Warship to Carry Explorers' Bodies

Vessel That Discovered Andree and Companions is Now in Port in Norway; Story of Find is Now Told.

Copyrighted. All rights reserved in North and South America and Japan by (AP).

By Wireless to Associated Press

Aboard the Motor ship Bratvaag, Skjager Island, Norway, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Solomon August Andree, Swedish explorer and his two companions in the 1897 attempt to fly across the North Pole in a balloon, died of exhaustion, and slept themselves into death. Dr. Gunnar Horn, head of the expedition which found their remains on White Island, east of Spitzbergen, believes. After a torturous grueling march and ride in frail boats across 180 miles of ice and icy water from the spot where their balloon came down they sustained life on White Island only a few months, he believes, killing birds and a bear for food. The approach of winter, 33 years ago they died one by one, and at least two of their bodies froze into a sort of semi-permanency.

Found by Accident
Those bodies remained in their natural graves and snow until August 5 when two harpooners of the Horn Expedition, seeking drinking water on the bleak island, discovered a boat and boat hook which once belonged to the Andree expedition which ended in discovery of the headless body, or clothed skeleton of Andree, and one of his companions, and of a group of bones which may be those of the third member of the party.

Andree's body, sitting with a boot encased in ice and a rifle and oil stove by its side, was found near the base of a mountain at the spot a skull nearby was believed to be his head. The body itself, Dr. Horn says, had greatly deteriorated and was not much more than a skeleton clothed in Arctic apparel, in a pocket of which was found a monocle by which it was identified. It is believed the teeth in the skull in the other body, found nearby, may have belonged to the third member of the party.

10 VIOLENT DEATHS OVER THE WEEKEND

Only Five Auto Deaths Despite Heavy Traffic in State—Five Kill Selves.

Ten violent deaths marked Connecticut's celebration of the three-day week-end as tightly jammed highways resulted in three fatal automobile accidents and a large number of minor mishaps. Suicide however, took the greatest toll over the Labor Day holiday as five persons in the state chose the period of merriment and relaxation to end their lives.

The automobile casualty list was comparatively light, considering the heavy traffic and the dangerous condition of the rain-soaked roads. Two persons, Walter Rounds, 25 of Toland and John H. McPartland, 17, of New York City, were killed in traffic accidents Saturday and a third was added to the list Monday when a hit-and-run driver fatally injured an unidentified cripple in Westport. Sunday was without serious accidents.

Five Suicides
Those who took their own lives, used fire, rope, gas, knife and gun. Mrs. Nettie Decamp, a trained nurse, poured kerosene over her clothes in her Stamford home and burned herself to death. The body of Aaron P. Krosneck, 60, was found hanging from a rafter in his Ansonia store and William J. Grumbly, 54, of Norwalk, slashed his throat in a fit of despondency over his unemployment. In Bridgeport Frank Meets, 42, wrote a note to his wife begging forgiveness for a recent quarrel and then turned on the gas in the bathroom of his home. August A. Poloch, of Worcester sent a bullet through his brain in Norwich after wounding his divorced wife when she refused to return to him.

Other fatalities were those of George Johnston, 70 of Vernon struck by a Rockville bound trolley and J. Hazlett Griffiths of Albany who fell from a moving train in Stamford.

TREASURY BALANCE

Washington, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Treasury receipts for August 29 were $5,382,949.14; expenditures were $61,219.15; balance, $105,320,128.35.

HOLIDAY HERE IS QUIET, COURT BUSIEST PLACE

Out-of-Town Shore and Mountain Exodus Nearly Leaves Homes Deserted; Sixteen Face the Judge.

Labor Day, the final holiday of the summer, was colorless and quiet from the sporting angle, with the bulk of Manchester people at the beaches and mountains or out town for the day. Rain, which began falling shortly after daybreak yesterday, spoiled many a projected outing and hastened the return of vacationers during the day. The sport schedule, at low ebb for the season, provided but one baseball game within the town limits, and people remaining in town spent the afternoon at home or the movies.

The Manchester police court opened the holiday with one of the largest holiday rosters in a long time. Sixteen cases were disposed of by Judge Raymond A. Johnson, eleven for drunkenness, two for keeping a disorderly house and there were several motor vehicle cases.

Joseph Zadronsky, an old offender, charged with attacking and inflicting serious knife wounds on Michael Kadnisky at Hickey's Grove last Thursday was held in $2,000 bonds for his appearance in the September term of Superior Court.

Man Killed
George Johnston of Ogden's Corner, Rockville, was killed Saturday afternoon when he walked into the 4 o'clock Rockville trolley near his home. Mr. Johnston, the father of Mrs. Benjamin H. Kloter of 8 Autumn street, South Manchester, was very deaf and did not hear or see the car approaching.

Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Dauplaise of Manchester were involved in an auto crash on the state road near North Walpole, N. H. None of the Dauplaise party were seriously hurt. Saturday night Mrs. Ray Kaplan of Brooklyn, N. Y., was treated at the Manchester Memorial hospital for injuries received in an automobile accident on the Mansfield-Putnam road.

BLAMES CHILDREN FOR CHICKEN THEFTS

Father Under Arrest, Says He is Innocent — Denies Beating Son and Daughter

Norwalk, Sept. 2.—(AP)—After his 19-year-old daughter, Mrs. Ruth Jennings Ready and 16-year-old son, Clarence Jr., had accused him of beating and torturing them, when they refused to aid him in his raid on poultry farms of Fairfield county, Clarence Jennings, Sr., today blames the children for the thefts and still maintains that he is not guilty.

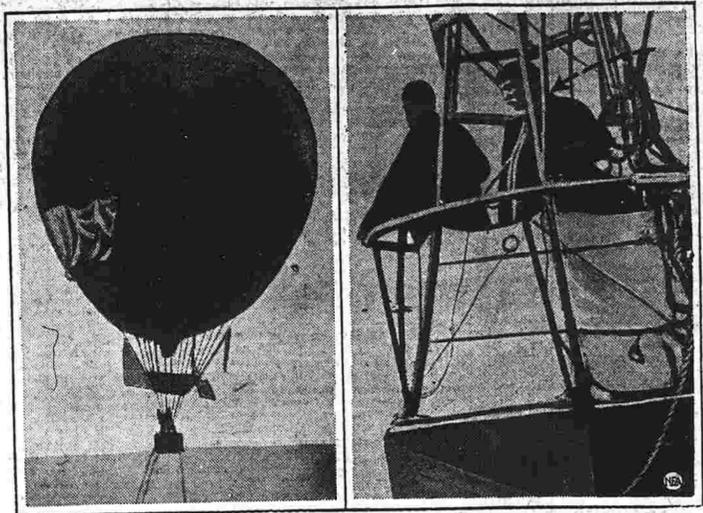

The three Jennings and six others, all alleged to be members of a gang which systematically stole thousands of chickens over a period of a year, were arrested by the police. All but Jennings, Sr., and Clarence Jr., of Newtown avenue, Norwalk, have confessed, according to the police.

Continuing their investigation of the case, authorities of the Norwalk police and State police last night arrested Sam Dickson, local poultry dealer, on charges of receiving stolen goods. All will be tried in City Court Saturday.

WAR HISTORY READY

Washington, Sept. 2.—(AP)—General John J. Pershing expects his history of the World War to be published before January.

Old Pictures Recall Start of Arctic Balloon Flight

FRANCE EXPELS HEARST; HE LEAVES AT ONCE

American Publisher Says It Was Caused by Publication of an Anglo-French Treaty Two Years Ago.

London, Sept. 2.—(AP)—William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, arrived in London today. Asked about his expulsion from France, Mr. Hearst said: "I have no complaint to make. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger to their midst."

He said the reason for his expulsion was the publication of an Anglo-French treaty, two years ago, by the Hearst newspapers.

William Randolph Hearst

ROBINSON IS KILLED BY FALL IN ITALY

U. S. Vice Consul at Naples Topples From Window at Hotel Quisisana.

Capri, Italy, Sept. 2.—(AP)—John Randolph Robinson, 28 years old, of New York, U. S. vice consul at Naples, died at 7 o'clock this morning from the effects of a fall from a window of the Hotel Quisisana, on the island of Capri.

After falling several stories to a cement pavement, Robinson was taken to a hospital suffering from bone fractures and internal injuries. Robinson was the son of a prominent attorney living in Paris. He was born in Paris and educated in French, Swiss and English schools, later attending St. Paul's school at Newport, R. I. He was graduated from Harvard in 1927. He joined the United States foreign service in August, 1927. He was vice consul in Calcutta, Madras and Nice. He had been in Naples for less than a year.

BELGIANS LEADING IN BALLOON RACE

Only Three Reported All in Eastern New York and Thought Close Together.

Cleveland, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Like racing horses, three of the six balloonists in the 19th international Gordon Bennett balloon race, were speeding to indefinite goals somewhere in the eastern part of the United States.

No word had been heard of the location of the three others, since the six took off from Cleveland yesterday afternoon.

The Goodyear VIII, the Belgica, and the City of Detroit were reported over eastern New York this morning. They sailed swiftly onward at times, then slower, first one and then another reported in the lead, while the pilots, like jockeys, tried to coax the maximum speed from the steeds.

Captain Ernest Demuyter of Belgium, who has won the Bennett classic four times, at latest reports was at or near the head of the procession. His balloon, the Belgica, was sighted 30 miles west of Albany, N. Y., at 10:30 a. m.

American Entries
The City of Detroit, with E. J. Hill and Arthur G. Schlosser aboard, was over Syracuse at 7 a. m., and Ward T. Van Orman's Goodyear VIII was at Norwich, Chenango county, N. Y., at 9:50 a. m. Less than two hours earlier, Van Orman's craft was struck by some wind current that sent him backwards but he caught a new wind and moved on with the procession shortly.

LAWYER KILLS SELF

Albany, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Roy Brackett, 44, an attorney of Hanover, N. H., plunged eight stories to his death from his room in a hotel here today. He registered there yesterday.

Police found a typewritten note on a desk in his hotel room which mentioned "getting out of town" turning in resignation to "Tuck school." "Going out on a ranch for a year or so" and practice law in a small town.

"About money?" the note read, "I borrowed $5,000 to start here. Your capital is your experience. A teaching job? Pretty good, eh?"

School for Dry Agents Started in Washington

Washington, Sept. 2.—(AP)—A group of specially selected prohibition agents here for a course of learning was started by Amos W. Woodcock, head of the Enforcement Bureau, to urge upon personnel of the service that arrests should be made only in clear-cut cases.

PEACE ENVOYS SEE FAILURE OF NEW PLANS

Fear That Mahatma Gandhi Will Not Approve Britain's Suggestions to Stop Trouble in India—New Parley.

Allahabad, India, Sept. 2.—(AP)—A very definite impression prevailed among members of the All-India Congress here today that attempts to make peace between the government and the civilian disobedience followers of Mahatma Gandhi had failed.

The Congress members as well as many others expressed the feeling that the results of the conferences between the two Moderates, Sir T. Bhabur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar and the Pandits Nehru in the Naini jail have been most disappointing, even after the envoys had brought the viceroy's reply to the Mahatma's letter written in the Poona jail some ten days ago.

Another Parley
The two peacemakers left today for Poona where tomorrow they again will interview the Mahatma. Meanwhile there were unconfirmed rumors that the Congress leaders had agreed to suspend the civil disobedience campaign on two conditions: First, that the governor-general give an undertaking in support of India's claims for dominion status at the next conference. Second, that a general amnesty be granted political prisoners but that the Nationalist propaganda be continued.

REPORT YRIGOYEN AS SERIOUSLY ILL

Argentinian President Has the Flu—Rumors of Political Unrest Continue.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Illness of President Hipolito Yrigoyen today caused some uneasiness in government circles.

The president did not go to his office today. He was said to have suffered an attack of influenza Sunday night and to have been confined to his bed. His temperature was 101.3.

There were rumors that he had been removed from his residence where apparently police and military vigilance was somewhat relaxed.

Political Unrest
Meanwhile rumors of impending political trouble will not be still. The Buenos Aires morning papers published innumerable reports of a disquieting character concerning the extraordinary activity of officials. Editors of Critica said it had been learned upon the most reliable authority that a reunion held yesterday in the building of the official multiplex, La Epoca, at which several members of the Cabinet and numerous Yrigoyen Senators and deputies were present the gravity of the political situation was the topic of discussion.

Many of those present suggested that resignation of President Yrigoyen or his absence for some period was advisable in the face of the precarious situation of the country. This would allow President Enrique Martinis to assume the presidency. Critica said that this opinion was shared by nearly all present.

CHARGES DISMISSED

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Justice of the Peace, J. C. Madison today dismissed charges of conspiring to cause the assassination of Governor Doyle E. Carlton which had been preferred against Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, Frank Ralls and Henry Halsema, both of Jacksonville, on the ground of insufficient evidence.

Nearing Goal

started his ocean hop in Ireland and stopped for fuel in Newfoundland. The German, von Gronau and his mates, who arrived last week in a flying boat also made stops in Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and elsewhere along their route.

Even if Coste and Maurice Bellonte, his companion should be forced down short of their goal here they still would be credited with the best westward flight ever made across the North Atlantic, for they started in France and in passing Canada they reached the continent of North America.

Arrive Late Today
By landing late this afternoon at New York, in their flight from France, Coste and Bellonte would bring about the realization of a dream which in 1927 brought about the death of Charles Nungesser and Francois Coll, the first to attempt the flight.

The disastrous flight of Nungesser and Coll ushered in the great flying summer of 1927, which marked a new era in aviation, for only a few days after the Frenchmen were lost in their White Bird, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew without a stop from New York to Paris, and he was soon followed in ocean flights to Europe by Clarence Chamberlin and Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

After that group of successes there came many failures, ocean planes flying both east and west being lost, many men and two women dying in the attempts.

Ten persons have been lost following that dream that was first Nungesser's and Coll's, so perhaps it is no wonder Coste called his plane The Question Mark. None know better than he, who already has flown the South Coast and most of the way around the world, that there is no certainty for anyone who attempts the perilous crossing he was due to complete late today.

WIFE AWAITS CALL

Paris, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Madame Dieudonne Coste today waited in her Paris apartment for her husband's promised long distance telephone call from New York at the end of his flight across the Atlantic ocean. She was convinced he would phone her well before midnight today.

The bride whom the premier French aviator left behind is a beautiful, slim blonde Georgian princess. Her vigil will have been far longer than that of her husband for she watched beside him while he slept before starting upon his flight and she has had no sleep since. "I went to bed to dream of him, to be with him in the great loneliness of the black night over the sea," she told the Associated Press today. "But how could I sleep? I had a telephone beside me and every word from Maurice Bellonte's wireless and from the many watching ships came to me hour after hour."

Madame Coste is quite the reverse in type of her strong-bodied, dark-haired husband. But she has all of his dynamic energy, all of his confidence.

chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic. But I told them I didn't want to take the responsibility of endangering the great French nation, that America had saved it once during the war and I would save it again by leaving."

PARIS REPORTS

Paris, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The Havas News Agency said today that an order of expulsion had been served on William Randolph Hearst, American newspaper publisher, and that Mr. Hearst would leave France this evening in compliance with it. No reason was given for the order.

Harold J. T. Horan, a Paris correspondent for the Universal Service, one of the Hearst newspapers, said at the time the French press expelled from France for his part in securing for publication in America in the Hearst papers and other members of the Universal Service Association, documents connected with an Anglo-French pact and that Mr. Hearst was charged with having obtained the documents from the French foreign office in a manner considered unethical. The Anglo-American Press Association expelled him from its membership in connection with the affair.

At the time the French press expelled Mr. Hearst from France, he was in the Hearst press office in the French foreign office in a manner considered unethical. The Anglo-American Press Association expelled him from its membership in connection with the affair.

Zadrozny's record includes several arrests, two of them in connection with serious offenses. Some years ago a Buckland character known as "Black Joe" was celebrating in the Depot Square neighborhood, the arrival of twins at home. Zadrozny was in his company during the evening. About 10:30 "Black Joe" was found lying in an alley along the Cowles House, almost disemboweled by a knife wound. He was taken to a Hartford hospital and ultimately recovered. Zadrozny profited by the fact that "Black Joe" pulled through and he was not severely punished. "Black Joe" however, failed in health and finally died and his friends attributed his physical wrecking to the knife wound.

Served Five Years: Zadrozny's most costly experience in crime was the assault on a floater named White. White, Benny Lis and Zadrozny were drinking together and had a sort of picnic at the junction of North Main street and Toiland turnpike. White was found there, later, badly chopped up. He died several days later.

Lis was at once under suspicion but the police could not find the necessary evidence on which to arrest him and the next day he and Zadrozny left town. It was a year before they returned. Police Captain W. R. Campbell, then in the department, had probed into the case and when the pair returned he had them locked up. Capt. Campbell put an interpreter into an adjoining cell and learned enough from their conversation to make a trial for murder warrantable. Lis and Zadrozny were convicted of manslaughter and served five years in Wethersfield.

Lis later died as did Zadrozny's wife. Zadrozny married Lis' widow. She was in court yesterday and made an ineffectual effort to raise the bail money.

COLLEGE BUILDING BURNS

Hamilton, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Serious fire damage to West Hall, a Colgate University dormitory last night, added a new difficulty to the university's housing problem. Built in 1928 as one of the three original buildings of Madison University, forerunner of Colgate, the structure was to house 80 freshmen this year. Those now will have to find quarters elsewhere.

OUTLINES SCIENCE'S AID TO FARMERS

Enlightening Talk Given Before Kiwanians by Dr. Shelton of Cheneys.

Dr. Elbert Shelton, head of Cheneys research chemistry department, gave a decidedly interesting talk on what science has done for the farmer before the Manchester Kiwanians at the Country club this noon. Dr. Shelton referred his audience back some 75 years. At that time the state and federal government began to pay some attention to the troubles of the farmer. It was in 1875 that the first appropriation was made by the Connecticut Legislature for the teaching of agriculture. Our own state was among the pioneers in this study and today practically every state in the union has its agricultural college where the young men of the country are taught scientific farming. Results have been very apparent in producing men who conduct their farms along the same lines as other men conduct the different industries. The time was so limited today that Dr. Shelton was unable to conclude his talk and will be called upon to continue it at some future meeting.

William A. Knoft won the attendance prize donated by C. P. Quimby.

ABOUT TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. John Barstow had as their guests over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rockwell of New Britain. Mr. and Mrs. Barstow spent most of the time on Long Island Sound on Mr. Barstow's cruiser, the Betty B., which he keeps anchored at Niantic.

The Berlin police pointed out that it was customary for various countries to keep each other informed of the movements of notorious crooks. For that reason the German authorities have been on the lookout for them.

"We certainly don't want him in our country," an official said. "When the American Embassy advised us of his approach our first thought was to apprehend him before he could do any mischief. We are anxious to hear from our New York colleagues."

DISORDERLY HOUSE RAIDED BY POLICE

Wholesale Arrests at Katie Rennie Johnson's Home Features Big Docket.

Thirteen cases were before Judge Raymond A. Johnson in Manchester Police Court yesterday, Labor Day, eight being the outcome of a raid on the home of Mrs. Katherine (Rennie) Johnson of 36 Gardner street, following a neighbor's complaint of disorder and drunken revelry emanating from the house.

On arrival at the Johnson home the officers found evidence of a drunken orgy with only two of the eight participants able to negotiate on their feet, the others being stretched in various postures and places on the floor, couches and beds, wherever they managed to fall after over-indulgence in alcoholic beverages.

As a result of this discovery, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson faced the court charged with keeping a house of ill repute and with intoxication. Represented by Attorney William J. Shea, the Johnsons, through him, pleaded not guilty to the first charge and guilty to the second.

Officers Seymour and Cassells, in testimony for the state, told of their visit during which they found Mrs. Johnson on a couch, either sleeping or dead drunk, while her husband was in a like stupor on the floor. In addition to the Johnsons, the officers testified that they found George McClellan of Hebron, Howard Warren of James Hill street, Novack and John McCarthy, all of Manchester. All were placed under arrest and charged with intoxication and frequenting a house of ill repute.

In passing sentence upon each, Judge Johnson said that in a way he did not consider the phrase "ill repute" to really cover this particular case. The statutes, he said, had been fit to divide the phrase into four different meanings, and the one retraction that could be applied to the local case was the section relating to allowing drunken men and women to assemble at any time.

Judge Johnson dismissed the charge of frequenting and imposed a fine of $15 and costs in the five cases. In the case of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Judge Johnson pointed out that it was not the first time that they had been principals in police court cases and imposed a jail sentence of forty days in each case. A notice of an appeal was taken but the bonds amounted to $500 each, which they were unable to furnish, and during the temporary efforts to arrange for a bond man and wife went to jail.

The arrest of William Lewis of Charter Oak street was also the outgrowth of the Gardner street raid. It was found by the officers when they visited the place that two young children of Lewis's were there. Upon Lewis's refusing to identify himself, the police told him that they were aware of his previous visit to the Johnson home. Lewis objected to the officers' talk and was locked up on a charge of intoxication. Pleading not guilty he was found otherwise liable a thirty day jail sentence was imposed. Lewis gave notice of an appeal but was unable to raise the bond and went to jail.

Improper brakes and being a good fellow brought four cases of motor vehicle violation before the court. Rudolph Hopner of 35 Chestnut street was found driving with defective brakes Saturday night and paid a fine of $10 and costs. His emergency would not work at all and his foot brake was poor. The brakes were repaired Sunday morning.

John Bartley of 142 Eldridge street, who is well versed in automobile driving, took the wheel from an intoxicated man, to assure better conditions on the road. The hitch was that Bartley failed to renew his license and was arrested on Spruce street. He was represented by Attorney William J. Shea and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed, the fine being remitted upon the payment of costs.

John S. Kulo of 37 High street, Rockville, was found operating with improper brakes as was also Tony Casopard of Essex, Conn. The former paid a fine of $15 and costs, the latter of $10 and costs.

Saturday afternoon, Andrew Grandfield of Glastonbury was picked up on the side of the road near Love Lane by Officer John Crockett, very much to the weather and loaded with two more quarts for further selling. He was brought to police station and search disclosed a bankbook which served the man in good stead when a fine of $10 and costs was imposed.

Today's Docket. Five cases were before the Manchester Police Court this morning, the most serious of which had to do with a 17-year-old boy from Burnside, John Sverefko, who was charged with driving an automobile while under a suspended license, and with evading responsibility. He was arrested by Traffic Officer Walter Cassells after he had struck a Ford touring car owned by Joseph Galma of West Haven on Center street and damaged it badly. The young fellow drove almost a quarter of a mile before he brought his car to a stop. He told the judge this morning he knew he had struck the car, and claimed he made an effort to bring his car to a stop but could not do so. Sergeant John McGinn heard the smash from his own veranda on Center street, and he and Patrolman Cassells gave chase and caught Sverefko. The accident took place near Harding Stephens' garage. It developed that Sverefko had paid a fine of $150 and costs for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor in Hartford within a short time and for that reason his license was suspended. Judge Johnson fined him guilty and imposed a fine of $100 driving while under suspended license, and $75 for evading responsibility. The boy's mother was in court but was unable to raise the money and he had to go to jail.

The case of Elizabeth Ruoff of 125 North School street, charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell, was continued until tomorrow upon request of Attorney William J. Shea, who said he had just been brought into the case and had not had time to give it the necessary attention. It was continued until tomorrow morning.

John Kulozowski, charged with intoxication, was allowed to go on payment of costs. John Wesley Phelps of East Middle Turnpike, for driving an automobile with improper brakes, paid a fine of $15 and costs.

State Briefs

POLITICIAN DIES. New Haven, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Terrence B. Kelly, for the past 40 years a prominent figure in local Democratic circles died at his home here today.

Mr. Kelly had held many public offices including those of superintendent of parks, member of board of alderman and collector of internal revenue.

Funeral services will be held Thursday. RECOVER FLIER'S BODY. Long Branch, N. J., Sept. 2.—(AP)—The body of Lieut. William A. Harbold, who was drowned yesterday after his Army plane fell in to the ocean near Sandy Hook was recovered today, by a former life guard at Highland Beach.

The plane was washed ashore this morning. The flier left Bowling Field, Washington yesterday.

NEW BRITAIN BOY LOST. New Britain, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Search was made in eight directions over the west-end for Emil Andy, 15, who disappeared from home last Thursday. His father, Gerry Andy, visited airports in New York, New Jersey, Long Island and Rhode Island as the boy had expressed strong interest in aviation. Seven friends in automobile took routes in different directions from this city and asked farmers if they had seen the boy.

Emil is about five feet, two inches tall and weighs 115 pounds. When he was away he wore a brown shirt, brown trousers and brown and white sport shoes.

NEW OFFICIAL ARRIVES. Hartford, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Ernest W. Butterfield, state commissioner of education in New Hampshire since 1917, arrived at his office on Washington street at 8:30 this morning to take up his newly appointed duties as commissioner of education in this state. His first task, he said, is to become thoroughly acquainted with the entire department, which will take several weeks.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY. Hartford, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Democrats from all parts of the state will attend a picnic at the home of Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch in Columbia on Thursday, as part of the program of the regular monthly meeting of Connecticut Federation of Democratic Women's Clubs of which she is president.

Mrs. Welch said today that the picnic will take the form of a Democratic rally in preparation for the coming campaign and it will be open to the public. She admitted that the board might discuss platform planks of interest to the women of the state, but she knew of no specific resolution of such a nature that is being contemplated.

TENNIS SEEDINGS

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Bill Tilden and his old rival from France, Jean Borotra, were seeded first on the United States and foreign lists respectively when the draw was made today for the National-singles tennis championship starting Saturday at Forest Hills. Borotra's entry was received at the last minute. He had previously thought business would prevent him from taking part in the tournament.

The leading American players were seeded in the following order: 1, Tilden; 2, Wilmer Allison, Austin, Texas; 3, George Lott, Chicago; 4, Sidney Wood, New York; 5, Clifford Sutter, New Orleans; 6, John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif.; 7, Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J.; 8, John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J.; 9, Ellsworth Vines, Pasadena, Calif.; 10, Frank Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y.; 11, Frank Shields, New York; and 12, Bryan Grant, Atlanta.

This list, amounting to a new American "first twelve" ranking, presents several surprises. Among them are the selection of the sensational Allison as second only to Tilden while veteran Hunter is placed tenth; and the high ranking gives such brilliant newcomers as Wood and Vines.

The visiting players seeded were: 1, Borotra; 2, H. G. N. Lee, England; 3, John S. P. Smith, England; 4, Frederick Perry, England; 5, Lyttleton Rogers, Ireland; 6, Marcel Rainville, Canada; 7, Ted Avory, England; 8, L. A. Godfree, England; 9, Jimmy Nuthall, England; 10, Herman Uppman, Cuba; 11, C. W. Leslie, Canada.

LABOR IS BACKING OLD AGE PENSIONS

Secretary Egan of State Body Reviews the Problem at Conference.

Hartford, Sept. 2.—(AP)—In his report to the Connecticut Federation of Labor, Secretary J. Egan gave much attention to old age pensions being desirous of securing the backing of every member of a union to the Federation's bill which will be presented to the next legislature. He said that in every conference and every discussion the question of a decline in industry comes up.

"It is quite apparent to those who are making a study of pension legislation that, unless this deadline is abolished, instead of advancing persons aged persons at 65 or 70 we will have to bring the age limit down to 60 and perhaps lower."

A copy of the Federation's bill will be sent to each person aspiring to a legislative office.

Mr. Egan said that organizations should back up the bill by attendance when hearings are held on it. As to funds, he said:

"This campaign for the Old Age Pension Act is going to cost the state considerable money. But if it is worth it, it is worth spending money to get."

Since the last convention, Mr. Egan said, there have been many compensation cases heard. In two, insurance companies took appeals to Superior Court but later withdrew these and settled. One Supreme Court decision of interest was that in which it was ruled that the injured workman was entitled to medical attention and that the employer was responsible for the payment of medical bills during the life of the injury.

"We have contended that this was always the intent of the law," he said, "but some insurance companies contended that they were only compelled to pay hospital and doctor bills for a period of ten years."

Mr. Egan said he would like to see more co-operation among organizations in cases where the injured man has to do light work, giving him the opportunity to do so in order that he may recover from his injuries more speedily.

The Federation, Mr. Egan said, played a part in urging an appropriation to carry on rehabilitation work.

"It was true that some representatives from this state were opposed to Federal aid," said Mr. Egan, "but Congress and the state favor passage of the bill and to work for its passage with the result that the rehabilitation act continues to operate."

Important Question. "This is important to us in Connecticut because we are interested in the rehabilitation bill we succeeded in passing at the last legislature which will have to be improved upon by asking for a larger appropriation at our next legislature."

Mr. Egan said there had been little complaint during the year on methods employed by small loan companies. Credit for this, he said, goes to the bank commissioner. The credit union bill will be drafted for the coming session.

In the matter of injunctions, of which there have been a number of temporary ones, Mr. Egan said that in one instance, that of a Bridgeport master painter, the court denied the right of a permanent order which was a victory for the union. The petitioner asked for an order so he would not be compelled to pay wages in accordance with the constitution of the International union. In another case—one involving motion picture operators—Judge Foster held that men had a right to strike and a right to picket a place of business. This decision set up legal rights for unions, Mr. Egan said.

Mr. Egan spoke of the troublesome problem of the year book, and suggested that, in view of the "misrepresentations and irresponsibility" of some solicitors promoting unofficial books, it was time the Federation took an inventory of the situation.

Secretary Egan said that little headway was being made in co-operation among the metal trades mechanics in the state, and that the policy of the Label Trades unions should be changed to obtain results. It has been three years since a representative went about the state advocating use of the label, Mr. Egan said urging the need of a full-time worker. He also said he believed the building trades would secure more co-operation if they built up their organization through the Federation.

Unemployment. As to unemployment in the state, Mr. Egan said that was beat met by keeping up wages and even increasing them as a reduction would reduce the buying power and further increase unemployment. After quoting from a statement credited to Gov. Trumbull that machinery was responsible for the situation, and that its solution was the four-hour day, Mr. Egan said some relief would come if the eight-hour day was established in the state. There are industries working nine and ten hours a day, he said, and women even have been working eleven hours a day.

The trade school was held to be a thorn in the side of the Federation and a committee to study the situation was suggested. Mr. Egan said trade schools "are expensive propositions, and as they are here to stay, they should be operated in the interests of those working in the various industries."

The Federation, the report continued, has paid off its debts, affiliated some forty locals, established officers on a permanent salary, and has a fine bank balance.

Miss Helen F. Trant Weds Harold C. Ambach Today

Miss Helen Frances Trant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy A. Trant of 158 McKee street, and Harold Carl Ambach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Ambach of Francis street, East Hartford, were married this morning at 9 o'clock at St. James' church. Rev. W. P. Reidy performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The church was beautifully decorated with yellow and white gladiolus, delphiniums and chelidonium.

The bride wore a Vionnet gown of ivory satin. Her veil of ivory tulle fell from a cap of Alencon lace and was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was attired in a period gown of maize taffeta. She wore a hat of maize horsehair braid and tulle and carried an arm bouquet of Tallman roses.

Following the ceremony a reception for the bridal party and immediate family was held at the Manchester Country Club. Leo Roy's Concert Trio played during the reception and wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Ambach left today on an unannounced wedding trip, the bride wearing a beige tweed ensemble with hat of brown felt.

30 NEW TEACHERS IN TOWN'S SCHOOLS

12 in High School, Nine in Ninth and Nine in Eighth and Outlying Districts.

A total of thirty new teachers take up their duties either today or tomorrow in Manchester. Of this number only nine are in the first eight districts. An equal number are to begin tomorrow in the Ninth District while the remaining twelve have been added to the Manchester High school faculty.

Three of the new Ninth District teachers are Manchester young women. They are Miss Arline Wilkie, Miss Edna Howard and Miss Edith Balch, all graduates of Manchester High school with the class of 1922. Miss Wilkie will have the second grade at the Nathan Hale school. She is a New Britain Normal school graduate. Miss Howard and Miss Balch, both graduates of Willimantic Normal, will teach respectively first grade at the Washington and kindergarten at Barnard.

Other grade teachers are: Miss Catherine M. Deviney, former local teacher, who has been studying at Columbia for a year; Miss Lane, who will have the seventh grade at Barnard; Miss Florence I. Sharrows, Danbury Normal graduate, who will teach the third grade at Nathan Hale.

Miss Alice Carmody, Danbury Normal graduate, third and fourth grades at Nathan Hale; Miss Irene Taylor of South Coventry, first grade at Bunce school. She graduated from Willimantic Normal. Miss M. Irene Walters, Danbury High and Normal school graduate, fifth grade at Washington; Miss Dorothy Pike, Plainfield High and Willimantic Normal graduate, first grade at Washington.

High School Newcomers. The new high school teachers include Arthur Iling, Wesleyan 1920, who for the past two years has been principal of Stonington High school where he went from Chapman Tech at New London. Mr. Iling taught in New London for eight years. He is a graduate of Simsbury High. Mr. and Mrs. Iling will make their home here at 24 Pine street. Mr. Iling is the new vice-principal succeeding Ralph W. Proctor.

Others. Miss Selah Richmond, English department, graduate of Earlham College in Indiana, who comes here from Barre, Mass., where she taught for three years. Miss Janet Wilcox, English and Latin at Smith College graduate, taught four years at Framingham, Mass.

Miss Corinne Davis, Samuel Mormal College graduate, with three years' teaching experience in Colchester, will be a new commercial teacher. Miss Helen Page, graduate of Castine Normal in Maine, will be in the English department. Miss Page studied at Columbia University last year. She previously taught four years at Brantree, Mass.

Miss Ruth Stewart, teacher of history, is a University of Vermont graduate and taught at Keene, N. H., for five years. Miss Avis Kellay, Bay Path Institute graduate, will teach business training. She comes from Sheffield, Mass.

Miss Elizabeth Lee, new history teacher, is a graduate of Connecticut College for Women and taught four years at the Salisbury High school in Lakeville, Conn. Dwight Perry, new mathematics instructor, is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, and comes here from Meriden High.

Hugh Greer, Connecticut Agricultural College graduate, will teach general science. He has been teaching at Glastonbury High school for four years. James Higgins, new bookkeeping teacher, is a graduate of Salem Normal school and has taught four years in Whitrop, Mass. Miss Ione Fellows, new English teacher, is from Derby, Vt.

In Other Districts. Of the sixty-six teachers in the Districts 1 to 8 but nine are newcomers. Four of these are in the Second District. No change is made in the teaching force in the First District. In the Second District, Manchester Green, Miss Alice M. Grady will teach the sixth grade. Her home is in New Haven.

Miss Ellen M. Foster of Wapping will teach the fifth grade in this district. Miss Marion Legg of Manchester is to teach the third grade. Miss Ethel F. Baldwin of West Lyman, Mass., is the new teacher in the first grade in the Second District. There will be but one new teacher in the Third or Highland Park District. She is Miss Margaret Fog-

H. S. ENROLLMENT REACHES NEW PEAK

Total of 965 Registered for School Year Opening Tomorrow—335 Freshmen.

The largest enrollment in the history of Manchester High school—a total of 965 students—was reported this afternoon by Principal Clarence P. Quimby to have registered for the opening of the 1930-31 school year with the fall term tomorrow morning.

This is an increase of more than a hundred over last year's figure and is explained partly by the large number of people who have moved into Manchester since the erection of the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Company plant in East Hartford.

Principal Quimby also attributes the increase to being partly, at least, due to the present unemployment situation, a number of boys and girls who would otherwise be at work, now seeking further education because they cannot obtain work.

The incoming freshman class this year will be 335 which is an increase of 30 over last year's total. Arthur H. Illing, former principal of Stonington High school, is the new vice-principal succeeding Ralph W. Proctor. He will have charge of the freshman building as it is also called.

YOUNG TAKES OFFICE

Boston, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Roy A. Young, newly appointed governor of the Federal Reserve bank assumed the duties of his new office today as successor of the late W. P. G. Harding. In a statement issued when he arrived at his office, Mr. Young said: "It is really too soon for me to make any interesting business or financial statement, but I am very happy to come to New England and locate in Boston, and I am also happy to assure the bankers and people of New England that my best efforts will be exerted in their behalf both in this district and from a national viewpoint."

MAYFLOWER CONGRESS. Plymouth, Mass., Sept. 2.—(AP)—The twelfth general congress of the general society of Mayflower descendants opened at the First Unitarian church here today. More than 25 delegates, all lineal descendants of the Pilgrims were present, having come from nine states. The meeting was presided over by Addison P. Munroe, governor-general of the society.

KILLED BY DRY AGENTS. Mobile, Ala., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Thelma Wooten, 24, died here today of bullet wounds and Deputy Sheriffs T. H. Sullivan and C. C. Lane, who fired into a passing automobile in which she was a passenger several nights ago, were served with warrants charging murder. The officers say they suspected the car was transporting liquor. Others in the automobile told authorities two men who later were identified as Sullivan and Lane appeared at the side of the road and shot into the passing car without warning. Denial was made that the car contained any liquor.

WARSHIP TO CARRY EXPLORERS' BODIES

(Continued From Page One) ates are anchored in the small harbor here awaiting the Swedish battleship Michael Sars, which will accompany it to Tromsø, and later to Sweden where honors will be paid the dead and the discoverers of the bodies will receive the thanks of fellow Scandinavians.

Dramatically the little sealer Bratvaag sailed into Haavik Sunday, after a search by Swedish official vessels and news expeditions which covered a wide area of the north seas. Dr. Horn notified the authorities officially of his discovery, news of which already had reached the world through the captain of the sealer Terningen. Then, without awaiting an answer he took the sealer on down to Sjaekjer Island, to await the Michael Sars.

CROWDS AT PIER. Romsoe, Norway, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The sealer Bratvaag, Dr. Gunnar Horn's expeditionary ship, bearing the remains of the Andree exploration party found on White Island, arrived here this forenoon. There was no official reception but large crowds gathered at the harbor. Norwegian and Swedish experts went aboard the Bratvaag before she made this port to carry out preliminary investigation of the evidence of the Andree tragedy. Various objects were found in the can-

BYRD ATTENDS FAIR

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Thousands of persons poured into the state fair grounds today to see and hear Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd as well as to see the usual fair attractions.

Admiral Byrd was met at a railroad station by a civic committee and accompanied to the fair grounds. After luncheon at the club house, he was escorted to the grandstand where he was scheduled to speak at 2:30 p. m. When he visited the manufacturing building this morning where the exhibit of pictures taken of the South Pole are displayed, thousands crowded the doors and corridors trying to get close to him.

TWO KILLED BY BLAST. Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Two men were killed and a third, were seriously injured in a gas explosion today at the new Kitchener Sewer plant at Doon, Ontario.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2.

BAY STATE WAR

A somewhat wild and woolly special news story in the Boston Globe of last Sunday announces that Massachusetts and Connecticut are preparing for war—the war in question being apparently one consisting entirely of noise, and all the noise being made by that group of Worcester automobilists represented by Russell A. Harmon, secretary of the Bancroft Automobile Club of that city.

Harmon, ably seconded by an imaginative news writer of the Globe, has worked up his indignation over the arrest of Bay State drivers in this state until he imagines that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts lies under the duty of revising the court costs laws of this state. It seems that the main grievance of traffic law violators from north of the line who fall into the clutches of police on this side is that they get a terrible shock when they learn, on settling up, that the "costs" in a justice court prosecution are liable to amount to something like $14. And when you hit the average Bay State motorist for an unexpected dozen dollars you hit him in a sensitive spot and might just about as well stick your finger in his eye.

We don't think so very much of the Connecticut system of assessing court costs in misdemeanor cases. But when the Massachusetts wild drivers howl about its constituting a "racket" they are talking as wildly as they drive. These costs were fixed by statute long before there was such a thing as an automobile and in the days when there was little general sympathy with law violation.

There is one perfectly easy way for the Bay Staters to avoid being soaked in Connecticut police courts or "nightsuit" courts. That way is for them to drive, when on this side of the line, with some consideration for the fact that the Connecticut roads were not built for their exclusive benefit.

If Mr. Harmon and the Boston Globe want to save money and trouble for their friends in Massachusetts, instead of "declaring war" on Connecticut let them advise their motoring constituents, while on this side of the frontier, to remember that the half of the road granted to them is not the middle half.

So long as Massachusetts drivers come over into Connecticut and habitually and well might universally hog the road their number plates will undoubtedly attract the attention of the police and they themselves will be unlikely to receive special consideration at the hands of the courts.

NEEDED ON THE JOB

It is the considered belief of The Herald that the voters of the Republican party in the town of Manchester will be consulting the best interests of the community if they select, as one of their nominees for representatives in the General Assembly, Judge Raymond A. Johnson.

It is no reason of personal friendship that produces this belief. It is entirely the to-be-expected effect of such nomination on the interests of this community. Re-nominated, Judge Johnson would, in all human probability, be re-elected, of course. Re-elected he would, during the next two years, be in a position of greater influence in the Legislature than any other representative from this town could possibly be.

Beyond any doubt Mr. Johnson, if returned to the House of Representatives, will be continued in the highly important position of majority floor leader of that body as well as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. This means that Manchester will be represented in the House by the latter's most influential member. The advantage to the community of such representation in the Legislature ought to be apparent enough to anybody.

Aside from the direct benefits to the town from having in the General Assembly a representative of such outstanding ability and authority; the indirect advantage of having a deeply experienced leadership in the House may be still more important, for Connecticut, like every other state in the Union, is likely to have to face extraordinary problems in its 1931 legislative session. Economic proposals are almost sure to come up before the Legislature which will require in their handling the utmost skill in law making. It might well prove a calamity if Judge Johnson were missing from the headship of the Judiciary Committee.

There is no question of honoring this veteran legislator by a renomination and re-election. One more term will not add particularly to his personal glory. Rather it will mean, on his part, a lot of hard work. But there decidedly is a question of giving Manchester and the State of Connecticut the benefit, in what may prove to be a crucial period, of the experience of an uncommonly well equipped Legislative leader.

DREADFUL
 Fred Latimer, Hartford Times editorialist and column writer (differentiated from "columnists," who often let contributors do all their work), who also columns in the New London Day, is brooding and worrying to beat the cars about a real, horrid, shrieking, blasting, devastating hurricane which he is convinced will strike New England's littoral one of these days—and before very long.

We rather wish he wouldn't. For quite a number of years memories of these hurricane predications of Judge Latimer have brought a creepy feeling whenever the weather sharp has reported a howler in the West Indies, "headed north."

We bow in awe before Latimer's meteorological acumen. We have long firmly believed that he knew a darn sight more about the weather than the United States Weather Bureau. And when he points out that since the beginning of New England history we have had a dreadful hurricane on this coast about once in fifty years until this last century, and that the murderous twister is now fully 50 years overdue, the sound of the wind in the trees makes us long for a cyclone cellar in the back yard and wish that we lived 500 feet above sea level.

But why bring it up? Why scare the daylight out of shore property owners by forecasting a gargantuan storm that will wreck all the cottages on the Connecticut beaches and carry them out to sea? Why foretell ten feet of water on the streets of New London and a state deforested by a dislocated typhoon? What single thing can anybody do about it? Why not let us go on happily until the dreadful day when we shall all be drowned or blown into ribbons or plastered up against the rock bound hills like show posters?

Why, unless the Judge is trying to rig a bear market on Ocean Beach real estate?

MILITARY FLYING

Commenting on the tragedies at the National Air Races at Chicago last week, an exchange says: "It would seem that the Navy might train its fliers for the exigency of combat without such close flying formations and precisionary stunts as are daily routine in the service. In ordinary flying the aviator has a chance in case of a mishap. In this stunt flying the excessive speed and often the dangerous nearness of other planes can make the slightest mishap costly in human life. It is difficult to see how the nation advances aviation by training a group of air dare-devils and stunt fliers."

This newspaper has been accused of being old-fashioned in its opposition to needless risk of human life and limb. We go as far as almost anybody in decrying the encouragement of foolish hazards. But we can't agree with the above attitude toward the training of military fliers.

The stunt that is of absolutely no value to civilian aviation is a matter of tactics in war flying—and might at any time prove to be a vital matter in actual service. Army and Navy aviators must be skilled in every conceivable feat of airplane handling, for upon such skill might very easily depend the issue of victory or defeat in the air.

And the military flier, like every soldier on land or sea, is in the business of risking his life. The factor of personal safety is eliminated from his scheme of existence when he embarks on a military career. He is on a wholly different plane, in this respect, from the civilian, whose duty is to preserve rather than to imperil his existence.

Stunt flying is as necessary in the Army and Navy as it is unnecessary and unpardonable for the civilian.

But to expose crowds of spectators to such dangers as those encountered at the Chicago field is another matter altogether. It is inexcusable and wicked.

HEART'S EXPULSION

American newspaperdom will waste little sympathy on William Randolph Hearst if, as reported in early dispatches today, he has been expelled from France, presumably on the score of the unethical publication of the alleged text of an agreement between France and England on the subject of cruisers. The proceeding in question was long ago formally condemned by the American correspondents in France as one calculated to bring discredit on the newspaper profession and the French government can be little blamed if it refuses its hospitality to the man higher up in such a mischievous and dishonorable stunt.

It is to be anticipated that Mr. Hearst will now devote his peculiar talents to the promotion of a war between the United States and France. This would have its advantages, because while he was engaged in that laudable enterprise he could not be devoting himself to the making of trouble in some other direction—and his chance of success would be exactly nil.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The downfall of President Augusto Leguia, dictator of Peru and Uncle Sam's best boy friend in South America, is strictly in accord with the old political adage that prosperity absorbs all criticism and that the less prosperity the more criticism.

That goes in any country and the stronger the factions are which oppose the administration the faster it goes in effecting a change of government.

In the United States, which has been going through a protracted period of depression, there is a real chance that the Democrats will obtain control of one or both houses of Congress in the November elections. In any event there will be more Democrats in both the Senate and the House.

It's Tough on Hoover

Instead of giving the Hoover administration a vote of confidence and a grip on Congress the voters are virtually certain to make things harder for it by strengthening anti-administration coalitions. If Hoover himself were running for re-election this year he would find some rough going and it is probably glad that things are done differently here from the way they are in Peru. Few presidents have had to bear up under such a period of harsh criticism during their first year on two in office and a great deal of it has been due to the depression which gripped the United States, along with Peru and many other countries.

Anti-government agitation is reported to be on the increase in two or three other Latin-American countries, encouraged by unsatisfactory economic conditions, although there is as yet no information here which indicates the likely success of any movement such as upset Leguia's Peru exports cotton, wool, oil and sugar, and the prices of all these commodities have lately been lowered in the general world depression of values. Exports and imports have gone into serious declines. It seems something about the care of the passage of our Grundy tariff act with a revolution in Peru, but it may be pointed out that the new rates on imports into the United States, struck the rest of the world at an especially bad time and led many countries to consider themselves likely to be just so much worse off.

When the slump came, Leguia was up to his neck in a costly program of development and expansion. He had established himself as boss of Peru and laid a system of heavy taxes on the country to pay for the rebuilding and modernization of Lima, the development of the port of Callao, expensive road-building and school programs and other ambitious improvements. The 1929 budget of nearly $70,000,000 was the largest in the history of Peru and a considerably larger one was passed for 1930.

Leguia had also run his country into considerable debt. The external debt had risen from $78,000,000 in 1928 to $91,000,000 in 1929. The dictator had also encountered a bad snag in his inability to float the remaining $15,000,000 of a $100,000,000 national loan project at a time when the money was needed, partly because of the unfavorable status of the bond market in New York. Some of the public works in Leguia's program had to be suspended for lack of money, although money was borrowed wherever it could be picked up.

Value of Money Fell
 Attempts to stabilize the currency failed to keep it at par and just prior to the revolt the Peruvian sol, a new gold coin created early this year with an official value of 40 cents, had dropped to below 28 cents.

The State Department has received no word indicating that the new regime in Peru will be less friendly to the United States than the Leguia dictatorship. No administration could be more so, however. Leguia's program had to be suspended for lack of money, although money was borrowed wherever it could be picked up.

In Mississippi, folk are sometimes said to refer to moonshine as "leopard sweat." Perhaps they'll go so far as to say the imbiber can get quite a jaguar on.

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK MCCOY

THE TREATMENT OF BLADDER INFLAMMATION

The best treatment for bladder irritation is to stop all food, taking a plain water fast for several days, using one glassful of distilled water every thirty minutes during the waking hours. This regimen will keep the bladder comparatively free of all irritating materials and allow it to heal. After a few days of the distilled water treatment it is a good plan to take a grapefruit or tomato juice fast. These fruit juice fasts will not cause an irritation after the plain water fast, but they sometimes cause a temporary irritation unless the water fast has been taken first. When on the fasting regimen, be sure to take two enemata a day. This has the double effect of keeping the colon clean so that it does not press against the bladder, and also assists in eliminating poisons which might otherwise have been passed through the bladder.

Keep on the water and fruit-juice fast for two days, then take a milk diet, using one eight-ounce glass of milk every hour. This regimen should be continued until the bladder irritation has been overcome, after which you may go on a well balanced diet.

For relief from pain in the bladder, the hot sitz baths are very beneficial. Another treatment which is good for relief is to use a high candle power therapeutic lamp for thirty minutes each day over the bladder and back.

In some cases the milk diet will have to be continued for several weeks. When you return to a balanced diet be careful to avoid those foods which produce excess acidity in the body.

Some exercises should be taken to correct any prolapsus which may exist and to give a strong tone to the abdominal muscles. The exercises taken when lying on the back are most beneficial, as they develop the muscles which hold the internal organs in their proper places. While lying in this position the exercises are more beneficial because the gases tend to fall into their normal positions and away from the bladder.

The exercises should be continued for a long period even after the organs have returned to their normal position. It is a good plan to take a walk each day, beginning with a mile, and continuing until you can walk for five miles without undue fatigue.

Where the bladder irritation is produced by crystals in the urine, a good plan to avoid the foods which contain oxalic acid, once you begin on your regular diet. I have prepared a special article called Deceptive Bladder Pains which gives a list of the foods containing oxalic acid and tells more in detail about the treatment for kidney and bladder gravel. I will be pleased to send this to you if you will send a two-cent stamp and self-addressed envelope. By following these instructions you will find that the most obstinate cases of bladder irritation can be overcome and will give no further trouble, provided you keep to the diet and keep up the exercises.

Bladder trouble is so distressing that most patients are entirely willing to follow such a simple and commonsense outline as I have suggested, especially when they find it relieves them of their agony in a short time.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Gums Causing Trouble)

Question: M. H. J. writes: "I would like to know through the column something about the care of the gums. In two or three places in my mouth where the gums extend downward there is a noticeable redness, and when brushing them, and often during the day for that matter, they bleed quite a bit. Is there anything that will remedy this condition?"

Answer: Cut down your stomach acidity by living on the right diet and have your dentist treat your

(Lunch Box Problem)

Question: H. G. writes: "I do hard manual labor and must carry my lunch to work. Will you be good enough to tell me some suitable combinations through your column, as I know there are others who need this same advice?"

Answer: If you can procure genuine wholewheat bread, make sandwiches of it with fresh butter or peanut butter and lettuce. Provide yourself with a thermos bottle in which you may carry any of the following cooked vegetables: Spinach, stringbeans, asparagus, summer squash, eggplant, small carrots

(What Kind of Mattress)

Question: Mrs. F. W. writes: "I would like your opinion of the different materials used in mattresses. What would you advise—felt, cotton, or silk floss?"

Answer: It does not matter of what material the mattress is made as long as it is soft and comfortable, yielding to the pressure of the body.

 DEBATE

IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 2.—The Long Island and seaside estates of the more moneyed Broadwayers are blossoming at the moment with freak pigmy golf courses.

A sort of competitive race for original ideas in midget hazards appears to be headed by Guy Lombardo, the orchestra maestro, who broadcasts over WABC and plays at smart Manhattan supper resorts.

Lombardo has taken all the discarded instruments of his band and utilized them in making his Long Beach golfette links. Thus the first hole is a snare drum buried in the sand, with the sides kicked in. The second hole has a maze of cleverly arranged drumsticks to stump the player. At the third one has to putt through the large end of a trombone.

At the fourth, a venerable xylophone has been taken apart with various notes arranged in mounds. The player is expected to rap off some simple melody. To make it a bit difficult, the outer rim of a piccolo is next encountered; after which comes the big stunt of this highly amusing game. It is "the trumpet." The player is asked to put away his golf stick and blow the ball into the hole from a horn.

"The crooner" is played through the small end of a large megaphone. The last hole has been constructed out of one of those ancient German horns, the ball rolling around and around the contorted tubes until it rolls out.

Pleanty fun... huh!

Joe Cook, the music show clown and cinema cut-up, has a "last hole" which promises to become a classic. It is so arranged that, no matter what the player may do, he has to score in one. The device somewhat resembles one of Goldberg's nutty cartoon inventions. It takes the ball about in a series of circles and finally deposits it in a hole. The hole is connected with a pipe. The ball disappears and the player trails the pipe. This leads him to an old desk. The pipe is connected with a drawer. When the player opens the drawer he finds a printed certificate of membership in "The Hole-in-One Club."

Silly, isn't it?

Cook's country place, by the way, is cluttered with hilarious knick-knacks.

Thus, in one room you'll find a large silver prize cup on which a

NEW DRY LAW SCHOOL

Washington, Sept. 2.—(AP)—A new school with 24 carefully selected students and a curriculum designed to improve the enforcement of the dry laws opened its doors today under the auspices of the Prohibition Bureau.

From each of the country's 12 enforcement districts came two agents to receive a month's course of intensive training as instructors in the fundamentals of their work.

When the term is over they will return to their respective territories passing on the rank and file of the service the lessons learned here.

Director Amos Woodcock is counting heavily on the school in his program for increasing the general efficiency of the bureau and building up public confidence in its personnel.

LAW FOR NATIONS IS NOT IMPOSSIBLE

But It Will Take a Long Time to Codify Davis Tells the Delegates.

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, told the International Law Association at its first session today that establishing rules of international conduct is a long and arduous but not impossible task.

"The obvious motto must be 'festina lentis' (make haste slowly)," Mr. Davis said. "Indeed any other course transcends the bounds of the impossible. As the program for this meeting exemplifies, the attack must be made in detail and not by a charge all along the line."

Pointing out the difficulties encountered in the path of codification of international law, Mr. Davis gave the example of the forty-eight united states, despite their unguarded borders, their similarity of language and of 44 proposed by two uniform laws, and the fact that a national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws, have been adopted by all the states and these have been so amended and interpreted as to destroy in part "the uniformity so hardy won."

Will Take Time. In the United States, in thirty years, could show only these two laws—the law of negotiable instruments and the law of warehouse receipts—as the fruit of co-operative legal effort, he said, how much longer must be the road to international agreement on legal matters.

The first act of the conference today was the signing by Lord Banesburgh of the report of the year which contained the results of the elections made by the executive committee, including that of Chief Justice Hughes as honorary vice-president.

There are 150 delegates from 25 countries in attendance. Hollis R. Bailey of Boston and Oscar R. Houston of New York were elected to the executive council.

CRIPPLE IS KILLED, BY SKIP DRIVER

Norwalk, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Norwalk hospital authorities and the Westport police today were still trying to solve the identity of a crippled man, who was struck and killed by a hit-and-run driver on the Boston Post road in Westport late last night. Except for a pass made out at the Christian Union in Bridgeport the man's body bore no marks of identification. Officials of the Union later stated that the man was not known to them.

The victim is middle-aged, shabbily dressed, without teeth, black hair, five feet six inches tall, and 130 pounds in weight. Shouchri Dieb, of 26 Lincoln street, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was arrested in Greenwich an hour after the accident suspected of being the driver, was released after the Westport police were convinced that he was not on the Post road at the time of the fatality.

The unknown crippled was hobbling alongside the road on crutches when he was hit. He was hurled off the highway suffering a fractured skull, two broken arms and other injuries. He died a few minutes after being admitted to the hospital.

Pup Immune To Shock Reprived From Death

Rio Janeiro.—(AP)—One pup of uncertain ancestry held in the dog pound here is immune from electricity, and has been granted an untroubled life. He has been put in the dog "electric chair" five times but the strongest current had no effect upon him, although other dogs in the chamber with him were shocked to death quickly.

They called this pup "Piolotta" because he was thin and undernourished when picked up by the dog-catcher. He was first placed in the death chamber with eleven other dogs. The others died at the first shock but Piolotta merely cocked one ragged ear. Stronger current was turned on, but the pup just gazed at the executioner.

Three times more the officials placed Piolotta in the death chamber and then Antonio Prado, prefect, ordered that the animal should have a home at the pound.

In the past ten months more than 10,000 dogs have been brought to the pound. Two thousand were claimed by owners and 8,101 electrocuted.

ASKS RECIPROCAL TRADE

Toronto, Sept. 2.—(AP)—A reciprocal trade policy between Great Britain and Canada was urged by Lord Melchett, member of the House of Lords and widely known industrialist in an address last night before a group of business men at York Club. If Canada is to sell her wheat to Britain she must be prepared to buy British goods in return, the speaker said. The British Empire, he added, is potentially the greatest strength in history, but economic strength is being wasted through the individualistic trade policies of its dominions.

WHEN A CHILD IS FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract. When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Use Information." Address The Phillips Co., 170 Varick St., N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.—Adv.

LET FARMERS UNITE IS LEGGE'S ADVICE

Properly Organized Agriculture Will Go Farther Than Industry, He Says.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP)—A distinct step forward has been made by agriculture, said Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, in an address at the State Fair here today, in securing recognition of the fact that agriculture as an industry is entitled to the same consideration at the government's hands as other industries have received.

"Perhaps the soundest advice we can give to agriculture is contained in the one word 'organize,'" he said. "Properly organized I cannot see any reason why agriculture might not go farther than industry, inasmuch as most of your products are consumed every day and several times a day and the consumption must be fairly continuous if we are to live."

Greatest Difficulty. "Perhaps the greatest difficulty we have to contend with in accomplishing results under the terms of the agricultural marketing act is the rather prevalent belief on the part of the people we are trying to serve that some mysterious way is going to be found where, through legislative action, the handicap under which agriculture is suffering will be removed and their position made secure without any action on the part of the farmer himself. This, he said, is a dream that will not come true."

The governmental agency he represents, said Mr. Legge, can be helpful to farmers by placing their disposal men well qualified to assist in organization along such lines to secure the best results that the market will justify.

In collaboration with the Department of Agriculture we can furnish the best information available as to market outlook and prospects and assist co-operatives in providing proper facilities for the warehouse and handling of any agricultural commodity."

STORM WARNING. Washington, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The Weather Bureau today issued the following storm warning: Advisory 10 a. m. tropical disturbance which is of hurricane intensity, is moving west-northwestward about four hundred miles per day over eastern Caribbean Sea, with center this morning apparently about one hundred miles south of Porto Rico. It is center will likely pass south of the island of Haiti tonight. Caution advised all vessels near path of hurricane.

ARMY MEN WIN. Camp Perry, O., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Two Army men carried off honors from more than 1,400 marksmen who fired in Labor Day events of the National rifle matches in progress here.

Sergt. McWille James, 25th Infantry, Nogales, Ariz., finished first in the Leach Cup match, in which seven shots are fired at stages of 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, while Sergt. Frederick Pauch, Somerville, N. J., won the Navy match.

PRISONERS LIBERATED. Paris, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The ministry of colonies announced today that 1,000 mandarinets had invaded the offices of a native mandarin in charge at Nam Dang, Annam, French Indo-China, and had forced him to sign a document granting certain concessions.

The announcement said the mandarinets then opened the jail, permitting the escape of a number of prisoners, and destroyed a winery. The communique added that the mandarinets were the work of Communists who sought to halt the series of arrests going on recently as a result of disorders in French Indo-China.

PAIR BADLY INJURED IN BAY STATE CRASH. Local Boys in Westfield Hospital After Car is Wrecked on Bad Turn.

Anthony Dix of 42 Deming street and Albert August of 34 Liberty street are back home from a motor trip they started on last Monday, but which ended in a Westfield hospital. On their release from the hospital they were given instructions to keep in touch with their family doctor until cuts, bruises and abrasions that they suffered are properly healed.

They had been in Albany a week ago yesterday and were heading back towards Manchester over the Berkshire Hills. About fourteen miles outside of Westfield, Mass., in making a turn they went off the road, into a tree and wrecked the car so badly that only the two tires were salvaged. Dix was thrown from the car, but both his hands were badly cut by glass and sliding along in the road. He also hurt his knees and he had a bruised hip.

August was pinned under the car. Dix tried to help him, but was too weak. In the distance, coming down the hill he saw the glare of headlights on a couple of automobiles. He waved his handkerchief and it was taken as a signal of danger by the truck drivers and their helpers. They were from Providence, R. I., on their way west. With their help August was removed from the wreck. First aid was given at a doctor's office in Chester and from there they were taken to the hospital where they remained until Thursday. They spent the next day getting their goods together and so badly was the car damaged that Mr. Dix took only the five tires and made arrangements to have the car removed and junked.

It will be several days before their injuries will have healed.

ARMY MEN WIN. Camp Perry, O., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Two Army men carried off honors from more than 1,400 marksmen who fired in Labor Day events of the National rifle matches in progress here.

Sergt. McWille James, 25th Infantry, Nogales, Ariz., finished first in the Leach Cup match, in which seven shots are fired at stages of 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, while Sergt. Frederick Pauch, Somerville, N. J., won the Navy match.

PRISONERS LIBERATED. Paris, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The ministry of colonies announced today that 1,000 mandarinets had invaded the offices of a native mandarin in charge at Nam Dang, Annam, French Indo-China, and had forced him to sign a document granting certain concessions.

The announcement said the mandarinets then opened the jail, permitting the escape of a number of prisoners, and destroyed a winery. The communique added that the mandarinets were the work of Communists who sought to halt the series of arrests going on recently as a result of disorders in French Indo-China.

PAIR BADLY INJURED IN BAY STATE CRASH. Local Boys in Westfield Hospital After Car is Wrecked on Bad Turn.

Anthony Dix of 42 Deming street and Albert August of 34 Liberty street are back home from a motor trip they started on last Monday, but which ended in a Westfield hospital. On their release from the hospital they were given instructions to keep in touch with their family doctor until cuts, bruises and abrasions that they suffered are properly healed.

They had been in Albany a week ago yesterday and were heading back towards Manchester over the Berkshire Hills. About fourteen miles outside of Westfield, Mass., in making a turn they went off the road, into a tree and wrecked the car so badly that only the two tires were salvaged. Dix was thrown from the car, but both his hands were badly cut by glass and sliding along in the road. He also hurt his knees and he had a bruised hip.

August was pinned under the car. Dix tried to help him, but was too weak. In the distance, coming down the hill he saw the glare of headlights on a couple of automobiles. He waved his handkerchief and it was taken as a signal of danger by the truck drivers and their helpers. They were from Providence, R. I., on their way west. With their help August was removed from the wreck. First aid was given at a doctor's office in Chester and from there they were taken to the hospital where they remained until Thursday. They spent the next day getting their goods together and so badly was the car damaged that Mr. Dix took only the five tires and made arrangements to have the car removed and junked.

It will be several days before their injuries will have healed.

BANDIT DIES IN JAIL. Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Pneumonia superinduced by a hunger strike the Nebraska penitentiary caused the death of Johnny Brown, 26, bank robber yesterday.

Warden W. I. Fenton, said Brown stopped eating three weeks ago and contracted pneumonia three days ago.

Brown was under a 20 year sentence for robbing a Sioux City, Nebraska bank of $20,000 in 1925.

The Life Story of LON CHANEY

by DAN THOMAS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of six daily stories on the life of Lon Chaney, the screen's greatest character actor, by Dan Thomas, Hollywood correspondent of The Herald and NEA Service. In his subsequent stories, Thomas will tell more about this amazing actor and his work in the hideous roles that made him the movies' greatest male drawing card for years.

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

Hollywood, Sept. 2.—Lon Chaney, dead, is as much a mystery as was Lon Chaney, alive.

The star whom Hollywood never really knew and the greatest character actor in the history of motion pictures has carried to the grave with him his silent, retiring personality, which was as baffling as any of the weird roles he played in the films.

For no one in Hollywood, except for a few—and a very few—intimate friends, ever really knew Lon Chaney.

Unlike most movie idols, Chaney hated the limelight life that most of them led. He made few public appearances, he attended practically no brilliant "first nights," he shunned gay parties, he wore heavy glasses as a disguise to protect himself from hero-worshippers, he refused to discuss his personal life with interviewers, he was happily married, he lived quietly with his family—and his art.

For Chaney found greater pleasure in donning rough clothes and fishing for trout, with a pipe between his teeth, in the solitude of a mountain stream; in tinkering with an amateur's movie camera and developing his own films just for the fun of it; in reading heavy books on penology, which had made him an authority on crime and its prevention; in trailing, like a shadow, cripples and other deformed characters whom he encountered on the street so that he might watch them and observe the particular peculiarities of a distorted limb, or a certain twitching muscle, or the glassy stare of a blinded eye and thus portray these human defects in some weird character in the films.

The hideous faces, like some terrible apparition—straight out of a horrible nightmare, that made the lions of movie-row shudder were the results of a lifetime of hard work in the twin arts of make-up and mimicry. And their price was the self-imposed torture of cruel, warped and twisted faces, the use of a milky glass eye, worn under the lid, to feign the empty stare of a blind man; or a tightly-laced strait-jacket that bound his legs or his arms behind him and made him look like an armless or legless circus freak.

For Chaney suffered for his art—literally. In "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" he wore a 60-pound metallic jacket to twist his body into a horrible shape; his face was so distorted with clamps, false teeth, putty, wax and whatnot that he had to take his lunch through a straw. "Sometimes" Chaney once told me when he was filming "Mr. Wu," his greatest Chinese character, "it is all I can do to get through a day's work. It is the way I have to tape my head to draw up the outer corners of the eyes that causes the pain. My left eye is so sore today that even the slightest touch anywhere near it brings tears."

Chaney's artistry of make-up was acquired, but mimicry he came by naturally.

The story goes back to a boy in Colorado Springs, Col., whose parents were deaf-mutes and whose mother was an invalid. Being compelled to use the sign language, he learned the art of pantomime by talking with his fingers. Soon he found that he could do things—by enacting various expressions of school scenes—that would make his sick mother laugh. Then he began to tell her stories, not by reading to her but by acting what he had read in books and magazines.

It was during this period he learned the first elements of make-up. He found that by painting his face to make himself appear funny as he enacted the stories he could amuse his suffering mother all the more.

The four children in the Chaney family—all of whom were normal—were never really in poverty, but it was necessary for them to quit school at an early age and go to work.

Lon, always a lover of the rough outdoors, got his first job as a tourist guide at Pike's Peak. His ability to mimic and entertain around the campfire caused tourists to urge him to try out for a theatrical career.

When he applied at the Colorado Springs opera house the manager laughed at him. Undaunted, he took a job as prop boy and began shifting scenes. The actors fascinated him and he watched them closely, spending as much time in their dressing rooms as they would permit.

About this time Richard Mansfield, the famous character actor of a generation ago, stopped off at Colorado Springs to break a long trip to the Pacific Coast. On successive nights Mansfield played "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Iran the Terrible" and the boy, watching with bated breath from the wings, there pictured his own future. He would be a character actor like Mansfield—a great actor, a man who could take on dozens of faces and grip the interest of his audience like a steel vise.

But few lives flow along carefully directed lines toward their desired goal—there are too many chances in the game.

So it was with young Chaney. By this time his older brother, John, had got a job in the theater and his father, thinking one actor in the family was enough, shipped Lon off to Denver to learn a trade as a paper hanger.

"I can hang wall paper and lay carpets as well as any man," the king of character actors said when in a reminiscent mood recently. "The old Antler Hotel in Colorado Springs is one of my jobs and there is still paper on those walls I hung."

One day the young paper hanger received a telegram from his brother, asking him to return to Colorado Springs at once and play a small role with a comic opera company he had organized. Lon jumped at it.

And so Lon Chaney became an actor. But it was not the kind of character roles—that he had set his dreams upon. There are too many chances in life for success to come that easily.

Instead, he became a pink-tinted chorus man, capering around in comic operas and, in addition, attending to the company's transportation problems and properties. They barnstormed for a while—and then went broke.

Lon heard a musical comedy in Chicago was looking for a dancer and a second comedian. He got the job, but that company soon went broke on the road and Chaney had to get back to Chicago.

Jobs were scarce, but Chaney hung on. He filled in as an actor whenever he could get a chance to play, regardless of the role, and at other times worked as a stage hand. He still held his card in the stage hands' union—and continued to do so until his death.

Thwarted, but by no means defeated, in his ambition to become a character actor, Lon finally drifted west with vaudeville troupe. In San Francisco he worked with the Ferris Hartman Opera Company and then joined the famous comedians, Kolb and Dill as stage director and second comedian.

On the same bill with Kolb and Dill were two girls doing a sister act. Chaney was struck with the charm and beauty of one of them, Hazel Hastings. Soon the second comedian and the pretty dancer were married. That was 23 years ago . . . and, despite all the vicissitudes of professional life and Hollywood's numerous divorces, that marriage endured happily until the end and was blessed with a son, Creighton Chaney, who is now a successful young lawyer.

Soon after marriage, Chaney and his wife drifted to Los Angeles to join a stock company. On the road, it went broke in Southern California. Not having sufficient money to get to Chicago, Chaney decided to take a first job at the movies and got his first job as an "extra."

In the old blood-and-thunder two-reelers of that bygone day he played almost every part—cowboy, Indian, hero and villain—but mostly the "heavy." His first picture in which he was given screen credit was a blood-curdling thriller that went under the name of "Hell Morgan's Girl."

An actor who has to figure on his next meal can't be too particular with roles assigned to him, but Chaney still dreamed of his character parts. For a time he was a director. Gradually, as his reputation grew, he forced recognition and won.

His chance came when George Loane Tucker, with Thomas Meighan and Betty Compton as the stars, Chaney was given the part of "Frog," the squirming cripple. Out of sheer hideousness he made art; his success was instantaneous, his future was assured and his dreams fulfilled.

From then on, Chaney played nothing but character parts and stardom was his. In 1928, and again in 1929 he was voted the biggest male box office attraction in the movies.

"The Man of a Thousand Faces" had at last turned his face to the movies and achieved his goal in life.

OPENING STOCKS

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The Stock Market was in an uncertain condition as trading was resumed today after the three-day suspension. Price changes were narrow, and irregular but the list displayed a steady tone. U. S. Steel, Radio, International Telephone, New York Central, and Standard of California gained 1-4 to 1-2. Northern Pacific advanced a point, and Allied Chemical, 2 1-2. Electric Auto Life dropped 2 points, American and Foreign Power 1 point, and Columbia Gas, Vanadium and Electric Refining sagged 1-2. United Corporation opened with a block of 5,000 shares 3-8 lower.

The list turned somewhat heavy as trading progressed, particularly among the pivotal industrials, although the strength in the rails and rail equipments which developed last week was again in evidence.

While business and trade reviews coming to hand over the week-end were in the main optimistic, the actual scope of the improvement so far indicated was apparently "too limited to encourage much renewed buying, and the bull leaders seemed willing to let the market consolidate its recent gains.

U. S. Steel, Radio, General Electric and Standard of New Jersey soon showed fractional losses, and American Telephone, International Telephone, American Can, Corn Products, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Goodyear sagged a point each. Westinghouse Electric, Vanadium and Case lost about 2, and Ingersoll Rand nearly 4.

In the rails, Union Pacific, ex-dividend, gained more than 3 points net, and American Car and Foundry and Lewis Round of Tolland; a sister, Mrs. Joseph Dufour of Rockville.

Mrs. Mary (Fleischig) Weber, 66, died at home at 38 Spring street on Sunday evening at 11 o'clock, following four months' illness of heart disease. She was born

Calcutta, Bengal, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Several men, believed to be ring-leaders of the raid on the Chittoorg arsenal last April, were arrested today after police had besieged a house in Chandernagore, a French possession thirty miles north of Calcutta.

Many shots were exchanged before the Nagal police forced their way into the house. The French authorities gave special permits for the police action.

ROCKVILLE

Police Court
There was a busy session in the Rockville Police Court on Monday morning, when four cases came up before Judge John E. Fisk, three resulting from a fracas at the home of Joseph Aptacy, 53, of 65 Vernon avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Ignaz Truak, the important figures in the scene, also reside at 65 Vernon avenue and the trouble started when Harry Masahuk, 48, of 9 McLean street, insulted Truak's wife. Truak, who was bed Masahuk, making a deep gash over one eye. When officers Dowgiewicz and Shea arrived on the scene, they also arrested Aptacy, as considerable liquor was found at the home.

Aptacy was fined $100 and costs of $11.25 and sentenced to Tolland county jail for thirty days. He was charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell and exchange. Aptacy stated in court that he kept the liquor for the purpose of cleaning his teeth but this explanation didn't go well with the judge.

A delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Schaeffer, assisted by Miss Charlotte Drescher and Miss Florence Kross. Those present were Count Morner, Ellsworth, Allan Waite, Billie Herzog, Charles Schmaiz, Gordon Friedrich, Robert Underwood, Gordon Schaeffer and Charles Schaeffer.

Fourth Case Talcottville was arrested at his home at 11 o'clock Sunday night for causing a disturbance. He was fined $7 and costs. In default of payment he was taken to Tolland county jail.

Wagner Held
John Wagner, in whose truck Walter E. Rounds was riding on the morning of August 30, when he met his death, is being held for the September term of the Tolland County Superior Court, which opened here today.

Wagner claims that Rounds was driving the truck which turned over after striking a car driven by Miss Keith of Hartford, crushing Round, who died instantly.

A hearing was held in the Tolland Justice Court on Saturday and Wagner was released under $2,000 bonds. The State Police are continuing the investigation as it is not believed the story that Rounds was driving the truck to be true.

Funeral of Accident Victim
Walter Edward Rounds, 27, of Tolland, who was killed in an automobile accident on the Hartford Turnpike road on Saturday morning, was laid to rest in the South Yard cemetery at 2 o'clock, following services at the home of his sister, Mrs. Joseph Dufour of South street, this city. Rev. Davidson, acting pastor of the Federated Church officiated.

Walter Rounds was born in Tolland on July 10, 1903, the son of the late Enoch Rounds and Jennie Staples Rounds, and was a graduate of the Grant Hill District school. He was a member of the Tolland Federated church and had many friends in the community who were sorry to hear of his untimely death. For the past four years he had been employed as carpenter by Arthur Bamforth. Previous to that he had been employed at the Bamforth farm. He was a very conscientious and faithful employee.

Besides his mother he leaves two brothers, Richard Rounds of Coventry and Lewis Rounds of Tolland; a sister, Mrs. Joseph Dufour of Rockville.

Mrs. Mary (Fleischig) Weber, 66, died at home at 38 Spring street on Sunday evening at 11 o'clock, following four months' illness of heart disease. She was born

Birth Party Held
Charles Schaeffer, son of Alderman and Mrs. William Schaeffer of Orchard street, celebrated his tenth birthday on Saturday afternoon. Eight were present at the party and a most enjoyable time was had playing golf and other games. Prizes during the afternoon went to Allan Waite, Billie Herzog, Robert Underwood and Charles Schmaiz.

A delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Schaeffer, assisted by Miss Charlotte Drescher and Miss Florence Kross. Those present were Count Morner, Ellsworth, Allan Waite, Billie Herzog, Charles Schmaiz, Gordon Friedrich, Robert Underwood, Gordon Schaeffer and Charles Schaeffer.

Mrs. Amelia B. Becker, 78, of 25 Pleasant street, died Sunday at her home following several months' illness. She was the widow of Michael Becker. She was born in Cwickan, Germany, Sept. 13, 1851, and lived here for many years. She was a member of Union Congregational church.

Mrs. Becker leaves four daughters, Mrs. Richard Miller of East Windsor, Misses Magdalen and Minnie E. Becker of this city and Mrs. Rose Morrell Becker of Charlotte, North Carolina.

Funeral arrangements will not be made until the arrival of Mrs. Morrell.

Tenth Wedding Anniversary
Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Lanz of Prospect street were surprised on Sunday afternoon by a number of friends at the Fur, Feather and Finn Club in Ashford, in honor of the tenth anniversary of their marriage. An elaborate dinner was served by Mrs. Corbin Engliert and Mrs. Frank Mann of this city. Guests were present from Hartford, Boston, Worcester, Stafford and this city.

Notes
Mr. and Mrs. John W. McDonald of Union street have returned from a vacation spent in Lynn, Mass., as the guests of their daughter, Mrs. John Lanz.

Kenneth Bentley of Highland Park, Manchester, has been the week-end guest of relatives and friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Cobb and children of Rheel street have returned from two weeks spent with Mrs. Cobb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hamilton of Chebeque Island, Me.

Alderman and Mrs. William Schaeffer and sons of Orchard street spent Sunday at Mt. Tom.

Miss Charlotte Drescher of Prospect street visited in Holyoke, Mass., on Sunday.

Arthur Schmalz, Jr., of Orchard street has returned from a motor trip to Canada.

COUNT MORNER TO WED

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Count Gösta Morner of Sweden, a former husband of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, has decided to take another American bride.

Friends learned today of his engagement to Miss Geraldine I. Fitch, a New York newspaper writer. No date for the wedding was announced.

Count Morner, who is 33 years old, came to the United States in 1920 intending to enter the Swedish consular service. He changed his plans, however, and went into business and is now connected with an advertising and publicity organization.

Count Morner was married to Peggy Hopkins Joyce at Atlantic City, N. J., in 1923. The marriage was ended by divorce in Paris the next year.

Now if Tom Lipton were entering a golf tournament instead of a yachting contest there might be a crack somewhere about his canny tea to cup play.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

EUGENE FIELD'S BIRTH

On Sept. 2, 1860, Eugene Field, noted American poet and journalist, was born at St. Louis, Mo.

He removed to New England and spent several years of his childhood in Vermont and Massachusetts. Though he completed his education in Missouri, critics say New England environment.

He began newspaper work at 23 and 10 years later became associated with the Chicago Daily News, with which he was for 12 years identified through his famous column, "Sharps and Flats." His humorous sayings in the column established his reputation in journalism. But he also showed he could write with rare sympathy.

An estimate of the man's scope is concisely given in this sentence: "He seemed to have equal sympathy with the wild life of the prairie and with classic culture, for irresponsible Bohemian life and quiet domestic felicities.

Field is probably most widely known as a poet of childhood, but most admired as a humorist. Among his works are: "Culture's Garland," "Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac," "Little Book of Western Verse," "With Trumpet and Drum," and "Poems of Childhood."

RECOVER MEHL'S BODY

Toronto, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The body of Johnny Mehl, of Jamaica, Long Island, drowned in Lake Ontario off Port Credit a month ago, was recovered yesterday.

Mehl came here to train for the men's Marathon swim at the Canadian National exhibition. He was under the care of Johnny Walker, who trained Marvin Nelson. Fort Dodge, Iowa, winner of the swim and the prize of $10,000.

In the absence of Walker, Mehl, Jimmy Riggs, of Toronto, and Nelson, went out in the lake for a swim. A sudden squall arose and the small boat which they clambered into was blown far out to sea. Nelson and Riggs reached shore safely.

The Hollywood Story

by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Dan Rorimer, a scenario writer in Hollywood and formerly a New York newspaper man, is in love with Anne Winter, who begins as an act in progress rapidly and is now under contract to one of the largest studios.
Dan, who formerly was under contract himself, now is free lance, largely because of his inability to get along with a studio executive, whose methods irritate and disgust the sensitive and stubborn Rorimer. Paul Collier, who writes a daily movie column for a string of papers, shares Dan's apparent faith in Dan's ability, despite Dan's apparent failure to get along as a free lance. Dan has become dependent over this, and over what he considers his rather hopeless regard for Anne Winter.
Anne lives with two other girls, Mona Morrison and Eva Harley. Mona and Eva are extras, but Mona works only occasionally and Eva but rarely. She is bitter over the and over a rather tragic love experience.
While in New York Rorimer had written a play for the legitimate stage. His agent thought very highly of it and kept it for months, trying to sell it to various producers. But it comes back to Dan one day, at a time when he is disappointed because of the rejection of his latest screen story. Collier is curious about the play. He begins to read it and he is enthralled by it. He feels that he is foolish to worry about what the studios think of his stuff when he can write like that.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXX
Anne insisted that Dan bring his play over and read it to her. Paul Collier had seen her the following day at Grand Union had told her about it, and Anne had never seen him so enthused.
"It's a play about a gangster and his girl, and it's got a wallop in it," Paul drew a deep breath. "Well, it's a knock-out, but you know Dan," he added.
Anne nodded. "Yes, I know him. The play wouldn't have come back if it hadn't been a good one."
"That's Dan's idea, it's getting terrible to live with that guy. I never saw a man in my life who could put so much into a thing and then sour on it so quickly. You know what the trouble with Dan is?"
"He doesn't have enough faith in himself, for one thing. Isn't that it?"
Paul said, "Yes, and he's bull-headed," and Anne smiled, remembering something Ziggy Young had written to Dan about herself.
"I mean," Paul explained, "that you can't argue with him. Just because his ideas haven't set Hollywood on fire, he thinks it's a flop. Let's get a new story, but it's his own, and it's a little different from what the studios have been used to. It's too bad there wasn't anybody with any imagination over at Continental when Dan was there; he might have been sitting pretty if it hadn't been for Adamson."
So Dan stuck the play in his pocket that evening and went over to the bungalow.
Mona and Eva have gone to the theater. Anne informed him, and at Dan's inquiry she said that Eva seemed to be herself once more and things were pretty much as usual again.
"We've just forgotten that anything happened, Mona and I."
Dan wanted to know if he couldn't leave the play with her so that she could read it some other time, but she insisted that he must read it to her, and she had herself sit in a nearby chair where she could watch his face as she listened.
"Well," Dan said as he obeyed her, "you asked for it; don't blame me," and he began to read.

He held a cigarette in his hand and he puffed now and then to puff at it to cover the awkwardness he felt. And at first he was embarrassedly conscious of his own voice, so that he read without expression, somewhat as a school boy reads his lesson; but this was not for long. Presently he had forgotten that he was reading typewritten copy to Anne Winter, the thing became a play again, the play into which he had poured so much of his hope and his enthusiasm and his passionate longing to write something that men would know him by.
He had conceived it some years ago when he was covering night court for "human interest" stories for his paper, and it had lain in the back of his mind for a long time waiting to be written. And now that he had almost forgotten about it, it was back again, and it began to live again for him.
It was the story of a New York gangster—a member of one of the dock gangs—and the girl he left behind him to go to war. It was not a pretty story, but it was real and human and warm with life, and its end was poignantly tragic.
At the end of the first act Dan looked up and smiled and reached for another cigarette. Anne said, in a low voice, "Go on," and nothing more. So he read on.
When he had finished he threw the manuscript carelessly to one side, and he got up to stretch, and he saw then that Anne had actual tears in her eyes. The sight of them moved him; suddenly he realized, with a new and strange sense of pride, that it was she who had written that had made Anne cry. He could not be, then, the sorry failure that he had begun to think himself—not if something he had written could do that to Anne Winter.
Anne was silent until she saw him smiling at her. Then she said, softly, "And they sent it back to you."
He replied cheerfully, "Sure, I suppose I shouldn't feel so bad, though. My agent was pretty keen about it and didn't want to give it up; but there was simply nothing there. There's nothing to do, I guess, but like it. I'm getting used to that," he added dryly.

"It's a shame," Anne said softly. "It's a shame."
Dan shrugged, and he smiled again. "Maybe so; but it's worth a lot to know that you like it, Anne. I was pretty keen about it when I wrote it, but when it didn't get across right away I began to think it couldn't have been much good. You know how you feel about those things."
Anne nodded and he continued: "The agent said it's getting terribly hard to find a producer who is willing to take a gamble; things aren't flourishing on the stage the way they were before talking pictures turned everything upside down."
And Anne said quickly, "No wonder they can't take a gamble with a play like that. The movies took a chance with sound pictures and they could develop that war so quick into something tremendous. Do it, Dan!"
He watched the smoke from his cigarette rise in a straight, slender column under the yellow lamp shade. "That's the idea," he said half doubtfully.
"Why, it's the only thing to do! Dan, I'm crazy about you! I think it's marvelous!"
Dan laughed. He said, "See you make me feel pretty good, Anne."
"I mean it. I think it would be wonderful to play the part of that girl." She added with a frown: "That's the kind of thing I'd like to do—and they want me to sing and dance."
Dan put out his cigarette and turned his head to look at her. "I've done none of the things I'd really hoped to do," Anne said, and there was a bit of wistfulness in her voice.
She was silent then, and Dan looked thoughtfully at his hands; spread them out before him and rubbed them together. He said, "Yes, that's so," and it occurred to him that she might have been somewhat selfish in taking it for granted that Anne was satisfied with what she was doing.
He said as much to her. "I've been grouching so much because things weren't bricking right for me that I'd forgotten there was others who had a right to kick."
He suggested that they go for a short ride. "I've earned it, Anne, don't you think? And I'd like a little about a mile high; my throat's full of cotton."
So they stopped at a drug store and then they headed for the ocean, and on the way back, with a waxing moon in the sky and a soft breeze singing in the palms, Anne sang for him.
Her voice was low and thrilling. Dan said, when she had ended her song: "You must always sing, Anne. Even when you are doing the things you want me to do, you must always sing."
Paul Collier was sitting up reading when he returned home.
"Hello, my boy," he said lazily. "Well, what did she think of it? Did she like it?"
"Yeah. How do you think that thing would go in the movies, Paul?"
"Who suggested that, Anne?"
Dan nodded and Paul grinned. "I thought of that," he said, "when I first saw it. I'm not going to let Anne steal all the credit. But I thought you might listen to good advice if it came from another quarter. I've been talking it on you until I'm sick of talking to you."
"Oh, yeah?" Rorimer swung a playful punch at him. He said, "Anne had an idea she'd like to play the part of Jenny. You know what I'm going to do?"
"Sure," said Collier. "You're going to try to sell it to Grand Union, and then you're going to try to dictate who'll play in it. And I suppose you think they'll thank you for telling them how to run their business."

Dan laughed, but his face grew red nevertheless. "Aw, be yourself," he said lamely.
But Collier, though he continued to smile, was serious. "You've got a great idea there, Dan. I'll swear I think it'll make the swellest picture Hollywood has seen in a year."
He began then to take the play apart and discuss it, and Dan was amazed that he should remember it in such faithful detail; and he made suggestions here and there, to which Dan listened thoughtfully and agreed.
"See what I mean?" Paul said. "It would be a great picture for an actor like Lester Moore; he'd make that gangster of yours come to life; it's made to order for Moore."
Rorimer nodded. "I'll get it at tomorrow first thing," he said.
"I don't know exactly what you mean? I thought I'd do it over and then see if somebody wanted it. What else is there to do?"
"I've been thinking," Paul answered. "Do you know what you need, Dan? You need a little showmanship. Hollywood goes for it. The swellest piece of showmanship you ever pulled off in Hollywood was when you tore up your contract in front of Adamson's nose. He was afraid to fire you at the time; you probably had him thinking there were half a dozen studios waiting for a chance to sign you up."
"I've got an idea," he continued. "It's probably been worked before, but everything's been tried at least once in Hollywood, so it doesn't make much difference."
"Well, let's have it."
Dan lay back in his chair and draped one of his long legs over its arm. He said, "Do you know Phillips over at Grand Union?"
Dan said he did not. "Who is he?"
"He's the scenario chief. Well, you don't need to know him; he's a good egg, and if you let him know you're a friend of mine he'll see you. I'm not," he hastened to add, "going to suggest anything that won't square with that funny conscience of yours; but if you put this over—do you know in your mind just about what changes you're going to make?"
"Well, forget that part of it. Now, here's what you do," and Collier, gesturing earnestly with his hand, began to unfold his plan.

HOW TO SHOP
CURTAINS NEAR WINDOWS MUST BE WASHABLE.
By William H. Baldwin
Glass curtains are those nearest the window.
Washability is the most important factor in the purchase of glass curtains. If the shopper is in doubt as to this factor, she should get a sample of the curtaining she intends to buy and wash it at home. Appreciable shrinkage would be noted.
Cotton curtains are apt to give better service than rayon or silk, which are bought more for style. Good cotton materials are made of fine yarn, with several twists, while the cheaper yarns have single-ply yarn. If the material has dots or figures, pick at them. The dots in cheap material will come right off. Fineness of weave and lack of imperfections characterize the better grades of rayon and silk curtains. Badly woven silk and rayon gauze will be streaky when held to the light.

NEW PROFESSION OF STYLING GIVES WOMEN VOICE IN FUTURE MODES

Fashions in Clothes Now Are Dictated by the Wearer, Says University Expert.

Mrs. Mary Brooks Picken is busy training stylists.

By HELEN WELSHIMER
New York, Sept. 2.—America's beauty scale is going up, so they say.
Women are ever so much better looking than they were ten years ago.
And if they are, there's a reason: Women today are having a voice in deciding what they shall wear. A little more than ten years ago they didn't have any more to say about the style of their pomps than they did about the kind of laws they obeyed. Then equal suffrage and stylists came on the scene. Brains and beauty staged a joint debut.
Today there are almost one thousand paid stylists, sometimes known as fashion workers, trying to help American women choose the styles, colors and fabrics which will give them chic and charm and beauty.
Mrs. Mary Brooks Picken, famous New York stylist, who teaches Economics of Fashion at Columbia University, was one of the first women to enter the styling profession.
Representing All Women
"A stylist is a woman's representative," she explains. "She has the woman's viewpoint. For many years women had to accept their views. But when she started to increase her earning and her spending power she wanted to choose her own clothes. Stylists, officially recognized as such, developed."
Mrs. Picken also has a fabric and fashion studio in New York City, where she is busy training stylists and would-be stylists continually. Her golden hair, large brown eyes and a rose petal complexion add personal claim to the styles she suggests.
"I have to make my students clothes conscious," she said. "I have to break down their prejudices against certain colors and fabrics, and also make them interested in clothes as a general subject for everyone instead of in their own individual wardrobes."
Mrs. Picken has found that daily papers and magazines are making women develop a style sense. They are learning to assemble their wardrobe from pictures before they buy anything.
And when they do buy, it is a woman's touch that is back of the picture. The touch of a woman trained to know just what lines and fabrics and styles are best suited to women.
The various types of stylist positions are ranging all the way from designing garments to choosing the color of a strand of thread.
"One girl became a stylist for a thread company," Mrs. Picken told to prove the need of woman's influence. "She found that dull shades were being manufactured by the company, although the bright new colors for clothing were the vogue everywhere. She made a tour of 150 stores, noticed how the spoils of thread were arranged, what fabrics and what colors were selling in the clothing departments, and encouraged her industry to make the shades which corresponded to the clothing."
"She got busy with the stores, too. One of them was taking only 28 of the varieties of thread which her concern manufactured. She persuaded the store to increase the number to 48. The store increased its thread sales 33 per cent in 20 days during the preceding year."
"When you consider that the average woman has to go a mile for one spool of thread, it is im-

CLOTTING OF BLOOD DEPENDS, IN PART, ON ACTION OF PLATELETS

By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN

The knowledge of the platelets in the blood is even more recent than that of the other cells. These plates are seen only with great difficulty and can be counted only by special techniques which have been developed, none of which is of any too great accuracy.
The platelets are certainly concerned with the ability of the blood to clot promptly when it is let out of a blood vessel. It is difficult to conceive of anything more important to a person's life than the ability to stop bleeding when blood is let loose. Because of the importance of this reaction nature has apparently developed a number of mechanisms which are involved in this procedure.
The blood contains a substance called fibrin, which is concerned in the formation of the clot. It unquestionably has in association with the fluid constituents of the blood other materials which may be involved and the vast majority of physicians believe that the platelets have a very prominent activity in this direction.
If the number of platelets is greatly reduced, the person bleeds easily under the skin. In some infectious diseases the number of platelets is promptly reduced and one of the most significant manifestations of these diseases is the collection of large black and blue spots over the body.
The medical profession knows a good deal about the blood platelets, but there is far more unknown than known. It knows a great deal about the clotting of blood, but it needs to know much more. Tests have been devised which indicate that blood clots in from one to three minutes after bleeding commences.
The clotting can be hastened by squeezing the bleeding spot, by pressing on the blood vessel from which the blood comes, by applying very hot applications, by applying substances which break down the cells, by rubbing, and by other manipulations which almost everyone is familiar with.
If there is a deficiency of calcium in the blood, this will delay the clotting. However, calcium itself is associated with many other conditions of health and of these much more will be said later.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Since the advent of talking pictures, many of us have watched carefully their reaction on children. The questions "Should children go to the movies?" answered unsatisfactorily heretofore by various qualifications, suddenly faced us again in a new form. Words explaining erstwhile glossed-over meanings no longer "go over the heads" of the small fry. They come home now entirely informed of what is going on.
Mothers have done the natural thing. Unable to stem the tide of movie-going on the part of the children, too busy to investigate what type of picture their off-spring are going to see, they are inclined to put the blame on the producers.
Censorship at Studios
It would take a volume, and a big one, to enumerate the cleansing processes that motion picture production has undergone during the last few days, and still is undergoing. The code of ethics strictly observed by the central board representing all the big producers would amaze the uninitiated. Censorship is the watchword of production now, right at the studios.
But the public at large can't get away from the idea that all pictures produced must be fit for children. Furthermore, what one section of the public considers wrong, another understands as right. Still further, we all have our preferences. The picture that entertains one may be repulsive to another. The industry understanding that, attempted to please everyone.
The picture business was conceived not as entertainment for children, but for adults. There has been a steady effort with promis-

BARBER IS FINED FOR BOBBING HAIR

Chinese Tonsorial Artist Did Not Know That Husband Objected—Odd Decision.

Shanghai. (AP)—Chinese court authorities in this city have made it an offense for a barber to cut a woman's hair without the consent or knowledge of her husband.
The ruling was handed down at the conclusion of a case brought before the Shanghai District Court in which a barber was accused of causing a rupture between a man and his wife by cutting the latter's hair.
The wife, it developed, had pleaded with her husband on numerous occasions to let her follow the dictates of fashion and to have her locks shorn, stating that she was tired of abundant hair in the summer. The husband resented the idea, condemning it as immodest.
Gets Hair Bobbed
While out shopping one morning, the wife chanced to look into the window of a barber shop. Another of her sex was inside having her hair bobbed. The vision made her envious and throwing discretion to the winds, she hurriedly entered the place and within a short space of time was out again, minus her tresses.
On arriving home, her husband beat her for disobeying his orders. Her screams attracted the attention of the police and the irate male soon found himself standing before the District Court judge on a charge of cruelty to his wife.
Although he pleaded guilty to the charge of wife beating, he placed all the blame on the barber, who was accordingly arrested and brought before the tribunal. Holding that the act of cutting a woman's hair was not illegal in itself but became so when it tended to upset the peace of family life, the tonsorial artist was fined $2.
Barber Protests
The barber protested on the grounds that the action was unjust. He didn't know the woman's husband had objected to her getting a hair-cut and besides, he did what difference would it make and whose business was it anyway. The court replied that he had better make it his business in the future to find

Hawley Beats Shirer To Reach Semi-Finals

Resorts to Lobbing to Offset Opponent's Superb Net Play and Wins Hard Fought Match 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

The strategic change from a driving to a soft, lobbing style of play enabled Tom Hawley to eliminate Ross Shirer in a three set battle at the Manchester Country Club Sunday morning and thus reach the semi-final round of the town championship tennis tournament.

One of the hardest, even though not the most accurate drivers in the tourney, Hawley has met Shirer several times this season in friendly matches and on most every occasion he had been defeated. Shirer is one of the best net players contesting for the title Ty Holland has held for three years and Hawley wisely decided to lobb in Holland fashion in effort to prevent Shirer from scoring at the net.

The match was a long drawn out and bitterly contested struggle, especially the third set. Hawley finally emerged the victor after a 27 game battle, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. In a capitulation match, reveals that the players were very evenly matched, the winner scoring 99 points against 93 for the loser.

It was a most uncommon sight to see Hawley making comparatively easy and careful returns instead of whaling the ball in his usual style as he did in eliminating Jimmy O'Leary and Dave Samuelson. Shirer, too, seemed at first surprised. He had expected Hawley to play the ball in his characteristic fashion and perhaps his failure to do just this was partly responsible for the unusual number of errors which Shirer made.

Neither player scored an ace in the match and both had 22 placements to their credit. Some of the rallies were long and interspersed with splendid shots, both defensive as well as offensive. Hawley's lob was working very satisfactory and the ball in his characteristic fashion and perhaps his failure to do just this was partly responsible for the unusual number of errors which Shirer made.

The point scoring follows:
First Set
Hawley 0 4 4 4 1 5-30-6
Shirer .. 4 0 2 1 1 6 1 4 3-23-3
Second Set
Shirer .. 0 4 5 5 7 1 4 5-4-35-6
Hawley 4 1 3 3 5 4 0 7 2-29-3
Third Set

BOROTRA TRIMS SUTTER EASILY IN EXHIBITION

Bounding Basque Speaks Highly in Praise of Young American Tennis Stars.

By TED VOSBURGH Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Jean Borotra, at 32, thinks he is getting a bit too old to sell gasoline pumps with one hand and play tennis with the other.

But tennis followers who watched the "Bounding Basque" take three out of four sets from one of the best of America's younger players, Cliff Sutter, will be from Missouri until after the national championships, beginning Saturday.

The most famous purp salesman in two continents gave himself Labor Day off and celebrated the occasion by trouncing Sutter to the tune of 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, in an exhibition match at Forest Hills.

To the naked eye, that made Borotra look very good as Sutter is the National Intercollegiate Champion and has broken even in two recent matches with Big Bill Tilden.

Yet, as he stroled from the court, one arm thrown consolingly around his young opponent's shoulder, Borotra made it clear that he is just a tired business man who despairs of mixing pump-selling with racket swinging for fear of making a mess of both.

"One cannot be an amateur business man and make a success of it," said the effervescent Labor Day addresser of unconscious Labor Day address.

"Now," he reiterated with a shake of his head and a trace of Parisian accent, "competition is too keen these days for any amateur business man to make good. You have to work hard and not take a lot of time off to play tennis.

"It is very difficult to wind up business deals at 3 o'clock, rush to the subway—and stand up—rush to the Pennsylvania Station and catch a train—and stand up some more—and then play good tennis in a national championship tournament.

"Maybe I could do it once but now I'm too old."
This United States title is the only one of the big three—French, English and American—that has escaped the rapier racket and tennis since was pursued by Borotra in his particular tournament.

What does he think of America's younger players?
"The best in the world," declared Borotra, with a pat on the back for Sutter.

"My friend, Maester Sutter, here, sees one fine young player."
"You played fine tennis in the first set, Vief, the next three you did not play so well. I think you feel sorry for me and let up a little."

This Sutter vigorously denied, perhaps wondering what kind of a "warm out" veteran this was who played better in the last three sets than he did in the first.

"Your young players," continued Borotra, "not only are better than ours in France. You have more of them. Pretty soon you will get back that Davis Cup, I fear."
"What players will be able to win it back? Why, who but these boys I saw playing today—Sutter and this tall boy, Vines, and Frank Shields, Wood, Bell and Mangin."

With this the tired business man waved an adieu and bounded up the stairs to the dressing room, two steps at a time.

72,000 See Yanks Divide With the A's

Labor Day efforts having failed to do much in the way of settling the National League pennant problem, the senior circuit swinging into the last night of 1930 season with the Chicago Cubs holding a four game lead of the Giants in second place but the Cardinals loomed as the most serious threat only a half game further back in third position.

St. Louis was the only one of the four leaders to win a doubleheader yesterday, the Giants and Robins breaking even the Cubs dropping both of their games. As the result the Cards jumped into third place, showing the Robins back into fourth and left the league standing like this:

Chicago 77-53 592
New York 72-58 557
St. Louis 73-55 553
Brooklyn 72-58 553

In moving ahead of the Robins, the Cards walloped the Pirates 1 to 6 in the morning and then repeated with 5 to 1 trimming in the afternoon. Fred Rahn was the winning pitcher in the morning contest, while Grimes had an easy time in the afternoon session.

Red Lucas and Benny Frey put together a pair of neat pitching performances to deal the Reds taking the opener 5 to 0 with Lucas pitching three hit ball and the nightcap 2 to 1 as Frey set the Champ down with five blows. The Cubs had the second game won 1 to 0 with two out in the ninth when Sukeforth's hit to center bounded over Hack Wilson's head for a triple, and scored Stripp and Crawford who had drawn a pass.

FOURTH RACER KILLED AT NATIONAL MEET

Curtis-Reynolds Airport, Chicago, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The 1930 edition of the National air races became history today with the names of four dead engraved on the records as martyrs of "man's fight to master gravity." Captain Arthur P. Marshall, Jr., noted Marine flier whose racing ship crashed down on the airport yesterday, died a few hours later. He had been leading in the speed classic of the ten days of competition—the Thompson trophy race.

More than sixty thousand spectators saw Pugsley plane speed around the home loop at a swing of 207 miles an hour, wallow crazily for a moment, then dive to destruction. Flying at a speed of 201.81 miles an hour, "Speed" Holman of Minneapolis swept over the 100 miles triangular route, to win the race and a prize of $3,000 and to set the fastest pace in the records of National race closed courses events.

Rockville, Unionville Are Defeated 6-2, 8-3

Although no baseball games were scheduled over the Labor Day weekend, Manchester Green had the last minute opportunity to go into early action and took the first all with the result that today their season's record shows two more victories.

The first was an 8 to 3 triumph over Unionville and the second a 6 to 2 victory over the strong All-Rockville outfit. Elmo Mantell, all the more commendable, is the fact that both games were played in the enemy's stronghold. Bobby Sturgeon pitched the Green to victory over Unionville while "Big Jack" Burkhardt took the measure of Rockville.

Sunday, of course, the Green has its crucial battle with the West Sides, the third and deciding of a three game series to decide which aggregation will face the Bon Ami for the 1930 town baseball honors. The soap-makers are the present titlers, Elmo Mantell reported at Holy Cross today for preliminary football training but the chunky southpaw is expected back to pitch for the West Sides in the game next Sunday. Art Boisen, former West Hartford high school pitcher, ace, seems most likely to get the call for the Green.

But to get back to the Green's two week-end victories, Unionville held a 2 to 0 lead over the locals at the sixth inning got underway but at its completion they were trailing one run. Four more Manchester hits worked. Harvey and Wright batted best for Manchester. D. Dogawich for the losers. The two teams were scheduled to play here in the morning but rain made this impossible.

An undesirable citizen is a man who violates the particular law you think ought to be observed.

Ten nights in a bar room may have been very bad but nothing like just one hour in a speakeasy.

There are times when we believe that nothing in the world is taxed more than a wife's patience.

Every friend should be permitted to have at least three fool ideas without question or hindrance.

Convict 711—If you're going to put me cracking stones, I wish you'd grant me one favor.

Warden—What is it? Convict—Lemme start in on the stone wall over there.

A loving wife will go through anything for her husband—including his pay envelope.

AGAINST EMIGRATION

Povoa de Varzim, Portugal, Aug. 19. — (AP.) — The government, alarmed at the decline of the Portuguese population, today began a nationwide drive to discourage emigration to Brazil and South America.

The campaign was started in this important fishing center because it provides many emigrants for Brazil.

ABOUT TOWN

Saturday night was moving night for two Main street stores. Louis Dell, who had conducted a cobbler shop in the State theater building moved his machinery, stock and the entire contents of his store to a store in the Princess building on Birch street. The stock that was contained in the Newark Shoe store in the Orford building was also moved out Saturday night when a truck backed up to the curbing and was loaded with boxes containing shoes. The lease on this store has expired.

Andrew Clemson of North Elm Street is spending a week with his daughter, Mrs. M. Jepsen, in Elizabeth, N. J.

Miss Josephine Kusek of 21 Kerry street was the guest of honor at a surprise party held recently at the home of Miss Catherine Opalach. About 35 of her friends were present and spent an enjoyable evening playing games, singing and dancing. She received many beautiful gifts. A buffet lunch was served by Mrs. Opalach and Mrs. Kusek.

Hose Company No. 3, S.M.F.D., will hold their regular monthly meeting at the hose house at eight o'clock tonight.

Ray Davis of the Manchester Memorial hospital laboratory, with Mrs. Davis, has returned from four weeks' vacation spent in Asheville, N. C., and other places nearby.

William Carney and family, formerly of this place, but now a resident of Cambridge, spent the weekend visiting in town, making their stay with Mrs. John Waddell of Cooper Hill and Cedar street.

Joseph Pearson of Manchester, N. H., will be the speaker at the Gospel Hall, Center street, each night this week except Saturday. Mr. Pearson is a well known gospel preacher in Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Rice and family and sister, Mrs. Arthur Gosnell and family of Springfield, Mass., have just returned from a motor trip through Maine, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. They were accompanied by Mr. Rice's mother, Mrs. J. A. Rice of Lubec, Maine, who visited the home of her birth in Nova Scotia after an absence of twenty-one years, motor-ing on through the Annapolis valley. They stopped at the home of Mrs. Rice's grandmother, the children having seen their great-grandmother for the first time. From there they then motored to Halifax, attending the Halifax Fair. In all they covered 3,300 miles.

Holiday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Richardson, 123 Cooper Hill street, were Mrs. Bernard McGovern and Mrs. Swift and son, Gal, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Dr. Percy Bidwell of Washington, D. C., formerly of this town, has resigned his position with the Federal government and will shortly leave for Buffalo, N. Y., where he will assume a professorship in economics at the University of Buffalo. Mr. Bidwell's duties with the traffic commission required his absence much of the time abroad. He will be remembered as the co-author of Manchester's Centennial history.

The September meeting of the North Methodist church council will take place this evening at 7:30 in the vestry.

Miss Annie Clarke of Porter street has returned after spending her vacation at the Anna Mere house, Misquamicut.

Miss Minnie Marks and her brother Elden, and August Kissman, spent the weekend at Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crooks have returned after spending a few days at Misquamicut Beach.

If you dislike graying hair, you will be interested in the superior manner in which Miss Juul, of the Weldon Beauty Parlor, conceals these age-marks by the "Inecto" method of hair tinting. Phone 5009.—Adv.

EMERGENCY DOCTORS

Doctors E. C. Higgins and N. A. Burr will respond to emergency calls tomorrow afternoon.

Ernest Williams and his friend, Lawson Fullerton of Maplewood, N. J., were guests over the holiday of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams of Hudson street.

Miss Ellen and Miss Jennie Johnson of Maple street and Miss Margaret Stevenson of Oak street, have returned from a trip to Hampton Beach, N. H.

Miss Beatrice Armstrong of East Center street left yesterday for Norfolk where she will teach in the kindergarten department of the public school.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald H. Ferguson of Henry street and small sons, Thomas and Walter, returned today from New York City where they spent the weekend and Labor Day.

ON THE JOB AGAIN

And that's that—the last double holiday for goodness knows how long. Pinehurst is on the job again today—and what with depleted larders in almost all homes, and what with depleted perishables very early this morning, this is a busy day. And a muggy one.

But what do we care about mugginess. We keep so busy here that the weather doesn't mean much. It does, however, give us a chance to be of extra service to our customers. Which tickles this gang.
