

UN Opens Debate On Seating Peking

Big Vote In Favor Expected

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The U.N. General Assembly begins debate on the annual proposal to admit Communist China. The debate was expected to end with the Chinese Reds still on the outside, despite the biggest vote in their favor so far. Speakers listed for the first round of debate include Hui Sambath of Cambodia and Haim Budo of Albania, both supporters of Peking, and, on the opposite side, Liu Chieh of Nationalist China and Arthur J. Goldberg of the United States. Diplomats agree that the Chinese Communists will fail to get the two-thirds majority needed to seat them. They also agree that they will get the largest vote they have received since the issue first arose in 1950. The vote in 1963 was 41 in favor, 37 opposed and 12 abstentions. Goldberg gave British television viewers an argument against bringing in Communist China in a recorded BBC interview Sunday night. He said that "it does not qualify for membership" because "it is not peace-loving" and it "repudiates the charter" of the United Nations. "The recent declarations of Red China," he declared, "make this session a stronger case for the exclusion of Red China perhaps than ever before." Hui Sambath advocated seating Communist China when he spoke Oct. 1 in the assembly's general debate. He said his absence deprived the United Nations of universality, denied 700 million Chinese a voice, and prevented a solution of world problems. He contended the United Nations could not mediate the war in Viet Nam, because "the exclusion of China and the two Viet Nams prevents our organization from playing any positive role in this question."

Pearson Favored In Canadian Vote

TORONTO (AP)—Friend and foe alike speculate that John Diefenbaker is making his last stand as a national political leader in Canada's election today. Most of his opponents and many followers of Diefenbaker's Conservative party concede him only the slimmest chance to win and displace Lester B. Pearson as prime minister. Eight newspaper or broadcast groups predict Pearson will win; some supported Diefenbaker, but none foresees him as the winner. Their forecasts average a total of 137 seats for Pearson's Liberal party, 10 more than it has now and a majority in the 245-member House of Commons. Diefenbaker has made a vigorous campaign and has said nothing publicly about retiring as party leader if he loses, but an associate says this is probable. He is 70 and already has lost one election to the Liberals, in 1963. Before that election his Cabinet was disrupted by resignations, amid charges of anti-Americanism, and there was a move in the party to displace Diefenbaker as leader. The party has closed ranks again, but few Conservative stalwarts are likely to want Diefenbaker to remain as party chief after another defeat. The leader of the party winning the most seats in the House of Commons becomes prime minister. Diefenbaker held the job from 1957 until he lost to Pearson in 1963. Pearson, with only 127 seats in the last Parliament, had to depend on support from minor parties to pass vital legislation. He called today's election in an effort to get a Liberal majority. He has predicted a net gain of 15 seats to give him that majority. The Conservatives, or Tories, had 92 seats in the last House. Three smaller parties divided 40, and the remaining 6 were

Johnson Signs College Aid Bill

SAN MARCOS, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson flew to his old college here today to sign a $2.6-billion education bill he said will put 140,000 more students in college next year with federal help. Johnson, returning to the campus of Southwest Texas State College where he received his degree in 1930 — after a brief fling as a school dropout — offered this assessment of the broad new legislation: "It means that a high school senior anywhere in this country can apply to any college or university in the U.S. — and not be turned away because his family is poor." Asserting that "education is no longer a luxury but a necessity," Johnson said in a speech prepared for the outdoor bill-signing ceremony: "In the next school year alone, 140,000 young men and women will be enrolled in college who, but for the provisions of this bill, would never have gone past high school. We will reap the rewards of their wiser citizenship and greater productivity for decades to come." Among other things, the legislation provides for federally financed scholarships — called "grants" — ranging from $200 to $1,000 a year. "To thousands of young men and women," said Johnson, "this act means the path of knowledge is open to all with the determination to walk it." At the same time, Johnson said he will go back to Congress in January for money to finance a National Teacher Corps authorized in the bill but later deleted. This corps would bring special help to children in impoverished areas. "I intend immediately to ask again for the money to take the Teacher Corps out of the drawing boards into the classroom," he said. Johnson's speech combined praise of the new bill with some sentimental recollections of his college days here and philosophizing about government's role in education. On the last point, he said: "Too many people, for too many years, argued that education and health and human welfare were not the government's concern. Even as they spoke, our schools fell behind, our sick went unattended, and our poor fell deeper into despair. Now at least we are acting. The roots of change and reform are spreading throughout the nation." Johnson said he wanted to emphasize "that the federal government intends to be a partner, not a boss," in education, and has "neither the wish nor the power to dictate." Then he said that the "new adventure in learning" which he foresaw in the legal language of the new legislation had special meaning for him. Under the corps program, teams of teachers and recent graduates would try to improve educational opportunities for children in poverty areas. The corps would start with about 6,000 members. They would be paid with federal funds and serve in an area only at the request of local school officials. The college scholarships are expected to average $500, ranging from $200 to $1,000 with a $1,000 ceiling allowed for a student

Gemini 7 May Go On December 2

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The launching of the Gemini 7 astronauts may be advanced to as early as Dec. 2, if preparations continue to run smoothly, sources at the space center say. The present target date for the start of the 14-day flight by astronauts Frank Borman and James A. Lovell Jr. is Dec. 8. It is the scheduled first leg of the ambitious double Gemini shot. The sources reported checkouts of the Titan 2 rocket and Gemini 7 have progressed so well that "any date between Dec. 2 and Dec. 8 might become our target, with the possible exception of Dec. 5, which is a Sunday." Launchings are avoided on Sunday because of the great amount of overtime pay involved. Gemini 6 astronauts Walter M. Schirra Jr. and Thomas P. Stafford will be launched nine days after Gemini 7. The two spacecraft are supposed to maneuver close together and fly in formation.

State News Quick Action OK's Road Landscaping

HARTFORD (AP)—Connecticut has taken swift action on a project under President Johnson's new $60-million highway beautification program. Plans for landscaping 8.5 miles of Interstate 85 in Groton and Stonington were approved at 8:44 a.m. today by State Highway Commissioner Howard S. Ives. At the same time, Division Engineer Leo Grossman of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads authorized Connecticut to advertise for bids for the project, estimated to cost $180,000. A state highway department spokesman said he believed the Groton — Stonington project is "the first to be carried out under President Johnson's program." It expects to apply next for federal funds to landscape more of I-85 on both ends of the first project, then the Glastonbury expressway (Route 2) in East Hartford from Pitkin Street down and, after that, Route 8 in Torrington.

Cites Emergency

NEW HAVEN (AP)—The increase in Connecticut bank robberies within the past three years has created "a situation of extraordinary emergency," Chief U.S. District Judge William H. Timbers said today. He sentenced John H. Wilson, 36 of New York City, to the maximum penalty of 25 years plus a $10,000 fine for the $35,000 holdup of the Whalley Avenue Branch of the General Bank and Trust Co. New Haven, July 20. John Claiborne, 41, of New Haven was sentenced to 15 years for his part in the holdup. "The frequency and brazenness with which banks are being robbed in this state, including one last Thursday within the shadow of this court house, has created a situation of extraordinary emergency, even more

Wife, 15 Children Welcome Father Home from Hospital

HINSDALE, Ill. (AP)—It was a happy-go-lucky household of kids that welcomed home Grant Randolph from the hospital where he had recovered from a serious heart attack. He returned Sunday to 16 children and his wife, Joan, 33, who is expecting another child in December. Randolph, 39, an ex-Marine and a driver for Brink's, Inc., said his huge clan had been "just like a million bucks." Seven of the children in the nine-room Hinsdale home are orphans of Randolph's sister, Jean Adrian, and her husband. The seven Adrian children call Randolph "Unc."

No Deer

FT. KNOX, Ky. (AP)—After a weekend of trying, Mollie Creech Rice, 81, still hasn't achieved her ambition to bag a deer. Mrs. Rice of Cumberland, has been hunting since she was 12. This weekend she came across the state to hunt deer on the Ft. Knox hunting reservation. She donned a red shirt and cap and stalked through the game preserve carrying a 20-gauge shotgun. But she hunted unsuccessfully Saturday and Sunday.

Buses Roll As 26 Day Strike Ends

HARTFORD (AP)—Connecticut Co. buses rolled again today for the first time since Columbus Day. The company's bus drivers and mechanics returned to work after a 26-day strike, first in the history of the firm, that affected 75,000 daily passengers in Hartford, New Haven and Stamford.

The 788 members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, AFL-CIO, apparently got what they wanted in the new 3-year contract which they ratified Saturday night. The pact includes a supplementary cost-of-living pay increase — the most controversial element in the labor-management dispute — plus general wage increases totaling 30 cents an hour during the life of the contract. The company estimated that the contract improvements will cost it $1.1 million during the next three years.

"I wish to thank the Connecticut Co. officials and the union representatives," Gov. John Dempsey said after negotiations wound up successfully Saturday afternoon, "for the responsible manner in which they conducted their negotiations during almost continuous day and night sessions which started Thursday." E. Clayton Gengra, owner of the company, stressed a new

Princess Margaret, wearing a creamy silk evening gown embroidered with gold and silver flowers, arrives at a party in her honor in Beverly Hills. More than 100 of Hollywood's top stars attended the party.

Star-Studded Party Honors Meg, Tony

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After dancing until 2 a.m. today at a glittering Hollywood party, Princess Margaret arises early to attend to royal chores and where movies are made. Relaxed and gay, the fun-loving princess twined around the floor Sunday night with such partners as Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly and Danny Kaye. She'll meet more of Hollywood's royalty tonight at the big World Adoption International Fund ball at the Hollywood Palladium, after promoting British goods at a department store and touring university studios. Judy Garland, Kaye and Kelly sang and danced a little soft-shoe. Frank Sinatra, attending with Mia Farrow, declined to sing, explaining he thought everyone should just relax and have a good time. More than 100 of Hollywood's top stars attended the party, given by Sharmen Douglas, the princess' old friend and daughter of a former ambassador to Great Britain, Lewis Douglas. Sharmen, a one-time Hollywood publicist, is accompanying the princess on her tour.

Illness Halts Red Trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—Illness of a defense attorney today caused a 24-hour delay in the trial of the Communist party on criminal charges. The party is on trial in U.S. District Court on 22 charges of failing to register with the Justice Department as an agent of Moscow. The trial began last week. It was scheduled to resume today, but Joseph Forer told Judge William B. Jones that John J. Aht, another attorney for the party, was ill in New York, suffering from a virus infection and fever. Forer asked a delay until Tuesday. When the government prosecutor raised no objection the judge granted the request. If Aht is unable to be present Tuesday, Forer said, he will carry on the defense without him.

U.S. Troops Batter Cong On Ground

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. planes blasted another missile site in North Viet Nam today, the seventh raid on the Soviet-built air defense system in four days. But the series of attacks, which destroyed two sites and damaged five others, took a toll of five U.S. planes and two helicopters, with six American airmen listed as missing in enemy territory. On the ground in South Viet Nam, troops of the U.S. 173rd Airborne Division shattered a well-fortified jungle position north of Saigon. U.S. officials said they counted 110 enemy bodies and were still counting. The Viet Cong force is believed to have abandoned the position. The latest attack on a missile site was 60 miles east of Hanoi, and the pilots reported four missiles and four launchers at the site were heavily damaged. Since July, U.S. planes have destroyed five missile installations and damaged eight others, military officials reported. The Communists bagged their greatest number of U.S. aircraft of the weekend during U.S. attacks on missile sites near Thanh Hoa. There, a missile downed one U.S. Air Force F105 jet Friday, while conventional groundfire blasted down two propeller-driven A1 Skyraiders and two rescue helicopters Saturday. One Navy jet was knocked down in an attack on a missile site 35 miles east of Hanoi Saturday and another was lost Sunday 30 miles south of Hanoi during another attack on a missile site. Rescue helicopters picked up 5 of the 11 airmen whose craft went down in Red territory. In the south, paratroopers of the 173rd Airborne met what was described as a main force of Viet Cong dressed in gray fatigue-like uniforms never seen before in South Viet Nam. The action was in Zone D, the Communist iron triangle 25 miles north of Saigon. Brig. Gen. Ellis Williamson, the brigade commander, reported the paratroopers counted 110 Viet Cong dead and "they're hot through counting." U.S. casualties in the fight 15 miles north of Bien Hoa were described as moderate. For security reasons, American casualties are not given in numbers. The paratroopers came upon the Viet Cong force while on a search and sweep operation that started several days ago. They found what U.S. officers described as a well-fortified jungle position. "The enemy remained in position and kept firing," Williamson said. "We have had a real close-at-hand, jungle-type fight. There is no question but that this was a main force outfit." He said the Communists were equipped with Rucksack-type packs and wore steel helmets. Usually the Viet Cong are dressed in black pajamas and do not wear steel helmets. "The enemy made every effort to strip all of the bodies of everything, including identification, and all usable equipment," Williamson said. Another sharp ground action was reported 135 miles east of STRIKE AT McDONNELL, ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—Production of Gemini spacecraft and Phantom jet fighters was interrupted today as a wildcat strike by machinists gained momentum at McDonnell Aircraft Corp. A McDonnell spokesman said the strike had "measurably interrupted production. There are some people at work though. The plant is open and it will remain open." McDonnell now is working on Gemini 8 through 12. The number of Phantom jets, used by the armed forces, on the production line is classified.

THE WAY I HEARD IT

By John Gruber

Let's talk about opera this season, and casting is easier than it was in Europe last week. The season opened in Hartford last week; we had a motion-picture opera locally, the week before, about 50 Manhattan "supers" in Don Carlo; around 50 Round Table singers will augment the chorus in Aida later this season, and so it goes.

In short, opera touches quite a few people in and around town, whether they are committed "fans" or perhaps merely attending only one performance because his youngster is in a mob scene.

Most people consider it an art form and I suppose it is; but neither composer can be much faulted for it, but rather, it is a form of entertainment rather than of art. People attend in a different frame of mind than when they attend a symphony concert which attempts to be artistic first and popular in the second place.

It's true the tenor was pretty good, personally I don't think he was properly cast at all, even though he has sung the role in and can thus draw the greatest effect from the music. Yet even in Europe you can find productions where all cast is excellent with one the names of Tebaldi, Callas,

Sheinwold on Bridge

Partners are partners, the whole world over. BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD. As a dealer, you must defend against a hostile take. This is especially true in bridge, where you must struggle not only against bad cards and two opponents, but also against your partner. The thought goes out a well-filled glass a few weeks ago in a small bridge club in Paris.

Opening lead—Ten of spades. West led the ten of spades, and my partner tried a finesse with dummy's queen. East took the king of spades and returned the queen of diamonds to the ace. My partner drew trumps and then tried the club finesse. East took the king of clubs and then led the queen of clubs for a finesse. East can take the black king and lead a diamond, but Ben still has the ace of diamond, and they both failed.

My tone was enthusiastic, and my partner was scowled, but my good friend, Jose Le Denu, reached out, took my hand and filled my glass. The brilliant author of the new "Bridge a la Carte" has had his own share of unlucky partners.

The point was that my partner had his own bad luck when he took the spade finesse at the first trick with the ace of spades.

Everything Goes In Philippine Vote

MANILA (AP) — They've tossed everything into the pot for one of the biggest presidential election stunts ever cooked up on the Philippines Tuesday to prevent vote scandals.

The major parties, the Liberal, the Nacionalista and the Nacionalista party, held their conventions last year to give their candidates time to cover the major islands among the 10 that make up the country.

Both are claiming victory already but cautious money rates the election a tossup. It would be hard to find anything — good or bad — that has not been said, printed or broadcast about both men.

Full-page advertisements extol the brilliant war record of Marcos. The next page is filled with his "wins," including one of "the man of the masses" — which every Filipino politician must be in his campaign promises.

Meeting Slated On Photo Issue

A Raymond Rogers, principal of Manchester High School, has set Tuesday, Nov. 23 as the date for a meeting to resolve the current controversy which had developed over the school's policy in designating photographers to the press.

Rogers said that invitations to the meeting have been sent to both local and out-of-town photographers who have shown interest in the annual portrait-taking assignment. School Superintendent William Collins and representatives from the Student Council and the Somersville staff will also be present at the meeting.

"If no agreement can be reached at the meeting," Rogers stated, "the school will probably continue its present policy, but I hope we can discuss the matter fully and find out where the 100 that make up the country.

After Nine Months

The other day, there were two assessments of the military situation in Vietnam.

One was strictly military, and informational. It said that the forces in the field with the Vietnam in South Vietnam now include a total of five regiments from the regular army of North Vietnam.

These five regiments represent a total manpower of 7,500 men. Almost all of them, it seems, have come into South Vietnam since the time when, last February, the United States began fighting a different kind of war in Vietnam.

Last February, in a strategy which some of its military experts said would bring the whole war to an end in a matter of weeks, the United States began bombing across the border, in North Vietnam. The proclaimed purpose of this policy was to teach the North Vietnamese to keep out of South Vietnam.

Those who disapproved of this policy argued that it was a policy by which we were taking ourselves into a dead end street from which we had no exit, — a policy which in any case was no choice to the North Vietnamese or to us.

Whether they ever felt they had a choice or not, the North Vietnamese have not withdrawn from South Vietnam or ceased their operations there. To the contrary, they have increased their commitment, and these operations many times over what they were when we began our new policy in February.

While North Vietnam has been acting as if it had no choice but to continue increasing its commitment to war in South Vietnam, the United States has also found itself, as week has followed week, with no choice but to increase its own commitment to that war. The latest statistic shows that, as of last week, we have 148,380 men there.

So North Vietnam, one outside nation fighting in South Vietnam, now has 7,500 troops there and we, the other outside nation fighting in South Vietnam, have 148,380.

The war, said Secretary of State Rusk in his assessment of the other day, — the assessment which looked at both the military and the policy situation combined — has been going well for us. By that he meant that we are doing well in the business of proving to North Vietnam that it is not going to succeed in taking over South Vietnam by force.

But, although he could claim that kind of success in denying victory to North Vietnam, he could not claim victory for us. He could see only hard fighting ahead.

There has been little qualitative change in the Vietnam situation in the nine months of the new policy. There has been a marked change in the quantitative situation. Each side is committing more force and resources to the battle, and the increase on our side has been spectacular, and continues steadily.

But the situation so far as a solution in Vietnam remains what it was before the new policy in February, and has not yet undergone any real change except that what ought to happen has become something more and more difficult to make happen. What should have happened before February, what still has to happen some day, is for the situation in Vietnam to be internationalized, and removed from the warring hands of individual outside powers who, left to themselves, have no conduct continues to demonstrate, no choice at all except to continue escalating against one another.

The only kind of appraisal in which the United States can be calculated to have come out ahead as a result of this nine months of the new policy is the appraisal which says that the Vietnam might have been completely victorious by this time if we had not adopted the February policy. That is, necessarily, conjecture, and its possible success in enabling us to stay in Vietnam may never be truly measured until we see how and when we are ever going to be able to get out.

Practical For Candidates

In a sense it is probably healthy that in an experiment of public statement by political figures, we are so cynical that we do not expect the individual to be telling the truth.

In fact, our political custom has made it almost impossible for the political candidate to tell the truth about his own ambitions.

We refer, in particular, to the situation in which Congressman John Lindsay says he himself is not running.

Having achieved his personal victory in New York City, and thus having established a new hope for the Republican party and a potentially unlimited future for himself, Mayor-elect Lindsay is being asked, again and again, the inevitable question about whether or not he plans to run for the Presidency.

Let us suppose that, on being asked this question, Mr. Lindsay has been answering like this:

"Naturally I want to be President, and naturally I will be going after the nomination the moment I think I can get it and win. Sure, running for President is not for the faint of heart, and the reason I decided to run for Mayor of New York."

Should Mr. Lindsay, or any other politician, make his position ever so very anything quite like this, he would immediately be labeled such a conceited fool that all the smart money and all the smart leadership and a great portion of the public's admiration and sympathy would walk away from him.

But there is no need to worry. What Mr. Lindsay really says is a lot farther from the truth and a lot further from him to say, and the kind of statement designed to increase the loyalty of the smart money, the smart leadership, and the ordinary voter to his career.

What the property modest and sensible Mr. Lindsay keeps saying, to questions about the Presidency, is this: "I have no intention of running for any other office. I hope to build such a record that I could come back to the people in 1968 and ask for re-election."

Mayor, just like one Nelson Rockefeller just wanted to be Governor, just like every other politician ever on the way up always pledged lasting fealty and service to each separate stepping stone as he reached it.

Then, later on, if he is lucky, the people and his party "draft" the modest fellow for promotion, and he, conscientious character that he is, has no choice but to follow the sacred call of public duty.

It is this as understood so very well that nobody ever accuses the career in question of the slightest deceit or dishonesty. To the contrary, there is widespread admiration that when Mr. Lindsay is saying as precisely the thing he is supposed to say in order to set up his own Presidential ambitions, the Democrats, a registered Democrat, and declines until it arranges to get itself drafted.

Nearing The Day?

Having already hit 4,104 miles an hour, the people who manage to fly the X15 rocket plane out at Edwards Air Force Base in California now predict that in 5,000 miles an hour will be possible within the next few months.

Scientifically speaking, the X15 is merely an experimental plane doing advanced work for the air super liners of the future, which may travel many times the speed of sound in their commercial commuter services around the world.

Scientifically speaking, the X15 is still an old-fashioned, tied to its old glider.

But the romantic and irresponsible layman part of us all keeps measuring the narrowing gap between the speed of the X15 and the speed of the X15 through a rocket into orbit out in space, and wondering how soon it is going to be before an X15 pilot merely shifts gears and busts himself right out of gravity into space. When he gets up to 5,000 miles an hour, he'll have roughly only 12,500 more miles an hour to go, and when he makes that the only launching pad he'll need will be the seat of his pants.

Where To Dump?

What do you do with all the old automobiles no one wants any more? When neither auto dealers nor junkyards will take them, some motorists have just abandoned them on city streets, turning the problem over to the city. Cities, in turn, have charged heavy fines on anyone caught dumping this way or that.

As more and more solid waste accumulates, the problem of disposal is taking on emergency proportions in many areas. It is not only the First Lady who deplores vast numbers of unshiny junkyards. We cannot go on piling up ever greater mountains of junk around our cities and along our highways.

The cities, however, have been making little progress in their efforts to solve the problem. Now the federal government appears about to step in to aid local state governments in finding solutions.

Various proposals for disposing of solid and liquid wastes have been advanced, including the filling of abandoned mines with flattened junk autos, burning and dumping at sea, pumping sludge beneath the earth's surface, and even blasting containers into outer space.

Given enough funds, municipal sewage can be cared for by biological treatment or can be processed for reuse as compost. And industry has made such progress in recovering and utilizing many of its waste products.

But industry has not moved to provide many of its waste products. Under the circumstances, we welcome federal assistance to find better and more economical methods of disposal.

Inside Report

WASHINGTON — When he agreed to speak at Philadelphia's Jewish National Fund dinner 10 days before the election, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff could not have known how he would be sandbagged by the Philadelphia Democratic machine.

As the blackie dinner was breaking up, photographers swarmed on the platform taking candid shots. One such shot: Ribicoff shaking hands with Philadelphia District Attorney James Crumlish.

Crumlish was running for reelection on the Democratic ticket with Republican Arlen Specter, a registered Democrat and reform Republican.

What's more, Specter had the solid backing of the liberal Americans for Democratic Action.

Four days before the election, the Crumlish campaign committee placed a political advertisement in a Philadelphia newspaper showing Ribicoff shaking hands with Crumlish. Under the picture was an endorsement of Crumlish by Ribicoff.

The point of the ad: An endorsement of Irishman Crumlish by Ribicoff, one of the nation's foremost Jewish leaders, might turn the city's Jewish vote toward Crumlish away from Specter, who is Jewish himself.

Although he failed to talk Mann out of the speech, they did succeed in softening the language in original drafts. Even so, they feel Mann's response to Fulbright served no useful purpose.

Jesse Unruh, arch-factional foe of California's Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown and perhaps the state's most powerful Democrat, is seeking a new base of operations.

Friends of Unruh have advised him that he should move after six years as Speaker of the State Assembly. As a result, he may run for one of the new State Senate seats created by legislative reapportionment. In the Senate, he would likely be elected as the chamber's president pro tem, coupled with his

The great existentialist writer Albert Camus in his powerful novel, THE FALL, describes through his protagonist the fate of Everyman in this world. Toward the end of the novel he looks back on the accomplishments and patterns of his life and, surveying the contribution which he has made to the world, cries out in despair: "I was alone. Where I occupied the most space." How often is this true in our own lives, simply because we have not put ourselves fully into the task at hand? Personal satisfaction and true value come not from the size or notoriety of that which we do but, rather, from the depth and breadth of ourselves that we put into whatever it is that we do.

Following in the Assembly, this would give Unruh unprecedented control over the legislature.

However, Unruh has not ruled out the outside possibility of running for Lieutenant Governor next year as Brown's running mate. Although his image as a backroom politician would hurt him in any statewide race, Unruh figures it wouldn't mean much against Robert Finch, the probable Republican nominee.

Like Unruh, Finch (Richard Nixon's closest adviser) has the image of a political manager.

A footnote: Brown privately would love dumping two-term Lt. Gov. Glen Anderson, dark horse of the party's left wing. But he has no taste for replacing him with the powerful Unruh. More congenial to Brown as a running mate would be freshman Congressman John Tunney, son of the old heavyweight champ and an intimate of the Kennedys.

If you are unable to understand why a given answer is correct, find the rule bearing the number given in the answer, and review it more thoroughly.

A Quiz

Now for the test. Simply re-write whatever of the following sentences are grammatically incorrect. Give yourself four points for each correct answer. Compare the results with your score at the end of the 15th article.

1. Things are no different now from when I was a boy.

2. I can't hardly see that blackboard.

3. Every one of our lodge members have their own projects.

4. I don't even know what time it is.

5. You can't make those changes on all conservatives.

6. Because Bill was unable to appear, I shall fill the corner in his behalf.

7. This far shall they go, and no further.

8. If you give me another two minutes, I will be able to finish the test.

9. Try to keep what happened here a private matter between all the members.

10. If the quarterback had less rules to memorize, he'd be more relaxed.

11. From what I said, you may not infer that I am biased.

12. Hearing the referee's decision after the play, all hell broke loose.

13. Mistakes like this hardly never occur in college.

14. Everyone has his own right to their own opinion.

15. In behalf of our audience, I should like to thank the lecturer.

16. No matter what objections you raise, I will marry him.

17. What would you say are the chief differences of trigonometry and solid geometry?

18. Don't instructions and rules from the field office would help the office peace.

19. Despite casualties all about him, the general avowed, "They will not pass!"

20. Your whole attitude implies that you are superior.

21. Every one of the ladies in the club has their own stationery.

22. You hardly never hear about Norman Thomas these days.

Pine St. Home Much Damaged By Fire Sunday

A Pine St. home was severely damaged early Sunday morning by a fire which was apparently started by a defective electrical wire.

The fire began in the basement of the Thomas O'Brien home, and was discovered by the family after Mrs. O'Brien awoke about 4:30 a.m.

One Columbia fireman, Boyd Tuttle, was hurt when he caught his sleeve in the gears of a hose reel; the gears took a piece of muscle out of his arm.

One of the town's leading firms of Lutz and Keller, which has been in business for over 100 years, was damaged.

Factors allowing the town to close its fiscal year with a considerable surplus were gains derived from direct revenues.
