Is G.O.P. Curse Repeating Itself? Not only Republicans, but all those ndependents and those distillusioned Democrats who think the country this year needs to have the Republican party put its best foot forward must now be wondering if there is some kind of repetitive curse upon the party.

The same kind of thing that happened to the party in 1964 is threatening to The broad, rough outlines of the 1964 story were these: By the fall of 1963,

But, so far, the course of events within the Republican party seems to indicate that the party has the talent and the capacity to destroy this 1968 chance, too.

This time, the broad outlines of the tory are this: In the fall of 1966, after he had won reelection as Governor of seemed to be between Governor Nelson Rockefeller and Senator Barry Goldwater. Rockefeller faltered, first because he had trouble consulting the polls as to whether or not he should run, second because he had decided to take the political risk of rearranging his own family life on the eve of his proposed national candidacy. As Rockeer faded as the potential consensus champion of the party's moderates, Henry Cabot Lodge proved the surprise winner of the New Hampshire primary. This was a defeat of Goldwater, but not a uniting of the forces against him. Subsequently. Rockefeller came back to strikes illegal, promised the union what it wanted, and insulted and humiliated the Republican Mayor of New York and all the people of New York by what the New York Times called an act of "political cowardice."

Only it wasn't really political cowardice. Rockefeller didn't really violate his own law and sell New York City down the river because he was afraid of the union. Rockefeller did it all because he thought he saw the opportunity for the great grandstand play which would make him the great strike-breaking, emergency-resolving hero.

That he could expect such results from such a course of action is one more insight into the quality of the man and the potential candidate. Not until he had already done it did he begin to perceive the possibility that by such eager, unscrupulous reaching for the Presidency

What happens to Rockefeller as an individual, because of what is inside Rockefeller as an individual, is partly his own business. But what happens to the Republican party and its chance of presenting a moderate candidate in 1968 is important to the whole country. And the impression for the moment is that Rockefeller has somehow succeeded in blasting that chance once again, leaving the identity of the final opponent to Nixon in doubt again. It would almost seem as if, in order to have any kind of life and hope, the party has to have Romney do well in New Hampshire.

New Hearts For Ghettos

Into one of the ugliest sections of Harlem there is going to be erected a strikingly handsome state office building, which will house some 21 state agencies. Beside the new state office building there will be a cultural center with facilities for theatre, music, art, convention, and shops. There are two handsome side facts about this project. A magnificent number of diseased old brownstones are being demolished in the great big block where the project is going to be located

And the project itself will be accomplished mainly by the work of Negro architects, contractors and construction

There will be one section of Harlen which will never be the same again. The presence of this new thing will be both a symbol of the possibility of change, and a challenge to inspire more change It is also in the news from New York that the City University has just decided to build its next community collegeeventually a $32,000,000 institution-in the heart of the district famous as, next to Harlem, one of the great trouble districts of the world-the Bedford-Stuyve sant section of Brooklyn.

That also, obviously, will require the razing of some present buildings in the area, run-down residential or commerplace something handsome and bright and new and useful to the future of so

In each instance, the location of a new state institution is being used as the key weapon toward the rejuvenation and rebuilding of a ghetto—a sort of architectural transplant heart operation which is certain to have an effect beyond the reach of human medicine, in that a regeneration of the surrounding area is certain to follow the installation of the Automobile An Irrevocable Right?

Our children and grandchildren will have to decide whether each American has an irrevocable right to drive his automobile to wherever he wants to go. To raise this issue today is politically dan gerous, since each car owner, and they are legion, has already decided the answer. Actually, if this right were truly universal today-and if it were to become universal several decades hencesuch freedom of choice would remove the reality of choice. Here, as in many areas, there are no absolutes. Once this is recognized, it is possible to become more rational in our approach. The urban America of tomorrow must

What made this request so dence that a war-chest has been remarkable was the identity of raised (perhaps with Commuthe exile emmissary: George nist party help) in Western Plytas, the highly conservative Europe and an attempt made former mayor of Athens whose to purchase a large quantity of ties to King Constantine (ex- arms in Milan, Italy iled in Rome) are intimate. In asmuch as palace-oriented politicians such as Plytas considered Papandreou a red-tinged enemy of the monarchy before the coup of the Colonels last April, this means the extreme edges of the old Greek political spectrum are coalescing against the military junta. This was an eye-opener for key policymakers here. The Plytas mission showed that the democratic Greek right as well as the left fears that continued military rule in Athens in time will lead to a Communist-led armed resistance and a renewal of the Greek civil war-a terrible prospect pooh-poohed by the State Department until Plytas who fled Greece after the unsuccessful royal coun-ter-coup of last December, has now returned to Europe to try to build the broad anti-junta coalition. His first step will be to see Papandreou and convince him of the necessity to cooperate with his arch-enemy, the former conservative Premier Constantine Caramanlis (also exiled), under the general leadership of the King. Conservative exiles believe Papandreou, whose demagogic oratory against the King helped precipitate the April coup, has modified his anti-royalist stance What may take considerable negctiation is getting

A flick of a button, a turn of a dial . . . that's all there is to the easy operation of the new electric clothes dryer. Select the setting ... automatic controls do the rest. This young lady can operate

And, what a work-saver for her mother! An electric clothes dryer saves her hours of work each week. Never again does she have to struggle out to the line with heavy, wet clothes. No more battles with the elements to bring them in . . . wet, wind-whipped or frozen. And when "permanent press" clothes are tumbledried, they come out wrinkle-free and ready-to-wear, with little or no ironing necessary.

See the wonderful work-saving features of the new flameless electric clothes dryers, in beautiful decorator colors, at your appliance dealer. Ask about the liberal installation allowance on dryers installed on HELCO lines.
