The Pueblo Letter The letter purporting to come from the crew of the Pueblo, asking President Johnson to admit publicly that our ship "intruded into the territorial waters" of North Korea, and to apologize for it, all in order to ease the repatriation of the crew, is a document different from the alleged "confession" of officers previously broadcast by North Korea. This letter reads-with the exception of one or two sentences-as if it had been shaped and written by the American crewmen themselves. The previous alleged confession, on the other hand, read as if it were something the North Koreans had written and then submitted to the American crew. They could have faked that "confession" by getting some of our men to read it aloud without letting them know their voices were being taped for subsequent broadcast abroad. The style and language of the present letter, however, seem to have an authenticity which indicates that at least some of the members of the crew agreed to write it. Whether all of them actually signed it, or whether some of the signatures on it may have been forged or traced, is another matter.

It is still, however, not typical of men in trouble because of service to their country to be willing to embarrass their country by asking it to apologize formally to another country for the actions in which they were engaged.

It is true that this has turned out to be not a very typical incident. The leadership of the country these men were serving has already made tacit admission of its legal and moral weakness in the situation.

When the Pueblo incident first entered the news, and the story seemed to be one in which a relatively innocent American ship had been seized in violation of every kind of law, legal and moral, there was an almost unanimous admission among Americans that, although caution and restraint were advisable, our eventual right to use our force to obtain redress was not in question.

Since that early moment, however, our right and our capacity to use our unparalleled force have both faded. They have faded because our moral position weakened, after the disclosure that the Pueblo was on a spying mission, after the admission that it might have violated North Korean territorial waters. The mightiest arm in the world has been paralyzed not merely because of the wareness of the possibility that action might lead to wider war, but because the moral content of its position has been diminished and damaged. Our original righteous indignation over the actions of North Korea has been smothered down by our own later awareness of the kind of game we ourselves were playing-no worse than that of others, but not very much better, either.

Perhaps the men of the Pueblo, aware of our tacit admission of our weak posiion, can see, from their situation, little reason why we should not be honest enough to admit openly what we admit tacitly, little reason why they themselves should coatinue to be innocent victims of circumstance their country hasn't been able to handle cleanly or ecisively. In such times and situations, not many things fall into those patterns we might find most pleasing, reassuring, and traditional, and uncertainty is the root of almost all loss of power.

Joining The Age Of Violence

The state-wide teachers strike in Florida is one which has been managed by the National Education Association, which used, before its own present adninistration, to be against strikes, on he ground they were unprofessional.

The fact that the N.E.A. is now sponsoring a state-wide strike eliminates what was once a public hope that the conduct of teachers would somehow remain an example not only to pupils, but also to other occupations.

It also confirms a victory of at least me kind for the American Federation of feachers, which has always favored the strike as a tactic for teachers. The Federation hasn't taken over the leadership in the organization of teachers, but it has succeeded, apparently, in forcing the N.E.A. into the taotics the N.E.A. once ed the N.E.A. that the drive for larger appropriations is sufficient justification for closing the schools of a whole state for as many weeks as it takes that state's political structure to capitulate. the A.F.T. itself is then certainly free to close schools over some purely jurisdictional union issue, as in Pittsburgh and San Francisco. There the striking has been not for appropriations or salaries ,but for recognition of the A.F.T. as the collective bargaining agent for all the teachers.

Having done this, and having persuad-

Both teacher organizations, apparently, have now adopted the idea that the free use of the strike as a weapon, the unabashed willingness to let the education of the children suffer while their elders settle their dollars and cents, or even their jurisdictional quarrels, represent an elevation in the status of teachers as a professional class.

To us, the kind of elevation which can be achieved by resort to the strike weapon is the kind of elevation which has transformed and ungraded the garbagemen of New York into "sanitationmen." not anything that can do anything upgrading for teachers.

The teachers began way up high, early in the American story, as one of the most highly respected professions. For too long a time, they were held in high respect and kept in low pay. But that disparity had already been eliminated, to an encouraging degree, before the present teacher militancy had come into being as one more participating ratification of our status as an age of violence. It is some sort of tragedy that, as the infustice of low pay is being corrected, and pay goes higher, the respect in which the profession was always held for its own conduct and for its leadership example to all American society, is being invited to decline.

Big Payoff: $21 In 6300 Tickets

Down in Charlotte, N. C., a group of housewives who thought of what they hoped might be an easy, pleasant way of raising money for their favorite charity devised a scheme by which they made a gigantic collection of all kinds of gasoline lottery-type tickets and then sat down and matched as many of them as would match.

They distributed their trade, and their collection of tickets, equally and impartially among all the games then in prog-

From the 6,300 tickets they had, they found, a grand total of $21 in winnings. From their experience, this group of housewives decided there must be some better, easier, more productive way of raising money for their favorite charity.

Some day the gasoline companies are going to discover that there are better ways of attracting, and keeping, friendly

Nation Well Rid Of Hippies

The recent apparent demise of the "hipple" movement has not left most of us grief-stricken. Neither the bizarre costumes and colffure nor the flamboyance of their psychedelic colors enthralled very many of us for long. This facade was far too transparent and baredisguised the misery and the desolation of the human beings behind it. It was even difficult for most of us to sympathize with the desperate loneliness of these separated young people because they themselves seemed to be contemptuous of our concern and to prefer to wallow in their own emotional and physical squalor. Nevertheless, before the memory of this startling group fades away entirely, perhaps we should try to learn something about why it came into existence at all and what message, if any, trails in its wake. Some say that the alienated youth of today are trying to transmit an important message to our generation, but it seems to me that it has been a peculiarly half-baked one so far. They mock our materialism and hypocrisy by their own clownish and sensational antics. Yet their only solution to the injustices of today's world is to distribute flowers and to suggest that the intelligentsia give up and drop out. This is a message it seems to me we can well afford to forget along with most of the other araphernalia of psychedella.

Others have pointed out striking similarities between the flower children of just yesterday and the early Christians, going as far as to label this motley group, the "New Christians." A minister in Brooklyn declared from the pulpit that Christ was the original "hippie" because he urged his fellow men to tune in on another world. His beard, long hair, and sandals have led others also to make similar comparisons. More sensible, however, has been the equation of the love philosophy of the flower children with the concept of Christian love, and here perhaps is the only truly valuable lesson we can derive from "hippiedom." Their attempts to live by love alone led not to some glorious Nirvana, but instead to bitterness, rivalry, and finally violence. Like the young adolescents living an unfettered existence by themselves on an island in William Golding's classic novel, "The Lord of the Flies," the hipples found also that a world without discipline led only to chaos. Perhaps the proponents of situation ethics will now look more cautiously at their suggestion that absolute standards deprive man of desirable freedom. The main difference between the short-lasting philosophy of the love-in generation and the long-lasting Christian eligion is the presence in the latter of absolutes which provide the structure that seems to be essential for the existence of a relatively harmonious human society. - DR. Since this column first alerted Democratic State Chairman John Bailey and his organization henchmen to the possibility that they had more McCarthy sentiment on their hands in Connecticut than any normal tringe trouble, the signs and proportions of the McCarthy vement have increased rapidly and considerably.

The first few visible tests took place, with what must have been electrifying 1mpulses toward potential McCarthy adherents in other places, in several small towns where the Mc-Carthy forces proved themselves capable of dominating the party caucuses which were selecting delegates to the Democratic State Convention. The comparative ease, the one-sided margins, by which the followers of the Minnesota Senator, were able to dominate the party caucuses in towns like Mansfield, Wilton and Glastonbury made the state headlines.

The number of formally labeled McCarthy delegates selected was, however, only part of the story in the Democratic caucuses. There were, here and there, careful inclusions in the delegate slates selected of some known McCarthy supporters. There seems to have been double motivation for such tac tics on the part of local organitations obviously intending loyalty to the Bailey regime. On factor involved was that some of the people for McCarthy were themselves too important organization Democrats to be ignored. The other factor was the hope that, if they were put on the slate, being left free to follow their own individual conscience at the state convention, they would be less likely to lend their names or leadership to any proMcCarthy, anti-organization ticket in a potential primary contest.

Both factors together, the surface, visible triumphs for the McCarthy people in some isolated caucuses, and the undercover concessions they received in some other instances where there was no open caucus contest, are preliminaries, but perhaps tonic preliminaries, to the next option open to the McCarthy forces.

"The Depot," Manchester's Greenwich Village-style coffee house for teens, is back in operation in new, expanded quarters in a basement room at St. Mary's Church that once served as a dining hall. More than double the size of the original at Depot Square—which was displaced last fall by North End Renewal-the new Depot opened Friday, drawing a turn-away crowd. Pranned, built and run by teens for teens, the project provides a place to congregate, relax and comnunicate in an informal atmosphere. Coffee, tea, soft drinks and snacks are available on a self-serve basis along with the soft lights and live entertainment, provided mainly by folksingers.

All youth of Manchester are we'come at a nominal admission charge. The Depot will be open Friday evenings from 8 to midnight.

The hushed, capacity audience is entertained by folksinger Gina Clarke.

Youth listens.

Talk flows easily over coffee at the snack bar.

SAIGON (AP) - The U.S. Command today re-ported savage fighting below the eastern end of the demilitarized zone and announced the appointment of a U.S. Army general to command the Marines and other defenders of the critical northern frontier. U.S. spokesmen also reported the heaviest air strikes against North Vietnam in more than a month A task force of U.S. Marine and South Vietnamese infantrymen battled 500 Communis troops for seven hours Thursday near Dong Ha, the forwar Marine Base supplying other al lied outposts along the DMZ. Aided by tactical fighter bombers and artillery, the allied troops reported killing 138 Communist soldiers. U.S. headquar ters said the South Vietnamese troops accounted for 123 of the enemy dead and the Marines for the other 15. Marine casualties were 15 killed and 124 wounded with 76 of the wounded requiring hospitalization. South Vie namese casualties were repor

U.S. Headquarters said several battalions of South Vietnamese infantrymen ran into the enemy force about noon while sweeping the Cua Viet River delta, a Communist stronghold on the coastal marshlands, Troops of the 3rd and 4th Marine regiments were on the east flank of the South Vietnamese task force when heavy fighting developed.

The Marines, a special landing team of about 1,000 men that was put ashore more than month ago, have been sweeping north of the Cua Viet River, while the South Vietnamese have been operating south of the river. A week ago the combined force killed 234 North Viet namese in the same area.

At Khe Sanh, South Viet namese Rangers surprised more than 100 North Vietslipped up on the Marine base and killed 27 of the enemy as they emergd from a tunnel just outside the base's barbed wire perimeter.

The lieutenant leading the North Vietnamese was wounded. When the Rangers started out to get him, he shot himself in the head to escape capture P correspondent Robert Ohman reported from the besieged Marine fortress.

Ohman reported that the Communists shelled the base all day, pumping in a round of artillery or a rocket about ever, 10 minutes. He said one roun just missed a big CH4Y helicop ter taking off with a load of wounded Marines.

Rights Bill Amendment Is Defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate defeated, 67-18; today an amendment to the civil rightsopen housing bill to make it a federal crime to interfere by force or threats with a person going to or from his job. Aimed chiefly at picket line violence in labor disputes, the amendment was offered by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N.C. Ervin told the Senate it was just as wrong to interfere with a man's right to work by force or threats as with other activities that would be afforded federal protection by the bill. These include voting, jury service, participation in federally assisted programs and feder al employment and, if race or color is involved, with attending school, using places of publi accommodation and other activ

Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D Md., urging rejection of the amendment, said it would extend the jurisdiction of the FBI to "any physical altercation of any type" when a person was traveling to and from his place of employment. "It brings Uncle Sam about 50 (See Page Ten)
