amount, but that it should be authorized anyway by the committee to forestall charges that the United States was failing to live up to its commitment in Latin America.

Asked by Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D-N.J., if he was prepared to defend his $4 billion figure before the House Appropriations Committee, which must furnish the money, Clay replied: "We have only one figure. This is the one we have given you."

Chairman Thomas Morgan, D-C., came back to this point later and asked, "You feel that the rock-bottom figure to be authorized should be around $4.3 billion?"

"Yes, sir," Clay replied. "I just add that: if I were asked by the Appropriations Committee to interpret as cautious disapproval by Africans, the only member of the committee to dissent from my report, urged an expansion of the aid program. He appeared before the House Appropriations Committee at his own request."

Clay said, "We think much of the reduction, country by country, would be proportionate to the reduction in the whole program. This would mean a mean percentage cut across the board."

One of the Clay committee's recommendations was that most of the foreign aid be made to countries which should be the responsibility of the former colonial powers.

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, sharply criticized this idea Thursday. He said it would be interpreted as a callous disregard for Africans.

Holliman: Goal Getter

By ETHEL H. THOMPSON
"Cocktail!" the waitress asked Earl Holliman before the handsome actor settled down to answering some questions about his flourishing television, movie, stage and recording career.

He shook his head, decided instead on a "Mitch Guthrie" named for the character he portrays on NBC-TV's modern Western, "Wide Country," (Thursdays, 7:30 p.m.) and reeled off the recipe. Then it was the waitress' turn to shake her head as she walked away muttering quizzically "half buttermilk, half tomato juice and a squeeze of lemon?????"

Eventually the concoction arrived and Holliman, who's trying to outwit an ulcer, said it tasted fine, just fine.

Wearing his beautifully tailored clothes with nonchalance, he looked, in a city setting, as though he ought to be starring as a matinee idol in a drawing room comedy instead of as a rough-hewn "champion rodeo bum."

"You know," he said — which was practically reading my thoughts — "I like being Mitch. He's a real human being. In fact I'm sorry the season's shooting has ended. Repeats will be seen through the summer, though. I like, too," he went on, "the kind of mood the show inspires. A lot of compliments on the genuineness — but non-mawkish — devotion of the brothers with Mitch trying to see that Andy (played by Andrew Prine) gets to college and has a better life. One letter that touched me said, 'I wish my brother had treated me that way.'"

"Funny thing," he smiled, "but by now it almost seems to me that Andy is my brother. We work so well together that we can improvise changes in a script, picking up and following each other's meaning, even during shooting."

Earl never had a brother, but he does have a real-life story more dramatic than anything a fiction writer would dare put together. Orphaned at birth in Tennessee Swamp, La., he was adopted when he was a week old by Henry and Verna Holliman. He was so sick with jaundice there were grave doubts he'd live into a second week... but that persistence which has carried him so far must have been with him from the outset.

The father died when Earl was 28 and both he and his mother went to work waiting on tables. Then Earl heard of a better job and grabbed it; he worked days as a salesman in a magic store and weekends as a magician's assistant at neighboring army camp shows. It fitted in just right with the dream he'd been nurturing since the age of six (when he saw his first movie) to be an actor. After a few "magic" months, though, he decided it was high time to speed things up and hitch-hiked to Hollywood only to learn that neither he nor the film capitol were ready for each other and that starvation was unpleasant.

So he made his way back to Louisiana and got a job in the oil fields to finance himself through high school. How did it work out? Well, he became president of the senior class, won a letter in football, and played the lead in the school play. Also, he was a straight "A" student and was awarded a scholastic scholarship to Louisiana State University. He passed up the latter, though, and did a turn in the U.S. Navy, then headed again toward Hollywood and enrolled in the University of Southern California majoring in drama.

The second time around he caught the brass ring. He went from UCLA into The Pasadena Playhouse and from there into movies. He's made some twenty of them by now, including "Bridges of Toko-Ri" and "Summer and Smoke." His mother has moved to nearby Los Angeles and Earl has set up his bachelor quarters in Hollywood Hills—in a 15-room house that's accompanied by a badminton court and a swimming pool. His face just lights up when he talks about "home." The living room is large with a Spanish-style beamed ceiling and a balcony. "How high is the roof? Well, let's see; I had a 15-foot Christmas tree and there was still some room to spare..." However, he won't see much of it this season.

While "Wide Country" is set for re-runs, Earl has committed himself to a tight schedule of summer theater bookings (three additional ones have been offered him and if some of them can either start early or run later into the season he'll do them, too). He's also putting heart and soul into volunteer work (fund-raising films, radio tapes and just plain talking up the cause) for the Leukemia Society of America which has its headquarters in New York because "if any of us had it, we'd give everything for a cure, and the society is currently sponsoring 12 research projects."

He'd also like to "do a musical in the fall," and he has a record just coming out, "There'll Be No Tears Tonight." "Country-western with a nice full sound, good strings and seven backing voices" is the way he describes it. On the flip side it's "I Really Don't Want To Know," which he characterizes, with notable relish, as "wild."

"I'm not really a singer, though," he teased in with unexpected emphasis. Not a trained singer perhaps but a neophyte either, I found by asking, "When did you start to sing?" Seems it was way back when he was a youngster. "Every year they'd choose one boy from the school choir for the annual Festival of Music, and every year it was me." In the meantime if all the schedules can be worked out he'll do five different parts this summer, "Tender Trap" (co-starring with Anthony George), "Country Girl," "Music Man," "Pal Joey" and "12 Angry Men," at theaters in Skowhegan and Ogunquit in Maine, Dennis on Cape Cod, Ann Arbor Michigan and Fairfield, Iowa.

Earl Holliman (right), says that like the fans who write letters, he has begun to feel really like the protective older brother of Andrew Prine (left). In the role of Mitch Guthrie, he's dogged about seeing that Andy gets to college "and has a better life."

Does Earl ever take a vacation-type-vacation? Well yes, and he's very definite about it when he does. In 1960 he spent a whole year in Europe during which he learned Greek (his longest stay was in the Grecian islands), French and German. And he has a good reason for going back. He'd acquired a great batch of souvenirs for his house, packed them in his car and shipped the whole works. The car got here, the souvenirs got stolen... and in the meantime he's got thirteen rooms with vacant niches and mantles here and there.

Hollywood on TV

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — The family that stays together . . . gets rich!

The longest-playing family act in the history of show business—the ever-lovin', nonbattling Nelsons—has been renewed to start its 20th year, on ABC-TV next fall.

First a radio show and then on television, "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" (and Ricky and David) also can claim another record. They have never been without a sponsor.

As a series the show came "just naturally," based on family events in the Nelson household after Ozzie's retirement as a big time band leader (Harriet was his vocalist).

When the family saga started on radio back in 1944, Dave was eight and Ricky four. The series started with the boys and grew with them. At 26, Dave is now married. Ricky is 22 and about to be married.

The plots have taken Dave and Ricky from their frog-collecting days, through their teen-age "turmoil" and up to and including Dave's marriage.

"Sooner or later," Ozzie says, "everything new that happens to the boys shows up on our show."

Old Dad played it smart. The lives of his sons helped write the scripts, with just enough fiction tossed in that audiences seldom question what's real and "real."

At 15, Ricky was a tennis player of tournament caliber. He displayed his abilities in several of the television shows. Later he went for bullfighting and karate, and the scripts were written around these activities.

When Dave became a trapeze "catcher," Ricky became the "flier" for a show titled, "The Circus."

How some juniors would react to living in a glass house is questionable. But the Nelsons obviously don't mind. And any sudden pain can be allayed by peeks at their bank accounts.

As Ozzie keeps things in tune with the times, the television lives of the Nelsons can even anticipate the real.

Three years ago actress June Blair was cast in an episode as Dave's girl friend. After dating on the show, they played it for real and were married in June of

TV Personalities

Lawrence Spivak

Lawrence E. Spivak has spent all of his business life in the field of communications: Magazine publishing, book publishing and broadcasting. Years before he became known to millions as producer and panelist on "Meet the Press," he had won recognition for contributions as an editor and publisher.

Spivak is a native of New York City and a graduate of Harvard. He holds an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Wilberforce University. He entered the magazine field immediately after graduation and worked in a number of capacities on a wide variety of publications. He served as business manager of the magazine, Antiques; circulation director and assistant to the publisher of the National Sportsman and Hunting & Fishing magazines; business manager, editor and publisher of the American Mercury, and founder and publisher of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, Fantasy and Science Fiction and Mercury Books.

He came to The American Mercury as business manager when H. L. Mencken was its editor and remained after Mencken retired, becoming publisher, then editor. During the 10 years he ran the Mercury its crusades attracted international attention. One of his most controversial and significant editorial campaigns was the fight-for-air-power about which Senator Stuart Symington, first Secretary of Air, wrote, "Let me thank you for your consistent effort towards seeing that we obtain superior air power for the United States and the Free World. . . For this vision on your part the people should be eternally grateful." Mr. Spivak sold the Mercury in 1960.

A pioneer in American paperback books, Spivak's first 25-cent volume was on the stands almost two years before all others, and as a result of his successful experiments in newsstand distribution, the concept swept the publishing world and developed into a gigantic business. He convinced the Army during World War II that it should public special paperback books for troops overseas and produced the first series for them. Before the end of the war, the servicemen were getting 50,000,000 Armed Services Editions a year. The books proved to be a major morale builder.

"Meet the Press" was started as a radio promotion for the American Mercury in October 1945. It became a television program in November, 1947. Its success led Spivak to dispose of his publishing interests and devote himself entirely to broadcasting.

"Meet the Press" is today the oldest public service program on the air and is known and copied throughout the world. It has won the major awards in its field. Leaders in all walks of life have appeared in "Meet the Press" interviews—Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives—and have written in praise of the program and its producer.

President Kennedy, when a senator, wrote, "I know of no other radio or television program which has become such a firm and widely respected institution in American public life. Its success is due largely to your hard work and imaginative efforts and consistently outstanding performance."

Former President Hoover wrote, "Meet the Press" is a national institution. It exposes inward motives, outward shams and helps those who are striving for the good."

George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO, has said, "The fact that all guests, regardless of their political or economic persuasion, are subjected to the same type of searching and aggressive questioning is a tribute to your firm standards and good showmanship."

Former Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder commented, "It has been my observation that you have, with exceptional skill, been able to maintain an objective, searching and non-partisan approach in the preparation and conduct of the program."

Air Gladwyn Jobb, former British Ambassador to the United Nations, said, "I hasten to bring my small tribute to the Grand Inquisitor of America. . . In my view, 'Meet the Press' is a most valuable institution. Its evident determination to get at the truth, its short way with the stupid and pompous, its general briskness and freshness clearly place it among the best achievements of American journalism."

Spivak is married to the former Charlotte Ring, a psychologist. They divide their time between New York and Washington. Their son, Jonathan, is a reporter on the Wall Street Journal, specializing in science. He is married and has two children. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Spivak's daughter, Judith, died in December 1961. Before her marriage to William L. Frost, a lawyer, she was a reporter for The Washington Post. The Frosts spent seven years abroad where their two daughters were born. Frost served in diplomatic posts at Bonn, Salzburg and Belgrade.

A seven-year-old girl (Vicki Cos) is found unconscious in a park and brought to Blair Hospital, where early efforts to learn her identity and the reason for her condition fail, in "A Hand Held Out in Darkness," the NBC-TV "Dr. Kildare" drama Thursday, May 30 (8:30-9:30 p.m. EDT). Philip Abbott guest-stars as Dr. Key, a psychiatrist. Doug McClure, of NBC-TV's "The Virginian" color series, is one of the few "honest-to-god" cowpokes on TV. He worked as a Nevada cowboy during summer vacations in high school and college. When Walt Disney arrived in Hollywood, seven years after the first animated cartoons had made their appearance, he looked for a job as an actor. "I thought I was too late to enter the cartoon field," he recalls.

TV Notebook

By DON KLEINER (NEA) Beverly Garland, one of television's highest priced dramatic guest stars, is a strange girl. She says she's typed "and I love it." She always gets to play tough parts—disturbed women, tramps, psychopaths, weepers, screamers, shouters. "I love those parts," she says. "They've got red meat in them. I wouldn't want to play Timmy's Mommy on Lassie." Currently, she appears regularly on the charade game show, Stump the Stars, on which she manages to throw herself into the game as you'd expect—heart, soul and psyche. "I get a big kick out of the show," she says. "A few years ago, I did it for one night. And I was petrified. But now I love it. And it's strange how many actors can't play it." Stump the Stars keeps her busy between acting jobs. Although it sometimes seems that she's on every other show, she actually only made 12 appearances in 1962. But she has done many pilot films; in fact, she is considered something of a lucky charm because so many pilots she's appeared in have sold. "I've made 30 pilot films," she says, "and 28 have sold." Beverly and her husband live in a house populated with people who have animal names and animals which have people names. There's an 18-year-old daughter named Mouse, who is studying to be a dental technician, and there is a 15-year-old son named Smoky. Beverly calls her husband Bear and she calls her Casey, after the character she played in her own series Doocy. The family owns a pet rat named Charley. "He's a successor," she says, "to a rat who is now dead. We buried him and there's a plaque on his grave which reads, 'Here lies George: a rat.' Everybody thinks it's an agent."
