to pull down but to build up, and his baptism in addition to its significance as the initiation of his future ministry marked the building of that ministry into the religious life of his environment, historic and immediate.

Possessed Great Patience. It is well to grasp that fact, for in imitating the progressiveness of Jesus there are many who fail to see the patience with which Jesus viewed the slowness of the progress of religion and the care which he exercised in upbuilding the faith of men and women to destroy the very things upon which that faith could rest. It makes a great difference whether we view life from the standpoint of one seeking even honestly to overturn things, to make a general shake-up in the hope that something better will result, or from the standpoint of one who meets life with love and kindness and good-will, perceiving that humanity has to be led rather than bullied and driven, and that the deepest things in life depend, after all, not upon outward institutions and formal influences but upon the creation of inward spiritual values.

It is not without significance that the temptation of Jesus immediately follows upon his baptism. Un-observant people might suppose that experiences of exaltation would be a safeguard against temptation, that the uplifting experience of the baptism of Jesus and his formal acceptance of his life work would have been in itself the surest guaranty against any suggestion so close to the baptism is, however, in harmony with almost universal existence. It may be recalled that it was immediately following Elijah's signal triumph over the prophets of Baal that he was found in the deepest discouragement, longing only to die. Innumerable saints and prophets have had this experience of the most violent onset of temptation in the reaction from the most remarkable and ecstatic experiences.

It was this, probably, that Paul had in mind when he spoke of the fear lest having preached the Gospel to others he himself should be a castaway. He knew how narrow was the borderline between spiritual achievement and spiritual downfall. The more sensitive the soul the more capable of high experience, the keener and more poignant may be the temptation.

Deserting the Path. Too often the most crucial temptation that men have to face is that of substituting lower things for higher things, and lesser values for greater values. It is the good that is so often the enemy of the best, and men who were capable of heav-

Text: Matt. 3:13-4:11.

Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him;

And to a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil.

And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward hungered.

And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple.

And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

Jesus said unto him, it is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;

And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

Then the devil leaveth him, and behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

Only things are drawn into purely earthly achievement.

Jesus might have been a supreme world figure if he had followed the promptings of temptation to personal ambition. But how different it would have been to be even the world's most famous and most powerful man, in contrast to the supreme glory of being the world's supreme spiritual teacher and redeemer. It would help us not only to combat temptation in our own lives but to understand it if we studied more carefully the nature and meaning of temptation as it came to the Master.

Physicians asked to give their ideas on the new long dress styles said: "Unhealthful"; "Unfortunate"; "Deplorable"; "An Unmitigated Evil"; and "Unhygienic." All of which probably will help a great deal to popularize the aforesaid long dresses.

BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE International Sunday School Lesson Text, Jan. 12.

This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Matt. 3:17.

To become a member of a lodge, one goes through an orderly ritual and ceremony. Baptism is a ceremony by which one becomes a member of the Christian church and is known as a Christian. If one is true to his baptismal vows, he becomes a Christian in reality. Baptism of water is a sign of an internal baptism of the Holy Spirit and of the fire of the Lord's holy love, whereby one is associated on the spiritual side with angels and conjoined to the Lord.

The Lord said that He was baptized to fulfill the law. He exemplified the full life of a devout Christian. His baptism was an outward sign of the descent of the Father's glory which He came to manifest.

After the Lord was baptized He suffered grievous temptation. It is likewise with His followers today, when they are baptized with a deeper inflow of the Holy Spirit. For with a greater inflow of the Holy Spirit, wherein are the Lord's love, and mercy, weaknesses and hereditary evils are disclosed. Thereupon the true Christian resolves to put these weaknesses and evils away. When such resolution is made, temptation comes, for the old habits appeal for satisfaction. Then is the time to make as one's own what the Holy Spirit gives and to increase in its power.

The Lord met His temptations in a way that discloses the most effective method of using the Word and of gaining the victory in temptation. Thrice He was tempted, and thrice He quoted the Word against the tempter. Then the devil left Him, and angels came to minister unto Him. We should use the Word likewise. When one sees tendencies to evil or defects in himself, he should search the Scriptures for passages that forbid those evils and that strengthen. Then, when temptations come, resolutely assert the Word against his imperfections. So continue courageously and faithfully through the midnight of despair; whereupon the angels will come surely and minister. They will "bear three up in their hands," and "suffer no evil to befall thee." Thus the purifying continues until the victory is won through the baptism of the Spirit and the fire of the Lord's love, and the desperate struggles of this life are crowned with the everlasting peace of God.

New Year Seen As Fruitful Era In Growth Of Inland Waterways

Great advances in inland waterway work are expected in 1930. At upper left are government barges and towboats passing through a loading at St. Louis, while at lower right is a towboat "at work" near St. Louis.

By F. A. RESCH

St. Louis.—(AP.)—Old Man River greets 1930 with an auspicious glance and an optimistic twinkle in his eye. Although the romantic packet age of Mark Twain's day is far, far behind, the Mississippi foreshadows a new era that bears promise of a completed inland waterways system for the entire middle west.

The stubborn, mud-choked Missouri, the Mississippi's chief tributary to the west, is being dredged and deepened by government engineers. Before 1930 ends they expect to complete most of a project that will open a six-foot channel to a Kansas City and the huge grain territory to the west.

With a six-foot channel authorized as far as Sioux City, Ia., proponents of Missouri river shipping are seeking a nine-foot channel from St. Louis to Kansas City. On the Illinois river, the Mississippi's gateway to the Tennessee river, has been prolonged by a score of thoroughly primitive Indians, dressed in breach cloths and speaking a strange language.

When Varian recovered a half hour later he found that time had slipped backward several centuries. His crippled plane was surrounded by a score of thoroughly primitive Indians, dressed in breach cloths and speaking a strange language. Varian had landed at the only primitive fishing village in the State dredged miles of coast line of the State.

Mayan, dating back four or five centuries. For two days, until his companions located his plane, Varian lived with the Indians whose life has advanced practically none at all since the Spanish conquest. Their sole diet was fish from the Pacific and cakes and tortillas made from corn, which was obtained by trading dried fish for corn at an interior point fifty miles away, across a great swamp.

When the villagers prepared to eat they pulled in a fishing net made of twisted fiber, collected the catch and threw them into a large receptacle, which appeared to have been washed in from a shipwrecked vessel. With rellish the liquid formed by the cooking fish and then picked over the fish meat. Varian passed up the soup and lived off unseasoned fish until help came. He reported the natives treated him with every courtesy giving him freely of everything they had except tobacco, which they rationed out cautiously because of its scarcity. They made cigars by crumpling up tobacco leaves and wrapping the dust into a whole leaf, which was lighted from their ever-burning campfire.

Two days after Varian had been rescued and had returned to Vera Cruz, there was a telegram from the telegraph point advising his superiors of his predicament and location. The dispatch bore place had crossed the swamp to the near inland town, from which a horseman had carried the telegram to a farther inland railroad point. Motor Hints Timely Suggestions on the Care of the Car by the Automobile Club of Hartford. CHECKS THE GAS MIXTURE. How the accelerator can serve as a check on the carburetor mixture is one of the interesting chapters in car care.

Suppose, for example, you are eager to get ahead in traffic. You step on the gas, expecting to dart ahead, but are surprised to find that the car slows down sharply as though you had applied the brakes. This indicates that the mixture is much too lean for this sort of driving. If, on the other hand, the engine picks up gradually when the accelerator is pressed down slowly the chances are that the mixture is ideal for a long pull up a steep hill where the abnormal engine heat changes the efficiency of the carburetor.

STRAINING THE GEARS. One of the forms of car abuse which many drivers unconsciously indulge in is letting up the clutch pedal before completing a shift into any one of the several gear combinations. This permits engine power to be transmitted to the rear wheels through meshed gears. The resulting strain on the gear teeth ought to be evident. The most common form of this is engaging the clutch too soon when shifting to high. Unfortunately the habit is more damaging here because of the fact that when a car is in high the arrangement is not in a meshing of gears. The high sliding gear is pushed against the side of the clutch gear, "dogs" on each gear catching into each other. These can be badly worn through the habit of letting the clutch pedal up too soon.

bearings in cars equipped with enclosed front brakes. One owner heard that to keep forcing new grease into a front wheel bearing would mean driving the excess out on the inside of the wheel and thence into the brake housing. Rather than run the risk of having serious brake trouble he decided to let well enough alone. In the meantime the grease thinned out in the bearings so constant service and started to work out of the washer on the inside of the wheels. It wasn't long before he had grease on the front brakes—the very trouble he had sought to avoid. Furthermore, when the bearings were examined it was found that they had suffered from lack of lubricant.

RUBBING OFF THE LINES. A well lacquered car will stand for a reasonable amount of polishing but it is always best to refrain from too liberal rubbing of lines. These are put on a car after the rest of the finishing has been done and usually are not as durable as the rest. The cloth that is used for polishing will show the color of the body but the polish does the finishing. Rest of the finishing has been done and usually are not as durable as the rest. Motorists who modernize their cars by adding distance type engine heat indicators should know something about the heating characteristics of their particular engine. Some owners drill into the cylinder block at the most convenient point and insert the end of the indicator tube immovably, without thought on the matter. Others make the connection at some point along the lower water hose between the radiator and the water pump. Thus the meter may be reading the temperature of the water around the coolest cylinder. The lower water hose always carries the coolest water, so that point is also wrong for a connection. For the temperature indicator to be a safe check on the engine it should tell the story about the water at the hottest cylinder. If a water hose is tapped this should be at some point in the upper hose connection between cylinder head and radiator.

Main St. but a Lane When He Started Out

James M. Burke, Whose Store Was a Landmark for Years, Tells How Business Was Conducted in the Good Old Days; Has a Fine Memory for Details.

THE fishing was good in Hop brook in the rear of Cheney's in the '60s. Big beauties lay in the shaded pool while workers in the little silk plant cast at yearning eyes out of the back windows at the water rippling down over the mossy stones. But there was no time for fishing in the growing silk plant for many orders were on the books, and the working processes were laborious and slow.

Still, there was one employee of the plant more or less was a privileged character—11 year old James Burke of the dye room. Between the dippings he was allowed to slip out the back of the mill to the secreted pole and can of worms under the bank. Here he was allowed to fish until the piercing whistle of Sanford Cheney, dyerom boss, warned him that more chipped soap was needed in the washroom.

Liked the Out Doors

These early privileges given the youthful Burke served to convince him that his life could not be one of confinement; that he would, if possible, strive and save in the great out-of-doors under the health-giving sunshine of summer and that he would brave the shows and cold of winter to attain his ideals of proper living. In those early days James Burke was a sickly boy but by reason of the youthful decision to use the great out-of-doors for his medicine, he is today, alive and healthy and one of Manchester's oldest merchants.

STARTS IN BUSINESS ON HIS OWN HOOK

SOON after leaving the Cheney dyehouse, James Burke started into business for himself with a small line of teas, coffee and spices which he peddled from farm to farm in Manchester and surrounding towns. His first equipment was a hand basket but this was later replaced with a horse and team as the business improved. Of those early days of trading Mr. Burke has many interesting stories to tell.

"When I left Cheney's for the store business I confess the future did not appear very bright," said Mr. Burke as he began the interesting story of his business life. "It was not in good health, and I realized that if I was to live my allotted time I must get work in the sunshine. When I began peddling there was but one store on Main street—the big general store of W. H. Cheney located at what is now the corner of Charter Oak and Main streets.

Real General Store

"That was a store for you! Everything was stocked in the old Cheney store from pins to furniture and even the postoffice was located in the same building."

"At that time no serious attempt had been made to sell teas, coffee and spice to the consumer direct. For that reason, I realized that it would serve as a method by which I could start my business and at the same time make a wide acquaintance in the surrounding towns."

"For six years I traveled the country roads in all kinds of weather; in summer heat and winter storms, but I was making a wide acquaintance and making a fine beginning through my method of taking whatever commodities that the farmers had to sell and in treating them honestly. I spent long hours on the road and perhaps made less in those six years than some storekeepers now make in one, but I was making friends and that was what counted."

GIVES UP THE ROAD TO CONDUCT STORE

AFTER six long years selling teas, coffee and spices to farmers in Gilead, Coventry, Andover, Hebron, Storrs, Colchester and Glastonbury the hustling young merchant decided to establish a permanent business in town. Consequently he opened a store on the corner of Spruce and Wells street in 1877 and started out to put the same spirit into the new enterprise that he had used to advantage in the rural districts.

Gone were the all night stops in the little Connecticut villages, every man woman and child of which was known to the local peddler. Gone were the long drives in from the outskirts in the howling gales after the days work was done. In memory, only, were the happy nights spent in the farm houses out over the hills, where the singing tea kettle in the big farm kitchens played a romantic accompaniment to the old organ in the "settling room" played by the daughter of the family.

Liked Country People.

"I came to love the association and friendship of those country people," said Mr. Burke. "They were real people and ever considerate of others. Perhaps it was more common during those early days than now but I was among them so much I seemed to be as one of them."

"I always treated them fairly in all my dealing with them and always gave them the benefit of the doubt

Nutmgs—Real Ones—As Change In the Old Days in Manchester.

The life story of James M. Burke, one of Manchester's oldest merchants in the Herald today, is a sterling retrospect of the old days, coming as it does from an observant citizen whose entire life has been spent in town. Few men of Mr. Burke's fine outstanding type are left to tell of those days of trading and the social activities of the period. The store in which he labored from 1886 until four years ago is standing today at the corner of Wells and Spruce streets—a memorial to the life's work of one of Manchester's oldest merchants.

The highlights of Mr. Burke's career came during the six years that he traveled the highways of the surrounding country as a itinerant grocer.

"Everything was trade and barter in those days," he said. "I traded my goods for eggs, meats, vegetable and fruits, some of which I sold on the way back. I paid for my night's lodgings in products. When I owed a few cents on the exchange, I gave my customers a few nutmgs—at a penny apiece or a few dozen pins. That was the day of little cash but plenty of barter and swap. "Later, in the store, I wrote my own catchy ads. The late Elwood S. Ela, editor of the Herald often complimented me on the catchy ads that I employed. "Hark to hear the Echo" was my coffee leader and I used other curiosity arousing leads on occasion."

in any trade. When my Glastonbury customers learned that I was going to build a new store they banded together and loaded up their oxen—six of them,—with foundation stone for the cellar. They presented it to me as a gift for my many years among them."

MAIN STREET A LANE IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

WHEN the Burke store was in its infancy, Main street as it is known today, was just a rambling village lane. From the store of W. H. Cheney north there was but two stores, the tinning and hardware establishment of William Ferris and Sons and Hugh Morlan's tin shop. There were two churches in Manchester at that time, the North Congregational and South Methodist in approximately the same locations that they occupy today. The Catholic church was built later and within the space of a few years other stores were built along the East side of the street.

There were perhaps a dozen residences along Main street from the present terminus to the Center, one of which, the house of C. E. House was used in part, as a store. The parsonage of the Methodist church was later moved from a point near the church to its present location on Spruce street near Charter Oak.

At that time, according to Mr. Burke, Hartford road ran southerly of the present road, out around the Cheney properties and came back into the present thoroughfare at a point near the bridge. The west side of Main street was a dense growth of oaks with no streets running west, from St. James street to the Center.

The principal residential district of South Manchester at that time around the original Cheney store at the terminus and extending south on Main street, well towards the Glastonbury line. Taylorville (so-called) for the many families of that name living in that section began at a point just over the ridge and extended to the Glastonbury line. The population of Manchester was composed of Irish, native Americans, Germans and English in that order of numbers.

CATERED TO TRADE OF ALL NATIONALITIES.

AFTER the new store was built Mr. Burke started a vigorous campaign for business, stocking nearly everything in the 65x30 foot main floor space for which there was a reasonable demand. Similar to many such stores of that period it was said that "anything from a needle to an anchor could be brought from his wide range of stocks. Of the old methods of trading, Mr. Burke, speaking from his intimate knowledge of the days immediately after the Civil war, says: "I did my best to carry the largest stock of goods possible. I tried to satisfy each nationality and race insofar as possible. I remember the German people were the heaviest buyers of porks and meats and tremendous users of lards and fats. The Irish ran more to vegetables and sweets and the native Americans bought all commodities in moderation."

Mr. Burke has been a member of the Catholic church during his life term in Manchester and from his fine memory has extracted the names of the early parishioners of that church. Catholic families of the 1865-70 period he lists as follows: The Newmans, Connors, McKoneys, Shaws, Dougherty, Kenerney, Burke, Dunn, Toomey, Foley, Fitzgerald, Tanners, Murphy, Donnelly, Barry, Carney, Sullivan, Hayes, O'Brien, McGuire, Cutter, Dwyer, Mowbray, Cunningham, O'Reilly and Salhoun. The majority of Catholic families at that time were employed in the Cheney mills.

Few Living Now.

Of these 27 families living in Manchester during the years shortly after the Civil War, there are but two or three living today."

Mr. Burke has compiled the statistics of Manchester's increase in population and lists the population in 1860 at 3,294; 1870, 4,223; 1880, 13,841; with an estimated population for 1930 of near 24,000.

Mr. Burke's father enlisted in the Connecticut Volunteers and was

SOCIETY ENTERS OFFICIAL STAGE

Important Functions Now Being Held at the White House and Cabinet Homes

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Washington society is entering its official phase, with important functions at the White House, Cabinet homes, Embassies and Legations and other centers of official life.

Although the White House reception for the judiciary Thursday night was heralded as initiating many innovations, much forecasting failed to bring about any change from the routine of years past except, perhaps, a more homelike atmosphere. The Supreme Court members, who always head the list of those received, dwindled from nine to four, with only two ladies in line—Mrs. Pierce Butler and Mrs. Harlan F. Stone.

Chief Justice Taft, who entered a Washington hospital this week, abandoned all social activities a week or two ago, and cancelled even the most important official events following the recent death of his brother, Mr. Charles F. Taft.

With both the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes absent, Mr. Willis Vandevant was the first guest reviewed.

The bright, particular star in the procession at the judicial reception, however, as the President led the way down stairs, was Mrs. James J. Davis, the wife of the Secretary of Labor.

She wore a striking gown of black lace of princess lines, with a quite distinctly marked waistline, the ends of the ornamental belt falling low on the skirt, two deep founces of lace formed this skirt, the lower one touching the floor at the back and forming a slight train. The neckline was square, the long black suede gloves reaching almost to the shoulders.

Miss Caroline Hyde, the daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde, who is going all about, was a dainty figure in the blue room, wearing a new fashioned gown of peach color moire, with the fitted bodice showing a high waistline and a narrow belt held at the front by a diamond clasp.

BACHELOR PRINCE IS AT PALM BEACH

Royal Visitor Speaks English Well and Is Making a Hit With Debutantes.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Palm Beach usually has a bachelor prince or so to keep the hearts of the debutantes fluttering. Last season there was Prince Cyril of Bulgaria while early this week, a royal arrival was received in the person of Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, nephew of the late Kaiser. Auguste Victoria of Germany. Members of his Excellency's party are Mitchell Ulan, president of the Polish Chamber of Commerce, Madame Ulan and their daughter, Marie Deobry; Baron Cerini; Edouard la Roux, of the Dreyfus Bank in Paris, and Henri la Bourdette, wife of a prominent French manufacturer of automobile bodies.

The royal visitor speaks English well and says he considers American girls charming.

"Though many have played on the courts of the Bath and Tennis Club since New Years, the formal opening of the club will not be held until the middle of the month. The restaurant will open January 16. Meals will be served to members in the beautiful patio, where small tables are placed under mammoth umbrellas, a growing cocconut tree serving as the staff of each of the huge, bright colored parasols on the beach, graceful palm trees planted among the gay cabanas, afford a tropical setting for the pajama-clad sun baskers.

Of wide spread interest is the announcement that the annual dinner of the Old Guard society will be held at the Breakers hotel on February 18. This will be a stag affair as usual and celebrated speakers will add brilliance to the occasion. Bernard Kroger of Cincinnati, president of this famous organization.

The first boxing tea of the season will be held on January 27 at the Oasis Club. These affairs were innovations of last season and proved immensely popular with members of the club and their feminine guests. Tea is served at small tables and there is music by an orchestra and dancing between the bouts. Oasis Club members act as time keepers, announcers and sometimes as referee.

Morris Wood of Philadelphia, who is at the Everglades Club for the season entertained a large gathering at the New Embassy Club in Manhattan. Among the interesting dinner parties was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. Holden at Villa Clafin. Mrs. Holden is the former Fifi Widener of New York. She is an ardent devotee of tennis and was noted recently at the Bath and Tennis Club wearing a particularly attractive tennis frock, featuring the sun back mode.

The younger set in this resort does not wait for evening for dancing to commence. Every afternoon there is a tea dance in the music room of the Breakers hotel. Miss Pauline Bode of Chicago entertained a party there Wednesday in honor of the Misses Jane and Dolly Merritt of Chicago, who left on Thursday for New York to reenter school.

The Garden Club held its first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. George A. McKimlock, Chicago, the president. The flower show to be sponsored by this club will be held February 23 to March first.

SURVEY TO DETERMINE HOW FAST TREES GROW

Washington.—(AP)—To determine how many trees are grown in how fast they grow is the object of an economic survey to be conducted by the United States forest service. The information gained will form a basis for developing a forest policy and practice for the future.

Dr. A. E. Ziegler, former director of the Mt. Alto forest school in Pennsylvania, will have charge of the study of the financial aspects.

THE BOOK SURVEY.

By BRUCE CATTON.

The modern novelist, unfortunately, often forgets that a novel must tell a story. He plunges into the murkiness of the "stream of consciousness" business, or he turns a sociological tract in disguise, or he concentrates exclusively on character-drawing; and, in the end, his book does everything but hold the reader's interest.

Manuel Komroff, whose "Coronet" is presented this month by Coward-McCann, didn't make that mistake. He set out to tell a story, and he succeeded admirably. "Coronet" engages your attention, and holds it to the end, for the good, old-fashioned reason that it makes you want to find out what happens.

The book covers a lot of ground. It begins in the Florence of Renaissance Italy, shifts to the Paris of Napoleon Bonaparte, jumps thence to the Germany of Wilhelm II and winds up in present-day Chicago. Yet Mr. Komroff has done the job with such skill, has made the people and events of each epoch so real and life-like, has encased his whole story in a literary covering of such a high order, that the tale never seems jumpy or disconnected.

The peregrinations of a jeweled coronet made by a Florentine goldsmith constitute the thread that unifies these episodes. Mr. Komroff undertakes to prove that aristocracy must forever replenish its ranks from below; that the rude, uncouth parvenu of today is the ancestor of the cultured aristocrat of tomorrow. He shows you a Russian nobleman of the era of Peter the Great and a Chicago meat packer of the twentieth century, and demonstrates that they are blood brothers.

The book is picked with life. The story of the two drummer boys who followed Napoleon's army to Moscow is a novel in itself. All in all, the infant year is not likely to bring many novels that are more worth your attention than this one. "Coronet" will cost you $3, and it's well worth it.

A Fine Portrait of Lee as Man and Soldier.

Military experts without number have written biographical studies of General Robert E. Lee. They have taken his amazing cam-

Stuart Chase Examines American Prosperity.

The latest in the series of paperback books which Charles Boni is publishing at 75 cents a copy is Stuart Chase's "Prosperity: Fact or Myth." It is an excellent book to include in this series. It deserves a wide reading, and it is to be hoped that the cheapness of its price will get it one.

Mr. Chase examines our prosperity to see just what it means. He is extremely critical, not to say skeptical, about some phases of it. He finds that it has been fearfully exaggerated; that the annual income of many millions of Americans is still below $1,500; that mass production has created many new problems to replace the old ones that it has solved.

Nevertheless, he does not discount the real advance that has been made. For good or for evil, something very profound is happening to our American civilization. It is whirling along somewhere at a prodigious rate. As Mr. Chase remarks: "The scene is at once ludicrous, arresting, inspiring and always genuinely stimulating."

The book is published by the Rae D. Henkle Co., and costs $5. A Gleam of Beauty in a Sordid Love Affair.

In "The Midnight Bell," Patrick Hamilton has chosen a subject that might well have been the basis for one of these isn't-life-a-dreadful-mess novels; the love affair of a waiter in a London saloon and a girl of the streets.

Mr. Hamilton doesn't take this obvious course, however; instead, he makes this inherently sordid love-story almost idyllic in its charm. Don't be mistaken; he doesn't wind his tale up with a romantic flourish by having a great, pure love reform the heart of the painted little mixx who is the book's poor heroine. Mr. Hamilton is an adult, writing for adults. His girl remains, at the end, what she was at the beginning. The young man who falls in love with her comes a fearful cropper, squanders all of his money, loses his job, plunges deep into degradation and finally goes to sea to forget about it.

But the story, nevertheless, is

There is just a chance that most breath-taking civilization that history has yet to record. But to date its chief record is activity."

ADVERTISING AIDS TEXAS TO SETTLE RANCH DISTRICT

Lubbock, Tex.—(AP)—The South Plains area of Texas has found that it pays to advertise its farming opportunities.

A year ago Lubbock started a campaign to bring settlers to the section that formerly was raw ranch land. This fall alone 600 families moved into the district, and more than 90,000 acres were sold at low prices.

Several large ranches that once spread over thousands of acres have been split into farms averaging 160 acres apiece.

Next year, in an effort to increase its population still more, Lubbock will spend $22,000 for national advertising of the South Plains area. Cotton, corn, Sudan grass, wheat, grain sorghums and live stock are grown on the former ranch land.

SIGNIFICANT ACTION

Refusal of a New Haven county grand jury to indict a West Haven man for fatally shooting a police officer who was engaged in a midnight liquor raid on the home of the assailant seems to us to provide food for a good deal of thought.

It is obvious that this was not one of those circumstances which occasionally may occur in any community, where the grand jury may be packed accidentally or otherwise with persons having little regard for the law.

The circumstances were that three police officers of the West Haven department, one of whom was Raymond Zoller, a World War veteran, visited the home of Dante Calini, who lived in a somewhat isolated part of the town.

They were armed, the state maintained, with a search warrant and were seeking liquor which they suspected Calini of having in his possession.

The state maintained that Calini opened the door to Zoller but on discovering that he was a policeman rushed back into the house, seized the gun and opened fire.

It was Calini's counsel's claim that Zoller was never properly identified as an officer of the law, that Calini believed him to be a marauder and himself and his family in danger and that the shooting was in defense of Calini's home and family.

Not only should Midshipman John Henry Faunce, Jr., of Philadelphia, be dismissed from the Naval Academy, but we are not at all sure that he doesn't deserve to be hanged, drawn and quartered and his fragments fed to the crows. He has committed an unspeakably outrageous offense, inasmuch as when he was admitted to the academy last year he was already married. This is not only in violation of Naval Academy regulations but an unforgivably despicable trick to play on the fair maidens of Maryland and Virginia.

The officers of the American navy come from everywhere—from every state and every congressional district; but their wives to an extent that is amazing to those unfamiliar with the system, speak the soft, slurred dialect of the Old Dominion and the Cockade State.

Annapolis is the most distinguished marital mart in the South. To it flock, for those long, long Southern visits, the marriageable charmers of every Virginia and Maryland county. Only those remain away who have no Annapolis relatives or social connections.

Wherefore let them take out Midshipman Faunce and shoot him at sunrise—the wretched cheater, doing Miss Maryland or Miss Virginia out of her meal ticket!

Meriden people, who had particularly reason to know all about Fred W. Edel, are not the only ones in Connecticut who are wondering whether that malodorous individual is to again escape execution through the action of New York's governor in repeatedly granting respites to the convicted murderer.

To be sure, Edel did not meet with his deserts in this state; but that was the fault of a combination of luck and jury perversity. If he had been convicted in Connecticut and had been sentenced to death, as he was in New York, there would have been no such executive interference with the carrying out of the sentence as there has been in the latter state.

We have always had more or less admiration for Governor Roosevelt but his attitude toward persons justly convicted of major crimes, as shown by his disposition to coddle prisoners as a bribe to keep them from rioting and by the casual way in which he is helping to nullify the sentence of Edel, seems to be a symptom of moral mushiness.

A nineteen-year-old Bridgeport girl, driving without a license, without lights and on the wrong side of the road, struck a 64-year-old man and killed him. Then she fled. Several days afterward she was arrested. In the Fairfield County Superior Court she was permitted to plead guilty to the charge of evading responsibility and fined $75 and costs. The presiding judge was Allyn L. Brown.

There is one thing about the forthcoming census for which we want to give three rousing cheers. As we understand it many millions of American women who have hitherto been classed, along with the hobo and vags, as having "no occupation" are to be listed as "home makers." Millions of words have been written about the nonsensicality of saying that a woman who cares for a home and a family, and who in the majority of cases has to be everything from cook to furnace stoker, who is the very princess of jacks-of-all-trades and who has to excel in a number of them, is occupationless when, as a matter of fact, she works more hours and more diligently during every minute of each of them, than any other person whatsoever.

has recognized that the home making woman is anything but an idler and a parasite. We rejoice, too, in the happiness of the term hit upon by the Bureau. "Housewife" somehow has a sound inferior to the deserts of the highly honorable position of the home maker—and besides many a time it is untrue, for the home maker may be a sister or a daughter or a widowed mother of the bread winner. And "housekeeper" is an impossible term because the universal inference is that the job is one filled for wages.

"Home maker" is applicable; it is poetical while it is precise; it is just. Moreover, it carries with it an implication of responsibilities. Perhaps—who knows?—there may be some better homes made when those who make them realize that their calling has been dignified and charged, by a significant official term, with both responsibility and credit for the quality, material and spiritual, of the establishments which they control.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 11 — Our own Manhattan sightseeing trip — Evelyn Nesbit now spells her name Evelyn because a numerologist told her that an extra "E" had been responsible for most of her troubles.

Those Therman machines which are now made for home consumption are solving the party problem for scores of worried hosts. Just turn a half dozen people loose about the metal instrument which draws sound out of the ether, and everyone will amuse themselves as innocently as children on Christmas night.

Over at a little shindig which Donald Friede tossed the other evening for one of his new authors, Boris Sokoloff (The Battle of Youth), I observed the world-wise Mr. Ben Hecht, variously of Chicago, Hollywood and Broadway, going quite lunatic while trying to perform "Home Sweet Home," or whatever it was. Actually it sounded like a couple of old-fashioned Irish "banishes" on a New Year party.

Whereas the cherubic Miguel Covarrubias, the caricaturist, can make the Therman seem slightly more like a quartet of banishes at choir practice, without taking half the trouble.

By the way, when not engaged in turning out sophisticated novels and scenarios, goes in for concertinas, guitars, harmonicas and such in a big way. Sinclair Lewis is another who goes sneaking into the kitchen for a mouth organ, but he has never graduated from "Old Black Joe."

One of Broadway's most interesting morsels of the moment, concerns two very charming, but beset, each starting in a musical show. When, some months ago, the blond and lovely Evelyn Laye gave the audiences "the look of the month," it was soon made public that divorce proceedings had been started in dear old London against her husband, Sonny Hale.

The "largest hotel in the world" also happens to have the smallest card system for checking its guests. It's a new device, based upon colors and numbers. The colors indicate the sort of room rented, whether single or double, with bath or with parlour. They occupy no more space than that required for a hat check, each guest being identified by a numeral, which can be rechecked through a room clerk if desired. It's the first time, I'm told, that the desk clerk of a hotel has operated without the usual guest identification cards.

HEALTH DIET ADVICE

Dr. Frank McCoy says 'The Best Way to Health' is to follow a diet that is healthy and balanced. Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

THREE O'CLOCK FATIGUE. I am convinced that our modern commercial system makes it necessary for the average person to work too many hours a day, but I do not know of any kind of work performed by those doing manual labor or brain work which can be responsible for what is commonly called "three o'clock fatigue."

It is true that a rest at three or four o'clock, with a cup of coffee, a glass of malted milk, Ovaltine or Coca Cola may prove helpful in relieving the fatigue. This is not so much because of the rest but because of the stimulation afforded by these drinks.

Even a heavy breakfast does not seem to interfere very much with physical or mental activities during the morning. This is probably because we seem to have a good deal of stored-up energy from the night's rest and are, therefore, able to digest a more or less "bad" breakfast without noticing the depressing effect.

You who have been complaining about being so tired in the afternoon, will do well to try my suggestion for a few days, using a light luncheon such as a glass of orange juice, a combination salad, or one or two cooked, non-starchy vegetables with a salad. Many will find that an exclusive fruit luncheon will be quite satisfactory.

Washington—There is a wide variation of industrial-employment conditions over the country, but only in few fields is there no more hopeful prospect during the coming year, according to a general forecast of the U. S. Employment Service.

Predictions include a good outlook for skilled labor in California and Georgia but not so good for unskilled labor, lower employment level in Illinois than in 1929 without much improvement before summer, improved labor demand in Kansas, better employment prospects than in 1929 in Massachusetts, great improvement expected in Michigan, which entered this year with considerable unemployment, some increase in Missouri, an early return to satisfactory employment conditions in New York, possible increase in North Carolina, slight increase probable in Oklahoma, better conditions by spring in Pennsylvania comparing favorably with a year ago, normal conditions in Wisconsin, great increase in Kentucky when construction programs start, as good or better in Louisiana, foreboding employment in Minnesota with better weather.

work is with the brain or with the hands. Stop talking about overwork and afternoon fatigue until you have tried the light, wholesome luncheons I have suggested.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Heart Leakage) Question:—Reader writes—"The opening between the heart and aorta does not close as tight as it should. Sometimes this causes heavy pulsations to be felt in the upper part of the chest and throat. Is this anything to cause any serious trouble? What do you suggest in the way of treatment, or is no treatment still better?"

Answer:—You are no doubt suffering from leakage of the valves of your heart. There are many causes of such heart derangements, but I am sure the principal cause is always from too much stomach or intestinal gas pressing against the heart and diaphragm. Any diet you can take which will cut down the amount of stomach and intestinal gas will bring about some relief from your trouble and give your heart a chance to work without being interfered with.

Question:—Mrs. C. F. S. N. asks—"Will you please tell me what to do for an overactive child of two and a half years? She cannot be still for one minute, and destroys everything she gets her hands on. I nursed my mother through a severe illness for several months before this child was born, living under a constant worry, fear and dread. My other two children, four, and one and a half, are calm and well behaved. Will she outgrow it, or must she always suffer from something I could not help?"

Answer:—It does appear that some children are more nervous than others, even from birth, but you can certainly help your child to overcome this nervousness if you train her properly. Children must be taught how to behave, but it is also necessary to regulate their diet, their habits of play, etc., so that any physical irritation will be removed which might induce nervousness. You should study different books on child psychology, and also keep your child on a carefully balanced diet.

Should A Girl Marry Man Twice Her Age?

Interesting Letters on Big Question in Every Girl's Life Received by The Herald Today.

Should a girl marry a man twice her age? Should a stenographer marry her boss? What is the ideal union?

There are a few of the letters which have reached the Herald. Perhaps you will agree with these opinions and perhaps you will disagree.

FROM A RED HAIRRED GIRL Editor: The Herald: You asked for opinion of the situation in "Rash Romance." Here is mine:

COMPANIONS TOO OLD Editor: In regard to your "Rash Romance" questions I don't think a girl should marry a man who is twice as old as she is.

LOVE THE SOLUTION Dear Sir: Being young and somewhat romantic I subscribe to the opinion that the only formula for a successful marriage is love between the two mainly concerned, the wife and the husband.

IT'S LOVE AGAIN Manchester Evening Herald Managing Editor: Dear Sir: In connection with The Herald's new serial, "Rash Romance," you ask for opinions as to whether a young woman should marry a man twice her age.

FROM EXPERIENCE Editor: I welcome the opportunity to give my views regarding the so-called "one and a half" marriages. I have others may speak from observation at mine is from a time tested experiment.

Editor: In reply to the second question the answer to the first applies here also. Love, in fact, supplies all the answers to the three questions.

CHEVROLET SEES A RECORD YEAR

Plans Sales Activities Program to Meet An Unprecedented Demand.

Detroit, Mich., January 11.—Following the announcement seven days ago of the improved 1930 Chevrolet Six at greatly reduced prices, the Chevrolet Motor company last week launched a campaign of sales activities designed to meet the requirements of what promises to be another record year for the public acceptance of six cylinder automobiles.

Factory officials expressed themselves as highly gratified over the reception of the new Chevrolet Six at the New York National Automobile Show last week. Thousands of orders and hundreds of congratulatory letters from the nationwide Chevrolet dealer organization told something of the success with which the new product is meeting across the United States.

At the same time the thousands of orders already on hand may be taken care of with a minimum of delay, the 16 giant Chevrolet plants are speeding toward capacity operation with all the haste consistent with the precision manufacturing methods. Employment at the Chevrolet factories is at the highest January level in the history of the Company with many of the plants maintaining two shifts.

At the same time the thousands of orders already on hand may be taken care of with a minimum of delay, the 16 giant Chevrolet plants are speeding toward capacity operation with all the haste consistent with the precision manufacturing methods.

WEDDINGS FEATURE SOCIETY'S SEASON

Greater Part of New York's Calendar is Devoted to Nuptials These Weeks.

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Society stopped and caught its breath this week and, curtailing the activities that had made its holiday season a dizzy whirl, concentrated on the bridal veil—an orange blossom atmosphere that attended a long procession of weddings.

Former nuptials, simple ceremonies, even night weddings—a party these days—kept the fashionables in an almost perpetual environment of stiff white satin and organ chimes.

The long awaited ice carnival in Madison Square garden and the Assembly ball at the Ritz Carlton, brought occasional variation to society's programs, but the greater part of its calendars was devoted to weddings and the festivities which accompanied them.

The wedding of Miss Deborah Dyer and Dr. Yale Kneeland, Jr., which took place in St. Ignace Church, was one of the most brilliant of the week's ceremonies. The bride was attired in a princess gown of cream-colored satin, the long-sleeved bodice of which was made with a deep V-shaped poke of old family lace.

OLDSMOBILE DISPLAYS NEW BODY DESIGNS

More Roomy and More Pleasing Lines Are Features of This Year's Models.

Improvements which reflect the latest advancements in automotive engineering and new Fisher built bodies that are more roomy and of distinctively modern lines are combined in the Oldsmobile Six for 1930 which is being displayed for the first time at the national automobile show.

Mechanical advancements have improved both acceleration and hill climbing; have enhanced driving ease and riding comfort, and contribute to even finer and more powerful braking action. Fundamentally, however, the Oldsmobile Six retains all the proven features which have contributed to its success in the hands of thousands of owners during the past two years.

In addition to new bodies, one new body type is introduced this year. This is the patrician sedan with super-deluxe equipment. This year all standard body types can also be obtained with five wire wheel equipment at slight extra cost.

The standard body types include the four-door sedan, two-door sedan, two-door sedan, business coupe, sport coupe, phaeton and convertible roadster. These types also can be had with special or de luxe equipment.

With conservative artistry, the designers of the new Oldsmobile Six bodies have combined the latest trends in automotive styling with lines which enhance the increased size of the cars. Bodies are wider, providing an additional inch and one-half width to the seats. This has been made possible by the new body lines and by decreasing the depth of the wheel housings.

A new recessed panel effect that belittles the windows of the closed body types is an outstanding feature of the exterior appearance of the Oldsmobile Six. This recess is finished in a lighter tone than are the window reveals and has the effect of the body assessments result that it of the body assessments result that it of the body assessments result that it

New Winter Construction An Encouraging Sign

NEEDLESS NOOKS OFTEN RUINOUS, DESIGNER FINDS

One Meaningless Feature to Structure Is Usually Too Many, Reasons Architect.

By KERR RAINSFORD

When the architect builds his own home there is at least simplification in the problem of the degree to which it shall express the owner or architect. Actually of course it should not express the architect, but only his appreciation of the environment and his understanding of the owner's method of life. If the architect can do this while building a convenient and good looking house, in that order of importance, and keep on doing so, he may safely leave his own personality to his biographers or to the recording angel.

Clippings or photographs shown by or to the prospective clients in the preliminary conferences are of decided interest as showing how the clients react to various stimuli. But let there be no preconceived and ill-digested obsessions. Nothing is more ill advised than a determination to include some beloved feature, seen elsewhere and dragged by the roots from its native habitat. Unless the operation be a very minor one, the twig will not only wither on the limb to which it has been grafted, but will probably, in resentment, kill the entire limb. The fact that the architect had told every one so beforehand will have scarcely any resuscitating effect.

Points of Compass Affect Plans

In the beginning when the heavens and earth rose out of chaos, or were about to do so, the architect's wife suggested that they look all through his collection of clippings and select a large quantity of nooks and corners to be incorporated in the prospective dwelling. So he countered with the proposal that he design a house which they might inhabit, and later erect the nooks and corners in adjacent territory.

One begins with the first floor plan. Its requirements are not apt to vary over a wide range, but should be studied in closest connection with the points of the compass. The living room, large or small, principally for social occasions or for quiet evenings, should face south and west.

The early morning sun is of little advantage to it, while the lack of afternoon sunlight will render it quite unsympathetic. No one should be free to settle here in the morning hours; but to turn on the electricity around the tea table while the evening light is flooding the autumn meadows on the other side of the house is altogether too bad, and will not be compensated by the expression of anybody's personality.

The dining room should face south or east if it cannot do both, and it need not try too hard to do so. Either will give it the sunlight it craves on winter mornings, and the dining room should be cheerful in any season; while the evening sunlight here may merely result in the drawing of shades to keep it out of the eyes of those who must sit facing it.

Placing of Porch Variable Problem

The kitchen will do best running through the house from north to south or east to west, thus getting a full cross draft. The study, if any, had better take whatever exposure is left available, but should be reached direct from the stair hall without the need of traversing any other room. Whether this or the living room assumes the character of library is a matter of taste.

The garage should connect to the house through the service wing. One might as well reconcile his mind to utter inadequacy of accommodations however large it is made. No one can build enough garage to store all the cars which will wish to enter it.

The placing of the main porch is a more variable problem. Nor privacy one would wish it well removed from the entrance driveway, and here, unlike any of the actual rooms, the view is perhaps more important than the aspect. Mainly it should not face north, and, unless it is intended as breakfast porch also, it will not be quite happy on the east.

Elizabethan Home A Bungalow Type

This Elizabethan period home is also called a bungalow type, but the lowest point of the sloping ceilings on the second floor is five feet.

The bedroom, with bathroom convenient for daytime use, on the first floor will appeal to many home builders.

depending chiefly upon the proportionate wage scales.

SELECTION OF SITE IMPORTANT IN BUILDING

Of not less importance than building the house is selection of the building site. By careless, immature consideration of location an unfortunately large proportion of house-building projects are spoiled before ever the house is built.

EXTENDING POWER LINES BACK ON SIDE STREETS

Work has been practically completed on the connecting up of the underground power cables of the Manchester Electric Co. and the outside force is now engaged in cutting over the lines. Cables have been run in conduits back about 200 yards on the side streets off main streets and then from manholes in the streets pipes come back up out of the ground to the overhead system again. This means that overhead power wires will be illuminated from the proximity of business buildings on the side streets adjacent to Main street. As the side streets grow the current will be extended and carried back still farther.

BUILDING AN ADDITION TO TRUCK BODY PLANT

Rapid progress is being made by the construction forces of the Manchester Construction Co., on the addition to the Auto Truck Body Dept. of the same company located at 166 West Middle Turnpike.

Foundations were poured only a few days ago, the steel frame is now up and will soon be enclosed and the building ready for use. The concrete floor will be poured as soon as possible.

This addition will house the paint shop of the company. Work is coming in in volume now as the men comprising this department under the management of Andrew Clemenson, Sr., are all well known. Several members of the organization are moving to Manchester and will live at Midvale.

Sam Feldman, Atlanta grocer, has been robbed seven times by the same man. "I hope he breaks the habit," prays Feldman.

Curb's New Home Modernistic

The facade of the new building designed to house the New York Curb exchange. Until 1921 curb trading actually was conducted on the curb, as the picture at lower right shows.

By WILLIAM R. KUHN'S New York—(AP)—It is a 14-story vote of confidence that the New York Curb Exchange has given 1930.

The exchange's new building, of modernistic carved stone and elaborate metal work, will replace the present structure on the same site, overlooking Trinity church.

This is shown the growth of the organization which visitors to New York nine years ago remembered as an excited, gesticulating, shouting crowd in the open air on Broad street.

From 1792, the year of the first written agreement between stock brokers in New York, until 1921, when the Broad street curb traders put a roof over their heads, there was always an outside market for securities in New York.

These traders were the overflow of brokers who were not members of an inside exchange. Since 1921 there has been no outside curb market, many of the functions of this ancient institution having been taken over by an organized "over-the-counter" market.

CORBIN

Locks that guard Knobs that beautify Hardware that lasts All good ALL CORBIN

If you've ever built a home you know how much your comfort for years to come will depend on the hardware you choose today. First—the front door. Surely you want a good impression there! And absolute security, as well. Corbin will see to that!

Then the many inside doors—all with locks that must function perfectly—all with knobs that can be seen. These, too, must be in good taste. And will be if they're Corbin.

Even windows require Good Hardware or they'll stick and shriek. Cupboard doors need good latches—or they'll never stay closed. And so on through the entire house—wherever there is a window or a door there should be Good Hardware—Corbin.

Which is why we so frequently say: "Remember one word—'Corbin'—and you will be able to forget hardware in your new home the day you move in.

This is a simple and effective method meeting the problems of excess demand.

But the light and power company, faced with a similar problem of unusual demand, has no such solution. It must be ready night and day, every day, to meet any and all demands.

It cannot shut down temporarily in order to catch up with its business; on the contrary, it must always anticipate and be just a little bit ahead of it.

SETTLED MARKET BOON TO BUILDING

Stabilization Releases Funds to Banks—Outlook Is Yet Quite Uncertain.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—The outlook for construction activity in 1930 is less definite than at the start of any recent year, according to E. J. Harding, Assistant General Manager of the Associated General Contractors of America. Estimates for next year range from $7,500,000,000 to between nine and ten billion dollars. All the factors that will affect the construction program during the ensuing year are to be reviewed in detail at the annual convention of the Associated General Contractors which opens at the Jung Hotel in New Orleans January 20, 1930.

According to Mr. Harding the stabilization of the stock market at moderate levels is generally looked upon as beneficial to the promotion of construction because of the release of finances to local banks, industries, building and loan associations, etc. This release of funds, coupled with the intention of governmental and business leaders to stimulate construction work, makes computation on the basis of current statistics exceedingly hazardous.

Big Projects
Those forecasts that depend on current statistical data indicate a construction total between $7,500,000,000 and $8,000,000,000 as compared with forecasts of $5,500,000,000 in 1928 and 1929. Where the objectives of the government departments and business leaders influence forecasts these show an increase and range from $8,500,000,000 to $9,500,000,000 and more. As justification for these larger figures the forecasters which use them point out that the Boulder Dam project of the federal government alone will probably usher in nearly $1,000,000,000 in construction when all the supplementary operations involved are considered. Again the volume of highway and public works construction, as pledged by most of the states and other public bodies, is taken to indicate an increase in the total amount of such commitments during 1930. None of this prospective work, however, has arrived at the stage where it can be shown in statistics either as bonds issued, bids called for, or contracts awarded.

Normal Demand
Private construction operations which will largely be governed by the availability of funds for mortgage and other purposes are likewise difficult to forecast. Mr. Harding states. Surveys by real estate boards show there is no apparent overbuilding of a national character and that a better than normal demand for new space exists. If money is made available locally through the release of funds from securities markets there should soon be statistical evidence of the trend in private construction, although such evidence is not yet manifest.

Despite the present lack of statistical indicators the Associated General Contractors look for some increase in activity in 1930 over the volume of 1929. It is conceded, however, that this might not become evident during the early months of the year. It is thought that the data brought out at the New Orleans convention of the association may provide a more definite indication of the future than now exists.

COLORED SIDE SHINGLES CALLED POOR TASTE

Good taste limits us to two choices for the color of exterior walls of most houses, Charles S. Schneider, of Cleveland, fellow of the American Institute of Architects, points out. "The house with siding walls invariably should be white or near white," says Mr. Schneider. "The house with shingle walls, depending upon its design, may be either white or some weathered tone approaching as nearly as possible the color of wood long exposed to the weather."

MODERN HOMES TAKE PRECAUTION AGAINST FIRE

Efficiency in Building Plans Not Complete if Security Factor Is Disregarded.

The home is a factory for the production of shelter, safety and happiness for the family. There is reason why a home should be a more efficient factor in the machine age than a plant built for the production of an industrial investment.

Modernism in home architecture does not imply bizarre or freakish architecture, for modernism is essentially a matter of utility, comfort, convenience and economy. There is no reason why a small English cottage type of house cannot be truly modern; similarly, American Colonial architecture may be utilized in a home that is as modern as next year's motor car.

Modernism in a home means, first, that from a purely structural standpoint the house is built to stand hard weather and to afford its occupants the utmost comfort security, no matter what may be happening outdoors.

Second, modernism means freedom from the hazards of fire, whether those hazards are fire brands from a neighbor's house or of interior origin. Fire is an expensive and out-of-date menace.

Third, the modern house is light, airy and easy to clean and keep clean.

Fourth, modernism in a home means a minimum of waste space; for waste space costs as much as used space and doesn't pay dividends.

Fifth, the modern house is an investment. Shoddy construction, with its inevitable following of early depreciation and high cost of maintenance, has no place in the modern scheme of things.

Finally, the modern home is beautiful, inside and out. It is a beauty more of design than ornament, of carefully designed proportions rather than elaborate scroll-work tacked on at random.

Strength, fire safety, cleanliness, utility, permanence and beauty—these are the factors which make a home modern. With modern materials, handled by skilled workers, a modest house can be made as modern as the most self-conscious effort of a millionaire.

Few materials are better suited to the needs of modernism than cement. For cement enters into the making of hollow, fire-safe masonry, basements that are livable, roof tiles that are impervious to fire, floors that prevent structural distortion and offer unlimited decorative possibilities, stucco that can spell individuality and beauty, cast stone for permanent sills, lintels and trim, and garages that add to rather than detract from the beauty of the home.

And the more modern the home the more opportunity there is for the development of happy and healthful families.

THE HOME OF 1930

MUSHROOM SAUCE CREAMY DRESSING

Vegetables can grow quite regal when served with mushroom sauce. Baked cauliflower, cooked with rich mushroom cream sauce, is an example.

You can make a delicious and very creamy Roquefort dressing if you cream the grated cheese with some butter and then add to this substance the French dressing.

We must keep up-to-date in every thing, but keeping up-to-date in our homes does not mean that we must discard all our old tried and proven styles any more than we would think of discarding our old friends for new ones; it simply means that we must not allow grass to grow in our pathway, that we can no longer take things as a matter-of-fact. We must thoroughly understand why we do, or do not do certain things and stand ready to give a reason.

Homes of today must first of all be conveniently arranged and thoroughly livable. The exterior should possess character and individuality, reflecting the owners good taste. We should not build or buy a house just because it has a "tricky" exterior. Are the lines and details architecturally correct? Is the house built of lasting materials? These are questions to which the owner can rightfully expect an answer in the affirmative.

One might expect to find such a cottage among the rolling hills of the Cotswold section of England.

The house contains 23,700 cubic feet. The cost of construction would be approximately $11,300.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-203.

Total Volume Shows Decline Of About One Per Cent, Figures Show.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—Construction activity in 1929 showed a slight decline from that of 1928 according to a statistical study just completed by the Associated General Contractors of America. The total volume of construction performed during the year as indicated by shipments of basic construction material was one per cent less than the total volume on record for 1928. This decline though slight marks the first year since the war that construction activity did not show a progressive increase.

The volume of construction performed during December, as determined through the study by the contractor's association, declined fifty-six points to index number 169. This was twelve points lower than the index figure for the same month last year and indicates that job activities are feeling the effects of the decline in contract awards which set in early in 1929.

The activities of the National Business Survey Conference, organized at the instance of President Hoover to stimulate construction and other business activity have not yet had any effect on the statistical picture of the industry according to the contractor's data.

Long term state and municipal bond issues which were marketed in increasing volume during October declined in volume in November to $63,000,000, the lowest amount issued in any month since 1923. The average monthly figure for the first eleven months of 1929 was $108,000,000 as compared with $118,000,000 per month in the same period in 1928 and $123,000,000 during the corresponding period in 1927.

Contract awards have likewise shown no statistical evidence of recovery to normal volume although it is reported that plans in progress, which should eventuate in future contracts, are above normal, especially in the public works construction field. The total volume of contracts awarded in the 37 eastern states reported on by the F. W. Dodge Corporation amounted to $5,613,606,600 during the first 50 weeks of 1929. During the same period in 1928 the awards were $6,395,524,900. The decline in contract awards was largely in residential type construction during 1929. The outlook for 1930 is thought to be improved.

More than 500 cities and towns in Texas teach fire prevention in their schools.

JUDITH CAMERON, typist in a New York publishing office, attracted the interest of Knight, executive of the firm. Knight is a reserved widower, lonely since his daughter, TONY, 18, and son, JUNIOR, 16, spend most of their time away from home. Judith fascinates Knight. He takes her to dinners and concerts. Meanwhile the girl continues to keep mysterious appointments with a young man known only as "DAN."

KATHRYN TUPPER, office executive, has acquired dislike for the girl because of Knight's favor. Miss Tupper gives Judith the most distasteful tasks. At the end of a whirlwind courtship Knight asks Judith to marry him and she accepts. The next evening she is nervous and distracted and tells him she has something to confess. They plan a six weeks' honeymoon in Bermuda. Knight supplies the money for an elaborate trousseau. They are married on a Saturday morning. When they board the liner to sail Judith is proud and thrilled. Suddenly in the crowd on the dock she sees Dan. Tears come into her eyes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI

Sailing down New York harbor was a thrilling sight. Judith stood close to her husband, leaning against the rail. Sharp breezes buffeted her skirts and whipped crimson into her cheeks. Knight frowned at the sun shone in his eyes as he pointed out familiar beacons of the skyline.

The yellow light lit the water and sparkled back again. It caught up diamonds in the spray and flung long shadows on the ivory whiteness of the decks.

Lower Manhattan. Those amazing, pompous turrets. Telephone building, pyre-like Bankers Trust structure. Woolworth, Equitable Trust, a dozen others. They glared down at the murky river with its pretentious ocean liner, snorting, wheeling little tugboats, ferries and freight barges!

Past Brooklyn. Past the untiring Goddess who symbolizes freedom. On past Statue of Liberty and then at last onto the gray Atlantic.

Judith, long, long after, could shut her eyes and still see clearly the panorama of the harbor unfolding just as it had that morning. The morning of her marriage to Arthur Knight.

He told her so much as they stood against the rail, anticipating questions before she asked them, delivering an elementary lecture on seamanship. The pair were alone the last to leave the deck and go inside.

Judith was wearing her broad-brimmed hat and the Agnes turban. She looked Parisian with the added dash of independent American girlhood. From the top of the turban to her narrow black suede toes she was groomed smartly. Valley lilies peeped upon her shoulder tied with white ribbons. They were her wedding bouquet.

Arthur led the way to their cabin. A bright-faced young steward obligingly assisted.

A ship cabin a veritable bower of baskets and boxes of roses inlaid.

"Why—Arthur!"

He wheeled. Diplomatically the steward had ducked into the corridor. Arthur Knight and his bride were alone at last.

Judith found herself in her husband's arms. Arthur's shoulder so comforting, Arthur's kisses ardent and comforting, too, Arthur roughing her hair with clumsy, caressing fingers, whispering his adoration.

A prayer at that instant arose from the inmost center of Judith Knight's heart.

"Dear God," the prayer said, "teach me to love my husband."

She wanted to love Arthur Knight. With all her soul the girl wanted to love him.

She raised her blue eyes then to the fervent brown ones.

"Dearest!" said Judith.

She was quite unaware that this was the first time she had ever addressed Arthur Knight with a term of affection.

Mrs. West was vivacious, generally popular, and she urged her friendship upon Judith.

who affected the brightest of sport clothes. There was a solitary elderly gentleman whom no one seemed to know much about. There was a Germanic young man who said he was enjoying his first vacation in seven years. There was the very attractive Mrs. Franklin Monroe West and her less obtrusive husband.

Mrs. West was a flamboyant brunette, probably 35, though looking nearly 10 years less. Her gowns were as perfect as Judith Knight's and she wore far more jewelry. Mrs. West was vivacious, generally popular, and she urged her friendship upon Judith.

The middle-aged sisters were snobbish. The young brides took their youthful husbands, somehow looked as if they were the right people. Judith (or so she thought). She turned to Mrs. West gratefully.

"My dear," the older woman said to her the second evening, "since it's your first trip you really must let me take you about it. It's so fearful important meeting the right people. Do you know, actually I have a friend who came down alone last season who had the most awful experience! She didn't know anyone on the ship and picked up an acquaintance with a young girl who how she felt after they had reached Hamilton and she learned the girl was a hotel employe! Others who had known it all the while cut her utterly. Mildred stayed in the boat back. Nowadays you simply can't avoid them. These shop girls and stenographers are everywhere!"

Judith started to speak, then caught her lip.

"I promised to meet my husband," she said. "Heaven! I'm so late he'll be turning in a report. Sorry to dash off, Mrs. West."

Without waiting for a reply Mrs. West continued:

"She pointed you and your wife out and she said, 'I DO think that Mr. Knight and his daughter are so distinguished looking.' Isn't it delicious?"

There were many things to talk about.

The house on Long Island, for instance, was to be opened again upon their return. Arthur had asked Judith if she wanted to work for him. As yet Knight had not even confided to them his marriage.

He was gay and careless in explaining this:

"You see, Judith," he said, "the kids are going to be crazy about you. How do I know that? Because they're smart kids. And because I'm looking at you just this instant, girl. They'll fall for you just like their Daddy. I want them, too. Only for six weeks. I want to forget everything else in the world except just you and me and happiness. I'm not willing to share you even with the Hoodlums!"

The Hoodlums was a name Tony and Junior had acquired in their babyhood.

It seemed such a short time until Monday morning when, with bands playing and flags flying, they docked at Hamilton.

The day was warm, actually like summer. As the liner made its way slowly among the innumerable small islands, Judith hugged the ship's rail, calling out excitedly to Arthur to look quickly at this and at that. There were merry salutes from the sailboats and launches which played and circled about the ship. From hill-tops and all along the water front came waves and cheers.

The lowliness of the structures, their pastel coloring, in contrast with the gorgeous blueness of sky and sea, quite overpowered Judith Knight.

It was almost no time before she and Arthur sat behind a pair of trotting horses hitched to an old-fashioned flat-topped carriage and were driven by a soft spoken colored driver on their way to their hotel. What a drive! Overhanging tropical shade trees lined the chalky road. Everywhere giant oleanders seemed to be loaded with pink and white blossoms. Hibiscus, flowering as though with scarlet rosettes, were nearly as numerous. Rambling purple morning glories and a dozen kinds of wildflowers which Judith had never seen before added splashing color notes.

"Arthur," Judith spoke tremulously, "I've never, never, been so happy!"

His eyes were her answer.

There was some delay about reaching their room and getting the baggage. Arthur returned down stairs to consult the clerk and found himself forced to exchange pleasantries with Mrs. Franklin Monroe West.

"Oh, Mr. Knight!" the woman cried exuberantly, "I've got the most ridiculous thing to tell you. Miss Squibbs in shipboard! — well, GUESS what she said this morning!"

"She pointed you and your wife out and she said, 'I DO think that Mr. Knight and his daughter are so distinguished looking.' Isn't it delicious?"

On Jan. 11, 1757, Alexander Hamilton, the famous American statesman, was born at Charles Town, in the island of Nevis, West Indies.

At the age of 12, the future statesman was placed in a counting house. But when he showed considerable literary ability he was sent to the English colonies on the continent to continue his education.

Hamilton distinguished himself in several engagements during the Revolutionary War and acted as Washington's confidential secretary, attending to much of the correspondence from headquarters.

Hamilton took an active part in the organization of the new government and was named the first secretary of the treasury of the United States in 1789.

Today also is the anniversary of the meeting of the Continental Congress in New York on Jan. 11, 1785.

And on Jan. 11, 1808, Michigan territory separated from Indiana territory.

RADIO SAVES LIFE

Portland, Me.—Police Surgeon Ross and the medium of radio are probably responsible for the saving of the life of an injured sailor on the steamship Makiki. A knife wound on the sailor's hand became infected, and being 700 miles off Seattle, enroute to Honolulu, physician's instructions were asked. Ross radioed advice to the ship.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

EARLY ATTENTION IS OF UTMOST IMPORTANCE IN CANCER CASES

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

It is now generally recognized that the best method of controlling cancer is early diagnosis and surgical removal for the vast majority of cases.

Certain types of cancer, particularly of the skin and of the organs peculiar to women, are treated with radium and sometimes with exceedingly successful results. Recently the cancer research committee of the Marie Curie Clinic in London has summarized the medical experience with the use of radium in the latter type of cases throughout the world.

At present in many of the great cancer clinics both the radium and surgical methods are used in such types of cancer, and it is still being debated which one is preferable. This would indicate that both methods yield good results in many cases and both methods fail in other types of cases.

For the application of radium special devices are necessary which permit introduction of the radium or the radium emanation in tubes directly to the point where the cancer is situated. In the presence of complicating conditions, such as infections, severe anemia, diabetes, heart disease or tuberculosis, it is necessary to be especially cautious.

The studies show, however, one fact that is especially important; far too many cases of cancer in young as well as in older women are being neglected until it is too late for more than temporary amelioration.

Eighty per cent of the cases seen in the Marie Curie clinic in London were already inoperable when first seen.

One of the greatest experts in France, Regaud, in a recent report to the League of Nations, advised the formation of special consultation centers for cancer which might be in close touch with laboratories so that the proper examinations could be made for early diagnosis of this disease.

IT WORKS BOTH WAYS

FEMINE CONTOURS ARE IN THE MODE, SAYS JACK AUER

By JAC AUER

A slender figure, but pretty contours, is the 1930 feminine cry. "Give me a waistline please! Give me slimmest, but natural curves!" These are the demands of women when they come in now for body building and reducing exercises.

Women, apparently, are finding out that the new high-waisted clothes ask even more of their figures than last year's straight dresses.

Today it is a question of taking off extra pounds around the waistline, across the back of the neck, through the thighs and in other places that are heavy, rather than just taking off the pounds indiscriminately. This should be done in a way that builds up the body and gives women that fine zest in living which comes only with vibrant health.

Peril in "18-Day Diet"

The 18-day diet is not the way to reduce figures to measure the form for 1930 curves. This diet can do nothing to the system. This diet can do nothing to the system. This diet can do nothing to the system.

Instead, I suggest the 18-day exercises. These do not reduce you in 18 days. Rather, they are a series of 18 scientific and well-learned exercises, one to be performed each day for 18 days, at which time you can go through them all each day or just those that fit your particular needs.

While doing these reducing exercises, you do not need to diet. Just be moderate in what you eat. Most people overeat. If you want to hasten the reducing, cut out pastry, white bread, candy, greasy food, and eat meat only once a day with plenty of fresh vegetables other than potatoes. Do not drink with your meals. But drink plenty of water between meals.

Exercise in the morning. You are fresh then. Start with only five minutes of gentle exercise. Don't over-exert. Your muscles, ligaments and tendons all may be unused to exercise.

The First Exercise

The first of the 18-day exercises is a stretching and breathing exercise and should be done slowly, about 20 times, in the following manner:

Stand with your feet together, arms at the sides. Slowly raise your arms, breathing deeply as you do so. Lift your breastbone as you raise your arms and breathe. When you get your hands together over your head, stretch them as far up as possible. Then, keeping your breastbone up and shoulders back, let your arms sink to your sides, and breathe out.

This fills your lungs with fresh air, dispelling the foul. Moreover, it stretches you upwards through the chest, expanding the lung space. If you keep your breastbone up as you let your arms sink, this stretches your stomach muscles and does its bit towards reducing that stomach which is the first step in achieving a slender waistline.

SPORTS AND STARS SEEN ON BEACHES

Palm Beach—(AP)—The sport page motif has broken into pajama-land at Palm Beach, along with dozens of other bizarre effects in novelty prints for beach wear.

A pajama ensemble which attracted attention was printed in large squares, depicting various sports.

SHIRT WAIST DRESS POPULAR FOR SPORT

Palm Beach—(AP)—The shirt

waist dress is much in demand this season for Florida sports wear.

Of one piece, in novelty silk, it features a full skirt, box plaited all around. The waist line has climbed a bit and the broad belt is finished in rows of stitching. The collar, if there is one, frequently is a variation of the Byronic type and is stitched like the belt.

HOMES OF STEEL

Paris.—Steel houses, complete in every detail and including a bathroom, electric lights and central heating, are being planned for Paris. The houses can be constructed in eight minutes and can be erected on their sites in a few hours.

THE WOMAN'S DAY

Poets have always been woman's best press agents. They have gilded our virtues and excused our frailties. And they have persisted in glorifying us in spite of Freud and Dreiser—and in spite of ourselves.

According to Joseph Auslander, one poet who thinks very well of women, and writes most beautifully of them, only a poet really understands a woman because he alone views her romantically. He accepts her, instinctively and intuitively, for what she wants to be and is capable of being. The realist never really knows her because he tries to analyze her.

Women, he believes, are seldom what they seem to be—one reason they should never be accepted for their face value. He believes the modern, self-supporting woman who can take care of her self is no different than the generations of women who went before her. And she is just as romantic, though she wears a mantle of independence, instead of frailty.

Hidden Characters

"In Victorian days," he pointed out, "a woman hid her wildness and her devilry. She apparently was innocent, weak, helpless and clinging, just looking out for a sturdy oak of a man to protect her virtue and shield her from a rough world.

"Now, she was nothing of the sort. But it was an exciting revelation for the Victorian man to learn for himself that she wasn't, rather than having the news shouted at him from the house tops. When a sinner was betrayed in the eyes of the saint, he felt he had made an individual startling discovery.

"Women today follow a reverse technique. They give the impression they are hard-boiled, shock-proof, worldly wise and disillusioned, and that they haven't an inhibition or a repression left. "They are nothing of the sort. Consequently, when the man today must pay a price for misdemeanor—that all law breaking takes an actual toll of him, he will become very thoughtful before he deliberately misbehaves.

A Few Examples

If he rides his wheel in the house against orders and destroys things, put his wheel in the attic for a while. Deprive him of the pleasure of using it long enough for it to be a real lesson. If he breaks a window, out his movie money for a while to help pay for it. Of course, accidents will happen—we must not be too hard on the children; and we should make allowance for impulse. I'm talking about those things that come under the category of rank disobedience and mischief.

If a child yells about the new method of punishment, tell him he can't stay around and make other people unhappy. Keep him in his own room for a day, or until he can be pleasant enough to be about.

I think all of these things are better than whippings. Once get a child into the habit of thinking seriously, "What price will I pay if I do this?" and you'll not need to whip him again.

A THOUGHT

Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.—Psalm 133:1.

I would that we were all of one mind, and one mind good.—Shakespeare.

FRENCH PREMIER TELLS FEMINISTS HE'S FRIEND

Paris—(AP)—Premier Tardieu has assured feminists that he is personally friendly to the cause of votes for women.

When Mrs. Elizabeth Cassou, secretary of the French War Widows' association, headed a delegation of women and war veterans for a call on the political head of the government recently, she came away satisfied that Monsieur Tardieu bears the women's cause no ill will.

"He made us no promise," she said, "but he was very cordial and expressed himself as strongly in favor of suffrage for all women."

THOSE SMART SHOES? OH, THEY'RE COTTON

Palm Beach—(AP)—The fashion parade on Florida sands is adding the cotton industry.

Matched shoes and bags made of a cotton material woven to imitate straw are considered very smart for informal wear. Shoes of this material hold their shape well and do not fray. Colored laces on toes and heels matches a diagonal strip on the bag.

CORSET REBELLION GREY FLORIDA GALS

Palm Beach—(AP)—This season will be remembered by Palm Beach as the year of the great corset war—the conflict of the stays.

With the long skirt and the raised waist line, stylists have ruled corsets indispensable but some society leaders have rebelled.

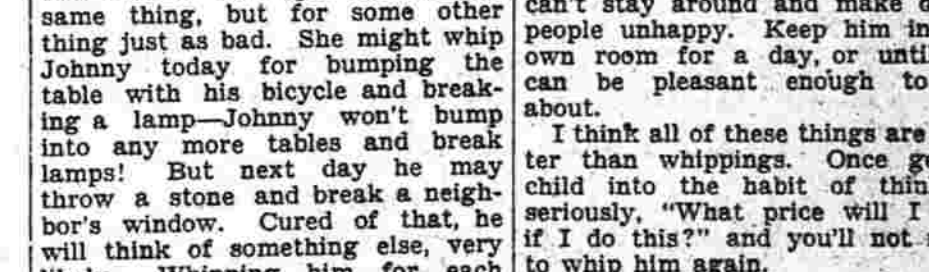

VELVET GAINS FAVOR FOR FORMAL FROCKS

Palm Beach—(AP)—Now that elegance has become fashionable again, velvet has itself in favor for formal wear.

A new velvet, that has the richness of hatter's plush yet is as light as thistle-down, is in vogue.

Yale Tournney Chances Improve As Manchester Wins

Wigren Will Oppose Barring Pole Vault

M. H. S. Track Coach Says League Action Was Decidedly Hasty and Also Unnecessary; To Make Protest.

Charles L. Wigren, coach of track at Manchester High school, said last night that he would appear at the next meeting of the Central Connecticut Interscholastic League in February in effort to have the recent action of barring the pole vault rescinded.

Coach Wigren is of the opinion that the league's action was of a decidedly hasty nature and feels that it would not have been so voted with a proper amount of forewarning. The suggestion to abolish

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
Oscar Vitt, manager of the Hollywood Shieks, is thinking of making an outfielder of Emil Yde, the southpaw recently bought from Detroit. Yde is speedy and hits hard. When the coaches met in New York recently, Paul Schissler was asked what he meant when he came from Oregon and told Coach Chick Meehan of N. Y. U. that all his men had the flu. "Nobody was more surprised than I when my men won and played so well," replied Schissler. Captain McEwan, retired Oregon coach, interrupted with "the reason they won was because they were in the hospital and got away from the coach for a while. They were all football men." Harry Stuhldreher, coach at Villanova, says the best forward pass is thrown from back of the ear, as a catcher throws to second base, with the forefinger at the rear point of the ball, the thumb on one side, three fingers on the other, and with the arm following through after the throw. You might try it some night when the party gets rough.

LAYTON'S VICTORY NETTED HIM $500 IN EVERY SHOT

Billiard Title Means Cash Prize of $1,200 and $6,000 Salary; Wins 50-32.

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Five hundred dollars a shot. That's what winning the national three cushion billiard title meant to Johnny Layton of St. Louis when he defeated Otto Reisel of Philadelphia in the final game last night. The championship carried with it a salary of $6,000 a year, a cash prize of $1,200, 16 per cent of the net gate receipts which were estimated at $600 and added remunerations from exhibitors. Layton expects to total another $18,000.

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Johnny Layton of St. Louis whose trade is billiards but who would much rather hunt the wilds of the Northland once again is pinned on top of the three cushion billiard world. For the eighth time in twenty years Layton occupies throne of the champion cushion players. Rising to brilliant heights the champion won his title last night by downing Otto Reisel of Philadelphia 50 to 32 in 43 innings of sensational shot making. It was the third consecutive year that Layton emerged triumphant in a championship tournament.

THREE DIFFERENT VOTES ON TUT-FLOWERS GO

Referee Favors Tut, One Judge Negro and Other Sees Fight Draw.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Because the judges and referee failed to agree, Bruce Flowers, sharp-shooting negro lightweight of New Rochelle, N. Y., today is credited with holding the rough King Tut of Minneapolis to a draw. They fought ten sizzling rounds in the Chicago Stadium last night with Dave Barry, the referee, casting his ballot for Tut, while one judge voted for the negro, and the other for a draw.

Schiebel Discovered as New Star; Shares Honors With Vince and Viot.

A new star was unearthed as Manchester Trade defeated Willimantic Trade 34 to 16 at the School Street Rec Center yesterday afternoon. His name is Schiebel. Entering the game in the final quarter, Schiebel dropped in three buckets to share the scoring honors with Vince and Captain Viot. The visitors, although they got away to a good start, were no match for the local mechanics who outplayed them in every department of the game to score another well-earned victory. Manchester High's chances of being selected as one of the eight Connecticut basketball teams to fight for the state title in the annual Yale tournament were greatly improved last night when the red and white outdid expectations in handling a strong Meriden quintet in Meriden's own floor in the bargain. The score was 17 to 12 thus giving evidence as to the strong defensive efforts of both schoolboy machines. Meriden was unable to break through the Clarke outposts to any successful extent. Fortunately resorted to a steady output of long shots. To make matters worse, Meriden's gunners were suffering from pink eye. A total of two field goals in each half was the limit for the Meridenites.

Meriden Scores First

Things looked rather bad for Manchester right at the start when Meriden took a three point lead but Captain Ernie Dowd's tribe soon struck a determined stride which led to a 5-3 lead at quarter. This was increased to 12-5 at half and 13-5 in the third chapter. So tight was the defense of both teams that only one point was made in the third period as the score shows.

Manchester put up a splendid battle from start to finish and the secret was largely due to the fact that the local players seemed to realize their chance of being selected for the Yale tournament depended to a great extent on the outcome of the game. To date Manchester has won five and lost one, that being the undefeated Bristol victory. Disregarding the Alton victory, Manchester won four out of five and generally it is the first eight games which are considered by Yale authorities.

"Turk" Big Star

But while Turkington's two field goals came at opportune moments, it was his brilliant defensive play that was continually a thorn in the side of Meriden's attack. Time and time again, the lanky youth would stick his arms above everyone else, retrieve the ball and start a Manchester attack. It is seriously doubted that Manchester would have won last night but for Turkington. And judging from the way the local center was roughed up, nobody was more aware of this point than Meriden itself.

Entering the final ten minutes with an 8-point lead, Manchester seemed in a more or less safe position but a couple of baskets, field and foul, by Rene, put Meriden in the running and drove the fans into a frenzy of excitement. Play, which had been plenty rough, became even more so and for a while it appeared that Manchester might lose the issue through carelessness.

Denver Exhibition Draws Pick of Barns and Pens

Miss Catherine McCarthy and Actor Domino of the Ken-Caryl ranch at Littleton, Colo., one of the entries in the National Western Stock and Horse show at Denver January 18-25.

Denver-(AP)-The pick of some of the best known stables and pastures in the United States will be displayed January 18-25 at the National Western Stock show and Horse show here.

Horse show entries are the largest for the last 18 years. Among exhibitors are Mrs. Louis Long Combs of Kansas City and Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Chicago, both presenting their celebrated strings of blue ribbon harness and gaited horses.

B. E. Tucker of Fort Worth, Tex., will bring the George Brandeis string from Omaha. There will be a heavy increase of entries in the draft horse class.

The exhibit of purebred Hereford cattle, always the feature of the stock show, is expected to be fully 25 per cent larger than in 1929. Shorthorn, Aberdeen-Angus, Guernsey and Holstein-Friesian breeds will be presented by choice selections from the prime herds of more than 400 entries of the various breeds of hogs will be here, with Colorado Agricultural college exhibiting the world's largest sow, Golden Wreath, a Duroc Jersey grand champion weighing 1,137 pounds.

The sheep show will constitute the most complete exhibit in the history of the National Western. Because of the limited supply of feeder sock and strong demand, high prices are forecast in the auction ring. Sales of prize and feeder stock are expected to reach $10,000,000.

The pigeon show this year will be the largest ever held west of the Missouri river, a special section being devoted to the exhibits. Seventeen silver cups and $400 in cash are to be awarded in the turkey show.

LAREDO BOYCOTTED
Mexico City, Jan. 11-(AP)-The Mexican National railways today published advertisements recommending to shippers that they consign goods to the United States by way of Ciudad Juarez, Piedras Negras, or Matamoras, explaining that the railways are in a position to handle all shipments through these ports.

No mention is made of Nuevo Laredo, which is across the Rio Grande from Laredo, Texas, from which city the Mexican government recently removed its consulate. The action followed differences with District Attorney Valls of that city as to his attitude toward Mexicans.

Bryan's Daughter Ever Just a Skip Ahead of Classes

By SUE McNAMARA
Washington-(AP)-Ruth Bryan Owen, member of congress and noted for her trim, attractive appearance, used to be a silk umbrella cover round her waist when she couldn't find her belt!

Former teachers and classmates from the University of Nebraska smilingly recall the ingenious makeshift costumes in which Ruth used to skid into the class room at the last minute. Her life in those days was one frantic dash for street cars.

These old friends meet her now at formal dinners and receptions. They note her beautiful costumes of black and silver, her wavy gray hair. A twinkle comes into their eyes.

"Remember the time—" they begin. The woman member of congress joins in their laughter over the reminiscences.

Roberta H. Christensen of Lincoln, now Nebraska correspondent for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, says that Ruth went through the university on a hop, skip and jump.

"Her home was cross-town from the university," she says. "Ruth usually finished her hit and miss toilet and her hastily matched breakfast on the little suburban bench by the car line. Those were the days when hats were hatted off with the old, on with the new, was one of Ruth's pet last minute diversions.

The story of the silk umbrella cover which she tied round her waist one morning when she couldn't find her belt is now a Delta Gamma classic at the university.

DANGEROUS CONTENDER
Cleveland, Jan. 11-(AP)-Miss Mary K. Browne, reinstated by the United States Golf Association, is expected to once more become a formidable competitor for the National Golf championship this year.

Although suspended nearly three years ago, she is understood to have practiced consistently on the Kirkland course and to have retained the game which enabled her to go to the finals in the 1924 women's national tournament. Miss Browne, accompanied by Miss Jeannette Kinney, sailed last night from New York on a seven week's tour of Europe.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

At first the monkey squeaked and squeaked. Then further on the monkey sneezed. Course Clowzy now was right nearby. "I'll get you soon," he cried. "I know that you will shortly see that you can't get away from me. No matter what you tried to do, there's naught can save you hide. "We let you ride our bike around and when you stopped we shortly found that you had taken it apart. One of your smart tricks. And now you're trying to get away. You'll find that mean pranks never pay. The way you run, I guess you know that you are in a fix. The monk began to chatter wild and Clowzy just looked on and smiled. "Don't try explaining," he exclaimed. "I cannot understand. Your monkey lingo's dumb to me. You're doomed, as far as I can see. In just a minute I will have your long tail in my hand." All of a sudden Clowzy tried, by reaching 'way out, far and wide, to grab the little monkey, but the monkey was too quick. He swung his little body 'round, leaped from the tree and reach the ground. It quite surprised poor Clowzy, 'cause it was a clever trick. "Hey! Catch him! Catch him!" Clowzy cried. "Be quick, or he will run and hide. Don't let that fellow get away. He'll only laugh at us." The Tynymites all chased the monk until it slipped and fell, kerplunk. And then they pounced upon him and created quite a fuss. At last the monkey held real still and Clowzy said, "Now comes our thrill. I'll be the one to spank you and you will not think it fua." The monkey squirmed around, but he was soon across brave Clowzy's knee. And then he got a spanking for the things that he's had done.

Emily Andrews of '36 won the lucky number dance box of candy. Ice cream and fancy cake was served for refreshments after which there was a favor dance. Castanets and other noise-making devices and pretty colored hats were distributed. Bedlam broke loose when the drummer on Bill Waddell's orchestra rapped for attention and Ludwig Hansen announced that Manchester High had beaten Meriden High 17 to 12 in their basketball game in Meriden. The cheering lasted for fully five minutes, probably due to the fact that the victory assured Manchester of a good chance of being selected for participation in the annual state championship tournament at Yale.

Mr. Wirtalla, who was recently elected president of the Connecticut Dancing Masters' Association and who will be installed in that office a week from Sunday at the Hotel Bond in Hartford where the annual meeting will take place, was presented with a tooled leather brush set. Mrs. Wirtalla was given a basket of roses and carnations. Mrs. James Shearer received a box of candy. She was the pianist at all of the dancing class instructions. The presents were from the members of the class.

EXPECT NO ACTION IN THE CRIPPS CASE

Principals Not to Be Found; Owners Will Probably Get Foodstuffs.

No further action, legal or otherwise, is anticipated in the case of Mrs. Evelyn Cripps, matron at the Psi Upsilon fraternity house at Wesleyan University in Middletown, who is alleged to have stolen nearly $1,500 worth of canned goods and other food products and stored them at a rented Manchester apartment located at 68 Birch street. Mrs. Cripps worked in conjunction with Joseph Lee of this town in the wholesale transfer of the food and both have fled to California according to the latest available information.

The Economy Food Products Company, Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., had brought an attachment against the "frat" house but a court ruling obliged the college men of blame in view of the fact that they had a contract with Mrs. Cripps to supply the food. Now that the cache had been discovered intact at the home of Joseph Pretti, no further trouble is expected. The goods have been attached and removed by Constable James Duffy to the warehouse of James Foley on North Main street and will eventually be turned back to the original owner as soon as ownership is established.

The variety of foodstuffs which were in the haul is shown in the following inventory: Three baskets of dishes; 1 box of glassware; 111 cartons glassware; 1 basket of glasses; 1 box of silverware and kitchen utensils; 4 table cloths; 5 towels; 1 trunk, containing linenware; 1 bundle of wearing apparel; 1 case of candy; 1 case of soap; 1 box of apple in cans; 1 box of grapefruit marmalade; 1 case of canned salmon; 4 cases of preserved apples in glass containers; 1 case of sliced pineapple; 3 cases of string beans, in cans; 1 case of sliced cucumbers; 2 cases of canned tomatoes; 1 keg of Coco Cola; a mixed case of canned cranberry, lime, orange and strawberry juice; 2 cases imported sardines; 1 case of tartar sauce and sardines; chocolate pudding, four cases and one package to the case; 1 case of canned lobster and macaroni; 1 case of sliced pineapple; 1 case of sliced apricots; 2 cases peaches; 2 cases of whole apricots; 1 keg of sauerkraut; 1 case of grape jelly; 1 crate of quince jelly; 2 cases of small peas; 1 case of crushed pineapple; 1 case of butter; 2 cases of tomatoes; 1 case of cranberry sauce; 1 case of asparagus tips; 1 case of wine jelly; 1 case of spiced watermelon; 1 carton of custard cups; 1 case of orange juice in bottles; 1 case of canned peas; 1 case of pea soup in cans. 10 bottles of grape juice; 2 cases of beef soup; 2 cartons of glasses; 1 case of crabapple jelly; 1 case of

HILLYER "Y" COLLEGE OFFERS JOURNALISM

The first meeting of the Journalism class of the Hillyer Junior College of Business of the Hartford Y. M. C. A., open to both men and women, will be held at the Y. M. C. A. tonight, Monday, January 13, at 7:30 o'clock. Sereno B. Gamell, assistant city editor of the Hartford Times, is the instructor.

The course is designed to supply the student with a dependable introduction to newspaper methods. Three objectives: first, to record newspaper methods accurately and to visualize them for the student; second, to make the methods teachable by setting them down in the simplest possible form, beginning with elementary things and working up to highly technical matters; and third, to give the student some idea of the materials, both tangible and intangible, that enter into newspaper production and to supply the requisite newspaper background, will be assisted by Albert L. Prince, city editor of the Hartford Times, who taught the course last year.

Briefly, the subject matter covered is: newspapers and news, reading copy, headlines, makeup and pictures, Sunday newspapers and routine. The course will continue for 20 weeks and the tuition is $30. The first lesson is in the form of a free demonstration and any one interested is invited to attend.

THE LAW UPHELD THE IN-LAWS

THE wife had every reason to expect her husband to provide for her liberally in his will. He was well off.

But he left no will! Then his wife discovered that she wasn't so well off as she thought. Several of her in-laws shared by law in the proceeds of her husband's estate. Did they take their legal share? Human nature's built that way!

If you have certain persons you wish to receive your money, say so in your will. And, to be certain that your wishes will be carried out, name us your executor and trustee under your will.
