PARADE HEADS MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM HERE

Town Halts Tomorrow to Honor Its War Dead; Che- ney Hall Exercises, March Leading Attractions.

Memories of the World War, lessened by twelve years of peace, will return with all the vividness of reality tomorrow—Memorial Day—the veterans of the Civil, Spanish-American, and World Wars, and other patriotic organizations, march again on Manchester streets in honor of the war dead and living. Activities in Manchester will be practically at a standstill. All stores, according to agreement of the Merchant's division of the Chamber of Commerce, will be closed throughout the day. Industries will pause, even sporting attractions are not scheduled. Manchester will honor her war dead with the greatest tribute of all, silence.

Industries Close

Cheney Brothers' plant will close tomorrow noon. The plant will also be closed on Saturday morning, with the exception of a few departments. Work will be resumed at the usual time Monday morning. Other smaller factories, it is believed, will be closed all day.

The sport program for Memorial Day is blank. Not a single game has been announced for tomorrow.

Manchester athletes, fans who must have their holiday sport dish must go elsewhere for the feast.

Sunday the West Sides open their home season with the Rockville Wheel Club and the Bon Ami plays at Williamabunt. Otherwise no games have been announced for the week-end.

Italian Service

Churches, for the most part, will hold no services. Many have already held Memorial services last Sunday and others will hold fitting observance next Sunday. As far as is known only the Sons and Daughters of Italy will unite in a service. Members will meet at the Service Fera tailor shop on the street to-morrow night to observe the 8 o'clock high mass at St. James's church, for deceased brothers and sisters of the organizations. Later they will march to the cemetery to decorate graves with prayers.

Swedish Services

The five Swedish fraternal organizations of Manchester will attend the morning service at the Swedish Lutheran church at 10:45 o'clock Sunday morning.

The sermon will be by Edwin Olson, Upsala College student, who in his few appearances in the local pulpit has already earned a reputation as one of the finest student preachers ever to appear here.

SLEUTHS CAPTURE CLEVER SWINDLER

Postoffice Inspectors Say He Specialized in Getting Women's Fortunes.

Boston, May 29.—(AP)—Nathaniel H. Wheeler, 45, alias El Randolph Atkinson, alleged swindler of women in stock operations, was arrested here today by postoffice inspectors as a federal fugitive.

An indictment charging use of the mails to defraud was returned against him in Baltimore recently.

Wheeler was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney and was held in $25,000 bail for a hearing June 10. He pleaded not guilty.

Given $400,000.

The postal authorities said that among the victims of Wheeler's activities were Miss Maude Brickell, of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Hattie Thompson of Baltimore. He is alleged to have fraudulently induced Miss Brickell to give him $400,000 for investment in a gold mine stock listed on the San Francisco Exchange. The amount involved in Mrs. Thompson's case was $14,600. Mrs. Jessie Burnham of Petersburg, N. Y., also was named by the Federal officers as having lost money through Wheeler.

Worked on Coast.

Wheeler's operations centered in San Francisco and Hollywood, Cal., inspectors said. According to them, his method was to advertise in a Chicago matrimonial magazine for a wife whose tastes were similar to his. He represented himself, they said, as a millionaire and a lover of music. It was after Wheeler gained the confidence of the women through his lover overtures that he preyed on their finances, the postal authorities said.

The postoffice inspectors today were investigating reports that Wheeler had victimized many other persons and brokerage concerns throughout the country. His arrest took place at the Copley Plaza hotel here after he had been traced through mail sent to this city in care of a local broker.

DAVISON SILVER LOST IN A FOG

Just What Guests of Assistant Secretary of War Ate Out of is Not Disclosed.

New York, May 29.—(AP)—Just what the guests at a dinner given by Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. F. Truett Davison did under the circumstances has not been disclosed, but these are the facts: The Davisons suddenly discovered yesterday that they needed more silverware for a dinner party at their Sands Point, Long Island, estate, and sent a hurry call for extra pieces to the Davison home in Washington.

Early in the evening an Army plane took off from Washington with the needed ware, and a Davison chauffeur was hustled to a Long Island landing field to await its arrival. The guests finally arrived but the chauffeur was still maintaining his vigilance in vain.

At a late hour it was learned that the plane, piloted by Lieut. W. J. Willis, had become lost in the fog and had landed at Trenton, N. J.

CHAMBER PLANS BAND CONCERTS

Also Decide to Hold General Outing of Members; Hear Executive Reports.

Weekly band concerts here during the summer and approval of an old-fashioned business men's outing were the outstanding results of last night's membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. Both were approved by the 65 members in attendance and committees will be named by President Emu L. G. Homenchak Jr. to perfect plans.

The band concert and outing subjects were introduced by Oliver F. Toop, chairman of the Meetings committee of the Chamber. George L. Betts and Edward O. Stearns entered into the discussion on band concerts, Mr. Stearns suggesting

AVIATRIX UNHURT AS PLANE CRASHES

Miss Johnson Who Flew from England to Australia In Accident.

Brisbane, Queensland, May 29.—Miss Amy Johnson, who flew from England to Australia without a mishap of consequence, cracked up her plane at Eagle Farm Aerodrome this afternoon while enroute from Port Darwin, North Australia, to Sydney. She was not injured.

The plane carried by crosswinds over the edge of the aerodrome hit Miss Johnson's plane. When they saw her on her feet, uninjured, their screams gave way to cheering. Mechanics and police quickly formed a cordon about the injured machine and protected it from the crowd.

Not Injured.

Sir T. Goodwin was the first to render assistance to the girl. He asked her: "Are you hurt?" She shook her head and said: "I am more worried about my machine," explaining that she had landed at too great a brief rest in the hangar she was driven smiling around the aerodrome waving her thanks for the tumultuous reception. Thereafter she proceeded in a procession through the city streets lined by other thousands, many of whom were not aware of the mishap at her landing.

Sergeant Younger, who nine years ago dropped a bouquet of roses upon one of the caskets containing the bodies of unidentified American doughboys, and thereby designated the unknown soldier will drop a similar bouquet upon the tomb as part of the ceremonies.

Senate and House will be in recess and the executive departments will be closed.

Wearily legislators alternately slept in their chairs or joined in debate as the hours dragged on.

The Senate called a halt for breakfast at 7 a. m., while Governor Allen who had been continuously in his office since yesterday ate half an hour later.

ZEP SPEEDING NORTHWARD ON HAVANA FLIGHT

Rolls Up Another Thousand Miles on Journey; Sighted by Steamer Which Re- ports All Well on Board.

By Associated Press

The Graf Zeppelin today had rolled up another thousand miles of her journey from Friedrichshafen, Germany, to Lakehurst, N. J. The dirigible was 450 miles east of Cayenne, French Guiana, this morning, going sixty miles an hour and rapidly cutting down the distance to the West Indies.

The dirigible had less than a thousand miles left of the journey to Trinidad, or a point at sea opposite that island city. This distance covered, she would pass into the West Indies where her progress would be almost continuously over populous island areas.

SIGHTED BY STEAMER.

London, May 29.—(AP)—The master of the steamer Wokingham today radioed the Associated Press by way of Salina that he had sighted the Graf Zeppelin at ten o'clock today, Greenwich time, (5 a. m. E. S. T.) and exchanged radio messages.

The Message.

The radio from the Wokingham said: "10:00 a. m. G. M. T., passed very close to Graf Zeppelin Lat. 5.35 North, Long. 46.9 West. Exchanged radio signals. Fine calm weather.

"Zeppelin flying low toward northwest. Presume all well."

The position indicated by the steamer is 450 miles east of Cayenne, French Guiana, and 500 miles north of Para, Brazil, at the mouth of the Amazon.

The Wokingham is a British steamship of 2288 tons bound from Tampa, Fla., April 29 to Montevideo and Buenos Aires by way of Mobile and Pensacola.

BAPTISTS TO BACK PROHIBITION LAW

To Fight It Out for "Next Hundred Years" Says Their Report.

Cleveland, May 29.—(AP)—The Northern Baptist convention was called upon to "stand unwaveringly in defense of temperance and law enforcement" in a report of the prohibition and law committee, prepared for submission at today's session of the conference.

"The times demand men and women of faith and courage," the report said, "men and women who are committed to the cause of righteousness and who will not waver or falter when the winds are contrary and who will not be thrown into a panic when the wets grow vociferous and boastful."

To Fight It Out

"We propose to fight it out on this line if it takes another hundred years to accomplish the task," the report concluded. Its adoption without debate was predicted. President Alton L. Miller of Boston in his address opening the conference yesterday ignored prohibition, but said he did so purposely in view of the special committee's report.

The dry law report was one of three important matters scheduled to be taken up today. The other two were relationship with the Federal Council of Churches, objected to by some of the fundamentalist group which holds the council too liberal in theology, and prospects of the proposed union with the Disciples of Christ.

GOLD STAR GROUP IS ON WAY HOME

First Party Leaves Paris to Board Steamer to Return To United States.

Paris, May 29.—(AP)—The hundred and twenty-seven Gold Star mothers left Paris this forenoon in a special train for Cherbourg, where this evening they will board the steamship President Harding for home.

Two of the mothers, one from the north, and one from the south spoke their thanks at leaving for the courtesies they have been extended here and there for the government's part in arranging their trip.

"Our trip was beautiful and wonderful," said Mrs. Sarah G. Thompson of New York City, who represented the group in the wreath ceremony at the Unknown Soldier's tomb. "All the mothers are returning to America with a feeling of reverential gratitude to the government and all those who made the wonderful trip possible."

A Mother Speaks.

"I think we are all going home with comforted hearts," said Mrs. Annie Marks of Appalachicola, Florida, who laid the wreath of the Daughters of the American Confederacy. "We are returning with the satisfaction of knowing that our sacred dead rest in the most beautiful spots in the world and that they are in charge of the same wonderful management."

Four of the mothers of this first group to come to France remained. Mrs. Florence Williams, of Portsmouth, Ohio, is still ill at her hotel at Verdun, but today she was furnished.

Gangsters Murder Rival Then Flee With Corpse

Chicago, May 29.—(AP)—A gang gunning that left no corpse, mystified police today.

That murder was done, police were certain. The bloodstains were at the entrance of the alley in the Edgewater residential section this morning. A man identified as one of the gangsters was in jail captured with a shotgun and a .45 calibre pistol. But the body was gone.

Three youths say they saw several men leap from a sedan and fire many shots at a man who had started to flee at sight of them. The man fell. The youths said his hand was almost shot away. They ran for a policeman. The gangsters picked up the body of their victim and dumped it into the automobile. They piled in themselves and the car was set in motion.

One man however did not succeed in getting inside. He leaped to the ground, holding just as a special policeman, pistol drawn, came running up. The officer grabbed the man from the running board as the car sped away.

The man gave his name as Sam Hurt, 27. In the alley was a gold bag containing a shot gun and in Hunt's pocket was an automatic pistol. Hunt denied taking part in the shooting.

ONLY 2 AMERICANS AVOID ELIMINATION

Jones and Voigt Left In British Amateur; Former Beats Johnston One Up.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 29.—(AP)—The "lost eight" of the British Amateur golf championship will find two players from the United States, Bobby Jones and George Voigt, and one American who lives in London, Douglas Grant, fighting it out with five British competitors for the right to continue in the championship play.

Tomorrow morning Voigt will play William Sutton, former English amateur champion, while Jones meets Eric Fiddian, who removes Tony Torrance, one of Britain's best players from the competition today.

Douglas Grant made three Americans in the quarter finals although he no longer lives in the United States, when he defeated the Hon. Michael Scott, conqueror of Vaucluse, three up and one to play.

Jones has now passed the round in which he was eliminated the last time he played in the British amateur championship. In 1926 at Muirfield he was eliminated in the sixth round. In his first attempt, at Hoylake in 1921, he lost in the fourth round.

Voigt is playing in the British championship for the first time.

K OF NEW HAVEN IS AGAIN DELAYED

This Time a Generator Goes Bad—May Hop Late This Afternoon.

Brainard Field, Hartford, May 29.—(AP)—The "K" of New Haven prepared for the non-stop flight to Buenos Aires rested prettily in the soft turf of Brainard Field at high noon today, the time limit set by the backers for the departure.

Time limits in aerial exploits are movable if experience of the "K" in example, is determined by the "K" prospective crew can be taken as an example. Two hours farther away while a motor generator was being flown from Roosevelt Field.

Wait For Generator.

The business of getting ready for departure after several days of preparation and expectation, was more serious today and the plane having been run out of the hangar at 8 o'clock Standard Time, the aviators Partridge, Pond and Peed strapped on their parachutes. The engine had been tuning up and the engine had been humming and humming hummed beautifully. But the hitch came when the motor generator came whirring on a strut and charge batteries for the radio set and the instrument panel, did not want to go. It had to be taken off and the aviators had to wait. They took off and when high noon came the time limit set by Lieut. Peed, second pilot for his own presence on the field, it was understood the backers would not object if the start was a bit late.

The sun came out shortly after this and the only reason in sight apparently for further delay was the lack of a generator.

MERCURY GETS TICKET

Evanston, Ill., May 29.—(AP)—"Pull up," said the motorcycle cop to Stephen Beames, the sculptor yesterday, "to the curb, while I write you a ticket for speeding."

"I was hurrying," said the sculptor, "to deliver to a customer a statue of Mercury—you know, Mercury, messenger of the gods." "I don't," said the officer, "even a messenger of the gods should be allowed to go 45 miles an hour. I never heard of a messenger traveling that fast, anyway. Those classical gods might as well learn that in Evanston they're no better than anybody else."

The court will decide.

Origin Of Memorial Day Still Remains A Mystery

Mobile, Alabama, Claims to Have Held First Actual Memorial Day Service But New England Makes Most General Observance of the Day.

Memorial Day is acknowledged to be a New England institution. For years its true origin was shrouded in mystery. Many thought that the observance in New England and elsewhere was a natural result of the then tremendous losses of the civil armies in the four year struggle in the south. There are countless stories of its origin, stories of memorial services which are held in various parts of the country from which our present-day Memorial Day grew.

Mobile, Alabama, aspires to the credit of conducting the first Memorial Day. It may be that a woman from Malden, Mass., started the observance in New England. She was a woman from Malden, Mass., who came to Mobile, Ala., in 1865, and she is credited with the first Memorial Day service in the city. She was a woman from Malden, Mass., who came to Mobile, Ala., in 1865, and she is credited with the first Memorial Day service in the city.

According to the first story, the first Memorial Day took place in Charleston, S. C., before the war was over. In February 1865, Sherman's victorious troops entered the city of Charleston, S. C. There they found an old race track that had been used as a prison by the Confederates for the retention of Union prisoners. The old prison was empty of men, but within the big race course hundreds of graves were found, those of the Union soldiers who had succumbed to the rigors of imprisonment.

The prison was on damp, swampy ground, ill-suited for use as a prison. Long ditches had been dug to drain the damp, swampy ground to give the prisoners some dry ground. Hard work digging the long ditches had brought on fevers and the brave Northerners, unused to the heat and moisture were laid away in the ditches that they had dug to better their conditions as prisoners. They were buried without caskets, without markers in some cases and in all probability without benefit of clergy. This appalling discovery, so the story goes, led to a flood of indignation in the North and to the first Memorial Day.

With Sherman at the time of his triumphant entry into Charleston were several workers of the Freedman's Bureau, those whose task it was to help the freed slaves to solve the problems they confronted them in the chaotic condition of society in the south.

Among these workers was James Redpath of Malden, Massachusetts. His wife, Mary Cotton Redpath, journeyed south from Boston to join him in Charleston. After her arrival, Mrs. Redpath looked over the city and was shocked at the condition of the graves at the race-track prison. The graves were unmarked, hogs rooted in the burial plots and paths criss-crossed the mounds of irregular earth.

from Boston to recover the bones of a beloved son." And so the first Memorial Day was born.

Northern papers carried accounts of the Charleston ceremony and it is not improbable that other ceremonies were modeled after it. But according to another story, the Charleston ceremony was not the first. The ladies of Mobile, it is said, gathered and decorated the Confederate graves, April 30, 1865. If that is so, the ladies of Mobile conducted their Memorial one day before the Charleston event.

The next year, 1866, found two memorial services, one at Richmond, the other at Arlington and Glymont, Va. A group of Northerners connected with the government at Richmond, headed by Prof. Andrew Washburn, in charge of the public schools decided to decorate the graves at Belle Isle. According to this story the Yankees, most of whom were New Englanders, were stunned by the hostile people around Richmond, and as a consequence, they formed a group of their own. They made trips to places around Richmond, visiting among others, Belle Isle, the site of the large Confederate prison.

Big Pilgrimage Prof. Washburn suggested that a day be set aside for the Belle Isle pilgrimage which met with favor. On May 29 children of the Richmond schools, who had brought flowers to their schoolrooms met in the kitchen of the Washburn home and made the flowers into bouquets, wreaths and a large cross.

The next day was rainy and misty. Undaunted, the group led by F. E. Fay of Chelsea, who was acting mayor of Richmond, went to Belle Isle. They set up the cross in the midst of the graves, and then on every headboard they placed a bouquet. After the graves had all been decorated they gathered again at the cross. A former Army nurse sang a song, and just as she finished the clouds suddenly parted and the cross was flooded with sunlight. Instinctively, they knelt in prayer.

First Address This ceremony was probably suggested by newspaper accounts of the Charleston ceremony. It bore fruit for the next year the ladies of Richmond decorated the graves of the Confederate dead about Richmond. The first Memorial Day address that was given following the Civil War was at a dining pavilion, in the middle of the Potomac from Washington at Glymont, Virginia.

When the ladies of Richmond followed the example of the little group of Boston teachers and decided to decorate the graves in 1867, there happened to be in Richmond the wife of General Logan, the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. Mrs. Logan was much impressed with the idea and upon her return to her home in the North told her husband, who at once wrote the famous order No. 11. Thus was born the first Memorial Day.

Spread Rapidly The idea of a Memorial Day which took root in the south even while the sound of cannonading could be heard, spread over the North like wildfire. Every little hamlet had at that time its full quota of soldiers, men more in proportion to the population than that of the late World War. Consequently the day became in New England, State, a day of assembly for the military, and a setting apart of 24 hours for remembrance of the Civil War dead.

The Grand Army has ever been strong for the proper observance of the Day and when the old soldiers were much younger, campaigned in the schools several days before Memorial Day with the proper observance of the day in mind. Officers of the Civil War addressed the school children at length; teachers drilled their charges daily and the countryside was fine-tooth combed for every bloom that could be used for decorative purposes.

Local Vets' Story Elmer I. Hotchkiss, one of the G. A. R. veterans who lived in Bolton shortly after the War tells of the early Memorial Day with the proper observance of the day in mind. Officers of the Civil War addressed the school children at length; teachers drilled their charges daily and the countryside was fine-tooth combed for every bloom that could be used for decorative purposes.

Held Exercises The villages of Connecticut were alive with children on Memorial Day, the one day in the year that they were allowed to run at random within the confines of the town proper. There was little danger then, for the automobile had not come along. Usually, those living at a distance visited the remainder of the day with friends and relatives after the afternoon exercises.

Today there seems to be a falling away from the old spirit. Now there is very little activity in the forenoon whereas the whole day was filled with interest. Other days remain for the rank and file of the Grand Army of the Republic.

next Saturday afternoon—to the highest bidder. Auctions are always an attraction for New England people and an auction of autos is no exception, besides, it's a little unusual.

An unusual spectacle of automobiles going under the hammer to the highest bidder was provided on the lot adjoining the Masonic Temple yesterday afternoon when the Crawford Auto Supply Co. auctioned off twelve cars, all in good running order, for the "high dollar."

Catch Another Bandit Hartford, May 29.—(AP)—The state police received a telegram shortly before one o'clock today advising of the arrest of Charles Z. Zenkauskas, third of the three men suspected of the robbery of the Watertown Trust Company bank on March 28. The telegram states that Zenkauskas has been picked up by the police in Windsor, Ont., and has been identified by his fingerprints.

Receiver Appointed Hartford, May 29.—(AP)—Paul B. Griffin of Hartford was appointed today temporary receiver of the Connecticut State Agricultural Society to take charge of the 121 acres of Charter Oak Park which was appraised two years ago at approximately $25,000. The appointment was made by Judge Carl F. Potter in the Superior Court on application of William J. Goltz of West Hartford who owns 216 shares of the 1,390 shares of stock of the corporation. The application was presented by Attorney Albert C. Bill.

TELLS POLICE TO STOP COLLECTING OF BILLS

Commission Takes Action on Report That Department Collected Fees for Doctor.

The local police commission met last night to consider a report that a local police officer had taken an active part in securing settlement of a doctor's bill. Although the officers involved were not brought before the commission to answer any charges, Willard E. Rogers, chairman of the board said today that they were advised not to take part in any negotiations outside the line of duty.

The whole case resulted when Captain Herman Schendel and Patrolman Walter Cassels befriended a young man in an accident and then aided in settling Dr. LeVerne Holmes' charges for services. The entire affair was of a minor nature and the commission stated but one that was liable to cause trouble if carried too far.

Superintendent Raymond Griffin was promoted to patrolman and put on the motorcycle squad.

Miss Edna Stoddard, Bride of Harold Collins in Machine Over the Village.

Hartford, May 29.—(AP)—Gently gliding down from an altitude of a mile above Wapping in a plane piloted by Lieutenant Charles Descomb of Hartford, Miss Edna Frances Stoddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Stoddard of Wapping, and Harold John Alden Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Collins of Wapping, will be married late today by the Rev. Daniel R. Kennedy, Jr., of Suffield, chaplain of the 43rd Division Air Service.

To make it possible for the ceremony to be heard without difficulty the pilot will cut out the motor at a sufficient height so that it will not be necessary to turn on the power again until the marriage has been performed. The bridegroom is a student at the Descomb flying school.

had to fight back a sensational attack from the amateur champion in the closing holes.

Johnston shot two birdies at Jones on the 14th and 17 holes and brought the match to the home green when he had been four down at the 13th.

Jones was bunkered before the green at the 15th and wound up with a six, his first hole of the day over five. Johnston was down in five after missing a putt.

Johnston holed a six foot putt dangerously near a stymie at the 16th for a half in fours to keep the match alive.

Continuing his great rally, Johnston won the 17th with a birdie four to five and was only one down with a hole to play.

The setting for the finish of the exciting match was ideal before the clubhouse of the Royal and Ancient club.

Stampering galleries approaching the size of yesterday's followed the battling Americans all the way and scrambled across the Switcan Burn to see the finish.

The crowd seemed even more frantic than that of yesterday. Men and women fell into the water but nobody helped them out in the rush for vantage points around the home green.

Play Very Evenly Although Jones was four up when five holes remained to be played, there was not that much difference in the play of the two American champions at any time, in light places Jones seemed able to make the breaks and this turned the scales of fortune.

Voigt and Jones were left to carry the prestige of amateur golf in the United States into the quarter-final round.

The defeat of George Von Elm, in an exciting extra hole match, removed the last chance of an All-American final as Von Elm was the only player from the United States left in the lower bracket. Both Voigt and Jones are in the upper half of the draw. H. Francis Oulmet fell with Von Elm in the fifth round.

Voigt advanced to the quarter-finals by defeating W. L. Hope, St. George's Hill, two up.

Voigt had to come from behind to win from the former British Walker Cup player. The American was three down after the first three holes but squared the match in the next three and although he turned home, one down, he again squared the match at the 13th and went on to win.

William Suttin, former English native champion, advanced to the quarter-finals by defeating Dr. William Tweedell, former British amateur champion, four up and three to play.

Eric Fiddian eliminated T. A. Torrance, the only British Walker Cup player to win a match against the United States in the last two international competitions, four and three.

HOOVER APPROVES NEW VETERAN PENSION BILL

which the governmental pensions system was established. A movement was instituted by Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, to override the veto.

Knutson said the substitute eliminated the features objected to by the President.

Chairman Robinson, of the Senate pensions committee, said he hoped action on Connally's motion would be deferred until his group decided what steps to take.

He also was counting on the new bill to meet the President's objections. With a number of Senators absent, Senator Connally indicated he would wait until Monday to ask a Senate vote to override the veto.

The Herald Hears—

That some of the high handicap golf players at the Country club here do not report their low scores. Thus they have a decided advantage over other players as by not reporting their low averages their handicaps remain high.

That solving of the puzzle of adding up the uneven numbers from one to nine to make 21, using but six figures, which appeared in connection with the showing of "The Vagabond King" at the State Theater, is beyond the realm of possibility, unless you add nine and then add five and seven to nine. Then you have it. Or use the other two combinations in the same manner.

That hi-jacking of quarter slot machines from nearby night resorts has come to be feared more than raids by state or federal police.

That a Communist agitator has been passing word around trying to cast reflections upon all banking institutions and that if he is caught he'll "do a long stretch."

that a band stand be erected by the citizens here. This suggestion seemed to meet with hearty approval from the members.

General Outing. An old fashioned business men's meeting won more enthusiasm than almost anything else that has been suggested at Chamber meetings.

Mr. Toop said that he believed a general outing could be worked up this year and nearly everyone seemed to agree with him. Those who entered into this discussion and approved of such an outing were F. T. Elish, George L. Betts, William H. Schiedge, K. K. Anderson and Edward O. Stearns. It was voted to have the outing the third Wednesday in July which had previously been designated as Merchants Day. A committee will be named to arrange for the outing.

President E. L. G. Hohenthal Jr., read a report of the activities of the Chamber since the reorganization. He outlined the many things that have been accomplished giving particular attention to 25 items. These things that he touched on were as follows: Date Service, Red Cross Roll Call, Christmas Lighting, Poultry Show, Boy Scout Appeal, New Members, Winter Sports, Automobile Organization, North End Men's chautauk Division, Commerce and Industry, Better Homes Week, Time Service, Camera Week, Hospital drive, Egg Week, Station Remodeling, Highway Warning, Business Survey, Protection Service, Advertising and Solicitations Agreement, Manchester Booklets, Tourist Information Bureau, Memorial Day, Hospital Aid, Aviation Sign.

Organization Changes. Executive Secretary McCabe's report was read by Miss Edythe Schatz. Mr. McCabe reported many changes in organization that had been effected. He described the divisions which had been organized and the work called for by these divisions. He reported that interests, auditing, new members, Legislative matters, new Industries and public receptions.

Morris D. Sullivan of South Windsor was made an honorary member of the Chamber. Mr. Sullivan was present and responded with remarks about his membership. He has been a regular attendant at local meetings for a great many years. Mr. Fenerty of the United States Chamber of Commerce was a guest and was introduced to the gathering.

Speaker. Oscar Phelps, personnel director of the Fuller Brush Company in Hartford was introduced and he spoke for a half hour on recreation. He was in favor of exercise.

Previous to the business session the ladies of the Center Congregational church served a home cooked supper consisting of baked ham, cold pork, baked beans, potato salad, rolls, coffee and ice cream.

ther improved, although restless during the night. The doctors do not say she is out of danger but they are increasingly confident of her ultimate recovery.

Others to Remain. Three others remained to tour France and other countries. They were Mrs. Ada C. Verges, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. C. A. Cahoon of Cleveland, Ohio; and Mrs. G. Lewald Shively of Kentucky.

Aside from Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Mary Reynolds, who is in the American hospital all the American mothers are well, and the fine spring weather leads the doctors to believe they will remain so. Mrs. Reynolds had an "American breakfast" this morning, and her doctors said she could rejoin her group in four or five days.

CLIFF GETS 8 YEARS

Mays Landing, May 29.—(AP.)—Warren R. Cliff, 28, of Quincy, Mass., who stabbed his wife, Betty, to death in Atlantic City last winter, and who was convicted of manslaughter by a jury that recommended leniency and later supplemented the plea with a written petition in his behalf, was sentenced to the Rahway Reformatory by Judge Corio today for a term of not less than eight years.

KEITH ANNOUNCES ESSAY WINNERS

Mrs. Norman Ash Captures First Prize in Better Homes Contest.

Mrs. Norman Ash of 49 Flower street, was awarded first prize, $50 worth of merchandise in the Better Homes Week Essay Contest sponsored by The G. E. Keith Furniture Co. Second prize, $25 worth of merchandise went to Mrs. H. L. Preston of 21 Lilly street.

The committee of judges who picked the winning essays consisted of Malcolm Mollan, of the Manchester Herald, Rev. William P. Reidy, A. F. Howes, Supt. of Schools in the 8th Dist., Mrs. H. O. Bowers and Miss Avis Walsh.

That hi-jacking of quarter slot machines from nearby night resorts has come to be feared more than raids by state or federal police.

That a Communist agitator has been passing word around trying to cast reflections upon all banking institutions and that if he is caught he'll "do a long stretch."

On my floor I would place a nine by nine American Oriental rug. The predominant colors in the rug are dull blue, rose, tan and black. As one enters the room there is a wall space of seven feet to the left. At this wall I would place a Governor Lawson desk and ladder-back chair in dark mahogany. To the right of the desk would be a Cape Cod floor lamp, designed in pewter.

At the East wall there is a wall projection of five feet by seven inches. On either side of this projection I would place low mahogany-finished book cases, their interiors being painted a dull burnt orange. On these book cases I would place pottery vases containing a few sprays of bitterweet. At the wall between the book cases is space for a Lawson sofa, upholstered in green denim with a gray and rose pattern. At the South wall I would place an occasional chair upholstered in rose and tan tapestry. At the left of the chair would be an octagon table in walnut. A rather high reading lamp would be on the table.

Leaving the space in front of the windows free, I would next place the Lawson chair. To the left of the Lawson chair is a junior floor lamp, to the right a mahogany gate leg table. On this table I would have a reading lamp with a parchment shade. Next would be a Cape Cod winged chair, covered with green glazed chintz.

On my windows I would place straight lace curtains and pale green chintz overdrapes. The wall paper is a neutral shade of green and gray.

In choosing these furnishings for my room, I have considered the size of my room, the general outline and the lighting. Although my room is not large, the ceiling and windows are high, therefore requiring both large and small furnishings. The Lawson sofa and chair are the two main pieces of my room, the other pieces being added to harmonize with them.

The mahogany desk, table and chair furnishes the neutral tone for the remaining pieces. My small occasional chair and table are just the pieces needed to break up the solid line of color between the Lawson sofa and chair. In placing the Lawson sofa and chair on separate walls I mean to bring out the smart and graceful lines in this popular suite. My gate leg table harmonizes with the Cape Cod chair; the chair lending an informal and homelike touch to the room.

HILLSIDE INN TO OPEN TOMORROW

Hillside Inn of Bolton famous for its splendid meals and pleasant surroundings will open for business Memorial Day. To get there follow the new concrete road to the foot of Nigger Hill turn right on the new state driveway which will bring you to the inn as conveniently as before. The location of the new road made it necessary for the owner to erect a new and larger display sign. The proprietor has installed several pieces of modern equipment and the dining room has been newly renovated, assuring better meals and service.

was this money, said the News, that William J. O'Connor, of Buffalo, tossed out of the window of the hotel when the detectives crashed the door. The newspaper said the money was to have been divided later between the private and police detectives.

The News says that Scaffa also was responsible for the arrest of Robert C. Nelson in whose safe deposit boxes in four banks jewelry valued at $1,000,000 was seized. Although the two cases were unrelated they broke by coincidence at the same time.

Scaffa frequently has figured in the News concerning recovered stolen jewels. He was twice tried for his part in the recovery of the Donatelli jewelry. At his first trial four years ago the jury disagreed but at a second trial a verdict of acquittal was ordered by the judge.

HINDUS DEFY LAW

Bombay, May 29.—(AP.)—Twenty-nine Nationalist volunteers left here today for Sholapur where they will defy martial law regulations prohibiting display of the Nationalist flag. Several arrests already have been made at Sholapur under the law.

The Bombay Nationalist Congress critics last night paraded the city calling upon the people to join today in a procession with the body of a non-volunteer salt raider who died of injuries received Sunday in the salt raid at Wadda.

In view of some observers there has been a remarkable revival of the Nationalist Congress energy since outbreak in the Bhandi Bazaar district Moslem quarter, the first of the week.

against which there could be no possible sure defense.
 If everybody lost the last war—and the world is thoroughly convinced of that fact now—how much more certainly would everybody lose the next one? And lose it at a cost enormously greater than that of the last one?

Let one nation cry out to another, "I will crush you!" and there will be inevitably an answer to give pause to the intention: "Very well; I cannot prevent it, but I can at least destroy you while you are doing it."

No wonder Dr. Butler finds that everywhere all sane men are agreed that there can be no more wars to win and that there must be no more wars to lose.

A LEGION JOB

We know of no finer minor objective for the men of the American Legion, who well know what gunpower is for, than to follow the example of the Bridgeport post and array themselves against the maiming and blinding of children through the abominable firecracker celebrations of the Fourth of July.

Down in the Park City the Legion has placed itself squarely behind the city government in the latter's determination to make the approaching occasion of Independence day the last to be explosively celebrated in the city and surrounding towns.

Two causes operate in many instances to prevent the stopping of gunpowder celebrations of the Fourth. One is the close proximity of "open" towns to one where the firecracker prohibition may be under consideration. The other is procrastination. Each year, many a municipality, disgusted with the racket and the multiplicity of injuries, determines that an end must be put to the custom before another year. Then the matter is forgotten until a few weeks before the next Fourth. And when at length it is proposed to adopt a prohibitive ordinance it is discovered that a whole swarm of fireworks dealers have placed orders and made business commitments based on the customary selling privilege. There is a loud protest, not wholly unjustified, against such sudden and drastic action. So again the reform is postponed.

In Bridgeport both the administration and the Legion are determined to go about the business differently this time. Immediately after the Fourth, while the inevitable list of injuries and accidents is still fresh in mind, it is proposed to hold a sort of little congress of the authorities of the city and all the adjacent towns, settle upon a common prohibitory law and have it adopted by the respective communities forthwith.

It is back of this movement that the Legion is throwing its influence. And a good work it is.

PENSION VETO

Judging from the reasons given by President Hoover for his veto of the bill establishing a new basis of pensions for Spanish War veterans, the bill was drawn with scandalous looseness beside establishing as a basis of service a period considerably shorter than was ever admitted in the case of Civil War veterans, and, as the President points out, for the first time countenancing disabilities resulting from the vicious habits of the individual.

These objections are obviously well grounded. But the President goes a bit further into the subject of pensions, in a direction where a great body of public opinion will travel with him. He declares in effect that pensions should be granted only to those who need them.

If this principle had been followed with relation to the survivors of the Civil War the people of this country would have been relieved of hundreds of millions of dollars in taxation, for it was a fact so patent that for years it elicited almost no remark that thousands upon thousands of the veterans of that war drew pensions upon the flimsiest of pretenses and absolutely without any justification in their financial conditions.

"It seems to me," says the President, "that in the interest of justice to the taxpayer and to maintain the fine body of citizens comprised in our war veterans free from stigma of encroachment upon the public treasury, there should be a requirement of 'need' as well as disability as a basis of these pensions."

"It is to me the height of injustice that citizens who are less well placed should be called upon to support the ruin of its cities and the utter devastation of its industrial plant—no matter how certain it might be of victory. And every statesman in Europe knows that.

They may bluster and make gestures. They may talk magnificently, as Mussolini does, about wars that they know full well they will never fight. But they will not bring upon their capitals and upon the cores of their economic existence the whirl of planes and the deluge of bombs which the weakest of potential enemies might very well launch upon them in desperate reprisal, and but that if a referendum of the people of his state shows it to be their will he will vote for either repeal or modification of the Eighteenth amendment.

Fair enough. And a new thing, this, for a dry to be seeking instead of opposing a referendum on prohibition. To be sure, Washington is one of the states which showed, in the Literary Digest poll, more persons voting for prohibition—as is than for repeal, the figures being respectively 28,059 and 27,724, but the modificationists in the state were more numerous in the poll than either of the other groups, there having been 29,032 votes in favor of some sort of change or repeal.

Perhaps Senator Jones is one of those who thinks most of the modificationists would vote for the continuation of the Eighteenth amendment if its repeal were the only issue; perhaps, on the other hand, he may be willing to bow to the will of his constituents even when he thinks they are wrong. In any event one cannot quarrel with a member of Congress who declares that he will accept the decision of his constituents, if it can be definitely ascertained, in such a vital matter as this. No more can be fairly asked of any dry.

One is inclined, in fact, to give Senator Jones a good deal of credit for not making a much more pronounced flop. His job is at stake. He must be re-elected next fall if he is to remain in the Senate, for his term expires in March next. And it takes some nerve for a Senator facing re-election to take a position more or less in defiance of the special declaration of his own party in its state convention.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 29.—In spite of all the solemn announcements that Maude Adams will be back in the footlights next September, Broadway is making side bets and the skeptics are chanting, "we'll believe it when we see it."

For at least once a year, the wrath of the celestials favors the theater, and when she is seen only those who know her well recognize her. For years she has chosen to take the role of America's most mysterious public figure; appearing and disappearing like a specter at a séance.

Now that her name has flashed across the land again, I could tell a hundred stories. I'll choose a few that are typical:

A couple of years ago, the whispering went about that she had hit at last upon a play that would return her to the theater. The same John D. Williams who now appears as her intermediary with the public, and who was her counselor years and years ago when she was under Frohman's management, was on deck and induced her to keep an appointment with Booth Tarkington, who was working on the piece, and Glenn Hunter, the young actor, who hoped to play a juvenile lead.

They all got together and Miss Adams appeared duly enthusiastic. It seemed to be all over but the dotted line. Then . . . whist . . . she had again disappeared into space. She vanished as completely as any Houdini in a trunk mystery.

And now the wise ones whisper and question whether she will do it all over again.

In the meantime, her comings and goings are as vague as neighborhood gossip.

She has been accepted as a fact for some time that when she is in New York, Miss Adams stays at the Colony Club. But this is very exclusive and very secretive.

When she travels, her identity is disguised under the family name, "Kiskadden." Once when she sailed for Europe, her name appeared on the lists as "Miss M. A. Kiskadden." It got by almost to sailing time. Then the reporters made a rush for her stateroom. A gentle-voiced old lady, with iron gray hair, came to the door and quietly announced that there must be some mistake.

Recalling Maude Adams as the "eternal youth" of "Peter Pan," the invaders were startled into polite retirement. "The fact is, of course, that Miss Adams fast approaches her sixtieth year of life. And since only her intimates have seen her in late years, the average person would not be likely to recognize her.

The tale goes that, even in the face of doubtful recognition, she carries a handy yell with which to hide her face when entering or leaving theaters. A car is always at her disposal just outside her dwelling place, and those efforts to salute her have been met with a hasty hopping inside the car, a quick shutting of the door and a hurried departure. This has been her attitude ever since that day, years back, when, after the death of Frohman in the Lusitania disaster, she collapsed back stage while appearing in Tennessee. Later, her health breaking, she retired to a sisters' hospital and, out of gratitude, gave to this sisterhood her elaborate estate outside of New York.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—It used to be small Latin-American countries that Uncle Sam was accused of bullying. Now there seems to be a plea of growing volume that we be a little more considerate in our treatment of neighboring Canada.

There is plenty of testimony to the effect that Canadians have been more or less irritated for some time by American "arrogance." But Canadians with whom this writer has talked have taken the rates of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill far more seriously than the minor irritations previously accumulated.

Worst of all, Canada decided to take a whack back at us. Probably that has had more than anything else to do with the growth of opinion among us that we ought to be nicer to Canada. One seldom ignores a sock at one's pocketbook.

Both countries were able to strike at each other and when it appeared that our lawmakers in devising the new tariff law were going to disregard the fact that Canada is our biggest export customer the Canadians revised their own tariff rates in such manner that the Department of Commerce estimated the 25 per cent of our Canadian exports would suffer adversely.

We have been exporting more than $900,000,000 in goods to Canada yearly. We have been buying less than $600,000,000 worth from her. Later our exports have been diminishing; the figures showed a 25 per cent decrease in our exports across the border for March as compared with March, 1929. And that was before the Canadian finance minister announced his tariff changes—which our commercial attaches in Ottawa reported would affect American exports, amounting to from $175,000,000 to $225,000,000 a year as well as put British exports to Canada on a much stronger basis of competition.

One widely circulated expert estimate is that the Hawley-Smoot tariff would reduce Canadian sales to the United States by about $80,000,000 a year, whereas the Canadian government's new rates will curtail our exports to Canada by about $110,000,000. There must also be taken into consideration the general effect of increasing preferences granted by Canada to imports from Great Britain.

Mackenzie King, the present Canadian premier, has a record of friendliness to the United States. Political factions have often attacked him on that ground. But although the King government recently put through the House of Commons a measure banning liquor exportation to the United States, it was in no mood to take the Hawley-Smoot tariff without retaliation.

One Canadian viewpoint, which may or may not be common, is expressed by an experienced Canadian writer named Lew Roberts in the current issue of Harper's Magazine. "If you have lived beside a fellow grown paunchy with wealth, and have endured the countless irritations and pin-pricks which come from being patronized or having your liberties trespassed upon, you will not find it difficult to understand the feeling which is growing in Canada against the United States," Roberts writes.

"Chicago wants water for her drainage canal, Lake Michigan's banks are opened and a huge daily volume is led away, without thought for the lowering of navigation levels throughout the St. Lawrence as a result of the diversion, thought the item is of transcendent importance to the people of Canada, and amendments are made. Chicago thumbs her nose."

"America asks extension of the three-mile limit to permit greater facility in the enforcement of prohibition. Canada grants the extension—and vessels of Canadian registry are shelled on the high seas. The Canadian government, by request, extends administrative and legislative assistance to enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. In reply United States patrolmen stalk their prey on Canadian soil and shoot to kill. American traders' wares dominate the shelves of every Canadian shop and home, while American legislators pile brick on brick along the tariff wall raised against Canadian products."

"Amity and concord are sung at banquets and the christenings of international bridges—and Yankee politicians urge the restriction of Canadian immigration. Canadian commoners are engaged in passing a law to legalize the export of alcoholic beverages to the United States. American legislators in Washington are engaged in banning the importation of Canadian maple products to please the farmers of New Hampshire and Vermont."

"Add to such major items as these the petty annoyances suffered by Canadians at the hands of immigration officers, customs officials, state policemen, border patrolmen, and humble traffic cops with the manners of longhairs, and only one result can be looked for: a complete exasperation, among Canadians, at the thoughtlessness and intolerance of the United States towards its northern neighbor."

If Roberts is correct President Hoover may have to consider making a good will tour through the Canadian provinces.

Most people regard the face as being an index to character, and there is no doubt that it is to some extent, although perhaps not as much as most people think. Nevertheless, the fact that people do think it is an index to character should be a sufficient reason for us to present a good face to the world.

You would not want the front yard of your home to be littered with tin cans and broken boxes and old bottles, and it is certainly of more aesthetic importance that your face be attractive and that it be tidied and kept clear of the mean, destructive emotions. Your face should reflect honesty, sincerity and friendliness. This is evidenced by frank, open eyes and the lips together with the corners upward. You can do your own face-lifting if you will only learn to control your emotions and make your face reflect good, kind, honest, happy thoughts.

There is no need to go about with scowling eyebrows and a drooping mouth. It is not as important to learn to smile when you are with others, as it is to build a habit of cultivating a good facial expression whether you are alone or in company. In other words, learn to adjust.

We instinctively distrust those whose faces do not appear natural, whether they appear more despondent or whether they do not display the normal emotions. How much better it is to allow your face to express itself naturally. You do not then have to be constantly on guard. However, in order for you to do this you should train yourself to have the right kind of emotions at all times.

Some people try to conceal their real emotions so as to appear honest when they are dishonest, or trustful when they are distrustful. All of these efforts to make the face appear when it is not, leads to a strain on the facial muscles which sooner or later makes an indelible impression that cannot be readily corrected.

BOARD TO SUGGEST OIL CONSERVATION

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—Conservation of oil and gas through the "unit plan" of operation and action by the various states to prevent waste, was recommended today by the Federal Oil Conservation Board in a report on petroleum conditions submitted to President Hoover.

The unit scheme is an agreement under which all operators tapping a particular oil pool come to an agreement on the amount of oil that is to be produced within a given period.

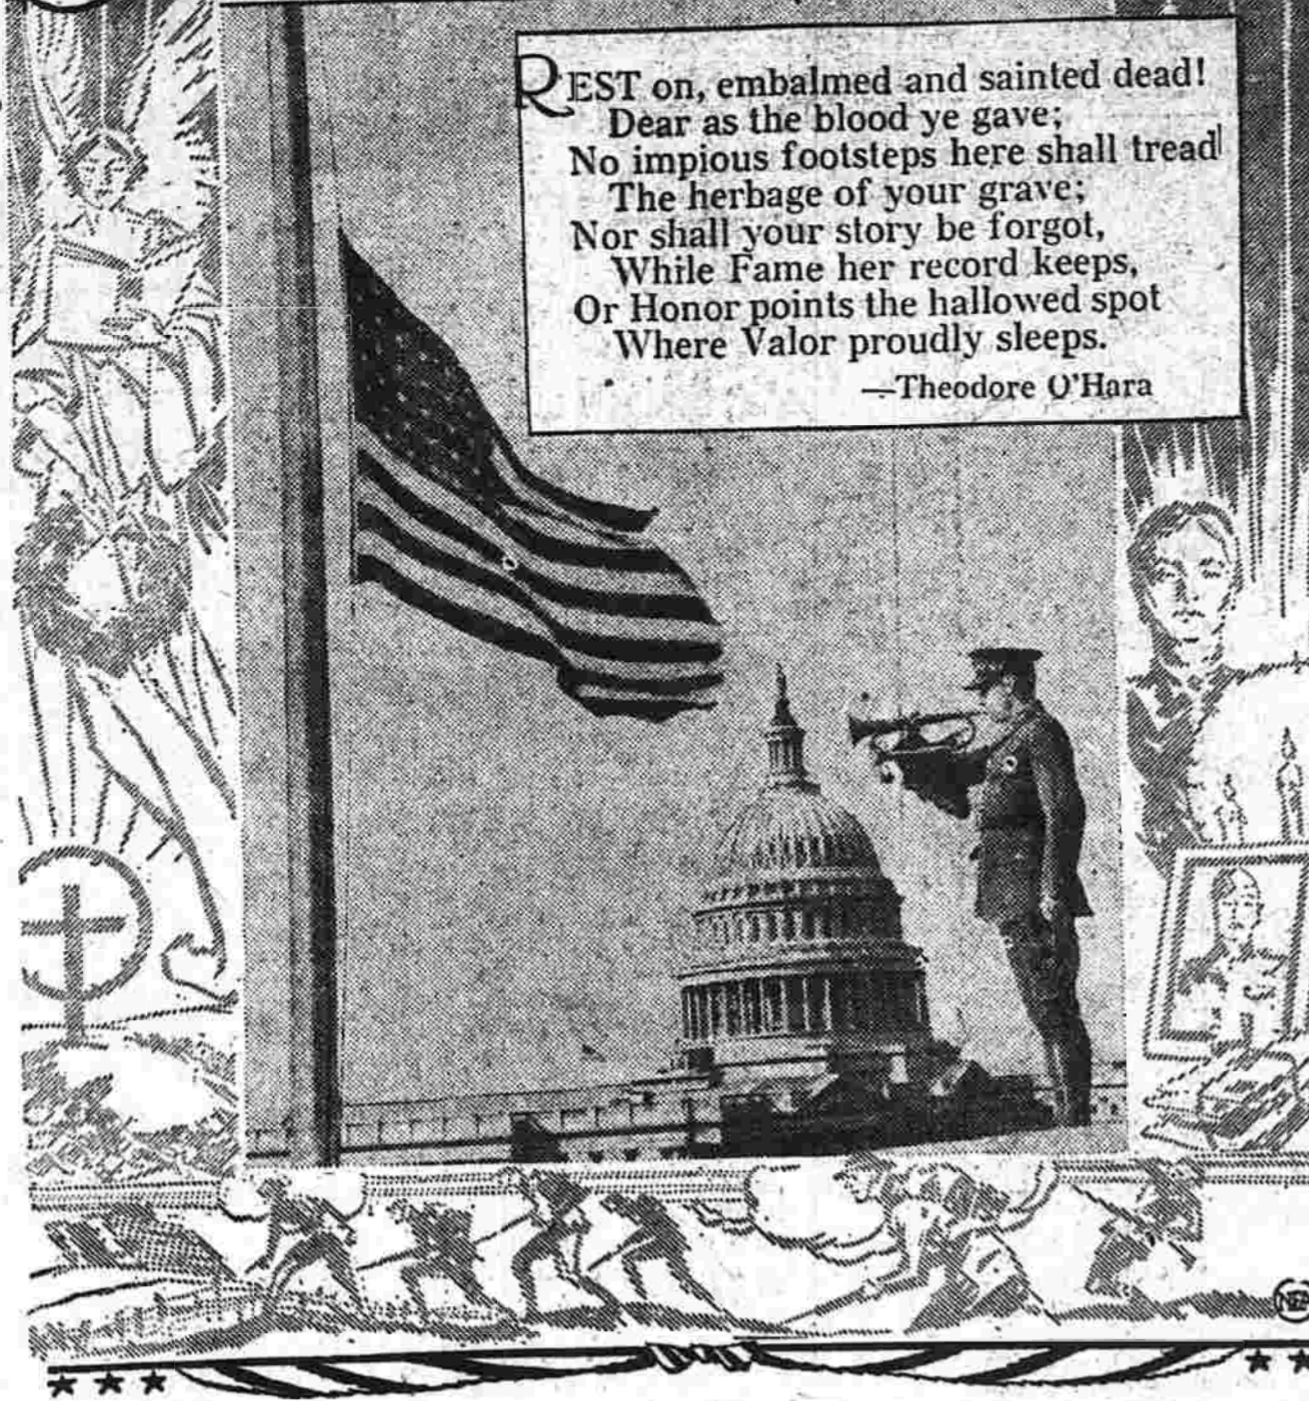

The board also said that a particular need at the present time is "specific recognition by the courts of this community of interest by all the land owners in the content of the oil and gas pools, in the oil and gas as separate marketable commodities and in the energy of gas."

The "prompt exercise of the police power of the state," was urged to prevent waste in the unnecessary escape of gas from oil wells. The need of protecting both public and private interest is shown, the board continued, by the recent record of two wells in California, which he said, have already turned into the pipe lines nearly $5,000,000 worth of oil and gas but from which gas and gasoline vapor worth more than $10,000,000 "have gone up into the air—a total loss to present and future citizens of the state."

"It is to prevent more losses of that magnitude that the idea of self-regulation by voluntary co-operative action is winning increasing support within the industry," the report said.

SEATTLE PASSED BY INDIANAPOLIS

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—The census race among cities of the 100,000 class today showed Indianapolis slightly ahead of Seattle, Indianapolis with a 7.5 per cent increase, was able to pass Seattle, though that city increased by 14.8 per cent.

Their close standings through three successive census-takings are:

1930	1920	1910
Indianapolis—362,527	314,194	238,959
Seattle—362,426	315,312	237,124

Back in 1900, Indianapolis was twice as big as Seattle, the score standing 169,124 to 80,971. The west coast city took a sudden spurt, and outdistanced the Indiana rival in a single spectacular leap. Now Indianapolis has won back her lead by 101 persons.

Pittsburgh, Pa., reporting 644,795, an 8.7 per cent increase, kept to proportions with Baltimore, just above her, which reported 739,921, a 7.6 per cent increase. Pittsburgh was 9th city, Baltimore eights in the 1920 census.

At her heels, however, the Pennsylvania metropolis found San Francisco, which came climbing up to 625,974 with a 23.5 per cent increase rate.

Last census Los Angeles held that spot just behind Pittsburgh, but has not yet reported.

HUB SOCIETY DEFENDS ITS CENSORSHIP PLAN

Boston, May 28.—(AP)—A defense of methods used by agents of the Watch and Ward Society in the purchase of books at a Cambridge Book shop of prohibited books was issued by that organization as a result of the decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court yesterday upholding the conviction of James A. Delaney, manager of the book shop for the sale of an obscene book.

The society pointed out that the defense sought a ruling from the court that the bookseller was not guilty because he had been trapped by agents of the society. At the trial also the methods of the society were attacked by counsel for Delaney and by District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell.

The society engaged Thomas W. Proctor, Boston attorney, to examine the record and inquire into other available evidence having to do with the action of the society's agents. After asserting the right of individuals to solicit an improper sale and then report the violation, he said:

"I have seen nothing in the action of the agents of the society in this case that was not in the public interest and in view of the established facts it is obvious that this work done by the society is a work that should be continued."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Circles Around Eyes) Question:—A. S. V. asks: "What is the cause of dark circles around the eyes? I have two children, a girl three years, and a boy eleven months. They are both a little overweight. They get good food, such as lots of milk, eggs and butter, and I try to have two or three kinds of vegetables for them every day, also apples and oranges. I am giving them codliver oil, but they both have these dark circles around the eyes, and I would like to know how to correct it."

Answer: Dark circles around the eyes of children are usually caused by some toxic condition, or by not getting enough sleep. As your children are overweight, it is possible that you are giving them too much rich food. I would suggest that you feed them according to my "Children's Diet," an article which I will be glad to send you upon receipt of a large self-addressed envelope.

The Husband Hunter

BEGIN HERE TODAY

NATALIE CONVERSE, jealous of her husband's friendship with BERNADINE LAMONT, leaves Alan. Wounded pride prevents her from seeking a reconciliation, and Alan turns to his secretary, PHILLIPA WEST, for consolation, who plays her part so cleverly that they soon become engaged.

Repentant, Natalie writes Alan informing him of her return. Their meeting leaves him hopeful but baffled as to her intentions. Because of his entanglement with Phillipa, Alan dares not propose a reconciliation to Natalie. She believes he does not love her, but Alan, realizing that Natalie holds first place in his heart, goes to Phillipa and asks her to release him. Phillipa refuses, and makes an effective appeal to his pity.

Natalie's sister, FLORENCE, with the help of her fiance, ANDREW, fakes an illness in order to bring Alan back to his home. But Phillipa still stands between him and Natalie.

Florence pleads homesickness, hoping they will patch up their difficulties if left to themselves. Natalie makes the call to her office, and there meets Bernadine, desperation over heavy market losses. Natalie's old jealousy flares up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan.

Bidding her time, Phillipa goes to Alan who succumbs to her sympathy. She suggests that he go to her apartment for dinner. Afterward he goes to a hotel. The next day Natalie comes to the office to head for forgiveness, but Alan is out. Phillipa is abrupt, but while Natalie waits in Alan's private office, she regrets it, for she is not certain that his anger against Natalie will endure. While Natalie waits, she receives a note: NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

Phillipa always took Alan's incoming telephone calls. She was thankful now, when the operator had switched the call to her. Natalie was in his private office and could not hear what she said. Even so she was careful not to mention Alan's name, mistaking of the girls in the outer office.

She did not want them to know—it could be avoided—that she kept the fact of Natalie's presence there from him.

He told her that he would not return to the office again that day, and she was so thankful to have him stay that she did not even ask when she would see him.

He thought it was sweet of her to let him alone, and hung up the receiver with a feeling of gratification toward her for not insisting he come to her apartment for dinner.

After that Phillipa was able to apply herself to her neglected work with sufficient diligence to get enough of it done so that she could soon turn her thoughts again to the winning of the man she wanted for her husband.

Natalie had gone, Phillipa had triumphantly over her door. Plainly the waiting had been too great a strain to be long endured. She went out, walking as though she barely restrained herself from running. Her steps were jerky; her eyes set straight ahead of her; her hands gripping her handbag hard enough to numb them.

Phillipa smiled, but she knew that if Natalie and Alan had met, he would have been too offended and angry to tell her the day before that Bernadine Lamont was in need of his sympathy because of her poor health and financial difficulties—their would be an immediate reconciliation between them.

She had seen penitence in Natalie's eyes, knew that she was ready to plead with Alan to forgive her. She remembered that Alan had said he had not told Natalie the truth because he had made up his mind that she was incapable of believing it. Let him once find out that she would welcome it. . . . "I've got to keep them apart," Phillipa exclaimed, almost aloud. But how? How?

Phillipa was sitting, deep in thought, when she gazed on a blank piece of paper in her typewriter when some mail that had just arrived, was brought to her. Alan's letters, mostly.

She ran them over with perfunctory interest until she came to one of odd shape and distinctive coloring. Quickly she put the others aside and tore this one open. She knew that it was from Bernadine Lamont. Many such had come to the office.

Phillipa was always keen to read them. She wanted to know as much as she could about the relations of her employer with his most colorful client. For she had a very definite idea that Bernadine was a woman it would be as well to watch.

The letter was purely a business one. Bernadine directed Alan to buy certain stock of hers. She had received a tip on it, she said, from a most reliable source, and gave initials that few in the Street would have had any trouble in identifying.

Phillipa's lips curled in scorn over Bernadine's lack of business acumen. "If I got a tip from that source, I'd be darned careful how I peddled it around," she sneered. "Lucky thing for her that Alan's honest or she would soon initial herself right out of tips."

She thought, too, that if she had some money she would play the tip herself. But it was against the rules of the office, and it wouldn't be worth the risk of incurring Alan's displeasure. The biggest money on the market were not tipped off in night clubs, even to the favorites like "The Lamont."

However, she sighed over it, for she was something of an opportunist and hated to pass up what she knew was a sure bet. Bernadine had had these tips before, and always they had netted her a substantial profit.

She got up and took the letter, together with the papers, into Alan's office. Just inside the door she stopped and looked around.

Natalie had been doing things to the room. The window shades were evenly lowered, the chairs were moved, a picture that had hung slightly awry for some time was straightened—it was placed back of Alan's chair and though Phillipa often had noticed that it was crookedly hung, she had not bothered to put it right—and the desk was put in order.

Phillipa went over to it and stood surveying Natalie's work. There was little on the desk to place, for Alan kept it fairly clear. But he had appeared to leave on several times and Phillipa had several times reminded herself that she must come in and clear off his desk.

But she had delayed, and Natalie had done it. Phillipa tossed her head with an angry sniff, when she saw that Natalie had left flowers on it. A bunch of violets, that she had been wearing, probably, although Phillipa could not recall having seen them on her. The flowers were not in water. Natalie might have forgotten them there. With a quick pounce, Phillipa grabbed them up and threw them into the waste-basket.

Then she saw, beside the basket, a handkerchief. It was a green, that it belonged to Natalie. Gingerly, Phillipa picked it up and dropped it on the violets. She wiped her fingers fastidiously. The handkerchief had been wet. Phillipa couldn't help wondering if Natalie had left it as a token of her weeping. It should have been an effecting touch had Alan found it, she thought.

Over the handkerchief she threw a piece of paper. After that she opened the window and let the faint breeze of perfume hung on the air. It might be the odor of the violets, though Phillipa did not believe that it was. More likely, it was the perfume Natalie used, she conjectured. Alan might recognize it.

She opened another window and only when the room had grown chilly, did she close them.

She had been, for several moments, indifferent to the change in temperature. For she was warm with the excitement of a scheme that had popped into her mind all of a sudden while she was thinking of Natalie's visit there.

She was working it out with medical ease. She could tell Alan that Natalie had come in after he telephoned, and that she did not know what she wanted. She could say that Natalie had asked to renew the quarrel.

The rest—well, there was always a chance that any plot would fail. But this one would not. It would be too good to try.

Phillipa had looked up the letter from Bernadine and scanned it carefully. Yes, it could be done! She got up and started to lock the door. . . . better to get her own things. She went out and got what she wanted. Back in the private office she locked the door, with as little noise as possible.

Then she flew to Alan's desk and seated herself there. She began her work with infinite patience. She should interrupt her work, she was not likely to, but should he—she was prepared to say that she'd locked herself in for a little cry.

It did not take long, with all her care, to complete her task. She held the finished product up before her and studied it with growing satisfaction and elation.

Certainly Alan would not discover what she had done, she assured herself.

"It's fortunate that I could pick a bum stock that would fit in the same space," she reflected gloatingly. This is just as sure a bet as the other—only it's in reverse," she laughed. "Phillipa, you're so constipated!"

As a craftsman, she was indeed to be congratulated. Where Bernadine had written the name of the stock she wished Alan to buy for her, Phillipa had written one that she knew to be unsound. But not too unsound; that might arouse suspicion. And there was only the slightest roughness of the paper to show that she had done; except the handwriting, which she had hand-drawn closely and detect a difference.

"And who is going to do that?" Phillipa asked herself complacently.

She was preparing to go back to her own desk, when she noticed that she had worn her eraser down considerably between cleaning it and using it.

She sat down again at the desk and opened the top drawer of it from which she took a new eraser. It was not a kind that she liked; that was why she'd gone for her own, but it would have been a damaging oversight to provide no evidence that the substitution of names had been made at Alan's desk—where Natalie had sat alone so long!

Satisfied, now, Phillipa went to type furiously on some neglected statements. She left Bernadine's letter in a drawer of Alan's desk.

They were not to buy the stock she wanted until the following morning, Phillipa felt she had another point upon which to congratulate herself. Had Bernadine followed the usual procedure and directed Alan to buy when the stock was a certain figure, it would have been difficult to substitute another and pick one that was unsound.

But, with a definite time set for the buying, it was easy for Phillipa to carry out her plot. Should Alan not come in the next day before ten o'clock she would see that the order was executed. She preferred Alan to handle the letter and have no doubt of its genuineness

Cotton Frocks Show Smart Preference

By ANNETTE
With the new more feminine fashions, cottons have assumed an air of importance. They are noted in the most exclusive frocks of semi-social character worn for all-day occasions.

The one sketched chooses dotted voile and is thoroughly practical. It is flattering violet-blue coloring and worn with a felt hat of matching shade.

It will be found most useful. It will meet so many daytime needs gracefully.

The belted collar arrangement that is held with stitching at the lower part is very slimming. Another interesting feature is the low placement of the circular buttons. The belt is worn at the becoming natural waistline.

Style No. 723 can be had in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust.

Each-pink shantung, yellow flat washable crepe, sweet olive green linen, striped silk shirting and printed handkerchief lawn in lime green tones are lovely summery suggestions.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

What is an impulse? It is a desire to do something, something that the mind of the child originates and commands the body to carry out.

Later in life, when a child has experience behind him, the mind will discriminate in the orders it sends out for the body to obey. But when he is little and his mind is just discovering itself and trying to expand and grow and get impressions, it sends out almost any sort of order for him to carry out.

Mind-growth and mind-discipline should never conflict. Yet we are quick when children are little to do this very thing to them. We suppress impulses perfectly harmless in themselves just because we can't keep a finger out of the pie. And we are forever trying to guide these impulses until we have the inevitable result—suppression, irritability, lack of confidence, fear. Also out of this special suppression comes indecision.

It sounds so very technical, but it is very simple. Let me give you a simple illustration that may make it clear.

For instance, a baby will walk when he is ready, not before his motor nerves for walking mature. We try to show him how to hold things. He won't until there is coordination between his mind and his hand muscles. In other words nature has a specific time for every impulse in a child to develop, and develop it will. We must be patient.

Mental Impulses Develop

Now these are mere physical illustrations of the other thing. For the mental impulses develop in their own time exactly as the physical ones do.

We do exactly the same thing with the little child regarding his other steps. We either interfere or try to hurry his little experiments, as we think we know better than nature does the time to settle.

Suppose a child a year or two old is playing on the floor with his toys. His sister or his brother or his mother comes along and watches him.

He takes his spoons and hammers on his old pan with them. But instantly his sister or his brother or his mother interferes. "No, no, that's not the way. Mustn't!" And they take the spoons and hang them around his neck and all the pan with water and call the dog to drink.

Now that's all very fine with the baby. He watches with interest, but his own mental lesson has been lost. His mind was experimenting on the cause and effect of noise. Two things brought together make noise.

Multiply this trifle by a dozen such things in a day and count up the days. The effect will not be noticeable at the time, but its influence is cumulative and far-reaching. Divergent impulses are only repressed. Naturally, as he grows older these impulses must be guided sensibly to conform with social law.

—He can't be an outlaw—but if kept up continually, something fundamental is lost.

One great principal of development in a young child is that "impulses are allowed to work themselves out to a conclusion." Let him put his tin soldier in his shoe for his doll on the smoke stack of the toy engine. And let him alone. He is learning dimension and balance. Put him in a safe room by himself, with safe toys, for an hour or so at a time so that nothing diverts him. Keep your weather eye on him, of course, but don't let him see you.

At other times he may be with the children. That's all right, too, but he needs time alone. This, by the way, is the secret of concentration later in life. "Uninterrupted impulses carried to a conclusion."

COVERS SHOULD FIT TIGHTLY ON GALVANIZED CANS
By William H. Baldwin

In good galvanized cans the bottoms are heavier than the sides and are "dished." That is, they slant toward the center, permitting fluid matter or moisture to settle there rather than at the seamed edges.

The covers of garbage cans should fit snugly to shut off fumes or odors. Give preference to garbage cans with a locking device on the cover.

All cans for use in an apartment house should have re-enforced metal strips on the side and bottom, so that they will not wear out quickly if repeatedly dragged along the cellar floor or banged on the side of a track when emptied.

A rimmed bottom for ash and garbage cans provides for free circulation of air underneath and so prevents rusting.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

CONTROL OF CHILD'S POSTURE CAN HELP AVOID RHEUMATISM LATER

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Anyone with a pain, ache, or trouble anywhere in his bones, muscles, or joints is likely to say that he has rheumatism.

Arthritis is the scientific word for a pain in a joint. It may, of course, be rheumatism involving muscles and not localized in the joints. Dr. Ralph Pemberton has described in Hygiene two types of arthritis—one affecting people particularly at and below mid-life, which runs a crippling and devastating course; the other affecting people beyond middle life and likely to be a little milder.

While rheumatic constitutions are not inherited, apparently the body structure or makeup which is rheumatic runs in families. Pemberton describes the rheumatic type as people with fat chests, weak backs and prominent abdomens who do not stand the strain and stress incidental to fatigue, worry or hard work. If the child tends to be of this body structure, the parents may do much for it by early education in posture and by proper control in posture and by proper control of its general hygiene and diet.

The information has been widely circulated for many years that the chief cause of a rheumatic attack is infection at the roots of the teeth or the tonsils. Not all people who have infection at the roots of the teeth or in the tonsils have rheumatism, but many people who have rheumatism have infection at the roots of the teeth and in the tonsils.

Obviously there are other factors besides the possibility of the germ getting into the blood, and locating in the joints. If a person's diet is bad, if his general hygiene is bad, if he is of a body type that tends toward rheumatic infection, the germ is more likely to set up a disturbance than in a person not so afflicted.

Doctor Pemberton emphasizes particularly the importance of rest for the rheumatic type. Indeed, because of the fatigue which is so commonly manifested by these people, he insists there should be periods of rest twice a day, one in the middle of the morning and one in the middle of the afternoon, of about one and a half hours each, during which time the patient should lie nearly flat and during which he should rest completely.

Among certain forms of treatment which have particular value for the rheumatic type, is massage, the application of heat and the use of sunlight. Massage can be given properly only by a trained masseur. Light rubbing can be carried out by anyone, particularly if some instruction is had from a masseur. The physician or the trained masseur knows enough to avoid motion to inflame joints.

Doctor Pemberton mentions particularly the value of heat applied to the painful portions and light massage to the points of the body thereat.

Portable Electric Cookers

The Manchester Electric Company begins a campaign on Monday to stimulate the sales of the Corona and Ever-Hot electric portable cookers, with unusually attractive inducements to church organizations and clubs. Mrs. Marion Rowe, home economist with the company has been giving practical lecture-demonstrations recently before different groups of local women and a number of sales have resulted. They are not expensive to run. For instance, Mrs. Rowe experimented with a large quantity of baked beans, six quarts I believe she told me, which were done to perfection at a cost for current of only 4 1/2 cents. This was accomplished by turning the current from the high mark, 500 to 100 the lowest, and shows they are not expensive to run.

At the meeting in Bolton one evening this week Mrs. Rowe cooked four-pound roasts, eight large potatoes, two bunches of carrots and a dessert, simultaneously. When the current is turned off and the cooker disconnected the meal will stay hot the greater part of two hours. This is a distinct advantage when you become picnic minded, or want to visit lake or shore cottages for the day and have a hot, satisfying meal.

Garden enthusiasts will have a happy and busy time next week attending flower shows—what with the one in East Hartford Monday and Tuesday, the local club's show at the Masonic Temple Tuesday and Wednesday and the Connecticut Valley club's show at the old state house in Hartford Wednesday and Thursday, in which the Connecticut Horticultural society is co-operating. Let's hope the weather man will send plenty of sunshine for the next few days.

New Stories of Coolidge Life in the White House

Marion Pollard Burrows, cousin of Ex-President Calvin Coolidge, who as a girl frequently visited them at the White House, now feels free to write about many of the little incidents in the life of the first family. One Christmas while Calvin Junior was alive she went shopping for a gift for Mrs. Coolidge while the family was having their photograph taken ensemble. These were the last pictures ever taken of the younger son and are much prized by them. Miss Pollard decided upon a piece of lingerie. In reply to the clerk's inquiry as to whether or not it was for herself, she replied that it was for her cousin, Mrs. Coolidge. Whereupon the clerk insisted on sending a "few pieces" for selection. When the truck arrived, she found they had sent a thousand dollars worth of lingerie. She selected a single piece at a cost of $7.50, all she could afford, and wondered what the store folks thought of Coolidge's frugality.

Life at the White House was exceedingly simple. Mr. Coolidge would be the first to leave his bedroom in the morning, then followed Mrs. Coolidge, the boys and Marion, always late for the 7:45 breakfast. The president, who was a stickler for punctuality, would call attention to it. He had his little jokes and pleasantries, however, but Mrs. Coolidge, according to Mrs. Burrows, was always pleasant and easy going, and Calvin Junior responded her in disposition though he was quiet like all the Coolidges.

At a ball one evening Secretary Mellon asked Marion to dance, but the president would not permit either Mrs. Coolidge or her to go on the ballroom floor. He was very set in his opinions and the first lady never argued with him. When Secretary Mellon asked to be permitted to present some of the young men, "Cousin Calvin" refused and that settled it. After an hour at the ball, for which the women folks had been spending hours getting ready, the president announced "It's time to go." And they departed.

Girl Scout News

Annual Rally

The annual rally at High School Hall May 23 opened at 7 p. m. with the bugle call "assembly" played by Eleanor Fatten. The Drum and Bugle Corps played as the scouts, 120 in number, entered, led by the color bearers carrying the American and troop flags. Mrs. Frederick Snow, deputy commissioner, led the scouts in the salute to the flag, singing the Star-Spangled Banner, and the Girl Scout promise and laws. After the scouts were seated, the Drum and Bugle Corps, led by Barbara Alderman, played, and march ed. The playing and appearance of the Corps, all of whose 25 members were uniformly dressed alike, was very favorably commented on by Mrs. Clifford Perkins, the speaker of the evening.

Mrs. Stephen Hale, chairman of the camp committee, told the scouts about the camps open to Manchester Girl Scouts this summer. These are the Lake Gardner camp, under the direction of the New London council; Job's Pond camp, the Merritt, Britain council; and the New England camp, under the direction of the Lake Gardner camp last year, and the camp is being further improved this year. Job's Pond camp, the Merritt, Britain council, and the New England camp are especially fine camps for those interested in the Rock Tapper badge. Camp Merritt is at East Hartland. Applications for admission to this camp are sent in only after June 1, as the Hartford scouts have a first choice. Captain Agard, troop 8, will be hostess at Camp Merritt during August. Mrs. Hale will be glad to answer any questions about these camps, and applications blanks can be obtained from the Scout headquarters. Manchester itself has a regular camp, but is planning a day at Bolton Lake on the land which E. J. Holl is allowing the scouts to use. A temporary building will be erected, and the camp will be open on definite days in charge of some one qualified to give tests. It will probably be arranged so that those interested in one subject can attend the camp on the same days.

After Mrs. Hale's talk, the scout sang "Hello" to Mrs. Perkins, introduced by Mrs. W. M. Brownell, commissioner. Mrs. Perkins told about the introduction of Scouting in England by Lord Baden-Powell. Scouting was at first only for boys, but one day it was noticed that a parade there was a group of people that were dressed like boys, but did not look like boys. Of course, they were girls, and they and other girls wanted the fun of Scouting so much that a program was planned for them. So that girls have Scouting because they wanted it and asked for it. Girl Scouting is a free time program, Mrs. Perkins said. In these busy modern times people sometimes wonder if they have any free time, but they really have much more free time, given by modern labor-saving devices, than people in days gone by. The problem is to put too much into free time, but to put what is worth while. Girls and leaders should have a good time in Girl Scouting. If they do not, there is something wrong with their kind of Scouting, or possibly with themselves. Mrs. Perkins told the familiar story of David and the giant, and told the scouts that each one of them should always have with them, like David, five round stones, which she named courtesy, courage, health, simplicity, and faith.

Mrs. Erownell and Mrs. Robert Hawley, chairman of the awards committee, presented the following badges:

Scout aide, Captain Reinartz, Captain Buckland; health winner, Florence Henschel, Marguerite Annis, Suzanne Batson, Jane Grant, Elizabeth Polyott, Bernice Skolsky, Mary Marowski, Thelma Jackson, Gladys Farrington; first aide, Captain Agard; home nurse, Captain Burch; Captain Welles; Captain Johnson, Captain Agard; laundress, Katherine Fike; cook, Margaret Bushnell, Bernice Skolsky; needlewoman, Marguerite Annis, Suzanne Batson, Mary Marowski, Bernice Skolsky; housekeeper, Esther Pickles, Captain Welles; handywoman, Jean Woodruff; 50 hours home service, Jean Woodruff, Anna Daley, Anna Chaponis, Clarissa Wood; 150 hours home service, Evelyn Beaudry, Marguerite Annis, Clarissa Wood; 300 hours home service, Merle Shortt, Suzanne Batson, Elizabeth Polyott; home service badge (500 hours) Esther Pickles, Bella Silverstein.

Garden flower finder, Dorothy Jensen; observer, Merle Shortt, Jane Bantly, Edith McComb, Dorothy Jensen, Marguerite Annis, Mary Marowski, Elizabeth Polyott, Thelma Jackson, Bernice Skolsky; wild-flower finder, Captain Burch, Captain Welles, Eunice Brown, Captain Johnson, Captain Agard; scholarship, Jane Bantly, Bella Silverstein; electrician, Captain Reinerstein; bugler, Eleanor Fatten; craftsman, Bella Silverstein; citizen, Edith McComb; scribe, Esther Pickles.

Second class, Evelyn Beaudry, Priscilla Pillsbury, Eleanor Fatten, Louise Anderson, Clarissa Wood, Barbara Stollenfeld, Mrs. Snow, Evelyn Wilson, silver stars (90 per cent attendance), Phyllis Barrett, Kathleen Thompson, Jane Bantly, Merle Shortt, Jean Woodruff, Irene Kisman, Barbara Alderman, Arline Dougan, Florence Henschel, Ruth Cheney, Emma Kaiser, Roberta Hansen; gold stars (perfect attendance), Shirley Stevens, Edith McComb, Ruth Lieberg, Teresa Britton, Ruth Britton, Lillian Schiebel, Marjorie May, Esther Pickles, Catherine Wilson.

Mrs. Perkins presented five-year service stripes to Pearl Martin and Reinerstein Patten and first class badges to Captain Burch, Captain Welles, Eunice Brown, Dorothy Jensen, Captain Johnson, and Captain Agard.

After the presentation of badges, all the scouts sang "America the Beautiful," "Everywhere You Go Today," and the rally song, closing with "The Golden Sun Sinks in the West," sung in the good-night circle, followed by "Taps" sung by all the scouts and played on the bugle by Eleanor Fatten.

A considerable number of friends and relatives of the Manchester Girl Scouts attended the rally.

An invitation has been extended to the Manchester Girl Scouts to take part in the Memorial Day parade, May 30. Every Girl Scout who wishes to do a patriotic good turn is asked to be on hand at 2:15 on the south side of the road opposite Cheney Hall. Please wear complete uniform, including hat, tie in a square knot with back of the folded and stockings or black shoes and stockings, especially not socks of any kind.

Brownies
Mrs. Frederick Snow, Mrs. Robert Dewey, and Louise and Betty Dewey attended a Brownie Revel Saturday, May 18, in Keeney Park. Mrs. H. L. Locke, Brownie state chairman, was in charge of the interesting program put on by the Brownies.

There will be a party at High School Hall June 7 for the members of this troop. The party will begin at the regular meeting time. Each girl is requested to bring five cents besides her dues.

Robert Hansen, scribe.

Troop 2
The last meeting of the troop until fall was held at the home of Captain Norton May 27. Outdoor games were played, and each party gave a short play on the third part of the promise. All the girls then sat around the fireplace fire, while Ruth Crough and Harriet Taggart told about their trip to the Massachusetts Review. Refreshments were served, and the troop sang its entire repertoire of sixteen songs, closing with "Taps." Mrs. Austin visited the meeting.

Troop 5
May 26, after a short meeting, the girls who had brought their lunch went to the Golf Links and played games. Next Monday, June 2, all members are requested to bring their lunch.

Eleanor Fatten, scribe.

Troop 6
The meeting on Monday, May 26, was opened with the horseshoe formation and investing of Bernice Baldwin. Patrol corners were then held. Signaling, fire prevention, and first aid were practiced. Jean Thorpe passed second class signaling. Bernice Baldwin, Beatrice Rockwell, Mary Smith, and Marie Noonan passed fire prevention. There is to be a party for all girls who have paid their dues and registration on Monday, June 2, at the Manchester Green School. The meeting was closed with the good-night circle and taps.

Barbara Stollenfeld, scribe.

Troop 8
The last meeting of troop 8 was held at the Porter Street School, May 27, where the girls all enjoyed a party. Sandwiches, cake, peanuts and lemonade were served. After the refreshments, games were played. The party ended at 5:30 with a goodnight circle, singing the promise song and repeating the promise, closing with "Taps."

Lois Agard, scribe.

STUDENTS TAPPED.
Providence, R. I., May 29.—(AP)—Ten members of the Junior class at Brown University were "tapped" in chapel this morning, signifying their election as members of the Cammarian Club, student government body at the college. Paul A. M. Snyder of Franklin, Pa., was tapped first. Another was Theodore G. Anderson, Whiteyville, Conn.

NEWSPAPER NOVEL
COMING TO STATE

"Young Man of Manhattan," Miss Katherine Brush's Famous Story Here Friday, Saturday.

Never since "Gentlemen of the Press" has the talking screen brought forth such an amazingly stirring romance-drama of newspaper life as "Young Man of Manhattan," the feature attraction at the State for Friday and Saturday. Love dominates this red-blooded, mile-a-minute modern day romance.

It is the story of two people who want to live their own lives after marriage and have love, too. Katherine Brush, popular magazine writer, and a native of Middletown, Conn., created "Young Man of Manhattan" as a Saturday Evening Post serial. Then the story was published in novel form and ran into several editions.

Claudette Colbert the charming heroine of "The Lady Lies," plays the part of Ann Vaughn, who "only rode on men's laps on the third Monday in May." Her eyes are dark, her hair is brown. She has a straight little nose, a model chin, pointed yet soft, and dark lashes. Norman Foster, Broadway star, has the title role. He is the Toby McLean created by Miss Brush, and whom she describes as follows: "He was born at high noon on a flash-bang Fourth of July at a summer resort; and everything in his life has been like that. Where he was, things happened, things began." Charles Ruggles plays the part of Shorty Ross, a wise-cracking fellow-reporter who helps the lovers to repair their domestic fences.

The surrounding program includes two selected Vitaphone acts, an all talking comedy and the latest sound news. Norma Shearer will be seen and heard at the State in her latest and most sensational talking picture, "The Divorcee," for three days starting Sunday night.

STATE'S POPULATION

New Haven, May 29.—(AP)—The tabulation of population figures in the census from the five districts in Connecticut reached 137 out of 169 towns over night.

BESSIE AMIOTT DUNN vs. CHARLES A. DUNN, State of Connecticut, County of Hartford, the 20th day of May, 1930.

ORDER OF NOTICE

Upon complaint in said cause brought to said Court at Hartford said County, on the 1st Tuesday of June, 1930, claiming a divorce, change of name, if appearing to and being found by the subscribing authority that the whereabouts of the defendant, Charles A. Dunn is unknown to the plaintiff.

ORDERED—That notice of the institution and pendency of said complaint shall be given, the defendant by publishing this order in the Manchester Herald, a newspaper published in Manchester, once a week, for two successive weeks, commencing on or before May 22, 1930.

HARMON D. SEALNEN,
Assistant Clerk of Said Court.

OPENING STOCKS

New York, May 29.—(AP)—The Stock Market was firm at the opening today.

Westinghouse Electric, Byers, Billiard, and Vanadium gained a point each, and U. S. Steel, trading ex-dividend, Worthington Pump, Standard of California, and Dupont gained 1-2 to 3/4.

Allied Chemical, however, lost 1-2, and Reading lost 3-4.

The market worked irregularly during the first half hour, with speculation for the rise largely divided between the food and utility shares. Ralls were distinctly heavy, reflecting the unfavorable earnings reports for April.

A reduction in the Bank of England rate from 3 to 2 1/2, per cent had been expected in some quarters, and the fact that no change was made may have dampened bullish enthusiasm, but ambitious undertakings the day before a three-day closing would be unlikely in any case.

Many traders, expecting a dull market today, left towns for an extended week-end yesterday.

National Dairy Products opened with a block of 8600 shares, and moved up a point to a new 1930 high. Gold Dust, Loose Wiles, United Biscuit, National Tea, and Corn Products moved up about a point. Among the more swiftly moving shares, Worthington extended its rise to 3 points, recording a new high for the year. Case and Columbian Carbon mounted 5 points.

Other shares showing gains of a point or so included U. S. Steel, Nash, National Cash Register, Drug, American and Foreign Power, and International Harvester. Air Reduction mounted 2 points.

Chesapeake and Ohio broke 8 points. Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific, 2 points, and Stone and Webster and Coca Cola 1.

Foreign exchanges opened barely steady, with sterling cables at $4.85 31-32 off 1-32.

Taken by virtue of an execution to me directed and will be sold at Public Vendue to the highest bidder at 28 Oak St., in the Town of Manchester, Conn., fourteen days after this date which will be on Tuesday, the 27th day of May, 1930, at 9 a. m. Standard Time, in the forenoon to satisfy execution and my fees thereon, the following described property, to wit: Counter, bread case, two coffee uras, one hot water boiler, 2 gas heaters, one griddle, pipe, sink, dishes, knives and kitchen table.

Attest:

Constable.

RAU'S PAVILION OFFERS MANY ATTRACTIONS

Crystal Lake will be thickly populated this week when a large holiday crowd will attend the various dances and attractions there.

Memorial Day, Charlie Miller and his well known orchestra will furnish the dance music at Rau's Pavilion. Charlie Miller has an organization of skilled musicians and entertainers capable of pleasing the most fastidious music lovers. You will not want to sit out a single dance when Charlie's boys tease you to the floor.

Saturday night, May 31st, Leo Roy and his Spanish Cavaliers will make their first appearance at Crystal Lake, perfect rhythm of each number, whether it be a fast fox trot that makes the youngsters tap feet and sway or a shadowy dream waltz, awakens pleasant memories. The Cavaliers are essentially dance artists.

Dancing will be from eight-thirty to twelve-thirty both nights and the dance public is invited to come early and stay late.

BUYS HISTORIC CLUB

Andover Mass., May 29.—(AP)—The Archaeological Department of Phillips Academy announced today that it had purchased from an aged woman in Maine an Indian war club which, according to tradition, once was the property of King Philip, warring leader of the Narragansett tribe. The name of the seller was not disclosed.

The club, according to its story, was taken from King Phillip by an Indian who shot and killed him at Mount Hope, R. I., August 12, 1676 and was obtained later by Rev. John and was obtained later by Rev. John Cheikley of the Episcopal church of Providence. It was supposed to have been handed down to succeeding generations until it reached the late owners.

The weapon, which is on exhibition at the academy, is fashioned from maple, highly polished and dark with age.

GIVE MANCHESTER GIRL PARTY IN ROCKVILLE

Miss Gladys Knowles Who Is to Wed Next Month Is Showered by Friends.

The home of Miss Helen and Miss Anna Hendricks of 140 Prospect street was the scene of a delightful gathering of school teachers of the Maple street school in Rockville last evening, when a shower was tendered Miss Gladys Knowles of this town, teacher of the kindergarten room at the school. She will be married next month to Benjamin F. Creboe of Springfield, Mass.

Miss Knowles was invited to the Hendricks' home for the evening and upon her arrival found a party was planned in her honor. She soon entered into the spirit of the occasion and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

The trail of the wedding bells was a feature of the evening and for an hour the bride-to-be was on the trail looking for the various gifts which were hidden in all parts of the house. On each gift was information leading to the next one, and at the end of the trail she found a beautiful doll and underneath was a pretty banjo clock, the gift of the teachers. All other gifts were utensils.

The dining room decorations were most attractive and a work of art, the color scheme being orchid and yellow and represented a Maypole party and was perfect in every detail. A large umbrella hung over the center of the table and from this was a shower of roses and streamers extending to each plate, where a doll was in evidence, dressed in paper in the color scheme. A large wedding cake containing many small gifts was an added feature and the center decoration.

NO HERALD TOMORROW

The Herald will not be issued tomorrow, Memorial Day.

ration was a large arch and wedding bell, beneath this an attractive bride and groom. The entire color scheme was carried out even to the refreshments, which consisted of chicken salad, rolls, cake and ice cream, the latter being in heart shape form.

The shower was most elaborate and the Misses Hendricks received much praise from the guests for the manner in which the party was carried out.

It was late when all left for home with best wishes for the bride-to-be for a most happy future. Those in the party were: Misses Mary Wendhiser, Hattie Berr, Charlotte Drescher, Modeste Dubay, Ethel Backus, Anne Herring, Margaret Bornheim, Anna and Helen Hendricks, Mrs. Carrie Forster and Mrs. Beattie Heck of this city; Mrs. A. Knowles and Miss Gladys Knowles of South Manchester.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Miss Mary Ferguson of South Main street left today for Boston. It is her custom to go there each Memorial day to decorate the grave of her brother, the late William Ferguson, formerly of Drake Post, G. A. R. of this town.

FORMING POOL TO FIGHT WASHING MACHINE WRITS

Local Persons Served With Notice to Appear in Court Club Together to Engage Lawyer.

A number of Manchester persons who purchased washing machines from the defunct Electrical Appliance Corporation and who have been served with writs at the instance of the purchaser of the corporation's receivable accounts, are taking action to pool their interests and engage a lawyer to represent them in the city court at New London where the writs are made returnable on June 9.

It is understood that the suits are not brought to replevin the machines on which installments have not been paid, but to recover the balance due, together with the considerable charges of collection, and the defendant purchasers are fearful that if they let the suits go by default the attorneys for the new creditor will obtain judgments under which they might later take out execution against any property owned by the debtors.

In practically every instance the failure to pay installments resulted from the liquidation of the selling corporation and the uncertainty of the purchasers as to whom the payments should be made. In many cases the amount involved is small and the costs of the suits brought would be disproportionately large. For that reason the persons sued are planning to club together in the retaining of a lawyer to look after their interests.

NEW DEPUTY SHERIFF SERVES TAX WARRANTS

Deputy Sheriff James H. Johnston is at work for the state tax commissioner's office checking up unpaid taxes of companies not incorporated. He has nearly two dozen warrants that he is to check up that have not been recorded as paid. In cases where the name of the person or company is in error he is to make corrections and report on those that no longer exist. This is being done in order to correct the records in the tax commissioner's office.

Mr. Johnston's appointment as deputy sheriff by Sheriff Edward W. Dewey was announced in The Herald last Saturday.

CLASS DAY PLANNED TUESDAY, JUNE 17

Seniors Have Annual Frolic Then; Exercises to Be in Educational Square.

Class Day exercises at Manchester High school have been arranged with thought of the possibility of adverse weather. The annual affair is down for Tuesday, June 17, so that in case of bad weather, it can be held the next day, Wednesday, June 18. High school graduation will be Friday night, June 19.

The Class Day exercises will be held in Educational Square instead of in the tennis courts in the rear of the school where they were held for many years. Educational Square is considered a much more appropriate place with its grass carpet. The presentation of gifts is to take place in the afternoon but the prophesy and class dance will be in the evening in the school assembly hall.

The Highland Lassies are planning for a large crowd at the dance they are to conduct Saturday evening at the Highland Park Community club. Both modern and old-fashioned numbers will be on the program. Griswold Chappell will be promoter. Refreshments will be sold and a collection taken.
