Board Okays 4 Sidewalks

Construction of four sidewalks near town schools will be started, and some of the costs will be assessed against abutting property owners, as the result of actions taken Tuesday night by the board of directors.

A public hearing preceded the directors' action, during which several property owners protest-ed the assessments, but several mothers of school children urged construction of the sidewalks. One walk, estimated at $3,100, will be on the south side of W. Middle Tpke, from the railroad tracks to Durant St. It will bene-fit children attending Waddell School.

Another will be on the north side of W. Middle Tpke, from Plaza Dr. to Greenwood Dr., to benefit St. Bartholomew's School, at a cost of $2,700.

A third sidewalk will be on Parker St. from 500 feet north of Lydail St. to Colonial Rd., to benefit children attending Hing Junior High School, at a cost of about $3,900.

Children benefiting from it will be students at Bowers School, Illing Junior High, and some Manchester High School students. Manchester High School students. Chester Langtry, deputy di-rector of public works, said Tuesday afternoon that he doubt-ed whether the sidewalks would be constructed this fall. Winter weather may interfere with such projects, he said, and if ice should form early in December, the walks would be hurt by sait.

In other actions the board ap-proved compensation schedules and personnel rules for municipal employes and officials, dated July 1, 1962. Accepted the annual town re port for 1961-62 and the unpublish

"These teen-agers ought to be beaught to save," Harl Schwulst says, "rather than learning how o spend before they have earned onything. I think merchants and merchants' associations ought to repudiate this sort of thing." Here is an excerpt from Schwulst's testimony before the ubcommittee:

Here is an excerpt from Schwuist's testimony before the subcommittee: Senator Proximire: "I just have one final question. You mentioned this teen-age credit and I hold is my hand a junior charge ac-count for young adults. It says on the reverse side: This is your jun-for charge account identification card which must be presented for all purchasing on your junior charge account". This is just one of a number of these I have seen. I am wondering what your views are on this kind of thing." Schwulst: "This is one of the newer developments in the consum-er credit field which I think is very unfortunate . . . savings banks and many commercial banks, for that matter, for years have been trying to encourage young people to learn the savings habit. We think it is very important for people, while they are very young, to learn to save a little of their allowances . . . or out of little sums that they may be able to earn. The thrift habit ought to be learned when people are young because we need capi-tal in this country and capital comes out of savings. "We have about 75,000 school accounts in our bank. These are children in schools that we en-courage to save a little money overy week and put it in the bank. We pay them interest on it. These balances usually are so small that it costs the bank money to handle these accounts but it is an impor-tant part of our work. And I un-derstand that in many of these cases, they do not require parents to endorse . .." Senator Proximire: "That is cor-sect. In this case, the parents have on knowledge of it." A magnaine aimed at teen-agers sponsors showings of teen fash-ions in New York City. At one of these recently, Bernice Fitz-Gib-bon, an advertising expert, spoke, the was addressing department swhat as said: "Everybody here knows by now that the teen-agers are loaded. I'm avant to be sure you're getting yours. Which is why I'm here. Ar-thur Koestler says that teen-agers are a 'generation without profile'. Fin not a deep-thinking Puiltner pies-winner but if you ask ma, teen-agers are a generation with profile and the profile is this: The dollar sign. "Teen-agers are interested in more than a poncho here and a cashmere there. Bays the Wall Street Journel in a roundup:

Says the Wall Street Journel in a roundup: "In San Francisco, teen-age dancers have progressed from the twist to a step called the mashed potato and are snapping up a rec-ord entitled 'Monster Mash.' Boys in Boston currently favor $20 wool sweaters with leather elbow patches. In Cleveland, mounting numbers of youngsters depart for school each 'morning with tran-sistor radios in their pockets, prompting one radio dealer to ob-serve: "This doesn't help teach-ers but it does help business.'" Adult cynicism toward teen-age spanding becomes somewhat more understandable when it is realized that parents, far from being able to mold their children, don't seem emble to discipling their own spend-ing. necticut entertains Rhode Island in a Dad's Day home finale. "We're both basically the same in offensive pattern," UConn Head Coach Bob Ingalls said yesterday at the weekly luncheon held at the Shoreham-Oaks Motor Hotel. "We use the regular wing T and anced lines. In fact getting our defense ready for this game has been easier than the past two weeks. There's not the multitude of formations to worry about. "Last week Boston University had more formations than we have plays," the coach said grimly, re-calling a disappointing 18-7 de-teat. While neither team will have a winning season, Saturday's game shapes up as a good one because of the long and rabid rivalry be-tween the neighboring state uni-
