

EARLY VOTE HERE LIGHT; EXPECT 4,500

Women Figure Largely in Vote Before 2:30—Polls Close at 6 P. M.—Herald to Flash Complete Returns

Manchester wasn't in any rush to do its voting in the State election today, only 2,818 votes being polled at 2:30 this afternoon. Although this was considered light the last hour polling was expected to bring the total up to 4,500.

The women were figuring in the voting quite heavily, 1,125 of them having voted at 2:30. Both Republican and Democratic headquarters were showing considerable activity during the day and a substantial part of the vote was due to the telephone canvass being made.

The polls opened at six o'clock and in the first hour 238 had voted. These were largely party workers who were at the polls at that time and persons who work out of town and will not have an opportunity to vote later in the day.

Officials

Attorney William J. Shea is moderator of the election. Checkers at work are Samuel Nelson, Otto Sonnison, Otto Nelson, Edward Moriarty, Mrs. John Gleason, and Albert Behrend. Machine tenders are Thomas Sheridan, Thomas Harrington, Charles O'Connor, Thomas Teardor, James O'Connell, Patrick O'Connell, James Greenaway, Ennis Johnson and George Murdock.

The polls will close at six o'clock and Manchester's total will be available very shortly afterward. Since this town votes by machine the count can be quickly obtained. The Herald will flash the returns on a screen opposite its publishing office on Bissell street. Information will also be furnished by telephone. Dial 5121, 5122 or 5123.

BAY STATE FIGHT CONSIDERED CLOSE

Prohibition and Unemploy- ment the Issues—Is Any- body's Race, Say Leaders.

Boston, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Long lines of men and women passed through voting booths throughout the state today marking the ballots which will decide one of the closest and least predictable campaigns Massachusetts has seen in many years.

The echoes of campaign oratory were still in their ears as the people who have heard their wishes talked about so much for the past six weeks decided between the Republican and Democratic candidates. The Republican candidates, both previously expressed dry, avoided mention of prohibition, defended the Republican record on unemployment and assailed the Democrats for appealing to "forces of unrest" in an effort to make political capital out of human needs.

Congressional Fights

Besides the contests for major office, the people voted on 16 congressional fights. The closest contests were in the Second and Ninth Districts. In the Second District Congressman William J. Cranfield, Springfield, Democrat, was opposed by Joshua L. Brooks in a determined Republican effort to regain this traditionally G. O. P. seat. In the Ninth District it was the Republican incumbent, Charles L. Underhill of Somerville, who was threatened by Joseph J. Boraghi, Somerville Democrat. Republicans now hold 12 of the 16 Congressional seats.

The prohibition question also was presented to the voters in a referendum asking them whether or not they would repeal the State Prohibition Enforcement, voted on the statute books in 1924 by another referendum.

An unusual referendum was the question whether or not to forbid the use of steel traps in hunting fur bearing animals. Voters in the metropolitan district served by the Boston elevated had to decide whether it should be government owned, continued under public control, or returned to private management.

TREASURY BALANCE

Washington, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Treasury receipts for November 1 were $5,161,185.97; expenditures $6,396,765.92; balance $291,841,269.55.

BOLTON COUPLE GET INJUNCTION TO VOTE TODAY

Wittmanns Cast Ballots After Judge Edwin Dickinson's Order Restrains Officials From Dropping Names.

Under the protection of an injunction granted yesterday by Judge Edwin Dickinson of the Tolland County Superior Court, John Wittmann and his wife, Nellie, today cast their ballots in the biennial state election, thus defeating a long and strenuous fight made by the Democrats of the town to disfranchise them. The claim had been made that they were aliens who had never been naturalized.

Served Last Night

The injunction, restraining all election officials of the town of Bolton from removing the names of the Wittmanns from the voting list or from interfering with them in the exercise of the franchise was served last night on the selectmen, town clerk, registrars and other officials of the town by Constable Samuel R. Woodward.

The case has stirred up a lot of feeling in Bolton over a period of several weeks. Democratic workers, including Justice of the Peace Louis D. Eaton, claimed to have discovered some time ago that the Wittmanns had been illegally registered for several years and that Wittmann, at least had voted several times.

The matter was the subject of several meetings of the selectmen and finally the electors' board voted, three to one, to erase the names of both the Wittmanns from the list.

Local Attorney

The Wittmanns, backed by Republican friends, took the matter to Judge Raymond A. Johnson and Judge Johnson appealed to the Superior Court of Tolland County for the restraining order which was granted yesterday.

No trouble was experienced by the couple in serving the injunction except in the case of Selectman Eaton, who is Democratic candidate for Sheriff in today's election. The officer was told that Mr. Eaton was not at home but after a long vigil outside he came again at midnight and found that Mr. Eaton was home even to unexpected callers.

This morning, when the Wittmanns appeared at the polls their votes were challenged by Mrs. E. Selma Haley, Democratic candidate for representative but they were allowed to cast their ballots. Constable Woodward was at the polls ready to arrest any of election officials who violated the injunction.

EUROPE'S BUSINESS NOT OVERBRIGHT

Federal Reports Show Con- tinued Dullness Especially in Italy and Hungary.

Washington, Nov. 4.—(AP)—European business conditions were reviewed today by the Commerce Department in a summary of cable and radio reports received from all principal countries on that continent.

"Reports from European countries generally show continued dullness with a tendency toward further depression in most countries, especially in Italy where lack of confidence has caused further slackening of business and in Hungary where poor crops have been added to other unfavorable factors," the review said.

"In Norway, export industries have been affected by the world depression, but crop returns were favorable. In Czechoslovakia unemployment has reached the highest figure in six years. The slump in Egyptian foreign trade continues as a result of the unfavorable cotton market."

In England

"In the United Kingdom the depression does not seem to have been intensified and slightly better sentiment prevails in a few industries. Increase of unemployment in the Swiss machinery and textile industry has been offset by a seasonal gain in match manufacturing."

First Pictures of Wedding of King Boris And Former Princess Giovanna of Italy

SUSPEND DRY DIRECTOR FOR TREATING FRIENDS

James J. Donovan, New York Executive, Admits Sup- posed Friends Obtained Evidence Against Him.

"Boston, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The Boston Evening American today quotes James J. Donovan, New York prohibition director, whose home is in this city, as admitting he has been suspended for having given a drink to two supposed friends, whom he afterward discovered had been induced to help get evidence against him.

Donovan was chief aid to Maurice Campbell, prohibition administrator for New York, who resigned from the service last summer after declining to accept a transfer to Boston.

Donovan charged, the American said, that Campbell had been "forced out because he enforced the prohibition law in New York" and added, "It was only natural that his chief aid would soon follow in his footsteps."

Kept a Secret

The American said every effort had been made to keep Donovan's suspension a secret until after the election, but these efforts failed when it became known that he had been in this city since last Friday. Administrator Andrew McCampbell, who succeeded Campbell, finally admitted Donovan was through for the time being.

"There is no particular mystery in this affair and fortunately there are no scandalous charges which can be referred against me," Donovan said.

"The actual charge against me is taking a drink of liquor and giving a couple of drinks to two men whom I had always considered close personal friends and whom I have since learned were working for the high-roller in the department to get evidence that would sustain a charge against me."

"It all happened two months ago," the American quoted Donovan. "Since the middle of last July, Administrator Andrew McCampbell has been trying to have me ousted. I am certain, a Federal investigation in this affair and fortunately there are no scandalous charges which can be referred against me," Donovan said.

Borrows Liquor

"The two called at the office in New York. I invited them to my home to dinner. One of them asked if I was drinking anything and I said, 'no, not for nearly two years.' They both begged me for a drink and I had to go out to a neighbor's house and borrow a pint from which we each had two drinks."

"Since that night I was constantly trailed until I received the order of suspension on October 23. When I was asked about the incident at

HERALD TO TELL RICKENBACKER STORY

In a series of three exclusive articles, this newspaper will tell the thrilling story of Eddie Rickenbacker, America's "Ace of Aces" who shot down 26 enemy aircraft in France, who is to be decorated with the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Hoover on Nov. 6.

The adventures of the commanding officer and the greatest individual hero of America's famous "Hat-in-the-Ring" Squadron form a colorful chapter in American history. This story will be told beginning Thursday in the Manchester Evening Herald.

NATIONAL VOTE LIGHT EARLY SURVEYS SHOW

Board Refuses a Vote To Big Bill Thompson

Chicago, Nov. 4.—(AP)—What ever the outcome of today's voting, election day was disappointing to Mayor William Hale Thompson. He was disappointed by Illinois. Mayor Thompson had looked forward eagerly to casting his ballot for the partisans of his administration and for James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic Senatorial nominee, whose candidacy he has espoused in opposition to the Republican nominee, Ruth Hanna McCormick. Yesterday his first thought was to ask for an absentee ballot, and it was promised him.

Today, however, the election commission ruled the mayor was not an absentee being within the boundaries of the county, and therefore could not vote unless he went to the polls of his home precinct.

Mayor Thompson's condition was much improved today and the symptoms of peritonitis which appeared after an operation Friday for appendicitis had subsided.

Detective squads made several rush-calls to polling places on reports of disorder but nothing of a serious nature developed early in the day. Charles Hadesman, a police character, was reported threatening election workers in one precinct but upon arrival of the police squad, he had departed.

Approximately 324,972 persons cast their ballots in Chicago in the first three hours, the election commissioners estimated. This substantiated the early prediction that the Metropolitan vote would be around 900,000.

LIGHT VOTE IN STATE DURING EARLY HOURS

Little Excitement at Polls Up Till Noon Hour—Interest in Neighboring States

Whether it was due to apathy, the chill in the air or just the old excuse of putting off a task until the last minute, the voting in Connecticut in today's election was extremely light up till the noon hour. Town after town reported that the voters then cast was far behind that of two years ago. Incidents were very few and trifling. There was not the excitement, and the interest, which held sway two years ago and the reflex from high tide of enthusiasm of the Presidential election was noticed enough to make it the topic of comment in polling place.

Republican state headquarters was deserted during the morning as the staff, headed by State Chairman Roraback were out to cast their votes. In the Democratic state headquarters Chairman P. B. O'Sullivan appeared after doing his duty in his home town of Orange. He also found inquires many as to the turn out of the party vote. His opinion was that in the very light balloting the Democrats were suffering no more than their opponents. He also found inquires turned to any possible news from New York and Massachusetts in which elections there was a keen Connecticut interest, almost greater today than in Connecticut's outcome.

Tolson Interested

Congressman John Q. Tilson, majority leader in the national House not only voted early but he stayed in his polling place in Winchester avenue all day. At noon Mrs. Tilson carried lunch to him.

Dean Wilbur L. Cross cast his vote at nine o'clock in his home precinct which happened to be the same as that of Congressman John Q. Tilson, majority leader of the National House votes. The latter followed Mr. Cross some minutes later.

Lt.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers was placed shortly after six o'clock, having the jump on his Democratic opponent for the governorship although Dean Cross evened the score, it being presumed that each voted for himself.

The interest in the election was not keen in the morning hours. The rush of voters was expected to come in the later afternoon, especially in the places which use machines, which are 38 in number.

The preparations for announcing the vote tonight are quite extensive. Connecticut figures as collected by the Associated Press going on the air through member papers and by lantern for screen projection, with extra editions being used to spread the news.

Expect Total to Fall Far Below Record Set in Hoover- Smith Campaign—Shooting in South, Kidnaping in Missouri—New Ashford, Mass., First in Country to Report, Gives Republicans Overwhelming Majority.

By Associated Press.

The tangled political currents of another nation-wide campaign met at the polls today in an election which stirred popular interest to unaccustomed heights in some localities and left it drooping almost to listlessness in others.

Fair weather over nine-tenths of the country helped to swell attendance at the polls where the local contests had been waged for a governor, Senator, Representative in Congress or minor state office, but failed to produce an impressive turnout in the many districts having but nominal disputes to decide.

Associated Press dispatches indicated early in the day that the national total would fall far below the record set in the Hoover-Smith campaign of two years ago.

Spotty Response

Even in the states which have been swept by the severest political activity of the year, the response of the electors was spotty. Some sections of Massachusetts reported early voting which approached that of 1928. Other polling places in the same state found the early vote surprisingly small. Ohio and Indiana, two states which have seen particularly bitter campaigns, turned in varied reports; the former recorded long lines waiting at the polling places, and the latter only a normal off-year attendance.

Where local campaign enmities were bitterest, special precautions were taken against tampering, and the early hours produced few disorders. At Danville, Ky., a negro was fatally shot in an election quarrel, and at Buckner, Mo., two arrests followed the reported kidnaping of an election official.

New Ashford, Mass., which prides itself on voting its entire population earlier than any other election district in the country, came in with the first returns. Its vote showed a customary overwhelming Republican majority, but the margin from the total of two years ago, when the Democrats carried the state for President and Senator but lost the governorship to the Republicans.

Chicago, Detroit, and some other lake cities, where a heavy fog during the morning, in Philadelphia and southward along a portion of the Atlantic coast it was raining or threatening rain. Kansas, in the middle of the sunshine belt, furnished a surprise by turning out a vote heavier in some sections, than that of 1928.

By Associated Press.

In an election weighted with uncertainties, the nation is deciding today who shall sit in Congress and in the places of state and federal state capitals. A Democratic swing away from the great Republican majority of 1928 is conceded but its extent is so secluded even in the private reckonings of party leaders that only the returns themselves can tell the story.

Basing their campaign of attack on President Hoover's conduct of his administration in the business crisis, the Democrats are acknowledged by the Republican stalwarts to have menaced seriously Republican dominance in the House and reduced the Republican margin in the Senate. As a result, control of Senate and House, or both, by a Democratic-Independent coalition, was a possibility.

Prohibition, unrecognized by either party as a national issue, has all but monopolized the stage in many localities and any overtones will be scrutinized with extreme interest by wets and dries.

Not only are the possible fortunes of President Hoover in 1932 thus entangled with today's verdict at the polls, but the result is fraught with potentialities for other outstanding figures in American politics.

Among other things, the election will decide whether Franklin D. Roosevelt, groomed by his supporters for the presidency, will be elected Governor of New York or voted out of public life.

It will determine whether the time has come to confer the title of Senator by election on a woman, Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois. It will disclose whether Democratic Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky will be kept in his seat, because he bolted Al Smith.

Hartford, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The body of Dolores Gordon, strangled to death in a Bronx apartment Sunday night, was brought here today for burial.

Dewey Parker, a former Coast Guard at New London, was charged with the murder and is being held in New York. Parker, according to police, was discharged from the Coast Guard service several months ago for allowing a cargo of liquor to get through.

Denies Charges

Parker, who shared his apartment with the 28-year-old woman, denies the charge. Police have been unable to break down his story that he found the girl, her head enveloped in a bed spread, sprawled across the bed when he entered the place Sunday night.

New York detectives were here yesterday to question the woman's mother, Mrs. Agnes Rudis, and her daughter, Mrs. Beatrice Berchmann. Mrs. Rudis said Dolores met Parker in New London five years ago while the latter's husband, now dead, was in the Army.

 TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4,
 A RELIEF PLAN

In one way it speaks volumes for the general character of the town of Manchester that, with all the organization of relief work on a large scale going on about the country, nothing whatever has been done here or is in process of planning by way of providing employment on public works. In the first place it shows that unemployment is neither so general or so complete here as in many centers. In the second place it shows that the population of Manchester, as a whole, is a thrifty and forehanded one. There are relatively very few of the people who haven't something put away for the proverbial rainy day and who are not perfectly well able to finance themselves over a period of depleted income. All of which is a source of great comfort to the community as a whole.

THE NEXT CAMPAIGN
 Within a very few hours after this issue of The Herald leaves the press the votes will all be in and the result of the 1936 state and Congressional elections will be established, even though it may not be known for a number of hours more. It has been an unusual campaign, marked by more energy than is usual in a non-presidential year probably because of the combination of business depression and the growing fierceness of the prohibition question. Yet it has been, in all probability, little more than a skirmish preliminary to one of the most strenuous political battles in the history of the nation likely to be fought out in 1937.

Business is going to be better. We are at the extreme of the return swing of the pendulum. But there is very little chance indeed that there will be revival during the next two years on a sufficient scale to absorb all the industrial unemployment. That would be, necessarily, a return to the over-stimulated conditions of the half dozen years prior to 1929. If the country should manage, somehow or other, to negotiate such a comeback, it would only be to invite a repetition of the present collapse and world conditions seem to make it impossible anyhow.

It is in the case it is evident that we shall have, in this country, during the next two years a good many discontented people. Discontent breeds political activity. It is probable that we shall hear more of politics, in its more serious sense, in the near future, than we have experienced in this country for a long time. And even at this far distance it takes no magical second sight to see impending, in the next Presidential campaign, a great clashing of swords and flashing of spears, so to speak.

There are indications that make it not improbable that there may be in many parts of the country something in the way of new party alignments. Liberalism and conservatism are at odds within both the major parties. Prohibition stands in the way of unity in both. It is entirely possible that before another general election the American people may be taking their politics very seriously indeed. Even more seriously than football, golf and set-up prizefights. Those will be great days indeed.

MORROW
 Not forgetting the McCormick-Lewis senatorial contest in Illinois, perhaps the most picturesque of all; the Roosevelt-Tuttle battle in New York state and the curious situation in Massachusetts where the big parties each put up about the weakest possible candidate for the senatorship, probably the most interesting thing in today's election is the size of the majority to be received by Dwight W. Morrow, Republican candidate for the United States Senate in New Jersey. If the party had any other candidate than Mr. Morrow and the Democrats had nominated a real candidate there would be a serious question whether the G. O. P. man would get any majority at all. But with Morrow in the field it is only a question of how many tens of thousands he will beat his antagonist.

Issues count and organization counts but there are times when mitted themselves to become wildly excited over the politics of a country with which their connection is extremely remote.

This is only one example of the tendency with which people in this country, of various racial stocks, adhere to sentimental "homeland" associations which are largely imaginary. There are mighty few racial stocks in the world, tracing their origin to some particular spot on the earth's surface, which can be at all sure that that spot was, after all, the site of their origin. We think of this country, for instance, as the original home of the American Indian; yet nothing can be much more certain than that the red Indian came to this continent from Asia. Why shouldn't he, to keep up the fashion, have been sentimental about the Kamschatkan peninsula? Why shouldn't a red headed Irishman who is an American citizen be as willing to fight for Denmark, whence his ancestors anciently came as like as not, as for Wicklow? Why shouldn't a Neapolitan Italian in New York be as sturdy in upholding the glories of Phoenicia as of Italy's Southland? And so on.

We're all the issue of innumerable movings about and of successive "homelands." It would keep us good and busy trying to trace out the route by which we could return to shed tears over the days when our family tree sprouted in the Garden of Eden.

It's a pretty good scheme, when you are an American, naturalized or of seven or eight generations standing, just to be an American. That is an excellent starting point for any family in this country.

In one way it speaks volumes for the general character of the town of Manchester that, with all the organization of relief work on a large scale going on about the country, nothing whatever has been done here or is in process of planning by way of providing employment on public works.

Business is going to be better. We are at the extreme of the return swing of the pendulum. There are indications that make it not improbable that there may be in many parts of the country something in the way of new party alignments. Liberalism and conservatism are at odds within both the major parties.

MORROW
 Not forgetting the McCormick-Lewis senatorial contest in Illinois, perhaps the most picturesque of all; the Roosevelt-Tuttle battle in New York state and the curious situation in Massachusetts where the big parties each put up about the weakest possible candidate for the senatorship, probably the most interesting thing in today's election is the size of the majority to be received by Dwight W. Morrow, Republican candidate for the United States Senate in New Jersey.

Issues count and organization counts but there are times when they count little compared to the man. This is one of them.

WASHINGTON LETTER
 BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington—Aside from the political aspects of Mr. John J. Raskob's radio speech the other night, the most significant phase of the Democratic national chairman's utterance was that which found him lining up with Senator James Ell Watson of Indiana, the Senate's Republican floor leader, in favor of the five-day week.

The fact that a hard-headed capitalist and a politician who admits he is a hard-bolled "reactionary" should come together on this important question might seem to indicate that the proposal of a five-day working week for American workers need no longer be considered either radical or difficult of acceptance by industry.

Watson and Raskob each gave strong reasons for general adoption of the five-day week and each had a different reason, although primarily recommending it for the maintenance of property and full employment.

From upper windows strange and exotic music was making itself heard above the racket and clatter of the street. . . .

It is in the case it is evident that we shall have, in this country, during the next two years a good many discontented people. Discontent breeds political activity. It is probable that we shall hear more of politics, in its more serious sense, in the near future, than we have experienced in this country for a long time.

There are indications that make it not improbable that there may be in many parts of the country something in the way of new party alignments. Liberalism and conservatism are at odds within both the major parties.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH
 By Dr. FRANK MCCOY
 AUTHOR OF "THE FIRST LAW OF HEALTH"
 All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Lays, stored, and combined exercises must be outlined. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 80 words. Address: Dr. Frank McCoy, care of this paper.

DIET AND EXERCISES FOR HEART TROUBLES
 It does not matter very much what form of heart trouble is present. The dieting regimen seems to prove beneficial whether one has leaky valves, enlargement of the heart, dilatation, endocarditis, fatty heart, angina pectoris or rapid heart. I have seen thousands of presumably incurable cases recover by following a simple regimen.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (What Suggests Position?)
 Question: M. S. asks: "Is it better to sleep on the right side than the left, and why?"
 Answer: Most people naturally sleep on the right side, which keeps the heart from crowding the heart.

Stage and Film Stars Vie For Honors in "Up The River" Feature Attraction On Program That Includes Popular Merchants Gift Night

State and screen contribute equally to the cast of "Up The River," the unique comedy which portrays high jinks in jail. John Ford, who directed this hilarious offering for Fox Movietone, found that eight of his featured players were making their screen debut in the picture, while the other twelve have had both film and stage experience.

The two leading players, Spencer Tracy and Claire Luce never faced a camera prior to making their tests for the production. Tracy leaped to fame with his portrayal of Killer Mears in "The Last Mile" on Broadway, and Miss Luce played the female lead in "Barlesque" in London and "Scarlet Pages" in New York before turning her attention to the speaking screen.

On the other hand, Warren Hymer, Humphrey Bogart and William Collier, Sr., who have been "in pictures" before; Hymer in "Speak-easy," "The Lone Star Ranger," "Men Without Women," "Born Reckless" and other Fox Movietone films, Bogart in Victor McLaglen's latest, movietone and Collier in many offerings, both silent and talking, the latter including "Harmony At Home," "Happy Days" and "High Society Blues."

"Black and Blue," likewise are newcomers to the silver sheet as are Althea Henly, the Keating Sisters and Goodie Montgomery, while Sharon Lynn, George MacFarlane, Gaylord Pendleton, Noel Francis, Robert O'Connor, Dick Keene, Morgan Wallace, Johnnie Walker and Pat Somerset all have appeared on the screen in previous offerings.

The story, written by Maurine Watkins of "Chicago" fame, is a clever blend of hilarious mirth and romance, the two themes being contrasted throughout with unusual effect. Miss Luce and Bogart furnish the romantic element, while Tracy and Hymer as a pair of hard-boiled but good-hearted burglars spend most of their time breaking into and out of jail in order to keep the love affair running smoothly. It opens tomorrow at the State theater.

Moscow.—(AP.)—Moscow is preparing to build the first monument in Europe to the memory of Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, famous Arctic explorer and honorary member of the Moscow Soviet. Designs are being discussed.

WARDEN'S DAUGHTER MEMBER OF THE CAST

Joan Lawes, Known to Convicts As "Cherie" — Is But Eight Years Old.

Only eight years old, blue-eyed, brown-haired and freckled, she counts safe crackers, convicted murderers and eminent peccet stars among her most intimate friends. There you have Joan Lawes, nicknamed by her convict friends, "Cherie." Daughter of Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison, she was born within the walls of that penal institution, and up to three months ago had scarcely been outside of her home town of Ossining.

Then came the call, the great call from Hollywood, and "Cherie" boarded the train for the film capital, to enact her first and featured role in the Fox Movietone laugh riot, "Up The River."

She met the various players with whom she was to make her screen debut, namely, Spencer Tracy, Claire Luce, Warren Hymer, Humphrey Bogart, William Collier, Sr., to name but a few. She took her screen tests. And at last came the day when, against a background of hundreds of extras in convict garb she went through her first real scene.

Was little Joan excited? Not particularly. It looked too much like her familiar Sing Sing. "Well, what do you think of the set, Joan?" inquired Director John Ford, during this first day's work. "It looks just like home," came back the quick reply, "although that wall," pointing to a far corner of the lot, "isn't quite right; But that gate over there is just like the South Gate at home."

The settings were not the only reminders of home to little Joan. The part she enacts in "Up The River," is exactly the role she plays in real life, that of the warden's daughter who goes about spreading sunshine among the prisoners. The old difference is that at Sing Sing the prisoners are looked upon as being unfortunate, while in this hilarious movietone they consider themselves pretty lucky to be inmates of "good old Bensonata."

COLLEGE GRADS TAKE COURSE IN ROCKERY

"Friends tried and true, true to the pen at Bensonata," sing the leading characters in "Up The River," but while this is the "Alma Mater" of the "convicts," at the highly imaginary film institution, most of the singers can yodel their own college songs.

Spencer Tracy, who hails from Marquette University, and Warren Hymer, a Yale graduate, have the featured comedy leads, and Claire Luce and Humphrey Bogart, playing the romantic parts, are from Columbia and Andover respectively. George MacFarlane graduated from McGill, "Black" of "Black and Blue," from the University of Arkansas, Dick Keene from La Salle College, Gaylord Pendleton from Columbia and Johnny Walker from Fordham. Just to make it completely collegiate Director John Ford comes from the University of Maine and the author, Maurine Watkins, from Radcliffe and Yale.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The big bull fight arena was a very thrilling place because the people stood up on their feet, at times, and cheered real loud. The brave bullfighter that they saw filled every Tinymite with awe. "No wonder," shouted Clowny, "that this draws a great big crowd. "I think the fighter's very brave. He has but little time to save his body from the rushing bull. He's quick as he can be. Just notice how he jumps around when Mister Bull comes with a bound. "Twould be too bad, if he should slip. I'm glad it isn't me." Then Scouty said, "I wouldn't fear to try, the way it looks from here. I'll bet that I could get out of the bull's way, safe and sound." "Ha, ha," laughed Clowny. "Maybe so! And, also, maybe down you'd go. It wouldn't be so much fun to be sprawling on the ground." In several hours the fight was over. The English brought a boisterous roar and then the people left the stand. So did the Tinymites. Soon Cobby said, "Gee, as a rule, I like fights, but those fights seem cruel. As far as I'm concerned, I'll ne'er see any more bull fights." In walking, they came to some trees where music floated on the breeze. "What's that?" exclaimed on Tiny. And the Travel Man replied, "It is the gypsies at their dance. Come or, lads, we will take a chance that they won't mind us watching them. At least it can be tried." The Tinyites found them in a group. One gypsy let out quite a whoop and shouted, "Welcome, little tots. We'll show you something new. Just sit right down and you shall see that we can dance quite merrily!" And then they danced a dance that only gypsy folks can do. (The Tinymites meet some Spanish children in the next story.)
