

ZEP OVER ATLANTIC ON HOMEWARD TRIP

Making About 90 Miles an Hour Favored by a Tail Wind; Changes Course to Head for Seville, Spain.

BULLETIN:
London, June 3.—(AP)—A radio dispatch to the Associated Press from the master of the steamship America says: "Passed the Graf Zeppelin at 1:30 p. m. G. M. T. North 40:22, West 58:11, flying about 3,400 feet high. Fine weather."
By Associated Press
Homebound bound with a bit in her teeth, the Graf Zeppelin today was speeding east over the North Atlantic at a pace approximately 90 miles an hour.
Taking off from the naval station at Lakehurst, N. J., at 9:12 (E. S. T.) last night she reported her position twelve hours later as 40:18 North, 57:30 West, approximately 750 miles due West of New York City.
From 5 a. m. to 9 a. m. she had traveled 358 miles, which would place her average speed at 89.7 miles an hour. Although the message did not say, it was presumed she was favored by a tail wind as her average cruising speed is around 60 miles an hour.
After soaring over New York City and Long Island last night in a farewell salute, she headed northwest up the North Atlantic coast. After 5 o'clock she changed her course to ward the southeast and Seville, her first stop on her way home to Friedrichshafen.

REPORTS POSITION
New York, June 3.—(AP)—The Hamburg-American line received a radiogram from the Graf Zeppelin today, reporting her position at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.) as 40:18 North and 57:30 West, almost 750 miles due east of New York. At 5 a. m., the Graf was 500 miles northeast of New York, indicating she had changed her course from northeast to southeast and travelled approximately 358 miles in the last four hours.

New York, June 3.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, today expressed his appreciation to the American people for their hospitality.

HISTORIC COLLEGE SCENE OF TRAGEDY

Student at Cambridge University, England, Kills Tutor, Then Shoots Self.

Cambridge, Eng., June 3.—(AP)—In a sensational shooting tragedy in historic Cambridge University this afternoon, D. N. Potts, a first year student at King's College, was alleged by police to have shot and killed his tutor, A. F. R. Wollaston.
Potts also was alleged to have shot and wounded Detective Sergeant Wilson of the Cambridge police force before turning his revolver on himself.
Potts is in a hospital in a serious condition.
Dean Milner-White of King's College said that Potts returned to the college today after a week's absence.
"On his return he went into Wollaston's room," said the dean. "Some time later shots were heard."
When the room was entered Potts was still breathing but Wollaston was dead.
"A detective sergeant of the Cambridge police was also lying seriously injured," continued Dean Milner-White. "I do not know how the police officer was present in the room, whether he went in with Potts or was called in during the interview. I have been told there is no hope of Potts' recovery."
The dean then added: "I should like to make it clear that Potts was in every way well and generously treated here. When he left King's College a week ago, there was nothing against him—at any rate nothing of a serious nature. He was a 'victory' scholar having come to the college from Lancing, Sussex, with a scholarship of £80 yearly. He appeared to be doing quite well. His father has offices in London."
The dean said that Wollaston, the tutor, was one of the best men in Cambridge as well as one of the most distinguished. He was widely known as an explorer. He leaves a widow and two little children.
At the hospital Potts was reported in a critical condition.
Detective Sergeant Willis who is in the same hospital with bullet wounds in the shoulder and leg, was said to be fairly comfortable.
According to one Cambridge authority Potts had been absent without leave for some days and was in the tutor's room being interrogated regarding this.

WAR IN CHINA FLARES AGAIN; BATTLE NEARS

Reports Indicate 400,000 Troops Are Facing Each Other on Honan Front; Expect General Advance.

Shanghai, June 3.—(AP)—After an apparently brief cessation of hostilities between the Nationalist government and the Northern alliance which is seeking to create an independent government in north China centering at Peiping, advances from the Honan province today indicated renewed fighting is imminent.
Despatches indicated that at least 400,000 troops might oppose each other on the Honan front.
The Nationalists were reported to have increased their forces to at least 150,000, indicating that Chiang Kai Shek has ordered a general advance and lending strength to the belief that renewed hostilities are imminent.
A third battle line is extended along the Peiping-Hankow railway southward to Chengchow. The Nationalist claim that their forces are steadily advancing on this front, while the Northerners asserted today that they had shattered the Nationalist threat against the northern headquarters at Chengchow.
Expect Sharp Fighting
Sharp fighting on all fronts is generally anticipated. The Nationalists are particularly seeking to penetrate the enemy territory north of Chengchow, planning to destroy the Peiping-Hankow railway bridge over the Yellow river, 18 miles north of Chengchow, thereby crippling the Northerners' principal avenue of supplies from the north.
However, the northern forces have airplanes, artillery units, and anti-aircraft guns strategically located in the vicinity of the steel span, two miles long, the longest bridge in China.
Rebels Join Bands
An additional factor unfavorable to the Nanking government, weakening its offensive military power, has developed in Hunan province, where a motley horde of Kwangsi province anti-Nanking rebels has joined hands with a strong bandit force. The result is the so-called "Red Army" which has been advancing northward professedly with the intention of laying siege to the Wuhan cities—Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang.
This "Red Army" already is threatening Changsha, 220 miles south of Wuchang, causing foreigners there to ask for protection of foreign gunboats.
As a result, it was revealed today

BURIED BY BLAST ENGINEER RESCUED

Trapped in Wreckage for Over Two Hours While Firemen Dig Him Out.

New York, June 3.—(AP)—Buried to his neck in the wreckage of a building demolished by a boiler explosion, a stationary engineer was fed restoratives for more than two hours today while police and fire emergency squads dug him out.
John Terzyski, 65 years old, of Elmhurst, Queens, was on duty in the boiler room of a rendering plant in Brooklyn, shortly after midnight when the boiler exploded. The explosion hurled the boiler from the basement through the first and second floors and the roof of the building.
Caught in Wreckage.
The engineer was caught beneath the wreckage with only his head visible when rescuers reached him. Before police and firemen attempted to remove the debris which held him fast, they shored up remaining portions of the building for fear they would fall and crush the imprisoned man.
During the two hours and a half required to dig him out, an ambulance surgeon administered stimulants to keep up his strength. At Queensboro hospital he was found to be suffering from a fracture of the skull and a broken leg.
The cause of the explosion was not determined.

There's Politics in the Air!

A famous young man was the chauffeur of the plane which brought Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow back to Newark, N. J., from a political meeting in Atlantic City the other day. Here you see Morrow being assisted from the plane. Now look in the front cockpit. Recognize the driver? He's Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, son-in-law of the New Jersey senatorial candidate. The famous flyer has not commented on whether he will campaign for Morrow.

CONGRESS UPSETS PRESIDENT'S VETO BINGHAM FAVORS DRY LAW REPEAL

Both Houses Pass Spanish War Veterans' Bill by Big Majorities.

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—President Hoover said today he had not changed his opinion that the Spanish-American war veterans pension bill enacted over his veto yesterday by Congress was unwise. "I favored a liberalization of the Spanish war veteran pensions, Hoover said, 'because they have not been on a parity with other services, but I have not changed my opinion that it should have been worked out in such a way that rich men, or men having substantial incomes, should not draw pensions from the government."
No Pauper Provision
"I have made no suggestion at any time of a pauper provision against veterans or anything akin thereto."
"I do not believe we should alter the principles which have been held for Civil War veterans all these 70 years, requiring that men claiming pensions should have at least 90 days service."
"Further than this, I do not believe it is right to change our national policy and to call upon the nation to pay disability allowances to men who have or who may tomorrow destroy their health by vicious habits."
"I have received numerous communications from veterans supporting those views."

GOES FURTHER
Senator Bingham, however, has gone further than a number of his colleagues in this matter, inasmuch as he has just declared himself in an interview here as an advocate of repeal.

"Personally," he said, "I favor the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment provided there goes with the repeal such action as would prevent the return of the old saloon system. I have repeatedly expressed the belief that this form of regulation ought to be left to the states. It goes without saying that if my state expressed itself in a referendum I would feel obliged to reflect the expression in my vote in the Senate."

KING GEORGE 65 YEARS OLD TODAY

Keeps Indoors While His Uncle Reviews Troops; Recovering from Illness.

London, June 3.—(AP)—King George today celebrated his 65th birthday, remaining quietly in Buckingham Palace while his more robust uncle, the Duke of Connaught took the royal salute at the "trooping of the colors."
Hundreds of messages of congratulation from all over England and other countries poured in to him.
Principal among the official celebrations was the ancient ceremony of trooping the colors by regiments of guards on the famous Horse Guards, parade.
Queen Mary and other royal ladies watched the parade from the windows of the government offices. King George stayed indoors because of a recent attack of rheumatism.

Greater City Idea In U. S. Spreading Like Wildfire

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—A new and modern concept of a city—that is the sum of itself and all its suburbs, commercially speaking—has brought an avalanche of requests for announcements by the Census Bureau of "greater thus-and-so."
These letters may result in a separate listing of greater Miami, greater Cleveland, greater Louisville, greater San Francisco, and others so that the city of today may be considered from its "trade territory" aspect as well as according to its geographical boundary lines and political entity.
Favors Innovation.

CRAZED FELONS FLEE HOSPITAL; 11 AT LIBERTY

Five Slayers Among Those Who Escape; Armed With Knives They Force Guards to Open Gates.

Ionia, Mich., June 3.—(AP)—Thirteen insane criminals, five of them slayers, armed themselves with knives and razors, imprisoned two guards, threatened the night supervisor with death and escaped from the State Hospital for Criminal Insane early today.
Two of the fugitives were recaptured on highways a few miles from the institution within a few hours while city, county and state officers engaged in a widespread search for the others.
Out Telephone Wires
Before leaving the institution the inmates opened cells releasing 24 prisoners but none of the others joined in the break. They also cut telephone wires.
Dr. Perry C. Robertson, superintendent of the hospital, blamed the break on the limited facilities which made it necessary to confine 18 men with dangerous reputations in a ward, rather than in separate cells.
The night supervisor, Gene Owen was called to the ward on the third floor by U. S. Davis and Bert Hill, guards, at 2:30 a. m. after the latter had been told by an inmate that some of the men there were trying to escape. As they opened the door the three men were set upon by the prisoners who had armed themselves with knives and razors and with razors. The two guards were locked in a washroom. Owen was taken through the building to the front gate.
Gate Is Opened
One of the men held a knife to Owen's throat and told Guy Carbaugh, guard at the gate, that Owen was to be killed unless the gate was opened. Carbaugh let them out. They took Owen outside the gate before scattering in different directions.
A guard was dispatched to Ionia, Mich., and he had to notify Sheriff William French, who started the search, aided by officers of other counties and state police.
The two men recaptured were Istvan Csordas, Detroit killer, and Charles Kenney, committed from Detroit for robbery.

M'DONALD CREATES NEW CABINET POST

Dual Office of Dominions and Colonies Abolished; Called Important Change.

London, June 3.—(AP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald today announced inauguration of the offices of Secretary of State for the Dominions and for the Colonies, separate Cabinet posts as a departure in the empire government set-up.
The office of Secretary of State for the Dominions and Colonies has been held by Lord Passfield.
Premier MacDonald announced that J. H. Thomas, Lord of the Privy Seal, will take the appointment of Secretary of State for the Dominions.
Important Change
Abolition of the dual office was regarded as an extremely important change. The news was received with keen interest in the House of Commons this afternoon.
The premier said the approach of the imperial conference and the nature of its business necessitated separation of the Dominions and Colonial departments.
The appointment of Mr. Thomas, he said, would necessitate readjustment of the machinery set up for dealing with unemployment, changes in which would be announced in due time, he said.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY TO GET BIG FUND

Billion and Half Available for Research When Hoover Signs the Bill.

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—Approximately $1,500,000 will be available for research for the Textile Industry under the Textile Foundation bill now awaiting President Hoover's signature.
The foundation is to be composed of the secretaries of commerce and agriculture and three textile experts to be named by the President with officers in Washington. It will be financed by donations from textile manufacturers and merchants and is expected to have a $1,500,000 fund now in the hands of the Textile Alliance to start operations.
The Textile Alliance, created as a non-profit organization in 1914 to protect mill owners and prevent unlawful exactions, deceptions and frauds in the manufacture and sale of mill supplies, derived the $1,500,000 from purchase and sale of dyes in 1919 at the request of the government.
Disposition of the fund, however, has been held up pending court adjudication of the matter. A settlement is expected soon, and as officers of the Alliance have expressed a desire that the money go for research, little difficulty is expected in turning over the funds to the new foundation.
Once under way, the Foundation would report annually to Congress the results of its investigations.

CANNON KEEPS SILENT ON POLITICAL ACTIONS

Plenty Pygmies Left Says Woman Explorer

Paris, June 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Della J. Akeley, the first wife of Carl Akeley, sculptor and naturalist, who died and was buried in Africa, today returned to Paris after a year's expedition hunting the elusive pygmies of the interior of the dark continent.
There are still plenty of pygmies, Mrs. Akeley declared, but they are difficult to locate and disappear like a flash if an intruder approaches.
Mrs. Akeley went into the northern Belgian Congo and came out at Naibohi with a large documentary collection for the Brooklyn Museum and other institutions.
Mrs. Akeley, whose husband died at Kabale, Uganda, in 1926 and was buried on the spot where he slew his biggest gorilla, said that the legend of the pygmies dying out was due to their shyness, which had taught them the art of making themselves all but invisible.
She said she found many villages of the little people, who are the size of normal 10-year-old children. They live in tiny huts made of leaves, in which they crouch. They move away at the slightest alarm and constantly are being hunted from one food source to another.

World War Relics Window Draws Many. Manchester Electric Company's Display Won Attention of Crowds During Exhibit.

The World War window sponsored by the Manchester Electric Company for the past week and a half, which nearly all of Manchester's younger element, and a large percentage of the older, was removed last night. The fine display of the electric company arranged included almost everything of interest to the World War overseas.

Observers saw for the first time, perhaps, one of the most deadly instruments of the war, the Browning Automatic Gun, conceived by John M. Browning, of Ogden, Utah, and capable of distributing death at the rate of over 600 doses per minute, from a belt feeding from the pocket of the soldier.

Then there was another deadly thing, though not as a regular thing, but one that made effective through the use of trickery and electric current—the field telephone of the German signal corps. A clumsy looking affair it served its purpose well and when it was left to the abandoned trench when the enemy retreated it was hooked up in such a manner that the receiver was taken off the hook the entire trench blew up with a heavy subterranean charge of high explosives.

The display served to show those who are not too familiar with such things, the length to which modern civilization and military engineering went during those dark days of 1918 to wipe out each other. There were three sorts of hand grenades that are responsible for many a marble cross on French battlefields. These metallic "lemons" filled with the real explosive of explosive, were terrible havoc at close quarters and when the fighting was the thickest. It took but a moment to get them away from trained hands to great distances, and then the spray of tiny bits of chiseled steel tore and mangled a wide area.

And draped in the rear of the window were the Allied flags of honor of which all the blisshed and agony of the four year war was carried on. These silent trophies of Flanders Fields speak in far more convincing terms of the abolition of war than a thousand orators. The Manchester Electric company, and Mr. Maxwell, are to be congratulated for their interest in this connection.

GARDEN CLUB'S SHOW OPENED

Exhibit of Flowers and Shrubs Begins Today at the Masonic Temple.

Garden club members were jubilant today over the fine weather for the opening of their show at three o'clock in the Masonic Temple. Mrs. W. C. Cheney, chairman of the general decoration committee, and a corps of assistants yesterday arranged an attractive background for the floral exhibits, making use of young birch and poplar trees and oak boughs.

On the east side is arranged a most interesting display of mirrors of all shapes and sizes, with artistic oriental table scarves and small decorative objects in metal and pottery, most of them from China and one or two other accessories give a real garden atmosphere.

There are a number of particularly fine displays of pansies by members, as well as Rhododendrons in the shrub class and a miscellaneous class of perennials.

The show will be open until 9 o'clock this evening and again tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. It is free to all and well worth a visit to the most pretentious spring show ever held by this comparatively youthful garden club, and Mrs. R. K. Anderson, general chairman and her efficient helpers have been congratulated on its success.

LIONS MEMBERS HEAR TALK ON RARE BOOKS

A. Leland Ziglitzki of Herald Staff Gives Interesting Information on Fine Printing.

Speaking on the subject of "Modern Fine Printing and the Book," A. Leland Ziglitzki, of The Herald advertising staff, and a leading authority, and collector of rare books, having contact with publishers throughout the printing world, provided the Lions Club with a highly interesting and educational evening at the weekly meeting at the Hotel Sheridan last night.

Three delegates were appointed to the convention to be held at Newport, R. I., June 10 and 11. They are: George Zagley, Joel Nichols, and Albert Knofla. It was announced the speaker next week would be Don Singer, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and a former All-American half-back. Ernest Roy, chairman of the Milk Fund committee made his monthly report.

A letter of thanks from the Mayor's office of Nashua, New Hampshire, was read, signed by Harry A. Gregg, chairman of the Finance Committee, of the Nashua Relief Fund. The letter read: "Kindly accept from me in behalf of the City of Nashua our thanks and appreciation for your generous contribution to our Relief Fund which will materially aid in the rehabilitation of the many families who were rendered homeless in this great disaster which has come to Nashua."

Mr. Ziglitzki compared the printing of books with the painting of pictures as a means of individual expression, in the light that a fine printer expresses himself through the medium of his book in the same way the artist does through his painting. The speaker also touched on the private press both here and abroad and said that they were mostly owned by wealthy people who printed as a hobby, printing mostly unusual and heretofore unpublished works.

Among the rare editions which he showed were "Old Mrs. Chundle" by Thomas Hardy, a posthumous "Folio" printed by Daniel Berkeley Updike at The Merrymount Press, Boston; "Sonnets from the Portuguese" by Elizabeth Browning, printed in Italy at the Officina Bodoni in type cast from the original matrices of Bodoni. Entirely done by hand; "The Triumphs of Petrarch," entirely done by hand by the brothers Johnson at the Windsor Press, San Francisco; an elaborate prospectus printed by John Henry Nash for his recent monumental edition of Dante; "The Palette Knife," by Christopher Morley, printed by the Pinson Printers, a departure in American book illustration the illustrations being original water colors; the Rockwell Kent edition of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," the Nonesuch Press, Shakespeare; "Ballads of Villon," printed in seven colors by The Windsor Press; The French Press of Germany, first American book printed for Random House, Emerson's "Essay on Nature," with decorative initials cut in wood by Anna Simons; "The Red Shoes," printed at the Kingsgar Press in Germany with color woodcuts by Harwerth; Bruce Rogers' "Printing and the Renaissance," printed by William Edwin Rudge; and several others.

that the Nationalists have withdrawn a portion of the forces ordered to Kinshan from north of Changchow, dispatching them instead to Changsha to halt the new menace. Northern advances today stated that the Northern forces had captured the Mamutu airplane base in northeast Honan province, taking 12 airplanes and 50 pilots. The Nationalists continue to suppress news of d-tailed military developments.

Although military headquarters at Nanking have denied that Chiang Kai-Shek was wounded in a clash at Kwetsh, eastern Honan, it is generally believed here that the report is correct.

TROUT, CHOCK-UP WITH MOUSE, STILL HUNGRY

Takes Angler's Bait While Yet Tail of Rodent Remains to Be Swallowed.

Raymond Williams of Maple street, East Hartford, was fishing a trout stream not far from Manchester when a vigorous pull on his line gave evidence of something good on the other end. He pulled in a half-pound trout and saw something protruding from the mouth of the fish. Examination disclosed it to be the tail of a mouse which the trout had swallowed entirely, excepting the tail and hind legs which were visible in the throat of the fish.

POLICE COURT

George Miner, Jr., was before the Manchester police court this morning on the charge of non-support. Through his attorney, John Foley, he entered a plea of guilty. Miner was brought in by Probation Officer Edward Elliott after a thorough investigation of the case. He was before the court last October on a similar charge, and according to the probation officer he has failed to make his payments with any degree of regularity.

Judge R. A. Johnson imposed a jail sentence of 60 days and suspended it on condition that he pay $7 a week for the support of his child. He required a bond of $500 to guarantee that payment. Miner's father and mother furnished the necessary bond and he was accordingly released.

Clarence Jeffers, for using improper markers, paid a fine of $15 and costs. He was arrested early this morning by Sergeant John McGlinn.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett, Jr., and children of Harrison, N. Y., motored here to spend the week-end with Mrs. Bennett's mother, Mrs. A. B. Porter.

Mr. and Mrs. William Clark of Huntington, Mass., spent Sunday with their sister Mrs. Sarah Newman.

Mrs. Lillian Kramer of Willimantic spent several days with her mother, Mrs. Daniel Newman.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cahoon and children of South Coventry, Ray Wilcox of Willimantic, Mrs. S. Lorifer and Mrs. Mabel Hitchcock of Rockville were all Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Daniel Newman.

Graduation in town will be held Wednesday evening, June 11. Although the black bear reaches a weight of 300 pounds when full grown, it weighs but little over half pound at birth.

RIVAL LOBSTERMEN IN BITTER DISPUTE

Guilford, June 3.—(AP)—Strife has broken out once again among the lobstermen of Guilford. This time the lobstermen are not the combatants, but the victims. The town has always jealously guarded its shore front and Faulkner's Island four miles away. In this season the town fishermen set their lobster pots and they watch that no outsider invades the preserve. Just now the strife has come over rivalry of some of the fishermen and the cutting loose of pots and the theft of lobsters from the cars in which they are kept alive until wanted for the market.

CONGRESS UPSETS PRESIDENT'S VETO

delay, the House proceeded to make the legislation effective by a vote of 298 to 14. As if in celebration of its release from the control of the Administration forces, the House indulged in a mighty and exultant chuckle when the vote was announced.

President Hoover's objections to the bill on three grounds: (1) That it would make eligible for pensions men who had been disabled as a result of "vicious habits"; (2) that it shortened from 90 to 70 days the length of service necessary and come eligible for compensation and (3) that it provided no method by which the Government might determine whether an applicant was really in need of the pension.

Although many members privately conceded that it was a strong veto and that the President was justified in his objections, the Administration leadership in both branches crumbled in the face of the campaign put on by the veterans' organization to pass the bill over the veto. On the eve of an election in which all the representatives and one-third of the senators face the voters, there was a distinct reluctance to antagonize such a powerful organization as the Spanish War Veterans Association.

Although Majority Leader Watson of the Senate voted to sustain the President, he revealed the hopelessness of the fight in his remark to a colleague, "this is a campaign year and it's hard to vote against anything."

very gently admonish the transgressor, gently inform him that he has infringed the law and very delicately suggest that he observe it in the future.
 It is quite easy to imagine a very common type of automobilist—a person of excellent intentions but moved almost to tears by such consideration and saying to himself: "Now that's what I call one nice town! They give you a chance for your white alley, that's what they do! I'm dinged if I don't drive up to the police station and tell 'em that here's one guy that appreciates such treatment and that so far as I'm concerned they won't have to tag me again—not ever!"
 Yeah?
 And it's just as easy to imagine another kind. His companion says, "Hey, Billy! You can't park here—there's a sign." And the driver says: "What of it? All these birds in this town do is to give you a tag with a kiss on it. Anything goes in this burg unless they catch you about three times in the same day."
 Our impression is that the little old tag that calls for a little old two dollar bill, with the alternative of a report to the Department of Motor Vehicles, is plenty humane and as polite as any community can afford to be.

INVALID ORDINANCES

A sound lesson in the law making powers of municipalities is read in the decision of the Supreme Court of Errors which invalidates a milk ordinance adopted by the city of Shelton.
 Shelton's council passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale within the city limits of any milk whatsoever, unless it was pasteurized or from tuberculin tested cattle. A dealer, whose name happens to be the same as that of the city, defied the ordinance, setting up that his milk was not only absolutely pure but complied in every way with the state law, though it was neither pasteurized nor from tested cows.
 The case was carried to the Supreme Court, which now rules that no municipality has the power to adopt an ordinance in direct conflict with a statute of the state.
 "This is not a case of the ordinance speaking where the statute is silent," the opinion reads; "it is a case of a direct conflict between statutes and ordinances. They are irreconcilably inconsistent with one another. The ordinance must yield."
 How many times municipalities in this state have gone ahead with the adoption of ordinances without consulting state statutes which may or may not conflict with the local measures we have no idea, but the instances have been at least numerous.

CRUCIAL HOUR

Not the overriding of the President's veto of the Spanish War pension bill, but the manner of its doing, the gleeful pack spirit that animated Congress in its tearing and rending of the document, must serve to bring about grave speculation as to whether the pacific policy of Mr. Hoover with relation to the legislative arm is to prove a failure.
 From the moment of taking office President Hoover has allowed it to be known that he held in particular respect the principle of separation of executive and legislative functions; that he did not intend to encroach at all upon the prerogatives of Congress; that his idea of government was for the legislative branch to attend to its own affairs and for the President to attend to the executive and administrative end of the business. It was evident from the start, for that matter, that he was more interested in the administration than in the law-making department and saw, or thought he saw, sufficient opportunity for a very capable chief executive to keep himself busy, with great advantage to the country, with those affairs which were peculiarly under his control.

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 3.—Broadway's one and only playwriting native son today runs for the peace and quiet of the European provinces or the pastoral Cape Cod country whenever he feels the creative urge.
 He is, if you don't already know it, Eugene O'Neill, whose works have long since revolutionized the board office products of the gay gulch.
 When I say "native son," I mean literally that he was born under the dazzling arcs of the gay white way. His father, James O'Neill, was one of the great trouper of yesterday. His birthplace was the old Bennett House, since renamed The Cadillac. As a child he was spun about the country, as his father's company went on tour in romantic dramas and provided about the waterfront bars in search of materials. It is recorded that he wrote the notes for his earlier sea plays on margins of the Bartender's Guide.
 Today, writing plays of ideas, he finds the turgid atmosphere of the city an impossible setting for his meditations. He writes at the moment in a little European village.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Birthmarks)
 Question:—Mrs. J. writes:—"Please state your opinion on the so-called markings of a child during pregnancy, and if it is true how it can then prevent it, and can it be prevented by dieting?"
 Answer:—The marking of children during pregnancy by a mother's fear is not considered scientifically proven. I do not doubt that many of the markings on children and if these happen to resemble any particular objects in shape the mother tries to remember something of the period she was carrying the child. But mothers are not doubt frightened many times without the child having any marks, though if the child is marked she, of course, recalls these instances.
 (Health Articles for Distribution)
 Question:—K. W. writes:—"Kindly send me your pamphlet on diabetes, also the orange juice diet for cleaning the system. Will you please send me a full list of the pamphlets you have printed for distribution?"

ACID FRUITS DO NOT CAUSE ACIDOSIS

The belief of many people that acid fruits cause acidosis is readily disproven by testing the blood of patients who are on an exclusive acid fruit diet. Patients using nothing but orange juice will show an increased alkalinity of blood as long as they remain on the orange juice and, in fact, the more orange juice they use at one time the more the alkalinity seems to increase.
 Countless experiments have convinced me that there is not the slightest excuse for believing that acid fruits have any effect, whatever, in creating acidosis. The fruit acids, such as citric acid, malic acid and tartaric acid are quite different in chemical composition from the acids in the body which produce acidosis.
 The fruit acids may be considered natural acids and they are combined with alkaline forming elements. When these acids are digested and they are oxidized and nothing remains but carbon dioxide and water. This releases the mineral elements which were combined with the acids, and produces a greater alkalinity of the blood.
 The normal state of the bodily tissues is alkaline, and whenever this protective alkalinity becomes lessened the body becomes very susceptible to a variety of diseases. The body is never really acid after death, but bad eating habits will reduce the normal alkalinity. I have never found a superior method for increasing the alkalinity of the blood than to use an exclusive citrus fruit acid for a time. When no other food is used, the elimination of toxic acids and material proceeds with great rapidity and, at the same time, alkaline substances are added so that the blood regains its normal alkaline balance.
 If the rash appears on the skin when using citrus fruits, it is because of the poisons coming out through the skin in such large quantities that temporarily some of the pores are blocked, and rash and irritation result. This will disappear in a short time and even such skin diseases as eczema and psoriasis will quickly vanish. If the fruit diet is persisted in and nothing is given to retard the skin elimination by the use of ointments which repress the poisons in the body, I do not doubt but that a food which has such a definite, beneficial result on the body as the citrus fruits, and in no case can it be said that they produce acidosis.
 The safe rule is to always use the fruits by themselves, and if you do this there is no disease where acid fruits are contraindicated. The alkalinity of the blood will always increase; the hemoglobin or color of the blood will increase day by day toward normal. Thousands of laboratory experiments have confirmed this opinion. Remember, orange juice every day chases acidosis away.

CRUCIAL HOUR

Not the overriding of the President's veto of the Spanish War pension bill, but the manner of its doing, the gleeful pack spirit that animated Congress in its tearing and rending of the document, must serve to bring about grave speculation as to whether the pacific policy of Mr. Hoover with relation to the legislative arm is to prove a failure.
 From the moment of taking office President Hoover has allowed it to be known that he held in particular respect the principle of separation of executive and legislative functions; that he did not intend to encroach at all upon the prerogatives of Congress; that his idea of government was for the legislative branch to attend to its own affairs and for the President to attend to the executive and administrative end of the business. It was evident from the start, for that matter, that he was more interested in the administration than in the law-making department and saw, or thought he saw, sufficient opportunity for a very capable chief executive to keep himself busy, with great advantage to the country, with those affairs which were peculiarly under his control.

INVALID ORDINANCES

A sound lesson in the law making powers of municipalities is read in the decision of the Supreme Court of Errors which invalidates a milk ordinance adopted by the city of Shelton.
 Shelton's council passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale within the city limits of any milk whatsoever, unless it was pasteurized or from tuberculin tested cattle. A dealer, whose name happens to be the same as that of the city, defied the ordinance, setting up that his milk was not only absolutely pure but complied in every way with the state law, though it was neither pasteurized nor from tested cows.
 The case was carried to the Supreme Court, which now rules that no municipality has the power to adopt an ordinance in direct conflict with a statute of the state.
 "This is not a case of the ordinance speaking where the statute is silent," the opinion reads; "it is a case of a direct conflict between statutes and ordinances. They are irreconcilably inconsistent with one another. The ordinance must yield."
 How many times municipalities in this state have gone ahead with the adoption of ordinances without consulting state statutes which may or may not conflict with the local measures we have no idea, but the instances have been at least numerous.

 Question:—Mrs. J. writes:—"Please state your opinion on the so-called markings of a child during pregnancy, and if it is true how it can then prevent it, and can it be prevented by dieting?"
 Answer:—The marking of children during pregnancy by a mother's fear is not considered scientifically proven. I do not doubt that many of the markings on children and if these happen to resemble any particular objects in shape the mother tries to remember something of the period she was carrying the child. But mothers are not doubt frightened many times without the child having any marks, though if the child is marked she, of course, recalls these instances.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY
 JEFFERSON DAVIS' BIRTH

On June 3, 1808, Jefferson Davis, a soldier, statesman and the president of the Confederate States of America, was born at Todd county, Kentucky.
 His family moved during his infancy to Mississippi, with which state his fame has always been connected. Following his graduation from West Point in 1828, Davis served in the army for seven years, resigning on account of illness.
 Davis first came into prominence as a member of the House of Representatives and later as a United States senator. He left Congress at the outbreak of the Mexican war to enlist, and gained considerable fame as a soldier. When Pierce was elected president Davis was appointed secretary of war, but left the cabinet when Buchanan became president. At the time Mississippi seceded from the Union, Davis was serving in the Senate. Shortly after his resignation he was elected president of the Confederate States. After the fall of Richmond in 1865 he was captured when endeavoring to escape and was imprisoned in Fort Monroe for two years. He was released on bail in 1867, and finally set at liberty by the general amnesty of 1868.

THOUGHT BURGLAR CHIEF IS KILLED

Absecon, N. J., June 3.—(AP)—Chief of Police William M. Schoetflin, 41, of Absecon, was fatally shot here early today, when he was mistaken for an intruder while investigating an alleged disorderly house.

George Howard Much, 51, Atlantic City hauling contractor, was arrested, charged with the shooting. Three others, including two women, are being held as material witnesses.

State police said the shooting occurred when Chief Schoetflin went to investigate a house on Elm avenue, Absecon Highland, on the outskirts here, which had been a former speakeasy and was recently leased by Much.

Summoned by an anonymous telephone message, state troopers went to the dwelling and found Schoetflin lying dead at the entrance, a bullet through his heart.

Women Surrender

An hour later, Much, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Corbeau, 30, and Miss Mary Brown, 22, and Richard Trowell, 22, all of Atlantic City, surrendered to police.

Much said he had recently rented the place with the intention of using it as a summer cottage. He said he heard a knock at the door and then saw it opened by a man in civilian clothes. Fearing the man to be a robber, he reported he fired the shot with the intention of scaring him off, only to see Schoetflin fall dead.

Sergeant Harry Cidulla, of the state police, said several complaints had been received about a number of parties held in the place recently.

Schoetflin is survived by his wife and three children.

Because

He knows that the modern ways of Pasteurization and the proper cooling of the milk after Pasteurization are a very essential matter. If the milk is not cooled immediately to 40 degrees F. after Pasteurizing the lactic acid in milk will cause the sugar of milk to sour and therefore impair the keeping qualities that all properly Pasteurized milk has.

The plane had just taken off and was about 150 feet in the air. Jumping as the craft hit, he slid through the branches safely to the ground. The plane crashed nearby and burned and discovery of the ruins later started an "airplane mystery." He did not report immediately to civil authorities and his feat did not become known until yesterday.

TWO SHOT IN FEUD

Boston, June 3.—(AP)—The rat tat of a machine gun echoed through a south-end street early today and Guy Perelli, 36, and Joseph "Chick" Bruno, 41, collapsed from wounds. A small roadster from which the fusillade came, escaped. Rushed to the city hospital both retained consciousness but refused to talk. The name of neither one was on danger list. The two men, both residents of Boston were leaving the Liberty hotel before the shooting. A witness said the car drove slowly by and the shots were fired from a machine gun. The car passed Patrolman H. A. Foster on a nearby street and he fired three times at the machine and one of the occupants returned the fire. Police later said they believed the shooting was the outcome of a bootleg feud or gang vengeance. Perelli was involved in a shooting fray in 1926 receiving 11 bullet wounds in the lower body, and in September, 1928, he was shot in the abdomen and head.

Thousands of acres of timberlands have been burned over, and forest animals have come out to open country or sought safety in lakes and streams.

The Husband Hunter

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Natalie Converse, jealous of her husband's friendship with Bernardine Lamont, leaves him. Alan seeks consolation with his secretary, Philippa West, who has cleverly managed to become engaged to him.

Natalie returns, and Alan realizes that he loves her, but she has become engaged to Philippa. He seeks Philippa to release him but she refuses, and makes an effective appeal to his pity.

Natalie's sister, Florence, fakes an illness to bring him back to his home, but Philippa still stands between them. Florence departs, hoping they will get along better if left to themselves. Natalie makes a visit to Alan's office and meets Bernadine, and Alan seeking business advice. Natalie's old jealousy flares up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan.

Alan goes to Philippa's apartment for dinner, afterward spending the night at a hotel. The next morning Natalie comes to the office and tells him that Alan is out. He telephones and Philippa does not tell him that Natalie is there.

Philippa, fearful Alan's anger will not endure, uses a letter from Bernadine in a plot to discredit Natalie. She changes the name of a stock, Bernadine. Bernadine comes to the office after the order has gone through and learns that she has lost money she could ill afford to part with. Alan is aghast when she tells him he has bought the stock, and sends for her letter to prove that he had followed her instructions.

Bernadine discovers the change that was made in the letter and Alan starts an investigation to learn who had made the change.

CHAPTER XXXIX
Philippa pointedly hesitated to reply to Alan's question. He repeated it with a sharper edge on his voice. "Was anyone in here, in this room, while that letter was here?" he said.

She glanced doubtfully from him to Bernadine and back again. It was plain to them now that she did not wish to answer.

"Well?" Alan insisted, and his voice was steady.

Philippa appeared to give in to his insistence. "There was no one in here—excepting Mrs. Converse," she said slowly, reluctantly.

"Natalie?" Alan pronounced the name aloud in his surprise. But he recovered himself quickly, for he knew that Bernadine was looking at him searchingly.

"Yes; she was waiting for you," Philippa explained, rather nervously.

"Didn't you tell her I would not be in?" Alan asked. He had been instantly elevated in spirit. Natalie here, waiting for him! It must have meant that she too regretted their quarrel. Philippa's next words were like a dash of cold water in his face.

"She said she would wait," she said, as if it were a matter of course. "I may say it, in a pleasant mood."

Suddenly Bernadine got to her feet. "I'm not a bit of any use to you here, Alan," she exclaimed, "and I have an appointment at home, with Dr. Wagnall. I must get back. There's just time to catch a train in about an hour." Alan understood that the bringing of Natalie's name into the affair was the cause of her abrupt departure. He was deeply grateful for her delicate consideration.

"Please leave the letter," he said to her, for she must know that he did not worry too much about it," she said, putting it down on his desk.

She could have said nothing more demeaning to Alan. He thought before that she must know that he and Natalie were having trouble; now he was certain of it.

His surprise over Natalie's visit to his office, and Philippa's remark about her mood of temper, must have given her added proof that her matrimonial bark was traveling a rough sea.

Worse than that, he suspected she had connected Natalie with the letter tampering.

The idea was shockingly repellent to him. Preposterous! But if she didn't think so, why had she so impulsively decided to let the matter rest in his hands, and escape hearing what more there was to learn from Philippa regarding his wife's presence in the office?

On her way home, Bernadine worried over the fear that she had betrayed her suspicions of Natalie to Alan. She tried to tell herself that she was wrong—that it couldn't have been Natalie—but she knew that deep in her heart she believed it was.

Natalie was insanely jealous. Everyone knew it. And who was more likely to do a thing like that—she was thinking of the letter—than a jealous woman?

Still she tried to reason against charging Natalie with it. But it was too difficult. Alan's secretary, Miss West, had said no one else had been in the office. Natalie alone had the opportunity to get hold of the letter.

"Oh, how terrible!" she thought in a flood of pity for Alan. He well deserved her pity, for at that moment his spirit was just about crushed.

Naturally he had doubted Natalie's guilt, but he never knew her life—but there were facts that could not be denied.

Their quarrel—she had made reckless statements during it—she had not seemed morally responsible. Perhaps her temper, endured, and she had returned to the office to make a new scene, and, finding him absent, had been driven by her passion to seek to do him some injury.

And what greater injury was there within her power to inflict upon him than this? She wasn't the killer of a woman, nor would she, feeling herself wronged, revenge herself in like manner; no, that was not Natalie.

Formerly, her greatest power had lain in threatening to leave him; that power had been dissipated. What was there left for her business? To hurt him through his business? To hurt him through his business?

She thought he saw clearly what had happened. He thought he saw clearly what had happened. He thought he saw clearly what had happened.

Alan looked at her, and wished she would stop talking. Of course, Natalie had done it. He did not concede this openly, but he felt there was no argument against it.

He thought he saw clearly what had happened. He thought he saw clearly what had happened. He thought he saw clearly what had happened.

Philippa, watching him as a cat watches a mouse, was tempted to suggest he investigate to see if Natalie had meddled with anything in his desk, anticipating his discovery of the much-used eraser. But common sense warned her he was almost certain to do this of his own accord, and that it was best, for her that she should not.

She felt she had said enough, and got up to go. Alan with his head bent, did not look up at her. At the door she paused, about to ask him if he wouldn't spend the evening with her, but she changed her mind and went quietly out.

He was still in his office when she left for the day. She walked with a light, brisk step, highly pleased with herself. She slipped a note just inside Alan's door, asking him to come up if he felt like it.

Alan never saw the note. It got kicked under the thick rug—the rug that Natalie had helped him choose in where it lay for weeks. Then it was tossed into the wastebasket by a careless scrubwoman. Not that it mattered. Alan did not want to go to Philippa's. He wanted to go and see Natalie.

And he did, about seven o'clock. In the interim he had sat at his desk, thinking, brooding. His dejection and utter hopelessness had gradually given way to a cold fury.

All the minor criticisms he ever made of Natalie—criticisms dead in his mind these many weeks—returned in force. The whole situation, summed up, meant that she had killed his respect for her. And he had been faithful, loving, dependable. His reward should have been a happy home. He had earned peace and security. And he had none of these things.

His fury grew apace as he neared the house in Westchester, where Natalie, fast giving up hope that he would come to her that day, waited wearily in a chair before the fire.

The night was not cold, but she felt chilled. She didn't know how much longer she could sit up—she was so very tired—but if Alan came, she did not want him to find her showing the weakness she felt.

Her heart gave a mad, glad, leap when he rang the bell. She knew, specifically, Ethel had left a bright light in the hall, neglecting to turn it out. The girl left burning many lights that she was asked to turn out. Because, as she said in her most frequent remark to the neighboring servants, the house gave her the "willies, all dark and deserted like."

Natalie was thankful for the light now. It showed her Alan's beloved face. Something terrible was the matter, she perceived, but such was her joy in seeing him that she was glad to welcome him even though he had come in anger.

"There's a fire in the living room," she said throatily. "It's cold, isn't it?"

"No," said Alan, annoyed that she greeted him with a commonplace expression. He felt that only words of vital meaning could serve them now.

She closed the door, as he strode toward the living room, and followed him with ever quickening steps. Inside the softly lighted, rather too warm room, he turned and faced her. He was too bitter to see that she was ill.

"I didn't come to discuss the weather with you," he said with cruel deliberation.

Natalie saw that his lips were curled into thin lines over his fine white teeth, but she could not guess how fierce was the scorn that shaped them so.

She started at him, helpless. She had never seen him like this before. His expression, the inimical hardness of his eyes, terrified her. No state of anger she had ever imagined him in had prepared her for this.

She put out a hand as though to defend herself. To Alan it was as though she had been found out; her gesture was to him an expression of her guilt. Defense before accusation; it was enough.

"Well," he said curtly, brutally, "why did you do it?"

WEE MISS SINGS TO RADIO FAME

New York—(AP)—"Boop oop a doops" fall from the lips of Baby Rose Marie like a grown up.

Just about radio's youngest hot tunes dispenser, this wee lady can brag of the fact that in five and a half years she has climbed quite a way. She's a staff artist for NBC and has been starred with no less a broadcast personality than the feminine-adored Rudy Vallee.

But to her Rudy's just another man. She admits he is likeable, but he doesn't give her the same thrill that she gets listening to Amos 'n' Andy.

With an ambition to grow up and be like Bebe Daniels of the movies, Rose Marie is attaining the background. She has been in vaudeville and has made talkie shorts. She opened her radio career nearly a year ago at WJZ, Atlantic City.

The first song of her present repertoire of 90 was "Sorry," which she learned three years ago. She remembers it, too, and can sing it as the composer intended.

Her mother, who is a pianist, teaches her the songs. The mother sings it until she can do so without aid. The matter of tunes comes natural.

When she is preparing to go on the air, only 15 or 20 minutes are required for rehearsal, according to her dad, who is Frank Mazetti and who was known as Frank Curly when in musical comedy.

Her father also states that the young lady always has declared she would like to be a pianist. She talks distinctly when she is old. Her age is not sufficient for school, but when she is ready she is to have a private tutor. She has been to kindergarten only, in addition to some professional instruction.

At that her education is considerably further advanced than most girls of her age. She can write and print her own name, and can spell about 50 simple words.

Appearing before the microphone, she uses the gestures her father taught her for her stage work, and just sings without a thought of the millions credited to the listening ears. There she always sleeps seven hours a day, and except those few nights when she has a later program is in bed by 9.

You see, she's a normal kiddie. And her greatest delight is to get out with the children of her New York neighborhood and romp and play. They treat her as one of them and not as an outstanding radio artist, with a microphone salary, a sum far beyond their imagination.

"I just love to sing on the radio," the tiny miss declared. "I don't think much of opera, and when I tune in I like to hear songs, you know, about boopa doops."

"And I want to live on a farm some day, for a while any way."

"SUNFASTNESS" OF FABRICS SHOWN BY THIS TEST

By William H. Baldwin

Special machines have been invented to test speedily and accurately the relative sunfastness of colors, but they are too expensive for household use. There is no reason, however, why manufacturers who claim their fabrics are "sunfast" should not be willing to substantiate such claims by reporting the results of the machine test on these goods.

This test tells how long a fabric can be exposed under one of these devices without appreciable fading. The following figures indicate the minimum number of hours that specific fabrics should be able to withstand the action of the machine without fading if the shopper is to get full value and use of the fabric:

Awning materials, 150 hours; window draperies, 96; interior hangings, 48; summer dress goods, 96; winter dress goods, 48; lingerie, 48; bed linen, 48; table linen, 48; bathing suits, 96.

Civil aviation in Great Britain made a big leap forward during 1928. Aircraft mileage was 1,011,000, compared with 769,000 in 1927.

HERE'S NEWS!

I think it is clear. When he has done something that he knows wrong, if he has willfully disobeyed, or done something to hurt someone else, lied perhaps, destroyed something—oh there are so many things that impulsive, or tempted, or experimental children get into before they know it—why then not try to draw him out and have him talk to us about it?

It is a habit easily established in little children. I like the child who goes to his parent and tells what's wrong. I like the parents whose child goes to him and tells.

Right there we meet up with the other problems of punishment. I think this is the thing to be done of the most perplexing things that confronts even the wisest parent.

What is to be done if a child who deserves punishment comes and tells what he has done? Are we to discourage frankness by insisting on retribution? And on the other hand, aren't we encouraging future misconduct by allowing him to go perpetually scot-free of paying a penalty unless we do punish him?

If we do the latter thing, isn't it eventually going to change his motive for telling and won't he feel that by merely confessing he may do pretty much as he pleases?

Believe that the earnest, right-minded parent with a sense of fairness will be able to adjust this. For a parent can establish such an attitude of faith and trust in the child that the child will still come to him to talk it out and be willing to abide by consequences without resentment and without losing the habit of openness and honesty about his acts.

Besides he'll be able in time by seeing things in their true light, with older advice and understanding, to better control his own conduct. Anyway, we've always stressed too greatly the idea of punishment in child-training and too little the constructive and instructive training that gets at the very roots and motives behind misbehavior.

I believe the mind that has "come clean" is a greater foundation for right character than the memory of a strap.

A swallow has been timed to cover 128 miles in an hour, and can fly from Belgium to North Africa in half a day.

The Flower Show. Don't put off a visit to the flower show today and tomorrow at the Masonic Temple at no charge whatever. It will close at 9 p. m. tonight and open again at 10 a. m. Wednesday for the day and evening.

I was interested in an item in one of the garden magazines describing an article printed in Leslie's Weekly back in 1854 about the New York flower show of that year. Briefly, it told how discouraged the promoters were because so few attended and showed a picture of the show, which was in the main, stiffly arranged potted plants. It is interesting to note that the interest in flowers has increased since those days, judging from the descriptions we read of the recent shows in New York and Boston and the throngs present.

French Dressing. The basic rule for French dressing is very simple. An acid, oil and seasonings are the ingredients. The acid may be vinegar, lemon juice, grape fruit, lime juice, or orange juice. The herb vinegars should not be overlooked for they, too, add variety of flavor.

The oil may be olive oil or one of the numerous vegetable or nut salad oils on the market. The acid and oil are used in different proportions, although two or three parts oil to one part acid pleases the average taste.

One-half teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon white pepper or paprika, 6 tablespoons oil, 2 tablespoons vinegar, or lemon juice.

Mix salt and pepper. Add vinegar and when salt is dissolved add oil. Beat hard with a fork or a small dover beater. Or the ingredients can be placed in a French dressing bottle and shaken vigorously.

If the oil and vinegar are well chilled the dressing will thicken slightly as it emulsifies and will not separate as quickly.

Mustard and sugar can be added as individual taste dictates. Not more than 1/4 teaspoon mustard or 1/2 teaspoon sugar should be used. These are mixed with the salt and pepper and dissolved in the acid.

If the bowl in which the dressing is mixed is rubbed with a slice of onion or a cut clove of garlic, a pleasant "suspicion" of the flavor is introduced.

In wearing the new suits wear your blouse tucked inside your skirt only if you are slender. The overblouse is not dead by any means and is much more becoming to plump figures than the tucked-in. There is a style cut with a short, tight, papum and the overblouse that is cut like a waistcoat, but the clothes to accompany this severe style must be chosen with care.

Orange Sponge Cake. Six eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup flour, 5 tablespoons water, 1/2 cup orange juice, grated rind 1 orange, few grains salt.

Separate whites from yolks of eggs and beat whites until stiff. Cook sugar and water until it "threads" and pour into beaten whites, beating constantly. Beat until cool. Beat in orange rind and juice. Add beaten egg yolks and fold in flour sifted with salt. Bake in an ungreased tube pan at 350 degrees F. for one hour. Invert pan on cooling rack and allow to cool in pan. It should come from the pan by its own weight, but if it does not it may be loosened around the edges with a spatula when cool.

The richest substances in this vitamin are the citrus fruits, such as oranges, lemons and grapefruit. Hence it is highly desirable to add to the diet of growing children a certain amount of orange juice which takes care of this deficiency.

HEALTH

THREE KINDS OF FOOD INVOLVED IN PROPER GROWTH OF BONES

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

More and more experiments are being performed in an endeavor to find out exactly what it is that controls the deposit of calcium in the body.

Calcium is associated, as has been said again and again in this column, with the growth of the bones and the teeth. Already it has been well established that in addition to the intakes of calcium and phosphorus, bone growth is dependent on a supply of vitamin D and perhaps of other vitamins.

The most recent series of studies made by Prof. H. C. Sherman and H. K. Strehman indicate that any one of the three main factors may be a limiting factor in bone growth. If the calcium is high and the phosphorus low, the bone growth may be aided by the simple addition of phosphate. If the phosphorus is sufficient and the calcium low, there is no materials out of which the bones may be built.

Vitamin D may be the limiting factor when the mineral content of the diet is good, but vitamin D cannot take the place of calcium which is needed for the best bone development. One of the richest substances in calcium is milk. Milk is, on the other hand, very poor in vitamin D. Hence it is desirable to supplement milk, which provides calcium, with vitamin D in the form of viosterol or of cod liver oil with viosterol, or of sunlight, which encourages the development of vitamin D in the body.

So far as the growth of the teeth

Hollywood has long been aware of the great appeal beautiful skin has to the emotions. For years 9 out of 10 screen stars have been relying on Lux Toilet Soap to give their skin the lovely smoothness the public demands.

Ruth Elder's beauty and daring have made her famous. She is now under contract to Hoot Gibson and her lovely skin is the envy of all who passes the severe test of the close-up easily. "Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin wonderful smooth," she explains.

Charming Betty Francisco also uses this delicately fragrant white soap. She says: "It leaves my skin like velvet."

Delightful Kathryn Crawford states: "I always use Lux Toilet Soap. No wonder it is the official soap of all the dressing rooms."

Sharkey Is Very Sure He'll Lick Schmeling

Strutting a 'Uke' Constitutes Jack's Hardest Workout Yesterday; Has No Plan of Battle.

By EDWARD J. NEIL, A. P. Sports Writer

Orangeburg, N. Y., June 3.—(AP)—The diningroom of Gus Wilson's fight camp was jammed with the froth of the ring game sparring partners, handlers, hangers-on, beer barons and baronesses, visitors and curious neighbors, all munching food and killing time at the end of the warm lazy day.

They were there because Jack Sharkey was on the premises, training for the climax of his third campaign for the heavyweight championship.

A negro musician strutting his guitar and singing blues amused the eaters with his melodies and annoyed them frequently by passing his hat around for coins. Then Sharkey, restless and caged by training, lured by the music, strolled into the room.

"Give me that uke," he demanded. Sharkey tilted his hat down over his eyes, leaned a chair against the wall and twanged a few chords. He was providing the show the guests had been waiting for.

He played the St. Louis Blues, played in a way that shamed even the negro's facile strumming. He played it with variations and it was good. Then in a soft tenor voice he sang the blues.

Sharkey tossed the instrument back to the negro, the show was over and the curious were satisfied. The house cleared and he came across the room to sit and talk fight, the thing that fills his mind every minute of the day and follows him to bed at night.

"Learned to play that thing in the Navy," he said with a big grin. "Didn't know I could sing tenor, huh? I'm not so good in a quartet but I can be drafted."

This Sharkey, priming for his June 12 battle with Max Schmeling, seems more matured, calmer, better natured and more capable, than at any time in a career that has carried him twice within one fight of the heavyweight crown.

His training has been uneventful and today, ten days before the 15-round test in the Yankee Stadium, he is a marvelous picture of a fighting machine, heavier than ever about the shoulders, thinner through the legs and thighs, the best boxer in the heavyweight ranks, a sharp, punishing hitter.

Sharkey is not under-estimating the German, but he has no great respect for his fighting ability either. He will pump left hands to Max's head, feint him into leading rights and then try to beat him to the punch, bob low and weave with the Teuton if Max wants to fight that way.

"A plan of battle" he asks, "that's the bunk. I'll fight him any way I have to. And I'll lick him. Remember he's never faced the kind of a fighter who'll be in there."

HALL WINS FIRST TWO NET MATCHES

Hartford, Conn., June 3.—(AP)—J. Gilbert Hall of Orange, N. J., today was in the third round of the New England men's singles tennis championship play and rested while other entries continued their matches.

Playing in defense of the title he won last year, Hall eliminated Bob Ryan of Yale in yesterday and his opening round match and defeated R. D'Amico, Hartford public parks champion, in the second round.

Mrs. William Shelden of Boston, 1929 champion of the women's singles, won in straight sets from Miss Jane Cray of Hartford.

The Nut Cracker

John D. Rockefeller has conferred the benefits of his philanthropy upon all the people, but Sidney Well, new owner of the Cincinnati Reds, evidently believes "the nut" begins with the New York Giants.

Well gave McGraw Ethan Allen, Hugh Critz and Pitcher Pete Donohue for Pat Crawford and Larry Benton. One of these days you may read of an old glove being traded for red Lucas, Evar Swanson and the grandstand at Redland field, so don't be amazed.

Boxes Schmeling

Once upon a time when his ball team had a three-run lead, going into the sixth inning, John J. McGraw used to leave the bench and go home for supper. He doesn't do that any more. The reason is that Mr. McGraw doesn't like to pick up the evening paper and see where the Boston Braves showed over six runs in the ninth to beat his Giants, 10 to 7.

Instead of leaving the park with his team three runs to the good, McGraw now sits with knitted brows (Mr. McGraw is one of the very best brow-knitters in the business, by the way) and figures out ways and means of trying to hold that precious lead against the murderous assaults of the enemy.

But isn't there something to be said in favor of Oscar U. Upstart, the young fellow who just doesn't know when he is beaten? Isn't there a growing tendency in sports to "Oh, yeah!" the prowess of the big shots in this game and then go out and prove that the feet of the big shots are but of clay, and very crumbly at that?

Whoever would have thought that Glenna Collett would lose in a championship battle to a young lady named Diana Fishwick? Who expected Johnny Goodman to beat Bobby Jones? Who honestly thought that well on in the middle of the merry month of May the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Washington Senators, would be atop their leagues? Who ever thought Yale would win a boat race? And who decided outside at odds of 100 to 1 against, but Scout Second, winner of the recent New Market stakes is considered one of the best of the "dark horses" despite the fact that

IRVING HADLEY'S PITCHING BEST

George Barnshaw's young Ad Liska set the A's on their ears, while the Senators were making merry with the delivery of Rube Walberg. Young Lloyd Brown finally lost a game to the champions, 1 to 0, but it wasn't because he didn't outpitch Mr. Mack's pinch hitter, Robert Moses Grove. And last year the Senators did not win a game from the Athletics until August!

Turf experts are looking for Galant Fox to go on and win the Beltermont, the country's richest stake for 3-year-olds. They had better watch their step. Some young man from the Bronx is likely to take a broad-backed mare from between the shafts of a baker's wagon and feed a lot of blue-blooded equines a four-course dust dinner.

Bobby Jones is touted for everything he enters this year. But just as likely as not he will pick up his 10 down to some switchman from Switzerland.

It even looks like a good year for Sir Thomas Lipton. And if Sir Thomas wins, you can go out and lay a wager on Millaps College to defeat Notre Dame for the national football title in a night game at Poughkeepsie next Christmas Eve.

IN LIMELIGHT

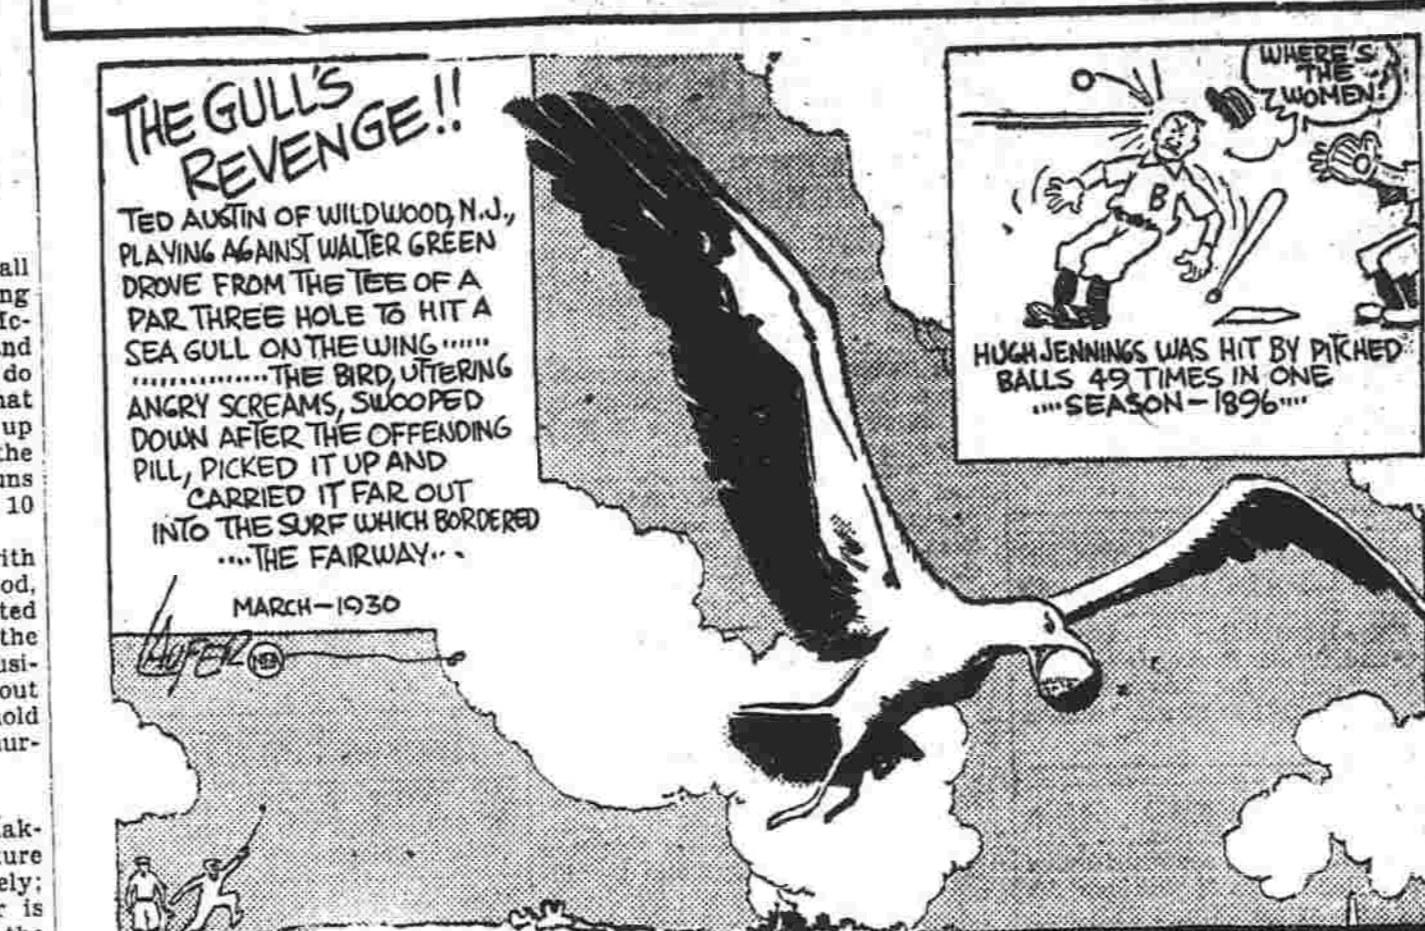

Fighting in true Kaplan fashion with a bit more zip and pep than usual, former featherweight champion Louis (Kid) Kaplan, slashed his way to a well earned, clean-cut decision over Joey Medill of Chicago in an interesting ten round boxing season at the Hurley Stadium last night.

Kaplan seemed in the pink of condition and was all keyed up for the match; so much so in fact, that he could hardly restrain himself to await the bell opening each round. Several times when the second left the ring at the ten second warning, Kaplan jumped up and went through an abbreviated shadow boxing exercise.

Judging from the way he tore into his opponent one might have thought that Medill was Jupiter Pluvius incognito and responsible for the three postponements of the fight because of adverse weather. Medill is built much along the same lines as Kaplan and also possesses much of the same crouch-fighting style.

While Kaplan was hit quite hard and often by Medill, Medill on the other hand proved a much busier catcher. Kaplan threw punches in his characteristic two-fisted manner from start to finish and at times seemed to have Medill on the verge of a voyage through uncharted seas. It appeared that only the Chicago lad's fine physical condition enabled him to remain upright. These were no knockdowns at any time during the battle.

Kaplan clearly won seven or eight rounds with the fourth and seventh going to Medill. Referee Bill Cooney, however, once again voted every round for the Hartford gladiator.

Dynamite Joe Smith of Hartford found a tough customer in Battling Johnny Pena, Spanish featherweight, weakened Eddie Reed, Hartford's long reaching artist, with a continuous body assault and was rewarded with a technical knockout victory in the fourth.

Golfing With The Duffer

By JOE O'GOOFTY.

Golf Editor of the Robot Review.

Since I started this series, several persons have written to ask if the use of dumbbells would improve their game. I do not think so. It is wise to play with better players than yourself, rather than worse ones. You don't learn much from dumbbells.

If you do not see so well, glasses sometimes will help, depending upon how you carry them. It helps nobody's game if

The glasses are carried under the belt. Some golfers I have known have made spectacles of themselves in this regard. Of course a pair of binoculars is a great help in putting.

There are any number of handy little artifices and devices that contribute to the betterment of one's game. To mention but a few:

A small folding rowboat is often convenient when the golfer wishes to desert a while at the water hole and go plucking water lilies or pursuing will 'o' wisps.

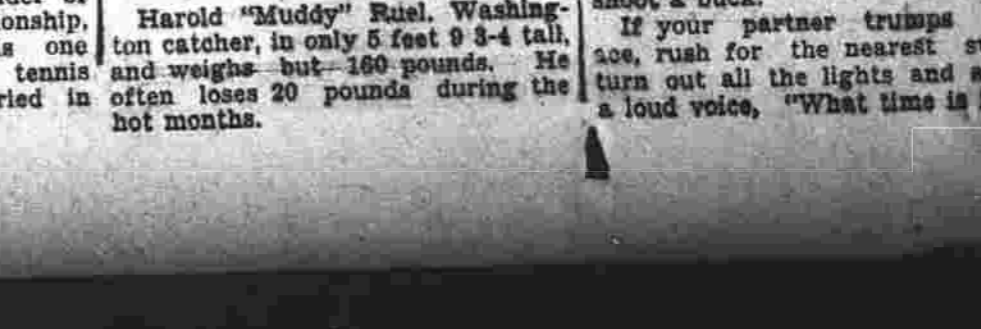

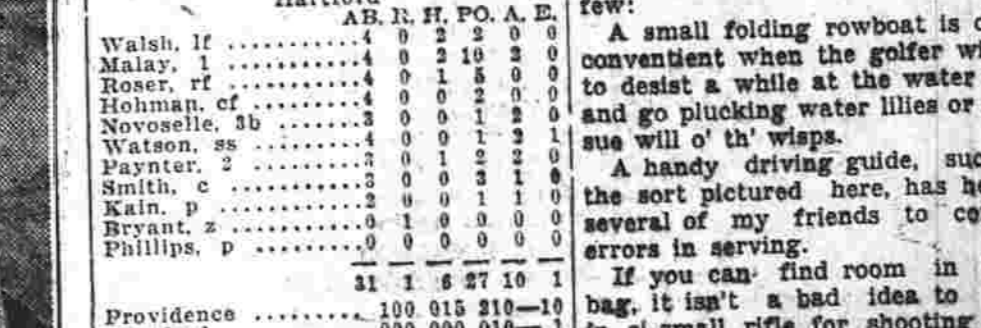

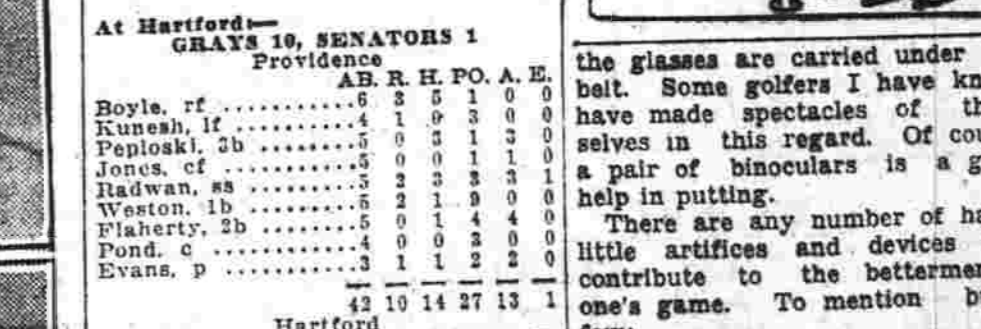

A handy driving glove, such as the sort pictured here, has helped several of my friends to correct errors in serving.

If you can't find room in your bag, it isn't a bad idea to tuck in a small rifle for shooting fireflies.

Always carry a small calendar to remind you of feast days and changes in the moon and keep your position on the signs of the zodiac. I have known golfers to go out in the spring and never reappear until the first snow flies.

Don't parlay your winnings after four straight passes. Drag and shoot a buck.

If your partner trips up your ace, rush for the nearest switch, turn out all the lights and ask in a loud voice, "What time is it?"

Queen Summer. Summer reigns o'er field and stream. Summer reigns on land and sea, Summer reigns the world, supreme; But summer doesn't reign for me. Go I to the woods or shore, Summer doesn't reign—it pours!

Weather Note. Though skies stay grim and gray, No showers pierce the murk Until the time of day That I start home from work!

Note to June brides: Men who never kiss their wives get mad if others do. Marriage is a lottery but we all like to gamble.

Boy Friend—Would a kiss be out of place? Girl Friend—It all depends on where it's put.

Joe recently overheard the following conversation which seems to indicate the present religious inclination among the younger gangs: Dick—Well, goodbye old man, see you in church.

A Pal—Only chance we'll ever have of seeing you in church is to receive an invitation to your funeral services.

Stern Parent—What are you doing, Junior? Young Son—Playing marbles, papa.

Stern Parent—Playing marbles? Well, don't ever let me catch you using father's glass eye for a shooter again.

With the danger of tularemia from rabbits, psittacosis from parrots and hydrophobia from dogs, goldfish should come into their own as a safe household pet.

The high cost of living wouldn't be such a problem if the luxuries of yesterday had not become the necessities of today.

Old timers went to the drug store after meals, not for meals. A modern girl is one who can meet the wolf at the door and come out with a fur coat.

Harold—Pardon me, but your petticoat is coming off. Gladys—Just like me; all my slips get publicity.

The most annoying thing in a theater is a baby crying. How can anybody sleep with a baby crying?

Adorable Adeline thinks modern young couples ought to keep to the rite.

In the dim and distant past apples were the forbidden fruit. Now it's grapes.

John Alden—May I kiss thee on the cheek? Priscilla—Yes, John, thee may kiss me on the left, then on the right cheek, and thou mayest also hesitate a long time between them—if thee cares to.

BUSY LITTLE GIRL.

London.—If Phyllis Gordon isn't the busiest girl in London, she's next to the busiest. She is only 22, very pretty, and industrious, works thirteen hours a day, dances six and sleeps four. She has been made director of London Hotels, Ltd., and has complete charge of one of London's busiest hostilities.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.) Within the very hotel, the Tinies slept all night. 'Twas swell. The view out of the windows was a wondrous sight to see. For miles around the country spread. "Just like a carpet," Scouty said. "If I could just run round and round, how happy I would be." Not far away we Clowny spied a long canal. He loudly cried, "Oh, my! Where does that lead to? We can't even see the end. It winds around from left to right and then it disappears from sight. Tomorrow we will hike down to that very distant bend." The Travel Man said, "Oh, my, had instead of that you will be glad to ride along that big canal. Then you can sit and rest. Now, all you Tinies go to sleep and don't you let me hear you peep. At morn we all will take a trip, when you are up and dressed." The morning came and, sure enough, they found the plan was

FALSE ALARM GIVES 2 TRUCKS LONG RUN

Ring of Box in Love Lane Region Believed Work of Passing Motorist.

A false alarm of fire was turned in from Box 193, at the junction of Center street, Middle Turnpike West and the road from Hillardville to Love Lane, near the Jaffer's gasoline station, at 1:10 o'clock this morning. South Manchester fire companies No. 1 and No. 2 responded. The run is a long one.

The alarm, it is thought, was turned in by some passing automobile party. Turning in a false alarm of fire carries with it a heavy fine and jail sentence. It was several minutes after the alarm was sounded this morning before the recall was sent in, as an effort was made to locate the person responsible.
