An Old, Dreary Routine

We are about to enter again the oldest and dreariest cycle of the cold war—that cycle in which the political party out of power in this country attacks as appeasement the foreign policy of the party in power.

This behavior is craven, fussy, incoherent and, apparently, politically inevitable. Some of our very finest public servants have indulged in it, and have also been the victims of it.

In the first cycle, the Republicans went after Truman and Dean Acheson, accusing them of softness and appeasement.

When the Democrats came to power, they took a truce in Korea which was so soft Truman and Acheson had not dared touch it, they turned away from war in Indo-China, they unleashed Chiang Kai-shek out of some of his islands and back to Formosa, and they invited Khrushchev to this country. And by this time, the Democrats, often joined by Truman and Acheson themselves, were in full cry with the alarm that the Republicans were naive and soft on Communism.

Now the Democrats are in power again, and are in process of slinging a war over their heads. The Republicans also shun it. And now they are just beginning to reap the inevitable political reward, as Republican National Chairman Thurston Morton leads off with the charge that the peace that may be made in Laos will be one of softness and appeasement of Communism.

Perhaps, then, this is as good a time as any to state some of the rules and practices and techniques of this alternating game of who's being soft on the Communists.

The opposition, whichever party it happens to be, never howls very loudly while the administration is actually making its choice between peace and war. The opposition never advocates the choice of war. In fact, if war should come, it would have a tendency to label the administration in power as one which had gone looking for trouble.

While the decision is being made, the opposition party lies low, and strikes a note of national unity.

and went to Korea and took a truce his own Republicans would have attacked endlessly, had Truman dared take it. "We will not stand by and let Laos be absorbed," says Kennedy, as he prepares to attend an international feast at which Laos is to be served up, dripping with Russian dressing.

The tough talk keeps the opposition quiet, while the perhaps necessary deed is done. Then, when the crisis has been resolved and a species of peace obtained, the opposition finds its tongue and cries softness and appeasement.

It is the policy toward Communism we have had, that of the Truman and Acheson was assumed by the toughest, and in fact, did as much to promote and proclaim the cold war as anything Russia did or said.

Members were comparatively soft—couragously soft, we must say—because he recognized the impossibility of the over-riding necessity for peace.

Kennedy is trying to deal with the facts of world life as he inherits them, and has effort and taste is toward intelligence and civility, which will be neither tough nor soft, but aims at creating a climate for equal dealing between equals.

But whatever mood and whatever kind of effort it is in power, the opposition cry never changes. Anything short of war is soft and appeasement. We suspect the speech is becoming a little shop-worn.

The Dread Millennium Slowly, unwillingly, but inevitably, this country is being dragged toward what will have to be a hard and different and revolutionary kind of look at its employment problem.

The experience of each recent recession has been that the department has left stranded a higher number of unemployed than was considered normal previously.

Two or three years ago, we were willing to consider conditions "normal" if we had only 4,000,000 unemployed.

Now some experts are beginning to think that, even after the present recession has gone its way, we may be forced to consider 6,000,000 unemployed a normal condition.

Bailey Smooths Party's Position on Some Bills

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — The maximum speed limit bill discussed by the Democrats sets a top speed for passenger cars of 70 miles per hour during daylight hours and a limit of 60 miles per hour at night on limited access highways.

Bailey said a sum, possibly $500,000, would be set aside in the capital bonding program for a start on this proposal. He added that the state would expect to receive matching funds from the Federal government and from private concerns interested in such a project.

The Democrats will also bring out a bill authorizing a town of group of towns to take over bus lines if private concerns were unable to continue service, he said.

Bailey also noted that he had conferred with GOP State Chairman Edwin H. May Jr. about judgments. He would not elaborate on what agreement the two had reached, if any.

He also noted that he had conferred with Gov. John D. Dempsey's fiscal proposals "with a fine tooth comb" to see where cuts can be made and if suggested tax hikes can be "equalized."

Bailey said if the Republicans block the diversion they would have to find a way to replace the revenue for the general fund. He said he feared they might use an inflated revenue estimate to give the impression of a balanced budget.

Bailey said the Democrats would come out with some form of family court bill, but he did not state that it would be the domestic relations matter plan.

The Republican citing budget limitations, recently dropped their proposals for a family court this session.

The nuclear center proposal was first broached by Dempsey in his inaugural address to the legislature.

added that the Democrats were slow in putting their program before the legislature because of the change in the governorship earlier this year.

On the budget, Bailey said the GOP apparently did not realize that reduced taxes will mean reduced services.

The party leaders also differed on proposals to change representation in the General Assembly.

May said his party wants to put the state legislature on a footing similar to Congress.

Bailey, however, said the Republicans are interested in setting up "a vested interest in one chamber (the House)."

Bursacks' Passover Enriched by Visitors

Passover, the Jewish festival rich in symbolism, was doubly enriched this year for Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bursack, 88 Dale Rd., whose daughter and granddaughter came from Israel for a visit.

Mrs. Joseph Salant, better remembered by her friends as Man-cha, came from Israel for a visit. The Bursacks spent Passover last year with their daughter and family in Israel, and stayed for the Independence Day celebration last spring. They also went to see their young granddaughter, Aviel, one of their six grandchildren. Mrs. Salant and Aviel, now 15, decided to return the visit this Passover season.

The Bursacks' new home in Rockledge has been the scene of happy reunion gatherings for Mrs. Salant and her brother and sister, Jack Bursack, who lives with his parents; Mrs. Beatrice Snyder, Welleley Rd., and Mrs. Ruth Danbeck of Vernon. Mrs. Salant is also getting acquainted with nieces and nephews.

"I have to look for landmarks," the 35-year-old visitor exclaimed after her first week in Manchester. Rockledge, the site of her parents' new home, "is a part of town that was unknown to me," she said.

Mrs. Salant, who grew up near Hartford Rd. and McKel St., scarcely recognizes that neighborhood anymore. It used to be all wooded in that area, but now it's built up with apartments," she said.

Manchester High School is the most "impressive new landmark," according to the native who has returned.

After graduating from high school here, she attended Hillier College where she met her husband, Mrs. Salant also attended Marietta College at Marietta, Ohio. When her husband completed his studies at the New School of Social Research in New York City, he was eager to return to the new nation of Israel where he had lived as a boy.

Live in Haifa. The Salants live in Haifa, a seaport city built on a hill, and their home overlooks the sea. He is an economist with a private cooperative of industrialists, friends from Manchester. Saul Silverstein, corresponds regularly with Salant and also visited the Salants in Israel two years ago. Her brother, Jack Bursack, has also visited over three times. Mrs. Salant came to Manchester eight years ago for a visit of three months.

Israel today is more united and is assimilating many peoples and cultures, Mrs. Salant reported. For many of its new citizens, Israel is setting new high living standards, she added. Israeli schools provide

Navy Learning New Methods From Porpoise

Washington, April 7 (AP)—A plump porpoise named "Notty" has given Navy scientists ideas that could change their concepts of torpedo design, underwater sound detection, and antisubmarine warfare.

Recent theories on the porpoise's secret of speed are correct, Navy scientists said. "Notty" may have heated skin that can ripple, said an article in the current issue of Naval Research Review.

This is an official Navy publication reporting highlights of technical progress in research by Navy laboratories and contractors.

The article discussed observations on the 6-foot, 180-pound female porpoise as conducted by scientists of the Naval Ordnance Test Station, China Lake, Calif. "Notty" is a superbly intelligent animal, draws its breath as they bounce back as echoes, much like a sonar transmitter.

"It is believed that the porpoise has a greater sound range than the Navy's equipment," the report said.

"Notty is able to navigate while blindfolded," it said, doing this by sending out sound waves and listening for their reflection. "Notty" was trained to "speak" to wear plastic rings and rubber suction cups, to swim through hoops and around obstacles, to dash at full speed or come to a crash stop, the research publication said.

Plastic rings of known drag characteristics are used to make studies of propulsion and drag. One theory of the porpoise's speed is its control of its skin to reduce drag," the report said.

Around its nose, where there is a smooth water flow, the skin is nearly bloodless. But toward the tail, where turbulence and drag normally build up, the animal has a progressively increasing amount of blood vessels.

Scientists say this greater circulation toward the aft end could produce a smoother flow either through heat transfer to the water, or by wrinkling the skin.

The porpoise swims primarily with vertical movements of the tail musculature in a flat, horizontal attitude. The fins are used only as stabilizers. It also is capable of jumping 15 feet out of the water and going as deep as 1,000 feet.

One theory to explain this is that porpoises may be able to filter excess nitrogen out of their blood. It is known that these mammals can absorb enough oxygen to stay submerged for a long time.

"An explanation of all this," the research report said, "may lead to the development of techniques enabling men to dive deeper and to escape from submarines without long periods of decompression."

Sound detection is one of the Navy's biggest problems in antisubmarine warfare, and in this field, too, "Notty" is contributing to the Navy's knowledge.

"Last spring, the station commissioned Marmaduke of the Pacific at Palos Verdes, Calif., to catch and train a porpoise and "Notty" was the animal it caught."

It has been trained to "speak" to wear plastic rings and rubber suction cups, to swim through hoops and around obstacles, to dash at full speed or come to a crash stop, the research publication said.

Palmer Crowded After Round By Two Dangerous Pro Stars

Augusta, Ga., April 7 (AP)—Defending Champion Arnold Palmer, who had things mostly in his own way after last year's opening round, today was crowded by two dangerous new fellows, pro and a brassy amateur plunging into the second round of the 20th Masters Golf Tournament.

Palmer was tied for first at four-under-par 68 with exclusive Bob Roebuck, whose record 100-100 putt leveled a tough finish over rain-soaked Augusta National yesterday.

Just a stroke behind Palmer are Herb and Gene Sarason, who also included a hole-in-one putt yesterday.

Two strokes arrears was the much-maligned Charley Cook, who bagged a 70 playing with Palmer. Nicklaus, a runner-up in the 1960 U.S. Open, matched the Master's champion's closing hole-in-one.

Last year, when Palmer led every round to capture his second Masters title, he set an opening 67, two strokes better than the field.

After today's second round, Palmer was tied for first with Roebuck, who had a 68-70, and Gene Sarason, who had a 70-68. Palmer's 136 total score is 10 under par.

Four other broke Augusta National's par 72 in yesterday's persistent drizzle which failed to dampen the enthusiasm of more than 10,000 spectators.

They included two-time champion Byron Nelson, 49, the 1957 king Doug Ford, and two solid journeyman pros, Phil Hairy and Tommy Bolt, who came in at 71's.

Seven were knotted at 72, including amateur Charles Cook, last year's runner Ken Venturi, PGA champ Jay Hebert, Gene Lattier, Tommy Bolt, Stan Leonard and Billy Carper.

Among no more than 23 locked at 74 were three-time champion Sammy Snead and two-time winner Ben Hogan.

Lovellette in Harness For NBA Playoff Tilt

St. Louis, April 7 (AP)—The St. Louis Hawks today counted on the probable return of Clyde Lovellette back to the team and all to give them a much needed life against the unmatchable Bulls in the one semifinal match of the Eastern Division of the National Basketball Association title playoff resumes.

The Hawks' 4-2 record, which averaged 20.3 points against the Celtics during the regular season, will be available for duty here Saturday afternoon when the best-of-seven National Basketball Association title playoff resumes.

Lovellette, out of action since March 27 with a twisted back suffered in the semifinal playoff against the Lakers, has been working out at the Hawks' better condition since he returned.

Marilyn No Where to Be Found

"How's Marilyn Monroe?" This question I have been asked, by 40 of the first 50 men, and women, that I conversed with since my return from the sun-baked West Coast of Florida. I must admit that I don't know. All I know about the bleached M.M. is what I read in the papers. When informed last month that she had arrived in Florida, for a vacation and a chance to be nearer Joe DiMaggio, a special batting coach at the New York Yankees camp, I was sitting in the press box at Braves Field in Brantford, Vermont. I was pitching for the Braves against White Ford and the Yankees.

It's the second time in three years that Roebuck, a 29-year-old right-hander who came up in 1955, has been hit by shoulder miseries.
