

Every Thirty-Third Purchaser To Get Money Back At Hale's

Novel Sales Plan Adopted in Observance of Big Store's Thirty-Third Anniversary; Bell to Ring Announcing When Lucky Purchase Has Been Made.

Commemorating their thirty-third anniversary in a novel way, the J. W. Hale Co., will refund the purchase price of every thirty-third cash sale made throughout the store Thursday, Friday and Saturday with the exception of the food and candy departments. Each person who has made one of the gratuitous purchases will be so informed by a signal bell from the office, and the purchase, irrespective of price will be given free to the lucky customer. This sale plan was devised in commemoration of the many years that the store has successfully served Manchester patrons.

Checked By Cashier

When the various gratis sales have been made a bell will sound in the store and the telephone in the department in which the lucky purchase has been made will ring twice before the sales person and purchaser that the purchase has been recorded and that a refund will be in order. The sales will be checked by machine through the cashier's window and those departments not using the automatic cash delivery system will be merged on this occasion. No employee of the store is eligible in the unique sales innovation.

Sales Quotas

Quotas have been set for the entire sales force, based on past records and each sales person will have a quota to meet during the three day sale. Prizes of $25 will be awarded to those who exceed their quotas. Everything points to one of the most successful sales ever conducted in the history of the store.

Innovations

The opening years of the present century witnessed a complete revolution in merchandising in the J. W. Hale company as in other places. The advance of modern progress demanded the elimination of old methods which were quite the approved thing at the height of Justus W. Hale's career as the town's first dry goods merchant.

Improved Stores

Many innovations which have come to be necessities in the store of today were not even thought of in the old days. Heating, ventilation, decorations and the highly systematized method of handling the customer's money and purchase have all been improved upon. Gone is the old unsightly stove and in its place is the modern oil-fired steam heat regulated to the required temperature in all parts of the store. Well lighted interiors today contrast with the gloomy, uninviting and often unsanitary caverns that were then in operation as stores. Decorations have come in styles and colors to satisfy the most fastidious. Deliveries have been speeded up; hours of labor have been shortened and the social atmosphere of store workers has been improved immeasurably.

Lights an Aid

Modern lighting has been one of the biggest aids in the advancing efficiency of store management during the past decade and in this connection evening service has become in nearly every sense the busiest period and most convenient time to shop. Before the advent of modern lighting the opposite was the case.

Anderson the Head

The present personnel of the store consists of two officials who have been with the J. W. Hale Co. since its beginning at Oak and Main streets. Frank E. Anderson, president, treasurer and manager is actively connected with the company, although in attendance during the week at the offices of the American Department Stores in New York, of which he is president. He is constantly in touch with the local store each week-end.

McCann Acting Manager

Charles J. McCann, acting manager for the past year, began his duties with the company working through the various grades of department manager, buyer to his present position. He is especially well equipped with an intimate knowledge of Manchester and of Manchester people's needs and leaves nothing undone to keep a store on the high plane that it is occupied during past years.

New Controller

Elmer A. Weden, controller has been with the J. W. Hale Company for nearly a year in which time he has incorporated the latest methods of store management. Alexander J. Lang, manager of the drug, and her departments in the main store has been with the company for four years and has been instrumental in bringing his departments to their present high standing.

Food Departments

The Hale's Health Self-serve market, one of the most modern markets of its kind in the state, is open beyond doubt the value of a present selection of the foods for a modern home. An innovation recently opened to the public several days ago, it received instant approval and has steadily increased in popularity under the efficient management of Tom McCann.

New Baby Shop

Victory to the store during the anniversary sale will note with interest the new Baby Shop on the second floor east; the large and complete children's wash department and the large and well stocked fabric and drapery department that has attracted great

The fur storage vault where patrons are enabled to store and remove their furs at any time is a timely addition to the store. $40,000 worth of furs is now in storage.

30 Employees Advancing from a sales force of six in 1897 to the present enrollment of 60 the company takes pride in the accomplishments in the past 33 years and has left no detail overlooked to make the 33rd Anniversary sale of this week the best in the history of the J. W. Hale Company.

PHILADELPHIA CLUB HAS BIG CARD PARTY

The Philadelphia club's card party held last evening at the Highlands Park Community clubhouse, was a decided success in every way. Mrs. C. E. Warren, chairman, and the ladies of her committee, who were all from Mary Bushnell Cheney auxiliary, U. S. W. V., are deeply appreciative of the courtesies extended to them by the house committee of the club at the Highlands. The pleasant surroundings they had had much to do with attracting nearly one hundred players on a July evening to an indoor card party.

Setback and straight 'whist' was played, with 12 prizes for the winners, all of which were donated by members of the auxiliary. Those who received first prizes were Mrs. William McDuff and George H. Wilcox, first honors in whist, and in setback Mrs. William Mitchell and Charles E. Warren won first prizes. At the close of the games fruit punch and home-made cake was served.

tee to make an appointment with State's Attorney John A. Swanson and ask him "why he does not get busy and do something."

The church committee also made public an open letter to Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association for Commerce, asking him to support his recent public statement that one of the major causes for crime and violence is "the constant warfare for the control of the huge revenue derived from the sale of illicit liquor."

The letter closed with the question as to whether the press, the church, big business or the courts should share with prohibition the blame for the condition.

filed today by the plaintiffs, Myron C. Wick, Jr., and the International Shares Corporation, the latter controlled by Eaton, alleging that sale and dissolution of the Youngstown company were not authorized by the holders of shares entitling them to exercise at least two-thirds of the voting power on such proposal.

Other papers filed by the plaintiffs at the same time raised the question of the constitutionality of the new corporation act, under which the defendants, the two steel firms, claim validity of the merger, which was voted by stockholders April 8, 1930.

WORKMEN MAKING CROSSING SMOOTHER

A gang of twenty men was at work on the main street railroad crossing today adding a guard rail inside of each iron. Every rail that crosses the crossing will be treated in this way. It has been found that one of the reasons for the rough driving surface over the tracks is the wearing away of the dirt, forming a groove beside each rail. This will improve the smoothness of the crossing and will also add more safety for the heavy trains that now pass through Manchester.

Conan Doyle Left Code To Confound Skeptics

London, July 9.—(AP)—Preparations which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made to identify himself to his family and certain others in the event of his return after death today were widely discussed in Spiritualistic circles.

Whether identification of Sir Arthur will be possible by means of fingerprints if he communicates from the other world was one of the questions. It was understood that Sir Arthur was much impressed by the American Medium Margery—some of his friends believe he left his own fingerprints so that any communication he might make after death could be confirmed incontrovertibly from being stamped in soft wax by his ectoplasmic hand.

"I feel certain Sir Arthur has left his fingerprints," said Frank Hawken, secretary of the Marybone Spiritualist Association. "He was tremendously interested in the possibilities of this method of confounding the skeptics."

While not directly confirmed by the family it was stated today on apparently good authority that one precaution Sir Arthur took was to agree upon a secret code word to be used in any communication he might make and that this was in Lady Doyle's possession. Such a precaution, it was pointed out, also was taken before his death by the American opponent of Sir Arthur in Spiritualistic matters, Harry Houdini, the magician who left a word with Mrs. Houdini which in some manner later was revealed.

FRISCO WRINGING WET SAYS JURY FOREMAN

San Francisco, July 9.—(AP)—Dr. James Franklin Smith, foreman of the retiring Federal Grand Jury in a statement today attacked prohibition enforcement in San Francisco, which he said was seven to one wet.

He called enforcement "stupid" and "laughable" and its processes "a species of chicanery." Its undercover agents were called "chronic alcoholics."

"The lack of imagination on the part of the enforcement officers," the statement said, "prevents them from following the petty offender to the source. As a consequence a heap of minor cases are repeatedly presented for indictment and the record of enforcement is thereby gloriously swelled."

The Grand Jury recently was taken to task by Federal Judge Frank H. Kerrigan on complaint of United States Attorney George J. Hatfield that the body was balking at some of his presentments and refusing to indict.

GLIDER KEEPS ALOFT FOR NEARLY 8 HOURS

New York, July 9.—(AP)—A wireless message from Captain Sturpich of the liner Saturnia today reported that the glider "Clairborne" stayed in the air for eight hours yesterday, believed to be the longest ocean flight ever made in a towed glider.

At the end of eight hours a faulty shock cord connecting the liner and the glider caused the little flying boat to plunge into the waves, from which it and its two occupants were saved with the help of a life-boat.

The glider, named for the Broadway address who is sponsoring the venture, is being taken to Gibraltar for an attempted east-west flight across the ocean before the Saturday or a sister ship. On the eastward voyage practice flights are being made by the youthful owners, Hugh Keavney and Robert Lewis, to familiarize themselves with ocean flying.

RUPP HEADS ELKS

Atlantic City, N. J., July 9.—(AP)—Lawrence H. Rupp of Allentown, Pa., was elected Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks today to succeed Col. Walter Andrews.

J. Edgar Masters of Charlestown, Pa., was re-elected grand secretary. Lloyd Maxwell of Chicago, grand treasurer and James D. Richardson of Cincinnati grand trustee.

STATE FINANCES

Hartford, July 9.—(AP)—The State of Connecticut will carry forward a balance of $882,344.92 to be applied on this year's business according to the annual and monthly statement prepared for Governor J. H. Trumbull by Edward F. Hall, state commissioner of finance and control.

The statement shows a balance on hand in the general fund at the close of business on June 30 of $86,080,345.50 from which is deducted $5,198,000.88 the amount contracted for instructions, etc., on special application leaving the balance above to be carried forward this year. The $6,080,345.50 on hand on June 30 is $2,763,340.08 greater than on the same date in 1929.

HIS WIVES APPEAR AGAINST BIGAMIST

Lynn, Mass., July 9.—(AP)—While his two wives sat apart from each other only by a police-inspector, Ralph Richardson, 32, an automobile mechanic today was committed to jail in default of $2,000 bail to await action of the Grand Jury on charges of desertion and bigamy.

Richardson was arrested yesterday when in company with his second wife, the former Myrtle May Durst of Detroit, he appeared at the Central Police Station in an effort to straighten out his marital affairs.

While the second wife told court officials today that she still loved Richardson and would stay with him if the present complications could be cleared up, the first wife, the former Gertrude Ayotte of Everett, said she was interested principally in support for herself and their infant son.

Richardson married her in this city in 1926, and according to her story, disappeared shortly after the birth of the child.

Richardson, according to police, then went west and married the then Miss Durst in Los Angeles a year ago last January. Shortly afterward they returned to this city. Six weeks ago Richardson dropped out of sight leaving his second wife without funds. She collapsed on a street a few days later and was taken to a hospital where she told authorities she had not eaten in three days.

QUEEN MARY REVEALED AS CIGARETTE SMOKER

London, July 9.—(AP)—The fierce light which beats about the throne has revealed Queen Mary as a "regular cigarette smoker," according to several British newspapers.

The Evening Standard says: "The news is not at all startling. Long before smoking had ceased to be thought freakish or fast for the average English woman royal ladies having cosmopolitan ways smoked, as did their French and Russian cousins."

"Queen Alexandra smoked, so do her daughters, though naturally they would not be seen smoking on formal public occasions and it will be remembered that cigarette cases which appeared among Princess Mary's wedding presents, were not sent by complete strangers."

It is stated that many ladies invited to royal banquets for the first time refrain from taking a cigarette after dinner for fear of displeasing Queen Mary, but they had been agreeably surprised afterward when her Majesty pressed them to have a cigarette with her.

ANNOUNCE EXAMS FOR U. S. ACADEMIES

The United States Civil Service Commission has advised Senator F. C. Walcott that it will hold competitive examinations for his candidates to both the Naval Academy and the Military Academy on Saturday, October 25, 1930, at nine o'clock in the Federal Building, in the following cities: New Haven, Stamford, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New London, Middletown and Danbury.

Senator Walcott will have two appointments to make to West Point and one appointment to make to Annapolis.

PATROL ABANDONED

Malden, Mass., July 9.—(AP)—The state police patrol of Holy Cross cemetery and the reputed "miracle" grave of the Rev. F. J. Power was abandoned today nine months after its inception.

From a guard of ten men, made necessary by the influx of thousands of pilgrims daily at the time that Cardinal O'Connell, head of the Catholic archdiocese of Boston, ordered the cemetery barred to the public, the force on duty had dwindled until there were only two left.

A NOTABLE EXPERIMENT
 Apparently we have taken the first step in Connecticut towards unemployment insurance. The announcement is made that practically all of the 2200 employees of the General Electric Company's plant in Bridgeport have agreed to join with the company in the establishing of an unemployment fund. This is the first actual application of a plan that has been advocated at various times and places, notably at the recent annual convention of governors. There Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York said among other things:
 "Unemployment insurance we shall come to in this country just as certainly as we have come to workmen's compensation insurance. Ninety per cent of unemployment is wholly without the fault of the worker. Other nations and governments have undertaken various systems which insure their workers when unemployment comes."
 The social and governmental danger is that there will be a natural tendency to pay the cost of unemployment insurance out of current revenues of government. It is clear to me, first, that unemployment insurance must be placed upon an actuarial basis, and, secondly, that contributions must be made by the workers themselves.
 It would appear from the Bridgeport announcement that those who formulated the plan there have the same views as Governor Roosevelt. The Bridgeport General Electric plan is to have the workers contribute one per cent of their weekly wages for a period of six months. The company will add enough to this fund to guarantee payments of 50 per cent of average weekly earnings during lay-offs, for a period not to exceed ten weeks in any one year.

It is difficult to see where the slightest objection can be made by the employer to such a plan. On a wage of, say, $40 a week, a workman would contribute 40 cents weekly or a total in six months of $120 to insure himself an income of $80 a week, or a total of $240, for a possible period of ten weeks lay-off. It is good insurance, and cheap. Union members have been long accustomed to having a small percentage of their wages taken out to meet their dues. Otherwise union treasuries would be hard put to it. Thousands of independent organizations are in existence throughout the country, composed in most instances of employees of concerns who contribute to funds for the benefit of their members in case of illness. Most fraternal organizations have such provisions. All states have some sort of workmen's compensation for injuries sustained while in the line of employment. But not one has made any provision for workmen thrown out of employment by no fault of their own.

It seems to us that there should be no employe of such an organization who can entertain plausible objection to such a plan. One thing is certain the employer is just as anxious to avoid a shut down or suspension of activities as any employe can possibly be. The employing concern, however, in the event of such necessity, wants his reliable experienced men back on the job when it is possible to open again. And, in the case of the General Electric Company at Bridgeport, the concern is willing to contribute rather heavily towards holding their men at least for a period of ten weeks. We look for this plan to spread until within a few years it is taken up generally.

ONE GOOD DECISION
 Whatever else one of President Hoover's commissions may do there will always remain to its credit the decision of the commission investigating the advisability of a federal department of education. It has unanimously concluded that the federal government should not attempt to direct, control or interfere with state administration of education. By the same token we do not agree with the findings of the National Education Association in favor of a secretary of education in the President's cabinet with a department of education. It is hard enough to have hard and fast rules made by some states which must be conformed to by superintendents and principals in the various municipalities. To have some body in Washington organizing fads and prescribing rules for a country district school that must be conformed to by the schools of a metropolis is ridiculous. Put a secretary of education in the President's cabinet and in no time at all he would have a department functioning beyond all limits now dreamed. And like every encroachment of the federal government upon the functions of the states, this enlargement of power would be supported by convincing arguments.

If no other argument could be presented in opposition there remains that ever present one of steadily mounting expense. The National Educational Association being in favor of such an addition to governmental functions is sufficient reason to protest against it. These pedants of the Association have done enough damage without having the backing and influence of the federal government to further hinder the children of this and succeeding generations from obtaining some smattering of the fundamentals of an education.

TICKER TAPE RECEPTIONS
 Bobby Jones has got the ticker tape unwound and is getting set for an attempted win of the United States open at Minneapolis. Admiral Byrd is still being received here and there, having succeeded in picking parts of telephone books and odds and ends of ticker tape out of his ears and from his white uniform. It is reported that it costs New York $200,000 to properly receive celebrities and near-celebrities with ticker tape and torn up telephone directories. No wonder they get wrong numbers in New York. It is not on record that the office forces tear up city directories. They cost money. They are not replaced free of charge as fast as they are torn up or become damaged by actual use as are telephone directories.

It has reached the point now where anyone entering New York at the ocean front, if properly pressed, can have the municipal fire boats, the municipal tug Macom and Grover Whalen, department store superintendent and executive commissioner; a score of motorcycle police and a nice open automobile in which to ride to city hall to have "the world's worst golfer" tell him how nice it is to have him come to New York before going to his home. No one who ever entered the city by train gets a municipal ovation. You have got to enter from the wet end. That's why, when the Yankees with Babe Ruth win a world's series, New York never thinks to give them the ticker tape reception. They are just home folks. It's those from the rest of the world that New York spends $200,000 to receive on behalf of the home ports of those honored. But that's New York.

CONTINUED EFFORT
 Said Senator Royal S. Copeland before the Society of Tammany in New York on July 4: "The people of the United States are now ripe and ready for a change."
 Said Vice President Charles Curtis on July 4 before a gathering of members of the Methodist church: "Whoever wishes to preserve our Constitution in its full purity and vigor must of necessity wish to have all of its articles and amendments honestly obeyed and faithfully enforced."
 And today at Salisbury speakers of note, including Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, are discussing such subjects as Allegiance to the Constitution and Observance of Law. It is a continued effort to make the 18th Amendment stick. It is becoming harder and harder to make an impression on the people. It isn't that they are irreverent of the whole Constitution. No noticeable criticism has been made of the original draft. The fault is with the additions that have been made to it in recent years.

CONNAN DOYLE
 The man who will be best remembered as the creator of that super-detective, Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, is dead. Few remember that he was the author of "Micah Clarke" and "The White Company," two books well worth reading. He hit upon the idea, as a young physician waiting for patients who did not come, of creating a character who would appear in a series of stories, each complete in itself, rather than in a serial as was the custom of that time. Sherlock Holmes caught the fancy. The deductive methods attributed to him were something new. The fact that the reader did not bump against "continued in our next" appealed. Other writers were quick to catch the idea and we soon developed more remarkable fiction detectives than there are plain clothes men in New York. Three generations have been thrilled by the incomparable Sherlock. Others will enjoy the same sensations as the result of the brilliant mind of this creator of fiction. He was prolific. He turned his analytical powers upon a defense of Great Britain's attitude in the Boer war. For that he was knighted. Of late years he had devoted himself exclusively to a passionate association with spiritism. All other interests were subordinated to this. Old associations were severed and his personal popularity dwindled. But, despite his other works of real worth, he will be remembered always as the creator of that fictional detective who never failed to "get his man."

HOLIDAY FIGURES
 We who preach against the foolish custom of burning powder to celebrate the Nation's birth anniversary can find in the published records of the fatalities and injuries over the recent holiday a sinister warning. Of 404 deaths in the country 29 only were due to fireworks in some form or other. Automobiles accounted for 178, drowning for 121, while airplanes, a steady growing menace, accounted for nine.

There were, however, innumerable accidents, more or less serious, from fireworks, many of which cripple or handicap the victims for life. Slowly we are eliminating this unnecessary danger to life and limb. But very slowly. In New York city where the sale of fireworks is forbidden 275 persons were treated for burns from bootleg fireworks, pin wheels, roman candles and rockets. It is very slow work. But we can improve, thereby saving more for airplanes, automobiles and bathing beaches to account for in the grim toll of accidental deaths on holidays.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 Washington.—Reports from Montana indicate that the Republicans of that state in their primary of July 15 will nominate a wet candidate to oppose Senator Thomas J. Walsh in the November election.

There is also an idea at this early date that the famous Mr. Walsh, who will be renominated by the Democrats without opposition, will nose out the wet candidate—not because he has always been very dry but because he is the famous Mr. Walsh.

Montana voters in primaries and elections appear generally not to have voted on wet and dry lines. But if the Republicans nominate a wet candidate they will be joining an obvious trend this year to take advantage of the rise in wet sentiment. Sometimes the trend expresses itself in the disposition of state organizations to oppose the other party's dry candidate with a wet candidate or vice versa and sometimes when one party unit follows the opposition, by resolution or platform plank, into the wet camp.

While all this may not seriously affect the big dry majorities in Congress it is likely to reduce them slightly and it certainly cuts down the sum of total straddling on the prohibition issue. Among other things it has produced possibly surprising surprises for Senators Jones and Dill of Washington, two bone dries, whose respective party state conventions have both recently gone wet.

Supreme Court Justice Albert H. Galen, a wet, is running for the Republican nomination in Montana and he is that he will lick Mr. O. H. P. Shelley, a former state prohibition administrator, who is running as a dry. Among other things, Mr. Shelley has trouble with his initials. Low humorists among his enemies like to call him "One Horse Power" or "One Half Pint."

Presumably looking toward the election, Senator Walsh, a bone dry of long standing, has promised to follow the wishes of Montana voters as they may be expressed in a referendum. Republicans say this minor concession on his part would rather have wet Galen than a man like that, but there really doesn't seem much nourishment in such an argument. Montana has twice voted against having any state enforcement act, however, and Walsh may have to explain during the campaign just how much more he requires in the way of an exemption from the amendment.

Democrats believe that neither Galen nor Shelley is very popular in the state and that Walsh's personal strength will carry him through. His friends think he is stronger than ever because he has been increasingly progressive in the last few years. The Allico-Ansonda-Copper Co. and Montana Power Co., often large factors in Montana politics, will remain neutral in the senatorial fight. Republicans hope to carry Butte, Helena and Great Falls with appeals to the wet-assuming Galen in nomination—and to run strong in the state by convincing wheat farmers, wool growers and cattle men that the new Republican tariff will greatly benefit them. Their opponents suggest that Walsh would have any walkway. Unless the state turns out to be

IN NEW YORK

New York, July 9.—Proud old Father Knickerbocker, with all his traditional airs, has been studying the methods of the Los Angeles boosters, it would seem.

Wherefore Manhattan has set out on a civic crusade for tourists in a fashion which should bring frowns of wonder to the brows of the Californians and Floridians, who have been the nation's best known vacation chasers.

There has come to my desk, for instance, a pamphlet telling of Gotham's virtues as a summer resort. Having been a Californian once myself, I hoped that I had left far behind all references to the superiority of certain brands of sunshine. I was weaned on a chant that went, "the sun shines every day in Los Angeles."

Now, much to my amusement, the good New York boosters inform me that next to Southern California, New York has more sunshine than any city in America. This may all be quite true, but in order to let anyone behold this sunshine, the New York city code will either have to tear down half the skyscrapers or cut down the cloud of carbon monoxide, or whatever it is, that hangs so closely over the streets. Let us go into a bar of the city...

for attractions, as outlined by the boosters:

No. 1.—Chapter heading: "New York is a friendly city. With all its hustle and hurry it still has time to extend a kind word of greeting and to tell its guests how to get hither and yon."

Yeah! Half the taxi-drivers in New York, as a matter of fact, don't know the locations of hotels and frequently have to be personally directed to such places as Gramercy Park. If you ask the average bozo (including myself) how to get anywhere the chances are he'll come back with: "How should I know, I merely live here."

No. 2.—"There are 800 theaters, of which 352 are devoted to drama."
 Yeah-h? (But practically all of them are dark and the drama that is still going face the usual summer fever.)

No. 3.—"What about the cost? A vacation in New York may be made at a cost as little or as great as one desires it to be."
 (That is if you keep the wife away from the Fifth Avenue shop windows.)

And while speaking of boosters I find myself taken severely to task by one Miss Lucille Clendinning, who obviously is a most vigilant and loyal publicity secretary of the Corpus Christi (Texas) Chamber of Commerce. It seems that in a frothy and factious moment I once used the phrase, "Palestine, Texas, wherever that is." So Miss Clendinning up and inquired: "Does New York ever travel outside their own little state? (Answer: Most of them never get farther than Brooklyn.)"

"It doesn't particularly matter to me, but I fear your remark is going to make quite a few Palestinian people stop reading your column. (Ed. note)—Please tell 'em to wait until I get this chance to square myself.) They are an intelligent folk, do not feel as if they are in an obscure spot and at least half the population has been halfway around the world.... Quite a few of them will spend their vacation here on the Texas gulf coast at Corpus Christi where we grow oranges, bananas, figs and 125,000 bales of cotton per year.

The distance from Palestine to Corpus Christi is equal to that from New York, wherever that is, to Weldon, N. C., Grafton, W. Va., or the Manitowish Islands in the Georgian Bay of Lake Huron. If you want to know where some of these latter places are, just write someone in Palestine."
 Ouch!

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK McCOY
DANGERS OF THE PARLOR AND BATH
 Almost fifty per cent of all accidents occur in and around the home. As high as sixty per cent of the accidents in women occur at home. One out of every eight deaths from fall is caused by falling on a floor; one out of every twenty is from falling off, over a chair; one out of ten, out of a window.

Most of the dangerous falls are on the sidewalk about the home or on rough ground in the back yard. Then come falls from stairs or steps; falling on rugs or slipping on waxed floors; falls over furniture; falls from ladders; falls from tables and chairs by people who were in too much of a hurry to get a ladder; falls out of beds; and falls from bathtubs. Mark Twain, the famous author, said that he would certainly avoid "those deadly beds," when told that most people die in them. But many people hasten their ends by rolling out of them onto the floor.

The bed is now more dangerous than the bathtub. Bathrooms possess peculiar perils of their own. People slip on the soap and fall in the tub. They slide on the tiles. They scald themselves with hot water. They touch the electric lights while standing in the tub and are electrocuted. Some with heart disease faint in the tub and are drowned.

Common accidents to children at home are: cutting the hands or feet with glass; playing with matches or setting the clothes on fire from a stove without a guard; swallowing open safety pins; swallowing poisons, such as medicines or rat poisons; scalding themselves by upsetting boiling water on their bodies. Many children play with guns when "they didn't know they were loaded," and kill other children. Some die from infections from running nails into the feet. Many children's fingers are smashed from sticking them into that crack behind the door or from patting them in the doors of cars as they are slammed shut.

Grown-up accidents include walking off the porch in the dark; exploding gasoline while cleaning clothes; trying to lift heavy objects; and some people even hurt themselves while taking off their shoes.

Most home accidents are strictly preventable. If you watch your step at home, keep a sharp eye out for falls, mind the stairs and the chairs, you will form the habit of being as careful at home as you are elsewhere, and may live to see the neighbors going to the hospital for needed stitches, while you keep safe and sound.

Staying up late at night, rushing off without any breakfast, drinking alcohol, poor bearing, nervousness, and mental fatigue will make you prone to accidents. People are not alert at home and this is the big reason that so many dangerous accidents occur while there. Be it what it may, make it as safe at home as it is to travel on a train.

 (Only Miss)
 Question—Mrs. D. asks: "I want to know what city state has the most plentiful of vegetables and such as taken, and sweet and salty as seldom? How can this be done?"
 Answer: The historical fact is, of course, that the soil in the States grows most of the vegetables, and that the best for a short time and then they use the light, and the soil is not so good as it was before. The system of growing is also very important. The system of growing is also very important. The system of growing is also very important.

Article in Silk Mills Plant Magazine Outlines Production Prospects.

Cheney Brothers' sales for the month of June continued in practically all lines to show a falling off from the sales of the corresponding periods of last year, says an article headed "Business Outlook," in the July issue of Cheney Silk News, the official publication of the company distributed to employees today. As a result "the outlook for longer working schedules at Cheney Brothers is not good for the immediate future."

"The total sales of the year to date, however," continues the article, "show a slight increase over last year, though the prices obtained have on the average been less satisfactory." "The prospects for the immediate future are still uncertain. General commodity prices in the central markets of the world have been slowly but steadily falling, and as is true in London, Paris, and Berlin as it is in New York. This decline in commodity prices has gone on continuously in every month since July 1929. There is some encouragement in the fact that the cost of living is thus constantly decreasing."

"The recent renewal of a fall in value of the stock exchanges of all countries has brought them down approximately to the level of the crash of last October and November, which may indicate that values can safely adjust itself."

"The encouraging features in the general situation are the expected adjournment of Congress, and the removal of the disturbing feature of the tariff debate from the picture. The prospect for good crops is fair, and it is realized will decidedly help to improve conditions."

"The outlook for longer working schedules at Cheney Brothers," the article concludes, "is not good for the immediate future."

LEARNS 50 YEARS LATER HE WAS TWAIN'S BARBER

Urbana, Ohio—(AP)—Not until 50 years later did Jonas Slaughter, an apprentice barber on the river boat, "Robert E. Lee," know that the man he regularly shaved was Mark Twain.

Slaughter, who is now 74 years old, said Samuel Clemens, Twain's real name, was a pilot on the "Lee." During the famous race between the "Lee" and "Natchez" from New Orleans to St. Louis, Clemens was the pilot part of the journey. His fellow pilot was a man named Brown, Slaughter said.

"Mr. Brown used to take his fiddle into the pilot house when he was off duty and play for the passengers. One day Mr. Clemens became angry. He glared at Brown and said 'you'll never make a pilot until you throw the fiddle into the river.'"

A half century later Slaughter saw that incident in a Cincinnati paper mentioning Twain, then he realized he had served the famous humorist.

HOWE'S BIRTH

On July 9, 1819, Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, was born in Spencer, Mass.

After working for his father, who was a miller, Howe went to Lowell to work in a cotton machinery manufactory. Two years later he lost his job on account of the financial panic, but got another in a machine shop in Boston.

In 1845 he produced his sewing machine but, despite its obvious advantages, met with bitter opposition. For the next nine years he was desperately poor. He made a trip to England in the hope of being able to interest capitalists. He was unsuccessful, being obliged to sell the English rights to the machine for 250 pounds.

When he returned to this country he found that his patent had been infringed and that many sewing machines were already in use. He therefore began action to establish his patent. After five years of litigation he won his case and thereafter was one of the leading manufacturers in the United States. He shortly became a millionaire. In 1867 he received the gold medal and the cross of the Legion of Honor at Paris.

The author regards education as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. The department statement advised police to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of these drivers operating motor vehicles.

He then discusses the opportunities available; and the qualifications required of the young man who aspires to make a success in business. He emphasizes the fact that this is the day of the specialist, and urges that one concentrate all of his time and energy in learning to do one line of work superlatively well.

The booklet has been approved and commended by many colleges and schools as offering an exceptionally clear and comprehensive picture of the organization of modern business and as a valuable aid in vocational guidance. Mr. Bentley has succeeded in bringing into small compass a vast amount of valuable information. The style is direct, logical, progressive, and withal readable and interesting.

SHIFTS TO YENCHOW

Nanking, China, July 9.—(AP)—A shifting of Nationalist troops from the Hunan front of the war theater to Shantung province was indicated today in military dispatches.

Suchow reports said 30,000 Nationalists were being withdrawn from the Hanchow-Tungkuwan railway front to the vicinity of Yenchow, Shantung, where they were destined to take up positions against the northern rebels who have seized Esinan, provincial capital.

Chiang Kai-Shek, Nationalist president-general, was said to have left his Luho Homan, headquarters for Yenchow to direct operations for the recapture of Tsinan. The Nationalist forces along the Hanchow-Tungkuwan railway while were expected to remain on the defense.

Rebellious northern forces around Yenchow were estimated as numbering 50,000. The number of Nationalists concentrating in Southern Shantung for an attack on the northers was estimated in excess of 50,000.

Northern Alliance troops along the Hanchow-Tungkuwan railway have been estimated at 200,000 and Nationalists in that section are 300,000.

DANCING JUDITH

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Judith Grant, artist's model, loved Steyne, painter, who is also loved by Chummy Morley, Judith's roommate. Chummy had lost his memory when he went away; so he returns he feels obligated to ask Chummy to marry him, although it is Judith he loves. Rich Bruce Gleason wants to star Judith in a musical show, and the studies dancing under the great Guarvitus, who tells her he will send her to Paris to continue her studies. Bruce plans to go to Paris also.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIX
"Let's do something nice, Alan," said Chummy, when Steyne called for her, shortly before seven o'clock that evening.
"She had telephoned to him, meant to say that Judith had accepted an invitation to dine with him."
"I've arranged to go back to my old place," he answered. "We'll pick up Dumont, and I've asked Hynton to come with me—he's my old school chum. You'll like him. He's just back from Paris, where he's been studying a railway. You haven't seen my friend since the piano came in."
"That will be perfectly lovely," Alan said. "Judith has never seen your place at all. I'm sure it's the nicest in New York."
"And where shall we dine?"
"You're looking awfully smart, Chummy."
"What about that little restaurant you took me to lunch at the other day?" she suggested.
"The Rochmont? Yes, it's nice and quiet, and good food. We'll go there."
They called for Judith, who appeared all in yellow—with a brilliant orange sash and stockings, not to mention a pair of shoes. She was in a wildly merry mood.
"Afterward they went to fetch Bastien at the Cafe Turc. The girls waited outside in the cab while Alan went in. He came back not only with Dumont, but with Michael Stone and Tony Leigh, whom Judith greeted with exuberant affection. She affirmed that the champagne had gone to her head, but Chummy declared that she had only drunk one glass, so it was impossible. Judith told them that if Bastien would get and fetch his fiddle she would dance for them at the studio. She said she had never felt so much like dancing in her life. This necessitated two cabs, and as another cab was called, Chummy got out of the first one and said to Steyne:
"When you go on with Judith and Tony, I'll drive with Bastien, and get his violin, and we'll follow you."
Steyne seemed to hesitate for a moment, then he got into the cab. The driver, mistaking the intentions of the others, drove off at once before Tony Leigh had time to enter the vehicle. Alan leaned out of the window to stop the man, but Tony Leigh gestured to the effect that he would follow with the others, so Judith and Alan were alone.
When they reached his abode, he did not touch her hand to help her out. In silence they mounted the stairs, Steyne was breathing heavily, as if with exertion. Judith stood like a little statue while he opened the door.
"Here is my room," he said.
She stepped in and looked around. It was still very bare, but it had pleasing color, chiefly blue, in the curtains and the chair covers. There were heaps of books. The easels were at one end. From the pointed roof hung old brass lamps on chains. The floor was polished and waxed, and only a few small rugs lay on it.

It was still light, but Alan switched on the bulbs in the old lamps, which gave an effect of blue and yellow twilight, mingling with the rosy glow that still lingered over the river in the west.
"Would you like to see my little garden up on the roof?" he asked. Judith shook her head.
"Not now. I want to look at this—please let me! It's so nice!"
She gazed around her. Steyne went to a table standing against the wall, near the piano, lifting napkins, he inspected sandwiches and cakes that were laid out.
Judith did not speak. Her eyes took in everything in the big room. She gazed around her. Once before she had stood at the gate of the world's garden with Alan. Now she had lost the key, but the garden was still there.
Her little face was solemn. This room held everything that she wanted in the world. It seemed to her that, gazing on it for the first time, she was also taking an eternal farewell.
Steyne looked round, took a few steps and was by her side.
"Judith!"
"Don't talk to me!" she implored. "It's so lovely here that I almost want to cry."
"Judith, they'll be here in a minute," Alan said breathlessly. "I must talk to you."
"You want to lecture me again?" Her voice was so patently forced that it rang through the room like some one playing a false note on an instrument. "You're still worried about poor Mr. Punch!"
"No," he said harshly. "I've got beyond that. I've got to tell you, Judith—I can't do it. I can't marry Clarissa. It's no good!"
"You've got to!" She was just a little bunch of fierce, resentful anger. "Chummy's so happy!"
"I can't help it. Doesn't it matter to you that I'm in hell?"
"Not a bit! It's all those years. I saw her—I lived with her. She had no life at all. You took her life away with you. Now you've got to make up for it!"

He turned so that he faced her. "I'm always hoping against hope that you'll see reason, and let me tell her the truth."
"Never—never—never!" She stamped her foot. "And I'll tell you another thing—I can't afford to let anything get on my nerves now. I've got to think of nothing but October. I can't lead old Guarvitus down after what he's done for me."
"Or Mr. Gleason!" exclaimed Steyne bitterly.
"Or Mr. Gleason," she repeated. She looked about her a little wildly. "But where are the others? What is keeping them? They ought to have been here long ago."
The silence in the big room was oppressive. Suddenly Judith caught hold of Steyne's arm and shook it as if in violent anger. "Oh, don't make it so hard—so terribly hard!"
Her voice broke in a helpless sob. The young man looked down into her upturned face. His eyes had neither laughter nor passion in them. They were like a burned-out fire. Without a word he turned and walked out of the room.
At the same moment Judith's strained ears caught the sound of a taxicab stopping in the street below, and laughing voices were wafted up through the summer air. They all came tumbling up the stairs. No one could be dull or depressed for a moment when Tony Leigh and Michael Stone were about. Bastien had his violin case. At the door they had met Frank Hynton, Alan's school chum, a thin gait with a keen face, whose mahogany tan made his eyes, eyebrows and hair look almost white. He was introduced to Judith, who promptly attached him to herself in her perfectly open and unashamed way.
"Judith is going to dance," announced Chummy, beaming with pride. "Judith, did Alan show you the other rooms, and his kitchen, and his garden?"
"No," Judith answered, tossing her bright head, as Dumont tuned up his violin. "I wanted to stay here. This room is lovely. I'll see the others later. You were a long time coming. What happened?"
"Bastien had forgotten his key, and we had to rouse his landlady."
"So like Bastien!" said Judith carelessly. "We thought you'd broken down."
She was skimming about the room when others tearfully disposed themselves to watch her dance.
There was a wide, low divan against the wall, at a right angle with the piano. Chummy sat on it between Tony Leigh and Hynton. Michael Stone sat on the floor, on some cushions, at the other end of the room. Alan picked up the rugs and threw them into a corner. Then he came and sat down beside Hynton.
"What's it going to be, Judith?" Michael Stone called out.
The girl, still wearing her shabby black cloak, danced up to Bastien, and, standing on tiptoe, whispered to him. He nodded, and Alan wondered if it were only he who saw the pain in Dumont's eyes.
Judith ran to the door and called out to ask Steyne where the switches were. He told her, and she extinguished two of the three lamps, leaving the room in partial darkness.
Dumont burst into a gay, light-footed melody, reminiscent of Mozart in the dance. Steyne, it was clear and polished, like a string of gems. Dumont was quite a violinist, and but for the fact that one must be a veritable master to succeed publicly, he might have been heard of by the world.
The music went on for two or three minutes. Judith seemed to have disappeared; then, suddenly, she leaped into the middle of the room, like a fiery glittering on dark foliage at the coming of night.
Alan shut his eyes every now and then, his mind too full to doubt his own wish—it was an Italian night, an orange grove under a hot moon, and that little vivid figure, now a fiery, now a half-human elf, and again a joyous maiden picking the golden fruit, reaching up, up to the highest boughs. It was all there—all in those nimble feet, in those thin arms, in that bright head.
He stared out of the open windows. The night was deepening, and it spread a curtain of deep blue. He looked back again, and there was all the charm and wonder of the south.

It was a very short dance. The golden feet began to move more slowly; the daring leaps were no more; the orange and yellow of Judith's dress ceased to be an incandescent flame. Languously, gently, swaying like a tired flower, she moved toward the door to a magical waltz tune from Bastien's violin.
Alan could bear no more. Chummy pulled his sleeve and whispered rapturous praise.
The next moment Judith switched on the lights, ran across the room, and landed with a lithesome bound on Tony's knees. There was a burst of laughter—relief after the strain. Everybody cried out something at once.
"Wonderful! Judith, you've got them all beaten—every one of them!"
"Judith, we'll be proud of you when you appear in public!"
"Judith darling, I've never had such a treat in my life!"—this from Chummy.
Steyne didn't know what to say. He listened as his friend Hynton expressed himself a little awkwardly, but with unbounded admiration. Then, to test his own voice, he called out:
"Dumont, I had no idea you could play like that!"
"Neither had any of us," put in Chummy. "It's Judith who makes him do it!"
Dumont struck up a modern waltz, and they all started dancing—Hynton with Chummy, Tony Leigh and Michael Stone together. Alan himself beside Judith, by one of the windows.

Bliss On How To Keep Well by World Famous Authority

FINDS SECRETIONS FROM GLANDS AFFECT GROWTH OF THE HAIR.
By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.
Recent investigations have revealed the intimate relationship between the functioning of the glands of the body and the hair.
It has become apparent in the last twenty years that the skin and hair are particularly influenced by glandular secretions. Disturbances of the growth of the hair have been noted in both oversecretion and undersecretion of the thyroid gland.
In cases in which the secretion is less than it should be, the hair is thin, dry and lusterless and may be prematurely gray. If such cases are given proper dosages of thyroid extract, the hair and the skin usually improve. In cases in which the secretion of the thyroid gland is too great, there are, in addition to the usual symptoms, in many instances, thinning of the hair over the scalp, and sometimes complete baldness.
Within the skull there is a little gland called the hypophysis or pituitary gland, which is closely related to various disorders of growth and development. In case there is too much secretion of this gland, there is not infrequently pigmentation of the skin in various places and a considerable growth of superfluous hair. One investigator noticed particularly in women heavy growths of hair on the chest, the legs, and sometimes also on the face, associated with overaction of this gland.
Several investigators have noticed this symptom in at least one-fourth of 400 cases and they have added the fact that this additional hair is thick, wiry and oily. On the other hand, should the secretion of this gland be deficient, the skin is likely to be smooth, transparent and free from moisture, and there is a tendency to lack of hair upon the body.
In a recent review of the subject, Dr. Zola K. Cooper points out that in disorders of the suprarenal glands, the small organs above the kidney, which have apparently several different types of secretion, various changes may occur in the distribution of hair over the body, associated also with a tendency toward masculinity or femininity in either males or females with some extremely surprising results.
It has long been known that the glands act as an interlocking chain, the secretion of one gland affecting that of another. Overgrowth of hair is found in overfunction of

YOUR CHILDREN

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
© 1928 by MCA Service, Inc.

The young mother with her first baby seems to dread the prospect of giving him his first bath. She may have the courage that won the high-jumping feat at the horse show, piloted an airplane through storms, or battled with a bandit, but that baby! It takes moral courage to douse water and soap on a bit of human china that she is convinced will break the first time she turns him over.
Well—he won't break! Babies are pretty tough little things as a rule. Of course he may bend—the wrong way—but if his back is well supported every time he is lifted and his wobbly head steadied by a firm hand, let him bend all he wants to otherwise.
As bathing is a tiring process to a young delicate infant, it is better to have everything ready ahead of time, to the last bit of cotton—all his clean clothes, the bathtub or basin, all his toilet articles, everything. The old way was to lay the baby over the mother's knee and it's still being done in the best families, but the folding canvas table—canvases stretched between standards of wood—invented by some bright person with the mother's comfort in mind, as well as the baby's, is a godsend if one can afford it. Another comfort is the low table to hold all the accessories. A real necessity is the low armless chair, particularly if he is to have a knee bath.
The mother should have a large bath apron tied around her, made of turkish toweling or other warm absorbent material big enough to wrap him in instantly when he is lifted out of the water. He may be put in the small bathtub as soon as the umbilical scar is healed. Bathing the first two weeks is usually attended to by the nurse so the mother won't have to wait long after the first leaves before giving him his first real tub bath instead of a sponge bath.

The temperature of the room should be about 75 degrees—not lower. The water should be 98 or several different glands, and the lack of hair found in underfunction of the same glands. The subject has just begun to be studied, and undoubtedly adequate explanations for superfluous hair and for lack of hair will be found in the majority of cases when more evidence has been accumulated.
Silk gloves are made either of Milanese or tricot silk. A silk glove is not very durable, double finger tips are put on most of them, each tip being pasted on the inside of the glove finger separately. Silk gloves are sometimes lined with a material called cotton-wool or with silk. Both materials add strength and warmth and durability. The best silk gloves in the world are made in the United States.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY
Frozen or jellied salads must be made hours before wanted and all ready to serve when guests arrive without additional work. They may be chilled or frozen in an iceless refrigerator without any labor or they can be packed in ice and salt and frozen without stirring.
Although the most successful salads have salad dressing folded in before moldering and chilling, salad dressing also is used as a garnish when they are arranged for serving. The perfect salad is pleasingly tart.
There is almost no limit to the combinations of fruits to be used in dessert salads. One of the most delicious is red raspberry and peach with cheese balls. This combination can be used frozen or jellied. If a jellied salad is wanted, increase the amount of gelatine to two table-spoonsfuls.

Ingredients and turn into mold. Pack in eight parts fine-chopped ice to one part ice cream salt and let stand three hours or longer. Combine cheese and butter, working with a fork until smooth. Form in small fat cakes and stick pointed ends of almonds into each cake, daisy fashion and the cheese center. Serve the salad on chilled lettuce with a garnish of mayonnaise and a "daisy."

BOSTON LODGE "OUT"
Atlantic City, N. J., July 9.—(AP)—An official of the Grand Lodge of Elks who declined to permit his name to be used, declared today that the case of the Boston lodge, whose charter was revoked when Federal authorities padlocked several rooms in the Elks building in that city, would not be discussed during the session of the Grand Lodge here.
"The Boston Lodge is out and that is all there is to it," he said.

CIRCUS COOK KILLED
Brockville, Ont., July 9.—(AP)—Harry Hertzelt of Boston, a cook for the Shelley circus, was crushed to death under one of the show wagons here today.
Hertzelt, who was about 20, was sleeping under the wagon when other employes attached a tractor to it and unknowingly drew it over his chest.

Red Raspberry and Peach Salad
One quart red raspberries, 2 cups diced peaches, 2 teaspoons granulated gelatine, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1/2 cup whipping cream, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 package Philadelphia cream cheese, 2 tablespoons butter, salted almonds.
Crush berries and extract juice. Pour 1 cup water through crushed berries. Soften gelatine in 4 table-spoons cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add to berry juice with lemon juice and a little sugar if necessary. When mixture begins to stiffen, pare and dice peaches. Add at once to jelly with mayonnaise and whipped cream. Fold lightly to mix.

Wildcats Claw Way To Win Over Legion

Come From Behind To Pound Fraser Off Mound and Score a 13 to 7 Triumph At West Side.

The West Side Wildcats clawed their way to a victory over the Legion last evening at the West Side playground the score being 13 to 7. The contest was rather lively played and all twirlers were treated roughly at times.

By scoring one run in each of the first and second innings the Legion managed to hold the advantage in the early stages of the game, but the Wildcats came back in the third and fourth stanzas to put the game on ice.

"Chick" Fraser was on the mound for the Legion in the first four frames and found considerable difficulty keeping the runners off the bases. Poor support did not help matters and the start of the fifth saw Francis Mahoney shooting them over to the Wildcats. He was somewhat more effective but the Cats seemed to like his slant too. Johnny Hedlund, Wildcat twirler, pitched a steady game particularly with the bases occupied.

In the third inning Harold Cielwilo received a bad bruised leg when he attempted to tag Hadden at the plate. He was unable to continue and was replaced with Squatrito.

Batting honors were captured by the rival catchers Sendrowski and Squatrito each with three singles, one of the latter being a double. There will be no game Thursday evening for the Legion. Friday night the squad will meet at the West Side Recreation building at 7 o'clock to go to New Britain to play the Legion team of the Eddy Glover Post.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Flings As Flappers
"Chicken Feed" won't pay for the flapper's dinner.
Often a red lip drives away the blues.
A stoic matron is a flapper gone to waste.

A lot of these, "I'll pay you $100 a week" advertisements appropriately appear in fiction magazines.
Ted—I hear Tom started in business on a shoestring.
Ned—Not exactly. He had a slogan.

Another way to keep from growing old is to believe the man who says he wants an honest criticism.

A husband says the wives ought to get together and find out which one of them holds the endurance championship. That is, who has been up in the air for the longest time.

Asked to use the word deceit, Sammy studied a moment, then said: "I had on a new pair of pants and slid down on a board in which there was a nail and ripped the seat."

Most of us are more in need of mercy than justice.

Don't you envy the society woman her good digestion? "See 'b' th' payers" at at nearly every social affair she eats a salad plate.

Mrs. James—I hope you'll dance with me tonight, Mr. Jones.
Mr. Jones—Oh, rather! I hope you don't think I came here merely for pleasure!

"Facts are stubborn things," we are told. Yes, but not so much so as women.

Judge—How did he try it?
Tough Cop—He tok a punch at me.

The fellow who "hasn't an enemy in the world" can usually be marked down a 100 per cent. successful failure.

Mayor Brown—My son graduated from college with highest distinction.
Judge Green—That's nothing; my son wrote the story that got his college magazine suppressed.

Thinking without speaking has always been considered far better than speaking without thinking.

Worry is useless but no more so than advising people not to.

When these long skirts come back, it's going to take some little time for the flappers to get used to sneaking into a dark hallway when their garters slip.

"Daddy wants me to fill his shoes when I grow up," says Elmer, dumping the cuspidor in his father's boots.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)
Since starting with the caravan the bunch had had a chance to scan a lot of open country and the scenes had been real fine. The mules still had a heap of pep and proved it by the way they'd stepped. In fact all things had turned out great. No one had cause to whine. But Cloway seemed to think that he must be impatient as could be, so while they sat in a home of funny Persian make, he said, "Oh, let's be on our way. I'd like to reach Tehran today. Just how far is that town from here and how long will it take?"
