Local Man Pioneer

In Great Northwest

John A. Hern was first school teacher at Fort Spokane - was soldier during trouble with Indians - on return to East devoted his years to the study of astrology.

MANCHESTER has an aged champion of one of the most ancient of sciences—astrology—in the person of John A. Hern of Dougherty street, South Manchester.

John A. Hern spent 15 years of his later life in this work. Through reading the book on astrology written by L. D. Broughton, M. D., one of America's greatest astrologers, Mr. Hern became acquainted with Ray Broughton, daughter of the eminent astrologer.

Indians Seeing First Automatic Guns

Give Up Idea of Fighting Whites.

A school teacher in an Army post in the old Northwest, John A. Hern, whose life story is told on this page today witnessed many unusual events in the stirring days before the Indians were finally shown the error of their ways.

"Colonel Merriam, the inventor of the army knapsack received the first modern automatic firing gun at the infantry headquarters in Fort Spokane and decided to use it in a novel way against the Indians.

This exclusive spot news picture shows Old Man Hoffman facing the jacketeers who raided his fruit stand. This is only one of the recent jacketeer outrages in Vesey Street.

JACKETEERING HAS GOT TO STOP, Says SKIPPY

Here is that colorful character, Spumone, who organized the lawless element and put jacketeering on a firm financial basis in Vesey Street.

SKIPPY

By Percy Crosby

DEAR SOOKY:

My heart feels like a cobblestone on account of the way Vesey Street is being run now. It's all so terrible that I'll have to woe it up your derby any' or you'd think I was dipplin' you the chatter. You remember the time you could sail from one end o' Vesey Street to the other without bein' knocked down. In those days ya only had to call for the big cop on the corner an' he gave them a sniff o' the law, he could do that 'cause the whole army an' navy was in back of him. The cop has to look the other way now since he ain't got the backing. I'll give you the real truth of how things are: one side o' the street thinks they're right, while the other side thinks they're right, an' they'd rather see the good old street knocked down before they'd think o' stretchin' out a helpe' hand to each other. A lot o' jacketeers know that Vesey Street wasn't speakin', so what do they do but split through them an' run the whole street. The terrible part of it is that the Vesey Streeters now have to do what the jacketeers say, or they get another address handed to them.

There's a new guy on this street an' his name's Spumone, an' he's brought a gang with him. Whatever this gang says goes, or they take you for a ride, as they call it, an' that ride is always one way. Remember Buck? Well, this gang o' jacketeers tried to tell him what to do, but Buck said he'd spill the beans about them an' tell Vesey Street the truth. Last night Buck was at the radio when the jacketeers let him have it. Did Vesey Street rise up like they was regular guys? They did not! They was too scared. The jacketeers came right out in the open an' says anybody else that meddles in their affairs gets the same thing. Can you imagine?

When you used to be here, Sooky, all the different Sunday school kids no matter what Sunday school it was, worked for the good of Vesey Street. Other streets didn't dare criticize us then, 'cause we hung together. No more though. Ya go to the movies an' Vesey Street never gets a hand—just glance like before a thunderstorm. Unless somebody does somethin', the kids on Vesey Street are goin' to go under, but I'm not going to let them. I'm going to give them a hand 'cause the way I look at it ya wouldn't ask a lad who was drowning what Sunday school he took off—you'd just save him!

Last night I couldn't sleep, so I got to lookin' out the window an' I heard a couple o' reports; I couldn't tell whether they was backfires or not, but that's the way it is on Vesey Street—they don't pay no attention any more. The jacketeers make them mind their own business. The trouble is we ain't got a leader, an' as long as I won't be told what to do by jacketeers, an' as long as I won't pay protection to Spumone's gang, I figured that I'd better step in an' take the leadership. I ain't waitin' to be elected, I'm just goin' to take it 'cause I'm remainin' under the stars that looks in my window every night. I figure that's a ticket that's higher than anythin' the kids on Vesey Street can give me. I'm only takin' orders from the stars, an' them orders are that I make the jacketeers kin the colors. Affectionately sincere, SKIPPY.

BUILDERS and HOME OWNERS PAGE

Various Types Of Footings And Foundations Available

Often when modernizing it seems best to increase the size of the basement, excavating it fully and bringing down the foundation walls to a new level.

The type of footings and foundations which will be chosen for the newly excavated basement may be brick, concrete block poured concrete or building tile. All are satisfactory as footings and foundations and each have merits that are peculiar to it.

Most of the earlier basements were constructed with foundation walls of common brick. This type of construction was undoubtedly due to the fact that brick was better known and was readily available.

Of late years concrete blocks are growing in popularity due to their structural strength, the ease with which they can be handled and their comparatively moderate price.

Poured concrete walls cost about the same as concrete blocks and may be used if conditions are suitable. Due to the fact that forms must be set, it is often not practicable to pour concrete.

Another type of foundation wall that has merit is ordinary building tile. Its hollow center makes it a good insulator and its size makes it possible to build walls rapidly.

The cost of these materials depend largely on local market conditions which vary with the time of the year and the demand.

BUILDER ADVISED NOT TO SKIMP IN BUYING OF PLOT

Many Factors Enter Into Problem, Including Question of Sale at Later Time.

By MARGARET HUNTER

My home is more than my house—much more. It takes much living to make a house a home and to blossom into its fullest fruition. A home as well as its occupants requires congenial surroundings—a proper setting. This does not mean that the small house should have a lavish garden—quite the contrary—it requires a modest setting—a "happy" garden, though miniature. In the designing of a home it has become the general practice to fit the house to meet the needs and wishes and to express as well as to allow, the mode of living of the family.

Too often this phase is carried to such an extent that the relation of the house to its site is forgotten and while the family may fit into the house, the house does not fit into its own family—the site, the other houses and the locality in general.

So when we plan to build our new home we should not go out and buy a lot and build a house. We should go over the general localities available, bearing in mind the scale of living we intend to maintain, the type of house, whether we prefer rural or urban modes, and, of course, the type of neighbors, conveniences, schools, churches, transportation, country clubs, and so on.

Must Apply Yardstick

Then, after having reached a decision as to the locality which best seems to meet our ideas and needs—it is largely a matter of averages—weighing advantages and drawbacks, we go over the available lots or sites. Here again we must bear in mind all of the details. Is the lot large enough for our house without cramming? Is the grade excessive? Are there any trees? Is there evidence of rock that will make excavation expensive? Is the exposure right? Are all of the conveniences in the street? Are prohibitive or exorbitant legal restrictions applied to the plot?

Only after applying the "yardstick" to each parcel do we arrive at the proper solution. It is not a matter of mere personal whim or fancy. Hard, cold, disagreeable facts confront us at every turn and if we would get the most advantageous "buy" we must go through the entire process and seek, through elimination, the desirable.

A good start is half finished. A well bought plot is a half completed home. The house cannot overcome basic defects in the plot, it cannot change the neighborhood, nor compensate for inadequate size. Better underbuild than overbuild your lot. A modest house on a good lot in a good neighborhood always has high market value, while the most expensive house cramped on a small lot or in a poor location has almost no sale value, relatively speaking.

GALVANIZED PIPE GENERALLY USED IN WATER WORK

White Metal Tubing, However, May Be Employed In Exposed Plumbing Parts.

By WILLIAM HARMON BEERS

While the life of galvanized iron pipe is limited, it continues to be used more than any other kind for water supply work. Cheap, clean, and quickly laid, it is practical and can be recommended for all but the most expensive work, where funds permit the use of tin-lined lead pipe.

Inside the house tin-lined lead pipe, galvanized iron pipe, or white metal pipe can be used for cold water or hot water. Brass tubing is also used for hot water pipes, plain and nickel-plated.

White metal tubing, sometimes called by the trade name "Benedict metal" or "durometal," is made of an alloy of nickel and brass—not unlike German silver, and it is excellent for hot or cold water lines, though this is the most expensive piping made. In exposed work white metal is particularly desirable because its finish never wears off like nickel-plated tubing.

In some places where the town water pressure is excessive it must be reduced by placing a pressure regulator on the water supply pipe inside the cellar wall. This is necessary in some cases because a house plumbing system will not stand high pressure liable to put too much strain upon it. Water enters the pressure regulator under high pressure and flows out the other end and reduces the pressure, the reduction being accomplished by a system of springs and levers inside the regulator. These can be regulated by adjustments to deliver water at any number of pounds pressure, from forty to twelve or fourteen pounds.

When the water supply pipe has been run to the cellar it is extended on walls or ceiling to the various basement fixtures, then up through floors and partitions to the first and second stories. For the main pipe three-quarter inch is the size generally used, with one-half inch or five-eighths inch branches to the various fixtures, excepting a shower bath, which may need a larger pipe—usually three-quarter inch.

The principal result desired in the supply pipe is that it shall be large enough to bring water freely to every fixture at all times, even when several fixtures are in use at the same time. There is not much use in having branch supply pipes larger than one-half inch, because the waterways in faucets are rarely larger than this.

Various shut-offs should be arranged in the basement on the different branches of water supply pipe, so that one branch may be shut down for repairs without disturbing the supply of water to other branches. All pipes must pitch back to these.

One main valve should be provided just inside the cellar wall to shut off the entire supply. It is a good plan to have a shut-off for the laundry tubs, another for the kitchen sink and a separate one for each bathroom. These valves should be arranged conveniently in the basement, each one tagged with a durable metal tag labeled "bathroom" or "kitchen," so that in an emergency one may go to the cellar and quickly shut off any line.

After closing a shut-off valve, water contained in the pipe should drain off. This is usually made possible by what is known as a "stop and waste." When the lever handle of the valve is turned it shuts off the supply of water and at the same time a little valve is automatically opened.

Nestling close to the ground this little cottage presents a pleasing appearance. In its construction are to be found a happy combination of simple materials; overburned brick, rough sawed weatherboards, tinning, stucco, dressed stone and a bit of wrought ironwork here and there. The windows are solid steel of the casement variety. Batten shutters are provided on most of the windows. The roof is of slate in various shades of gray, green and purple.

The plan shows very nice size rooms for a small house. The entrance vestibule is of good size and has two closets. The living room is of unusual dimensions for a plan of this area, one is provided with groups of windows which admit an abundance of light and air into the interior. A glass door leads from the living room to an open porch which is also accessible from the dining room. The dining room is of sufficient size for the average small family. A small and conveniently arranged kitchen and a single car garage completes the first floor plan. On the second floor are three bed rooms and two bath rooms. All the bed rooms have cross ventilation and good closet space.

A cellar extends under the main part of the house and contains the laundry, heating plant and store rooms.

The house contains 23,500 cubic feet and would cost approximately $11,000 to build.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-238.

POOR PLUMBING SYSTEM MAKES HOUSE FAILURE

Installation Requires Expert Direction, Especially in the Cutting of Timbers.

By WILLIAM HARMON BEERS.

Nothing about a building is more important than the plumbing system, for a house will be an utter failure if the plumbing is not perfectly sanitary—a properly arranged, noiseless, convenient system. A modern plumbing system is so different from old-style plumbing there is little comparison between them. Formerly fixtures were cumbersome and inconvenient, in most cases boxed in with wood paneling.

Today more advanced methods prevail and plumbing is exposed as much as possible. The idea in a modern plumbing system is to place the skeleton of pipes and the fixtures in such a way that adjacent space can be kept clean and every part of the system can be reached for repairs. This has been made possible to a large extent by nickel-plated piping and modern enameled iron, porcelain and vitrified fixtures.

Though not himself an expert, any house owner may easily acquire enough general knowledge about plumbing to enable him to know a good job from a bad one. Let the owner understand, in the first place, that plumbing shall be done only by experts—mechanics who desire to do a first-class job and are capable of it. Watch particularly when the piping is installed that the plumbers do not cut too deeply into floor and wall timbers.

Some plumbers are not careful about cutting timbers and, when they get through, a house is greatly weakened. All cuts in floor joists should be close to the end, so as not to weaken the timber. Skillful planning of the plumbing system will reduce cutting of timbers to the minimum and any cuts necessary can be made where they will do no harm.

Every system of piping is divided into three parts: pipes for water supply, for sewage and for ventilation. The former conduct water from the main in the street or from a well to the house and thence to the various fixtures. Pipes for sewage carry off the waste from fixtures, discharging into the sewer in the street, or into a cesspool or septic-tank system.

Ventilating pipes admit fresh air to the sewage system; each branch of the work should be built economically and durably. Every length of pipe and every fitting should be air tight and water tight, put together so it can be readily taken apart for cleaning or repairs, resulting in a system of plumbing that will carry on the work automatically for years without renewals.

Let us consider first, the water supply system, usually extending from the water main in the street. It is included in the plumber's contract that he shall dig the ditch out through the street and connect the supply pipe with the water main, running the pipe from that point into the basement of the house. In most towns a fee is charged by the town for the privilege of tapping the water main in the street. Frequently another fee is charged by the town for the privilege of digging up the street, though this fee is ordinarily returned after the street has been restored to its original condition. All such fees should be stipulated in the specifications, "to be paid by the plumbing contractor."

In most towns and cities a three-quarter-inch tap into the street main is the largest that will be allowed by the water company. This is sufficient for a house not too large in size, but where consistency of water is large, a three-quarter-inch tap might not be sufficient. To increase the supply of water in such cases, two or more three-quarter-inch taps can be made, these branch three-quarter-inch pipes finally being gathered into a larger pipe extending to the house.

In some towns where streets have been improved and sidewalks laid in advance of building the house, a supply pipe is often extended to the curb line when the street is improved. In this case the plumbing contractor has only to connect the water supply with the pipe already extended to the curb.

The water supply pipe to the house is of lead or galvanized iron, usually three-quarters-inch or one inch in size, depending upon the water pressure. Advantages are claimed for both lead and iron pipes. Lead pipe, under ordinary conditions, lasts longer than iron pipe, even when the latter is galvanized, and for that reason lead pipe is used by many architects in spite of its greater cost. Lead pipe for drinking water supply is not advisable, however, as water of certain chemical consistency will dissolve lead, holding it in suspension in the water.

When lead pipe is used it should be "tin lined" which combines the durability of lead with the purity of tin. In joining one tin-lined length of lead pipe to another, care should be taken to screw the lengths together in such a way as to make a tight joint between tin and tin so that the water will not touch lead at any point in the pipes. Special tin-lined fittings are furnished for this purpose.

COLONIAL HOUSES OFTEN PAINTED IN VARIOUS COLORS

Are you modernizing your house and changing its design into the dignified and always tasteful Colonial? Perhaps you have already decided that its color will be white and that the blinds will be green. This color is suitable yet you will find that other color combinations are equally pleasing.

Before placing an order with the painter, get his advice and suggestions. Let him look over the house and its environment and give you his opinion. Working with color combinations, as he does week in and week out, he has learned what is good. Perhaps he can suggest something else that will make your home stand out from its surroundings and still be in good taste.

Your painter has expert knowledge; make use of it.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930 by NEA SERVICE, Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dan Rorimer, a scenario writer in Hollywood, is in love with Anne Winter, who, beginning as an extra, has progressed rapidly and is now under contract to one of the largest studios. Anne lives with two other girls; Mona Morrison, a gay little red head, and Eva Harley, a quiet girl who at times is very bitter and who has had a tragic love experience. Eva and Mona are extras, but Mona works only occasionally and Eva very rarely, and this is another reason for her despondency.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

"You big brute," said Dan, and he sat on Collier's bed and laughed, and watched the other's agonizing struggle with his collar button.

"Johnny tells me the story's all over Hollywood," Dan said. "Here let me fix that collar for you before you tear it apart."

wonderful director; you can't take that away from him. If he had done this picture, now," she said, meaning the one they had come to see, "it would have been a great picture. But the best you can say is 'there you are,'" said Collier, and he grinned at Dan. "Maris is right as usual, Dan," he explained to Maris, "can't see Sloan, for some reason or other."

"Hollywood tin gods give me a pain," Sorimer muttered. He glanced at her as she spoke, at Anne Winter, but Anne gave him a puzzled glance and was silent.

After the picture they went to Henry's. On the way home with Anne, Dan said something about picture, but she told him that day that Eva was to return that day from the hospital and she thought she and Mona ought to spend the day with her.

He began to hum a song, and he looked expectantly at Anne, hoping that she would sing; but she was not in the mood. When he asked her, she explained that she was tired.

"And still a little nervous, Dan," he said, and she still had Eva on her mind.

that, a miss, he told Collier, was as good as a mile.

"Well, send it around, my boy. Some other studio'll be sure to take it."

"Yeah?"

Collier laughed disgustedly. "Aw, go on out and play tennis." He said, slyly, "How are you and Maris getting along?"

Paul returned early that afternoon; he was trying to "get ahead" for his vacation, during which time his daily column would run as usual.

"Mail for you," he said when Dan came in, and Rorimer, ripping open the large and heavy envelope, laughed shortly.

"I know what this is," he said. "This is rejection day—and how!"

"What is it?"

"My famous play," Dan said. "The one that's been kicking around Broadway for lo these many months. Come home to papa to roost. Oh, well, . . ."

He read the letter that accompanied the manuscript and handed it over to Paul, and when Paul had read it he observed:

"Well, your agent thought highly of it at least; and I guess the play market in New York is all shot to pieces."

He said, "I guess you just don't get the breaks, Dan. Let me look at it, will you?"

"Sure, I'm going to take a bath."

He went off to his room, whistling loudly, and Paul picked up the manuscript and settled comfortably and began to read it.

Half an hour later, when Dan had leisurely bathed and dressed, Paul was still absorbed in the play, and when Dan made some joking remark about what he stirred impatiently in his chair and glanced up to say that he didn't want to be bothered.

"It's a damn good play," he said. "I didn't know you had it in you. . . . No fooling," he insisted at the other's skeptical smile; "this is great stuff, Dan."

He sat up straight then to reach for a cigarette, and with the lighted match in his hand he paused to deliver a lecture.

"You give me a big pain—worrying about what the studios think of your stuff when you can knock out something like this. No kidding; if I could write like this I'd have Hollywood eating out of my hand. Where'd you get the idea?"

"I see. Well, it's some story! Run along now, my boy, like a good fellow, and let your Uncle Dudley finish it."

THIS AND THAT IN FEMININE LORE

While the gardens and lawns do not look well just at present because of the lack of rain, it is still possible to do a lot in the way of improvement for another season. Lawn grasses will germinate and grow well from now on while the weeds do not, so it is a good time to see to the new lawn or patch up the old one and root out the old dandelions and other distasteful weeds that are apt to start new growth at this time. Watering ordinarily at the close of the day will help germination of the grass seed.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

TINY SCRATCH OR CUT CAN LEAD TO FATAL BLOOD POISONING

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Whenever germs get into the body and begin to release their poisonous products, the human being reacts with fever, chills, and usually with an increase in the number of white cells. He seems tired and he may vomit. Sometimes the germs localize and set up small abscesses.

There are many types of germs. One group is known as the pyogenic group because pus develops when they attack human tissue. The chief members of this group are the staphylococcus, seen under the microscope in groups, and the streptococcus, seen in chains. Whenever a sufficient number of these organisms get into the blood the person suffers with sepsis, which is commonly referred to by the press as blood poisoning, although the same term is used for a venereal disorder.

HOW TO SHOP

DON'T JUDGE A TURKISH TOWEL BY APPEARANCE

By William H. Baldwin

To buy a Turkish towel, simply buy the best you can get. It is better to have a good one than to have a cheap one. God's appearance certainly is to be desired, but when this is a towel's only virtue, then it is a poor bargain.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Until not so very long ago the question of a boy's profession or vocation was up to the will of his parents. At certain periods of history it has even been decreed by custom. Whatever the case, his career was determined as much without his opinion as his christening.

Recently people interested in youth have been urging parents to allow their children to follow their natural impulses in choosing a profession when they grow up. And parents have followed this advice pretty closely. It has become the general custom to wait until the spirit moved John to be a lawyer, or a doctor, or an electrical engineer, before making an attempt to shape his education in any particular direction.

Two Bad Lies Under Trees Spoil Pro Star's Chance To Break Par; Horton Smith Fails To Show Up

Gallery of Nearly 800 Persons Disappointed by Missourian; His Whereabouts Unknown Here; "Cap" Perkins Does Well in Substitute Role; Grant's Driving Erratic; Crowd Unruly and Poorly Handled; Match Delayed an Hour for Smith; Farrell Entertains Crowd With Free Lesson.

Like the Bobby Jones bet in the British Open, Horton Smith failed to arrive for his scheduled exhibition golf match at the Manchester Country Club yesterday afternoon.

Smith's failure to show up was a keen disappointment to the gallery of nearly 800 persons who waited patiently for more than an hour in hopes he would put on an appearance.

To a great extent whatever Smith did to mar the afternoon's program, was offset by the brilliant performance of smiling Johnny Farrell, 1928 United States open champion, who not only came within a few inches of negotiating the 18-hole course in a sub-par total, but who also entertained the gallery with shot demonstrations interspersed with free lessons during the long wait for Smith.

Farrell also played the sixteenth in par and was still nursing along his stroke lead on par. Then came the disastrous seventeenth. For the first time, Farrell hooked into the rough on his drive. The ball didn't go far off the fairway but once more it nestled under a tree and this time picking the shade of a young elm.

Farrell made an excellent out but a shot to the green was out of the question. The ball sailed to the top of the knoll in front of the sand trap and his approach dropped ten feet from the pin.

Farrell now needed a birdie on the comparatively easy home hole to break par and the crowd to a man, woman and child, was silently pulling for him to come through.

THE TINYMITES

Inside the coffee shop a lass came forth and started out a peck of a little money tray. Said she, "I'm going to entertain. You'll like it when you hear me sing. At dancing I will take a fling." Then Scouty cried, "We'll gladly pay. Your plea is not in vain. Each Tiny dropped a coin inside the tray and shortly Clowzy sighed, "My goodness, but she's beautiful. I'll bet she sings real well. We're where we all can hear and see. I'm as excited as can be. Now, if we like her first song, let's all clap our hands and yell." And then the girl began to sing. The piece was quite a pretty thing. Her voice was good and she went down low and way up high. "Gee whiz, she hit the highest C, and did it very easily," said Carry. "Why, at one time I was sure she'd reach the sky." The girl next danced. "Twas clever, too. And my, what fine steps

OUR BOYS TOP LIST
IN CATTLE JUDGING

Youngsters Get Low Rating, However, Due to Inability to Give Reasons.

William Veitz, 13, a member of Manchester's own 4-H Dairy club, topped the list of all Connecticut dairy judges at the State Fair, Durham, yesterday. Franklin Lipp, 14, also of the Manchester club placed third. Due to the inability of the local youngsters to give reasons for their choices in the contest, a technical feature with which they had no previous training, young Veitz was dropped to eighth place and Lipp to fifth for the free trip to the National Cattle Show at St. Louis.

The local boys fared better in the State reserve championship, however, Lipp placing first in the Holstein class, John McHugh, second in the Jerseys and Clinton Keeney second with his Ayrshire calf. In addition to his honors in the State judging contest, young Veitz, one of the youngest members of the club won fifth in the reserve championship class with a Gurnsey calf.

The 4-H club exhibition at Durham this year was one of the best ever conducted, extra space being provided for the many exhibits that were brought from all parts of the state. The showing of the local club in judging and individual club activities was very fine considering the length of time the club has been operating.

The West Side playground girls met at the West Side Rec Thursday morning numbering thirty. They went on a hike to Sunset Hill with Miss Fenerty for a hot dog and marshmallow roast. A good time was had by all of the girls to end up the playground season for this summer.

LIONS' CAMP TO GET $200 FROM GOLF SHOW

No Explanation From Horton Smith as to His Non-Appearance Yesterday.

All efforts to locate Horton Smith, famous golf star, who failed to appear at the Manchester Country Club as scheduled yesterday, failed this morning but so far as can be learned responsibility rests solely upon the shoulders of the slim Missourian.
Smith's booking agent, a New York newspaper man, when questioned by phone, appeared as much surprised as anyone to learn that Horton did not come here. The agent said he made arrangements with both Farrell and Smith separately.
Johnny Farrell, former U. S.

LABOR DAY

The day on which nobody is supposed to labor—and the railroad men, the trolley men, the garage men, the filling station men, the hot-dog men and a lot of others labor harder than on almost any day of the year. Also it's no cinch as a rule for Madam the Housewife. A holiday—with the kids to get ready for school the next day or the day after!
Pinehurst's gang does get that very rare thing, a two-day rest for all hands. And we wish the thing could be managed so that everybody else could have the same. If somebody will tell us how this could be accomplished, once a year, we'll boost for it.
Meantime, after closin' time tonight, good-by till Tuesday.

Pinehurst Will Be Closed All Day Monday

All orders received up to 7 p. m. this evening will be delivered. Please check your week-end food wants now.

open champion, arrived on schedule and gave the gallery of nearly 500 persons a treat by shooting the course in 71, one over par. He also gave a lengthy demonstration while waiting for Smith.
The net receipts of yesterday's exhibition go toward defraying the expenses of the Lions Recreational Camp and it was stated this morning by Francis E. Miner, chairman of the general committee, that in the face of incomplete returns, that it was expected that the profit would be slightly in excess of $200. There were a few more than 400 paid admissions for an intake of close to $600. The expenses were about $400.
Regarding the failure of Smith to appear, Farrell could offer no solution. Farrell came to Hartford by train and was not supposed to come with Smith as they had different bookings the day before. Farrell played in Canton, Ohio, on Wednesday and this afternoon appears at Shelter Island.
