

The Husband Hunter

© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY
NATALIE CONVERSE, tries to conquer her jealousy when other women admire her handsome husband, ALAN. When he receives a call to the home of BERNADINE LAMONT, a popular night club hostess, she demands that he refuse to go and that he give up the business of "that Lamont Woman." Alan explains that Bernadine is the widow of a war buddy who had saved his life, but Natalie is scornful. After a quarrel in which he taunts her for refusing to bear him children, Alan leaves and Natalie spends a miserable evening—never dreaming that he is listening to a doctor tell him that Bernadine's recovery is doubtful.

The actress surprises Alan by requesting him to take Bobby in the event of her death. He promises and tries to tell Natalie but her rebuffs silence him. Later he confides in his secretary, PHILLIPA WEST, who has always been soothingly sympathetic. This gives the girl the opportunity she has been hoping for, and during the next few weeks she works out a plan.

When Natalie comes to the office, Phillippa engages her in conversation and talks gushingly about helping pick out toys for "darling Bobby" and shows her a letter from Bernadine in which Alan's visits to Bobby are mentioned. In a rage, Natalie leaves without speaking to Alan, except to show her temper.

Natalie told herself that he wanted to know how much she'd found out before committing himself to any line of defense.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VII
 Alan had a faint hope that Natalie would apologize for her behavior. He wanted her to come to him and tell him she was sorry, ask him to forgive her.

Only a thought clearing away of the misunderstanding would put their marriage back on a normal basis.

He decided he'd have to give her the chance to apologize. That's why he was going home. He knew it wasn't because he wanted a hot bath. Only he wasn't going to humble himself any more. He'd done that enough—begging her to tell him what he'd done, give him a chance to explain.

No, he'd had enough of that. It was up to Natalie now.

He opened his front door in quite the same manner as usual. He'd let her know he wasn't too angry to be approached.

Natalie heard him, and her heart pounded furiously. The fear that he might not come home at all had haunted her every minute since she'd walked out of his office in a manner for which she now burned with shame.

But she did not go to him, or call out a word of greeting. Aside from her regret for having made a fool of herself in his secretary's presence, she was unchanged in her temper.

This was something he could not explain as he had so many other affairs, she assured herself, as she sat before her beautifully appointed dressing table, and stuck golden pins into her pale hair.

What satisfaction it had given her once, the moonlight quality of it, and her orchid-fine skin. How little it seemed to mean now.

Yet she was glad she was beautiful. It somehow gave her moral support when she went down ahead of Alan and waited in the softly lighted living room for him to finish dressing. She did not know that the power of beauty is too often ruthlessly misused—that eventually it makes its owner suffer by causing her to overestimate the endurance of its effect.

She knew she made a charming picture, seated before the sea salt-brightened fire, with a pile of silken pillows at her back. Alan should have melted as soon as he saw her, but he didn't.

His face wore an inscrutable expression. Natalie told herself he wanted to know how much she'd found out before committing himself to any line of defense.

Well, he should know! There was no reason why she should fence.

Alan, unknowingly, delayed her attack. "What's the matter; isn't there anything for a cocktail in the house?" he asked, glancing at the empty stand by theavenport.

"I don't know," Natalie answered tartly.

"I'll go and see," Alan said pleasantly. He was determined she should not stir his temper, thinking to show her that the way was open for a better understanding between them.

When he returned, Natalie refused the glass he offered her. He took his in silence.

"On, let's have dinner," Natalie exclaimed suddenly.

She led the way to their charming dining room, and Alan's heart sank. It was plain that whatever had caused the trouble that afternoon would have to be threshed out in battle.

Instantly, his own intentions changed. He was weary of trying to handle the situation diplomatically. Why couldn't he be allowed to eat his dinner in a pleasant atmosphere? Alreah he could feel himself succumbing to nervous indigestion, a complaint that was growing steadily more acute with him.

Natalie toyed with the canape before her. He swallowed his in two bites. Then his rebellion burst forth in a flood.

"Well, let's have it," he said challengingly, leaning back in his chair and nervously wiping his lips.

Natalie smiled a wintry, accusing smile. "Must we?" she retorted, shrugging distastefully.

Alan grimaced back at her. "You know we must," he said. "You wouldn't miss it for the world."

Natalie's eyes widened, then narrowed in reaction to her quick anger. "I'm not asking you to explain," she said hotly.

"No?" Alan laughed. "But you will give me a chance to, won't you?" He was sarcastic and Natalie knew it, but the flame within her had burned out the pride that might have kept her silent. She could not resist her desire to know why he bought toys for Bernadine Lamont's child.

"What am I accused of this time?" Alan went on, reading her thoughts aright.

Natalie stared back at him, tense and bitter.

"To save time," she said, with a sarcasm to match his own, "I'll tell you. Why are you interested in Bernadine Lamont?"

Alan's expression grew blank. He sensed an unspoken charge beneath her words, something he could not cope with.

Natalie drew in her breath sharply, as she spread out her hands in a gesture of futility.

"You do not understand me," she cried furiously. "I know that there's something more between you than a business relationship. What is it? Why don't you tell me?"

The storm of her accusation was breaking over a sob in her throat. Alan felt a little sorry for her, but he answered harshly, for with his pity was mixed a feeling of disgust for her unreasonableness.

"You're forgetting Jack Lamont," he said.

Natalie's answering laugh cracked hysterically. "Oh, am I?" she sneered. "And what are you doing? Do you think that he would want a married man mixed up with his widow?"

Alan's fist crashed down upon the table. "Natalie! Stop it! You know that Bernadine is nothing to me..."

Natalie was on her feet. "How about the boy?" she shot at him.

"Bobby?" Alan was taken off his guard.

"I suppose he is nothing to you?" Natalie mocked. "Your youngest client, perhaps?"

Alan completely lost his temper. "You bet he is something to me," he declared warmly: "my favorite child."

He saw Natalie's face go as white as chalk. It brought a laugh from him.

"Not what you're thinking," he assured her stinging. "Bobby's name is Lamont. And he's a regular kid. I wish I had a dozen like him."

Natalie gasped and started to speak, but Alan shut her off.

"I'm tired of your everlasting suspicions," he roared, and flung his napkin to the table.

Natalie made no protest, as he strode from the room in the high tide of his anger. It flashed over her that she had learned nothing of value to her. And their quarrel was going to end as usual—with Alan going off somewhere alone. But there was one satisfaction that belonged to this occasion. He could not go to Bernadine Lamont. Not unless he went to Atlantic City... Natalie caught her breath in dismay; and flew to the door.

She saw Alan leaving, his coat under his arm, and his hat in his hand. She wanted to call out to him, but the conflict of her much bruised pride and her natural inclinations choked her utterance.

And in the kitchen the cook and the waitress talked and "guessed it wouldn't be long now."

Alan caught a train to New York, and went directly to his office. He had forgotten about dinner—about everything but the rotten mess it got a man into to have a jealous wife. Forgot that he'd told Phillippa he would return to the office.

He entered the imposing office building with lagging steps.

He was surprised to see a light in the office when he opened the door. He thought the cleaning people were through by this hour.

Then he noticed that the light wasn't in the outer room, but was coming through the open door of his private office.

He hastened his steps, a vague doubt in his mind of all being right.

FLAX, PASTURE, SET TO SHELVE SURPLUS WHEAT

Washington.—(AP)—The department of agriculture's "intention to plant" report shows an expansion of the flax acreage in the spring wheat region.

Chairman Legge of the farm board believes it to be a move on the part of spring wheat farmers to cooperate with the board's crop reduction program—which the chairman describes as the fundamental principle of economic readjustments for agriculture.

He advocates even more flax, considering the huge annual importations, and a return of the land to pastures where flax is not substituted for wheat.

He favors a ten per cent reduction in the present wheat acreage.

The department report shows a reduction of slightly more than 2 per cent in spring wheat. The greatest decrease is 6 per cent, is anticipated in durum wheat.

Chairman Legge says he expected the durum to be decreased first since they are less profitable than the hard spring wheat. He believes, however, that a substantial decrease will be found in the latter when actual planting is recorded.

It is the farm board's information, he says, that farmers intend to plant less spring wheat than the present report would indicate.

Some of the figures were compiled in February before the crop-reduction campaign had the impetus it now enjoys.

Her nest of thirteen eggs was soon found and the eggs were put under another setting hen, in a safe place. The other hen stayed around the burning car and refused to be consoled.

OPENING STOCKS
New York, April 25.—(AP)—Stock prices moved irregularly lower at the opening of today's market.
Atchison dropped 1-3-4 on the first sale, Air Reduction 1-2 and Electric Auto Lite, American Telephone, Gold Dust and Standard Gas & Electric yielded a point or so. General Motors opened with a block of 10,000 shares at 49, off 1-4. Sears Roebuck advanced 1-1-2 points on the first sale and Consolidated Gas, Bethlehem Steel and International Telephone improved fractionally.
Early selling was based largely on the further increase of $93,000,000 in brokers' loan; and the disclosure that the New York Federal Reserve bank was tightening its credit policy by the sale of bills and government securities. Early declines in the active issues ran from 1 to 3 points.
Offerings were well absorbed, however, and the market turned upward before the end of the first hour as fresh buying appeared in some of the oil, public utilities, amusements and high priced specialties.
Houston was the leader of the oil group, quickly advancing 2 points to a new high level for the year, while Standard of California advanced a point. International Telephone, American Power & Light and Consolidated Gas were in the vanguard of the advance in the public utilities, the last-named reaching a new top.
Shubert Theaters, Worthington Pump and Kraft Cheese Preferred moved into new high ground for the year.

China has a method of preserving eggs which is said to keep them for 100 years.

year. Diamond Match, Eastman Kodak and J. I. Case also recorded substantial gains.
United Aircraft, U. S. Steel, General Foods and some of the other early soft spots made good recovery from the low levels.
Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables unchanged at $4.86 3-8.

POLICEMAN STABBED.
Detroit, April 25.—(AP)—Two officers of the Ford Motor Company's private police force were stabbed shortly after 4:15 a. m. today when a disturbance broke out among several thousand men lined up at the River Rouge plant in quest of jobs.
The wounded men are George H. Bowers, stabbed twice in the left side, and John Tinner, stabbed twice in the back. George Wilson is held by Dearborn police in connection with the stabbing.
The stabbing resulted from the efforts of the Ford policemen to restore order among the job hunters.

THE LORENZ CASE

The disposition of the Lorenz case, probably a record in Connecticut for the speedy conviction of a first degree murderer, provides a shining contrast to the ordinary progress of felony cases in the criminal courts of this country and even of this state—though it is true that commendable celerity has marked the trials of several homicidal felons in Connecticut recently.

The affair brings out very forcibly the fact that it is not any insurmountable obstacle in the way of congested calendars in the trial courts that often makes the trials of serious criminal cases such a dilatory business, but the tricks and devices of defense lawyers and the cumbersome machinery of appellate procedure.

Henry Lorenz appears to have had an absolutely fair trial. He seems to have had as counsel an alert and able young attorney, one who could and did see to it that his client's interests were protected in every fair way.

This was, to be sure, a "dead open and shut" case. But there have been scores of cases in this country in recent years not one whit less free from doubt, which have been postponed and strung along until they became what the police call "cold," and in which criminals just as guilty and as proper subjects for the extreme penalty as Lorenz have finally wriggled out of paying the right price for their crimes—if they paid any price at all other than lawyers' fees.

What has been done in the Lorenz case could be done in a great many other murder cases if the procedure of the courts were stripped of the rubbish of trickery and delay which has grown up about their roofs.

LIQUOR IN ONTARIO. In March Ernest C. Drury, former premier of Ontario, was presented by the leaders of the drys at the Washington hearings, as the banner witness for prohibition. He said that government control of liquor in Canada had been a "dismal failure" and that effective government control is an impossibility.

Yesterday the chief of the Liquor Control Commission of the province, Sir Henry Drayton, appeared before the House Judiciary Committee on invitation of its chairman. He directly contradicted the Drury testimony at almost every point.

more. Under government control popular opinion is against drunkenness. Drunkards are punished with marked severity. The abandonment of prohibition and the adoption of strict government control was the work of that large body of people who earnestly desire temperance and sobriety. Control was adopted as the best of the several possible methods.

DAYLIGHT SAVING. Next week those folks who like the Daylight Saving plan will be in good temper and those who oppose it will have a grouse. Because on Sunday morning the clocks will be set ahead—by those who subscribe to the D. S. system—and then factory whistles will blow a whole hour closer to sunrise than they would if there were no such device.

It has long been our belief that, if the Daylight Saving trick cannot be made countrywide—so that all the clocks might be set ahead in the spring and back in the fall and the time so fixed be legal and standard throughout the nation, with no more distinction between Daylight and calendar time—it would avoid considerable trouble if instead of changing the clocks we just changed our entire daily schedule by advancing it an hour.

WASHINGTON LETTER. BY RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington—"More hell," says Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter, "has been raised here in recent months than in any other period within my memory."

"George Norris has broken all precedent with a resolution rebuking Speaker Longworth for his 'discourtesy' to the Senate in holding the lame duck resolution on his desk and the United States government has gone into the wheat market to buy futures. The stock market went to smash and they've discontinued 'discourtesy' of the port so senators can't sneak in any more hooch. The Democratic publicity machine has been pumping out daily shots at the G. O. P. just as if these birds hadn't been killed in 1928 and the Senate has eased up restrictions on the importation of other obscene literature after Senator Smoot had gone in for reading bad books."

IMMIGRATION CUT. With less fuss than has been made over any number of less important matters the United States Senate yesterday voted to cut European immigration by nearly one half of the present limit, adopting a measure which reduces the total of the quotas from 150,000 to 80,000. Still more important was the defeat of the endeavor to repeal the national origins basis of quota making in favor of a more recent census-based allotment.

Today the Senate was due to vote on a proposal of still more far reaching effect, which would place under the quota limitations all immigration from Central and South America; for the adoption of such a law by Congress would almost inevitably pave the way for the setting up of similar restrictions against all Western Hemisphere nations sooner or later.

In refusing to repeal the national origins basis for quota allotments the Senate has disregarded the attitude of President Hoover with relation to that law. But the President's mild opposition to the national origins basis rested on his doubt as to the possibility of making such a plan work. It has been in operation since last July, however, and no serious complaint has been heard.

There could be no more favorable moment for the adoption of further restrictions on immigration than the present one. With the employment situation what it is, it is clearly evident that it will be several years, at least, before any accessions to the population of this country from the outside are either necessary or desirable. If, indeed, it had been the judgment of Congress to put a peremptory stop to all immigration for the next two or three years, there would have been far more of commendation than of criticism for such a step. However, the Senate action goes a long way toward eliminating any serious problem of the immediate future growing out of the incoming of alien job seekers to a country where there are already too few jobs to go around.

ANTI-TREATY LEADER. The big-navy forces which are already rallying for attacks on the London naval treaty in the House and the Senate will have, in the former body, a fitting leader in the person of Representative Britten of Illinois, chairman of the House Naval Committee.

This gentleman, who proposes to drag before his committee many if not all the American delegates to the London conference and demand of them the reason why they consented to the slightest alteration in America's ship building program, is the same Mr. Britten, it may be remembered, who last year made a trip to Europe, listened to pious orators in various disaffected countries and came back here to announce to the public that Great Britain was diligently preparing to make war on the United States.

Nobody, of course, paid the slightest attention to Britten's frantic shouts at that time or since. Just the same, when militaristic societies who are diligently opposed to every move in the direction of world peace find satisfaction in the announcement that the House Naval Committee is going to call the American conferees to account, it is just as well not to overlook the quality of statesman responsible for such a maneuver.

A Chicago ward politician at the head of the House Naval Committee at this particular juncture is not a particularly happy circumstance. It is a good deal like calling in the town fool to preside over a high school graduation ceremony or the dedication of a World War monument.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington—"More hell," says Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter, "has been raised here in recent months than in any other period within my memory. Everyone has been trying to start something, with an uncanny degree of success. As far as we standpatters are concerned, each day brings new things to worry about."

"We've had fires in the White House and the Capitol, and the first one drove the president out of his office. The Senate coalition spoiled tariff legislation for months and then was licked because for the first time in history some Democrats reversed their votes on rates. But the president took a firm stand on debentures and the flexibility clause, and the Senate is still on record as telling him to go chase himself. He tried to sell the World Court to the D. A. R. and they turned on him like so many tigresses to vote it down."

"George Norris has broken all precedent with a resolution rebuking Speaker Longworth for his 'discourtesy' to the Senate in holding the lame duck resolution on his desk and the United States government has gone into the wheat market to buy futures. The stock market went to smash and they've discontinued 'discourtesy' of the port so senators can't sneak in any more hooch. The Democratic publicity machine has been pumping out daily shots at the G. O. P. just as if these birds hadn't been killed in 1928 and the Senate has eased up restrictions on the importation of other obscene literature after Senator Smoot had gone in for reading bad books."

"His older fellows had a bad case of the twidgets recently when we had bomb threats and a spy scare on Capitol Hill at the same time and Gaston B. Means has turned out a book which hints that Harding was bumped off by his loving helpmeet. Hoover tried to pull Coolidge's economy gag on Congress and everybody in Congress tried to tell him where he got off. A woman from Illinois has driven one of our finest old reactionaries into private life and seems to be headed for a seat in the Senate."

"The Senate lobby committee with a Republican majority on it soured the disposition of the whole Republican party by discovering what Claudius Huston, the national chairman, had been doing, and now it has made the Democrats feel almost equally good by revealing that Jake Raskob has been writing letters appealing for funds for the wets. It got the goods on High-winded Hiram Bingham of Connecticut and made everyone feel sorry for him except himself. It went to the extreme end of revealing the fine personal loyalties existing between lobbyists and senators and the committee members and witnesses spend their time thinking up dirty names to call each other."

"Somebody takes a kick at Ichaobd Crane Wilbur, the interior secretary about power, oil, Indians, education or shredded wheat. Two birds in the Federal Power Commission had the nerve to accuse the executive of monkey business and a woman employe there plastered a superior with half a dozen eggs on the same charge. The Communists pulled a hot demonstration in front of the White House and the attorney general says all the prisons are so full that we can't afford to have any more prosecutions."

NEWS FROM INDIA UNDER CENSORSHIP

Bombay, April 25—(AP)—A state of siege was understood here today to exist in Peshawar, buffer state between India and the Asian Barbarian hinterland as the outbreak of disturbances there Wednesday in which three British soldiers were reported killed and eight wounded, and 12 natives killed.

There were reports widely credited, that the Indian government had placed a censorship on news from Punjab and the province in which Peshawar is located because of the rioting.

An official statement at Simla, summer capital, said some of the political agitators jailed at Peshawar, were taken to Charsadda to prison, and that the constabulary dispersed without casualties on either side a crowd which gathered at the prison.

It was said no troops had been employed either at Kohat nor at Charsadda. There were reports that troops had been moved into Resalpur and Nowshera, that there had been rioting in Kohat and that the guard had been increased in Kohat Pass, which leads through the mountains to Afghanistan.

Boston, April 25—(AP)—Installation starts today of an automatic sprinkler system in the Charles-town state prison by order of A. Warren Stearns, state commissioner of correction, who is acting immediately on recommendations contained in a report of Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin that there are serious fire hazards at the institution.

An investigation was ordered after the Ohio Penitentiary fire and a careful inspection of the state prison was conducted by Fire Chief Daniel Sennott.

Murder Backstairs

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

When Detective Dundee lifts the body of Doris Matthews, lady of the manor from the lake and lays it in the summerhouse, he knows that the heavy perfume flask, murder weapon, is the chief clue. He has seen Seymour Crosby, engaged to Clorinda Berkeley, give the flask to Mrs. Berkeley; has watched Gigi sum up the future of every one Friday evening, before Wickett, the butler (formerly employed by Mrs. Lambert, now Mrs. Berkeley's social secretary, and by Crosby), took it to Mrs. Berkeley's rooms.

But not until Mrs. Berkeley, Dick Berkeley, Clorinda, Eugene Arnold (Doris's fiancé), Seymour Crosby and finally Harvey Johnson, missing valet who robbed the house, have all been suspected in turn does Dundee hit upon the theory that Mrs. Berkeley and not Doris was the intended murder victim. There is proof Crosby murdered for his own in-law's early death, and abundant suspicion against him in the death of his wife, Phyllis, 14 months before, when Doris was her trusted maid. And Mrs. Berkeley is a perfume addict!

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLVII.
The Berkeley household had been notified on Sunday afternoon that the inquest into the death of Doris Matthews would be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the funeral parlour of the city morgue.

When Dundee entered the dining room at half past eight he found that he was the last to appear for breakfast and that every member of the party was decorously dressed for the coming solemn occasion.

"Hello, old egg!" Gigi greeted him joyously then broke into parodied song:
"My Bonnie lies long past the hour,
My Bonnie lies long in his bed!"
"Gigi!" her mother reproved her. "Just when we were talking of a funeral, too!" She frowned expensively at Dundee, "I've decided to have the funeral here, dear Mr. Dundee. In the 'little parlor'—not the servants' sitting-room. Doris was church of England, wasn't she, dear Mrs. Lambert? I'm sure our own Episcopalian minister would be delighted to conduct the services, both here and at the cemetery."

"Mrs. Berkeley, Mr. Crosby and I have talked it over and we'd like to take Doris to New York and bury her beside Phyllis. We feel it is what they both would want."

"Oh!" Mrs. Berkeley said uncertainly. Then, in a rather strange voice: "You—won't be coming back, I suspect?"
Mrs. Lambert smiled faintly and shook her silver-white head. "I don't believe you will need me, now that—"

"Of course it was largely because of Clorinda's selfishness that Mr. Crosby thought he needed you," Mrs. Berkeley interrupted eagerly, "and now that she is going to marry John Maxwell instead—"

"I'm glad you admit it at last, Mother," Clorinda cut in quietly.
"Oh, I'm going to stop trying to manage other people's affairs," Mrs. Berkeley declared, flushing brightly. "Your father and I had a long talk last night, children and your old Abbie is going to settle down and be a model small-town wife and mother."

Husband and wife exchanged the first frank, affectionate glance that Dundee had seen pass between them and the young detective felt a sudden surge of something remotely akin to fondness for the woman he had disliked so heartily.
He look swiftly toward Gigi. The child's eyes were downcast and her lips were trembling, but whether from grief at Mrs. Lambert's imminent departure, or from a painful joy over her mother's tactfully promised reformation, he could not tell. But when he glanced at Mrs. Lambert he felt no doubt at all as to what had brought the tears to her blue-gray, shadowed eyes. For her eyes were upon Gigi.

At a quarter to 10 Dick Berkeley knocked impatiently upon Dundee's door.
"It'll be down in five minutes, Dick," the detective promised. "Wait for me in the car. Have the others gone?"

"Everybody's gone—including the servants," Dick told him. "And you'd better make it snappy or we'll be late."

Carrying a suitcase, Dundee moved swiftly from bedroom to bedroom, collecting white canvas tennis shoes and golf shoes. In one bedroom he peered before dressing table, picked up a black-and-gold bottle of perfume, removed the stopper and sniffed. There came over his face a ludicrous expression of disappointment. Then he read the label again—Nut de Jole; he'd had a girl not so long ago who used that scent; he sniffed again, then smiled triumphantly. Very carefully he wrapped the bottle in his handkerchief and deposited it among the shoes.

"What are you doing with that suitcase?" Dick demanded. "I thought you were staying here until this murder business was cleared up."
"I am," Dundee assured him. "I'm just taking some stuff into town to have it cleaned."
They drove almost in silence, but when Dundee asked the boy to stop at City Hall, Dick commented dryly:

"I didn't know there was a laundry or a cleaners' shop here, though I suppose the politicians need one for their dirty linen."

Dundee was still smiling at Dick's grave attempt at a joke when he entered the laboratory of Dr. Abel Jennings, city chemist and toxicologist.
"Another job for you, Doctor," he announced, as he opened the suitcase. "You may find it a poser. I want to know if there are any wood alcohol impurities lurking beneath the nice white polish on any of these shoes, but—particularly this pair."
"Then I'll analyze the cloth of these shoes first," Dr. Jennings promised matter-of-factly. "What's the poser?"

"I thought maybe the white shoe polish had quered our chances," Dundee admitted. "They are other little things, Doctor. Look! Can you tell me whether this perfume is a mixture of what the label claims it to be and Fleur d'Amour, the scent on that handkerchief? I gave you to analyze?"

"Each perfume is composed of its own essential oils," the doctor answered. "If there's any—what d'you call it?—Fleur d'Amour, I'll be able to tell you."

"I'll try to have both reports for you by five o'clock," the doctor answered, then explained in some detail the need for so much time.
Dunn returned to Dick's car, without his suitcase. "One more stop, please, Dick, and then for the inquest. . . . Meredith's Department Store."

It took only five minutes for the detective to purchase a bottle of Nut de Jole, identical in appearance with the one he had just left in Dr. Jennings' office and three minutes more to give it into Detective Payne's hand, with explicit instructions. Before Dundee took his place among the witnesses to the dissection of the body in the lake and of its removal to the summerhouse, then dismissed him. At one o'clock District Attorney Sherwood requested an adjournment of the inquest until Thursday and the coroner readily agreed.

"Well, Where do we go from here?" Captain Strawn grinned at his young subordinate as they lingered in the cleared funeral parlour.
"I'll bet Sherwood would give his new silk topper not to have jumped into this Jonah of a case so cockily. Did you see the papers this morning? Promised the dear voters he'd have the murderer behind bars within 24 hours."

"I'm afraid his prophecy will come true, Chief—though no one will be more surprised than District Attorney Sherwood himself!"
"Hey! What's that? Been holding out on me, have you, young fellow me lad?" Strawn blustered.
"I have got a pot on to foil Mr. Dundee," the young detective confessed. "I can't tell you about it now, for I may be all wrong. But if I'm right—and I think I am—you are now invited to attend a very private confession party at Hillcrest this afternoon at five o'clock."

"And in the meantime, what am I supposed to do?" Strawn demanded sarcastically. "I'm only the chief of the homicide squad. What are my orders?"
Dundee laughed. "I want you to telephone to Hillcrest this afternoon about four o'clock and request, very officially, the presence of every member of the family, and of Crosby, Mrs. Lambert and Wickett, in your office. I'll come along as a matter of course and to make sure there are no absentees. You can tell them anything you like, hammer away at them with as many questions as you can think up. I'll slip away at five and telephone you whether the pot's boiling or not. If it is, I'd like for you to duck out at about 20 minutes to six, leaving word with Sergeant Furner to dismiss the crowd 10 minutes after you're gone. By then you'll be on your way to Hillcrest, with a 10 minutes' start of the Berkleys. I'll be waiting for you and then—with luck—the pot should boil over very promptly!"

Probably if Dundee had not staged a confession in the Rhodes House murders in much the same secretive and dramatic fashion, Captain Strawn would not have lent his aid to the program outlined by his subordinate, without knowing what it was all about.

As it was, the chief of the homicide squad followed instructions to the letter. At five o'clock Dundee left Police Headquarters for Dr. Jennings' laboratory. At ten minutes past five he spoke four cryptic words to Captain Strawn: "The pot is boiling." In another five minutes he was in a police car, headed toward Hillcrest, his suitcase labeled again—Nut de Jole; he'd had a girl not so long ago who used that scent; he sniffed again, then smiled triumphantly. Very carefully he could leave the theater before the curtain rose on the third act—that terrible, necessary third act in which human being, as life-loving as himself, would be crushed before his eyes. But he had to go on with it. With his heart like lead he set his stage. From the center of a dressing table in a bedroom at Hillcrest he removed the black-and-gold bottle of perfume he had purchased that day and put the original bottle in its place. But that flask had a new label now. In place of the gold seal bearing the name, Nut de Jole, there was a large plain white sticker. And on the glaring white surface were the words, lettered in black ink by Dundee himself:

FLEUR D'AMOUR
On each side of the desecrated perfume bottle he placed the grayish white remains of a tennis Oxford—shoes that had been so gleamingly immaculate when he had first seen them—on Saturday morning.

Ten minutes later Captain Strawn and Detective Dundee were crouching side by side in a clothes closet, whose door was open just enough for the two men to observe the entrance of the room's owner and any drama that might take place before that sinister dressing table.
There were voices in the hall. Tired people coming up to dress for dinner. Faintly there came the sound of doors opening and closing. And at last the knob they were watching so intently turned quickly under an urgent hand.
"Com' in g!" Strawn whispered hoarsely and his fingers closed hard upon Dundee's shoulder.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

NATURE OFTEN NEEDS PHYSICIAN'S HELP WHEN CHILD IS BORN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of four articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein telling of modern medical practices in connection with childbirth.

By Dr. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Because children have been born under all sorts of conditions since the beginning of human history, with mother and child both surviving, the general attitude developed that childbirth is a natural process and that it needs little, if any, scientific attention.
However, the world has changed greatly in the thousands of years of which we have record. Conditions of modern civilization with changing diet, changing exercise, and changes in the nature of the body structure have brought into the situation hazards which did not previously exist. Moreover, modern living conditions, crowding of people together in habitations in which the bacteria of one are transferred to others encourage dissemination of infection in a way not previously possible.
Finally, there are few, if any, accurate statistics as to the deaths of mothers in childbirth in primitive times and indeed much doubt is expressed now as to the accuracy of the figures concerning modern peoples.

Even today there are numerous specialists in childbirth who encourage a policy of delay in assistance to the prospective mother and urge as little interference as possible. The idea that nature must be given every chance to carry out the process unaided dominates the situation, rather than the policy of aiding nature wherever her efforts seem to require facilitation.
Certainly the expert who has studied the construction of the patient, who has carefully measured the passages, who has some knowledge of the size of the infant, who understands the technic of aiding by turning and twisting of the body that may be necessary to shorten the process can do much to aid the progress of the case.

Of particular importance is the prevention of infection. The establishing of perfect cleanliness throughout the procedure is necessary. By perfect cleanliness is not merely freedom from visible dirt, but the kind of cleanliness of which the surgeon insists in the operating room.
In the prevention of infection two factors are of great importance: (1) the virulence of the germ; (2) the resistance of the patient.
Over the virulence of the germs which may possibly invade, the physician and the patient have but little control. They can merely do everything possible to eliminate such germs from the surroundings. Over the care of the patient and the building up of resistance there is possible considerable control.

their usefulness—as might be judged by certain standards—there would be a sudden and terrific mortality in the world."

Beautiful hair!

Modern hair dressers arrange the hair so beautifully that it's bound to attract attention. That's why it's so important to guard its color and lustre; keep it in perfect condition.
There is no surer, simpler way to do this than with Danderine. Each time you use your brush, just moisten it with this delicately fragranced liquid. Then as you draw it through your hair, it removes the excess oil; brings out the natural color; makes the hair fairly sparkle with new life and lustre.
How much easier it is to arrange the hair afterwards. How it stays in place. And try "setting" the waves with Danderine. They stay in so much longer.
Danderine quickly dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition; helps the hair to grow long, silky and abundant!

YOUR CHILDREN

We know a good bit about the stages of development in a child before he reaches six—or at least we have knowledge within easy access, as the pre-school child, the one under six years of age, is being lectured about, written about, and discussed until he has no secrets left.
But how about him after he leaves this interesting stage? Does he suddenly become a creature so perfect that he no longer needs attention? Oh has it been hammered into parents too persistently that after six years there isn't much use trying to teach him anything? Are his imperfections, or virtues, so set by this time that we may as well throw down our tools, label him "finished" and set him on the shelf forever?
Don't Halt Training
Absolutely not—anything else but.
Now it is true that the training of an older child who has made a wrong start is going to consist pretty much in breaking down undesirable habits of behavior. But it is also true that all the good things started before six must be continued. Well begun is half done, but only half! We must keep on with our little constructive lessons and be on the alert about all the "preventions" which are so amazingly important—fear prevention, inferiority prevention, jealousy, rage, selfishness, and all kindred preventions.
But even then the ground is not covered. The child between six and twelve offers a special field of activity in training just as important as that of his younger brother. Let us see what sort of person this six-to-twelve youngster is.
During this period a child widens his experience with the external world. Experiment characterizes nearly everything he does. Moreover his control over his motor nerves becomes more nearly perfect, he starts out on a program of play that takes him into new fields.
The Young Adventurer
This is when he will try, and learn, if he has the opportunity, to swim, skate, go in for athletic games, and ride a bicycle or horseback; also, as he learns dexterity with his hands, he will learn to use more intelligently, tools, musical instruments, and drawing pencils.
It is at this time that a child should be tried in as many different directions as possible. He may, for instance, have no great affinity for the latter three things, but—this is important—if he has, it should be discovered. His success in later years may depend on encouragement and the early training he receives now.
An enormous curiosity characterizes this six-to-twelve age, curiosity that should not be discouraged, but satisfied whenever possible.
There is another thing to be kept in mind too. Parents are likely to go through a little heartbreak time because their boys and girls of this age become more engrossed in

FRANCE KEEPS UP ITS ANCIENT TAX Cars Are Stopped at City Gates to Pay Duty on Goods Brought In.

Paris.—(AP).—When the city of Paris finally abolished the hitting of automobiles at every gate to see if more gasoline were brought back than was taken out, the councilmen thought their troubles were over.

But it was only the beginning of their grief, for newspapers have taken up the job of having the whole octroi system abolished.

The Romans are blamed for devising this levying of import duties on merchandise brought into cities. Nearly every country in Europe has abandoned the method except France.

What strikes even the French as strange is that since the time of Clovis I, King of France in 500 A.D., the octroi has been condemned by a long succession of rulers and ministers of finance and by about all the people but it never dies. It was abolished during the French revolution in 1793, but was restored promptly when the country grew quiet. Some towns have discarded it but Paris, where it causes the most criticism, has hung on to it as a tax producer.

The Theory
Theoretically the octroi is supposed not to put a tax on the main requirements of the common people. Wheat, for instance, is free so as to keep down the price of bread. The tax has spread, however, to many articles so that today it admittedly increases the cost of living in a hundred ways. Even building materials pay duty as they are brought into the city. When automobiles, January 1, were relieved from getting a little green slip, or export certificate for their gas, when leaving the city still retained the tax on gasoline in quantities.

At all the gates of the city, day and night, guards stand in little frame buildings often hardly more than sentry boxes, forming a customs ring around the city.

There was much smuggling before the war but there is supposed to be but little now. At one time it was popular to hide all sorts of things in loads of hay or sacks of grain. The octroi guards made a practice of ramming these with long slender pointed rods and stopped the irregular traffic.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Sore Muscles)
Question:—J. H. asks: "What is mialgia, its cause, and the best way to treat same?"
Answer: Mialgia is a name taken from two Greek words meaning "muscle" and "pain." The treatment of such pain would, of course, depend upon its cause and location but in general the best treatment would be with the application of heat and the use of general massage.

(Prunes and Raisins)
Question:—Miss H. writes: "Are prunes and raisins fattening?"
Answer: Prunes and raisins contain a large amount of fruit sugar, and when used in addition to other foods of high caloric value they may be said to be fattening. However, a small amount used each day with a well balanced diet would be allowable with one who is trying to reduce weight.

(Heart Trouble)
Question:—Mrs. A. F. S. writes: "I am 26 years old, the mother of four children. For a year I have been troubled with my breathing—some days I think I will smother to death. My heart seems to stop beating at these times. Do you think this might be the sign of leakage of the heart?"

Answer: It is more than likely that your difficulty with breathing is due to some form of heart trouble. I would advise you to have a physician examine your heart, and then if you will write me again I will be glad to send you my opinion of the cause and cure of your trouble.

A German physician has recommended ballooning as a cure for nervous troubles.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

MARCONI'S BIRTH

On April 25, 1874, Guglielmo Marconi, an Italian electrical engineer famed as the inventor of the wireless telegraph, was born of an Italian father and an Irish mother at Bologna, Italy. His attention was first drawn to electricity at the age of 13 when he read that Heinrich Hertz,

German physicist, had discovered electrical waves which were capable of passing through any substance and of following an undeviating course without need of a wire or other conductor. Foreseeing from this the possibility of sending messages without wires young Marconi began experiments in his garden until he developed an apparatus for wireless telegraphy.

He offered his discovery to the Italian government, but it was refused. He then wrote to Sir William Preece, chief of the British Postal Telegraph Service, and was invited to London. After successfully establishing his service between England and France and equipping some of the large liners with his apparatus, Marconi came to the United States in 1899. Two years later he succeeded in establishing a wireless telegraphic communication across the Atlantic Ocean.

When Italy entered the World War, Marconi was placed in charge of his government's wireless service. In 1909 he was awarded the Nobel prize for physics with Ferdinand Braun.

Manchester's Track Team Noses Out Hartford

Mozzer's Heave Staves Off Impending Defeat

Dowd Captures Both Dash Events; Goldberg Takes Broad Jump and Shot for Hartford—Final Score Is 52 to 47.

Walter Mozzer, a senior student, saved Manchester High from possible defeat in its opening track and field meet held with Hartford Public High at Trinity Field in Hartford yesterday afternoon. Trailing by two points with one event to go, the Manchester team, led by Mozzer, won the first and third places in the javelin throw to win by one point. Manchester succeeded in winning first and second to win by a few points to spare. Young Mozzer was the chap who took first and second in the javelin throw to win by one point. The final score was 52 to 47.

The defeat was the second Manchester High has administered to Hartford this spring. Only last week its baseball team drubbed the Hartfordites 9 to 2. On the heels of this victory now comes the track triumph. Manchester's next meet will be with Meriden High here on May 9. Ernie Dowd, all-around local athlete, and Dave Goldberg, were the outstanding performers in yesterday's meet, each winning two events for a total of ten points. Dowd breached the tape in both of the dashes while Goldberg took the honors in shot put and the broad jump.

Ted Murray, lanky Sophomore youth, won the mile event which had been dominated for several years by the brilliant Joe McCuskey now starting under the colors of Fordham University. Murray romped home in the creditable time of 5:11-10. Ralph Swanson and Earl Smith, were among the first four. Coach C. L. Wiggen's league champions took the field in true Easter fashion with new sparkling red trunks and white jerseys.

CUBS ONLY TEAM TO MISS WEATHER

George Fisher Continues Sensational Pace With Cards as Cubs Lose, 9-2.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

The present chills and dampness of spring appear to be storing up trouble for major league baseball teams almost as fast as they are piling up doubleheaders. Only one club so far has played all its games. The Chicago Cubs have this honor and the St. Louis Cardinals and Detroit Tigers also have escaped serious consequences with but one postponed game.

More cold weather yesterday caused the postponement of all but two major leagues and neither of these proved very profitable to the club owners. Only about 1,000 St. Louis fans turned out to see the Browns beat Detroit 12 to 4 while about 3,000 appeared at the Cubs Park in Chicago to see the St. Louis Cards down the National League champs 9 to 2.

For the rest the cold was piling up more grief. Although St. Louis gained all the glory in the two games that did survive yesterday, the teams owe it to a select few players. George Fisher, slugging young outfielder played the leading role as the Cards downed the Cubs scoring one run and driving in four with a single, two doubles and a sacrifice in four trips to the plate. Chick Hafey followed the example Fisher set in the previous inning when he tripled with the bases loaded to bring in three of the five runs St. Louis scored in that inning.

Fred Schulte and Chad Kinsley divided the honors in the Browns triumph over Detroit. Schulte did most of the heavy hitting while Kinsley stepped in as relief pitcher when Herman Holshouser began to wobble and shut out the Tigers without a hit for four innings.

Cold weather may cause postponement of big league baseball but it cannot "freeze" the spirit of the youngsters who are competing for a place on the squad which will represent the local post of the American Legion. Yesterday afternoon 41 boys reported to Coach Jenney at the West Side playground an increase of eight over Tuesday's turnout.

Those who were added to the squad yesterday are listed as follows: Catcher, F. Burke. Pitcher, F. Dunn. Infielder, S. Kennedy. Outfielders, J. Antonio, R. Corna, C. Hutchinson, M. Sabino, P. Ponticelli.

Battery practice enabled the following pitchers to work out, N. Lashinski, Neubauer, Kovic and Darwin while Metcalf, Stevenson, Civello and R. Lashinski took their turns behind the bat.

After a short fielding practice the squad was dismissed to report again next Sunday evening at the West Side playground.

Hartford Fans Picking Graham To Beat Bat

Champion's Home Town Supporters Afraid New Yorker Is Too Experienced for the Titleholder; Expect Crowd of 10,000.

Hartford, April 25.—Busby Graham of Utica, former world's heavyweight champion and now hot in pursuit of the featherweight title, will step into the ring at the big state armory to-night confident he will beat Bat Battalino and carrying with him the support of the fans right here in the champion's home town.

Graham is the favorite in such betting as there is and is picked by a great majority of those who never waver but who are real lovers and students of the sport. It is a terrific situation. Graham has never boxed here but once and then against a third-rater, but local fandom is greatly impressed by the fact that he twice floored Kid Chocolate only a year ago and that he has beaten a dozen of the better known smaller boys including Bud Taylor who less than two months ago defeated the champion out at Detroit.

Graham has been very positive in his pre-battle forecast. He says he doesn't think it will go more than four rounds claiming a wide edge on Battalino in ring experience, boxing skill and insisting that he can hit hard enough to stow away anybody he can hit on "the spot."

Battalino, tactician as usual, refused to make any prediction beyond saying that he is fit for the test and hopes to win. Both boys have trained faithfully. Utica scries say Graham is hot after the title Bat now sports and that he wants to win to-night so that he can force Battalino to give him a title shot, and say that accounts for the fortnight of hard training Busby did before he left Utica for Hartford to wind up.

It is expected that 10,000 will see the show, beginning an indoor state record gate of approximately $300,000. The undercard promises a lot of real action. Joe Smith, the Hartford middleweight, who is a terrific hitter, meets Bobby Brown, Lowell veteran, in the semi-final of eight rounds. Three sixes and two fours will open the card, making for a total of seven bouts and forty-four rounds. The first bout is set for 8 o'clock.

LEGION BOYS DEFY OLD JUPE PLUVIUS

Those who were added to the squad yesterday are listed as follows: Catcher, F. Burke. Pitcher, F. Dunn. Infielder, S. Kennedy. Outfielders, J. Antonio, R. Corna, C. Hutchinson, M. Sabino, P. Ponticelli.

Ehmke Tells About Secrets Of Pitching

By EDWARD J. NEIL

New York, April 25.—(AP)—Howard Ehmke, the lanky blonde veteran with the slow smile and slower curve, that confounded experts and the Chicago Cubs alike in the last World Series has a reassuring message for baseball minded youths.

Not only are better young ball players coming into the big leagues for all time but the calibre of the youths has improved steadily since Howard first wandered out to a big league pitching mound in Detroit 14 years ago. Furthermore opportunity and financial rewards for youngsters never were greater than today.

"They say good young pitchers aren't coming-up to the big leagues any more," he snorted as he warmed-up in a hotel lobby for the chill outside prevented any hope of a ball game. "That's false. Look at Lietner, Mahon and Mahaffey, all newcomers to the Athletics this spring. All fine young pitchers.

"All a kid coming in needs is natural ability and ambition today.

This is Paris

PARIS SHOWS.—Paris—This is the time of year when Parisians start going to places and doing things.

On the boulevards there are new shows and old gentlemen, signs that spring has actually come.

"Love a 'American' is among the new shows. It is one of those highly spiced plays which came into vogue with 'The weaker Sex' at the Michodiere theater. The 'weaker sex,' need we explain it, is masculine.

The play portrays the terrible struggle of distraught mothers with sons to marry off to eligible wives. It is the extract, boiled down, of Sigolism.

The new show which purports to show a phase of American love-making paints the female of the species as even more deadly than Darwin said she was.

There is a faithful French husband and a faithful French wife and a determined American millionaire who knows what she wants when she sees it, in "Love a 'American'."

And the Gutrys.—Sacha Guitry and his pretty wife Yvonne Printemps are more regular in their spring appearances than the tulips in the Tuileries.

This year the spring piece is "And Long Live the Theater" which Gutry writes in collaboration with Albert Willemetz.

Yvonne Printemps is the sweetheart of the French stage, a sort of Billie Burke, Evelyn Laye and Mary Pickford rolled into one.

GRAHAM DRINKS WATER TO BETTER 126 POUNDS

Battalino Tip Scales at 128 and Insists Opponent "Climb Out of Featherweight Division."

(Special to The Herald)

Hartford, Conn., April 25.—Bat Battalino will enter the State Army ring tonight with a pound and a half weight advantage over his opponent, Bushy Graham of Utica, N. Y. The world's featherweight champion weighed exactly 128 when he stepped on the scales at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Graham was just a hair under 126 and the champion's manager, Hy Malley, insisted that he better this mark or lose his $1,000 weight forfeit.

Rather than lose the money, Graham obliged by drinking a couple of glasses of water. The second time he stepped on the scales, the indicator moved up to 126 1-2.

French Aviator To Brave Atlantic's Dangers Again

New York—(AP)—Defeated once in his attempt to fly the north Atlantic from east to west, Capt. Dieudonne Coste will attempt this spring to fulfill a promise made in America in 1928.

Reversing Lindbergh's route, the daring French aviator proposes to fly from Paris to New York in a tri-motored Breguet plane, modeled after his famous ship of last year, the Question Mark.

Last July he started with Maurice Bellante in the craft, powered with a single motor, to span the ocean, but faced with headwinds, landed back in France after a flight of more than 2,100 miles over water.

Undaunted by the failure and still tempted by the Atlantic, they refitted the plane but headed toward China and landed in Tsitsihar, Manchuria, with a new world's airline distance record to their credit. They had flown 4,343.99 miles non-stop in 51 hours and 39 minutes.

Later they piloted the plane to a new world's distance record over a closed circuit, flying 4,987 miles in 52 hours and 30 minutes.

The promise to fly the Atlantic was made by Coste, then a lieutenant, when here in 1928 with Joseph Lebrin in the midst of a round-the-world tour in which they carried the tri-color of France 35,000 miles.

"We do not want to go back to Paris by plane," the aviator said, "because Lindbergh has already done that; it would be useless repetition to follow him. After we get back to France, we shall plan the east to west flight of the north Atlantic."

Nearly all of the metal vanadium, used in making "high-speed" tool steel, comes from a deposit in the Peruvian Andes, at an altitude of more than 16,000 feet above sea level, and is brought down on the backs of llamas to shipping points.

SETTLE INDEMNITY

Nanking, China, April 25.—(AP)—Information in official Chinese circles is to the effect that C. T. Wang, Nationalist foreign minister, and Sir Miles W. Lampson have reached a satisfactory agreement regarding disposal of the Boxer indemnity fund. The money will be employed for cultural and educational co-operation of the British and Chinese and also for railway construction. The draft agreement has been initialed and only waits formal approval of the British government. The amount of the refund is approximately $54,000,000. Mexican (about $27,000,000). The amount of water required by a steam plant is more than the water used for all purposes (domestic, industrial, and for fire protection) by the population it serves with electrical energy. It is used for condensing purposes.

CHINESE PROTEST REMOVING GUARDS

Fear River Pirates Will Loot Ships If Britain Takes Action.

Hongkong—(AP)—Proposals of the British government to remove military guards from merchant vessels operating in Chinese waters have been received with a storm of protest from Hongkong shipping concerns.

Too many piracies occur every year to make the step of removing British guards from the coastal boats a wise one, the shippers argue, even though native guards are substituted by the shipping guards themselves.

Ever since the British shipping became an important factor commercially in the waters of southern China, the government has supplied all vessels flying the British flag with an armed guard—usually a squad or two of soldiers. The mere fact that these soldiers have been aboard has served to keep pirates from attacking a vessel and for this reason, special detachments of "Tommyes" have been kept in Hongkong ready for guard duty aboard ship at a minute's notice.

Fear for Officers.
If the British soldiers are removed, owners fear that the safety of foreign ships' officers will be placed in unnecessary danger, even if a substitute guard is arranged.

In this respect, the owners point to the piracy of the steamer Anking last September as an example. During this incident, two foreign officers were killed together with a Chinese member of the crew, all because there was no guard aboard except a few armed natives. The captain and third officer were wounded while the pirates carried off seven passengers for ransom.

The incident stirred the foreign officers along the China coast and yet it was only four months later, at Singapore, when the owners of a vessel and its foreign officers came to grips over the subject and the latter came off second best.

Rich Plunder.
The ship was leaving Singapore for China with a heavy passenger list of plantation laborers, "rich" after several months work in the Straits Settlements and likely plunder for pirates.

The sailing time came, the officers demurred at lifting anchor and getting under way without a guard and made representation to the owners to that effect. After much wrangling a guard was provided, but the ship had been delayed after some five hours in sailing.

This plagued the owners to such an extent that they demoted all the officers and had them removed to smaller ships. The result is that each side is somewhat apprehensive of the other and unless guards of some description are maintained, there is bound to be bad blood.

The number of piracies of importance that were committed last year reaches the amazing total of 600.

Most of the victims were large Chinese junks carrying cargo from and to coastal ports. Only 11 large steamers were attacked by the seavolves but this number was sufficient to cause serious thought among the owners.

For every man, woman and child in the United States there are seven and one-half horsepower developed. In England there are four and one-half horsepower per capita, while in Russia there is only one-half.

Hoover Occupied 'White House' When Young Engineer In China

Tientsin, China. (AP.)—Thirty years ago Herbert Hoover, then a young mining engineer, lived in another "White House" in Tientsin.

The Chinese, never dreaming they were prophetic, so named it because of its appearance.

No longer white after three decades, the "White House" still stands, a foreign structure overtopping the low Chinese buildings around it. Here young Hoover helped direct the early fortunes of the mining company by which he was employed.

Changes have come to the compound in a generation. Chinese basketball teams now play there, cheered on by yelling supporters in the American fashion. In the Hoovers' time, however, even a coolie would have considered such western games beneath his dignity.

During the Boxer rebellion the Hoovers and other whites in the settlement were besieged in a building near the "White House." Fired by the Boxers to drive the whites from their stronghold were extinguished only after they had nearly reached the "White House."

Oldtimers in Tientsin remember that Mrs. Hoover was regarded with special interest because she was a college graduate. Higher education for women then was a new development. Driving was the Hoovers' favorite recreation. They were often to be seen in a high dog-cart pulled by a China pony.

THUGS' VICTIM DIES

Providence, April 25.—(AP.)—Harry McVay, Rhode Island state prison guard, died this morning in Rhode Island hospital from bullet wounds suffered when he was attacked by two thugs in the prison in last Saturday's attempt to liberate two convicts.

Two prisoners died in the riot which followed the attack on McVay. Peleg Champlin, a trusty, serving a life term for murder, was killed after he had seen in the prison riot call and Thomas V. (Fretty) McNeal, one of the leaders of the revolt, killed himself as police put down the riot with tear gas bombs.

In spite of an intensive search by police, the authorities have found no clues to the murderers who entered the front door of the prison in their bold attempt to free McNeal and John (Whitey) Gilbert.

TO ATTEND MEETING

New Haven, April 25.—(AP.)—Dr. E. M. Bailey of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station will attend the spring meeting of the foods standards committee of the United States Department of Agriculture on April 25 to May 3 at Washington. The committee will consider standards of food products.

CONSTIPATION IS A HEALTH THIEF

Drive It from Your System with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Constipation steals the best out of your life. Robs you of strength, vitality, health itself. And many people do not realize that perpetual fatigue, coated tongues, bad breath, are often signs that constipation is in their system.

You must move poisonous wastes out of your system and keep them moving. But there's a right way and a wrong way. Pills, drugs and ordinary cathartics give but temporary relief—and their dose must be constantly increased to be effective. The great natural cleanser is Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. A tasty cereal, which brings you iron for blood building—and, above all, corrects constipation. The abundant roughage in ALL-BRAN gently and naturally sweeps out poisonous wastes and impurities.

Physicians recommend ALL-BRAN. It's guaranteed. Two table-spoonfuls daily. Recurring cases—with every meal.

You'll like the nut-like flavor of ALL-BRAN. Eat it in many ways. Delicious with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Make muffins with it. At all grocers. Served in hotels, restaurants, dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FIRE IN HOSPITAL BRINGS OUT POLICE

Feared It Was Attempt to Liberate Convict Patient Who Is Murderer.

New York, April 25.—(AP.)—A small fire in a building on the grounds of Kings county hospital, Brooklyn, today brought four emergency squads of police armed with riot guns and tear gas bombs to ward off any possible rescue attempt of a man indicted for murder who is a patient in the hospital.

No rescue attempt was made. In the detention ward of the hospital, overlooking the orreries dormitory which caught fire, was George Small, gunman robber, escaped convict, killer of a woman in a fight with police.

Killed Woman He was recaptured last November in a running gun battle with Brooklyn police during the course of which a shot from Small's gun struck and killed Mrs. Irene Sumner, 30, as she wheeled her baby along a Brooklyn street.

Small himself was severely wounded and has been a patient, under guard, in Kings county hospital since. He is to be arraigned next week on a charge of first degree murder.

Escaped Convict Small escaped with George Barry from Auburn prison, at Auburn, N. Y., last July during the revolt of 1,700 convicts.

Three orderlies, asleep with 72 of their fellows in the hospital dormitory suffered burns and injuries in escaping from the burning building.

The fire was extinguished after an hour's work. Damage was estimated at $20,000. After an investigation police said there was no indication of incendiarism.

The 1,800 patients in the hospital were never in danger and there was no excitement among them.

Arabian horses are of two types, the Kadischi, whose origin is unknown, and the Kochian, of which genealogies exist dating back for 2,000 years.

ERRORGRAMS

There are at least four mistakes in the above picture. They may pertain to grammar, history, etiquette, drawing or whatnot.

See if you can find them. Then look at the scrambled word below and unscramble it, by switching the letters around. Grade yourself 20 for each of the mistakes you find, and 40 for the word if you unscramble it.

THE TINYMITES STORY by HAL COCHRAN - PICTURES by KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The kind old fisherman said, "Well, I guess you boys want me to tell you all the boats and things that you see 'round about. Some of the ships you all can board. We're willing that they be explored. But others only look at 'cause they'll soon be going out." "You see, we fish most all day long and when the wind is good and strong it takes our boats far, far from land. That's where we want to go. The farther out the more fine fish we get and that's our daily wish. That fish are real good eating 'cause you little fellows know." "You bet we do," one Tiny said. "But, honestly, we have not tried a meal of fish since we've been here. I'll bet it would taste fine." "Ah, ha!" the fisherman replied. "Just follow closely by my side and I will take you to a place where we can sit and dine." They found a lunch room right near by and how it made the Tines sigh. The smell of nice, fresh, frying fish just seemed to fill the air. Their friend had had a happy lunch, 'cause my, how they enjoyed their lunch. They didn't stop their eating till they all had had their share. They thanked the fisherman and he said, "I'm as happy as can be to know that you have had a very good time as my guests. I like to know nice boys like you. No naughty things you seem to do. The only boys I don't like are real rascals. They are pests." The Tines then went on their way and shortly Clowny cried, "Hurray! I see a little Dutch boy and he's clogging. My, he's great!" The whole bunch watched him dance a while. The way he did it made them smile. Each time they'd beg him, "Dance some more," he wouldn't hesitate. (The Tynmites reach Amsterdam in the next story.)
