The rate of foul calls averaged 2.64 per minute for the 32-minute contest. Forty nine fouls were called against Northwestern, which lost the game, 60-58, and 36 against the winners. Burlington canned 26 of 51 free throws. The losers dropped in 24 of 48 tries. Both clubs, it is obvious by the figures, were away off in their field goal shooting. I can just picture the officials' dressing room after the battle. In walks a coach who says, "Ref, you missed one tonight!" That would be the understatement of the season.

York Giants are favored by a touchdown Sunday to beat the Cleveland Browns in New York's Yankee Stadium and win the National Football League's Eastern Conference championship on the final day of the regular season.

The oddsmakers have also established the Detroit Lions as a 2½-point favorite to best the Philadelphia Eagles, only team left which could still cause the Giants trouble in the title race, in their game at Detroit.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS EUGENE BREWER

In seeking to identify the New Testament church today descriptive marks are needed In organization it was congre gational, without a hierarchy The church was distinguished as Christ's "the church of the Lord" (Acts 20:28); "the king-dom of his dear Son" (Col. dom of his dear Son" (Col. 1:113); "churches of Christ" (Rom. 16:16); etc. It never wore a denominational name:

Members of the church were referred to as "saints," "disciples," "brethren." "children.
etc. But the one proper name they wore was "Christian."
Acts 11:26. Only in Christ's name is there salvation. Acts hame is there salvation. Acts 4:12. Paul persuaded men to be Christians only, Acts 26:2829—nothing more. Moreover, Peter declares that if we suffer as a "Christian" not to be ashamed but to glorify God "in this name." 1 Pet. 4:16 (ASV).
Paul condemned the wearing of other names than Christ's. her names than Cor. 1:10-13.

Yule Cheer Offered To Wandering Orphan

By PAUL GERARD

came on the television scene at a time when TV programming was heavily lopsided with Westerns.

any semblance of longevity at that time was unbelievable. Yet, last season "Bonansa" was piaced by all rating services among TV's top shows, and this season is still going strong while many other Wast ing strong while many other Westerns have gone.

The question uppermost in our mind while interviewing Lorne Greene, star of "Bonanza," was what was the reason for its great success.

"Bonanza is more than a Western," Lorne told us.

"In most Westerns the character rides into town, finds a problem and then rides out ruthless as ever. The true Western Folklore is not about people who were ruthless. It's about people who were build-

"This is what gives 'Bonanza' its lasting quality," Lorne went on. "All the stories attempt to relate the pioneer aspect of the Old West. In addition, the fatherson relationship strong in life has always been the best dramatical-ly. Basically, 'Bonanza' is a love affair between four men with the father image the predominant fac-tor. Finally, people can and want to be identified with the father image and with peaceful pursuits rather than violence."

Needless to say, Lorne is not a man of a few words. Throughout the interview, he unhesitatingly answered all our questions. It was a pleasure to listen to his resonant, mellifluous voice which was heard for many years on the CBC network when he was chief news

"Another thing that undoubted-

Having played Shakespearean roles at the Stratford, Canada's Skakespeare Festival, Greene is a great believer in the methods and technique of the "Bard of Avon."

"Many of Shakespeare's stories were weak, but all his characters were strong men of passion and emotion set against a wife background," Lorne continued.

In keeping with the format of close family ties, "Bonanza" is a natural for a Christmas show.

Having heard Lorne Greene's ex-

The fact that, of all TV networks, ABC is most frequently the butt of criticism, because it contains tains the highest proportion of Westerns and mysteries doesn't bother Thomas W. Moore, that network's vice-president in charge of TV programming.

"I feel," Moore says, "that pubic bodies and newspapermen al-ways are ahead of the general pub-lic in the matter of programming. And I think that is good—it keeps the networks striving to improve, which is what they're doing. I which is what they're doing. I think that that famous phrase, 'vast wasteland,' was chosen for its effect, And it is having its

Moore sees a trend toward fewer hour shows, and a resulting in-crease in half-hour shows. This, he explains, is largely necessitated for business reasons

"It's easier to program half-hour shows," he says. "Then, too, if an hour show is a bomb, it's a bad thing—it spoils one-third of a newwork's evening programming. The halfhour format lends liself better to situation comedies than to action-adventure stories, so I think we'll see more situation comedies next season."

Of ABC's current season."

comedies next season."

Of ABC's current season of programs, Moore says that Ben Casey appears to be the biggest hit, even though "Alcoa Premiere is the biggest with critica."
He also says that he is rooting hard for Bus Stop.

"Bus Stop is a new kind of show," he says. "It's almost an anthology and therefore good writers like to work for it. It's hard to get good writers to turn in scripts for 77 Sunset Strip and shows like that, which have so many continuing characters that they are confining for writers. So we are getting better writing on Bus Stop. That's why I hope it succeeds."

The series, based on the fabulousity successful 1944 Paramount movie which starred Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald, will go into production early in 1962 and is scheduled to go on the air next October in prime evening time.

The series, a dramatic show with strong comedy overtones, will tell the story of a Catholic priest in New York, in his relations with his parishioners and with a Protestant minister who is his friend

Hollywood— (NEA)—If the name Jackie Searle rings a bell in your movie memories, it is later than you have been admitting. If you find the name meaningless, you find the name meaningless, let us say that in movies of 30 years ago Jackie Searle was sort of a new-wave child star—the meanest kid on the screen.

Today, at 41 and almost baid, Jackie's still playing heavies, killers—he's the man behind the surers—he's the man behind the gus in Warner Bros.' forthcoming "The Couch"— dope peddlers and other assorted unsavory charac-

Actually, he's a successful Los Angeles business executive who acts in his spare time while his manufacturing plant runs itself.
"Once a ham, always a ham, you know," says he.
The name of Jackie Searle is easily remembered by those who were around in the 30s because it was the day of adorable kiddles in Hollywood. There was Jackie Coogan who wore his hair in hanga-like Edith Head, and Jackie Cooper, whose eyes squirted tears every time he pouted. They were followed by Freddie Bartholomew as lacy "Little Lord Fauntierey" and Shirley Temple as "Little Miss Marker."

Those were the kind of roles Jackie played.

When he was around, it was like a mobster moving into Robert Young's spare bedroom and turn-ing "Father Knows Best" into ing "Father Knows Dear old patient Bob would have ended up in the electric chair for beating him to death with junior's baseball bat. From the age of 10 to 19, Jackie

He averaged $6,000 a year for nine years of stardom, which wasn't bad for a kid in the depression days. He's happy to be before the cameras again but amused at a new generation of directors and casting offices giving him only heavy roles. "I once recall a script, identifying the role of a juvenile heavy as 'a Jackie Searle type.'
"I guess." he says, "I'm still the Jackie Searle type."

Bill McClure, director of opera-tions, Europe, for "CBS Reports," is the big man with camera and typewriter at his CBS News office in London, but at home he shares the laurels with wife, Jane. Al-though she is the mother of four, she is author of a published book, "Sandwiches Are Walting," several magazine short stories, and a play about modern Germany, "A Choice of Weapons."
