GUARDS PRAISED FOR FINE SHOWING

Back at Work for Final Week of Camp After Colorful Sunday Parade.

Special to The Herald. By ARCHIE KILPATRICK.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., Aug. 12.—Resting on well earned laurels gained Sunday in what was reported to be the best division parade in which the 43rd has ever participated as a unit, the Manchester and Connecticut lads went back to the routine of drill a bit more inspired with the compliments of friends and relatives ringing in their ears.

Once In Five Years. Soon the camp training period will be over and the boys will be back to Manchester, tanned, toughened and with a state pay-check in their pockets for doing the things that all boys and men like to do.

Whether they are at Niantic or at Devens, the boys will always look forward to their two weeks at camp, enlivened by all the tricks that only the soldier knows and employs in the process of making a soldier out of a raw recruit.

Unique Ceremony. One of the Maine units, Battery A of the 152nd Field Artillery, conducted a picturesque ceremonial at the famous old Concord bridge "that arches the food yesterday afternoon." Under command of Captain Gaspar Hone the boys of Battery A were en route to the hospital at Fort Banks to visit the sick of the battery and stopped off en route to pay tribute to the farmers-soldiers of the Revolutionary War.

Some Visitors. Visitors to Manchester men in the Collecting Company and the Quartermaster's Company of the 118th on Sunday at Camp Devens were: Mrs. William Clegg and Miss Dorothy Clegg, Mrs. Arthur Halliday, Mr. and Mrs. Rosario Squarito, Mrs. Henry Anderson, Mrs. Christine Neville, Mrs. Andrew Wenzler, Mrs. Lewis Milligan, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Battaglia, Mrs. Conrad Casperson, Mrs. Clifford Sault and son, Ralph Russell, Charles Uimer, Ernest Anderson, Otto Senkbel, Eddie Hassett, Ignatz Reizer, Herbert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hennequin, Mrs. Alfred Hennequin and daughter, Ralph Hennequin, Helen Swanson.

Notes. The officers of the 1st Battalion, 169th Infantry, will hold a party at the Stirling Inn, Stirling, Mass., Tuesday evening, August 12, at which 30 officers of the battalion and invited guests are expected to be present.

Whalom Park, a recreation center near Fitchburg, was being decorated "out of bounds" by Major General Payne, camp commander. This action on the part of the commander was enforced by criticism of soldiers visiting the resort.

In addition to Sergeant Frey of G Company, Corporal Eddie Dorau of the Howitzer Company was significantly honored by the regimental commander for his cooperation and efficiency in connection with the handling of the 1930 recruits.

Paul Bernande, blanket sergeant of the Collecting Company, took the sergeants out for a drill the other night. Paul drills them, sergeants to recruits and can do a good job at that. The "cookies" have to step when Paul gets the reins.

WILLIMANTIC CAMP TO OPEN ON SUNDAY

Many Improvements Noted in Houses and Around the Grounds This Year.

Many repairs, extensions, and additions are noticeable among the one hundred and fifty cottages at the Willimantic Camp Meeting grounds, which opens Saturday, August 16 and closes Sunday, August 24. Last year the hundreds of automobiles were well cared for on the grounds but this year a large and efficient squad for traffic will give better service than ever.

The president has appointed Rev. John Pearce as collector and assistant treasurer, temporarily, to succeed Rev. F. C. Baker, deceased and he has already begun his work. The office, next door to the tabernacle, will have Mrs. W. J. Stephens as daily secretary as formerly, and will have information, and a list for all who desire. Boy Scout service will be furnished as last year to all who need guidance about the avenues, or aid with their luggage.

The Annual Tri-County W. C. T. U. Gold Medal Contest will be held in the big Tabernacle on Saturday, August 16th at 2 p. m. Thursday, August 21, will be Prohibition Day with Robert L. Sengle State Prohibition Administrator of Hartford as speaker. In the evening there will be a debate, "Can the prohibition law be enforced?" and Supt. E. C. Prettyman of the Connecticut Anti-Saloon League, and W. C. Pardee of New Haven will present the argument for and against. It is expected that this will be one of the most interesting features of the entire program.

Friday, August 22, will be Inter-denominational Day. The Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., State President of the Baptists Association will give the principal address. Rev. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover, will bring greetings from the Congregationalists, Rev. F. C. Williams of Willimantic for the Protestant Episcopal church and the Rev. A. N. Foster of Norwich, State Sup't. of the Universalists for that denomination. Dr. C. E. Spaulding of New London, will give the address of welcome and the president will preside.

Several surprises are announced for the program. Rev. F. W. Gray, chairman of the recreation committee has added archery, tennis, equipment of tennis, quills and volleyball and some are showing real skill in these sports.

For the first time, the president announces a pageant with sixty-two taking part on Sunday night, August 24, at 7 p. m. This requires forty minutes for rendition, and will precede the regular closing service as scheduled. New arrivals will begin Tuesday and continue until Saturday among speakers and the Re-

Hot Shots. Thirteenth street looked for a time Sunday noon like the corner of Park and Main on a Cheney paynight. The home town folks were in high spirits after the fine cool drive to camp and the youngsters certainly did their best on parade ground for the big Manchester delegation.

The fine dinner served by Mess Sergeants McCann and Bellucci had much to do with the pleasure of the occasion on Sunday. A fine steak dinner topped off with ice cream and pie was the menu.

Pvt. Massey was on a cot tipping rampage the other night, and until the boys framed him and gave him his own cot to play with. The Manchester gang held a masquerade formation Saturday night. Every conceivable uniform was represented—some hardly worth mentioning. Cpl. Bellamy won the prize for the best military structure. Last report says that the corporal is returning his prize—with interest. The Connecticut boys, especially those from Manchester seem to be blessed with good health as few of the men have had to report at sick call during the camp training period.

EIGHTH IN SPECIAL MEETING TONIGHT

Committee Seeks Additional Funds for Union School Repair Work.

A special meeting of the Eighth School and Utilities District is called for this evening in the school hall on North School street. The meeting is for the purpose of securing an additional appropriation to the $2,000 that was made at the annual meeting of the district to improve the sanitary conditions at the Union School. This work is left in the hands of the school committee which now consists of two new members elected at the June meeting and the retaining of A. L. Brown on the committee from last year.

The motion to appropriate the money for this purpose was not included in the call, but the question was raised in the meeting. Several of the voters in the district were surprised to learn the conditions that had existed and which had not been rectified. The bids that have been received for the proposed work have all been higher than the appropriation made and it has been necessary to come back to the district for an additional sum, which will be asked for this evening. A further appropriation of $1,000 was made for new steps at the school. The steps and railings have rotted out and the present condition is considered dangerous. The figures that have been received in these bids are also above the appropriation and more money will be asked for this also in the special meeting to be held tonight.

LON CHANEY'S PICTURE CONCLUDES HERE TODAY. Few pictures have caused so much comment as the first of Lon Chaney's talking pictures, "The Unholy Three," which will be shown for the first time at the State today. Chaney demonstrates in a very convincing manner that he is just as effective in disguising his voice as he was in disguising himself in the day of the silent pictures. The new program for Wednesday and Thursday brings new other than Greta Garbo in her second talking picture "Romance". Ever since Greta made her debut in "Anna Christie", motion picture audiences awaiting another appearance of the famous Swedish star in a talking picture, "Romance" was a happy selection as the second talking vehicle for Miss Garbo. This alluring tale of a foreign prima donna who comes to America on a farewell tour and is subsequently involved in an extremely interesting courtship is not only a perfect vehicle for the Swedish star, but presents her in a striking contrast to the usual characterization of "Anna Christie". As a starring picture, "Romance" was startling; it is nothing short of sensational.

A splendid supporting cast has been assembled, including Lewis Stone who gives a compelling performance as the man who has always been in love with the opera-star. Garvin Gordon is seen as the impetuous clergyman whose frustrated romance forms the central theme. Others appearing are Elliot Nugent, Florence Lake, Henry Armetta and Clara Blandick. Another splendid collection of gifts has been prepared for Merchants Night which will be observed Wednesday night. Fifteen valuable gifts will be presented to the holders of the lucky numbers.

PLANS NEW OFFENSIVE. Istanbul, Aug. 12.—(AP)—General Balıkcı Paşa, commanding the Turkish forces now fighting rebellious Kurds near the Persian border, has begun a new offensive against 3,000 rebels entrenched in the vicinity of Mt. Ararat.

Turkish troops yesterday crossed the border and occupied positions in the Agrigrahd region, with the object of exterminating the insurgents. Some of the Kurds are natives of Turkey and some of Persia, crossing back and forth.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 12.
MEREDITH BALLYHOO

Since Dr. Albert Meredith, recently but not now Commissioner of Education and secretary of the State Board of Education in Connecticut, has definitely severed his connection with the educational system of this state, and since his successor has been chosen and a new régime instituted, it might reasonably be assumed that the chorus of admiration over the transcendent merits of Dr. Meredith would die down, even if for no better reason than that the other fellow deserves a chance to perform without being continually compared with this surpassing genius.

However, there has never been half an occasion since Meredith resigned when some of his cult have not been hallyhooing for him—to just what end is not exactly clear but perhaps may be guessed at.

In the current number of "Connecticut Industry," the organ of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, E. Kent Hubbard, president of that association, has an article under the caption "Connecticut Loses a Great Educator," which spills praise over the late commissioner of education in bucketsful.

Why all this over-extended propaganda in the interest of a man whom the bulk of Connecticut people recognize as one of the most injurious influences that this state has ever experienced?

Dr. Meredith's career in this state was predicated on the evident assumption that Connecticut's population existed for the sole purpose of maintaining more and more and always more expensive schools and for the support of a sort of pedagogical aristocracy not less oppressive—and in some ways scarcely more useful—than the military aristocracies which brought about the cataclysm of 1914. It ended because the people of the state finally came to realize that he was an enormously costly luxury and had best be to become a still more expensive boss.

In the continued and systematic boosting of Meredith that has been going on ever since his resignation there is ground for suspicion that either he or his friends do not regard his departure as permanent. It looks very much as if his name were being kept fresh and his memory artificially fragrant with a view to his ultimate return.

If anybody entertains any hope of this kind he might as well disabuse himself of it. If among all the educators in this country there is one who above all others has no chance whatever of becoming the educational czar of Connecticut it is Albert Meredith.

THE DEVENS TOUR
 Connecticut's citizen soldiers doing the tour of duty at Camp Devens are having anything but a frolicsome holiday. There is little of the picnic quality in this training period of the Forty-third Division.

But when the soldiers get home again it is our guess that they will be incomparably better pleased with themselves than if they had been foiling away their time in one of the old-fashioned camping tours of pre-war days or even attending the customary regimental gatherings at Niantic.

The kind of work now going on at Devens and in the surrounding wilds is the thing that makes real, hardboiled soldiers out of civilians. It is the kind of thing that can and does make a practicable veteran out of a rooky without ever having heard a shot fired in anger. And when the job is done and the regiments return home every member can pride himself on the fact that he is no longer a tyro at the tremendous game of modern warfare but a unit in the vast machine of national defense that is capable of functioning understandingly in its niche.

This newspaper is not among those which shout, in and out of season, for "preparedness"; it is not among those who would be willing to impoverish the nation for military establishments. But it does believe with all its heart and soul in the highest possible development of the National Guard—in the completest possible military training for the citizen and in national familiarity with the technique of war—as the stoutest possible defense against surprise and conflict. For that reason it seems to us regrettable that such divisional mobilizations as that at Devens, constituting as they do the finest possible agency for military training, can take place no oftener than once in five years.

However, since such is at present the case, the young men constituting the personnel of the Manchester units have special reason for self congratulating on having this experience fall within their period of service. Unless we are much mistaken they will come home with a new sense of the dignity and importance of the National Guard. It is to be hoped that sense will be shared by their fellow citizens.

THE DROUGHT REPORT
 In a way the report of the Department of Agriculture on the drought situation is reassuring. The conspicuousness of the climatic situation in the news, while justifiable enough, has probably led a great many persons to draw exaggerated conclusions as to the seriousness of conditions.

Even though the drought should continue for the remainder of the crop making season it is highly improbable that it will result in such shortage of either human food or stock feeds as would raise prices to anything like the famine point; and there is always a good and increasing chance that the already far protracted dry spell will be broken in time for additional salvaging.

We gather from the report that the injury to all crops so far has amounted to about seven per cent of the whole. This is an important loss, to be sure, but it is not a critical one.

Another thing brought out by the report is that the damage and the consequent suffering is rather highly localized. There is no very large section of the country that is actually stricken. In many cases the drought damage can be relieved by relatively near neighbors. Only two entire states appear to be seriously affected—Virginia and Kentucky.

It is highly probable that the scare which has spread over the country, with visions of hunger visiting some imaginative souls, has been as largely due to the depressing effects of great heat upon the human spirits as to its physical effects on crops. With the advent of cooler weather it is more than likely that the courage of the farm lands will be restored and that the summer of 1930 will appear, while a most unlucky one for a great many individuals and a few considerable areas, a good way short of being catastrophic.

Give the major agricultural states a good wetting down within the next couple of weeks and it is our guess that before Thanksgiving day the great drought will have been very largely forgotten and that it will be but lightly reflected in the cost or abundance of the Thanksgiving dinner.

THOSE AFRIDIS
 The Afridi tribesmen who for some reason of their own are engaged in a sort of siege of Peshawar, British-Indian city on the Afghan border, are rated as the most warlike of the various Pathan tribes and the Pathans are the most intrepid and eager fighters in that part of the world.

The Afridi is a splendid physical specimen, "a tall, athletic highlander with long gaunt face, high nose and cheek bones and fair complexion," according to the Encyclopedia Britannica. He is regarded by British military authorities, who have come into conflict with him on many an occasion, as among the finest skirmishers in the world.

The Afridis are, too, among the most suspicious of human beings, trusting no one, and perpetually ready to guard their interests by violence: Occupying the mountains on the indefinite borderland between India and Afghanistan, they maintain a political status much like that of the old Scottish Highland clans, owing no real allegiance to anybody but the immediate chief and prepared to fight anybody at a moment's notice.

The British army has had a great deal of experience fighting the Afridis, having at one time and another dispatched nine or ten expeditions against them, and probably knows what it is doing when it employs airplanes against them. But to the outsider there would seem to be few enemies against whom planes would not be more effective. The Afridis are individual fighters, snipers, past-masters of the art of taking cover; and in a mountainous region like that in which they operate would seem to offer small opportunity for effective bombing operations.

Moreover the Afridis, like most of the Afghan tribes, are generally believed to have Israelitic blood in their veins—being decidedly Semitic in countenance—and are tenacious of purpose to a degree. So it would appear that they will have to be licked, since there is small chance of their being scared into panic by the explosion of airplane bombs in their vicinity.

SOMETHING NEW
 Providence, Kentucky, is not a well known town, but it has earned a place of distinction in history. It has the honor, unless we are mistaken, of being the scene of the first rioting by airplane to take place in the United States.

The bombing of a mine from the air presumably by agents of disgruntled strikers is a brand new phase of our civilization. And one with whose development we can dispense.

IN NEW YORK
 New York, Aug. 12.—Backgammon is back—and in a large way. If you don't recall having heard of this game, just ask grandma or grandpa and they'll remember someone who is a shark on the grand old pastime.

Like most vogues—such as crossword puzzles, anagrams, charades and the like—the backgammon craze has started in the circles of the swanky. It's being played at all the fashionable beach places this summer and, strolling along Fifth avenue, you'll see sets being advertised and displayed at prices ranging up to $20.

If you merely play bridge, or some old-fashioned game of that sort, you'll be quite out of it by the time the snows fall, for backgammon is going to be the next game fad, whether you like it or not.

If you recall the days when bridge was in its infancy, the tyro went to schools and "professors" popped up from every which way. And this summer, in those spots where the rich and socially important folk hang out, the usual retinue of tutors has appeared and they report a most prosperous season.

Books of instruction on the subject are being rushed to press, and already "The New Backgammon" has appeared under the authorship of Elizabeth Clark Boyden. There's another expert account issued by Grosvenor Nicholas.

Instructors are getting around $25 an hour for their time and trouble and groups are retaining experts to get them in form.

For, after all, when anything new—however old it may be—hits New York, they grab at it as the well-known drowning man clutched the straw, or the swimmer, or whatever it was. Once New York has taken it up, the quick-witted promoters will see to it that the rest of the country discovers it ere long.

Knowing nothing about the game myself, I have a vague recollection of beholding in my grandmother's knock-knack stand a game board which had checkers on the outside and backgammon on the inside.

So I'll have to go to Miss Boyden for my information and she volunteers the information that: "Twenty-five to fifty years ago, it was one of the fashionable games of the country. The older members of the family took pride in teaching the younger generation the principles of the play, which had in turn been taught them by their elders."

"Interest in the game was accentuated at the time by the religious at the time by the religious prejudice against card playing. Escaping from the so-called evils of playing cards, it was known as 'tables.'"

"It is interesting to note they hit upon a game played with dice, considered by many the greatest of gambling implements."

"In place of passing time there are many old-fashioned homes where backgammon has always been played and one of New York's leading clubs has always maintained a backgammon room. Only two generally play and the rest act in an advisory capacity (what a break for the kibitzers). They share in the winnings and the losses (that'll put the kibitzers on their toes)."

So much for its history. With this addition—the word itself is said to have a Welsh ancestry, "back," meaning little, and "gameum," meaning battle. Hence "little battle." But you can't prove it by me.

Its appearance dates way back in British history, long before even Zoro Agha says he was born. In Chaucer's time, so say the authorities, it was known as "table."

"Games similar to backgammon were played in early Asia, and the game may originally have come from there," writes Miss Boyden.

Even Japan had an ancient game known as "Sukuro," which is many centuries old.

So it's a very new and modern—as you can plainly see.

GILBERT SWAN.

THE BOOK SURVEY

BY BRUCE CATTON

Writing a historical novel in which extremely familiar people and events are described is always hazardous. It becomes much more so when one of the famous people is the novelist's central character.

Honore W. Morrow, however, does not seem to be afraid. In "The Last Full Measure" she concludes her trilogy of novels in which no less a person than Abraham Lincoln has the leading role. The task that she set herself when she began this trilogy had a great many pitfalls. I think she has dodged most of them very neatly.

"The Last Full Measure" covers the final months of Lincoln's life. Mrs. Morrow studies Lincoln during those dramatic moments when the Confederacy finally sank down to defeat and when he realized that having saved the Union he now faced the equally difficult task of providing for a sane, charitable reconstruction.

Side by side with this she traces the development of the plot which culminated in Ford's Theater when John Wilkes Booth shot Lincoln. Booth is depicted in detail, as are most of the other characters in the plot. The portrayal of the two-thirds-mad actor is one of the strongest features of the book.

With Lincoln himself, Mrs. Morrow does at least as well as could be expected. Occasionally when she presents his soliloquies and musings, I think she tackles something too big for her; for the most part, however, the job is well handled. An enormous amount of study must have gone into the writing of this book. The bibliography Mrs. Morrow presents is fairly amazing. "The Last Full Measure," if not a great book, will at least be extremely interesting to a great many people.

The book is offered by William Morrow and Co., and sells at $2.50.

An Enjoyable Book About The Charms of Sitka
 "Sitka—Portals to Romance" contained a great deal of stuff that was entirely new, as far as I am concerned, and also a great deal that was highly enjoyable.

The author, Barrett Willoughby, has written a book in which she tries to convey the beauty, the glacial and the whimsical, the distant Alaskan city. Her account of Baranof, the hard-drinking, hard-fighting Russian governor who ruled in baronial state a century ago and dispensed justice according to the whims of the wild traders, hunters and adventurers who made up most of Alaska's inhabitants and visitors in those days, is especially good. She also has some interesting descriptions of the lawless days that followed the beginning of the American regime.

Honore W. Morrow

All in all, she makes Sitka sound just like what she calls it—"The Portals to Romance." If you like to read about distant places and romantic people, this book should please you very much.

The Houghton Mifflin Co. is selling it at $3.

In Which Sin Becomes a Wee Bit Monotonous
 Andrea Teller describes the varied loves of an opera singer in "The Magnificent Sin," and for the first half of the book spins a diverting tale. However, even sin can get monotonous if it is repeated in the same key too long, and I bugged down and gave up the struggle a considerable distance from the end. Madame Carneau, the tempestuous heroine of the book, was still sinning when I left her, and I presume she stayed on the job right up to the end.

If you think you'd like a book with the title, "The Magnificent Sin," hop to it. However, it's apt to bore you before you get through with it.

Fine Sketches Make This "Salome" Worth Having
 Lovers of fine books will welcome the new edition of Oscar Wilde's "Salome." It is illustrated by F. S. Vassos, which E. P. Dutton and Co. have just issued. Wilde's playlet, of course, is fairly familiar; but Vassos has contributed some illustrations which make the whole thing seem new. His sense of humor is well caught—the eerie, macabre quality of the text and to have put it into his drawings, and the result is a book that is worth owning—always provided, of course, that you like "Salome" in the first place.

Brazilians See Cotton Cure For Coffee Crisis
 Sao Paulo, Brazil—(AP)—With coffee overproduction staring them in the face, planters here are turning to other products, especially to cotton. The change may affect imports from the United States.

In a recent circular to planters the secretary of agriculture for this state advised the planting of cotton generally, and especially urged owners of coffee fazendas to use the space between the rows of coffee trees to produce cotton.

This is the largest mill city south of the equator and uses annually more than 40,000 tons of cotton. Much of this comes from northern Brazil states like Ceara, but droughts there interfere with the crop from time to time and Sao Paulo depends chiefly on imports, the United States being the nearest and cheapest foreign source.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 12.—The way things look now, there will be a wet Democratic candidate for president in 1932 and he will be Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

Hardly anyone doubts that Roosevelt will be re-elected governor and if his health turns out to be all right the Democrats agree that he will be nominated by the next Democratic convention.

Roosevelt's strongest assets are his ability to retain the governorship as a Democrat and the fact that there is no one else in the party who shapes up as a strong, available candidate.

Although Roosevelt has a nice personality and is well liked in the party, it is commonly agreed that he is not quite a statesman of the caliber of his predecessor, Governor Al Smith.

On the other hand, Roosevelt is a Protestant and he will not be under the serious religious handicap which is supposed to have cost Smith millions of votes in the 1928 election.

Has Many Advantages
 He will have the benefit, assuming that the Republican renominates Hoover or chooses another dry, of such recrudescence of wet sentiment as there may be in the 1928-1932 period. Roosevelt will not be wringing wet, but he certainly will be moist.

He can capitalize the unpopularity of the Hoover administration, assuming that it persists, and is not likely to have to contend with extravagant Republican prosperity claims such as damaged Smith two years ago.

Although there have lately been some odiferous scandals involving Tammany judges in New York City, Roosevelt is not a Tammany product, as Smith was, and he has not been so closely identified with Tammany as to enable his opponent to damage him seriously by pointing to such scandals.

Thus mused many Democrats as they dream pleasant dreams of capturing the House in the fall election and, recall that whatever the House has done Democratic in an off-year election of a Democratic president has followed.

Millions of Democrats are still dry and so are politicians who lead them. Some will grip at the idea of following another wet candidate. Nevertheless, the feeling of most Democratic politicians from the south is that the party need not worry two years hence about losing the five southern states which went for Hoover in 1928 even if it does nominally a wet. They know well enough that the nomination of a dry candidate would assure them the loss of wet northern states whose votes they simply must have if they are going to win any election, and they are sure the party can hold the south.

Silent On Wet Issue
 Lately, Governor Roosevelt has not appeared to be an inspirational spectacle. He has kept conspicuously silent as regards prohibition. And he has done nothing else which might aid him in capturing popular admiration. One supposes that this is Roosevelt's strategy. Perhaps it wouldn't do him any good to keep himself conspicuously tagged as a wet during the long period of waiting. If he likes, he will be able to get through his election campaign with little or no word on the issue, riding on the wet platform which New York's Democrats are sure to provide.

It is almost certain that Roosevelt will have hearty support from Smith. Another Smith nomination isn't in the cards, at least as long as Roosevelt is in the picture, and Al probably knows that as well as anyone does. No one of any strong political influence is formulating any plan to put the former governor at the head of the ticket again.

Meanwhile, the vote in New York's gubernatorial election will be watched and carefully studied. Democrats believe that if Hugo Roosevelt majority will demonstrate both the popularity of their prospective candidate and the general unpopularity of the opposition party.

Irish Milling Declines; Erin Buys Foreign Flour
 Dublin—(AP)—The Irish milling trade has suffered a serious decline, and the Free State is now forced to depend mainly on imported flour.

Seven years ago there were 42 flour mills working in the State. Eleven closed down, two others burned down and were not rebuilt.

Twenty-nine mills remain, and two of these, the largest in the state, have recently been purchased by an English company.

Cubans Remodel Ancient Palace For Modern Use
 Havana—(AP)—Havana's ancient municipal palace, 154 years old, and one of the chief links with days of Spanish rule is being remodeled to serve the purpose of a city hall.

Built in 1776, when the American colonies were struggling for their independence, the palace provided a meeting place for Spanish officials in Cuba as well as a residence for the captain-general of Spain.

ITALIANS ANNUL WEDLOCK
 Rome—(AP)—Though divorce does not exist in Italy, and legal separations without the right to remarry are rare, annulments have increased in recent years that the sociologists are alarmed. In 1928, the courts heard 226 such requests, 74 being granted. In 1929 only 127 cases were introduced, 28 applicants being successful.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY
 ABBOTT THAYER'S BIRTH

On August 12, 1849, Abbott H. Thayer, discoverer of the law of protective coloration in animals, and called the "Father of Camouflage," was born in Boston.

Famed equally as a painter as for his researches in science, Abbott's canvases hang in the Metropolitan and Boston museums. His paintings are considered creative, and modern.

From his studies on the effect of color in combination or in masses, Thayer developed the law which he believed prevailed in nature's way of protecting animals and birds by marking them with the coloring which blend most easily with their environment. For example, according to Thayer's theory, a flamingo was adorned in colorful dress so that a crocodile in the Nile would mistake it for a sunset and not snap at it.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War Thayer offered his plans for making war vessels semioverish. He received little encouragement and let the matter drop. When the World War started Thayer went to Europe and presented his principles before the British and French governments. Many of his devices and formulas, according to the French report, citing him for honors, reapplied in real service on the European battle-front and in the disguising of war and merchant vessels.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Tuberculosis)
 Question: Mrs. S. S. writes: "For the last three years my husband has been in the hospital suffering from tuberculosis. My little boy was born three weeks before my husband went to the hospital. That was my first knowledge that he had tuberculosis. Now, what chance has my boy? Will he inherit the disease? How can I care for him so that he will be saved from it?"

Answer: The tendency toward tuberculosis may be inherited, but it is not considered that the disease, itself, can be transmitted in this manner except in very rare cases. If your little boy is given a well balanced diet, and perhaps sunbaths, together with plenty of sleep, there is not much danger of his contracting this disease. I believe that it is quite easy for one to avoid contracting this disease by the proper hygienic measures.

(Salisbury Steak)
 Question: Mrs. J. C. writes: "I am a new reader of your health column, and have been hoping you would give instructions for preparing Salisbury steak as I see it listed in your weekly menus frequently. Will you please tell me how it is prepared?"

STEAMER CAPTAIN KILLED HIMSELF

That is the Opinion of Other Officers — Says He Had Been Depressed on Last Voyage.

Boston, Aug. 12.—(AP.)—In the opinion of the steamer's first officer and her regular captain, who is now on shore leave, Acting Captain Leslie E. Large of the United Fruit Company steamer San Gil, who disappeared while the vessel was en route from Cuba to Honduras August 1, was a suicide.

First Officer Willis Ivany of Somerville, who brought the ship to Boston, said last night that Captain Large "had been acting strangely on the voyage."

"He seemed very much depressed," Ivany said, "and had very little to say to anyone. I thought he was depressed by the worries incidental to being in command of the ship for the first time, and I did not pay any attention to it."

"No one on board saw him after he said goodnight to the officer of the deck about 3 o'clock. I believe he jumped overboard."

Captain William Mather, regular commander of the San Gil, said that he didn't know very much about the personal affairs of Large but that something was apparently worrying him.

"From what I have learned from others aboard the San Gil, I am convinced that Large jumped into the sea," he said.

Captain Mather will resume command of the vessel today.

LETTER FROM GARRETT (?)

Boston, Aug. 12.—(AP.)—Handwriting experts today were attempting to ascertain the authenticity of a letter purporting to come from Oliver E. Garrett, former Boston police officer, wanted for trial on charges of graft and extortion. The letter was received by a Boston newspaperman and was mailed in Galveston, Texas, August 8.

District Attorney William J. Foley ordered the handwriting experts to make an examination of the letter, which was signed in long-hand, after he had discovered that the signature bore a striking resemblance to Garrett's. The signature on the letter was compared with Garrett's signature on the Suffolk county jail record.

District Attorney Foley said that the first names bore a striking resemblance but that he wasn't so sure of the "Garrett."

Once again Merchants' Night comes to the State Theater tomorrow evening. With it comes Greta Garbo in her second talking picture "Romance." As usual a long list of valuable gifts will be awarded holders of the lucky coupons.

Greta Garbo will make her second all-talking picture appearance Wednesday at the State theater in the celebrated Edward, Sheldon drama "Romance," adapted to the screen by Bess Meredyth and Edwin Justus Mayer and directed by Clarence Brown. Gavin Gordon, a newcomer to motion pictures, will play opposite the star and the cast includes Lewis Stone, Elliott Nugent, Florence Lake, Clara Blandick, Henry Armetta, Mathilde Comont and countess de Liguoro.

"Romance" will be recalled as the outstanding hit on the New York stage in 1913, where it played to capacity audiences with Doris Keane in the starring role. Following a tour of the United States, the play was presented in London where it ran for three years. It was subsequently produced in France, South Africa, Australia, Italy, the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Roumania, Greece, Spain, Germany, Czechoslovakia, the Far East, Russia and Hungary, and in 1920 was made into a motion picture, silent of course.

Learned Italian Dialect

In obtaining the talking-film rights for Miss Garbo's use, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials were in no way disconcerted by the fact that it would require a certain knowledge of the Italian tongue upon the part of the star, despite the fact that Miss Garbo's linguistic abilities were limited to Swedish, French, German and English. The star's widely discussed success at learning English in lieu of talkie demands upheld them in the belief that she would be able to pick up the necessary Italian accent and characteristic phrases required by the plot by the time preparations were underway for the opening scenes.

And of course Miss Garbo did not fall them. In the same quiet way in which she went about her task of learning English, she utilized her spare time in the study of Italian phonetics and idioms, her tutor being the Italian actor and director Francesco Maran, who had come to Hollywood for the purpose of studying the making of talking pictures for European release. Inasmuch as there are several scenes in "Romance" in which Miss Garbo speaks only in Italian, movie-goers familiar with the Latin tongue will be able to hear for themselves just how apt a pupil she was.

Old Fashioned Gowns

Also serving to accentuate the break between Miss Garbo's past characterizations and that of her new talking vehicle, are the costumes which represent the height of fashion in the New York of 1865. Although naturally enough they are as different from modern clothes as are day and night, a humorous analogy may be seen in the sidewalk-sweeping skirts, regaining popularity at the present time, and the off-the-face hats which might be more nearly described as off-the-head, tilted as they were, extremely to one side so as not to hide the lady's long hanging curls, and usually embellished with a wavy plume. It was the day of the crinoline and petticoat, the era of candle-light and the harpsichord, the period in which lacy pantaloons peeped from beneath Dame Fashion's skirt as she stepped down from her coach-and-four and skipped up the stairs of her Washington Square brownstone front. Gilbert Adrian who designed the costumes for "Romance" is authority for the statement that the well-dressed woman of this period wore five-hundred more yards of lace on her undergarments than does the debutante of 1930.

An entire audience dressed in the fineries of this quaint generation will be seen in the sequence in which the second act of the opera "Martha" is shown as it was presented in the New York Academy of Music, sixty-five years ago. For these scenes, a huge auditorium set was constructed from floor plans and architectural prints of the famous music hall, seating arrangements for 1500 persons being provided.

"Romance" will be the first occasion in which Miss Garbo has essayed a costume-role, but then that is entirely in keeping with the method of this actress who never does the same thing twice. For each picture is a first occasion with Greta Garbo.

The Story
It is New Year's Eve in New York. Young Harry rushes to his grandfather, Bishop Armstrong, to tell of his great affection for an actress whom he wishes to marry. The bishop unfolds this story for him.

Fifty years before, the young pastor of St. Giles, Tom Armstrong, fell madly in love with Rita Cavallini, exotic Italian opera star, during a farewell appearance in old New York. To shake the pastor from this mad infatuation, Van Tuyl his best friend, tells him that Cavallini has been his mistress for years. Tom attempts to strike Van Tuyl down but Rita reveals the truth, that she has been what Van Tuyl said.

On New Year's night, Cavallini is singing her farewell, a tearful one, since she loves Tom, the minister, whose devotion is denied her because of her past. Tom, wandering blindly through the night, his mind tormented by desire, makes his way to her apartment where she is preparing to leave. They are swept away by passion until the midnight chimes remind them of Tom's ministerial duty. Rita sends him away—to his church.

"And you want me to give up this girl I love?" pleads Harry to the old Bishop.
"No, my boy," counsels the bishop, "that was real romance—don't let it get away from you!"
And as he does, he fingers a newspaper clipping announcing the death of Cavallini in a convent.

TO BAN KOSUTICH

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP.)—Special inquiry has been undertaken by the Labor Department into circumstances surrounding the attempt being made to enter this country by August Kosutich, who is declared to be the principal leader of the Croatian Party of Jugo Slavs.

It was understood through diplomatic and consular channels that the Jugo Slavian government protested against allowing Kosutich's entry on the ground that his passport and travel papers are irregular.

W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of labor, said protests had been received that Kosutich's status was that of an immigrant rather than a temporary visitor. He added that, in consequence, an order issued Saturday for his admittance had been cancelled and a board of special inquiry in New York would pass upon the case.

FAIR PLAY PARTY

Harrisburg, Aug. 12.—(AP.)—The "Fair Play" party name was preempted in the Dauphin County Court here today to sponsor the candidacy of former Governor Gifford Pinchot in his campaign for governor at the general election next November.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930 by NEA SERVICE Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DAN RORIMER, Hollywood scenario writer and former New York newspaper man, meets ANN WINTER, who has come from Tulsa, Okla., to seek extra work. He takes a deep interest in her. Dan is with Continental Pictures. Anne is just a beginner.

Anne gets extra work at Grand United studios. She goes to live with two other extras, MONA MORRIS and EVY HARLEY. The latter is a better individual, possibly because of her failure to get much work, and from her Dan learns a lot about the problems of the vast army of extras.

GARRY SLOAN, famous director, has noticed Anne Winter. He gives her a "bit" in a picture. Dan, not liking Sloan, although he has not actually met him, is a bit apprehensive. The casting director at Grand United calls Anne up and tells her there may be a chance for her in a musical comedy picture. He and Director FRED HURLEY get her to dance for them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII
 "Just a simple routine now, Mr. Winter, anything at all," Hurley said. He swung around on the piano stool so he could watch her, but his fingers were very busy on the keys and he beat time softly with his foot and a beat went up and down in smiling accompaniment.

The piano sounded strangely there in the shadows, a small, strangled voice in a vast emptiness, urging her on to the next rhythm. But Hurley's grin was friendly and encouraging, and Harvey Bell sprawled cheerfully in a chair and smoked a cigar, and there was that in his attitude which conveyed the feeling that the proceeding was not at all strange. One looked at him and took heart.

And presently Anne began to dance. Lightly and easily. Simple steps, for all of the gymnastic tap-tapping of feet and rapidity of movement.

Approval lighted Director Hurley's eyes as he nodded. He switched to a waltz tune watched her keenly as she adapted herself immediately to the new rhythm. Once or twice the girl fumbled uncertainly in the unfamiliar routine, but there was no awkwardness in Anne Winter's lithe and graceful body, and when he came to the end of the tune he got up and she had shook her hair and told her she had done very well.

"And Mr. Bell," Hurley said, "tells me you haven't taken any lessons since you were a little kid." Anne told him that was so, and he said, "Well, you haven't anything to worry about. We've got an instructor who'll have you dancing like Ann Pennington in a week."

More seriously he informed her that he had been more interested in what she looked like while dancing than in the actual performance of the steps. "Know what I mean? Some girls have all sorts of technique but very little natural grace to go with it." He turned to Bell and told the casting director that one could guess Anne Winter would be a good dancer from the way she walked.

Bell nodded and said that was true. "I wonder," he said, with a smile for Anne, "whether Miss Winter would mind terribly if we asked her to sing a little?"

"Really, Mr. Bell—" Anne began, but Fred Hurley had seated himself at the piano. With a wave of his arm he commanded Anne to come over beside him, and he began to hum as he played.

Anne told Rorimer that evening: "They were wonderful that evening; I didn't dance well—really; I felt as clumsy as— as an elephant."

"Yeah, I imagine so," said Dan dryly. "I bet you knocked them right out of their seats."

"Don't be silly!" he insisted. "What did they say about your singing? Remember what I told you, if you ever got a chance?"

Anne laughed. "Oh, I'm all excited, Dan! They liked it. I'd to have a screen test."

"Say! That's pretty neat, when?"

"Day after tomorrow."

Rorimer said that, under the circumstances, they certainly ought to celebrate. "How about a dance after the movie?"

Anne demurred. "It's too warm, Dan."

"Well, a drive, then, to the beach." He brought his car to a stop in the parking lot beside the Chinese Theater, and Anne said, as they turned toward the lobby, that a drive certainly sounded more appealing.

Sitting beside her in the car, he watched her, and he kept her in his thoughts, paying scant attention to the story that was unfolding on the screen. Anne's eyes shone with a happy, eager light, but otherwise she seemed calm and cool. Anne, he thought, always seemed that way. The day had been hot—it was the middle of May now—and Anne had been under a strain; but she looked as cool and fresh as though she had stepped out of an electric refrigerator to meet him.

Presently Anne began to dance. Lightly and easily.

or two from Garry Sloan, and a word from Sloan went a long way. Well, any time a mere extra girl catches the eye of the great Sloan the girl must have something. "And Anne has," Rorimer thought, and he laughed a little guiltily as Anne turned her head and confronted him.

She said, "Are you looking at the picture or not?"

"Yes," he said, grinning. "It's great, isn't it?"

"You're incorrigible, Dan Rorimer."

"I'm nothing of the kind," he whispered. "I've been doing nothing but sitting here being proud of you in a big way. You can't hate me for that, can you?"

He thought: "I wonder if I ought to tell her about the row I had with Admon today? I suppose not; she'd think I was crazy. And maybe—but later that evening he told Paul Collier. He and Collier had been living together for some time now, in an apartment off Hollywood Boulevard a short distance east of Vine Street."

But later that evening he told Paul Collier. He and Collier had been living together for some time now, in an apartment off Hollywood Boulevard a short distance east of Vine Street."

"Remember the other night we were out here, Anne?"

Anne nodded. She said she thought she could remember everything they had talked about that night, even though it was three months ago. "It was an eventful day. Dan was my first day at Grand United, for one thing; and that was the day I met Mona."

"Today was an eventful one, Anne. . . I suppose you've never regretted moving in with Mona and Eva, have you?"

The look that Anne turned on him held a question. "We've been very happy together. They've kept me from being lonely, and I hate loneliness. I'm afraid of it."

"Why do you ask?"

Dan said he didn't know exactly. "Unless it's because I was thinking of Eva. I'm rather sorry for Eva, Anne, she seems so cheerless."

"Not all the time," Anne corrected, and Dan, looking up at the star-strewn sky and smoking, said it was his guess that Eva at one time or other must have been badly broken up over a love affair.

"Because," he explained, "she's so—oh, I don't know—so defensive when men are around. Paul Collier said the same thing about her. She doesn't have very much use for men, does she?"

"Eva likes that," Anne told him, evasively, and Dan nodded solemnly and admitted that Eva once had told him that.

"But I think," he added, "that Eva had measured me in her mind for some time; weighing me in the balance, you might say." He laughed. "And why, do you suppose?"

"Why?" Anne asked.

"Because," Dan said, "I think Eva had your interest in mind. In some ways she reminds me of a mother hen; she seems so fiercely protective of Mona, and you, too. I think Eva was trying to make up her mind whether or not she was the right kind of young man for little Anne Winter to associate with."

Anne laughed. "Now you're being silly again, Dan Rorimer."

"You don't mean that at all; there was absolutely no conviction in the way you said it," he accused her, and Anne made no answer.

Scanning New Books

By RICHARD MASSOCK

New York.—Will James, the cowboy artist, has been almost everything the Old West had to offer and he tells about it in his own way in "Lone Cowboy, My Life Story."

A hard life and a lonely one, too, it was, until one of his beloved bronks pitched him into a railroad tie and subsequently into fame as sketched of western pictures and author of western tales.

James, named at four, he was adopted by a French fur trapper who was drowned some 10 years later. The kid drifted through the cow country alone, mooching a free meal here and getting a job there, leaving a trail of drawings—drawings—horses, cattle, cowboys.

To Santa Fe

The glamorous, exciting history of the Southwest back to the early sixteenth century has been put into another book by R. I. Duffus, New York newspaper writer.

It is the history of "The Santa Fe Trail," first of the great beaten paths binding the east to the west, extending from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to the capital of New Mexico.

The Santa Fe country was doubly alluring to the trail-campers. It offered romance and the profits of commerce.

Explorers of the country and the trail-openers' life is rather meagre until near the middle of the nineteenth century, when Susan Maguffin, wife of a trader, told in her diary of buffalo soup, the perilous, the dark and the shocking morals and manners of the Mexican short-skirts and cigarets of more recent times.

Duffus has written the story of the land of Captain Pike, whose name was given to Pike's Peak; David Merriwether, ragged prisoner who became American governor; Captain Becknell, father of the trail, who rode the first wagon over it;

HOW TO SHOP

Silk hose are sometimes made of a fabric which has been woven, cut and seamed up. They do not "run" as knitted hose will but, on the other hand, they do not give; and they will get holes easily as a result.

There is also a glove silk fabric which is knitted in the piece and cut and seamed.

Rayon is less elastic than silk and therefore does not conform as well to the shape of the foot. It should never be rubbed in washing as it loses its strength when wet. When these defects are overcome, a very important future may await rayon in this field.

Of cotton hose, hile is the best quality. It is made of a fine, hard-twisted yarn. A mixture of cotton and wool may be more satisfactory than pure wool because it shrinks less. It also reduces the cost of the fabric, enabling the consumer of limited means to obtain a warm stocking at a low price. Pure wool is widely used for outdoor wear and, of course, the warmest stocking.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famous Authority

LIVER, LARGEST ORGAN, IS GREAT CHEMICAL CENTER OF THE BODY

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The liver is the largest organ in the human body. It weighs from three to four pounds. It is well supplied with blood and it is concerned with many activities essential to life and to health.

The liver lies in the upper right hand side of the abdominal cavity. Under the surface of the liver is the gallbladder, a pear-shaped sac from three to four inches long. A tube comes from the liver and joins a similar tube coming from the gallbladder to make one common tube which empties into the intestines. The liver is the great chemical center of the body.

When food is digested, it comes from the intestines to the liver and the products of digestion are changed, built up, or broken down into other substances which are needed by the various tissues. Glucose, which comes from the blood to the liver, is changed into a substance called glycogen, which is stored in the liver and which is reconverted into glucose and carried by the blood to the cells as they need it.

The liver secretes the bile, which passes to the gallbladder and into the intestines. The liver helps to control the amount of sugar in the blood and to supply the tissues with glucose. It breaks up the products of digestion and forms protein combinations needed in the body. It helps to rid the body of poisons, stores fat, and is concerned in the formation of chemical substances involved in the coagulation of blood. No doubt, there are many other functions of liver that have not yet even been suspected.

This tremendous organ certainly develops special secretions which are involved in the manufacture of blood cells. Extracts made from liver are now used in the treatment of various forms of anemia.

The bile is important in the absorption of fats. It is secreted by the liver continuously and in animals forms that have a gallbladder, from time to time, bile is passed into the intestines. The amount of bile that will pass in 24 hours may vary from a pint to a quart and a half.

Some of the factors which control the development and secretion of bile have been determined, but the complete mechanism is not yet fully understood. Indeed the functions of the bile are many, and are still the subject of investigation. Certainly, the salts of the bile, as has been mentioned, assist in the digestion and absorption of fat.

The bile helps to remove bacteria from the intestines through the slightly laxative effect that it has. In the bile are dissolved various toxic substances which are taken out of the blood by the liver. Perhaps the bile is itself absorbed and acts as a stimulator to the development of more bile and to the secretion of bile.

FRENCH WAR AREAS NOW PAY DIVIDENDS

Paris.—(AP)—Taxes from the ten war-devastated departments now are paying interest and principal on the huge cost of reconstruction.

Textile mills and coal mines of the north constitute a big part of the Franco's industrial wealth. After the war the ruined strip from Lille down past Verdun could pay little and needed much.

Rebuilding is almost complete. There has been spent about $3,300,000,000 and about a tenth that much remains to be paid. The work, in 1922, was estimated by the government as likely to take 40 years.

Interest seemed a huge burden on the country for all the money had to be borrowed. Yet in 1924, according to the president of the Roubaix Chamber of Commerce, taxes from the war area more than paid the interest and now proposed has so greatly increased taxes that they promise to extinguish the debt.

That of course, was the theory on which France invested in reconstruction. And as a matter of fact, economists say, the output of the war area has been increased over pre-war figures by rebuilding in a more scientific way and by modernizing plants.

Australia's Prize Movie Drive Becomes Fiasco

Canberra.—(AP)—The $50,000 movie contest conducted by the Australian Federal Government has proved a fiasco.

None of the movies entered for the contest were considered worthy of the first prize but the third prize of $5,000 was awarded to "Fellers," produced by Artaus Limited.

The picture, concerned with the desert campaigns in Palestine of the Australian soldiers, took more than a year to produce. It is a silent film.

TOUGH CUTS

If you get an inexpensive and more or less tough cut of beef, soak it an hour before cooking in vinegar water. This does much to make it tender.

Dill Weed Is Newest Crop In Mississippi

Roxie, Miss.—(AP)—Dill weed, used in the manufacture of pickles, is the newest farm crop in Mississippi.

Allen Whitehead, Roxie farmer, planted an acre of dill weed this year and realized a net profit of $110.19. Cultivation and fertilization methods used were similar to those for cotton. The acre produced four tons of dried weed.

Experiments conducted in the state by agricultural experts show Mississippi land well adapted to the growth of the new crop in large quantities.

YOUR CHILDREN

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Summer time brings its crop of runaways. This year has had more than its share, it seems, and that is only natural, for the weather has been so hot and dry that if corn could run it would probably chase off, to the nearest creek, to cool off its hot and thirsty stalks.

Children who couldn't get permission to go swimming or splash around in the park fountain have done both in many cases. When desire gets so strong that it seems a need, at least gets stronger than the will to curb it, we have to make allowances. One thing that we have to learn about children is that they have not always the self-control of their elders.

The swimming hole is mentioned merely to illustrate the enormous urge that motivates most runaways and shows too that it is not the thing that he'll forget about going away. And to make him happy at home too. For children with quarrelsome sisters and brothers, or—excuse me—scolding mothers, will wander off unaccountably sometimes, merely to seek peace.

Another was lonely and he had made friends with a garage man blocks away who let him sit in the cars. Gradually the hobby grew and this got to be a regular garage fan—but he picked his places, he was particular about his friends, and only stayed where they would let him sit in the cars and pretend to drive.

One suburban child took it into her head one time to hunt an elephant. Why not? She had seen cows in fields, and horses and sheep. It was only by the merest accident after her third or fourth offense that the family learned what she was after.

The way to cure a runaway is to get behind that psychology of his, learn the things he craves and it seems he must have, and study out the situation. Such a thing as a dog can be remedied. An elephant is not so easy.

But substitution is possible. A wish impossible to grant often can be successfully supplanted by one that is— or several.

The secret of keeping the child at home is to keep him so actively interested in something that he'll forget about going away. And to make him happy at home too. For children with quarrelsome sisters and brothers, or—excuse me—scolding mothers, will wander off unaccountably sometimes, merely to seek peace.

EXPLANATIONS AREN'T EASY

The trouble is that small children are inarticulate and they can't or don't explain why they do things. If they did, how much easier it would be to handle them. One little boy was found invariably after following a dog or searching for one.

A WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington.—If you are old enough to vote, more than likely there'll be a letter for you within a few weeks from the man who represents you in congress. He'll be wanting to know what reading matter he can send you from Washington. There will be a list from which you can choose— some 650 different publications running the gamut of topics from "Food for Young Children" to "Diseases of Sheep."

Check the ones you want, mail the list back to him, and within a few days the postman will deliver them to you.

On July 1 this year each senator and representative was allotted his quota of Farmer "Bulletins"—the "best sellers" of all government publications.

It cost Uncle Sam $250,000 to publish this series of bulletins which are given away free. Four-fifths of the total number published are turned over to senators and representatives for distribution as they see fit.

The department of agriculture retains the remaining one-fifth for general distribution.

Millions Sent Out

These 20,000 copies which each member of congress gets are not folded indiscriminately upon his constituents. Care is exercised to make sure that a person does not get something for which he did not ask or in which he is not interested.

Before actual distribution, a list of publications is sent to the constituent. He is asked to read this list over, select those in which he is interested, and mail it back.

Last year, as a result of circulating some six million copies of these lists, more than seven million farmers' bulletins were distributed by members of congress.

This brings the total number of publications distributed by these officials last year to more than 13 million.

Of all the publications, by far the most popular are those that relate to beautifying the home and to domestic science.

Trade Around

There are heavy runs on such issues as "Lamb's Liver," "Ice Cream Frozen Without Stirring," "Honey and Uses in the Home" and "Beautifying the Farm Homestead."

Often congressional secretaries are compelled to secure sufficient copies of popular issues such as the above to meet demands of their constituents.

It is not uncommon for a secretary for one congressman to endeavor to trade the secretary of another 25 copies of "School Lunches" for a like number of "Suits for the Small Boy."

This congressional distribution of farmers' bulletins is in charge of a tall, thin, red-faced Irishman at the department of agriculture by the name of Francis Cleary.

Cleary has grown up with the department, said members of congress and their secretaries regard him as virtually a walking encyclopedia on matters pertaining to agriculture.

Former Federal Official Says She is Trying to Lead in Aviation Matters.

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 12.—(AP.)—American commercial aviation companies in Latin America must be "watchful" to hold their place "against the intelligently directed and well-financed efforts of French and German companies, Edward R. Warner, former assistant secretary of the Navy for aeronautics, told the Institute of Politics today.

Mr. Warner, who is a member of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, said at the round table discussion of serial navigation that "subvention is calculated to enable American operating companies to take a leading place in South and Central American and the Caribbean area."

"Although companies under American and under European direction are in competition with America, they should also be co-operating," he said.

Advise Competition
"Let there be competition in efficiency and economy of operation and in equality of service, but where French, German and American operators can show savings by pooling their efforts, no jealousy or national pride should prevent their doing so."

Otto Merkel, director and member of the executive committee of the Deutsche Lufthansa, stated that "relations between French and German civil aviation during the last ten years have been friendly, but not intimate."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Foster and family and Miss Dorothy Dewey motored to Storrs last Thursday where they attended the Farmers' Week program.

Miss Lois Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Foster, left last Sunday afternoon for a two weeks vacation which she will spend with relatives and friends in Somersville.

DURANT SUGGESTS TRAINING MAYORS

Another Says Third Rate Politicians Govern Our Larger Cities.

University, Va., Aug. 11.—(AP)—Will Durant, New York author told the Virginia Institute of Public Affairs here today that there was a way out of the domination of political life in the United States by men of third-rate ability, except to make education a qualification for public office.

In his address on "Is Democracy a Failure?" Mr. Durant asserted the final "breakdown of democracy appeared in the increasing insecurity of life in our cities, where political machines were in league with the world of crime and in the inability of Congress to face the complex economic problems confronting it every day.

"I should like to see in all our great universities, schools of public administration in which students would be prepared as specifically and technically for the tasks of government as they are now prepared for medicine, for engineering and law, and no one should be eligible to municipal office unless he had received some training," he said.

TRAINED POLICE

Besides higher educational training, the speaker proposed a graduation of public office, giving as an example, the suggestion that the mayor of a first class city, should first be mayor of a second class city, and the mayor of a second class city, should first be a mayor of a third class city.

Education, he said, was his suggestion for saving democracy from the clutches of the political machines, he added.

A suggestion to Latin-American republics that they declare Monroe Doctrine of their own was made by James Brown Scott, international lawyer and secretary of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace in an address before the Institute this morning.

Admitting that the United States doctrine is of benefit both to this country and to the other republics of the western hemisphere, he said it was nevertheless "a badge of humiliation to our southern friends."

ALLEGED BANDITS FINED

New Britain, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Four of five men arrested yesterday by police from a party of seven who were charged with a "bump off" Joseph Pavano of Kensington, were fined $200, were fined $25 in police court today on a charge of breach of the peace. They were George Slivia, and Leon Sannaro of Newington and Jacob Persky and William Rich of Hartford. Anthony Albanese of this city was discharged.

The arrests were made after a small boy had informed a policeman that the five men had threatened to murder Pavano. They had called him to a street rendezvous by telephone.

Authorities in the town of Berlin of which Kensington is a district, were informed yesterday by the police that the five men had admitted going to Pavano's house and threatening him with a pistol.

POLICE COURT

A disagreement between August Andrioli and his wife that has continued for some time brought Mr. Andrioli to the Manchester police court this morning on a charge of non-support of his five-year-old child. Andrioli was defended by Attorney William S. Hyde. In her testimony Mrs. Andrioli told the court that her husband had not contributed anything toward the family for several weeks. The Andriolis have three other children who are self-supporting.

Mr. Andrioli bought a home on Summer street and to keep peace in the family decided a-half interest in the property to his wife. But Mrs. Andrioli refused to pay her share of the interest on the mortgage on taxes and consequently foreclosure proceedings were brought and this matter is now in the courts. She had refused to deed back her interest in the house to her husband.

Three weeks ago Andrioli left home. The reason for leaving was that his wife, he said, would not make him anything to eat nor would she do any washing for him. He now sleeps in his shoe repairing shop on Hartford Road and gets his meals where it is convenient.

Judge Johnson continued the case for a month and Probation Officer Edward Elliott will make a thorough investigation and report his findings to the court.

WRECKED SCHOONER DRIFTING TO SEA

Crew of Six Swept Overboard by Squall Make Their Way to Shore.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Newport waited anxiously today for work of the auxiliary schooner Wanderer IX, reported stripped of her sails and drifting with a disabled engine off Sakonnet Point.

Five men and a boy, who had been swept from the yacht's deck during a squall yesterday, brought the news of the disabled craft late last night. Early today, Boatswain's Mate William E. Nickerson of the Newport Coast Guard station returned to the station after an unsuccessful search for the schooner.

The boy, Thomas Withersbee, 15, of Narragansett, put in here in a small boat with A. G. Pendleton, one of the party aboard the Wanderer, and an unknown man. Pendleton had become separated from the yacht after rescuing Withersbee, who was swept overboard, and their unknown companion, who dove from the deck to save the boy.

The trio accompanied Nickerson in a Coast Guard surfboat during his search for the schooner and on arriving back in Newport, they left immediately for Sakonnet harbor in the hope that the yacht might have made port. She had not been reported there at dawn today.

Pendleton said that the schooner had been swept overboard, and that he knew of no serious damage to her hull.

The Wanderer IX is owned by T. P. Hazard of Peacedale, and is valued at $75,000.

His final relapse occurred a week ago, and up to that time he had kept in close touch with affairs. He was intensely interested in the campaign of his friend, Cordell Hull, who last Thursday was given the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator.

ON TO BOSTON CLUB
SIGNS 100 MEMBERS

Cannot Secure Floyd Gibbons for Talk Here—May Give Concert Later.

One hundred members of the American Legion have signed up for the "On to Boston" Club trip to the annual convention of veterans in Boston, October 6, 7, and 8, it was reported at a meeting of the committee conducting the drive, held at the Army and Navy Club last night. Before the time limit expires it is expected that at least 50 more will join the club. The Legion was forced to forego plans of obtaining the services of Floyd Gibbons, famous radio personality when Gibbons in a telephone conversation with Fred Lorch from station WEAF last night, said that his radio engagements would tie him down 14 hours a day, holding him in New York City for several months. The Legion had planned to have Gibbons speak here as one of the means of raising funds to defray expenses of the "On to Boston" trip. As a result, the committee is planning other ways and means of attending to the financial end of the trip, and Harry Maidment, chairman, said today that a concert, featuring nationally known singers, may be given in September. Plans, however, are not definite. A meeting of the committee will be held next Monday evening.

MERCURY DROPS NEAR FREEZING; TOWN SHIVERS

Falls to Within 12 Degrees of Freezing Point in Sudden Weather Change.

Manchester shivered in a temperature only 12 degrees above the freezing point last night in striking contrast to the heat wave of the past weeks or more when the mercury climbed high in the nineties and in many places crept up into three figures. The crisp weather seemed all the colder because of the previous hot spell and many a bed was topped with an extra blanket and many a window closed. In some cases even furnace fires were lighted. Another sign of the approaching fall season is the familiar thud of the football heard at the East Side playgrounds tonight.

MAKE RAPID PROGRESS
EXTENDING GAS MAINS

Rapid progress, through the employment of trench diggers and multiple operations, is being made on the laying of mains which are to supply Rockville and the Dobsonville area with gas, coming by way of Hartford from the big tidewater plant at New Haven. Many of the pipes used in the job have been distributed along Oakland street and Tolland Turnpike and trench operations are going forward at a rapid rate. Incidentally it would appear that a little more care might be used in the placing of the pipes before linking them up into four-piece welded units and burying them. One pipe, left too close to the road, was struck on Friday last by an automobile driven by a Rockville young woman. The axle of her car was bent and she had to return to Rockville.

HOSPITAL NOTES
Patients admitted to the Memorial hospital in today's report include John Bengston, 59 Bussell street, Robert Gordon, 43 Wellington road, Herbert Kanehl, 111 Florence street and Leslie Plau of South Coventry. A son was born last night to Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hutson of 35 Strant street.

LINEN SHOWER BRIDGE
FOR MISS HELEN TRANT

Miss Henrietta Kanehl of Center street entertained at her home last evening with a linen shower and bridge for Miss Helen Trant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Trant of McKee street.

The guests were young women friends and former classmates in High school of Miss Trant. The color scheme of the floral decorations and favors was pink and yellow. The gifts were presented in a novel way. Miss Erna Kanehl handed Miss Trant a box of red and yellow rosebuds. As she removed them from the box she discovered written directions for finding the hidden packages. When the quest was finished a choice array of beautiful linen articles was the reward. At bridge the winners were Miss Bessie Tynan, first; Mrs. Sherwood Boyers, second; and Mrs. Fred T. Gilsh, Jr., third. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess. Miss Trant is to be married in the near future to Harold Ambach of West Hartford.

FRIENDS GIVE HOLLAND
SURPRISE ON BIRTHDAY

The plan of Walter R. Holland, captain and star centerfielder of the West Side baseball team, to attend the town series meeting last night were blocked when twenty of his friends gathered at his home at 389 Hartford Road to tender him a surprise birthday party.

The celebration was in honor of Holland's 21st birthday. He received a number of useful gifts from his many friends and relatives. Mrs. Helen Armstrong baked the decorated birthday cake for the occasion. In the card playing that followed Mrs. Anna Johnson took first prize among the ladies with consolation honors going to Mrs. John Johnson. Men's first was won by George Elliott with the guest of honor getting the consolation prize and many others as well.

WATCH FOR PERSEIDS
HERE IS UNAVAILING

Meteors Dust Shower Seen in West But Local Watchers Fail to Detect It.

So far as can be learned no Manchester persons were rewarded in their midnight vigil for Perseid meteors, called "Pluto's Playmates," a shower of meteors dust through which the earth made its dash last night. A number of persons craned their necks and strained their eyes gazing into the star-studded sky but without success. The meteors were plainly visible both in San Jose, California and from Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton near there, falling at a rate of 100 or more an hour. The Lowell Observatory in Arizona was not so fortunate because of clouded skies.

Evangelist Douglas will preach at the Gospel Hall, 415 Center street, this evening at 7:45. Formerly a missionary in Venezuela, he will bring a message of much interest to his hearers, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this meeting.

HEWITT-WITHERELL

Miss Christine Lillian Witherell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Witherell of this town, and William John Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hewitt of East Middle Turnpike, were married last evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride.

The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Morris Pasternach. The bride attendants were Mrs. Rose Fowler of this town, sister of the bride, and Truman Witherell, of Huntington, Mass., brother of the bride, was best man. The bride party took their places under an arch of evergreens, roses and carnations. The color scheme of the decorations was pink and white. The bride who was given in marriage by her mother wore a gown of white satin trimmed with lace. Her veil of tulle was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white Killarney roses and maidenhair fern. The matron of honor was attired in peach-colored satin and carried an arm bouquet of dahlias and asters in matching colors. Guests at the reception, numbering more than fifty, came from Atlantic City, Boston, Springfield and Huntington, Mass., and Manchester. Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt left for a wedding tour to Boston and the White Mountains, the bride wearing a pink ensemble costume with hat to match.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Fish to Philip Lewis will take place at St. Mary's Episcopal church Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock. No formal invitations have been issued but the former pupils of the well known teacher, and friends of St. Mary's church and the town will be welcome to attend the ceremony.
