In a back room, radio reports of results were being introduced. Director Ted Powell, running for re-election, was moving around the room checking at the various telephones.

When the first call came, it was from the usually-Republican district 1. On three machines opened, all Democratic candidates were 10 to 15 ahead of their Republican opponents.

Holds Total Control Over Sigma 7 Craft

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)-Astronaut Walter M Schirra Jr. whirled above the earth on his fourth orbit today. Project Mercury officials at Cape Canaveral gave him a tentative "go" decision for six orbits. "Hallelujah!!!" Schirra exclaimed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)-Performing as if he were right at home in the weightless world of space, astronaut Walter M. Schirra Jr. completed two orbits of the earth today and described his flight as a "real, real thrill." He was in complete command of his Sigma 7 spacecraft as he passed over Cape Canaveral at 10:23 a.m. EST at the end the second orbit and swung into the third. There was all evidence that pilot and spacecraft were in condition to complete the full six-orbit mission

His exuberant description of the flight came in a discussion with astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., monitoring the flight at the Point Arguello, Calif., tracking station. "It's hard to describe things up here," Schirra told the man who had pioneered U.S. orbital flight earlier this year. Schirra said he had a delightful report to make to Glenn: "I, too, see fireflies." He referred to the luminous particles which Glenn saw outside his spacecraft each time he went through a sunrise. At the end of the first orbit, Schirra also Carpenter, on his flight last May, also saw the particles and was able to release more by pounding on the side of his capsule. This led scientists to believe that the fireflies-or snowflakes, as Carpenter called them-were pieces of frost breaking off the capsule and being illuminated by the rising sun.

As Schirra zipped above Capes Canaveral to begin his third orbit, he commenced drifting flight for the first time. He shut off all controls and electrical power and al-
