EXPORTING FLOWERS CAIRO (AP)—Egypt has decid-ed to expand its flower exports because of a quirk of nature that works to its advantage. When the flower season is over in Europe, flowers here are in full bloom. As a beginning, Egypt will ex-port 135 tons of different colored gladioli, 10 tons of roses and five tons of double tuberoses to sev-eral European firms, next season. The Agriculture Ministry is also planting 200 acres specially for the existing privately owned plan-tations.

Manchester Representative Had Difficulty Gaining Admittance to Conference on Unemployment, But Slipped Into Empty Chair at Banquet.

Representative Willard B. Rogers of Manchester evidently didn't have altogether clear sailing at the conference of governors, mayors and other officials that was held at the White House in Washington, two weeks ago, according to reports that have drifted back to Connecticut. His activity in overcoming obstacles in the way of gaining entrance to the conference and other functions was second only to his sprightliness in jumping to his feet to "second the motion.

Rogers Disappointed

It will be remembered that Mr. Rogers, at his own request. received cre-dentials from Governor Marcus H. Holcomb, merely to permit him to attend the conference, which was called by Secretary of Labor Wilson, Leo A. Korper having been the governor's personal representative there. Before leaving Connecticut, he endeavored to create the impression that he was to be the governor's personal representative. Others from Connecticut who attended the conference were Mayor Joseph F. Dutton of Bristol, Mayor John J. Treat of Stamford, Lieutenant Governor Clifford B. Wilson, as mayor of Bridgeport, H. S. Tallard, representing Mayor George A. Quigley of New Britain and Charles E. Julin, representing Mayor David E. Fitzgerald of New Haven. Rogers' difficulties began on the threshhold of the White House. He accompanied a part of the Connecticut delegation on the morning of Monday, March 3, when the various delegates reported to establish their right to attend the meeting at which President Wilson was to deliver an address. Extra precaution is always taken in admitting persons into the presence of the President. The different Connecticut men handed in their credentials and proceeded in turn into the executive mansion, until Rogers was reached. Apparently, there was some question about admitting him. because he was held up at the door, while the other Connecticut men continued into the conference room. Later, however, he bobbed up inside the building, all aglow at his success in securing ad-

Things went along smoothly enough until the delegates received personal invitations to attend a banquet that was to be given by the chamber of commerce Tuesday night at the Hotel Washington. Rogers merely looked on as the other-Connecticut men read their invitations. He had none and, although he asked the other delegates from this state to help him, they were not in a position to do so. However, he went over to the hotel and stood outside the banquet hall until all were seated. One delegate noticed that there was a vacant seat near the rear of the hall when the banquet began. When he looked again, it was occupied by

It is said that Rogers held the record for seconding motions made by governors and mayors from all parts of the country, who had definite ideas on the problems before the conference. Rogers never failed to hear the newspaper men when they whispered, "Who is it?"

"Rogers from Connecticut!" was a reply that rang out in the roomful of governors and mayors several times during the conference. It being known primarily as a "governors conference" and, and probably in view of the fact that Rogers said nothing about being from Manchester, the reporters assumed that he was the chief executive of the state. And so, it was not surprising that the "Washington Star" referred to him as,

The "Gentleman from Manchester," as he is recognized on the floor of the Connecticut House of Representatives, was seen to be hurriedly thumbing the pages of a Washington newspaper in a hotel lobby one morning. The curiosity of an observer was satisfied when he heard Rogers turn to the delegate sitting next to him and ask in a voice easily - audible: "Say, can you find anything in the paper about my seconding that

In rebuttal to the flyer, Links said this week that he "is proud of his entire voting record and especially of his 'no' vote on House Bill 2020" which the Democratic party claims was to aid rural com munities by increasing state aid to towns by granting up to $20 per pupil to defray bus transportation costs. Rep. Links said the bill did not provide any additional aid to small towns since at that time, towns un-der 6,000 population were already receiving the grant. It did, however, extend state aid to the cities "with an additional appropriation of $1,400,000 of which the small towns stood to gain not one penny," Links said.

Teen Center Opens Tomorrow

Three months ago, six interested atudents met and discussed the possibilities of opening a teen age ter. From this nucleus, the teencommittee has grown to more than 30 members, and the dream of having a teen center will become reality tomorrow night. Saturday night at 7 o'clock, the teen center doors will swing open to members. Anyone may accompany a card member and pay a iominal fee if he wishes to come. Tomorrow night's opening event will feature the "Offbeats" and many more guests.

The purpose of the center is to offer the town's teen-agers a place solely for them and operated by them-a place where they may congregate and enjoy the company of friends, play pool or table tennis listen to music, dance, or watch TV. Applicants must be at least 15 years old students at MHS or town residents. They mst have filled out a membership form to be eligible to buy a teen center membership card for a donation of $2. The Teen Committee will be selling cards at
