

CHAMBER'S OUTING COMPLETE SUCCESS

Town Sends 88 to Moodus Camp for Enjoyable Dinner and Day of Sports.

Eighty-eight Manchester people enjoyed themselves to the utmost yesterday. The direct cause of their enjoyment was the first annual outing of the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce at Elm Camp, Moodus, the cause aided by perfect outing weather and a splendid program of land and water sports, climaxed by two highly appetizing and satisfying meals.

The 88 who attended the outing left from the Chamber office and other points in 30 automobiles at 8 o'clock in the morning. The sports program was launched immediately upon arrival at the camp under the supervision of Arthur Hultman, chairman of the sports committee. The morning feature was two baseball games, one to each ball club and the other an indoor baseball. The games were tense with excitement throughout, and attracted the attention of practically everyone in the party and who did not play were kept busy cheering on the side lines.

At 11:30 o'clock a stampede began in the direction of the dance pavilion, the reason was lunch, consisting of delectable clam chowder, ham and cheese sandwiches, coffee and fruit.

Directly after lunch, Lewis Lloyd of the Recreation Center, who had charge of the sports at the invitation of the sports committee, assisted by Mr. Peckham, sports director of the camp, got his program underway. Everyone showed interest in this phase of the outing and took part with a will but it was Earl that captured high honors of the afternoon. The "Earl" was Earl Clifford who started by winning the backward running race and then the egg and spoon race, the hopping race, and the hands and feet race. William Kronfeld captured the shoe race while honors on the water, in the canoe races went to William Oswald and Joseph Tedford in both the hand paddle and standing paddle events. The tilting contest was won by Harold Burr and William Rubinow. Arthur Hultman awarded the prizes at the close of the dinner at 4:30 o'clock.

Dinner was served in the new dining hall, which with its numerous windows looked like a large and delightful sun parlor, overlooking the Salmon River, on the bank of which the camp is located. The dinner consisted of steamed clams, drawn butter, followed by a fish course of fillet of sole; then the main course of delicious steak with mushrooms, green peas, and new potatoes, sliced tomatoes and assorted pickles, rolls and butter, coffee, and apple pie and ice cream with watermelon.

Those who attended the outing were: Karl Marks, Albert Klotzer, Fred T. Blah, Jr., Fred T. Blah, Sr., George Keith (Keith Co.) (14 employees), Peter Salmonson, J. J. Mahan, J. Frank Cowen, E. L. G. Hohenhalt, Jr., The Manchester Electric Co. (3 employees), S. H. Simon, Joseph C. Benson, E. J. Campbell, William Knofta, John I. Olson (2 employees), Arthur Knofta, Carl Anderson.

HOOVER NOMINATIONS

Washington, July 17.—(AP)—Senator Watson, the majority leader, said today after a call at the White House that the Senate would stay in session long enough after the London treaty is disposed of to "confirm most of the nominations" President Hoover is expected to submit.

No nominations are to be sent to the Senate until a time for voting on the treaty has been set. The president plans to name members of the newly created power commission and of the tariff commission as well as a number of federal judges. Watson said some of the controversial nominations would go over until the December session. Treaty supporters believe transmission of the nominations at this time would help opponents of the pact.

EXCITEMENT STIRS HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members who sat near Beckett as he snatched the mace reported him to the chair as shouting "Mr. Speaker, it's a damned disgrace!" referring apparently to his Labor colleague's suspension.

Pennsylvania and North Carolina seem assured by their new populations of securing an additional member in Congress but Washington 71,000 under her estimated population may not come within the required number for a new Congressman. The preliminary census statistics bear out predictions of loss in Indiana, Ohio, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Tennessee and Vermont. Population figures have not been received for Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Pennsylvania or Virginia, which states were figured for losses.

BREAKS PLANE RECORD

Paris, July 17.—(AP)—Lieutenant Paris today broke the American record for circular flight with a load of 500 kilograms. The flight was made in a biplane which was not announced, was claimed to make him the holder of eight world duration and distance flight records for various loads.

Connell and Rodd, Americans, held the record Paris broke today, of 20 hours and 45 minutes.

TIM'S GOOD SAMARITAN TO YOUTHFUL SWIMMERS

Center Street Man Takes Three Loads of Boys to Swimming Hole Nearly Every Day.

In the life of every American boy, there is one thrill that lingers on forever—trips to the old swimming hole. And in connection with this, it is interesting to note the many friends Timmy Holloran, well known local undertaker, is making by his generosity in providing daily transportation for many youngsters.

Hardly a day goes by that Timmy isn't noticed driving down Main street with his automobile filled with youngsters whose beaming smiles show their happiness. And when Timmy isn't seen making the trip, it is usually because of rain or real cold weather. Today, for instance, he carted three loads of smiling faces and tanned bodies over to Globe where they continued to enjoy the healthful advantages of water and sun.

Timmy never tires of the task which he began 15 years ago. In fact he gets almost as much of a thrill out of the favor as the boys do out of the ride and the dip combined. Between 20 and 30 boys gather at Timmy's Center street home each day awaiting their ride. They come from surprisingly far away points which extend out to the West Side and over to Middle Turnpike. The more, the merrier, seems to be Timmy's motto. He usually takes a batch of 15 at a time.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Ambitious bullish operations were pressed forward aggressively in today's Stock Market, although further flourish of profit taking hampered the proceedings at times. The bull leadership displayed no impairment of confidence, although their following appeared rather nervous and not averse to deserting the cause at the first sign of difficulty.

With business news still failing to show anything conclusive about the expected, or hoped for, recovery, several commission houses advised their clients to take profits and await reactions before doing further buying.

The market was subjected to considerable selling in the first half hour, but it was well absorbed, and during the next few hours of trading, the list showed considerable buoyancy, as pool favorites were briskly worked higher.

The market turned dull during the early afternoon, and further profit taking appeared, but an upturn in the wheat market at that time, reflecting reports of rust in Manitoba, was a stabilizing development.

Corporate news was a little less pleasing, there has been fear for the past few days, when a few large corporations published favorable earnings statements, appearing to include "Purity" Bakeries, showing net equal to $3 a share during the first 28 weeks of the year, as reduced from $3.45 in the same period a year ago, and Matheson Alkali, with 81 cents a share in the June quarter, as reduced from 96 cents.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corp., was mildly optimistic. He would not report for the first time since the radio industry has passed through a very trying stage and it is just about able now to sense the turn toward improved conditions.

The six months reports of power consumption issued by National Electric Light Association, was interpreted favorably to manufacturers of small electrical appliances. Household consumption showed a gain of 13.7 per cent over last year, and small business concerns, 6.8 per cent. Large industrial users, however, took 2.2 per cent less, and the gain for the entire country was only 1.7 per cent, considerably less than normal.

News from the oil industry was again pleasing with Texas producers agreeing to further reductions, and the Sinclair-Erie merger negotiations, which may include disposal of holdings in Sinclair Pipe Line to Standard of Indiana, understood to be progressing.

POLICEMAN EXONERATED FOR KILLING RUNNER

White Plains, N. Y., July 17.—(AP)—State Police Sergeant Charles La Forge was exonerated today of blame in the killing of Philip Piscitello, of Albion, Pa., whom he shot during a liquor raid. He said he mistook a shiny buckle on Piscitello's belt for a pistol. Federal agents and another state trooper testified at today's inquest that Piscitello failed to obey La Forge's second command to throw up his hands and reached under his coat as though to draw a gun. A bright object sparkled and La Forge fired. The only glistening article found on Piscitello was his belt buckle. Agents said today that they were in telegraphic communication with Miami to check a report that Piscitello had been a henchman of Al Capone.

BRUENING THREATENS GERMANY'S SOCIALISTS

Berlin, July 17.—(AP)—The club of virtual dictatorship government by decree was brandished over Germany today by the chancellor, Dr. Heinrich Brüning. Indications were that the Reichstag would be dissolved if it questioned the chancellor's plan to enact the government's financial program in this wise. In such an eventuality President Paul von Hindenburg, the chancellor and the finance minister Dr. Hermann Dietrich would exercise, under Article 48 of the constitution, an almost limitless authority, with no responsibility to a legislative body. The situation came to a head yesterday in debate on Article 2 of the finance ministry's program involving new forms of taxation. The article was rejected 256 to 204. Shortly afterward the Cabinet met and decided to enact the finance measures by decree, an action authorized by the president who also gave the chancellor authority to dissolve Parliament.

HIGH COST OF ELECTIONS

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick's appearance before the Senate committee investigating the Illinois Senatorial campaign expense brings up once more that unpleasant subject of the high cost of elections. Small boys are still told that they have the chance of growing up to be President. But no one yet to have had the temerity to impose upon fanciful youth the thought that he might grow wealthy enough to win a seat in the United States Senate.

Those happy days of youth when picturing the future have never visualized a seat in the Senate. Brakeman, policeman, fireman, yes. Now aviator, of course, and explorer and big game hunter. Even President. But not a Senator.

Mrs. McCormick had acknowledged an expenditure of $325,000 but it appears that there was a matter of $73,000 more or less that she had neglected to mention in her sworn statement. This, it should be remembered, was not expended for her election. No, indeed. This was only the cost of the nomination; the privilege of being the nominee of her party. Election expenses are yet to come.

This means that a conservative estimate of the cost of a Senate seat from Illinois is half a million dollars. It isn't qualification alone that wins membership in the United States Senate. It is command of plenty of coin of the realm, properly distributed, that turns the trick now as it has in the past.

"I have been in politics for twenty-five years and I know the situation from A to Z," Mrs. McCormick informed the inquiring committee-man. She got her training under a rather famous distributor of election funds—her father, Mark Hanna. She does know politics. She has money and an organization behind her that is able to put its hands on more, and then knows what to do with it. "It may be possible to buy certain elections," Mrs. McCormick is quoted as having told the committee, "but you couldn't buy Illinois landladies." Landladies, as we understand that phenomena, have their beginnings in a small way until suddenly the great mass is released. While it may be that one cannot buy an "Illinois landlady" it is just as feasible there to buy the start of one as it is elsewhere. The great mass of the voting public loses a winner and a seat on the band wagon, which accounts for landslides of the political type. At any rate half a million can buy enough to start one, and it evidently did. Young America must be taught that before he can hope to aspire to a seat in the United States Senate he must first be a millionaire at least. Meantime he can practice his politics by running for some municipal office where he ought to win experience for something like $50,000 per run.

DISEASED JUSTICE

It is a trifle difficult to maintain our belief in the administration of justice and continue to read the papers. Especially is this true in the larger cities. We find our faith in the integrity of the courts inclined to waver and, were we to be so unfortunate as to live in New York, we are certain we would be unable to prevent it from wavering vigorously. We now have the record of four judges having resigned under fire in New York in the last ten months. Magistrate Ewald is the latest. He quit to forestall removal proceedings. With others, he was charged with fraudulent practices in the sale of stock. Then it was discovered that he had affixed his signature to a record showing a conviction for a third offense of speeding against one, William F. Badger, who, as a matter of fact, never was brought to trial. It is charged that when a friend bought $1,000 worth of a certain stock in which the judge was interested, the case was dismissed, but the record was kept straight. "General Sessions Judge Manoussos was the first to resign. He was chairman of the defunct City Trust Company which failed for $5,000,000. City Magistrate Vitale was removed under charges by the Supreme Court. County Judge Vaines is now under trial on a charge of mail fraud. Several other officers not judges have been getting out of office just ahead of special activities of prosecuting officials.

Now it develops that Ewald was appointed to administer justice on the recommendation of David Maier, Tammany political leader, who, it has been discovered, is an ex-convict. The Prosecuting Attorney has in his possession a dozen letters written to Ewald by Maier demanding favors for friends who were to appear before him. Another interesting development is noted in the discovery that the criminal records of Maier are missing from the police files. Even his rogues' gallery picture is not where it should have been. Evidently Maier's and Ewald's influence reached into the secret records of the police department. Justice in New York seems on the face of the records to be not only blind but badly diseased.

STUDIED UNFAIRNESS

The studied unfairness of the Methodist Church as represented by its press contributions in its campaign for the enforcement of the 18th Amendment is emphasized in the recent attempt to discount the overwhelming victory of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow in the New Jersey primaries.

"There is more than a little reason to suspect," this inspired article says, "that half of those constituting his majority were, in fact, voting for Lindy and the other half for Ann." In such manner does this press department of the same organization that whitewashes its stock gambling bishops attempt by ridicule to belittle the issue and minimize the meaning of the avalanche of votes that went against the dry candidate. But Methodist dry sentiment and childish ridicule cannot take from the public the belief that Mr. Morrow's victory was due primarily to his ability, and to obvious proof that he is willing to use it in the interests of his country. It is the general belief that he is pliant servant to no man. It was plainly evident from his outspoken stand on the matter of the 18th Amendment that he does not do things with mental reservations. He is not a straddler. Mr. Morrow's votes were won, for the most part, because it is generally recognized that he is one of the rare men we could use in the United States Senate but who, all too seldom, are unavailable. While undoubtedly he received some votes solely because of his stand against the present mistaken attitude of the country towards the liquor question, the big majority of them carried the cross opposite his name because he is Dwight W. Morrow. And for no other reason. He would have had his big majority if Colonel Lindbergh had been unknown to him. He so appealed to the cold reason of his constituents that the only attitude left for would-be detractors is that of blind prejudice.

BOULDER DAM

Work on the preliminaries of building Boulder Dam by the Federal Government has actually been started. Seven years hence, more or less, we shall own the highest dam in the world which will hold back enough water to cover the state of Kentucky to the depth of a foot. Providing the expense, comes within the scope of the estimates, the United States will have expended $165,000,000 on the project, $35,000,000 more than was spent on the Muscle Shoals project which, so far, has been a total waste of good money. In spite of the fact that the state of Arizona has not joined the six others most interested in agreement as to all of the details of distribution, and in spite of the fact that there is a little matter of agreement with Mexico to be arrived at this particular project seems to have been worked out so that even the Senate will be unable to do much damage in the future.

There have been many who have not believed that the dam should have been a government proposition while admitting that the plan for building it to furnish electric energy over a vast area and water for irrigation over nearly as extensive a section of country, to say nothing of water for other purposes to communities in Southern California, is proper and desirable. Ultimately it is expected that the entire cost will be recovered through the sale of the electricity. In any event it seems reasonable to believe that considerable pains have been taken to avoid such a mess as the government got into with the completion of the Muscle Shoals. In addition

SWOLLEN NECK GLANDS

Whenever you have a cold or acute tonsillitis, you probably have noticed a number of hard small lumps on both sides of the neck under the jaw. These are swollen lymph glands of which there are six or seven hundred in various parts of the body. The largest groups of these glands are in the neck, upper chest, in the axilla under the arms, and in the groins. These glands act as filter and storage stations of the lymphatic vessels and they are frequently a battleground, where the white blood corpuscles fight disease germs and toxins.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

Washington, July 17.—Like so many revivalists, the big shots of the Department of Agriculture and the Federal Farm Board have gone out into the grain belt to exhort the farmers to plant less wheat. This business of acreage reduction has always been considered something virtually impossible to achieve except by compulsion or through uncontrollable economic forces but the farmers are learning that they can't expect aid from the government until they begin to keep down their production.

The logical but unconfessed eventual aim of the curtailment campaign is to get the production of wheat and similar exports surplus crops down to a basis of domestic consumption. Our wheat farmers raise about a billion bushels a year and have to export around 200,000,000 bushels of it. Eliminating that 200,000,000 bushels is a tremendous and perhaps impossible job, but it would give the farmer the benefit of the 42-cent-a-bushel duty on wheat which he doesn't get now and would no longer keep him at the mercy of prices and crops abroad. Our entire crop is about a third of the world crop.

Legge Leads the Way
The gentleman who went out to campaign for acreage reduction included Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, Chairman Legge of the Farm Board, Chief Nils Olsen of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department's extension service, Statistical Expert O. C. Stone and Reuben Brigham of the department's press service. Members of the Farm Board have been chiming in on the chorus.

Although my real reduction movement will be nullified by a rush to increase acreage again as soon as prices advance and there is a belief that many farmers will plant more when they think other farmers will plant less, this mission of mine is likely to be followed by real curtailment of planting this fall. Not because the big campaign will have any effect—although it may have some—but because wheat prices have been down as low as 65 cents a bushel. Low wheat prices automatically cut acreage of the next crop. World conditions, however, will set the prices on this crop for which acreage presumably will be curtailed.

Some agricultural experts contend that the official reduction will be directed at the high production cost areas east of the Mississippi instead of beginning in Kansas, Nebraska and other wheat states where the grain can be raised on a basis more nearly approaching economic soundness. The lower production cost area will be penalized to the extent that it curtails, they say, while the high cost areas will benefit.

Those authorities who discuss the situation most frankly insist that wheat in this country simply can't compete in wheat with the rest of the world, that the effects of the competition are becoming more serious on our farmers and that the first time Russia comes across with a big export surplus heaven only knows what will happen to the wheat market.

The Farm Board's Fix
The unreliability of estimates of the world supply and demand for wheat was demonstrated by the bad guess made by the Farm Board when it tried to peg the price and found itself loaded up with 60,000,000 bushels of wheat which it could only sell now at a tremendous loss and a simultaneous terrific blow to the market. Chairman Legge doggedly insists that the world situation doesn't justify current low prices but he must remind the farmers of the lawyer who told his imprisoned client that "they can't put you in jail for that."

Although the campaign for spring wheat reduction dropped the last cotton report that cotton planting had dropped from about 16,000,000 to 14,000,000 acres, a really substantial decline. But the fact that a real good cotton crop might offset that acreage reduction indicates just how uncertain it is to figure what a given agricultural situation will be a few months ahead.

tion: the fact that man is purposing to make a lake 100 miles in length and 500 feet deep at the dam makes it something to square our shoulders and "point with pride."

NO QUORUM WORRY
We notice that the doubt about the Senate being able to muster a quorum to ratify the naval treaty had been almost entirely removed. The proponents of the treaty never have had much worry about mustering the necessary number of members to keep the Senate legally in session. It is noticeable that there are more Senators on hand now than was the case when the special session was called to order. Any one equipped with the political ear that catches the rumbling of dissatisfied constituents, as is a Senator, can account for this increased attendance. The country would not have been patient or considerate with Senators who prevented consideration of the Navy pact by keeping the membership present below the requisite number for a quorum. As it is now the value of the debate is negligible. It is carried on merely to put off the inevitable—the ratification of the Naval treaty.

It does not matter whether these glands are tubercular or not, it is merely a quarrel over names, and places too much attention on a dreaded disease, when the fact is there must be a definite cause of some infection in an adjacent region which is forcing the glands to enlarge. The cause must be searched for and removed, and the swollen glands then will subside as soon as they have completed their work of elimination.

After the infection has been cleared up the glands always can be made to discharge their contents by such sensible treatment as fasting and dieting and the use of hot applications to the affected parts. An operation on the glands is not necessary to do this.

By far the greatest number of cases of swollen glands in the neck automatically would become well just by curing the acute and chronic nasal and throat catarrh which is usually the present. The dieting program which I have so often outlined for catarrh, will be found to be beneficial in practically every case of swollen neck glands.

If the glands are enlarged because of tubercular infection, then the rest of the system will not be benefited by the dieting program which I have so often outlined for catarrh, will be found to be beneficial in practically every case of swollen neck glands.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Baby's Care)
Question:—G. F. P. writes: "My baby took ultra-violet ray treatments all last winter for rickets and appears to be cured, but her abdomen usually is enlarged. Should I discontinue the ultra-violet ray treatments or should I continue them? She is 18 months old."
Answer: Your child should have a diet of pure Holstein milk, each feeding to be preceded by a plentiful amount of orange juice. In six months or so some non-starchy vegetables, such as spinach and carrots should be added to the diet. Keep up the ultra-violet treatments occasionally, but you must depend on correct dieting for permanent relief. An abdominal support will not help, but the abdominal distention can be corrected when your child is old enough to take the proper exercises. This is also true about the fat feet. Send your full name and address on a large stamped envelope, and I will send you special articles on deoeping a fat abdomen, and also for overcoming fallen arches.

But there are also just as many who remember. Take, for instance, Anna Case, the famous diva. No operative performer has made a bigger name for herself. The charming little town of New York, N. J., is not quite so well known. There was a time when Miss Case needed money to carry on her studies. She was a student. To accomplish anything she had to study, and to study she needed cash.

There was a little church in the little Jersey town—the Reformed Church of Neeshanic. They gave Miss Case a job as soloist at $12 a month once-upon-a-time. It seemed like a lot of money then.

ROCKVILLE

Death of Mrs. E. Stevens Henry. Mrs. Lucina Elizabeth Henry, 98, widow of the late E. Stevens Henry, of St. Bernard's terrace, Rockville's oldest woman, died at her home on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, due to infirmities of old age.

Mrs. Henry was born in Lebanon, January 28, 1832, the daughter of Silas and Sally Ann (Brown) Dewey. Mrs. Henry and her husband have done much towards the upbuilding of Rockville and the corner at his death gave many public bequests, one being the Henry site on Fox Hill, which is being transformed into a park.

The funeral will be held from the Lucina Memorial Chapel on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with Rev. George S. Brooks officiating. Burial will be in the family plot at Grove Hill cemetery.

Council Meeting. At the meeting of the Common Council held in the Council Chamber, Memorial building, on Tuesday night, the matter of the change in the roads at the lower end of the town was the cause of considerable discussion.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor A. E. Waite and lasted about forty minutes. Those present were Aldermen Ide, Larkin and Murphy; Councilmen Lee and Wood; Jackson, Martini and Newell; City Clerk Raymond Hunt, and the press.

The following petitions were granted: Wojcik and Larric Nunn, garage 20x20 on Galopie street; Ida Weber, garage 10x18, on Toland avenue; Joseph Webster, garage 12x18 on Sunset avenue; Edward Weber, garage 18x18, on Cherry street; Peter Beluck, chicken coop 6x7, on Grand avenue; Albert Weber, veranda 8x4, on Thomas street.

A discussion took place on a building which is being built on Burkely Terrace. The Public Works Department was invited to stop the building as it is not permitted to be built on the present site.

At the last Council session, a petition was received by forty residents of the West End asking that Bellevue avenue be accepted as a city street. The Public Works committee reported unfavorable on this petition on Tuesday night as they stated there were not enough houses on the street at the present time to warrant its acceptance.

A letter was read on the decision of the Public Utilities Commission in regards to the present trolley situation.

BOY PILOT FOUND

Lowly Mouse Is Aiding In Fight Against Cancer

London, July 16.—(AP)—The lowly mouse has become an instrument in aid of human health. The annual report of the Grand Council of the British Empire cancer campaign published today says that an experimental method by which mice may be subjected to cancer of the skin and heart has made available a mass of new material for cancer researches.

Some causes of the disease which formerly were scarcely suspected are said to have been discovered as a consequence of experiments on the small rodents. Among other experiments the backs of the mice have been painted with tobacco tar to ascertain whether smoking causes malignant tumors of the mouth but no case of malignant tumor has resulted.

The report says that the death rate from the disease would be substantially reduced if people took full advantage of radium treatments. The report revealed use of wartime mustard gas in combating the disease. It was stated that "the induction of tumors is inhibited when mustard gas is applied to an area of skin which is being subjected to painting with tar."

The note, which is signed by Edouard Benes, foreign minister, says: "Czechoslovakia, always having been favorable to co-operation among the states in a more restricted geographical region, is equally favorable to the organization of this co-operation in more vast regions. That is to say, among all the states of Europe, and is ready to participate with all her strength in the effort made to achieve it."

At the same time, the note adds, the work involved must necessarily be long and slow and there must be no infringement on the sovereignty of any weakening of the League of Nations.

San Francisco, July 17.—(AP)—Several hundred firefighters, weary from combating brush, grass and timber fires in scattered localities on the Pacific coast, today stood watch lest hard work control should be lost. At least one firefighter lost his life, Hugh Avery, 20, of Mesa, Ariz., died last night of burns received when he was trapped fighting a blaze burning through brush toward the Mount Hamilton, Pasadena, home of relatives he was visiting.

Thunderstorms came to the aid of firefighters in the mountains of eastern San Diego county, rains putting out several small brush fires and ending the fire menace at least temporarily. Nearly 800 men were holding back three fires in the Deschutes section of central Oregon.

Every other peak in the range had been ascended and for years mountaineers had sought to scale Mount Owen. The party, all expert climbers, consisted of Robert Underhill of Cambridge, Mass., Kenneth Henderson of West Newton, Mass., Dr. S. M. Fryer, of Rock Island, Ill., and Phil Smith of Burlington, Colo. They edged slowly across the gigantic snowfields and squirmed over rocky ledges to the granite rounded summit of the mountain.

SERVICE for the MOTORIST

Motor Hints

Timely Suggestions on the Care of the Car by the Automobile Club of Hartford.

Watch Your Condenser

So much depends upon the condenser it is unfortunate that this unit of the electrical system has to be not only inconspicuous but out of sight where it is usually out of mind. Even mechanics habitually underestimate its importance.

The condenser not only has an important influence on the intensity of the spark but also keeps the breaker points efficient. When a condenser starts to break down the spark at each plug is less intense and the breaker points will not stay clean.

One experienced mechanic who specializes on tuning up cars says a good condenser is more important than a good coil, adding that he has often seen coils handicapped by a weak condenser. Fortunately for the motorist, a handy guide to the efficiency of the condenser is the frequency with which breaker points must be cleaned.

Right Plugs Essential

Changing to a new set of spark plugs may be more loss than gain if the wrong type are substituted. It may not seem to the car owner that it would make much difference whether the new plugs are a little shorter or longer than the ones being discarded, but it represents the difference between maintaining the throttle well open. The action was similar to what an excessively lean mixture or a sticking valve would occasion.

Factory experts finally discovered that the spark plugs were too long. The points were too near the piston tops, became red hot and pre-ignited the gas.

Shorter plugs entirely eliminated the trouble.

Half Throttle Best

Inability to accelerate rapidly with many of the newer cars is due entirely to the habit of pressing all the way down on the accelerator. Engines of the newer type accelerate best on half throttle, except when the car is traveling thirty-five miles an hour or over.

Not being equipped with superchargers these engines can take only so much mixture at a time and to open the throttle too wide is merely to invite auto induction.

When the throttle is opened wide at low speed the air valve of the carburetor does not open to lean out the mixture to a point where it is capable of giving the performance desired. The increase in air is taken care of at high speed through the carburetor then opens the air valve automatically.

Try the Downhill Test

Motorists who want to test the general condition of their engines should do so going downhill, not up. To make this test simply note how much smoke comes from the exhaust when going down in high gear with the throttle closed to the idling position.

A lot of bluish smoke means that oil is pumping into the cylinders. An engine with worn rings and pistons will exhaust smoke especially when the car starts up again after reaching the bottom of the hill.

It is important not to confuse this with the occasional smoking from the exhausts of new cars when the throttle is suddenly closed while driving fast.

Even the journey down the hill will test the engine's condition by revealing how much compression it has. The better it is the more it will hold back the car.

Special Care for Each

Believing that cars are "all alike" many an owner paves the way for much unnecessary trouble. If the car requires heavy oil for universal oil he will figure that grease will be satisfactory enough. Because it was necessary to lubricate the springs of his former car he goes ahead oiling the springs of his newest one. And then he gets into trouble.

Perhaps the new car's universals are designed for heavy oil only. Maybe the springs of the new model are designed to work "dry" front wheel shimmying and "bottoming" being the penalty for ignoring this point.

Cars are surprisingly different in the care they need. One popular make is cranked easiest by pressing down on the accelerator several times before using the starter. The plan is worthless on other cars.

Carburetor Adjustment Rule

Motorists who adjust their own carburetors, and no one can tell when ability to do so may come in handy, should be familiar with the following plan that sets in motion the rule about turning the high and low speed adjustment screws:

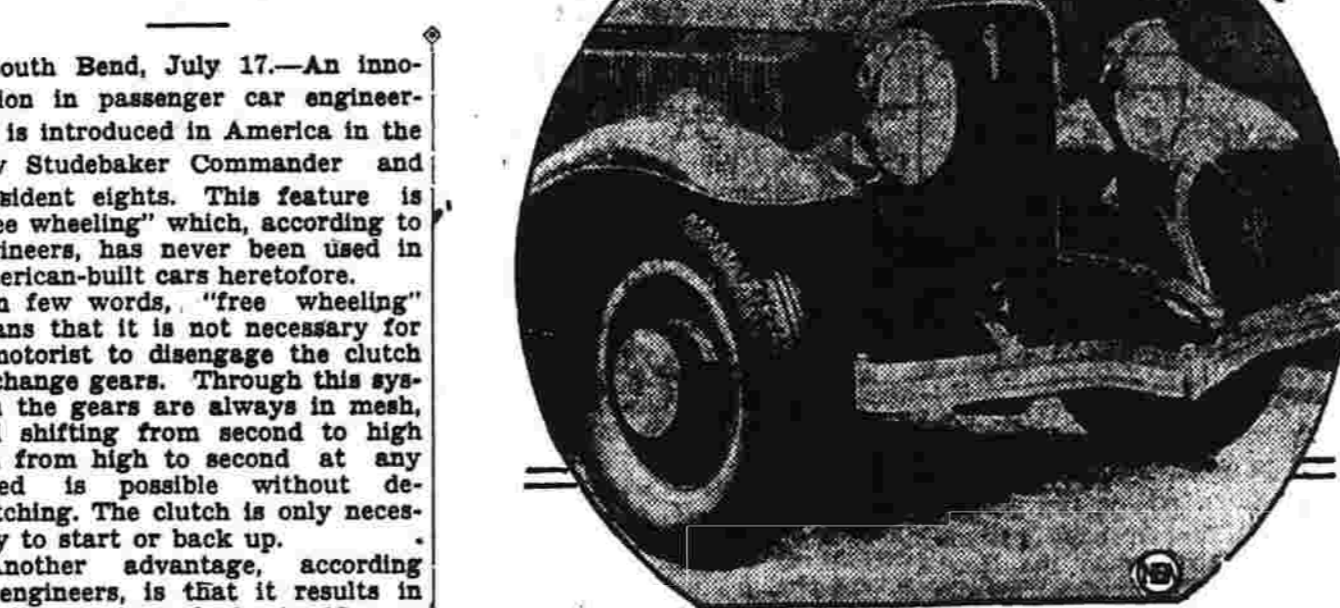

Low speed adjustments for a leaner mixture are made by turning the screw to the left. This is the starting point in the memorizing process. Low speed, lean mixture and left. Each starts with the letter "L."

The high speed adjustment is just the reverse. You turn the screw to the right for leaner mixture and to the left for a richer one.

All you have to do is to remember the three "L's" for the start. The rest will follow as a natural consequence.

The longest aqueduct in the United States is 200 miles long and carries water from Mt. Whitney to Los Angeles.

NEW STUDEBAKER MODEL MAKES USE OF CLUTCH UNNECESSARY

South Bend, July 17.—An innovation in passenger car engineering is introduced in America in the new Studebaker Commander and President eight. This feature is "free wheeling" which, according to engineers, has never been used in American-built cars heretofore.

In few words, "free wheeling" means that it is not necessary for a motorist to disengage the clutch to change gears. Through this system the gears are always in mesh, and shifting from second to high and from high to second at any speed is possible without de-clutching. The clutch is only necessary to start or back up.

Another advantage, according to engineers, is that it results in gasoline saving of about 12 per cent and an oil saving of about 20 per cent. This is because the "free wheeling" principle permits the engine to drop to idling speed as soon as the foot is removed from the accelerator in slowing down.

Reversal strains, such as those thrown on tires, rear axles, universal joint, clutch and transmission are considerably lessened, it is said. Carbon is also reduced because the engine is never forced by car momentum, when slowing down, to pump excess oil and gasoline into the cylinders.

A safety angle enters into "free wheeling," as it is said that a driver having it in his car is in better control of the car's movements. By being able to shift gears while at any speed, the hazard of skidding is reduced, and because the car decelerates without the pull of the motor, there is no sudden grabbing or swerving when brakes are applied.

Regular Gear for Hills
To supply compression for checking the car's speed downhill, a convention gear is supplied which suspends free wheeling operation until the descent is made. A slight touch on the gear lever throws this gear into use.

The appearance of the new cars has been changed considerably. Longer wheelbase and lengthened hoods enhance the beauty.

In the large President, wheelbase has been increased from 135 to 138 inches, and in the companion President model from 125 to 130 inches. Wheelbase on the new Commander has been increased from 120 to 124 inches.

The engine of both models has been pepped up to give greater power. The President engine has increased in horsepower from 115 to 122, and the Commander from 80 to 101.

Body lines are slightly lower, and a new radiator design sets off the whole car, giving it a much snappier look.

Principal engineering improvements include a carburetor silencer, a new steering mechanism, a swing-shackle for preventing shimmying, and a new full-power muffler.

The new series of the two eight is offered in 20 body models.

How's She Hitting?

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, N.E.A. Service

It is not just the engine that causes one car to make better mileage on a gallon of gasoline than another of the same make.

Sometimes, in fact often, we may find faults in the body and chassis of the car that retard the efficiency of the motor. The moving parts especially may be at fault.

The wheels, for instance, are almost a neglected, but highly important factor in maintaining the efficiency of the motor. Neglect of these parts may cause considerable loss in power.

Loose bearings at the hubs, causing the wheels to wobble, take much of the power from the engine. To prevent this, the wheels should be kept tight and well greased. The grease should be changed every thousand miles, and the nuts on the wheels tightened at the same time.

Misalignment of front wheels is another costly fault and reveals itself in less mileage for the fuel. They should be checked up constantly.

Wheels get out of alignment when they are struck against the curb in parking or when they strike a deep rut.

Misalignment may come from twisting the wheel while the car isn't moving, in an effort to get out of crowded parking spaces. That hurts the steering mechanism, too, but misaligned wheels are more evident as a result.

In addition to loss of power and fuel efficiency, there's excessive wear on the tires that results from misalignment of the wheels. So it is important that this be carefully checked about once a month.

The brakes may be adjusted so tightly that the drums might bind.

This causes the brakes to drag and put an extra weight on the engine.

Drugging brakes can be felt by an experienced driver. There's a feeling of an extra strain or pull at a grade speed where usually no pull or strain should be felt.

Rather have the brakes loosened a bit and put an extra force on the pedals when it is needed. This loss of fuel efficiency by this constant dragging.

This doesn't help the brakes either. The drums wear down quickly and become less effective in emergencies.

Another drain on power is an under-inflated tire. That means more pull on the engine.

Each tire, therefore, should be kept constantly up to the pressure advised by the manufacturer. The tires should be checked each week.

DANCING JUDITH

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH LOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JUDITH GRANT, artist's model, loves ALAN STEYNE, painter, who is also loved by CHUMMEY MORLEY, Judith's best friend. Chummy had loved Steyne years ago, but he had lost her memory when he went away so, although Steyne loved Judith, Judith insists it is his duty to marry Chummy, whose memory comes back when she sees him again. Judith studies dancing to get the offer of the rich BRUCE GIDEON - whom Steyne distrusts - to star her in a show, and appears in a show backed by RICHARD WYON, who is secretly acting for Gideon. Chummy sees Judith's Steyne's arms and breaks her engagement, without letting the two know that she has found out their secret. Judith makes a tremendous hit on the stage and becomes famous.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI

Judy paid a visit to her old home town on the first Sunday in December. She was anxious to see if she could find any living relatives of her mother, who had been a native of the thriving town. She was so overflowing with generous spirit that she could not find enough people to share her success.

She had come across one elderly and very impetuous couple. The husband was a distant cousin of her mother, and he had been a scene shifter at the theater until he injured his spine. They lived on a very scanty pension.

Judy was in despair because of their scanty means; but she made them take money, and she had a splendid dinner sent in from a hotel. She sat with them and delighted them with her high spirits and her laughter, and her account of her wonderful life, which to them was like a fairy tale.

She went for a walk when she left them. She had a little while before the train left for New York, she walked on a street, and then climbed a steep path that led up to the grassy hills above the town.

And, to her amazement, whom should she meet but Alan Steyne, striding briskly and looking a little thinner in the face, and perhaps not quite so exuberantly fit, but still splendidly young and alert and full of life. They stopped simultaneously, a few paces from each other.

"You've been ill," Judy said. "Nothing to speak of," he replied. "A bout of influenza, short and sharp. The doctor sent me here to recuperate. The air is gorgeous!"

He looked at her with the hunger that he could not keep out of his eyes.

"Yes, lovely," Judy said. "I ought to congratulate you, Steyne went on. "You are wonderful!"

Judy stamped her foot on the springy turf. "I won't have Chummy's heart broken," she said. "I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on the earth!"

Steyne gazed at Judy with incredulity in his eyes. "This was a man who had married her and who was much with him of late must have noticed how seldom his eyes were filled with laughter now."

"You cannot mean it," he said. "I do mean it," she said. "His great masculine intelligence would not take it in. To him the fact that Clarissa did not wish to marry him was sufficient. It seemed nothing short of madness to probe into her motives. And—this was more cogent argument still—if more cogent—did not know that he and Judy loved each other, then she must realize that he and she could never be happy together if they were to marry."

Judy assented to Steyne's suggestion that they should walk a little way together. Then they returned to the town, and he asked her to have tea with him.

They sat in a corner of the lounge of her hotel, which was a very quiet one. He asked Judy to tell him about her new life. He showed her evident satisfaction when she told him that, outside of her work, she was living just as she had lived before.

She told him about her new contract. She was to leave in February for Paris. All summer she would be in Scandinavia, where the public was very fond of her kind of dancing. At least, Mr. Tannary had told her so.

"Judy," said Alan, as she was putting on her gloves, "if at the end of the year Clarissa is still of the same mind, will you change yours?"

Steyne groaned. "You are utterly impossible, Judy! How can you do that? I can't believe you mean to be so cruel. I won't believe it!"

"You must," she said. "I'm not cruel. It's you. We've said good-bye once and for all, and you shouldn't try to make me unhappy."

"You can make me happy by marrying Chummy and making her happy."

A flush of anger mounted to the young man's forehead. "You are talking that over and over again, like a parrot!"

Her temper rose, too. "I say it because I mean it, and you don't seem to be able to understand it."

She got up. Steyne followed her and at the hotel door she held out her hand.

"Good-bye." He did not offer to accompany her to the station. He was still weak from his illness. Her presence was a torture greater than he could bear.

"I shall go out to the East with Hytton," he said sullenly, like a sulky boy. "He asked me to go with him. I'm not going to stay in this country. At least I shall get some sport."

"I'll come back when you call me," he said. She was a little frightened by his eyes. They showed his whole mind in revolt. She suddenly felt very small and helpless. The consciousness rose in her that she could not resist him, if he chose to assert his will.

She had no more time. She called a passing cab and took her seat in it. The last thing she saw was Alan's face, showing his recent illness in every line, with his gloomy eyes regarding her reproachfully.

"I must make him believe it," she said to herself. "I've got to do that for Chummy's sake!"

The months passed in a whirl for Judy. She suddenly changed all her habits. She bought clothes. She developed a taste for late hours and gayety. She was always with Bruce Gideon.

It came to the last night of her appearance at the Monopole Theater. It was a veritable triumph. Judy stood ankle-deep in flowers of every hue, bowing and kissing her hands, the tears streaming down her face while her lips laughed in the delirium of such a moment.

Afterward there was a great supper party in Gideon's apartment, but none of Judy's old friends were asked to it.

In the second week in January, Dumont met Judy in the street. She even looked different, he thought. But there was more art in it. She was ever so smart, a clever dresser-maker having managed to subdue her desire for brilliant color.

A look from her candid eyes reduced him from anger to despair. He was her slave as ever. She was still Judy, after all.

"Judy, there is a dance at the Lemon Grove on Friday," he said eagerly. "It's a regular artist's night. Will you come?"

She seemed to hesitate for a moment; then her face broke into the old radiant smile of sheer childishlike glee.

"Of course I'd love to, Bastien! How nice of you to ask me! I love dancing with you."

The more he looked at her, the more poignant grew the longing that could never be fulfilled. Judy with something unapproachable about her—with dainty white gloves on her hands, and highheeled suede shoes on her perfect feet, and real silk stockings, and a little coat of mole skin fur with a big slunk collar! He let her go with a heavy heart.

"What hurt Judy most was that she never saw Chummy now. It was to a large extent Chummy's fault, for the latter was engrossed in her work. She had refused one or two invitations to have a meal alone with Judy."

Then, when they did meet by accident, Chummy reported that Alan was thinking of going to Persia with Frank Hytton.

"I think 't will do him good," she said in her quiet way. "He doesn't really seem to care for painting."

"A man's got to have some job in life," Judy replied. "I think Mr. Steyne had better find one. Nowadays a young man can't hang about doing nothing."

Miss Beulah Unruh, 23-year-old restaurant waitress in New York, took the tips of her patrons and won a flyer's license. The tips were 10-cent ones and there were 13,000 of them—this is how much the course of instruction costs for the limited commercial pilot's license. Beulah, whose eyes are very blue and whose hair is very auburn, has been the recipient of much expert attention at the flying field and hopes soon to fly the additional hundred hours necessary for her coveted transport pilot's certificate. These photos show her as a flyer and waitress; she has never had a crash in either role.

HOW TO SHOP

SMOOTH SURFACE IS IMPORTANT IN TILES

The shopper should know something about tiles because they are now being used in the bath room, kitchen, fireplace, basement and miscellaneous rooms. Tiles should present a smooth surface; they should not be chipped or contain spots, unless spots are purposely included in the design for effect. In white tiles, the color should be fairly uniform, but in color or tiles, a variation in shade in each tile is desirable. By securing first grade tiles—several grades are sold—the shopper not only gets a product free from defects but also insures a better grade of workmanship.

Workmanship is important. The finished surface must be absolutely smooth. See that the job is left absolutely clean; some workmen, if not particular, may leave traces of cement on the tile. In an installation, there should be no misplaced tiles.

Hints on How to Keep Well by World-Famous Authority

ELECTRIC SHOCK CAUSES CHANGES IN CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Neurological Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

As electricity comes more and more into human life, it is being recognized that it is the duty of preventive medicine to protect the public against its unusual hazards. An exact understanding of these hazards involves a considerable amount of research as to the effects of electrical currents on human tissue.

A study of this character has just been completed in the department of neurology of Johns Hopkins University, which indicates that various types of current have different effects. The circuit supplying homes and factories is commonly of 110 or 220 volts, either alternating or continuous current. As a rule, a 100 volt circuit may prove fatal under certain circumstances.

Dr. O. R. Langworthy made a series of investigations on rats with alternating and continuous currents. He points out that many fatal accidents from contract with electricity are attributed to the manner in which the heart action is disturbed. Circuits at high voltages are prone to cause death due to the inability to breathe because of disturbance of the nervous system.

As a result of his studies, Doctor Langworthy found that alternating and continuous currents produce different types of lesions in the central nervous system. Hemorrhages were common after alternating current shocks, but few hemorrhages were observed after shock with a continuous current.

With either type of potentials of 1000 and of 500 volts, very serious changes took place in the nerve centers. The changes were more severe after the continuous current shock.

With continuous and alternating current at 110 and 220 volts, less severe changes were observed, but, as has been mentioned, hemorrhages were common in the cases in which alternating current had been used. The effect of the damage to the cells of the nervous system is to interfere with the proper kind of breathing and thereby to bring about death.

HAVE YOU HEARD?—

You can utilize your summer leisure to good advantage by making little gifts as you sit and rock. For the college girl, nothing would be more appreciated than some little shoe-jackets for her party slippers. Using a slipper as a pattern, cut a pattern for individual bags that would slip over and fit snugly around party shoes. You can put smappers on the front ends to shut them after the slippers are in or you can have draw strings, the latter being easier to use.

The best speed of an average fox is estimated at about 28 miles an hour—faster than a coyote but slower than a skunkrabbit.

THIS AND THAT IN FEMININE LORE

At some of the markets you can buy lamb patties all ground ready to broil. If you want to mix your own have the lamb ground at the butcher's and mix with an egg, two tablespoons chopped parsley (use parsley since its iron content is so great) half a tablespoon finely minced onion, salt and paprika to taste. Shape into cakes, fasten toothpicks around the cakes with bacon strips around the sides and broil on both sides until done.

The new patterns have arrived as you will note by the attractive design for cottons in yesterday's Herald and the box-plated model today. In glancing over the illustrations, I note one or two poplin frocks, a new offering from Paris, or rather a revival of an old style again. These will be excellent for early fall frocks for street or business wear without a topcoat. There are a few little girls' dresses in the collection, but I am sorry to say, not a single, little boy's pattern, for which we have frequent inquiry. Remember you are to order the patterns direct from New York now, which will be much more to your advantage.

A delicious cold desert is banana cantaloupe. The last word is because of the melon-shaped mould it is made in and not because cantaloupe is used in the mixture. It calls for the following:

Four bananas, mashed; 3 teaspoonfuls lemon juice; 1 cupful cream, whipped; 2-3 cupful sugar; 1/2 cupful cream, scalded; 2 tablespoonfuls gelatin or 1/2 box gelatin; 1/2 cupful water, cold; 2 egg whites; 4 tablespoonfuls powdered sugar, 15 lady fingers.

Soak gelatin in cold water, beat the egg whites slightly, add the powdered sugar and gradually the hot cream. Cook over hot water until it thickens. Add the soaked gelatin and the two-thirds cupful sugar. Strain into a pan, set in ice water, add the mashed bananas and changes were common in the cases in which alternating circuit had been used.

If blue brings out the colorings of your skin, if green sets off your blueness, or if you are one who wears red exceedingly well, use this color in combination with your white coat, an indispensable wrap this summer. Hat, bag, belt and scarf are the four accessories that will carry the accenting color, the coat to be all of white. The frock is of course white, in sports styling.

Nippy Cheese Sandwich Filling: 7 slices of bread, 2 cups tomatoes, strained and heated; 2 1/2 cups grated cheese, (1/2 pound); 2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca; 1 1/2 cups dried beef, finely ground, (1/2 pound); 1/2 teaspoon pepper; 1/4 teaspoon mustard; 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Add Tapioca to tomato juice, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add cheese gradually and place.

Nation's Most Noted Firemen Refuse To Retire From Service

BY PAUL HARRISON

New York.—Two of the world's most celebrated firemen have decided all reports to the contrary, that they're going to die with their boots on. Chief John Kenlon of the New York City Fire Department is 70 now, and "Smoky Joe" Martin, his assistant, is 68. Both could have retired more than a decade ago. But smoke and flame are still the breath of life to them; and will be the death too, apparently, before they give up bossing the biggest fires in the biggest city.

They both collapsed a few months ago—though Smoky Joe was able to finish fighting his fire from a stretcher—and during their slow convalescence there was a lot of talk to the effect that "the chiefs will never roll to another one."

Through Many Adventures
But they won't quit and the city can't make them quit. Kenlon might get "life duty" as a sort of pensioner, but because of injuries sustained at a fire last January, Chief Kenlon can remain in the department at full pay for the rest of his life.

Probably never again as they have in the past, will these men go down 500 feet in a burning subway shaft to rescue imprisoned workers, all modern improvements, garage. Apply 38 Elro street, after 5 o'clock.

WAPPING
Miss Doris L. Benjamin and Miss Dorothy Maloney of South Windsor, left last Saturday for Bridgeport, where they will visit relatives and friends for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Watson, who for many years lived in Wapping, but for the past three years have been living at Newington Junction, have returned to their own home at Manchester Green.

Marion L. Snow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Snow, met with an accident last Sunday afternoon while playing with her ex-press wagon. She caught her foot in the rear wheel cutting a deep gash which required five stitches to close. She is under the care of Dr. Higgins of Manchester and Mrs. Edith House, the nurse. Harold Snow is also ill with tonsillitis and bronchitis.

Mrs. Clifford Snow who has been recuperating at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Snow, from an operation for the removal of her tonsils and adenoids at St. Francis hospital, returned to her home in Glastonbury last Tuesday evening.

KENLON HAS BATTLED MORE THAN 30,000 FIRES

A famous pair of fire-eaters are Assistant Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin, left, and Chief John Kenlon, upper right, of the New York Fire Department. But despite their ages of 68 and 70, and nearly half a century of service, they both refuse to be retired.

LEADERS ALLOWED TO VISIT GANDHI

Simla, India, July 17.—(AP)—Viceroy Irwin has agreed to permit Sir Tej Sapru and Mr. Jayakar, Indian leaders, to see Mahatma Gandhi and two of the other Nationalist leaders now in jail with a view to persuading them to restore peace in the civil disobedience campaign.

The viceroy in a letter to Sir Tej Sapru and Mr. Jayakar repeated the assurance given in his recent address before the Indian legislature regarding the government's desire that Indians should manage their own affairs subject to temporary safeguards in the sphere in which full responsibility is not yet possible.

The two Indian leaders will conduct their negotiations with Mahatma Gandhi on their own responsibility.

In addition to the Mahatmas, they will see Motilal Nehru and Jawahar Nehru, both of whom are widely known as co-leaders with Gandhi in the campaign for Indian independence.

Several days ago Mr. Jayakar was authorized by a group of forty parties in the Central Legislature to take such steps as might seem necessary to find a solution for the present political impasse.

GAS BUGGIES—A Hero's Return

Uttering a groan of despair Dickie roused impatiently on the door—would she never come—suddenly it opened—and Nellie recoiled against this the spirit of her dead lover, revisiting the earth, or real flesh and blood— "Quick Nellie—you are in peril—your very life is at stake— you must flee"— at the sound of his voice a waitress seized her and with a stifled sob of joy she crumpled senseless to the floor—

Joe Kelly may come any minute—there's no time to be lost—

SWEETHEART

OH, DICK DARRLING—IT SEEMS LIKE A TRANCE— IS IT REALLY YOU—

YES, DEAR—I'LL EXPLAIN EVERYTHING LATER—WE MUST HASTE—WE'RE GOING BACK TO UTOPIA—

As the precious moments passed Dickie's mind increased— seizing Nellie's hand, her left hand, she felt icy cold— with a gasp she realized— he had passed over her like a breeze— on a lily pond— her weighted eyelids fluttered— at first faintly— then slowly— Dickie's lips swelled as his quivering lips sought the arch red mouth that had haunted him these past dreary months—

RUNAWAY AUTO SENDS MAN HERE TO HOSPITAL

Gets Out of Woman's Control in Parking Place, Hits Local Man—Injury Not Bad.

An automobile parked on an incline near the Sand Beach ballroom at Crystal Lake late last night was responsible in sending Vincent E. Moriarty, about 30 years old, of 64 North School street, to the Rockville City hospital with a badly sprained back and caused one woman to faint away and another to become hysterical, transforming the crowded beach into something resembling a miniature panic.

The car, a Hudson coach, owned by William Moat of Amherst, Mass., was standing in a regular parking place, with an unidentified woman in the front seat. Another car wanted to move so the woman released the brake of the Hudson and the car began to roll forward.

The car continued to move forward and struck a pile of boxes on which several young women were standing, watching the dance, unaware of the mishap. Had they jumped from their perch the girls would have been crushed beneath the car.
