Nike Zeus Backed by President

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—President Kennedy and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara have decided to ask Congress for money to start tooling up for production of the Nike Zeus antimissile missile.

Information sources said today that McNamara agreed on this at their conference in Hyannis Port, Mass., last week. They conferred on the new military budget to be submitted to Congress next month.

It was understood a recent string of test successes influenced the decision. It represents a victory for the Army in its long battle to get the missile killing system into production.

The Kennedy administration, and the Eisenhower administration before it, had refused to allow even a start on limited production of the controversial antimissile system pending additional tests.

Earlier this year, McNamara said Congress should decide whether to spread the money to whether the Nike Zeus system should ever be deployed.

Now, it has been learned, Kennedy and McNamara decided there is enough evidence of limited success to go ahead with limited production of long lead time items for the system.

The Army has contended that a start of production could cut from four to two years the expected time in which an antimissile defense could be deployed against a limited number of cities.

When the Army wants to start turning out the missiles, it is estimated that it would cost $1 billion to $1.5 billion to provide adequate protection for most major production and population centers and important military bases in the United States.

Dominican Walkouts Ineffective

Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, Dec. 2 (AP)—Dominican armed forces chief Gen. Pedro Rodriguez Echevarria, claims that Fidel Castro's regime is training an invasion force for an attack on this strike-riddled island nation less than 200 miles from Cuban shores.

Rodriguez Echevarria, No. 2 man in the government of President Joaquin Balaguer, told newsmen last night he had reports that between 1,800 and 2,000 Central American are undergoing invasion training at three camps in Cuba's Sierra Maestra Mountains, Castro's stronghold of revolution.

He charged that the violence-gripped nation since Tuesday may have been part of an overall plan to overthrow Balaguer's government. The strikes in this capital, show signs of losing their steam but Rodriguez Echevarria said military reinforcements have been shifted to northern Dominican cities in anticipation of a possible invasion.

The military leader said the armed forces have no plans at present to break up the Balaguer regime at this time. He said the "security of the state" is threatened by "another thing."

He implied that he felt a strike would be a natural death knell for the government. He said he was ready and keeping surveillance on the situation.

Castro returned to the capital with a family affair. Five members of the anti-Communist government, including Joseph Jr., longtime chairman of the Liberty Savings & Loan Association, the other, Benedict A., 45, was secretary-treasurer.

Jury Charges American Reds Soviet Agents

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Communist Party of the United States has been indicted for failing to register as an agent of the Soviet Union. Conviction could mean hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines.

The indictment was returned here yesterday by a federal grand jury at the request of the Justice Department. The 12-count charge accuses the party of failing to register by Nov. 20 as required by the Internal Security Act of 1950. The act was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year after a 10-year court battle between the party and the government.

In announcing the action, Attorney Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said the party apparently has been beating a hasty underground retreat from its participation in the indictment. Future indictments against party officers and party members also are possible. The law requires party officers to register by Nov. 30, which they did not do. Party members are supposed to register by Dec. 20.

If convicted, the Communist Party could be fined $10,000 for each day of non-registration. Party officials could be fined $10,000 a day and sentenced to five years in prison for each day. And if party members ignore the law, they could be subject to similar fines and prison sentences.

There are believed to be about 10,000 party members in the United States at the present time. There was no comment from Communist Party leaders.

The Justice Department said Attorney John J. Abt of New York and Joseph Forer of Washington would be served with the indictments. They represented the party during much of its attempt to have the Internal Security Act held unconstitutional.

Abt could not be reached for comment. Forer said at his home in Silver Spring, Md., "I was very upset."

Earlier in the day, four white men attacked Don Uhrbrock and Don Underwood of Life Magazine and Simmons Fentress of "Time" magazine. Uhrbrock suffered a swollen lip when the men shoved him through a plate glass window.

When the Freedom Riders arrived here yesterday, they found the terminal's restaurant closed but other sections of the one-story building open. Police stationed outside the building cautioned pedestrians to keep moving but made a few minutes' delay. That was a few minutes in the terminal's freedom riders left McComb.

Jiggle It The library board expressed hope Wednesday night that the expected three- to four-week closing of Mary Cheney Librar won't disgruntle citizens the way a half-day shutdown did some time ago.

The library will be closed soon after Christmas while final work on the addition is being done. A board member told a story about what happened the last time around.

A resident drove up and parked in front of the library, not realizing it was closed. A library board member who happened to be there at the time explained the situation and told the resident he could drop his books through the slot. As he walked away, the resident grumbled, "Do I get the nickel back that I put in the parking meter?"

Satisfaction Guaranteed A man buying a second hand car was afraid the oil consumption was high. He got permission to give it a test on a long trip.

He sent his wife on an errand to a city about 70 miles away and told her not to allow anyone to put oil into the car unless the level got dangerously low.

When she reached her destination, however, she had gotten the message garbled and someone convinced her the car needed a quart of oil.

She came back home and phoned her husband at work. When he heard about the unauthorized addition, he blew his stack. "You was a red 130 miles," he shouted. Take the car and drive and drive and don't come back until you've put about 200 miles on it.

"But I'm tired of driving," she protested.

He insisted. She sighed and phoned a friend to invite her to a long drive in the country—to the Berkshires and back.

The oil consumption wasn't too bad.

That's Show Biz Gone are the days of stagefright and backstage jitters before a performance, it appears. One person we know appeared in a concert last week. He was asked on the day of the performance how he felt and he replied: "Fine. We've got our encore all rehearsed."

Another person has been appearing in a play which has a three-day run. After the first night's performance, she said everything went fine, only she wishes somebody would start loud applause after curtain so the cast can take the four curtain calls it prepared for.

School! A party given by a liquor company in Springfield, Mass., last night was attended by a couple of Manchester people. The high point of the evening was when the guests were led into an adjoining room, where six filled snifter glasses were lined up at each place.

In the first glass was a water-colored liquid, labeled "One Day Old." The other glasses had deepening tones of liquid up to "Ten Years Old."

A representative of the company invited the guests to try each, explaining the contents as he went along. Some of the guests made faces when they tasted the first liquid. Others, in the interest of science, swallowed it without protest.

Gradually the experiment gathered speed.

Just when the guests reached the seven-year glass, a late guest from Hartford walked in, to the accompaniment of much pointing and calling out. A friend who had arrived earlier called to him, "Come sit over here. Ed, you've got seven years' drinking to catch up on in the next minute and a half!"

That 'Left Out' Feeling Two busy Manchester clubwomen, dining out recently, noticed a group at a nearby table. They called to an acquaintance of theirs who was with the group, and inquired as to what organization was holding a supper meeting.

Upon being told that it was a farewell party for a co-worker, one of the clubwomen looked relieved and said, "I just couldn't believe that there was one organization in Manchester that I was not a member of, or on the board of directors."

Toll Call? An old friend called a girl friend in Manchester the other day and began with this greeting: "How are you, in 25 words or less?"

Nativity Subject Of Miss Nielson

The Nativity as represented by Old World art was the subject of an illustrated lecture by Miss Katharine B. Nielson at a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday afternoon in the Federation Room at Center Congregational Church.

Miss Marion Washburn, president, introduced three new members of the club, bringing the membership to a total of 81. They are Miss Anna Sampson, Mrs. Fred Woodhouse and Mrs. George Waddell.

The president also welcomed members of the Junior Century Club of Manchester who were guests at the meeting. Mrs. Paul Marie St., treasurer, reported the Cosmopolitan Club has donated $10 each to the Manchester Public Health Nursing Association, Manchester Association for the Help of Retarded Children, and Manchester Auxiliary of Children's Services.

Miss Nielson, education director at the Wadsworth Atheneum, showed color slides of paintings depicting Christmas scenes and moods. The Flemish painter, Peter Bruegel, included in his painting of an inn scene in an Antwerp village a robed woman on a donkey approaching the inn. A Venetian painter, Giorgione, depicted the Nativity against a summer landscape in Venice.

Among the most colorful examples of Christmas art were manuscript pages from 14th and 15th century Italian and French choir books, and prayer books, illuminated with gold leaf, ornate designs and drawings around the Latin text.

Also shown were El Greco's painting of joyous adoration, a mosaic depicting the Madonna and child and wise men from an old church in Ravenna, a Botticelli painting in brilliant colors in which the wise men are portraits of the artist's family and which includes a self-portrait of the artist at the edge of a group, a Rembrandt painting of infant in cradle, and a Bellini of mother and sleeping child against a Venetian landscape.

Miss Nielson also showed a slide of a stained glass window of sapphire and ruby glass from a 12th century Chartres cathedral in France depicting Madonna and child. She concluded her presentation with a painting in which all the characters were children including angels and a girl Madonna by the German artist, Stephan Lochner.

Hitchcock gets last word.

Chills and Chuckles Formula of Hitchcock

By CHARLES J. LEAVY

Because "conventional chills up the spine bore me" Alfred Hitchcock created a new kind of image—an unholy mixture of chills and chuckles. Like many of the greatest creative artists, Hitchcock's approach may very well be far in advance of his contemporary audience. Hitchcock says that the most important task of a director is to keep his audience awake. "You've got to put something in those square frames to keep them looking." Well, the "proof of the pudding" is the fact that "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" is now in its seventh year on television.

Just count the myriad number of television shows that have come and gone during this time—westerns, adventures, private eyes, situation comedies and many of them with big name stars. Yet, "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" is still going strong. Why? Along with his unusual approach, it's the macabre mixture with the commonplace.

Certainly many viewers who are not familiar with his illustrious background would readily agree that this must be "some kind of a nut" the television industry is trying to foist on the unsuspecting.

Considering his unusual approach "violence in a familiar pleasant setting" and his unbelievable needling of the sponsor, the uninitiated viewer would be right. For if his stories are great shockers, his introductions to the commercials are "out of this world."

Standing between two stalwart athletes with the Olympic Stadium as a background, Hitchcock introduces the commercial. "These flatfooted Olympians will run the mile in one minute flat. Let's hope the sponsor can improve that time." And on another occasion, "The title of tonight's story is 'The Greatest Monster of Them All'—a most excellent cue for our sponsor."

This is the Hitchcock touch. Unusual, unbelievable, out-of-the-ordinary, unconventional but always with an appeal.

What is this appeal? A reporter once asked and "Hitch" replied, "The development of the technique is called 'The McGuffin'."

"But what is the McGuffin?"

In a serious tone Hitchcock replied. "The McGuffin is an apparatus for hunting lions in the Adirondacks."

"But there are no lions in the Adirondacks," the reporter advised. "Then there is no McGuffin," Hitchcock replied.

"McGuffin" or not there is a technique. Just as clear and indelible as the artist's stroke, each episode of "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" is marked with the Hitchcock technique—the unmistakable touch of the master.

Each story is premised on a "gimmick" or suspense building device, with the master himself setting the scene. Hitchcock is a firm believer in "the play's the thing," and he makes sure each story stars and features performers who are right for the part. If a star name fits the role then they will be used. If not, then the actor who best suits the role will portray the character. It is not uncommon for a top New York or London actor to be flown to Hollywood to play a role.

Nobody spends his "working day" quite like Alfred Hitchcock—wading through piles of murder stories in search of unique and different methods of doing away with his fellow man.

He never tires of the search for the bizarre murder. Maybe that's because he does his own searching ensconced in a big easy chair in his Beverly Hills home, reading story after story.

The fate of the tale is mirrored in his expressive face. If the story hasn't got it, Hitch's lower lip juts slowly forward until it's a full-fledged pout and he looks like a disappointed little boy. Then he discards the story.

If the story is Hitchcockian—macabre and humorous—Hitch still looks like a little boy, but there's a twinkle in his eyes and the lower lip slackens to a wry, pleased smile.

two important figures in the TV news field, got the definite feeling that TV is, itself, disappointed with its own record in covering news.

Mike Wallace came right out and said so, or words to that definite effect. Wallace now MC's a provocative syndicated news-feature-variety hour, PM East, designed for late-night viewing.

"TV hasn't covered news as it should," Wallace said. "The current type of newscast—the 12-minute newscast—is just too short. I had what I considered a fine newscast (on a local New York channel.) This was 30 minutes long. I think we did a fine job, but it wasn't successful."

"I think TV journalism should be personal journalism, corresponding to the newspaper column. I think TV journalism should include considerable editorial opinion, too."

David Brinkley, in his new Journal, appears to be capitalizing on the idea of personal journalism. Wallace mentioned. His ingratiating personality permeates his show, and makes it a kind of visual column.

Ted Yates is Brinkley's producer. (Oddly, he also worked with Wallace in the old, glory days of Wallace's tough interviews.)

Yates says he is hoping that the Brinkley show will invade what he calls "the no-man's-land of TV news—the area which is not quite big enough for a news special and not quite newsworthy enough for a spot news story."

Yates's object, he says, is to cover the news with photography which will be on a par with feature film photography.

"So far," he says, "I think that the writing of TV news shows has far exceeded the photography. There is no reason why the pictures can't tell the story themselves. We are all particularly proud of one of the Brinkley Journal shows in which David's narration took only about 40 seconds; the rest of the time, the pictures spoke for themselves."

Both these men, as you see, are stressing things other than the news itself in their approach to their programs. Whether it be Wallace's personal journalism and editorial opinion or Yates' pictorial quality and feature approach, the end result is a news program which is not really news at all. (Of course, David Brinkley's Journal does not call itself a news program to begin with.)

What has happened, then is that the bulk of the coverage of important news is being left to the press. There are exceptions—conventions and elections, major disasters, space ship launchings—where nothing but television can give the news-hungry public a ringside seat for history.

It is fascinating to watch TV develop. And this season's adventures in TV news coverage definitely appear to be a major turning point.

TV Notebook

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. New York—(NEA)—This season appears to mark a change in the way television is covering news. Such new programs as David Brinkley's Journal and Frank McGee's Here and Now, plus established offerings like CBS Reports and Close-Up, seem to indicate that TV is veering away from hard news and concentrating more on feature-news material.

The feeling seems to be that TV has challenged the newspapers and lost; except for a rare visual story, the press still offers the most complete news coverage. And so now TV is apparently challenging the news magazines, the picture news magazine and the opinion journal.

NBC Repeats Opera Classic

The 11th annual Christmas showing of Gian Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" will be presented by the NBC Opera Co. Sunday, Dec. 24 (NBC-TV, 4-5 p.m. EST). The opera classic was commissioned by NBC and given its world premier on Christmas Eve, 1951. It was presented also the following Easter by popular demand.

Menotti composed the music and wrote the libretto, as he does with all his operas. Two other operas have been composed by Menotti on commission of the National Broadcasting Co. "The Old Maid and the Thief" was written especially for radio, and "Maria Golovin" for television. The latter opera was presented first in a stage presentation by the NBC Opera Co. at the Brussels World Fair. Still another commission is outstanding, and it is expected that Menotti will have the opera ready for NBC presentation next season.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors" was an instantaneous success. It has been seen in literally thousands of presentations by small and large groups throughout the world. In this country hundreds of productions are given by churches and community groups as well as concert and operatic organizations each year.

The story concerns Amahl, a crippled boy, who lives in poverty with his mother. They are visited one night by the Three Kings who are searching for the "Child about to be born." Although they have no food they offer their pitiful hospitality to the visitors. Neighboring shepherds bring food for the Three Kings. When the visitors tell the mother of the Child they seek, she expresses sorrow that she has nothing to send as a gift. Amahl then offers his home-made wooden crutch, and he is miraculously cured of his lameness. Amahl follows the Three Kings on their journey to give his own thanks to the Child.

This presentation is a tape re-showing of the production of 1955. The familiar cast includes Rosemary Kuhlmann as the mother, Kirk Jordan as Amahl, Leon Lishner as King Balthasar, Andrew McKinley as King Caspar, David Aiken as King Melchior, and Francis Monachino as the page. Herbert Grossman conducts and Jean-Claude Schwartz is director. Sets were designed by Otis Riggs and costumes by Eugene Berman Samuel Chotzinoff is producer.

This will be the first presentation of the season of the NBC Opera Co. Other offerings in its 13th successive season will be a repeat color showing of "Don Giovanni" starring Leontyne Price and Cesare Siepi on Jan. 28; a new production of Montemazzi's "The Love of Three Kings" starring Phyllis Curtin and Giorgio Tozzi on Feb. 25, and a repeat showing of "Cavalleria Rusticana" starring Virginia Copeland and David Poley on a Sunday in March or April.

Mike Clifford, 18-year-old ballad-singing baritone who made his TV debut on the Ed Sullivan Show last June 11, will make his next appearance on the same program Dec. 3. Clifford made his nightclub debut recently at the Club Elegante, Brooklyn, as headliner. He has also been signed to sing at Blinn-Strub's, Boston, starting Dec. 11. A further indication of how rapidly Clifford is starting to "move" is that his recently-released record "When We Marry" and "Bombay," has received good reviews and is starting to "take off."

New Tune Show Debuts Dec. 4

"Yours for a Song," a tenuous game show with TV and Broadway musical comedy star Bert Parks as singing host, will make its bow as a Monday-through-Friday series on the ABC-TV Network's daytime program schedule beginning Monday, Dec. 4, 11:30-noon EST.

Also, in an unprecedented move by ABC-TV, "Yours for a Song" will be expanded to include Saturday evenings, 7:30-8 p.m. starting Jan. 20. This is the first time that a program has been scheduled both in prime time and daytime before it has premiered.

On the swift-paced songfest which invites the audience to join in the vocalizing, a pair of contestants match their knowledge of popular ballads, old and new. As the orchestra plays, lyrics of a favorite tune, with certain words omitted, flash on a special screen. The contestant, who sings along, is awarded $10 for each missing word he supplies. At the conclusion of every round, the participant who has won the most money meets a new challenger.

Yoga Practiced By Carole Wells

"I use Yoga as a beauty aid, for figure control and to ease tension, like most people use cold creams, diets and tranquilizers," revealed Carole Wells on the set of "National Velvet," on NBC-TV, Mondays (8-8:30 EST).

Carole, who plays Lori Martin's older sister in the weekly family series, became interested in the intricate system of physical culture three years ago when she attended a lecture in Hollywood by Dr. P. K. Anand, professor of physiology at the All-India Institute of Medical Sciences of New Delhi.

"Research scientists have proven that the basic principles of Yoga are true," Carole said, "and when practiced regularly, will result in a person gaining extraordinary physical and mental powers.

"My practice of the ancient science," she continued, "has enabled me to keep my weight under control, eliminated my adolescent skin problems and, more important, has enable me to memorize the scripts for the show more rapidly and more completely than before."

Carole performs her prescribed Yoga exercises for 15 minutes upon arising in the morning, again during the lunch hour and for 20 minutes before dinner.

You see a lot of Indians in the TV westerns but only a few are genuine. There are about a dozen real Indians working before the TV cameras steadily, all the other redskins you see cavorting on the home screens are products of the make-up department. Perhaps the busiest of the Indian actors is Iron Eyes Cody who is seen often on "Lawman" and on other sagebrush sagas.

When they name streets after you, you've really got it made. And that's just what happened to Chet Huntley and David Brinkley of the nightly NBC-TV Huntley-Brinkley Report. Huntley and Brinkley streets now intersect in a residential subdivision just outside the city limits of Atlanta, Ga. The way the news has been so grim these days let's hope they're not "cross walks."
