With All-Electric School

The facts behind the decision-dam Neck As CL&P was comtartly perfect that an all electric elementary school in South Windsor was presented to an audience of about 45 at a public hearing. The meeting was conducted by Waiter O. Joensuu, chairman of the public building commission. Attending were Robert wonDolhen, architects of the efficient proposed and vonDohlen, architects of the electrical family control and the proposed all-electric school. The price of the fuel wonDohlen, architects of the electrical presented by the water proposed of the electrical proposed and the proposed and the proposed and the proposed all-electric school. The price of the fuel wonDohlen, architects of the electrical proposed and prop built on the Grenier property; William Donovan of the engimeering firm Koton and Dono-van; and W. Lindsay Booth, Northern Division Manager of the Connecticut Light and Pow-Joensuu said that the commission had studied its facts carefully, discussed the pros and cons of electrical heating as opposed to any other kind of heating for the proposed school, and based its decision on sound facts. He said South Windsor would be pioneers in the use of electric heat for a school in onnecticut, but not in the coun VonDohlen said that as archi tects, his firm was interested in he economics of the construcion of the school. The normal procedure in the past, he stated, has been to use the oil fired heating system; and when cir-cumstances allowed, gas was considered. In the past year or so, interest has risen in providng electricity for heat. But since electricity, com pared to oil or gas, was too ex-pensive, this method was not feasible, he said. However, the Connecticut Light and Power Co. recently reduced its rate for public buildings using electricity for heat, light, cooking, mo-tors, etc., to 1.75 cents per kilo-

This made it reasonably pos-sible to use electricity for this particular school and made it economically feasible, perhaps even mor economical, vonDohen stated. He said he did not believe oil could no longer be used in other projects, but it was now possible to consider other means of neating schools.

By using electric heat, addi tional boilers or space for additional boilers will not have to be provided for the anticipated ght to eleven class-room addiion to the school. Only the heatng elements will have to be addto each room. There would be less maintenance; and no need to heat the entire school only part of it was in use, Donovan compared the ownng and operating costs for an oil-fired heating system and an electric system. He said, "We feel that a low figure for an electrical heating ventilating and lighting installa-tion might be $2.75 per square foot; an upper limit might be $3 per square foot. For the oil-heated school accurate data from many previous projects estimate the cost at $3.10 per square foot." The school is planned for an area of 35,200

Donovan said he felt there would be greater advantage in the all-electric school for South Windsor. It would be better insulated, have less of a cold wall effect and, therefore, afford more comfort, he said. From the economic standpoint, he said, he felt that owning and operating costs would be lower in an electric school.

schools in the United States are using electricity as a total energy source. Therefore, the concept of an all electric school is not a new one, he said. The Connecticut Light and Power Co. was informed, he noted, that when the rates became less than two cents per kilowatt hour, it would compete with other means of heating schools. In November, 1963, th company introduced an all-electric rate of 1.75 cents per kilowatt hour for all energy used in The reason the company was able to reduce the rate to this extent, Booth said, was that about 10 years ago, all utility companies in the state decided to plan their generating avaems as one company. Therefore, the systems were now

In Little Rock, or in Jackson, demonstrators, and camera men, found such cooperation possible. And in some instances, such deliberate posing produced some gestures actually more threatening and dramatic than anything that had occurred in the real and undeniable rouble present in the streets. By this time, six long years since Little Rock, we have progressed to the stage where the violence and the terror run themselves. They no longer have to be staged by special arrangement between demonstrators and camera men. Demonstrations are going on in enough places on any given day to make it a relatively easy matter for the day's quota of pictures of human beings violencing and non-violencing one another to be obtained.

Instead of focusing their attention on camera men, demonstrators have learned to give their attention to opposition demonstrators, or to the forces of law. And the law, for its past, has added to its devices of dramatic showmanship, with cattle prods, colorful dogs, and pavement-bumping techniques for use in dragging demonstrators.

In six years, then, a much better, more convincing kind of violence show has You can tune in any night of the week

Exhibit, Fair And Concert On Weekend

one for many Andover families, Activities include an art exhibit at Rham High School Friday evening, a combined Rham-Bacon Academy band concert on the same evening, a PTA fair Saturday and the annual budget meeting Saturday night.

The seventh annual junior senior art exhibit at Rham opened today. Judging took place between 3 and 4 p.m. and prizes will be awarded later in the month. Featured in this year's show is a number of mu-ral type oil paintings entitled "Connecticut Woodlands". Included in the exhibit are paintings, drawings, sculpture, tex ture boards, block printed fab rics, and copper enameling.
The exhibit will be open the public tomorrow night at 7 p.m. Work from Bacon Academy will also be shown.

The Bacon Academy band will be guests of Rham High School tomorrow night when the latter school presents the The Colchester school bank directed by Frank Mauro, will come to Hebron to present a joint concert with the Rham band directed by Robert Clowes. The bands will present their own concerts and also join in a concert featuring combined bands with over 90 musicians. During intermission the combined art display of the two schools will be open for viewing. Work of the Rham home accommiss descriptions. nome economics departmen will also be on display. Tickets for the affair may l obtained from any member the Rham music organization, at the high school, or at the door Friday evening. Single and family tickets are available.

The PTA Jungle SA-FAIR-I opens on the grounds of the Elementary school at 11 a.m. on Saturday and continues until 2 Saturday and continues until p.m. Aimed at providing enter-tainment and services for all ages, the fair will have many games for children and items on sale for them with attractive designs done by artist Gordon Fair goers will find books, food, plants, and other things for sale to support the PTA

PLAENVILLE (AP)—Robert Renock, 29, of New Britain, was charged in Circuit Court yesterday with robbery with violence in the $3,000 Feb. 25 holdup of the Plainville Branch of the New Britain Federal Savings and Loan Association. Earlier yesterday, Renock had been arraigned on a fugitive charge at New Britain. He is wanted at Holyoke, Mass., in the $4,000 holdup of a branch of the Machanics Savings Bank. Renock posted a $30,000 bond on the fugitive count and was freed, but he was immediately rearrested in connection with the Plainville holdup and bond was set at $60,000. This was more than Renock could wass, and he semanted in custods.
