Taxes among lowest in nation

Under Governor John Dempsey, both industry and labor have prospered in Connecticut. Established industry is expanding. New industry is coming into the state.

INCOME HIGHEST IN THE NATION

In 1961, Connecticut's per family income was the highest of any state in the nation.

In 1961, Connecticut's taxes-based on income -were lower than any state except Delaware.

The Democratic administration has provided the people and the business community of this state with the services they want, while keeping the taxes for these services at a minimum. Among the things your taxes are paying for: Nation's finest highway system. Four times as much state aid to public schools. Nation's first job retraining program. Expanded programs in public health, in mental health, in care of the retarded and afflicted, and in humane social welfare programs,
