John McKone Meets Death Instantly When Hit by Automobile Driven by Hartford Man; Driver Held

While walking to work this morning in company with a fellow workman, John McKone, 62, of Talcottville, was struck and instantly killed at 7:05 o'clock by an automobile driven by Jack Ananian, of 7 Norwich street, Hartford, on the long curve beyond Talcottville leading to Dobsonville.

In Sight of Home

McKone had left his home, within sight of the fatal accident, and joined a neighbor, John Moore, walking to the Talcottville mills about three-quarters of a mile distant. According to Moore, both were on the right of the road walking towards the mill, when a large car was heard directly in rear of them going in the direction of Hartford. McKone was on the inside, nearer the middle of the road, and Moore was along the fence. McKone turned to view the approaching car and as he did so was struck by the bumper and was thrown with force against the windshield and catapulted under the fence in front of his companion. Moore was turned half-way round as the body of McKone passed by. Ananian went over 100 feet before stopping.

Police Called

A woman in a passing car called at a nearby house and called the State Police and State Police Officer Henry Zehrer of the Stafford Springs barracks responded.

Driver's Story

According to Ananian, driver of the death car, he was proceeding to Hartford from Boston with his wife, Alice, and two daughters, Agnes and Rose and Robert Proodan, a friend. When at the top of the grade and curve he said he noticed the two pedestrians and he slowed down, applying his brake. He said he passed a car a short distance from the accident but turned back into the road. When directly opposite the men Ananian said McKone turned around and walked past directly in line with his right front wheel. He applied his brake instantly, but before the car could be stopped the Dobsonville man had been hit by the bumper and thrown against the windshield, shattering the window. McKone fell to the ground. According to a verdict given by the Medical Examiner Thomas F. Rockwell of Rockville who made examination after the

COURT MUST DECIDE CITIZENSHIP CASES

In Schwimmer Case Oath to Fight Declared Necessary; Macintosh Case Opposite.

Washington, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Although the Supreme Court has said its duty is in emphatic fashion on the duty of an applicant for citizenship to take unqualified oath to fight, it need be, for the United States, it must pass on the question again or leave it considerably unsettled.

In the case of Rosika Schwimmer the court last year decided such an oath was necessary, but since then a Circuit Court of Appeals has decided Douglas Clyde Macintosh, Yale theology professor and Marie Averill Bland, Canadian war nurse were entitled to citizenship in spite of reservations regarding bearing arms.

The Supreme Court is to decide shortly whether it will take up the government's appeals and review these cases. Should it decide not to review, the decisions of the Court of Appeals will stand presenting to the eye of the layman a decided contrast to the final ruling in the Schwimmer case.

The Schwimmer Case

Mrs. Schwimmer, Hungarian lecturer, writer and linguist, applied for citizenship in Illinois in 1926. She said she would not personally bear arms in defense of the United States because she was an uncompromising pacifist. She was refused citizenship and appealed to the Supreme Court.

The court ruled against her. It was held to be the citizen's duty to bear arms if necessary.

Are Canadians

In the meantime, Macintosh and Miss Bland, both Canadians, asked for citizenship. Dr. Macintosh said he was willing to bear arms in defense of the country but he wanted to be the judge of the necessity. Miss Bland, like Miss Schwimmer, said she would not bear arms personally, believing it contrary to the "ethics of Christ."

Both were refused citizenship in a United States District court. But the Second Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the lower court.

'LEGS' DIAMOND, RACKETEER, IS SHOT BY FOES

Badly Wounded From Five Bullet Wounds Fired at Him in New York Hotel; Refused to Give Details.

New York, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Jack "Legs" Diamond, gangster and racketeer, rallied today in Polyclinic hospital from five bullet wounds inflicted yesterday by would-be assassins who burst into his room in a west side hotel, fired on him and fled.

Physicians who believed the gangster chief to be dying early today reported, when he awoke this morning from four hours sleep, that he had a fair chance to recover. They regarded his condition as so much improved that they held in abeyance plans for a blood transfusion.

Shot Five Times

Fevered and weak from loss of blood, his frame already weakened by tuberculosis and stomach ulcers and bearing the scars of five other bullet wounds received several years ago when "Little Augie" Orgen was shot down by his side, Diamond awoke today, glanced warily at the heroes about his rooming in the morning papers, and murmured to the patrolman guard at his hospital door, "Oh, are you still there?"

He was shot five times as he sat on the edge of his bed in his pajamas in a room on the eighth floor of the Monticello hotel on West 64th street shortly before noon yesterday.

Two bullets entered his chest, one on either side, another penetrated the abdomen, a fourth lodged in the thigh and the fifth inflicted a scalp wound on the forehead.

Before sinking into a coma he told police he did not know his assailants or why they shot him.

Gangster's Story

"The door opened," he said, "and three men walked in. One said, 'Well, here we are let's go,' and all here blazed away at me. I knowed me over on the bed and they

MINISTER DEFIES HEALTH OFFICIALS

Is Put Into Jail for Holding Church Services During a Quarantine Period.

Carrollton, Mo., Oct. 13.—(AP)—A Baptist minister was in jail here today as one result of a clash between science and religion.

The prisoner, the Rev. W. W. Woodson, 50, proclaiming the end of the world was at hand, defied medical science in the form of a city-wide infantile paralysis quarantine yesterday in conducting prayer services with a "surrendered band."

He was taken from the pulpit to the county jail building, wherein Bonnie Jean Schnapp, 8-year-old daughter of Sheriff O. B. Schnapp, died Saturday of infantile paralysis. The services went on in private last night at the church parsonage.

Mr. Woodson's followers, a group of fifty in his congregation of 800 left the church only after Ralph Lodge, Representative in Congress, presented an appeal on behalf of the children. The same appeal was rejected, however, by the pastor when Representative Lodge, acting as a friend, interviewed him at the jail.

"The world is coming to an end," the prisoner said, "and I must prepare my flock. I cannot cease my meetings until released by the Lord."

Mr. Woodson, said to be a prototype of the Rev. J. Frank Norris, fiery Fort Worth, Tex., Fundamentalist, came to this city three years ago from Temple, Tex.

BRAZILIAN REBELS TAKE CITY OF FLORIANOPOLIS

Important Coastal Community Falls Into Hands of Insurgents; Reports Say Rebels Are Gaining Recruits.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Despatches received at Paso de Los Libros, Argentina, from Uruguayan sources today said that Brazilian revolutionary forces had captured the important coastal city of Florianopolis, in the State of Santa Catharina.

Florianopolis is a trading center, 250 miles northeast of Porto Alegre. It has been under control of Federal authorities since the beginning of the Brazilian revolt and has been used as a base for operations against the insurgents. Several naval vessels have been anchored off the city.

The despatches added that insurgent elements are steadily leaving the various rebel strongholds for the front.

The capture of Florianopolis by the insurgents would mean consolidation of their lines between the States of Parana and Rio Grande Do Sul where the Rebels headquarters are located.

As long as the city was in the hands of the Federals, the rebel forces have been kept separated with consequent diminution of their ability to concentrate against Sao Paulo where the government is still in control.

BIG BATTLE NEAR

Montevideo, Oct. 13.—(AP)—A battle for the state of Sao Paulo, richest prize of southern Brazil, appeared today to be in its initial stages, with both insurgent and Federal armies claiming victory in scattering advance guard contacts.

General Miguel Costa, rebel commander reported that troops of his right had crossed the border of Sao Paulo and taken the towns of Ourinhos, Singues and Ponto Ribeira, and were advancing on Iltare, important railway head of a direct line to the city of Sao Paulo.

On his extreme left he said, Rebel forces skirmished with Federals at Jacarezinho and San Jose Da Platina, state of Parana. In both cases he said the Federals led without fighting. At another point, unnamed, the rebel leader, Atalvalva Leonel crossed the Parana border into Sao Paulo.

A Different Version

Rio de Janeiro despatches quoting a statement of the minister of justice gave an entirely different version of the encounters and said 2,000 Insurgents had been repulsed at Ponto Ribeira, and in a later encounter at Itarare. It was also claimed that in fighting at Jacarezinho a Federal column of 2,000 volunteers had repulsed a rebel attack and routed the Insurgents and had themselves begun to march into the interior of Parana toward Colonia Minda. From the statements from both quarters it was estimated here that the Federal Insurgents armies which have been mobilizing for weeks were in actual contact over a front possibly exceeding 200 miles in an engagement of engagements which may mean a very decisive rebel advantage, or mark prolongation of the conflict while Federal columns carry the conflict into the wilds of Rio Grande do Sul.

Financier Optimistic Over Business Future

New Orleans, Oct. 13.—(AP)—The exception. Old fashioned standards for judging values are again back in vogue, and as investment bankers, we can do our part to direct the savings of the country into constructive and dependable lines.

While speculation has its proper and independent function in our economic life, after all, the back log of prosperity is the savings and sound investments of the people. Through constructive financing and prudent saving, there has been built up a renewed buying power and normal demand for goods and services. With your help, normal confidence can be more readily restored and the fundamental law of supply and demand brought into balance.

Fascists Smash Windows, Discharge Pistols and Fight on Streets—Inside Parliament Building Order is Restored and Session is Adjourned Until Wednesday.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Troops of Fascist rioters, storming through down-town Berlin, smashing shop windows and firing pistols into the air, turned the opening of Germany's new Reichstag today into a wild reign of anti-Jewish rowdiness.

The violence of the Fascists and rioting of Communists in the shadow of the Parliament building, at the edge of the famous Tiergarten, taxed police efforts and threw the proceedings of the Reichstag itself into relative obscurity.

On the Potsdamerplatz the rioters who wore no uniforms and were identifiable only by their shouts of "Hall Hitler," smashed the windows of the Palast cafe as well as those of limousines parked outside it.

The rioters numbered about 300 and added a wild-west touch to their activities by firing their pistols in the air.

The Reichstag itself convened at 3 o'clock and after a session of several hours adjourned till Wednesday.

With the mention of adjournment the Communists raised a storm, insisting that a session be held tomorrow for a vote of no confidence in the Brüning Cabinet, for a vote on stoppage of the Young plan payments and for revocation of the order outlawing the Red Front Communist organization.

The Fascists joined in, blowing police whistles and drowning all verbal arguments.

Motion Falls

The Communist motion failed of support and the Fascists approved the Young plan reference by shouting: "Quite right!"

Both sections of Extremists almost went into hectic encounters directly under the speaker's table, as the Communist were enraged by the Fascist failure to support their motion.

All were induced to take their seats before casualties occurred and shortly afterward the body adjourned until 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

FIRST U. S. DINOSAUR EGG IS LOCATED IN MONTANA

Shells Millions of Years Old Are Found—Tooth of Animal That Lived After Dinosaur Also Uncovered.

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Princeton, N. J., Oct. 13.—(AP)—A tall tale little tooth discovered near some dinosaur egg shells in Montana, gives an insight into the possible fate of the earth's largest race of animals, the extinct dinosaurs.

Discovery of the eggs, the first found on this continent, and of the tooth nearby was announced today by Dr. Glenn L. Jepsen, head of the Scott Fund Expedition of Princeton University. They were found in southern Montana's last summer.

The tooth was in the same geological formation with the nearby egg shells, an indication said Dr. Jepsen that its owner may have been more or less contemporaneous with dinosaurs.

After the Dinosaur

The tooth owner was an animal type usually credited to a later age than dinosaurs, and a creature of higher intelligence supposed to have developed after the dinosaurs became extinct.

The Montana mammal was comparatively small, a new mammal type, probably belonging to the marsupials. This is one of the lowest orders of present day mammals, to which belong Kangaroos, opossums, wombats and badcoats.

The presence of the mammal tooth so near the dinosaur eggs suggested that the unexplained catastrophe which wiped out the dinosaurs about 75 millions years ago may have been in collision with the superior mammalian intelligence.

IMPERIAL PARLEY DISCUSSES TRADE

William Graham, Expert, Makes Suggestions as to How to Improve Business.

London, Oct. 13.—(AP)—The Imperial Conference today got down to business on the subject of empire trade. The British government informed heads of delegations that there would be no repeal of empire preferences unless some time in the future there occurred a repeal of the general tariff carrying these preferences.

Where Britain has imposed customs tariffs carrying the British preference, she will retain the British preference. But this does not imply that the labor government is pledged to maintain the duties. If any such duties are repealed, the preferences will go with them.

Graham Suggestions

William Graham, president of the British Board of Trade, today laid before the conference of premiers a number of British suggestions supplemental to the question of preferential tariffs for improving intra-empire trade. These suggestions covered:

- 1.—Import boards.
- 2.—Bulk purchase plans.
- 3.—The quota system purchase.
- 4.—The possibility of negotiating trade agreements between Britain and the Dominions similar to the agreement between Britain and Argentina.
- 5.—Empire rationalization with allocation of production.

PREPARE FOR TROUBLE

Berlin, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Hundreds of police with riot equipment supplementing their usual pistols and clubs formed a barrier around the Reichstag building today, hours before the opening of a session which was expected to prove one of the most notable since the founding of a republic in Germany. The House of Parliament appeared more like a beleaguered castle than the people's legislative hall, with many thousands of persons swarming about its approaches, bearing placards and banners on some of which were the inscription, "The German People."

There was every indication that the government had taken all possible steps to prevent physical violence when the new Reichstag, with its radically changed alignment of parties, began its first session since the September election.

JOYOUS REUNION WITH WIFE AND SON

James Peperitis Reaches Manchester With Son of 15 Years He Had Never Seen.

There was a joyous reunion at the home of James Peperitis of Main street early Sunday morning that continued through the day, the occasion being the reuniting of Mr. Peperitis and his wife and the father's first meeting with his son, born fifteen years ago, October 10.

The Herald told last Thursday how James had received a telegram that day telling him that his wife, whom he married four days before joining the Greek Army to fight against the Turks on March 14, 1914, and then, after his discharge, was only home for 22 days before leaving for this country, was due to land in New York on October 10, with their son.

He lost no time in getting things ready and Thursday night started for New York to meet them. Saturday was used in getting proper clothes for the boy and the mother and it was late when they left New York, but they came through to Manchester arriving at 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

Jim is proud of his son who is a well built boy while Mrs. Peperitis is in direct charge of new found women friends intent upon seeing the dresses as women in America do.

FIRST U. S. DINOSAUR EGG UNEARTHED IN MONTANA

Arizona had contended the contracts executed by the Department of Interior for the sale of power to the city of Los Angeles, the metropolitan water district of southern California, and the Southern California Edison Company, were invalid because of the alleged inability of the city and the metropolitan district to make the contract.

Arizona contended that both the Santa Fe compact and the Congressional act under which the government has undertaken the construction of the dam constitutes an invasion of its rights. It takes the position that it will not receive under the plan adopted a fair share of the hydro-electric power from the dam nor the water from the Colorado river to which it is entitled.

After a while I got to my feet and went to the elevator, then fell over again."

Discovery of some of Diamond's clothing in a room adjoining his, occupied by Miss Marion Roberts, a show girl, sent police on a search for her.

She was found hiding in a clothes closet in the apartment of Miss Agnes O'Laughlin, another show girl on Eighth avenue.

Miss Roberts whose real name is Marion Strasmick and who said her home was Boston, told police Diamond was in her room when the telephone operator called to say two men down stairs wanted to see Diamond.

Arrested 21 Times Diamond who has been arrested 21 times on charges ranging from first degree murder to suspicion of shooting from Europe by way of Philadelphia where he was landed from a freighter after his deportation by German police.

His police record began when he was sent to a reformatory for burglary at 17. That was the only conviction against him despite his numerous arrests and indictments.

For a time he was bodyguard for Arnold Rothstein, gambler, whose slaying in the Park Central Hotel in November, 1928, was similar to the shooting of Diamond.

Another Gunman Shot Newark, N. J., Oct. 13.—(AP)— Police attempted today to link the shooting of Jack "Legs" Diamond in New York with the killing Saturday night of Abe Figaro, New York gangster, and a reported body guard of Diamond.

Figaro's body was thrown from a car in Harrison, N. J. Police considered the possibility he was sent here to Diamond to deal with New Jersey beat runners with whom Diamond was reported to have quarreled.

Diamond has been sought several times in connection with crimes in New Jersey and last Summer efforts were made to link him with the hold-ups of two Newark banks from which $28,000 was stolen.

GIRL IS QUESTIONED

Newark, Oct. 13.—(AP)— A red-headed chorus girl faced the ablest inquirers of the police department today—their only hostage in the shooting of Jack "Legs" Diamond, gangster overlord.

Diamond rallied in a hospital bed from the five wounds which doctors thought last night would certainly be fatal. But he smiled at those who tried to learn who the man were who entered his West Side hotel room yesterday morning, fired five bullets into his body and fled. Marion Roberts, whose on-stage name is Strasmick and who was with the gangster at least until a few minutes before the shooting, was taken to police headquarters to look at Rogue's Gallery portraits and see if she could identify the assailants or any of Diamond's recent callers.

Miss Roberts' Story She said she and Diamond breakfasted together yesterday in her room at the Monticello hotel; that after breakfast Diamond was told by telephone "two guys coming up"; and that when they came up, while she was in her bath, Diamond ordered them to his room and went with them.

She took a nap, she said, awoke at 1 o'clock and went to the New Amsterdam theater for a rehearsal of her revue and didn't learn of the shooting until several hours after it happened. Police were skeptical about some of the features of her story.

Diamond had a fair chance today to recover, despite the severity of the five bullet wounds in his tubercular, ulcerated frame.

He awoke from four hours of sleep, glanced at stories of his shooting in the morning papers, and noticed the patrolman who guarded his door. Doctors were almost ready to say that unless complications developed he would recover.

Yesterdays was the second assault on him. In 1927 he was wounded five times by the assassins of "Little Augie" O'Grady.

Police learned Diamond met Marion Roberts seven months ago at a party, and had occupied a suite with her at the Monticello hotel occasionally but they had an understanding that "business card" dropped in, Diamond stepped into an adjoining room and conferred with them.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 13.

THE COLLEGE AT STORRS

We have seen in the state press veiled intimations that the attempt to convert Connecticut Agricultural College into a state university, which brought to a speedy conclusion the services of one head of that institution, has not been entirely abandoned but is being slyly promoted through the method of infiltration. It is hinted that, since the open and somewhat high handed efforts of former President Works in this direction provoked a cyclone of effective protest, the way to bring about the transformation is a bit at a time—in other words, by stealth; and that that is the present plan of campaign.

We confess to having no suspicion as to the identity of the individuals, if any, who are promoting this sort of thing; nor are we at all sure that there is any important body of opinion, secret or otherwise, behind it. But as a matter of applied principle we shall be definitely opposed to any attempt to enter a wedge into the structure of the agricultural college in the interest of its expansion into a state university.

Whether Connecticut should saddle itself with the job of maintaining a university is a question in itself. Granting for the sake of argument that it is a debatable question, we take the position that it is one which should not and must not affect the continuation of the Storrs school along substantially its present lines.

This newspaper is firmly committed to the belief that in the future Connecticut must go infinitely further in the promotion of agriculture than it has ever done in the past, either recent or remote. We are utterly convinced that New England has already gone a great deal too far in the urbanization of its people and that these states will be compelled before many years to recognize the vital importance of restoring the status of its rural population to its proper relative importance. As means to such an end such institutions as Connecticut Agricultural College are of the highest possible importance.

We shall combat, with all our strength, any attempt to manipulate the policy of the college at Storrs in such a way as to subordinate its original purpose to the development of general higher education and the eventual conversion of an excellent and much needed farm school into an unnecessary and inevitably inferior sort of university.

TEST OF FITNESS

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Stoeckel, in a talk at Waterbury the other day, made a very wise statement. He said that the realization was growing that the kind of an automobile operator a man proves to be is the kind of a man he is, and that his operation expresses his character.

Nothing could be truer. Appreciation of its truth, however, has been a long time coming to some folks, while other folks have understood it very well from the beginning of automobiling.

It sums up to this: A person who is inherently considerate of the rights and feelings of others, who is instinctively fair and courteous, who possesses a normal appreciation of the gift of life, will be courteous and considerate and careful behind the wheel of a motor car. A person who is selfish, who seeks personal advantage at the expense of his fellows, who cares nothing for any rights but his own and whose appreciation of existence is limited by its opportunities for outdoing somebody, will drive his automobile selfishly and recklessly and for a sensation of self glorification very much like the sensations sought by the dope fiend.

Then there are, of course, all the grades in between—as many classifications of drivers as there can be moral and psychological classifications of individuals.

But what to do with this realization—or about it?

Nothing could be more certain than that a considerable proportion of the holders of drivers' licenses are inherently unfit by temperament and character to drive automobiles on the roads. And any reasonable kind of an examining board would be able to spot a good many of these people at a glance of at most after five minutes of questioning. But the worst group shades off so gradually into the next worst group, and that one into the next, and so on, that presently we should find ourselves, in seeking to separate the sheep from the goats, dealing with people whom it would be impossible to classify—mental, moral and temperamental hybrids, so to speak, with some of the sheep and some of the goat in all of them—and these people, it is to be suspected, would prove to constitute the vast majority of all the drivers on the streets and highways.

Mr. Stoeckel has a vision of a time to come when, by sets of tests, it will be possible to determine whether this, that or the other individual is a fit person—outside of the mere technical ability to drive a car—to be granted a driver's license.

We haven't much hope that such a time will come. We do sincerely believe, however, that while it may never be possible to decide absolutely that a certain person is fit to drive a car, there would be no trouble whatever in identifying a great many persons as definitely unfit, if we went the right way about it.

Our belief is that instead of dealing so extensively in pseudo-scientific experimentation the best way to proceed is along the age old line of tests by laws. Put all the wrong things motorists are liable to do into a code of the forbidden. Those who obey the code will be those who are fit to drive cars, those who callously disobey them will be those who are not fit to drive cars. That is the only test we know of that is worth, or likely to be worth, a hoot.

Right now, if all the drivers who during the last five years have shown themselves, by that test, to be unfit to drive had been deprived of their licenses there would be a great many fewer bad drivers in Connecticut.

WE ASK A REASON

How much more valuable is the time of a person in an automobile than that of a person on foot? Is it necessarily any more valuable at all? Is there, in the fact that a person is sitting behind the wheel of a motor car in motion, the slightest scrap of evidence that the errand on which he is speeding is any more urgent than that of the person who is waiting to cross the street? Or that the business which awaits his arrival somewhere is of greater importance than that to which some other individual is proceeding on foot?

Why should there be any assumption, on the part of the motorist, that the pedestrian who has only thirty feet to go to reach the curb that constitutes his present destination should be compelled to wait while the motorist travels six or seven hundred feet—or take his life in his hand as an alternative?

A person undertaking to cross a street as wide as Manchester's Main street south of the Center, unless he is willing to take a more or less desperate chance with his life, is compelled over and over again to waste five or six times as much time waiting for a chance to negotiate the distance as he would consume in the passage itself, simply because automobile drivers refuse to slow down to a gait which would not cost them, after all, more than a tiny fraction of the time they compel the pedestrian to lose.

We should very much like to have some one—any one of these drivers who absolutely refuse to yield a fraction of their speed so that a pedestrian may cross the street in safety, explain the process by which he justifies his conduct in his own mind. Is it because he regards himself as more important than the unknown pedestrian, or is it his car to which he attributes that quality? We should really like to know.

AS TO DEBATES

Whether Lieutenant-Governor Rogers accepts Dean Cross' challenge to a joint debate on the issues of the campaign is a matter for the former to determine for himself. Whether, in case he should decline such a test, he is to be criticized for his declination, is a matter for the determination of the public and not for any particular group.

The capacity for public debate is a thing apart from either statesmanship or that simpler quality, a capacity for devoted public service. The best debater is the person who is best practiced in the business of talking on his feet. Some marvelous debaters are good for nothing at constructive action. Some of the ablest doers of deeds in all the world have been practically tongue-tied on the platform.

In other words, the issue of whether Dean Cross or Mr. Rogers is the better qualified to discuss political problems from a common platform has no more to do with the fitness of either for the governorship of this state than it has to do with his fitness for admission through the Pearly Gates.

And that question—whether Mr. Rogers or Dean Cross is the reader, more fluent and better practiced public talker—is the only one that could possibly be determined by the process suggested by the Democratic candidate.

If Mr. Rogers, convinced of the justice of the political cause he represents, decides to accept Dean Cross' challenge, it will evidence not only faith but courage. Frankly, in his place we should do no such thing. Not any more than we would consent to put the political issues of this campaign to the test of twirling a lariat in competition with Will Rogers or of doing eighteen holes against Bobby Jones.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 13.—Tammany Hall, mighty political stronghold of Democracy in Manhattan, finds itself in a spotlight which is somewhat diffused by flying specks of dirt.

A little matter of selling benches to judges had proved a three-month scandal heretofore, and there have been minor matters of disappearing jurists and wholesale chicanery. "The tiger" has been driven into a corner by one Charles M. Tuttle, Republican candidate for governor, who has made Tammany's outstanding issue of his campaign and who threatens many more explosions before the last vote is cast. He has had little trouble keeping the tremendous political machine on the front pages of New York, if not elsewhere.

Outside of New York—and in many sections of the island, for that matter—there is a vaguest sort of notion concerning what Tammany is and what it's all about. Many remember it because of a song popular in another generation.

To begin with, Tammany Hall is no glittering, ornate temple to political organization. The casual visitor might easily mistake it for the Odd Fellows' temple in his home town, or the neighborhood Y. M. C. A. building.

And those who have taken the trouble to follow its history can recall more than one scandal that broke heavily about its roof—probably the troublesome Tweed ring days back in the seventies.

But the immediate troubles are traced to the present domination of Tammany by district leaders. You will hear, without half listening, that these district leaders feel it to be quite within their province to appoint and nominate many of the judicial officers. It has traveled quite a distance, you will observe, from the Tammany Society which set forth to be a patriotic organization.

There are, according to the best statistics, some 35 district leaders scattered not quite that many assembly districts. The assembly district leader also is a member of Tammany's executive committee and, as such, a very important factor in the machinery. A district leader is, quite naturally, supposed to organize his division in a manner tending to draw out the maximum Democratic vote on an election day.

Now, as you travel through the various sections of Manhattan, you'll come upon a Tammany club house in each district and this, it is to all intents and purposes, the club house of the district leader. And this becomes the political center of a given zone. There is the usual machine job of canvassing homes and getting out a large registration and all the rest. There are, as usual, pawps in the forms of district captains and lieutenants and all the rest. It's really an extremely excellent bit of organization.

Time was, they say, when full power rested at the doorsteps of the highest Tammany chieftain, but the district bosses have not been unaware of their status and during the last 10 years, are said to have started running about without the restraining leash of the higher-ups. This was taken as a reward for services. The result, they tell you, is the scandal that adds a salacious chapter almost any morning. The free reign, given to the district chief, has gone to his head, if not his pocket, and patronage appears to have been bartered in half a dozen quarters at so much per appointment.

And while speaking of Tammany—it might be just as well for the rest of the nation to know that the former governor, Al Smith, however widely his name may have become known, is no longer a potent power in Tammany. His influence in the appointment of new leaders has amounted to very little for a couple of years.

Nor is the present Mayor Jimmy Walker smiled upon any too fondly by the "tiger's" keepers. No one in these parts believes for a moment that Walker can look to "the hall" for support—nor that he will do much as make an effort for re-election.

WASHINGTON LETTER
 By RODNER DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington.—Strange things have been happening in the election campaign, giving rise to such ordinarily freakish thoughts that a Republican governor can be elected in New York and that Democratic senators can be elected in Ohio and Illinois—with possibly a Democratic governor in Pennsylvania.

Perhaps none of these things will come to pass, but it takes such possibilities to pep up a campaign.

Widespread interest in the New York gubernatorial contest is due both to the part prohibition has been playing in politics up there and to the fact that if the Republican happen to win, the Democrats of the country will have to start looking for a 1932 presidential candidate with a grand free-for-all in prospect.

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt is standing for re-election, opposed by W. S. Denham, a former Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court. H. Tuttle of New York City, Tuttle is a strong candidate, anyway, and the recent disclosures of graft among Tammany leaders in New York have provided him with a neat issue because Tammany is such an important part of the New York Democracy.

He has come out for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, riding himself of the dismal drawback of being a dry or straddling candidate in a distinctly wet state. The big threat to Tuttle, one very likely to defeat him, is the plan of the dries to run an independent candidate who will cut into the upstate G. O. P. vote.

The Tammany Handicap Roosevelt, now regarded as a probable presidential nominee in 1932, finds himself at home with the fact that Tammany voters are a requisite for victory but that Tammany politics is his main handicap. He must take firm stand against Tammany corruption but still can't afford to get Tammany unduly incensed. As long as Tuttle is wet he can't depend on many wet Republican votes as he and Al Smith have in the past. He is fortunate, however, in the fact that voters seldom get excited about corruption and the odds seem to remain somewhat in his favor.

Everyone who has been out in the large cities of Ohio reports a feeling that Robert J. Bulkley, wet Democrat, will defeat Senator Roscoe McCulloch, the dry Republican. Republicans in those cities are often more wet than Republican.

Bulkley has been winning the straw votes. McCulloch apparently will have to depend on large majorities from the smaller communities, strongholds of the Anti-Saloon League. Despite the confidence of Democrats and wets in a Bulkley victory, however, it is well to remember the hard cold facts concerning the number of dry Republican votes in 1928 by a majority of more than 750,000 and that Senator Fess defeated his Democratic opponent that year by about 500,000.

Illinois Is Puzzle

Illinois went for Hoover by 450,000 votes. The strong Republican majority of about 275,000. The Illinois fight looks like a horse race, but Democrats here are even more confident of electing J. Ham Lewis over Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick than are electing Bulkley in Ohio. Mrs. McCormick's worst worry concerns the number of dry Republican votes the Anti-Saloon League can pull to its independent candidate, Mrs. Lottie O'Neill. Her next greatest concern is the question how many voters oppose the idea of having a woman senator and how many are opposed to Mrs. McCormick in particular.

In Washington, Mrs. McCormick has lost much sympathy because she employed detectives to shadow Chairman Nye of the Senate primary investigating committee and then boldly defied Nye to do something about it. Illinois voters, however, may regard her as just a spunky little gal from home who isn't letting a bunch of senatorial smart-alecks put anything over on her.

THE FATEFUL DIME

Pennsylvania gave Hoover 2,000,000 votes to Smith's 1,000,000 and in 1928 gave John S. Fisher 1,100,000 votes to his Democratic opponent's 865,000. In the face of such majorities and the state's well known rock-ribbed Republicanism it is almost impossible to imagine that Mr. Hemphill, the Democratic candidate, will be defeating Gifford Pinchot for the governorship. Nevertheless, the strong Republican Vare machine is said to be combining with the wets against Pinchot and there will be no such

WHY DYSPEPTICS ARE CRANKY

Often great financiers have indigestion or dyspepsia due to their concern over the ups and downs of the market, and even their office boys know they had better see how the boss is digesting his lunch before they ask for a raise.

By dyspepsia is meant the indigestion caused by the loss of the normal ability to digest food in comfort. On account of the nervous disturbance which indigestion often causes, the patient becomes easily irritated, depressed and sleepless. A confirmed dyspeptic is a confirmed crank because his digestive juices make him one.

Patients with digestive disorders often learn to dwell too much upon the state of their health until they become what are known as "hypochondriacs" which means that they pay too much attention to passing symptoms. But let the same patient change his habits of eating and living so that his food agrees with him and he becomes cheerful and has that well-fed, vital look, all as the result of getting his digestion adjusted.

There are many causes of indigestion, but you can readily see that the wrong habits of eating are responsible in most cases. Some common causes are: Eating bad food combinations, eating when tired or worried, eating too large a quantity of food, eating foods which are tainted or those hard to digest, such as greasy pastries or fried foods, irregular hours of eating, eating too rapidly, not chewing food sufficiently, drinking concentrated alcoholic beverages or drinking excessively with meals.

In acute attacks of indigestion, known as upset stomach or sour stomach, there may be considerable colic pain, fever, and even vomiting or diarrhea, but once the attack passes the patient fully recovers within a short time.

In chronic cases there may be headache, dizziness, burning of the vision, a tired feeling, heart burn, gas in the stomach and pain or just a general feeling of distress and heaviness. Temporary relief for those with chronic indigestion may

TELEPHONE TYPEWRITER HELPS CATCH CRIMINALS

Connecticut Now Surpasses All Other States in Efficiency in Relaying Information.

Hartford, Oct. 13.—Hijackers, escaped convicts, motor vehicle thieves and others who battle against law and order now find it more difficult than ever to evade capture in Connecticut, for the new telephone typewriter system linking the nine state police barracks was placed in operation recently under the supervision of Commissioner Robert T. Hurley of the state police.

Similar telephone typewriter equipment interconnects the police departments of fifteen cities in Connecticut, the Motor Vehicle Department, and the Springfield Police Department. The two systems are not interconnected by wire circuits, although arrangements have been made between Commissioner Hurley and Commissioner Robbins E. Stoeckel of the Motor Vehicle Department to broadcast news over both networks when desired, thus providing for dissemination of crime information.

Two telephone typewriters have been installed at the state police headquarters in Hartford. Both may transmit and receive messages and may be connected with any particular barrack or with all barracks through a central switchboard. The barracks at Canaan, Stafford Springs, and Danielson are on individual lines connecting with headquarters, while the barracks at Beacon Falls, Westport, and Ridgefield, also linked with Hartford, are on one circuit. The fifth circuit connects the barracks at Westbrook and Groton with headquarters. The machine in each barrack may be used to transmit or to receive messages. The Hartford barracks is also included in the state wide hook-up.

THEATERS

"Whoopie" is dazzling, daring and delightful entertainment. Two capacity audiences saw the opening performances at the State last night and howled themselves onto the verge of hysterics at the hilarious antics of Eddie Cantor who leads a brilliant cast through one and a half hours of this cynical comedy spectacle. The beautiful girls, the rib-splitting comedy from Eddie Cantor and his numerous assistants, the fast pace and the splendid technical photography go to make "Whoopie" the unusual picture it is.

The plot of the picture is an adaptation of Owen Davis' grand farce, "The Nervous Wreck," with its story of the imaginary invalid forced to be a hero in order to get the heroine out of trouble and married to the right man. Cantor's portrayal of Henry Williams, the invalid in question, is a classic comedy from one of the stage's greatest. The role of the heroine is played by Eleanor Hunt, one of the screen's latest discoveries, whose red-haired loveliness and appeal make her ideal for the part. Chief of the beauties who adorn the spectacle scenes is Dorothy Knapp, never more deserving of her stage title of the "most beautiful girl in the world." Chief Caulpolician's performance as the Indian lover who turns out to be a perfectly good white man in the end is excellent. In fact, not a single flaw can be picked out as far as selection of the cast is concerned.

The second of the series of football classics sponsored by Knute Rockne, a cartoon comedy and the latest screen news completes the program.

Ann Harding in "Holiday" will head the program for Wednesday and Thursday.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Adventure enters the life of Celia Mitchell, 17, when she learns the father she has supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore for a home in New York with her father, John Mitchell, and her aristocratic grandmother.
Margaret Rogers, her mother, divorced Mitchell and remarried and is now a widow. Barney Shields, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore Celia promises to be loyal to his love. She is lonely in her new home.
Mitchell asks Evelyn Parsons, beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons considers Celia a meal to be eaten. Mitchell's affection and greed, she invites the girl to her Long Island home for a week-end and there Celia meets Tod Jordan, fascinating but of dubious character.
Mrs. Parsons encourages the match. Celia, called Jordan coolly but is won by his romantic love making after he has rescued her from drowning.
Lisi Duncan, socially prominent, becomes Celia's loyal friend. At a charity bazaar a gypsy fortune teller reads Celia's palm and warns her of impending danger. Mitchell arranges an elaborate party in honor of Celia's 18th birthday and Mrs. Parsons assists in the plans. The evening of the party Celia gives her father message from her mother, but Mrs. Parsons destroys it before Mitchell has read it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXVII
Celia, holding the velvet wrap about her tightly, re-entered the drawing room. Her eyes were bright.
"Ready," she called. Jordan coolly Evelyn Parsons was standing with her back toward the girl. She toyed with a tiny enameled automatic lighter. At the sound of Celia's voice she slipped the lighter into her evening bag, then turning back she said, "I'm ready," Evelyn said. She wore a satin coat which matched her evening gown. Both were turquoise. Evelyn's softly waving hair gleamed like spun gold. Her satin slippers, which were the same bright shade as her gown, had high rhinestone heels that twinkled with every movement. About her throat was a chain from which hung a blazing diamond pendant, and on her arm were two diamond bracelets. No wonder John Mitchell could scarcely keep his eyes from her!
"Perhaps the jewels jugged his memory. He drew a small box from his coat pocket.
"Oh, Celia," he said, "I almost forgot!" He handed the object to her.
She took the box in her hand. It was a tiny white square.
"Open it!" the father urged.
Mrs. Parsons leaned forward curiously. Celia sprung the lid back. A perfect ruby flashed up at her. It was set in a ring band, a small diamond on either side.
"Oh!"
It was as much as Celia could utter. She stared at the dazzling stone, then at her father. Suddenly she turned toward her arms around him. She declared this was the most beautiful ring in the world, the loveliest birthday gift, that she never could thank him enough.
Mitchell looked pleased. He told Celia to put the ring on her finger. Was it the right size? Yes, exactly.
Neither of them noticed Mrs. Parsons. She had been trying very hard to look as though she shared the others' enthusiasm. Now she tapped one foot nervously.
"It's a most beautiful ring!" she said sweetly. "What a lucky girl you are, Celia, to have such a father—so generous and with such excellent taste! You're to be envied." She paused a moment and then added, "but we mustn't forget your guests."

Mitchell looked at his watch. "No, no! Time to be on our way. We'd better start at once."
They went out to the car where Thompson was waiting, and a moment later they were driving uptown.
Celia leaned back happily. "She felt this was the most exciting evening of her life. She had never visited a roof dining room. Visions of extravagant splendor presented themselves. The party was being given especially for her, and she was going to see Tod!"
She had talked to him that day over the telephone. Apparently he was miserable. It had been a week since they had met, and he accused her of treating him badly.
Celia, wrapped in her dreams, paid no attention to the conversation between her father and Mrs. Parsons. She was surprised when they reached the hotel.
An elevator whisked them upward and they stepped out on what was not a roof at all, but a handsomely furnished foyer. Celia and Mrs. Parsons left their wraps in a black and gold dressing room, then returned to welcome the guests.
The party was to include 18 couples. It had not been easy assembling a suitable guest list in early August with almost everyone away at resorts. Mrs. Parsons had culled her country club set of all the younger members. She was eager to show Mitchell how clever she was as a hostess.
Indeed she was succeeding. As soon as Lisi Duncan and one or two others had arrived to join Celia, her father stepped back and devoted himself to Mrs. Parsons.
Celia caught sight of Tod Jordan. He was making his way directly toward her. She managed to turn from the group so that his first greeting would be for her alone.
Why—she had almost forgotten how handsome he was!
"Ted!" She whispered his name softly.
"At last!"
There was only time for a quick, devastating exchange of glances, and Celia was surrounded by newcomers. Her cheeks and eyes were glowing. She smiled, shook hands, knew that she would never be able to remember all the names that were jumbled in her ears. All of the girls looked pretty in their bright-colored frocks. Kate Duncan passed by, a picture in deep rose tulle. Celia saw the youth called "Red" with whom she had danced at the club. Jimmie Webster was at her elbow demanding to know how it felt to be drowning.

A bowing head waiter, whose half-French, half-English sentences were unintelligible to Celia, led the way to their table.
Other diners turned to look at the young people. To Celia's surprise the "roof garden" was just like other dining rooms. The walls and ceiling were painted with modernistic splashes of color. There were wide open windows from ceiling to floor all about the room, revealing patches of dark sky, here and there studded with electric lights.
An orchestra, famous throughout the nation wherever radio is known, was playing a melodious fox trot.
Celia shot a quick, pleased glance toward Mrs. Parsons. She saw that Jordan was to be her righthand neighbor. The widow smiled back.
Jimmie Webster was on Celia's left. He was extremely curious about the swimming accident and demanded all the girl's attention for several minutes. At last she was able to turn to Jordan.
"Why haven't you let me come to see you?" he asked.
"Oh, Tod, I can't very well explain here. I do want you to come to see me. You see, isn't the game when I was with Mrs. Parsons?"
"No? What isn't the same?"
"I mean I can't do the things I want to here in town. My grandmother has such old-fashioned ideas. You see I'm still sort of 'on approval.'"
"Well, what are we to do?"
"I don't know!"
"What they were to do that evening was plain. Lisi Duncan was beside Webster, and she kept the entire end of the table laughing and singing at her first flying lesson. Celia and Jordan were obliged to postpone their conversation and join the group.
Later Celia had the first dance with Tod, but other partners claimed her immediately. She danced one waltz with her father, finding him a stiff but light-footed dancer. They circled the floor sedately and then he returned her to her seat and re-joined Mrs. Parsons.
Celia and Jordan, dancing with Kate Duncan and the fearful thought arose that if Kate intentionally "vamped" Lisi's admirers she might try to attract Tod. Kate looked so beautiful almost any man would fall readily victim to her charms. The thought was unbearable. Celia knew she could never hope to compete with Kate.
Feminine instinct sent her to the dressing room to add powder on her nose and a touch of lipstick to her lips. Celia had no need for rouge. Her cheeks had the glow of youth.
Then she caught sight of herself in a full-length mirror. The white dress was lovely! It made the most of her slenderness, possessed a sophisticated grace. She had never looked better. Reassured, she went back to the dancers.
She met Jordan at the door.
"I've been looking for you," he told the girl. "Want to dance?"
She slipped into his arms. They moved away in perfect rhythm. Dancing with Jordan, even on this crowded floor, was a breathless sensation. This was the moment she had been waiting for!
Her soloist, megaphone in hand, was crooning the words of the syncopated ballad. The tempo of the song was stirring, insistent.
They had half-circled the room and were in front of one of the French windows looking out on the night sky. The window opened out on a small balcony.

"Let's go out here," Jordan whispered. He took Celia's arm and led her out on the enclosure.
"The balcony was only a few feet wide. It ran back at either side of the window, and Jordan and the girl stepped into the shadowed space. They were far up over the street. Celia uttered a little cry at the spectacle before her.
The sky world was aglow with myriads of twinkling, dazzling lights. On a black velvet background—as a jeweler displays his wares—the crimson, gold and blue-white electrical displays beckoned. Others were gleaming coronets of sky-crashing towers. At intervals a gigantic beacon flashed its fiery radius across the darkness.
"Why—it's fairyland!" Celia murmured.
Jordan was not looking at the sky line. His eye had caught the gleaming ruby on the girl's hand. He lifted her hand, inspecting the ring.
"Father's birthday present," Celia explained. "Isn't it gorgeous?"
"Good stone," Jordan nodded approvingly. "Listen, Celia, let's get away from this noise. I want to talk to you."
"But I couldn't leave the party!" "Hang the party. Don't you care anything at all about me?"
"You know I do."
"Father wouldn't!"
Jordan turned agrieved eyes on her. "All I hear is 'father this' and 'grandmother that,' he said irritably. 'I didn't think you were that kind of a spoil-sport. Good Lord, Celia, are you bluffing? What are you trying to do to me anyhow?'"
For a minute he eyed her angrily. The color fled from Celia's face. She was frightened, but above all she felt Jordan's irresistible nearness. She couldn't have him misunderstand.
"I'll go," she said quickly. "Wait just a minute. I'll explain to Mrs. Parsons."
They returned to the dining room. Celia hurried across the floor to where Evelyn Parsons was the center of a group. She drew the older woman aside.
"Tod Jordan wants to take me home," she said. "Do you think it will be all right?"
Parsons smiled sweetly. "Why, of course," she said. "Run along."
Half an hour later the last of the birthday party guests were departing. Mitchell approached Mrs. Parsons. "Where's Celia?" he asked. "I can't find her."
Evelyn's blue eyes widened innocently.
"Why, John— isn't she here?"

SIX RUFFLES
A new velvet evening coat, of rich sapphire blue, has sleeves made of six circular ruffles, from shoulder line to wrist, all of them growing wider until the lowest one is very flaring. They all are lined with silver. The coat is lined with silver fox.
TWO-IN-ONE
New winter footgear makes a habit of using a couple of materials, fancy skin and plain or leather fabric. The one-sided trim is new and desirable.
AN AUTUMN MODE
Coat-dresses are the vogue for autumn and will serve later with a fur coat or jacket which matches the fur trimming which is one of the gown's chief distinctions.
FUR GOUDS
A bottle green suit of dull, deep-napped worsted, has low goring in its skirt and in its flaring hip-length jacket of lapin dyed to match.

Other current books that are worth your while include:
"The Creative Home" by Ivan Everett Deering, published by Doubleday, Doran at $1.50. Here is a highly sane and intelligent discussion of the rearing of children. It avoids the time-worn clichés usual to such books, and also dodges the tortuous labyrinth of the psychologists, and emerges as a book that any parent could read with pleasure and profit. It is, in fact, the best thing of its kind I have seen in a long time.
"John Mars, Pioneer" by George L. Lyman, published by Scribner's at $2.50. This tells the story of a Bay State college lad who went to Minnesota over a century ago, mingled with the Indians prior to Black Hawk's war and finally moved to California, living there over a decade before annexation and helping materially to bring the state into the union. It is a colorful bit of history and an absorbing portrait of a strange, self-contained pioneer.
"He Done Her Wrong," by Mill Gross, published by Doubleday, Doran at $2. This is perhaps the funniest book of the year. Gross tells in pictures, producing a magnificent burlesque and touching off some of the heartiest laughs I have had in many months. Don't miss it.
"Atolls of the Sun," by Frederick O'Brien, issued by the Century Company at $1.50. This is a re-issue of an old favorite, in which Mr. O'Brien does his best to make all dissatisfied Americans hop the first boat for the languorous South Seas.

An Amusing Tale of the Exploits of a Pagan
"The Great Gatsby" by Fulton Oursler, is a peculiar book. It tells of a lustrous, he-man of a street car motorman, who is a sort of twentieth century Casanova addicted to taking his fun where he finds it, and his adventures. He has an over-saintly wife who strives constantly and unavailingly to lead him to the baptismal font of an evangelical church, and a studious son whom he tries to bring up in his own image; and his adventures, which eventually bring him riches as an Atlantic City astrologer, make interesting and amusing reading.
Mr. Oursler, I think, has almost written a book of real significance. But it doesn't quite jell, for some reason. Jasper himself is clear-cut and believable, but the other characters never quite come to life. One simply fails to believe in them. They never step out of the page.
Jasper himself, however, is worth reading about. He is a whole-souled, zestful pagan, and this book about his adventures—issued by Covici-Friede at $2—will very likely have an extensive sale.

Adventure Under the Sea in the British Fleet
"By Guess—And By God"—is William Guy Carr's story of the deeds of the British submarines during the World War. Naturally, it is a tale of hair-raising adventures that leaves one marveling at the heroism of the men who dared do their fighting in those submerged man-traps.
The British submarines did not have the chance to distinguish themselves that the Germans had, but what chances they had they took, in full measure. Mr. Carr's tales of the operations at the Dardanelles are especially interesting.

It's the Sporting Thing for Early Autumn
The suede jacket adds feminine touches and takes a delectable color scheme, two tones of green, for fall's first cold days. This little leather jacket has trimmings of the lighter green suede and belt itself and its cuffs trimly. A yoke in lighter green and a turn-over collar is the same tone. A light green suede beret and tweed frock in the two greens make this a jaunty outfit for autumn sports.

What is the best thing to do when the baby breaks things?
The young mother with her first baby, and her wedding china, is confronted with this problem. For to her amazement he has no more regard for her Capo di Monte vase than he has of a ten cent piece. There it lies on the floor in pieces and when she tries to tell him that he is very, very naughty, he looks as disinterested as the park monument.
And to prove his callousness, the next day he selects the lovely little Dresden lamp and draws the glass to the graveyard and previous things destroyed by babies of all times.
About a year ago I saw a young mother slap her baby's hands unmercifully. She was so angry, as she said, she had told him and told him and he wouldn't mind.
When I suggested that she put her things out of reach, she replied furiously that she wouldn't do any such thing. That it was her house and he'd have to learn to live in it as it was.
This was her second child, a boy. The first one, a girl, was a docile, hideable little person who probably succumbed after a slap or two and the vases survived.
But there was a different problem—a very inquisitive, self-willed young male whose idea of beauty was as disgustingly latent as his notion of obedience.
Progressive Wreckage
The year wore on and other things followed the lamp and the vase to the graveyard. Gradually the elevation of the remaining bric-a-brac rose, things stood on mantels and piano that never had stood there before, and no Spanish shawls hung over edges with tempting fringes to yank.
That was what she should have done in the first place. The young Hun is not as much interested now in pottery as he was in those early days, he has a bigger world, is outdoors more and getting his reactions from such things as throwing his tricycle down the steps and squeezing the neighbor's cat to hear it yell.
One time in a school laboratory I mixed up a mess of chemicals and put the test tube over a Bunsen burner to get a certain precipitate.
"Bang!" The whole diabolical business exploded all over a new black dress, for I had neglected to put on my apron that day, and wherever it touched the dress turned a bright red. A little ammonium chloride spread on the spots restored the dress to normalcy, but that was just my good luck. I was experimenting with something I didn't know anything about, yet I had a right to experiment. A slap on the hands would have done me no good. If I had lost my sight even that could not have changed my divine right to extend my knowledge.
That I had put in one wrong ingredient did not affect the case either. We learn by making mistakes.
It is particularly true of young children. We cannot keep them from experimenting unless we put them in barrels and feed them through bungholes.
That should be obedient, but oh, that should! That is another sermon, dear brethren. Impulse, curiosity, so many things are stronger than that in the early years.

CAUSE OF PAINS IN BACK DIFFICULT TO DIAGNOSE
By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Pain in the back is one of the most distressing conditions that afflict the mankind. It is seldom due to any single cause, and the effort to find the exact cause and its cure is therefore a difficult one.
It must be remembered that the human being probably developed by an evolutionary process, walking originally on four feet and then standing erect, and that as a result he places stresses on parts of his anatomy not originally expected to carry these strains.
His age, his occupation, his weight, his health, as pointed out by Dr. J. T. Rugli, may all be of importance in explaining the reason for the pain which he or she may have in the back. The actual cause of the matter is that the woman past middle age is just as frequently a sufferer from pain in the back as the man who may have lived a harder life.
Obviously it is not possible to diagnose the reason for a pain in the back merely by asking questions of the patient. It is necessary to examine not only his back, but also the hips, the legs and the feet, and indeed the entire carriage of the patient.
In many instances the reason for the pain in the back is not in the back itself, but in some other portion of the anatomy. It is, therefore, necessary to examine the patient, standing, sitting and lying, and to test the movements of his limbs under various conditions.
It has long been recognized that a pain in the back may be due to infection of the appendix, to an infection in the prostate gland, to some disease of the intestines, or in women to diseases of the organs associated with childbirth. There are innumerable cases on record in which removal of an infected appendix or of a fibroid tumor in a woman has resulted in complete cessation of the pain in the back.

The housewife in search of appetizing new vegetable dishes to tempt the family palate will find a wealth of possibilities in kale, Kohlrabi, turnips, parsnips, beets, winter carrots, cabbage and onions.
These good cool weather vegetables possess certain dietary qualities which are most desirable and should not be overlooked. Kale very acceptably takes the place of spinach. Turnips and parsnips are valuable because they supply bulk, always a necessity in the diet, and some carbohydrates. These vegetables all supply some mineral matter and vitamins.
When cooking these vegetables, one should remember that their structure is very different from that of the succulent summer vegetable. Boiling water or intense oven heat are necessary to soften the woody fibers of turnips, parsnips and the like. They also must be quickly cooked in a generous amount of water. These precautions prevent them from becoming soggy and unappetizing both in taste and appearance. Add salt to root and tuber vegetables when they are about half cooked. These vegetables require more salt than the delicate summer vegetables.
Kohlrabi is delicious served in a mock Hollandaise sauce.
Turnips in pungent sauce are so very good that one would mistrust their usual origin.
Kale scalloped with bacon is nourishing and appetizing.
Baked beets are superior to ordinary boiled beets.
Carrot timbales served with white sauce make an excellent main dish for luncheon or supper.
Following are the recipes for two of these unusual vegetable dishes.
Turnips in Piquant Sauce
Three cups sliced turnips, 1 lemon, 2 hard cooked eggs, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 1/2 tablespoons flour, 1 1/2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/4 teaspoon paprika, few grains sugar.
Cook turnips in boiling water to which lemon juice has been added. Save 1 teaspoon lemon juice for sauce. Cook uncovered, and when tender drain. Mash yolks of eggs and blend with butter and flour. Add milk and cool and stir until thick and smooth. Add turp. cubes, seasoning and chopped whites of eggs. Heat for a few minutes. When ready to serve, stir in one teaspoon lemon juice.
Kale Scalloped with Bacon
Two cups cooked and chopped kale, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon each pepper and paprika, few gratings nutmeg, 1/4 cup minced onion, 4 slices breakfast bacon, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, 2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs.
Cut bacon in dice and cook until crisp. Drain and keep hot. Combine kale with butter, egg yolks, salt, pepper, paprika and nutmeg. Put half in a buttered baking dish. Cover with minced onion and bacon. Cover with remaining kale. Sprinkle

THE WHITE HOUSE
On October 13, 1872, the cornerstone of the White House, official residence of the president of the United States, in Washington, was laid.
The mansion was first occupied by President and Mrs. Adams in 1800. The first mistress has put on record the amount of discomfort she experienced during the single winter of her stay in Washington. Congress had appropriated $25,000 for furnishing the White House, but Mrs. Adams, nevertheless, had lots to complain about. No system of heat was provided; there was neither fire wood nor persons to cut it in the surrounding forest, and as the fireplaces were without grates, it was impossible to use coals.
Notwithstanding all this, Mrs. Adams wrote, "it is a beautiful spot, capable of every improvement, and the more I view it the more I am delighted with it."
The building was burned by the British in 1814 and rebuilt in 1818. In 1903 the pressure of space was relieved by the erection of executive offices in the grounds connected with the main building. The building today is a two-story white freestone edifice. It contains the private apartments of the president on the second floor and the reception rooms on the first floor.
Among the latter are the famous East Room, used for public receptions, and the Blue Room, used for diplomatic and social functions.

The young Hun is not as much interested now in pottery as he was in those early days, he has a bigger world, is outdoors more and getting his reactions from such things as throwing his tricycle down the steps and squeezing the neighbor's cat to hear it yell.
One time in a school laboratory I mixed up a mess of chemicals and put the test tube over a Bunsen burner to get a certain precipitate.
"Bang!" The whole diabolical business exploded all over a new black dress, for I had neglected to put on my apron that day, and wherever it touched the dress turned a bright red. A little ammonium chloride spread on the spots restored the dress to normalcy, but that was just my good luck. I was experimenting with something I didn't know anything about, yet I had a right to experiment. A slap on the hands would have done me no good. If I had lost my sight even that could not have changed my divine right to extend my knowledge.
That I had put in one wrong ingredient did not affect the case either. We learn by making mistakes.
It is particularly true of young children. We cannot keep them from experimenting unless we put them in barrels and feed them through bungholes.
That should be obedient, but oh, that should! That is another sermon, dear brethren. Impulse, curiosity, so many things are stronger than that in the early years.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The bunch walked 'round the mirror and then somebody said, "Let's take a hike back to Geneva and then get a good night's rest. Tomorrow is another day and there'll be lots of time to play. If we all want to feel in trim, I think this will be best." "You're right," replied the Travel Man. "We'll sleep real sound and then we can be on our ways to some new spot. We've seen plenty here. I think we ought to head for Spain. A visit there won't be in vain. Say, how about a nice train ride?" That made the Tinies cheer. Wee Scouty cried, "That's just the thing. Of walking we have had our fling and if we ride a train awhile, we'll want to walk again. It's really fun to switch around from in the air to on the ground. We'll take a train and then a plane, I like that, now and then." So, into town they promptly went and there a restful night was spent.

At early morn they started out to take a speeding train. The walk down to the station was a very pretty one because they made it sort of round about, right through a winding lane.

This lane ran through a valley where small houses stood up in the air and nearby flowed a tiny stream that glistened in the sun. Said one, "I'll bet the fishing's good. I'd like to try it, if we could." The Travel Man replied, "We haven't time. It can't be done."

They shortly reached the station and the train choo-chooed to beat the band. "It's ready now to start away. Let's run," was to start away. Let's run," was to start away. Let's run," was to start away.

Scouty roared. The others figured he was right and so they ran with all their might. Just as the train was pulling out, the Tinies hopped aboard.

ABOUT EGGS

We'd like to be able, for instance, to go on official aining board that had the power to ask questions of storekeepers and make their answers public—all this having to do with the definitions of words.

We'd like to be able, for instance, to go on official record as to what we mean when we talk about "strictly" fresh eggs.

We don't mean, by that term, eggs that are merely not completely stale. We don't mean eggs gathered in Iowa three weeks ago and that reached Manchester in a fairish state of preservation three or four days ago. We don't mean eggs picked up, two or three a day until a couple of dozen are gotten together and then brought into town—ranging all the way from a day to a fortnight old. We mean eggs that are so new that every particle of their delicate flavor is in them; eggs that the fustiest creature can eat with zest. In other words we mean STRICTLY FRESH eggs.

VANDALISM DELAYS
OPERATION OF PUMP

Big Rocks Are Dropped Into Main Street Septic Tank Last Night.

Some person or persons delayed the placing in operation of the suction pump at the Main street septic tank. This was to have been started this morning. The heavy cover of the tank was removed during last night and rocks, some weighing 200 pounds, were dropped into the contents of the tank. It will be necessary to remove the rocks before the suction pump can be operated efficiently. The fact that the tank was filled prevented the rocks from doing damage that would have been costly to the Eighth School and Utilities District.

The regular monthly meeting of the official board of the Nazarene church will take place tomorrow evening at 7:30.
