lanagership One, Two, Or Three?

The possibility that the present Charter Revision Commission has fallen into the policy trap of trying to weave a Charter Revision out of all the grievnces, some perhaps real, some perhaps imagined, which have arisen in Manchester since the manager-directors form of government was instituted here 17 years ago grows to seem a stronger possibility as one reads the explanations of its own policies the Commission has submitted to the Board of Directors.

One would like to pause, for a speculative moment, and consider what a raft of recommendations and changes, crisscrossing and confusing each other, the uiding spirits of this Charter Revision could have come up with if, in the past 17 years, Manchester had had a poor government, or a crooked government, or a government in which naked, unbashed politics has had more of a hand than it has had.

Thank goodness the Charter Revision Commission has no real fuel for its

But it has, even within the limits imposed upon it by the facts of Manchester life, done ambitiously well with its effort to translate shadowy or unstatable grievances into a series of actual Charter revision proposals.

It has, along with some of its more obvious emotions, intended to do a lot of good, and with some of its members this has been the only objective,

If it fails and that would seem to be he approaching verdict on its work unless, in a sudden genius of last-draft draftsmanship it achieves some conmistent relationship to principle-it will be primarily because it has somehow misinterpreted the spirit and intent of the original Manchester Charter, and because, in its zeal to be up and revising something with which it apparently never agreed in intent or in spirit, it has achieved the remarkable act of reaching for contradictory reasoning in the realm of principle in order to be able to leap from one specific revision to the next. Does the Charter Revision Commission wish, in one paragraph, to make sure the position of General Manager has no real prerogatives of any kind?

In such instance, it labels him "a paid ppointed town employee." However, when it wants to give this "paid appointed town employee" the power to appoint a director of public works it does so in recognition of "the ncreasingly complex and time consuming tasks the town manager must assume presently and in the future." . Next we find the "paid appointed town mployee" being promoted, in another context. Not only must he be denied any policy or appointive powers not deemed worthy of such a paid appointed mployee but he must also "be freed of sharter restrictions regarding specific iministrative duties. The town manager must be the chief coordinator and stimulator of work programs decided upon by the Board of Directors. The town manager should not be the chief doer because of antiquated and unrealistic charter provisions."

So far the "paid appointed town employee" has had his hands taken off apintments or policies politicians could make better, has been exhorted to be a "chief coordinator" and "stimulator" but warned not to be a "chief doer."

For a final version of what this Charter Revision Commission proclaims the role of the manager should be, one takes the next to the last paragraph in the memorandum concerning the proposed appointment of a town planner.

This paragraph reads as follows: With a growing number of citles moving toward the City Manager type of government, the Manager is fast bethe 'chief planner' of Municipal fairs, including physical development. The notion of a staff role for city plansing is built on the assumption that the cutive has central responsibility for sloping policy, for coordination, and for directing and supervising the Town's nental machinery through which ment plans are carried in effect." In this version, it is to be noted, the anager is promoted all the way up to Whether it is manager number one, two or three the Charter Revision Commission finally visualizes for Manchester we hesitate to judge. We suspect, how ever, that what it really meant, or what, at least, its draftsman for the day really meant, was the status and the sneer built into that first affectionate description, the "paid appointed town em-

But the issue before all the people of Manchester is not one of worrisome specific grievances or one of the way some personalities view each other, or even the way one political party or another happens to turn for its partisan exercise ; of the moment.

The issue is the managership as an nstitution, and it is an issue which ought to be decided out of experience and out of principle.

A Fractured World

That great anti-Communist dictator ship, Portugal, has just informed another great anti-Communist dictatorship, Spain, that it is on the verge of extending formal diplomatic recognition to Communist China.

This is the same nation from whom we obtain bases which are part of our own world-wide military set-up against the Communist half of the world.

It is the same nation which has its colonial troubles in Africa, and particularly in Angola, which has an indeendence movement to which Communist China keeps promising help.

It is also the same nation which, although a member of NATO, that association of North Atlantic democracies and believers in freedom, so resented India's seizure by force of Goa, the small enclave the Portuguese conquered in India centuries ago, that it cheered Communist China's attack across the borders of India in the fall of 1962.

And it is also the same nation which still retains, inside the easy reach of Communist China, another Asian enclave, that on the island of Macao, opposite the somewhat similar British enclave of Hong Kong.

Relations between the Portuguese on Macao and the Communist Chinese on the nearby mainland have somehow remained cordial all these years.

What confusing lessons may be drawn from this assemblage of facts are obviously not for simple folk to conder. Unless we do venture to decide that, more and more, it is getting to be a fractured world.

More Flood Than Thaw?

A big rain in mid-winter, coming with snow on the ground and departing with all snow melted down, raises two kinds of anxiety.

One brand of anxiety, soon disposed of because it is, after all, purely in the realm of the imaginative might-haveeen, looks back at the rain and calculates what it might have amounted to, had it come down as snow.

So if, today, we want to worry about what might have been, we can calculate that we might have had, by this afternoon, by far the deepest snow of the winter, something close to two feet perhaps, with a certain blocking of roads, traffic, and normal living.

The moment we dismiss that theoretical worry, perhaps with a brief flash of thankfulness, we begin worrying over whether it might not have been better to have all this come down in the form of snow, after all.

We begin worrying this way as we see rooks over their banks, rivers rising, streets flooding, cellars dampening, and as we begin to wonder just how much snow is being melted, with fresh rain being added to it, up in some of the hills where mid-winter floods might be born.

The weather we all woke up to this norning was not the weather of January thaw, such as came earlier and on schedule in the month, but the weather of winter flood. The sooner it clears, not only here, but north, the better. And the best weather news of the night would be little freezing, to slow run-offs down.

Rip Out The Sore

The Board of Representatives deserves se gratitude of Stamford citizens for its action in confirming the Urban Re-development Project appropriation. The action was not lightly taken. One memper of the Fiscal Committee has long ophically opposed to the con cept of federal urban redevelopment. Her vote allowing the appropriation to come to the floor at the Board meeting shows her basic respect for fair play. There is credit enough, in an affair of this sort, to go around. Republican leadership both on the part of the may-or and with the Board of Representa-tives was spectacular. The two-thirds vote on the part of the Democrats was due to hard work by party leaders with-in and without the board. Both par-ties worked to fulfill their pledges Leades worked to fulfill their pledges. Leaders did their duty. There is no doubt that this action There is no doubt that this action goes far to change the face of Stam-ford. The center of the community has reached a high point of decay. John Steinbeck in his recent travels through America found this common to many cities. He eloquently describes the condition. "When a city begins to grow and spread outward, from the edges, the center which was once its glory is in a sense abandoned to time...

edges, the center which was once its glory is in a sense abandoned to time., Nearly every city I know has such a dying mother of violence and despair where at night the brightness of the street lamps is sucked away and police-men walk in pairs. And then one day perhaps the city returns and rips out the sore and builds a monument to its past " ore and builds a monument to its past." The action of the Board of Represent-tives marks the return of Stamford to its historic center. It can now be-gin to rip "out the sore" which has in-fected the heart of the community.--

"They said to him, 'Lord, let our eyes be opened."-Read: Matt. 20:20-33. Physical blndiness is a seri-

There is another type of blindness more common than physical blindness. It is the in ability to see reality. A man stock may have eyes to see physical beauty, yet if that is all he sees he is blind to the fact that he f a creature of God, a soul f whom Christ died. We may see a child and still be indifferent and blind to the potential in that child so much that is of God to which we are blind. Only Jesus can cure such blindness. All of us need to pray, "Open our eyes." As Jesus said, we have eyes but see not. In Ephesians, St. Pau prays that they might have eyes of understanding and enightenment. This needs to be our personal prayer, for without the enlightenment of the Spir life is dull and void. So many o us in the Church are blind t the vast opportunities Chris has set before us. We lack vision and much work suffers for our lack of sight to see reality. Pastor Paul C. Kaiser, Concordia Lutheran Church.

Several times during debate on the Republican State Con-vention's change in the party rules there came, from people supporting the rules changes the healthy admission that n formula for party organization or party operation could in it-self produce the magic of a victory at the polls. That has always been true. And it was effective oratorical strategy on the part of those backing reform to admit it, an thus frame their own real an reasoned case for the reformation a light at once more modest and more effective. At the end of all the reasone positive argument for th changes there came a kind on rude clincher which invited th delegates to imagine for them selves what would be the pen alty reaction if they should pro ceed to reject the changes which had been proposed. The two factors-the reason ableness of the modernization proposals themselves -- and the imagined public penalty i turning them down after all these months of labor over them - operated to produc convention success for the r form program. In the end, no body had as much to loss from passing the reforms as the whole party image had to los from not passing them. So, as far as one can judge it was a happy, beneficial end ing for the party, and for the party leadership which, assisted in the end by a party truce which kept these rules change out of the ever-bubbling party factionalism, had originally con ceived this kind of effort. And, although no formula of party organization or operation could possibly produce the miracle of an election victory as could arrival of some unbeat

M.D. Writism for Newspaper Enterprise Asen. Q-A couple of weeks ago I noticed that I have hardly any feeling on the tops of my great toes. Is this a sign of leprosy? A-Since this type of mumb-ness can occur as a result of a disturbance in the nerve fibers in the toes or anywhere in the nervous pathway through the spinal cord to and including the brain, you should have a nerve specialist examine you and de-termine the cause. Leprosy is specialist examine you and de-termine the cause. Leprosy is only one possibility. It is impor-tant to remember that early leprosy can now be treated and cured without confinement in a leper colony. Q-Does allergy over cause dark circles under the cycs? A-According to Dr. M. B. Marks of Miami Beach, Fla., many persons, especially chil-dren with allergic rhinitis, have dark circles under their eyes. Dr. Marks calls them "allergic shiners."
